A PREFACE TO THE READER.

HOW unfit I am to perform even this common and usual Office of introducing thee to the Entertainment, which the following Discourses will afford, the knowledg which I ought to have of my self, is sufficient to convince me: For it cannot be expected that I should give a due Character of the Author, which hath been already drawn by a far more excellent Hand, and which for me to attempt, as it would not be comely, so it is above my undertaking. It would as ill suit with my disability, who am inconsiderable, and so little known, to offer my mean Judgment needlesly to recommend any of his Writings to the World. All that is proper and agreeable for me to do, is to assure thee, that these which I have had the care of publishing, are the genuine issue of his Thoughts; most of them the mature Fruits of the later Years of his Life; and to give some short account of their Order and general Design.

Mr Thankful Owen, in his Preface to the Exposition upon the Epistle to the Ephesians.

I have here offer'd to public view, in a second Volume of his Works, several Discourses upon great and important Truths; that what were his own retir'd and profitable Meditations, may, by the Divine Blessing, become a common Benefit.

The first which presents it self, is, An Exposition on the Revelation: A Portion of Scripture so abstruse, that tho' it has exercised the Thoughts and Studies of many worthy Divines, may yet, in some respects, be called A Seal'd Book; which will be more perfectly explain'd, when He who alone is found worthy to open it, the Holy Lamb of God shall come to unfold all its difficult Passages, in their glorious Accomplishment. As the Author liv'd and rejoic'd in this hope, he has here in this his Comment, pointed to the Foundation, upon which he grounded it, even a sure Word of Prophecy: But as he was fully ascertain'd, that God would in his own time make good his Word, he was not over-curious in dating the Day of his Performance: you will find him modest in this Point, he himself determines nothing, but expresses the Opinions of others rather than his own, tho' he indeed illustrates them with Reasons, which might make them look probable; and tho' they have prov'd to be miſtaken in their Calculations, yet many things occur in drawing them up, which are not altogether unworthy of being remark'd. Their Account indeed is now ſuperannuated, yet it was proper enough for the Author to mention it at the time of his writing this Diſcourſe, which was in the Year 1639. It ſeems to be the Divine Prerogative to know the Times and the Seaſons; and as he always chuſeth the fitteſt, he reſerves to himſelf the exact knowledg of his own appointed Day.

That which comes next in order of theſe Treatiſes, is, A Diſcourſe of the Knowledg of God the Father, and his Son Jeſus Chriſt; which I have plac'd the firſt of theſe Theological Tracts, (and of others that are to follow, if Providence permits me an opportunity of publiſhing them, which inſiſt upon other the chiefeſt Heads of Divine Knowledg) becauſe it is the deſign of the firſt Rudiments of Religion, to inſtruct us what due apprehenſions we ought to have of the Deity. As our Saviour tells us, That this is Life Eternal, to know God the Father, and Jeſus Chriſt whom he hath ſent; ſo 'tis the firm Foundation, whereon the beautiful and uniform Structure of all other Truths is built; and ſad experience in all Ages hath made us underſtand, into what wild Imaginations, as to the other parts of our Chriſtian Religion, thoſe unhappy Men have wandred, (as the Arrians in the Primitive Times, and the Socinians in our own) who have ſtumbled, and ſo made a falſe ſtep in their entrance at this firſt and principal Truth. The Author, who conſider'd the irremediable miſchiefs of the leaſt Error in theſe firſt Articles of Faith, and ſaw the proneneſs in Men to miſtake, has made it his chief Deſign, in all the parts of this Diſcourſe, to direct our Thoughts to due Conceptions of the Divine Nature, of the Trinity, and the Perſon of Chriſt. And as his Aſſertions herein are no other, than according to thoſe meaſures the Word of God has preſcribed, he has fetch'd his Proofs from the ſame Magazine; and the evidence of his Arguments is the more convincing, ſince it proceeds from that Light which he beats out, by comparing places of Scripture together. If any ſhould judg ſome of his Notions to be too fine, and condemn his Thoughts for taking too high a flight, and leaping over the common bounds of Knowledg; this may be pleaded in defence, that he has at leaſt aſſerted nothing that contradicts a received Truth, or which by any Conſequence may weaken the Foundations of Religion. Nay, he aſſerts nothing, but what Divine Authority in Scripture does countenance; he proves all by plain Texts, and by an eaſy unforc'd Explication, without racking or torturing them to make them ſpeak his own mind. He is the vender of no new Opinions, ſince what he delivers, he clearly evinces to be the ſenſe of the Eternal Oracles of Truth; nor is he too boldly curious, ſince he is not wiſe beyond what is written; and the inquiſitiveneſs of his Mind ſhould not be prejudged, when his Enquiries have proceeded according to the conduct of an Infallible Guide; and if they have gone further than others, it is only becauſe, having ſeen the glympſe of a Truth, he could not leave it, till he had purſued it down through the moſt intimate receſſes of Scripture. It is certainly allowable to dig deeper in thoſe Mines which are inexhauſtible, and where thoſe, who come after the diligence of others, may ſtil find new and far richer Treaſures. Our Spiritual Knowledg ſurely is capable ble of increaſe, and further degrees may be yet added to it; for even after thoſe glorious Times, wherein God has promiſed to bleſs his People with larger effuſions of his Spirit, who ſhall lead them into all Truth, they yet will then know but in part; and indeed all the ſucceſſive Ages of the World put together, afford too ſhort a time for us perfectly to ſearch into the deep Things of God, ſince Eternity it ſelf will give us but ſpace enough to know and admire them.

The Diſcourſe which follows, is, Of the Creatures, and the condition of their State by Creation; which I have plac'd before that of Election: Becauſe tho' indeed the Electing Decree eternally preceded the framing of this World, yet God made his choice out of the Creatures which he determin'd to make, and conſidered them in the State wherein they were plac'd by Creation. And the Author, when he evinces the neceſſity of an Election Grace, to ſave certainly and infallibly any of either Angels or Men, draws his moſt cogent Proof from the mutability of the Creature, which abſolutely requir'd a ſupernatural Grace to ſecure its eſtabliſhment; and he therein refers the Reader to this Diſcourſe, wherein he proves that the Creature, as ſuch, was changeable and uncertain in the beſt Circumſtances of its Condition, and had a very unfix'd Station when it ſtood, and flouriſh'd in all the Glory of its Innocence. It is therefore requiſite for the intelligent Reader, if he would underſtand the Force of the Argument, to peruſe what is diſcours'd in this Treatiſe concerning the weak and unſtable condition of the Creatures, which renders the Grace of Election indiſpenſably neceſſary unto their Salvation. And as the Author had it in his Eye and Heart, not only to prove the abſolute need we have of this Grace, but alſo to celebrate unto the height, its Glory and Praiſe; In proſecution of this Deſign, he compares all the Advantages which Adam, as an Innocent Creature by Nature poſſeſſed, with all thoſe ſignal Mercies which belong to that condition, whereunto Grace advances the Elect ſince the Fall, and endeavours to convince us, how vaſtly thoſe Bleſſings we receive from Chriſt, the Second Adam, excel all the Benefits which the Creator's Bounty beſtowed upon the firſt: How Grace inſtates us in a higher Happineſs than we ſhould have enjoy'd; Tho' we had liv'd with our firſt Father in Innocence: How Grace makes us Gainers by the loſs of all Paradiſes Pleaſures; tho' we are apt to envy and regret that we have loſt them: And how the State of the meaneſt Soul that belongs to Chriſt, who is bleſſed with all Spiritual Bleſſings in Heavenly Places in him, is infinitely preferable to Adam's Primitive Condition, with all its Enjoyments. Thus in this Diſcourſe he prepares the Mind of the Reader to admire and adore the Riches of that Grace, which further to evince and illuſtrate, is the whole Deſign of that which follows in the laſt place of this Volume.

The laſt Diſcourſe then is Of Election, which to ſo many is a hard Saying, a Stumbling-block, and a Stone of Offence. He diſcourſes this high Truth with ſuch a wary Exactneſs, that its greateſt oppoſers will not find any thing in what he aſſerts, whereon to faſten tho invidious Reflections, thoſe harſh and horrid Conſequences with which they uſe to deform this Doctrine, to make it look affrighting. He is very very tender in the point of Reprobation, and expreſſes himſelf no otherwiſe concerning it, than the Scriptures themſelves do, viz. That there are ſome of Mankind whom God has left out of the compaſs of his Gracious Decrees, as indeed he was not oblig'd to ſhare equal Favour to all. That theſe are the reſt, or remainder, when God has choſen out the others. That theſe he reſigns to the conduct of their Free-Will, and leaves them to go on in their own ways, and to reap at laſt the bitter Fruits of their Evil Actions. After he has prov'd the neceſſity of ſuch a Grace, as is deriv'd from the Decree of Election, to aſſure the Salvation of both Angels and Men; and that all whom God hath reſcued from the miſery and ruin of the Fall, were really ſaved by this Grace; He proceeds to illuſtrate the infinite greatneſs of it by many Conſiderations, as, That it appoints, and certainly brings us to a higher Glory and Bleſſedneſs, than was the deſign of Creation to confer on the Creatures, tho' they had continued in Innocence; and that it commends its ſelf by a diſcriminating Love, which makes a difference between the Elect, and the other of Mankind. He then diſcourſes how infallibly God's Decrees of Election obtain their deſign'd iſſue, and proves largly how an effectual invincible Grace does certainly accompliſh what the Decree and Counſel of God's Will had determin'd. Theſe were the Truths which exerciſed the Thoughts and Heart of the Author, the Element in which he lived, the Air in which his Soul breath'd, and by which a Spiritual Life was conſtantly maintain'd in it: And as he experienced, that they afforded him comfort and ſupport againſt all his Temptations and Trials, he committed them to writing; that others might receive from them the ſame ſolace and refreſhing help as he did.

Rom. 11. 7.

Act. 14. 16.

It renders his loſs the more ſupportable, that he has left behind him now that he is retired out of ſight, what may perpetuate a grateful remembrance of him among Men: That tho' God hath withdrawn him to Heaven, he may yet be uſeful to his Church here on Earth: That his Service is not ended with his Life, nor buried with him in the Duſt; and tho' he reſts from all his Labours, yet the Fruits of them may follow him, even after he is gone hence to receive their Reward. He lives again in this Off-ſpring of his better part, his Mind; and being dead, he yet ſpeaks in them the ſame Truths, which when living, were the moſt delightful entertainment of his Thoughts.

But I forget that I aſſume too much to my ſelf, in delivering my own thus freely, in things which are indeed ſo much above me; And I know not how a zealous affection for the memory of a Father's Name, whom I cannot but love and honour in the Grave, hath carried me beyond the bounds of that reſervedneſs and modeſty, which would perhaps have far better become

AN EXPOSITION OF THE REVELATION.

PART. I.

CHAP. I.

The Design of the Book of the Revelation. That it is a Prophecy, wherein, as in a Vision, the Story of all Times is represented. The prophetical part of it begins at the Fourth Chapter. An Exposition of the Fourth Chapter. The Vision of the Throne, Beasts, and Elders. A Representation of the Church in all Ages.

THE three first Chapters, contain Seven Epistles to Seven Particular Churches; but from this Fourth Chapter, to the end of the Book, is laid down a more general Prophecy from John's Time to the Worlds end. There is therefore this Character of Difference put between that part of this Book in those three first Chapters, and this that begins here, That that concerned things that then were past, things that then were, and things to come hereafter, (as Chap. 1. 19.) whereas this delivers those things only which must be hereafter, Chap. 4. 1.

In this Prophecy, as in a Vision, is the Story of all Times acted and represented. A Comedy is the representing of a Story past, by Men; this a Prophetical Vision of things to come, acted by Angels answerably; as in such Interludes and Shews, there is first a Stage built, a Scene or Place supposed where the things were done, and a Chorus or Company of Spectators sitting on the Stage continually, and giving their judgment and approbation, (which was the custom PART I. in Comedies of old): So in this Chapter the Apoſtle hath the Viſion of the Scene, Theatre, or Stage, namely, the Church of Chriſt, in a general view, throughout all Ages, preſented; the Members whereof are the Chorus, who upon any great or ſolemn occaſion, give their Plaudite or Acclamation of Glory unto God; So the four Beaſts, and four and twenty Elders, you may in this Book often obſerve to do. And then, as in ſuch Shews and Repreſentations, there uſed to be a Prologue, ſo Chap. 5. you have as artificial a Prologue acted, as any in any Poem: from whence (Chap. 6.) the Repreſentation of the Story of things begins.

Verſ. 1. Ver. 1. John is called up from the Earth into the Air, (by which Heaven is here meant, as often elſewhere it is) the place of John's Viſion; and in the Air a Door ſeemed to open, in at which he entring, ſees the Sights following.

Verſ. 2. Verſ. 2. And immediately I was in the Spirit.] The Phraſe [in the Spirit] is like to that, when we ſay, a Man is in Love, or a Mill is ſaid to be in the Wind; as noting out ſuch a repletion, or filling with the Spirit, as poſſeſſed, and took up all the Powers of his Soul to attend this Viſion: it filled all, it carried all in him unto the thing in hand, and wholly acted his Faculties by a ſupernatural Motion of the Spirit, ſo that his Underſtanding and Senſes acted not in their natural way, but as moved by the Spirit. Now this his being in the Spirit was extraordinary, and to an extraordinary purpoſe, even to ſee theſe Viſions, and by the Holy Ghoſt to write them: yet to us it ſhould be ordinary, ſo far as in our ordinary courſe, to walk in the Spirit, and be in the Spirit; that is, to give up our Selves, our Powers and Faculties, to the Spirit's Rule and Guidance, ſo that he ſhould move all Wheels in us.

Obſervat. 1. Now from this [immediately] obſerve, That a believing Soul may preſently be in the Spirit; he ſoon and ſuddenly comes upon a Man.

The Viſion that follows, is of the Church, which is made the Scene of all things propheſied of in this Book; for all things done, are either for it or concerning it. And though Paſſages of Judgments on the World are recorded, yet for the Churches ſake they are recorded, and are done as by God out of the Church. Now this Viſion of the Throne, Beaſts, and Elders, is a Repreſentation of the Church (wherein God hath his Throne) of Men on Earth, Univerſal in all Ages; ſet forth according to the Form or Pattern of Inſtitution of a Church, into which all Saints on Earth ſhould be moulded. To prove this in the ſeveral parts of it:

I. It is a Repreſentation of the Church: For,

1. In the Church only is God worſhipped; as here, verſ. 8, 9, 10. In the Church only is God known; and there they ſpeak of his Glory, Pſal. 29. 9.

2. The Throne here is evidently God's Seat in his Temple the Church: So Chap. 16. 17. A Voice came from the Temple, from the Throne, &c.

3. Accordingly the Alluſion in this Viſion is to Solomon's Temple, and to the Tabernacle, which were the Types of the Church to come, under the New Teſtament. Therefore God here ſits on a Throne, as he did then in the Holy of Holies: and there are ſeven Golden Lamps here, as there the Candleſtick; and a Sea of Glaſs here to waſh in, as there was there one of Braſs: All Ornaments and Utenſils of that Temple typifying forth ours.

II. It is the Repreſentation of a Church of Men, not Angels.

For, 1. theſe Elders and Beaſts ſing, that they are redeemed by the Blood of the Lamb; which the Angels were not, Chap. 5. 9.

And, 2. verſ. 11. the Angels are reckoned diſtinct from theſe Elders and Beaſts, and are ſaid to be about them: as alſo Chap. 7. 11.

III. It is of the Church of Men on Earth:

For, 1. the Alluſion is to the marſhalling of the Church of the Jews about the Tabernacle; as ſhall be ſhown.

2. Here

2. Here are ſeven Spirits; that is, variety of the Gifts of the Spirit, which in Heaven do ceaſe. Chap. 1.

3. Here is a Sea of Glaſs, for the Prieſts and Worſhippers to waſh in; which ſuppoſeth a remainder of defilement, at leaſt, of the Feet; as John 13. 10.

4. The diſtinction of Beaſts and Elders in this Company, (namely, Officers and Brethren) which in Heaven ceaſeth, argueth it alſo.

IV. Of the Church Univerſal.

1. In all Ages: therefore placed at the beginning here, and often brought in in this Prophecy, as Spectators.

2. In all Places: So Chap. 5. 9. redeemed out of every Kindred, Tongue, and Nation.

V. This Church Univerſal, repreſented whilſt on Earth, as caſt into the Pattern of a Church, inſtituted according to the Rules of the Word, the meaſure to ſquare Churches on Earth by; and though in all Ages they kept not that Pattern, (therefore, Chap. 11. 1. John is bidden to meaſure the Temple of that Age, as having ſwerved from the Original Form too far, in Antichriſt's Apoſtacy) yet ſuch a Pattern is given forth here, as the only true Pattern, into which all ſhould be caſt; and God ſets forth his Church as it ſhould be in all Ages, and as it was in John's Time: All Saints, in all Ages, ſhould be caſt into ſuch Companies. So that here is the Church with her Appurtenances.

The Church conſiſting of Three States:

1. Chriſt the Head.
2. The four Beaſts, the Officers.
3. The 24 Elders, who are the Brethren.

There are the Appurtenances alſo; as the ſeven Lamps, which are the Gifts of the Holy Ghoſt; and the Laver, which is Chriſt's Blood, to waſh in, &c.

Firſt; Verſ. 2, 3. I ſaw a Throne,] which is an Alluſion to the Holy of Holies in the Temple, where God did ſit. Therefore, Iſa. 6. 1. when the Lord was preſented ſitting upon his Throne, it is ſaid, the reſidue of his Train filled the Temple; that is, thoſe other parts of the Temple, the Throne being the Holy of Holies. Therefore, Ezek. 43. when the Glory of God returned to the Temple, verſ. 4, 5. God calls it, (verſ. 7.) the place of my Throne, and the place of the ſoles of my Feet, where I will dwell in the midſt of the Children of Iſrael for ever. The like you have Jer. 17. 12. which Throne is here in the midſt of the 24 Elders, and the Beaſts; ſignifying, (as himſelf interprets it, Ezek. 43.) his dwelling in the midſt of his Church; according to that ſaying of Chriſt, I will be in the midſt among you. Verſ. 2, 3.

To ſet up a Church, is to ſet up God and Chriſt a Throne: A Church is his only viſible Throne on Earth, till the Kingdoms of the World become his, viſibly. Obſervat.

Now, ſecondly, for him who ſitteth on the Throne: Mr. Brightman would have God in the Trinity (or the Three Perſons) ſet forth in thoſe three Colours mentioned. But to make the Rain-bow, which encompaſſeth the Throne, to be the Holy Ghoſt, when as that Rain-bow is preſented as divided, and diſtinct from him who ſitteth on the Throne, is nimis durum, it is too much. I take it, it is God in Chriſt, in whom he is reconciled unto his Church, and by whom he rules it, Chap. 3. 15. and Chap. 12. it is called the Throne of God. And Ezek. 1. 26. (in which Chapter the ſame kind of Viſion is repreſented); He who ſits on the Throne there, is the Son of Man: As alſo in Iſa. 6. 1. which place Chriſt in the 12*th* of John interprets of himſelf. So that God, conſidered as in Chriſt, is he that ſitteth on the Throne. And, Chap. 7. 10. He that ſitteth on the Throne, and the Lamb, are made diſtinct, yet mentioned together.

Verſ. 3. For the Rain-bow that was round about the Throne, it notes out the Verſ. 3.

PART I. Memorial of his Covenant of Grace; that as the Rain-bow was the ſign Covenant of Nature, to put God and Us in mind, he would not deſtr World any more by Water; ſo this Rain-bow is to God a Memorial of h venant of Grace to his Church, [This is to me as the Waters of Noah; have ſworn, the Waters ſhould no more go over the Earth; ſo have I ſworn no wrath with thee, ſaith God in Iſaiah.] Which Covenant is round about his T ſo to put him in mind, in all his Diſpenſations towards his Church, to ren his Covenant; that let him go forth any way in his Diſpenſations towa Church, he may ſtill be minded of Mercy; and his Church again in all th tercourſes with God, and all Diſpenſations from God, and Occaſions com him, may be put in mind of Mercy alſo, and his Covenant of Grace, to t it; and that the Prayers of the Church may ſtill paſs from them thro Rain-bow, as all God's Diſpenſations to the Church do come through th Rain bow alſo.

Now for the Situation of the Church: Both Elders and Beaſts are ab Throne, Verſ. 4, 6, 7. it is formed after the enquartering of the People of about the Tabernacle in the Wilderneſs; *Numb.*2. The Levites were next Tabernacle, and the Tribes about the Levites. So here, the Beaſts (the O were (as in verſ. 6.) in the midſt of the Throne, and round about the T that is (as Beza interprets it) their ſtation is between the Throne, and Elders, who did ſurround the Throne about the four Beaſts. The phraſe midſt] in Scripture being put for [between] or [among]. So *Gen.*23.6 Beaſts, though neareſt the Throne, yet are mentioned after the Elder though their place be nearer, yet they are but the Churches Servants, a radical Power is in the Church, here ſignified by the 24 Elders.

Verſ. 4. To begin with the Elders, who as (was ſaid) do ſignify the Church.

Firſt, They are called Elders; 1. Becauſe the Church, under the Ne ſtament, is grown up to an elderly Age, in oppoſition to the Church unc Old Teſtament, who are termed Children under Age, Gal. 4. 1, 2, 3, &c. ſo, 2. for that Gravity that ſhould be in all Church-Aſſemblies, and i Proceedings and Adminiſtrations.

Secondly; For their Number; They are 24, in Alluſion to the 24 H thoſe Orders of Levites who were Porters, and Singers, eſtabliſhed by D the Temple, 1 Chron. 24, and 25 Chapters, and Chap. 31. verſ. 25, 26. A to ſhew the encreaſe of the Church under the New Teſtament, in compar that under the Old, whereof that proportion made by David, was a Type. Heads of the twelve Tribes then were multiplied to 24. Now in like manne mon's Temple had a double proportion to that of the Tabernacle of Moſes alſo being an After-type of the Churche's encreaſe under the Goſpel.

Thirdly; They are cloathed in white Raiment, ſignifying that they are Exod. 28. 40.

Fourthly; They had on their Head. Crowns of Gold, to ſhew their Power; and that it belongs to them to judg Matters in the Church; as 1 12. Do not you judg them that are within.

Fifthly; They were round about the Throne: the meaneſt Saint is as n dear to God as the greateſt. Therefore the word in Cant. 1. 12. is a roun which the Saints ſit at with Chriſt; it ſhews alſo their equality. And Chr is in the midſt here, and will be ſo in Heaven: We ſhall eat of the Tre is in the midſt of the Paradiſe of God.

PART I. Memorial of his Covenant of Grace; that as the Rain-bow was the ſign of the Covenant of Nature, to put God and Us in mind, he would not deſtroy the World any more by Water; ſo this Rain-bow is to God a Memorial of his Covenant of Grace to his Church, [This is ſo me as the Waters of Noah; for as I have ſworn, the Waters ſhould no more go over the Earth; ſo have I ſworn not to be wrath with thee, ſaith God in Iſaiah.] Which Covenant is round about his Throne, ſo to put him in mind, in all his Diſpenſations towards his Church, to remember his Covenant; that let him go forth any way in his Diſpenſations towards his Church, he may ſtill be minded of Mercy; and his Church again in all their Intercourſes with God, and all Diſpenſations from God, and Occaſions coming to him, may be put in mind of Mercy alſo, and his Covenant of Grace, to truſt in it; and that the Prayers of the Church may ſtill paſs from them through the Rain-bow, as all God's Diſpenſations to the Church do come through the ſaid Rain-bow alſo.

Now for the Situation of the Church: Both Elders and Beaſts are about the Throne, Verſ. 4, 6, 7. it is formed after the enquartering of the People of Iſrael about the Tabernacle in the Wilderneſs; Numb. 2. The Levites were next to the Tabernacle, and the Tribes about the Levites. So here, the Beaſts (the Officers) were (as in verſ. 6.) in the midſt of the Throne, and round about the Throne; that is (as Beza interprets it) their ſtation is between the Throne, and theſe Elders, who did ſurround the Throne about the four Beaſts. The phraſe [in the midſt] in Scripture being put for [between] or [among]. So Gen. 23. 6. The Beaſts, though neareſt the Throne, yet are mentioned after the Elders; for though their place be nearer, yet they are but the Churches Servants, and the radical Power is in the Church, here ſignified by the 24 Elders.

Verſ. 4. To begin with the Elders, who as (was ſaid) do ſignify the Church.

Firſt, They are called Elders; 1. Becauſe the Church, under the New Teſtament, is grown up to an elderly Age, in oppoſition to the Church under the Old Teſtament, who are termed Children under Age, Gal. 4. 1, 2, 3, &c. As alſo, 2. for that Gravity that ſhould be in all Church-Aſſemblies, and in their Proceedings and Adminiſtrations.

Secondly; For their Number; They are 24, in Alluſion to the 24 Heads of thoſe Orders of Levites who were Porters, and Singers, eſtabliſhed by David in the Temple, 1 Chron. 24, and 25 Chapters, and Chap. 31. verſ. 25, 26. And this, to ſhew the encreaſe of the Church under the New Teſtament, in compariſon of that under the Old, whereof that proportion made by David, was a Type. The Heads of the twelve Tribes then were multiplied to 24. Now in like manner Solomon's Temple had a double proportion to that of the Tabernacle of Moſes; that alſo being an After-type of the Churche's encreaſe under the Goſpel.

Thirdly; They are cloathed in white Raiment, ſignifying that they are Prieſts, Exod. 28. 40.

Fourthly; They had on their Heads Crowns of Gold, to ſhew their Kingly Power; and that it belongs to them to judg Matters in the Church; as 1 Cor. 5. 12. Do not you judg them that are within.

Fifthly; They were round about the Throne: the meaneſt Saint is as near and dear to God as the greateſt. Therefore the word in Cant. 1. 12. is a round Table which the Saints ſit at with Chriſt; it ſhews alſo their equality. And Chriſt, He is in the midſt here, and will be ſo in Heaven: We ſhall eat of the Tree which is in the midſt of the Paradiſe of God.

Verſ. 5. And out of the Throne proceeded Lightnings, and Thunderings, and Voices.] By Thunderings and Lightnings, are meant the Judgments of God, (Pſal. 18. 13, 14. The Lord alſo thundered in the Heavens, and the Higheſt gave his Voice; Hailſtones and and Coals of Fire. Yea, he ſent out his Arrows, and ſcattered them, and he ſhot out Lightnings, and diſcomfited them. And Pſal. 29. 3. The Voice of the Lord is upon the Waters; the God of Glory thundereth, the Lord is upon many Waters.) They are ſaid to come out of the Throne, becauſe all Judgments do come from God, as ſitting in his Church, and for his Churche's ſake doth God uſe them. Pſal. 68. 35. O God, thou art terrible out of thy Holy Places: the God of Iſrael is he that giveth ſtrength, and power unto his People; bleſſed be God. Amos 1. 2. And he ſaid, The Lord will roar from Zion, and utter his Voice from Jeruſalem: and the Habitations of the Shepherds ſhall mourn, and the top of Carmel ſhall wither. Voices alſo proceed out of the Throne; which is more general, and extends unto Promiſes, and anſwers to Prayers. Chap. 1.

Seven Lamps, which are the Seven Spirits of God]. By theſe are noted out the Holy Ghoſt, and the variety of his Gifts and Operations, or Manifeſtations of Himſelf in the Church: That the Holy Ghoſt is meant, is evident by Chap. 1. 4. where John wiſhes Grace and Peace from the ſeven Spirits, which are before God's Throne; which he ought not to have wiſhed from any, but from the Holy Ghoſt, who is the third Perſon. And theſe Manifeſtations are counted Seven, becauſe of the variety of Gifts. For otherwiſe, that Perſon is but one Spirit, 1 Cor. 12. They are compared to Fire, becauſe they give Light, and Heat; and the Alluſion here is to the Candleſticks in the Temple.

There was a Sea of Glaſs like unto Chriſtal] in alluſion to Solomon's Sea; but this was purer than that, which was only of Braſs; Exod. 30. 17, 18, 19, 20. and typified out Chriſt's Blood to waſh in, both for Juſtification of Perſon, and Sanctification of Life: So Heb. 10. 22. Let us draw near with a true Heart, in full aſſurance of Faith, having our Hearts ſprinkled from an evil Conſcience, and our Bodies waſhed with pure Water. 1 Cor. 6. 11. And ſuch were ſome of you, but ye are waſhed, but ye are ſanctified, but ye are juſtified in the Name of the Lord Jeſus, and by the Spirit of our God. Titus 3. 5. Not by Works of Righteouſneſs, which we have done, but according to his Mercy he ſaved us by the waſhing of Regeneration, and renewing of the Holy Ghoſt. And this Blood of Chriſt ſtands in the Church, as the Sea in which we muſt waſh, chiefly when we come to worſhip. Therefore waſh before you worſhip. Verſ. 6.

And there were four Beaſts full of Eyes before and behind]; by which are meant Church-Officers.

2. Becauſe they are the Leaders of the Praiſe, and ſo the Mouths of the Congregation, Verſ. 9. 10. They are not Beaſts properly, as we underſtand and ſpeak; not Brutes, but living Wights: the Greek word, which wants a full and proper expreſſion, in one Engliſh word ſignifies ſo. They are called Living, to ſhew that they have, or ſhould have Life in them to quicken others. They are four, and the Throne is four-ſquare, and ſo they are ſaid to be in the midſt between every Angle; to ſhew that they are compleat for Number, and ſhould look every way to all the Neceſſities of the Church, both for Soul and Body.

They are full of Eyes, becauſe they are to be Overſeers; Acts 20. 28. And they have eyes within as well as without, to ſee to their own Hearts, as well as to others.

And the firſt Beaſt was like a Lion]; who is the Ruling Elder, who needs the courage of a Lion, to deal with Mens Spirits in caſe of Sins, that deſerve to be brought to the Church, or to have Admonition to prevent that courſe. Verſ. 7.

The ſecond was like a Calf, (or Ox, for ſo the Septuagint tranſlates the Hebrew word forty times) the Paſtor, who is like an Ox for laborioufneſs, and taking pains in treading out the Corn.

The third Beaſt had a Face like a Man]; the Deacons and Widows (which are all one Office in a kind) who have a Face of a Man; a Man's Heart being diſpoſed and inclined for mercifulneſs and pittifulneſs, which is proper to a Man, not Beaſts.

CHAP. II.

The Expoſition of the Fifth Chapter.

THE Stage being built in the Fourth Chapter, the Chorus (which is the Church being ſet) here begins the Prologue; and that, ſo elegant and ſtately an one, as was never heretofore invented, or put before any Poem.

Firſt; Here is a Book Sealed, preſented in his Hand who ſits on the Throne. Which Book contains God's Decrees to be executed until the Day of Judgment.

Secondly; Here is a Proclamation made to all Creatures, to find out one who ſhould be found worthy to open it.

Thirdly; There were none ſuch found in Heaven, nor in Earth.

Fourthly; John weeps, thinking there would be an end of his Viſions; and that he muſt put up his Pen.

Fifthly; In this ſtrait comes Chriſt, and takes upon him the opening and fulfilling of this Book, and all the Decrees therein contained.

Sixthly; At this the Chorus fall down and worſhip.

Firſt; What is this Book? Many make it to be the Scriptures: But it is plain, Verſ. 1. by what all along does follow, that it is a Book containing the Affairs of the World, and the Church, and God's Decrees about them both. For upon the opening every Seal, John ſees a Viſion containing the Matter of the enſuing Chapters, namely, the 6th, 7th, 8th, and 9th. And when the Seals were all taken off, Chap. 10. 8. then John is bidden to eat the Book, that he might propheſy again the other part of this Prophecy. So as it is this very Book of the Revelation, and the Government of the World and his Church that is ſet forth therein, which Chriſt, by taking the Book, undertakes to manage, perform, and execute, and give it to John. Which agrees with what is ſaid at the beginning of this Book, Chap. 1. 1. The Revelation of Jeſus Chriſt, which God gave unto him, to ſhew unto his Servants things which muſt ſhortly come to paſs, and he ſent and ſignified it by his Angel unto his Servant John.

A ſtrong Angel thereupon proclaims who is worthy to looſe the Seals of this Book, &c. Verſ. 2. The uſe of the Seals, is not ſimply to ſhew, that it cannot be known, as Daniel's Sealed Book did ſhew, that the Things in it could not be known till the End; Dan. 12. 4. But thou, O Daniel, ſhut up the Words, and ſeal the Book, even to the time of the End: Many ſhall run to and fro, and Knowledg ſhall be encreaſed. This ſignified not only ſo, but it is for the ſetting out the Glory of Chriſt, and how he was only able to take the Book, and looſe the Seals, &c.

1. God cauſeth a general Proclamation to be made to all Creatures; as ſome Kings have done for ſome noble Service, promiſing a great Reward, as Saul did, 1 Sam. 17. 26, 27.

2. An Angel makes this Proclamation; to ſhew, that none among Men could: and was a ſtrong Angel, that ſo his Voice may reach all Creatures. The end of which was;

1. To ſtir up ſtrong deſires in John, and all elſe that reade, to ſearch into the meaning of this Prophecy. What he did exhort to, Chap. 1. 3. and by promiſe provoke unto; here he does the ſame again by this Proclamation.

2. To ſet out the weakneſs of the Creature ſtill to the end, that ſo the Honour of Chriſt might the more appear, in that he only can do this. It is God's manner thus to endear Mercies to us, as he did a Wife unto Adam: He firſt brought brought all Creatures unto him, that so he might see that there was not a meet help for him among them. So in the Work of Salvation, he lets the Soul try all means first, as to run to Duties, and all other Helps, and then he brings it to Christ, (1 Cor. 1.) that his Power may appear. First, He lets the World try their Wisdom, what that could do, and then sends the foolishness of Preaching to save them that believe, (Vers. 21, 25.) It is a Question among the School-men, Whether any meer Creature could satisfy for Sin? Some say, it might; and some say, it is a needless Question: but it is a necessary thing to know, that a Creature cannot; for it glorifies Christ the more, as that all Creatures here were first challenged; which is an Argument against that also: for if they could not open the Book, they could much less have redeemed us, that being made a greater thing, Vers. 9. where they sing, That Christ was therefore worthy to open the Book, because he had redeemed us.

Use. Hence learn we to renounce all Kings, Priests, and Prophets, except Christ, who is a Priest to redeem, a Prophet to teach and reveal the Mysteries of God, and a King to execute all God's Decrees. It is good to go over all the Creatures, and to renounce them, and say, I will be saved by none of you. Suppose the Work of Redemption were yet to be done, and God should make this Proclamation (as here): Find me out a Party able to redeem, call a Council, and seek one fit for the purpose. Surely none would be found; and then how would we howl and weep, (as John did here) and count our selves undone! And then, suppose God should set out Christ at last, as one able to save to the uttermost, but this not till he had tried what you could do for your selves: surely this would non-plus you. But God would not thus put you to it, and therefore took another course, and the more to commend his Love unto us, he himself found out Christ, and spake to him to die for us, and do the Work of Redemption to our hands.

Who is worthy!] It is not simply an Act of Power to break open the Seals; but there must be an Authority by worth. So that which puts the value on Christ's Satisfaction, was the worth of his Person. And thus in this Act of opening the Book, a meer Creature might have had as much habitual Grace, and performed as much Duty; but who is worthy! It was a personal worth which carried it: Such an High Priest became us, who is higher than the Heavens, (that is, than the Angels) Heb. 7. 26.

Vers. 3. None was found worthy]. Observe the word [none] it is not restrained to Man [no Man]; but never a reasonable Creature, either in the Heavens, as the Angels; nor on Earth, as Men, nor under the Earth, as Devils, nor Holy Men departed, who are said to go down to the Grave: all these, nor any of these, were able to open the Book, neither to look thereon], that is, so as to understand it; for else John could, and did look on it, vers. 1.

Now to loose the Seals, and open the Book, is not simply to know God's Mind in his Decrees, but to make the Vision of them to John, and to execute and fulfil them in their Times. It is an Allusion to those who take a Commission, who do it, not only to look on it, but to fulfil it: It is a Commission sealed, so that this Proclamation is in effect thus; Who is able to be God's Commissioner, to take this Book, and make the Visions to John, and in their Times to produce and execute them! And this appears from Chap. 6. 1. And I saw when the Lamb opened one of the Seals, and I heard, as it were, the noise of Thunder, one of the four Beasts saying, Come, and see. Still as the Seals are opened by the Lamb, there is a Vision made to John of what shall be done. Therefore the Lamb is presented, not simply, as one that should take the Book, but as one that hath Eyes and Horns, Eyes of Providence, and Horns of Power to execute. And this agrees with Gen. 49. 9, 10. where Judah is made a Type of Christ, and called a Lion's Whelp, and a Scepter, and a Law-giver, to take God's Laws from him, and execute them; for in that respect it is that Judah is called a Law-giver in the place above-cited, not in respect of making or giving Laws, but in respect of executive Power to see God's Law kept. So Christ here takes this Book as to deliver it to us, to execute the Decrees of it. Chap. 2.

And I wept much.] His despairing put him upon weeping: He was called up to Heaven to see Visions, but meets with a stop. This was to set off the Mercy, to try his Heart, and to render his Joy greater. Vers. 4.

God in greatest Mercies, may make greatest Stops; he may so bring to despair, that no hope shall be seen, yet at length shew himself in Mercy. So to John here. So likewise in the first Work of Conversion many times; and so in other great Works. John was called to see Visions, yet a stop and pause was in his view made. Observat.

Here John is comforted; first, by a stander-by, endeavouring to uphold his Heart; and, secondly, by the sight of the Lamb, Vers. 6. Use.

Observe here the Degrees God useth to comfort his People by; first, letting fall something giving hopes of Christ, so to draw the Soul patiently to wait; then, secondly, shewing it Christ himself. God might have at first shewed John the Lamb, but he first comforts him by a stander-by (as Job first heard by the hearing of the Ear) and then his Eye saw the Lamb.

Christ the only Opener of this Book, and Giver of this Prophecy, is diversly expressed.

1. He is called the Root of David, out of Isa. 11. 10. Christ put this Riddle to the Pharisees, How David could call him Lord, if he were his Son? So here it may be ask'd, How could he be called the Root of David, if he were the Son of David, and so a Branch of that Root? The truth is, he is the Root of David, and of all the Saints. He was the Root of his Ancestors, and the Father of his Mother. The Root of any Family, is in Scripture put for the Eldest Son in it, who is as the Root of the rest: So Isa. 14. 30. I will kill thy Root with Famine; that is, thy First-Born, the Root of thy House; for in opposition, he says, and the First-born of the Poor shall be fed; So Mal. 4. 1. Therefore, in that Christ is called the Root of David, is meant, that he is the First-born among all his Brethren, as he is called Rom. 8. 29. and Psal. 89. 27. So God calls David in the Type, but intends Christ thereby, when he says, I will make him my First-born, higher than the Kings of the Earth; and vers. 29. his Seed shall endure for ever. In this is Christ the Root of David, that he is the First-born of every Creature; of whom the whole Family in Heaven and Earth is named.

2. He is called the Lion of the Tribe of Judah; and this in a manifest Allusion to the Prophecy in Gen. 49. 10. wherein Judah (as this place shews) is made a Type of Christ. And it warrants the application of all there unto Christ. Now Judah was called a Lion.

1. Because out of Judah came all the Worthies and Lion-like Men, as Joshua, Othniel, and David, who were all Shadows of Christ; Therefore, Gen. 49. 9. He is called an Old Lion, (as the word is) a couragious hearty Lion. So 2 Sam. 17. 10. valiant Men are said to have Hearts like Lions. Such was Christ, who durst engage his Heart to draw near to God, Jer. 30. 21.

2. Judah had the Kingdom (whereof a Lion is the Emblem); therefore Scepter and Law-giver are attributed to him, vers. 10. So that it is as much as to say, Christ the King by Inheritance (as Judah was) shall overcome.

3. Judah did take the Prey (the Land); it was done by Judah's Worthies, Joshua, Caleb, &c. And when as a Lion they had taken that Prey, they couched, and had rest, as in Solomon's days, 1 King. 4. 21. which was also propheſied of Numb. 23. 24. Behold, the People shall rise up as a great Lion, and shall not lie down till they have eaten the Prey. And Gen. 49. 9. He couched as an old Lion, who shall raise him up? So Christ, when he had led Captivity captive, sits down quietly in Heaven, as it were, couching and lying in wait, especially till the Day of Judgment;

PART I.

ment, and till afore, when he shall see an opportunity to avenge the Enemies to his Church, when he will appear as an Old Lion, who being rouſed, ſuddenly leaps on the Prey, eſpecially in the latter days, when the gatherings of the People ſhall be unto him, as the context is, then ſhall his Kingdom be as of a Lion among Beaſts, Mich. 5. 8. where the Prophet ſpeaks of Chriſt's Kingdom and Conqueſt in the Calling of the Jews, as he had done of Chriſt's Birth, verſ. 2. Now that Kingdom is the ſcope of this Book.

Verſ. 6. And in the midſt of the Elders ſtood a Lamb as it had been ſlain, &c.] John had heard of Chriſt as a Lion, but he ſees him as a Lamb. So many a poor Soul is afraid of him, till it comes to ſee him, and be acquainted with him. But he in the end will be found to be a Lamb, and a Lamb that hath ſeven Eyes to run to and fro through the Earth for the good of his Saints; and ſeven Horns, not to hurt them, but to defend them, and to butt his and their Enemies. Therefore let not your thoughts of Chriſt be all as of a Lion; for though he hath the courage and ſtrength of a Lion, yet he hath the meekneſs of a Lamb too, unto you; who therefore have cauſe to wonder at, and praiſe this mixture in him. Chriſt is called a Lamb, in alluſion to the Sacrifices of the Old Law, which were moſt commonly, of Lambs; two Lambs a day, Numb. 28. 3. Here he was to be repreſented as a Prieſt, (as before, in being called a Lion, he was preſented as a King). And therefore it follows, [as it had been ſlain].

This Lamb ſtood in the midſt of the Throne], nearer than the four Beaſts who ſtood between the Throne and the Elders; and this, for that he is the Mediator between his Church and God.

As it had been ſlain.] That is;

1. As if he were newly ſlain, his Blood perpetually remaining freſh, as if he had been ſlain but yeſterday, Heb. 9.

2. But [as] ſlain, to ſhew, that he doth not remain ſlain and dead, but is alive. So Chap. 1. 18. I am he that liveth and was dead, and behold, I am alive for evermore.

Stood a Lamb]: Standing, imports a readineſs to afford help. When Stephen died, he ſaw Chriſt ſtanding at God's right hand, as ready to receive him. It alſo ſhews his readineſs to intercede.

Having ſeven Horns.] Horns are put for Power with which to puſh: So Chap. 17. 12. and the ten Horns are ten Kings. So by ſeven Horns here, is meant all Kingly Power. Seven is a number of Perfection; and it ſhews that Chriſt hath power to open the ſeven Seals. And as there are ſeven Trumpets, and ſeven Vials, ſo Chriſt hath ſeven Horns, that is, power to fulfil all theſe. Antichriſt riſeth like Chriſt, and comes with Power, Rev. 13. 12. But what diſcovers him! He hath but two Horns; the Church needs not fear him. The Lamb hath ſeven Horns to vindicate himſelf of his Enemies. Fear not Kings neither, though they be Ten; Chriſt is King of Kings: And fear not the Devil, who is a roaring Lion; for Chriſt the Lion of the Tribe of Judah is ſtronger than he, and will bind him ſure enough for hurting of thee.

And ſeven Eyes; which are the ſeven Spirits of God ſent forth into all the Earth]. The Spirit, not in his Perſonal Subſiſtence, is here meant, but in his inſtrumental working by Gifts and Providence; and ſo is called ſeven Spirits before, in Chap. 4. 5. which ſeven Spirits before the Throne, are Gifts in the Church which are from Chriſt; for he is the Fountain of Spiritual Gifts, and hath the Spirit without meaſure. But here, by the ſeven Spirits in Chriſt, are not meant Gifts powred out, but Eyes of Providence ſent into the Earth, by which he knows and ſees all things; which alludes to that in Zech. 4. 10. For who hath deſpiſed the day of ſmall things? for they ſhall rejoice, and ſhall ſee the Plummet in the hand of Zerubbabel with theſe ſeven: they are the Eyes of the Lord, which run to and fro through the whole Earth; and implies the perfection of the Know-

Knowledge and Providence of Christ, to order all Affairs on Earth for his Church's good; as in 2 Chron. 16. 9. and in Zechary, before quoted, he ordered the Affairs of the Persian Monarchy for the building of his Church. Christ, as Man, hath Eyes as well as Horns, to discern and guide all things here below: his Humane Nature, is the Instrument of all God's Power, all goes through his Hands; and all the Works of God's Providence go through his view; he knows whatsoever is done in the whole World. But why should Christ be presented here in this Chapter, under these Notions, of a Lion of Judah's Tribe, and a Lamb, and the Root of David, than any other?

Chap. 2.

First; In that he speaks in the Language of the Old Testament, and of John the Baptist, who was under the Old Testament, (for Christ is every where spoken of throughout the Volume of that Book, as appears by Luke 24. 27. where it is said, That Christ, beginning at Moses, and all the Prophets, did expound unto them the things concerning himself). Now Moses called him a Lion, Gen. 49. 9. Isaiah called him a Lamb, Chap. 53. 7. and the Root of David, in the 11*th* Chapter of his Prophecy, vers. 10. and then John Baptist called him the Lamb of God, which bears the Sins of the World. Wherefore, as all other things in this Book are set forth in allusions to the Old Testament, so these Descriptions of Christ also.

2*dly*, He gives Christ these Titles in relation to the Work of Redemption, of which mention is made, vers. 9.

Now to that two things are required;

1. A Price to be paid to God, and so, as a Lamb he hath redeemed us to God by his Blood, Vers. 9.

2. Power to deliver us out of the hands of our Enemies; and so, He is a Lion that overcomes.

3*dly*, It hath relation especially to the opening of this Book, and executing the Affairs contained in it; and so, those Titles are most proper:

For, 1. he needed to die for it, and so is presented as a Lamb slain. For that very Price that Salvation did cost, the same must each Revelation to us cost also. And his being simply the Son of God, and so knowing the Counsels of God written in his Decrees, was not enough for him to make them known to us: but to reveal this Counsel, as in a Book to be opened to us, he must needs die, our Sins otherwise hindering it. Hence it is said, vers. 9. Thou art worthy to open the Book, for thou wast slain, &c. So therefore, as a Lamb, he is said to take Sin away, that hindered the revelation of it to us.

2. As a Lion, he needed courage to encounter God's Wrath; and by breaking through a consuming Fire, to approach his Throne, and take the Book. [Who is this that hath engaged his Heart to draw near unto me!] no Angel durst have presumed to come so near God.

3. As a Lion he needed to overcome Death, and rise to execute the Contents of this Book. They say, that a Lion sleeps the first three days after he is brought forth, but then being roused, by the roaring of the Old Lion, he, after that, sleeps the least of any Creature. So did Christ rise by the Power of his Father, to sleep no more.

4*thly*, Being risen, he is set forth;

1. As a Lion of Judah; for that in that Prophecy, Gen. 49. 9. as also Psal. 60. 7. Judah, in respect of his Kingly Office, is called, God's Law-giver; not simply, in respect of giving the Laws (that Moses, of the Tribe of Levi, did) but because Judah executed them. Now in that Christ did here take the Book of God's Decrees, and undertook to execute and fulfil them as God's Commissioner, therefore he is in this respect most properly here called, the Lion of the Tribe of Judah.

2. He is here set forth as a Lamb, having seven Horns, and as many Eyes; and this, in as fit and proper a respect as might be, to signify his being one, not only fit to give this Prophesy, but to effect the things contained in it by his Horns and

PART I. Eyes. And he is ſaid to have ſeven Horns, and ſeven Eyes, to ſhew his full Power to open the ſeven Seals, and to blow the ſeven Trumpets, and to pour out the ſeven Vials. He is ſuch a Prophet as never was, in that he not only makes a bare revelation of things, but brings them to paſs, and makes them good. God gave him the Plat-form of Occurrences to come, and Power and Wiſdom to order the accompliſhment of them. He is alſo ſet forth, both as a Lamb and a Lion, to ſhew his Prieſtly and Kingly Office; and how, by virtue of both, he makes us Kings and Prieſts, as they ſing, verſ. 10. and having his Kingdom in their Eye, they are confirmed in the Promiſe of it, by a remembrance of him as a Lamb, and a Lion, thus ſtrong and powerful. As a Lamb, he purchaſeth the revelation of what concerns his Church, and as a Lamb, with Horns and Eyes, he effects the accompliſhment of it. And the ſcope and ſum of this Book being, to ſhew how Chriſt rules the World, and his Church, till he hath put down all Rule, and how he then takes the Kingdom himſelf; therefore he is deſcribed as a Lamb, in reſpect of his quiet governing the Affairs of the World, and the Church, until that his Kingdom, which then, as a Lion, by open force he aſſumes, and reſcues the Church, as a Prey, out of the Enemies Jaws; and that, by the right of a promiſed Succeſſion from Judah and David; for which cauſe, thoſe Titles of the Root of David, and Lion of Judah, do here come in.

In a word, firſt, this Title of his being the Root of David, ſhews his right to that Kingdom which he is to receive; of which David, and his Kingdom, was but the Type.

2. His being called a Lamb ſlain, is to ſhew both a Right and Title to that Kingdom, and alſo the price by which he purchaſed it, even his own Blood.

3. His being a Lion, is to ſhew the Power by which he conquers, obtains, and poſſeſſes it. Therefore this Heavenly Chorus, or Company, here, when they once ſee Chriſt, by taking the Book, to undertake the accompliſhment of this Prophecy; the concluſion of which, is his inſtalment into his Kingdom: They, in the Joy and Faith of it, ſhout out before-hand, ſaying, We ſhall raign on Earth; as looking on all that was to fore-goe his Kingdom, and to come between this Viſion, and his Kingdom to come, all as already done, and having this Kingdom chiefly in their Eye, which ſhould come.

Now from the 8*th* Verſe, to the end of the Chapter, is a Doxology, or a giving praiſe for the Lamb's taking the Book: Which Song conſiſts of four Parts, or was ſung by four Companies: As,

1. Four and twenty Elders, and four Beaſts, (the Church of Men upon Earth) they begin and raiſe the Song, Verſ. 8. And when he had taken the Book, the four Beaſts, and four and twenty Elders, fell down before the Lamb, having every one of them, Harps and Golden Vials full of Odours, which are the Prayers of Saints.

2. The Angels join their Voices, Verſ. 11. And I beheld, and I heard the Voice of many Angels round about the Throne, and the Beaſts, and the Elders, and the number of them was ten thouſand times ten thouſand, and thouſands of thouſands.

3. The Creatures come in alſo, Verſ. 13. And every Creature which is in Heaven, and on the Earth, and under the Earth, and ſuch as are in the Sea, and all that are in them, heard I, ſaying, Bleſſing, Honour, Glory, and Power, be unto him that ſitteth on the Throne, and unto the Lamb, for ever and ever.

4. The Beaſts cloſe all, ſaying, Amen. Verſ. 14. And the four Beaſts ſaid, Amen. And the four and twenty Elders fell down and worſhipped him that liveth for ever and ever.

Obſervat. 1. Obſerve in the general, That the Sons of Men are the eminenteſt Praiſers of God: They are the Leaders in this Heavenly Quire, and they conclude the Song. The reaſon of which is, in that the higheſt Work that God ever did, is the Work of Redemption, which concerns us, not the Angels, for which notwithſtanding, the Angels praiſe him, in Luk. 2. as alſo here: yea, all the Creatures rejoice in our Redemption, Verſ. 13. But ſtill we are the Firſt-Fruits, we are the Leaders in the Song, whom the Angels follow. It is not ſaid by Them,

Thou

Thou hast redeemed us to God by thy Blood; That concerns Us, though they ſing Praiſe too. Chap. 2.

1. Learn we from hence to bleſs God for his Mercy and Goodneſs to others: We ſee the Angels do ſo for us, who yet cannot ſing as we, with an Intereſt, and yet they praiſe God for our Redemption; and this is their higheſt Grace. Uſe 1.

2. Learn we to bleſs God in a ſenſe of our Intereſt: That will raiſe our Hearts a degree higher, as it was with the Church of Men in their Song here; Verſ. 9, 10.

The Praiſers who were of the Sons of Men, are deſcribed. Verſ. 8.

1. As having Harps. 2. Golden Vials: In alluſion to the Levitical Service in the Temple, where they had Muſical Inſtruments, and Incenſe in Bowls or Vials; which Zech. 14. 20. are called, the Bowls of the Altar. Not that Muſical Inſtruments are to be in the Worſhip of God now, neither Incenſe; which as it was the Type of Prayer and Praiſes, Pſal. 141. 2. [Let my Prayer come up before thee as Incenſe]; ſo thoſe Harps were of that Spiritual Melody (as the Apoſtle calls it) which we make in our Hearts to God; even of Spiritual Songs, Epheſ. 5. 19. Therefore John himſelf interprets the Odours or Incenſe here, to be the Prayers of the Saints. And their Hearts are the Golden Vials, having Faith purer than Gold, (as Peter ſpeaks) which is the ſpring of all their Prayers. And their Harps alſo are their Hearts; [Corda] and [Chordæ] are near akin.

And every one is ſaid to have Harps; for in publick Worſhip all ſhould join; the little Strings go to make up a Conſort, as well as the great. Though thou haſt but little Grace, yet God's Worſhip would not be compleat without thee. And whereas John calls theſe Odours the Prayers of the Saints; it makes nothing for what the Papiſts would hence collect; namely, that the Saints in Heaven offer up the Prayers of the Saints on Earth. For,

1. This Company are (as we ſaid before) the Church of Men on Earth.

2. Theſe here offer not the Prayers of others, but their own; for both themſelves make the Song, and that a new one; and alſo the Benefit they praiſe God for in it, is their own, [Thou haſt redeemed us to God by thy Blood]. Thoſe words therefore [the Prayers of the Saints], are but the Interpretation which John adds; and do imply only this, that theſe were Saints, and their Odours were their Prayers.

1. And they ſung a [new] Song]. You ſhall find, in the Pſalms, that when David had a new occaſion, in a further degree, to praiſe God; He ſays, I will ſing a New Song; now here there was a New Occaſion given. Verſ. 9.

2. It is called New, in oppoſition to the Old Song under the Old Teſtament; as John 13. 34. I give you a New Commandment; that is, of the Goſpel, called New, in oppoſition to the Commandments of the Old Law. In the 4*th* Chapter of this Book, theſe Elders had ſung a Song for the Work of Creation, (verſ. laſt); but here they ſing for the Work of Redemption, (as verſ. 9.) which is the eminent Work of the New Teſtament, as Creation was of the Old: and therefore it is called a New Song.

3. There is a more ſpecial Reaſon, why they ſhould ſing a New Song, for that the New Hieruſalem was in their Eye: Chriſt's Kingdom, and their Kingdom, [we ſhall raign on Earth] there all things ſhall be made New. And therefore their Song is now a New Song, for the Inſtalment of their New King. Thus Pſal. 96. 1. (which is a Pſalm of this Kingdom of Chriſt, as appears by verſ. 10, and 13.) doth therefore begin with theſe words. O ſing unto the Lord a New Song.

1. Learn we from hence to frame New Matter of Praiſe, and to have freſh Affections upon every New Occaſion. Uſes.

2. We are to bleſs God, both for our Creation and our Redemption; and to take in the mention of Old Bleſſings, when we give thanks for New. As a good

PART I. good Scribe is ſaid to bring forth of his Treaſure, New Things and Old: So in Thankſgiving, we are to ſing the Old Song, and the New.

The Matter of the Song, is Praiſe to the Lamb: where we have;

First; The Perſon praiſed, the Lamb [Thou art worthy] ſpoken, in anſwer to the Proclamation afore made; Who is worthy! Thou, and Thou alone: for by him, and for him, are all things, Col. 1. 16.

Secondly; The things for which they praiſe him: As,

1. For his Death, that he died to redeem them.

2. For his Reſurrection, intimated in this, Thou [waſt] ſlain; the one making us Prieſts, the other Kings; as follows, Rev. 5. 10. And to this end Chriſt died and roſe, that he might be Lord and King, Rom. 14. 9.

The word here, which is tranſlated [Redeemed], is ἠγόρασας [bought] in the Original.

For thou waſt ſlain, and haſt redeemed us to God by thy Blood, out of every Kindred, and People, and Tongue, and Nation]. Rev. 5. 9. From hence obſerve:

Obſerv. 1. 1. That the Blood of Chriſt was paid as a Price to God, for the purchaſing of our Redemption. So 1 Cor. 6. 20. [bought with a Price]. And in 1 Tim. 2. 6. it is called a Ranſom.

Obſerv. 2. 2. Yet Chriſt hath not redeemed all Men: for it is not [every Nation and People], but [out] of every Nation the Elect only.

Obſerv. 3. 3. In that they ſay, Chriſt is worthy to receive the Book, becauſe he was ſlain; it argues, this Book of the Revelation, is a ſpecial Fruit of his Death, and ſo ſhould be the more prized by us. Before Chriſt's Death, we have his own Word for it, that he knew not when the Day of Judgment ſhould be: But now, ſince he was ſlain, he doth, for he is pronounced worthy to take the Book, and to open the Seals thereof, Verſ. 9.

Verſ. 10. And haſt made us, unto our God, Kings and Prieſts, and we ſhall reign on the Earth]. Chriſt was before ſet forth as a Lion, for a King, ſo as a Lamb, for a Prieſt. And both were mentioned, to ſhew the Ground of our being both Kings and Prieſts, [We ſhall reign on Earth].

From hence obſerve;

1. That this comforted the Saints of Old, even the conſideration of Chriſt's Kingdom on Earth: And how peremptory are they! [We ſhall reign]. They mention that, becauſe that is the end and ſcope of the Revelation, and the concluſion of this Book, when the Seals are off, and the Contents of the Book accompliſh'd; and therefore they have that in their Eye. And ſeeing Chriſt undertakes the accompliſhment of all, (whereof this is the Iſſue) they are confirmed in the Faith of it.

2. That this Kingdom of Chriſt on Earth to come, is a far more glorious condition for the Saints, than what their Souls have now in Heaven: for theſe here over-look that Condition which yet they were to run through; and their Thoughts fly to this for comfort, [We ſhall reign on Earth].

Verſ. 11. In the 11*th* Verſe comes in the other Company of Angels, and their Song: Who,

1. For their Number, are ten thouſand times ten thouſand, and thouſands of thouſands: So likewiſe, Dan. 7. 10. where the ſame Throne and Kingdom of Chriſt is propheſied of, there is the ſame Number of his Guard of Angels mentioned; A fiery ſtream iſſued and came forth from before him: thouſand thouſands miniſtred unto him, and ten thouſand times ten thouſand ſtood before him: the Judgment was ſet, and the Books were opened. Obſerve from hence, that God hath another World of Rational Creatures which we ſee not. And what a Story then will the latter Day produce! And what need we fear, when there is ſo many for us, us, (as Eliſha ſaid to his Servant, 2 King. 6. 16.) for they are all our Guardians too. Chap. 2.

2. For their Station; They are behind the Elders, yet round about the Throne, having all in a Ring as it were. Theſe are the Guard of the Queen of Heaven, the Lamb's Wife, the Church. So Pſal. 34. 7. The Angels of the Lord encompaſs round about them that fear him. And Heb. 1. ult. it is ſaid, They are ſent out to miniſter for the good of the Saints.

The Song follows in the next Verſe, Worthy is the Lamb that was ſlain, to receive Power, &c.] Here obſerve: Verſ. 12.

1. That Chriſt, though he were worthy by Inheritance, yet he was worthy by Purchaſe alſo; ſo the words [that was ſlain] do imply.

2. As he hath ſeven Horns, and ſeven Eyes, ſo he hath a ſeven-fold praiſe.

3. To expreſs their ſtrong deſires to give him ſufficient Praiſes, and ſuch as were due unto him; they heap up many good things, of which they pronounce him worthy.

4. None is worthy to be the King of all the World, but only Jeſus Chriſt. And indeed it were too much for any Creature. The Angels themſelves were top-heavy of their Glory, which made them reel out of Heaven; but Chriſt hath the Godhead to poiſe him. No Beaſt is naturally a King of Beaſts, but the Lion, (ſays the Philoſopher); neither is any worthy to be King of all Creatures, but this Lion of the Tribe of Judah.

The Things they attribute to him, are,

1. Power; that is, Authority over All. So ſays Chriſt, John 17. 2. To me all Power is given.

2. Riches; that is, poſſeſſion of all Creatures; All things are Chriſt's, and ſo ours, 2 Cor. 8. 9. Riches of Glory, Knowledg, all are his.

3. Strength, joined to his Authority. He is able to work any thing; not as other Kings, who though they have Authority, have yet no more perſonal ſtrength than other Men; but Chriſt hath ſeven Horns too.

4. Wiſdom; and this as large as his Power and Dominions. He knows all that God means to do; and ſees all with his own Eyes, not with other Mens, as other Kings do.

5. Honour; that reſpects what all Creatures bring in to him. They all adore, and bow the Knee to him, Phil. 2. 10.

6. Glory; both in his Perſonal Excellencies, and alſo what his Father gives him: He ſits at God's right Hand, and governs with him; and in his Perſon, is the brightneſs of his Father's Glory; and eſpecially ſhall be made manifeſt when he ſhall come to judg the World.

7. Bleſſing; which reſpects that Glory, which for his ſpecial goodneſs to them, his Saints do give him. Others (yea even the Devils) do give honour to Chriſt, but not Bleſſing: That the Saints only give; for that reſpects in God the communication of Goodneſs. They only bleſs him, whom he bleſſeth firſt. Take notice therefore, that Chriſt hath all deſirable Excellencies in him; Power, Riches, Wiſdom, Strength, Honour, Glory, and Bleſſing.

And every Creature]. Every Creature in its kind ſhall worſhip Chriſt, Phil. 2. 10, 11. Every Creature comes in here, becauſe when Chriſt's Kingdom is Verſ. 13.

The Church of Men began the Song, and theſe continue it; for it is the Mercy to them is the Matter of their Song, and the Inſtauration of their King. And therefore we are the more to be ſtirred up to do it, in that we ſee even all the Creatures do it, whom it doth not ſo much concern.

Verſ. 14. And the four Beaſts ſaid, Amen.] And with them the Elders join. Obſerve that the Officers do both begin and end.

Amen]; It ſeems to be an Ordinance, that this word ſhould be uſed in the cloſe; and that, firſt, by the Officers, and then by the People. A Precedent for the practice of this, you have likewiſe in 1 Cor. 14. 16. Elſe when thou ſhalt bleſs with the Spirit, how ſhall he that occupieth the room of the unlearned, ſay Amen at thy giving of Thanks, ſeeing he underſtandeth not what thou ſayeſt?

CHAP. III.

The Scheme and Diviſion of the whole Prophecy, from the beginning of the Sixth Chapter.

THE Stage being ſet, Chap. 4. and the Prologue acted, Chap. 5. the Prophecy it ſelf begins, in ſeveral Scenes and Viſions, Chap. 6. But e're I can proceed to tell you what the ſix firſt Seals of the 6th Chapter (or any Viſion elſe) doth concern, I muſt neceſſarily give you the Argument, and the Diviſion of the whole Book; which will afford a better proſpect, and a more delectable view, than that of the Glory of all the Kingdoms of this World, (although that was made once in the twinkling of an Eye); for what can be more pleaſant, than to have an inſight (though but a general one) into what is God's Deſign and Project upon the World, in which the Church is ſeated, and the condition of the Church it ſelf, in the World, ſince Chriſt's Aſcenſion? Now this you have as artificially, and in as many Scenes in this Book preſented, as ever was Story in any Poem.

Now for a general inſight into this Prophecy, which may ſerve both as a Compaſs and a Chart to us, in ſailing over this Sea, that we may know ſtill where we are: I premiſe theſe general Propoſitions or Aſſertions concerning the whole Prophecy.

Prop. 1. That this enſuing Prophecy, from the beginning of Chap. 6. to the end of the Book, contains two Prophecies, diſtinct each from other. That Book, mentioned Chap. 5. is brought in to repreſent this Prophecy of the Revelation (as was ſhewed) to be given to the Church, and executed by Chriſt the Lamb and Lion of Judah.

Now in that Book, two things are diſtinctly to be conſidered, as given with that Book.

1. The Seals on the back-ſide of the Book.
2. The Contents of the Book it ſelf.

Now, 1. as the Book contains Matter of Prophecy, ſo do the very Seals alſo. And accordingly the Viſions of thoſe Seals do take up the 6th, 7th, 8th, and 9th Chapters. Both Books and Seals are myſterious, and do contain Matter of Prophecy. The very Back-ſide, and Cover of this Book of God, is Prophetical. This Book is all compoſed of Prophecies; and the uſe of the Seals, is not ſimply to ſhew, that the Matter of this Book was difficult to be known, (as in Scripture phraſe a ſealed Book imports) but beſides, they ſerve to contain a Matter of Viſion to be delivered.

2*dly*, Add to this, that anſwerably, verſ. 2. of Chap. 5. In revealing and delivering this Prophecy, two Difficulties are diſtinctly mentioned:

1. The looſing of the Seals.
2. The opening of the Book.

Now if the Seals only did import the difficulty of this Book, it would not have been made a new Difficulty to open the Book. But it is expreſly made a diſtinct Difficulty to open the Book after the Seals are looſened. This therefore was, becauſe to looſen the Seals, was to deliver one Prophecy; and to open the Book, when theſe Seals were looſened, was to deliver another.

3*dly*, Accordingly in the 6th Chapter, when the Lamb opens the firſt Seal, a Viſion is ſeen, and therein a Prophecy delivered. So when the Second is opened,

But e're I can proceed to tell you what the ſix firſt Seals of the 6th Chapter (or any Viſion elſe) doth concern, I muſt neceſſarily give you the Argument, and the Diviſion of the whole Book; which will afford a better proſpect, and a more delectable view, than that of the Glory of all the Kingdoms of this World, (although that was made once in the twinkling of an Eye); for what can be more pleaſant, than to have an inſight (though but a general one) into what is God's Deſign and Project upon the World, in which the Church is ſeated, and the condition of the Church it ſelf, in the World, ſince Chriſt's Aſcenſion? Now this you have as artificially, and in as many Scenes in this Book preſented, as ever was Story in any Poem.

Now for a general inſight into this Prophecy, which may ſerve both as a Compaſs and a Chart to us, in ſailing over this Sea, that we may know ſtill where we are: I premiſe theſe general Propoſitions or Aſſertions concerning the whole Prophecy.

Prop. 1. That this enſuing Prophecy, from the beginning of Chap. 6. to the end of the Book, contains two Prophecies, diſtinct each from other. That Book, mentioned Chap. 5. is brought in to repreſent this Prophecy of the Revelation (as was ſhewed) to be given to the Church, and executed by Chriſt the Lamb and Lion of Judah.

Now in that Book, two things are diſtinctly to be conſidered, as given with that Book.

1. The Seals on the back-ſide of the Book.
2. The Contents of the Book it ſelf.

Now, 1. as the Book contains Matter of Prophecy, ſo do the very Seals alſo. And accordingly the Viſions of thoſe Seals do take up the 6th, 7th, 8th, and 9th Chapters. Both Books and Seals are myſterious, and do contain Matter of Prophecy. The very Back-ſide, and Cover of this Book of God, is Prophetical. This Book is all compoſed of Prophecies; and the uſe of the Seals, is not ſimply to ſhew, that the Matter of this Book was difficult to be known, (as in Scripture phraſe a ſealed Book imports) but beſides, they ſerve to contain a Matter of Viſion to be delivered.

2*dly*, Add to this, that anſwerably, verſ. 2. of Chap. 5. In revealing and delivering this Prophecy, two Difficulties are diſtinctly mentioned:

1. The looſing of the Seals.
2. The opening of the Book.

Now if the Seals only did import the difficulty of this Book, it would not have been made a new Difficulty to open the Book. But it is expreſly made a diſtinct Difficulty to open the Book after the Seals are looſened. This therefore was, becauſe to looſen the Seals, was to deliver one Prophecy; and to open the Book, when theſe Seals were looſened, was to deliver another.

3*dly*, Accordingly in the 6th Chapter, when the Lamb opens the firſt Seal, a Viſion is ſeen, and therein a Prophecy delivered. So when the Second is opened,

PART I.

there is mentioned another; and when the third, a third Vision, and so on in that Chapter: And the 7*th* Seal produceth seven Angels with seven Trumpets; six of which are recounted from Chap. 8. to Chap. 10. and the seventh Trumpet is in the end of the 11*th* Chapter.

In the second place; When these Seals are, the one of them after the other, taken off, and the Peophecy and Visions of those Seals seen and ended, then an Angel comes with a little Book (alone, without Seals) open, Chap. 10. 2. as containing a New Prophecy for John. Now when that this first of the Seals was past, then accordingly John was bidden to eat it, vers. 9, 10. to be enabled for a New Prophecy. So, vers. 11. it is expresly said, Thou must propheſy again, before many Tongues and Kings. And becauſe a New Prophecy was upon the eating of that Book to begin, hence, vers. 18. 'tis said, The same Voice which he had heard before, did speak from Heaven again. Now that Voice, or Speech, he had heard but twice before, and 'twas both times whenas a New Prophecy was given; once when the Revelation first began, and the Epistles to the seven Churches, Chap. 1. vers. 10. And then another Time, when this General Prophecy begins, Chap. 4. vers. 1. (which is distinct from that Prophecy of the seven Epistles, in the three first Chapters, which is peculiar to the Seven Churches). And now again, Chap. 10. vers. 8. as beginning a new and third Prophecy.

Observ. In that the Seals themselves do thus contain a Prophecy; Observe, That in God's Book nothing is without a meaning. Christ said, Not a tittle of it shall pass; let it not therefore pass us. The very Cover here is Prophetical; much more does every word written in it, contain Matter of Instruction. Search the Scriptures narrowly, and slight not a tittle of them, though you understand them not. There is enough in what you understand, to admire; and in what you understand not, to adore; as judging it the Word of the Great God, every syllable of which has its weight and value.

Proposition 2. That both these Prophecies, both Seals and Book-Prophecy do run over the same whole course of Times, from Christ's Ascension unto his Kingdom; containing in them several Events and Occurrences successively, from that Time to this of his Kingdom, with which this Book ends; namely, the Seal-Prophecy, from Chap. 6. to Chap. 12. doth act over one Story of all Times to the end of Time; and then the Book-Prophecy, from Chap. 12. (beginning at the same Time again) doth act over another Story of all the same Times, unto the end. So that the same whole Race of Time is run over in both, but with several and distinct Occurrences; even as the two Books of the Kings and Chronicles, do contain the Stories of the same course of Time from David unto the Captivity. But the Book of the Kings, handles most the Affairs of the Kings of Israel; and that of the Chronicles more eminently holds forth the Story of the Kings of Judah.

Now to demonstrate this apart; first of the Seal-Prophecy, and then of the Book-Prophecy.

1. For the Seal-Prophecy; lay but these three things together, (whereof the two first were never denied by any) and the Point in hand will necessarily follow.

1*st*, That in the 6*th* Chapter the six Seals do begin; with a Prophecy, either from John's Time, or from Christ's. To prove this, besides those Evidences, which when we come to interpret them, will more evidently appear, as that the first Seal begins with Christ his going forth in preaching the Gospel, so to lay the first Foundation of his Kingdom; which going forth, refers to those Primitive Times: As also that in the fifth Seal, you have the first mention of the bloody Persecution of the Saints, professing the Gospel, in the same Primitive Times; which appears by this, that they are told, that when the rest of their Brethren, by the succeeding Persecutions, should be killed, they then should have have vengeance upon their Enemies for their Blood ſpilt; which argues theſe in the 6th Chapter, to be thoſe firſt Perſecutions: beſides theſe Evidences (I ſay) it appears more generally, becauſe the Prophecy it ſelf does but here begin, all in the former Chapters being but a Prologue and a Preparation. And it begins with John's Time at leaſt; for, Chap. 1. 1. he ſays, he was to ſhew to Chriſt's Servants, things which ſhould ſhortly come to paſs: the things contained in this Prophecy, entring into an Accompliſhment preſently upon John's writing them, and divulging them to the Churches. Chap. 3.

The ſecond thing (which alſo none ever denied) is, That theſe Seals and Trumpets, which do in order ſucceed one another, do contain a continued Prophecy of Events following one another in a ſucceſſion of Ages downward. To this purpoſe you may obſerve the phraſe uſed Chap. 10. 7. [In the days of the Voice of the ſeventh Trumpet, when it ſhall begin to ſound] which imports, That theſe ſeveral Trumpets do (as Scenes in a Comedy) ſhare among them, the ſeveral Ages and Times ſucceeding one another. And in like manner the Seals have their Days, even as the reſt of the Trumpets have their Days proper, and peculiarly given to them. And look how in order they are placed, one before the other, as firſt, ſecond, and third, &c. ſo do the ſeveral Times or Ages precede or ſucceed one the other: So as the Days of the firſt Seal are the firſt Age, and things done in that Age after John, and ſo on the ſecond Seal, &c.

3*dly*, Add to the two former, this Conſideration, That the ſeventh Trumpet, in the 11*th* Chapter, doth end all Time, and ſo becomes a Period to one diſtinct Prophecy of all Time. This appears from Chap. 10. after the Seals were paſſed over and ſeen with their Effects, and the ſix Trumpets had ſounded in the 8*th* and 9*th* Chapters afore-going; The Angel ſwears, verſ. 6, 7. of that tenth Chapter, that Time ſhould be no longer; but in the Days of the ſeventh Trumpet, all ſhould be finiſh'd. And therefore, Chap. 11. from verſ. 15. (where the ſeventh Trumpet is brought in ſounding in its order, when his Day and and turn comes to ſound) muſt needs be eſteemed the End of that Prophecy; for it brings you to the End of all Times; that is, of the Times which God thought fit to allot this World, and his Enemies in the World, to Rule and Reign. Firſt, The Monarchs and great Men of the World, are to have their Time here; and then Chriſt's Time, and the Time of his Saints, is to begin; as Verſ. 15. [The Kingdoms of this World, are become the Kingdoms of our Lord, and of his Chriſt, &c.] and Verſ. 18. [The Time of the Dead is come, that they ſhould be judged]; when this World's Hour-Glaſs is run out, then that of another World is to be turned up to run, when there ſhall be a New Heaven, and a New Earth. So that, from the firſt Seal to the ſeventh Trumpet, is run over all the Time that the Monarchies and Kingdoms of this World (whilſt they ſhould be in the Hands of Chriſt's Enemies) ſhould continue and laſt. For that is the Time, which towards the End, under the ſixth Trumpet, the Angel that came down under that ſixth Trumpet, ſware, ſhould be no longer. I ſhall ſet down the words of his Oath, in the 6*th* and 7*th* Verſes of that 10*th* Chapter; He ſweareth by Him that liveth for ever and ever, (that is, by God) who created the Heaven, the Earth, and the Sea, and the Things that are in all theſe his three Dominions, That there ſhould be Time no longer, Verſ. 6. But in the Days of the ſeventh Angel, when he ſhall begin to ſound, the Myſtery of God ſhould be finiſhed; as he hath declared to his Servants the Prophets, verſ. 7. Which whole Voice, or Words, of the ſixth Angel, do import, 1. That much of that whole Time, had now been paſt and run out already in the former Viſions of the Seals and Trumpets, from the firſt until now; And, 2. that now the time allotted by God was brought well nigh to the very laſt Sands of it. And that the Church might have ſome warning, and be able to make ſome gueſs, and compute when this Time of the World's Monarchy, or Kingdoms of the World, ſhould have an end; and ſo, when the Time of the Gentiles ſhould be fulfilled, and be no longer, this Angel doth, towards the expiration of that whole Time, give us, in the 11*th* Chapter, the true computation of that Time, during which the laſt Monarchy (you know there are four) on Earth ſhould endure, as that which there is mentioned another; and when the third, a third Vision, and so on in that Chapter: And the 7*th* Seal produceth seven Angels with seven Trumpets; six of which are recounted from Chap. 8. to Chap. 10. and the seventh Trumpet is in the end of the 11*th* Chapter.

In the second place; When these Seals are, the one of them after the other, taken off, and the Peophecy and Visions of those Seals seen and ended, then an Angel comes with a little Book (alone, without Seals) open, Chap. 10. 2. as containing a New Prophecy for John. Now when that this first of the Seals was past, then accordingly John was bidden to eat it, vers. 9, 10. to be enabled for a New Prophecy. So, vers. 11. it is expressly said, Thou must prophesy again, before many Tongues and Kings. And because a New Prophecy was upon the eating of that Book to begin, hence, vers. 18. 'tis said, The same Voice which he had heard before, did speak from Heaven again. Now that Voice, or Speech, he had heard but twice before, and 'twas both times whenas a New Prophecy was given; once when the Revelation first began, and the Epistles to the seven Churches, Chap. 1. vers. 10. And then another Time, when this General Prophecy begins, Chap. 4. vers. 1. (which is distinct from that Prophecy of the seven Epistles, in the three first Chapters, which is peculiar to the Seven Churches). And now again, Chap. 10. vers. 8. as beginning a new and third Prophecy.

Observ. In that the Seals themselves do thus contain a Prophecy; Observe, That in God's Book nothing is without a meaning. Christ said, Not a tittle of it shall pass; let it not therefore pass us. The very Cover here is Prophetical; much more does every word written in it, contain Matter of Instruction. (beginning at the same Time again) doth act over another Story of all the same Times, unto the end. So that the same whole Race of Time is run over in both, but with several and distinct Occurrences; even as the two Books of the Kings and Chronicles, do contain the Stories of the same course of Time from David unto the Captivity. But the Book of the Kings, handles most the Affairs of the Kings of Israel; and that of the Chronicles more eminently holds forth the Story of the Kings of Judah.

Chap. 3.

The ſecond thing (which alſo none ever denied) is, That theſe Seals and Trumpets, which do in order ſucceed one another, do contain a continued Prophecy of Events following one another in a ſucceſſion of Ages downward. This appears from Chap. 10. after the Seals were paſſed over and ſeen with their Effects, and the ſix Trumpets had ſounded in the 8*th* and 9*th* Chapters afore-going; The Angel ſwears, verſ. 6, 7. of that tenth Chapter, that Time ſhould be no longer; but in the Days of the ſeventh Trumpet, all ſhould be finiſh'd. might ſerve us to compute the Period of the whole, and the beginning of Chriſt's viſible Kingdom, even the Days of the Beaſt, or Pope, who is the laſt part, with his ten Kingdoms of Europe, treading down the Church, or Holy City; which Beaſt, and his Kingdoms, ſupporting him as their Head; and whoſe Time, from his firſt beginning, to the near approach of that ſeventh Trumpet, (which ſhall begin to ſound not long after, or but a little afore his very end) is forty and two Months; or (which is all one) one thouſand two hundred and threeſcore Days; that is, ſo many Years. And with him all other Rule and Dominion on Earth ſhall end; and Chriſt ſhall take the Kingdom, when he ſhall have deſtroyed Antichriſt through the brightneſs of his coming, which will grow brighter, as his coming is nearer. And withal, this Angel gives a ſignal of Occurrences, which ſhould immediately forerun the Period of this Time of his Ruin, whereby the Church might with ſome nearneſs diſcern his approaching Ruin; which he does, in that 11*th* Chapter, by preſenting the Face of that Church, which ſhall be before the downfal of that Kingdom, and the laſt Perſecution of the Church by the Beaſt, foregoing his Ruin, that ſo the Church might have both warning, and not think it ſtrange at the fiery Trial, which at laſt was to come upon them; as alſo to be comforted, for it ſhould be the laſt; and ſoon after it, the ending of all Time, together with that of the World's Kingdoms.

That there is a New Prophecy that runs over the ſame whole Race of Time, from the beginning to the end of the World's Monarchies unto Chriſt's Kingdom, beginning at Chap. 12. and ſo on to the end of the Book.

Now then the Prophecy of the Seals, which runs over the whole Time of the World's Monarchies, being thus ended, chap. 11. there begins another Prophecy at chap. 12. which runs over the ſame whole Race and Period of Times, though with other Occurrences. And this is the other part of this General Propoſition, which I demonſtrate thus, (as I did the former).

Firſt; The 12*th* Chapter begins a New Prophecy; not only becauſe that the other having ended all Time, this muſt needs begin again anew: But further, the Viſion of the Woman and the Dragon in the 12*th* Chapter, muſt needs be of things foregoing the Riſe of Antichriſt, (the Beaſt in chap. 13.) and therefore concerneth the Primitive Times, which were the Times before Antichriſt. This is proved thus; The Dragon mentioned chap. 12. endeavouring to devour the Woman, is caſt down from Heaven: after which, ſtriving to drown her with a Flood, he is prevented: and then John ſtanding (as the beſt Copies read it) upon the Sand of the Sea, ſpies this New Beaſt ariſing, and the Dragon gives his Throne and Power unto Him, chap. 13. All this therefore which is in the 12*th* Chapter, muſt neceſſarily contain a Story of things done before the riſing of Antichriſt, and ſo by conſequence muſt belong to the Primitive Times, as the particular Interpretation will make more clear.

Secondly; Add to this, That unto this Beaſt, from his firſt riſing in the 13*th* Chapter, there is allowed him to continue 42 Months, or 1260 Years; which is the very ſame Period of Time; upon the expiring of which the Seventh Trumpet begins; which (as you heard) had ended all Time before, chap. 11. 15. and then the 14*th* Chapter which follows, contains the State of the Church during the Times of the Beaſt, in their ſeparation from him, and oppoſition of him. And then chap. 15, and 16. contain Seven Vials to ruin this Beaſt; whereof the laſt doth end all Time again, even as the ſeventh Trumpet had done. And this is proved;

1. In that, as when the ſeventh Trumpet ſhould ſound, the Angel ſware, Time ſhould be no longer: So when the ſeventh Vial is poured out, chap. 16. v. 17. a Voice ſays, It is done; that is, Time is at an end, all is finiſhed.

2. It is ſaid, chap. 15. 1. that theſe Vials contain the laſt Plagues, in which the Wrath of God is fulfilled; and therefore muſt neceſſarily make an end of all Chriſt's Chriſt's Enemies, and ſo of their Rule; and together with them, of all their Time. Chap. 3.

And, 3. the ſame things are ſaid to be done in the pouring out the ſeventh Vial, (which is the laſt of Plagues) that are preſented to be done at the ſounding of the ſeventh Trumpet, (which is the laſt of Woes): Thus at the ſounding of the 7th Trumpet, chap. 11.10. there are ſaid to be Lightnings, Voices, Thunderings, Earth-quakes, and a great Hail: And ſo likewiſe upon the pouring forth of the laſt Vial, chap. 16. 18. there were Voices, and Thunderings, and Lightnings, and an Earthquake, ſuch as never were on Earth before; and ſo great an Hail, that every Stone weighed a Talent.

But you will ſay, If there be an end of all when Chriſt's Kingdom comes, then what do the 17, 18, and 19 Chapters contain? and to what Time will you refer them? ſeeing the Deſcription of the Kingdom of Chriſt begins but at the 20*th* Chapter, and ſo on. Object.

The Anſwer (in general) is, That they contain a larger Explication or Viſion of ſome eminent things that fall out under the Time of ſome of theſe Vials. And therefore, the 17*th* Chapter begins thus, [--One of the ſeven Angels which had the ſeven Vials, talked with me, and ſhewed me, &c.] as implying that what follows belonged to their Times. Anſwer.

But more particularly;

1. The 17*th* Chapter contains an Interpretation of what was ſpoken concerning the Beaſt in chap. 13. and ſhows who that Beaſt is. And as in the Prophecy of Daniel, the manner of the Holy Ghoſt was to interpret the Viſions there made; ſo here. And of the Whore carried by the Beaſt, he ſays plainly, by way of Explication, (verſ. 18.) it is that Great City that reigneth over the Kings of the Earth, namely Rome. And it was neceſſary that the Holy Ghoſt ſhould give an Interpretation of ſome things in this Book; and of this eſpecially, as being that which gives light to all the reſt; which therefore fitly comes in after all.

2. The 18*th* Chapter, and the 19*th*, to the 11*th* Verſe, doth contain a more Poetical Deſcription of the ruining of that City, the Seat of this laſt Monarchy, and therefore is but a more copious Explication of the 5*th* Vial, (which, chap. 16. 10. is ſaid to be poured out upon the Seat of the Beaſt). Together with a triumphing Song of the Church's concerning thoſe Times, ſung at the Whore's Funeral, and for the approaching Marriage of the Lamb. And this, chap. 19. to verſ. 11.

3. From thence to the 20*th* Chapter, is a more full deſcription of that laſt War of the Beaſt, and all the Kings of the Earth, and their overthrow by Chriſt: which is therefore all one with the laſt Vial, and the preparation thereunto; as none that ſhall read from the 13*th* Verſe of the 16*th* Chapter, unto the end, and compare it with chap. 19. from verſ. 11. to the end, will be able to deny. For ſo it pleaſed the Holy Ghoſt, towards the latter end of this Prophecy, to give a more full explanation of the two more eminent Vials, and the Times of them; after he had firſt (for method's ſake) briefly ſet them together, with the reſt, in their order: as in like manner, after he had compendiouſly ſet together in one Chapter, (chap. 20.) the Reign of Chriſt during a thouſand Years, and the Univerſal Judgment that follows, he yet ſpends the 21 Chapter in a more copious and magnificent Deſcription of the ſtate of the New Hieruſalem, and that Kingdom of Chriſt during thoſe thouſand Years.

But then you will ſay, Unto what will you refer the 11*th* Chapter, from verſ. 1, to verſ. 15. which is placed, as it were, between both Prophecies? Object.

I Anſwer (as before); All that Diſcourſe delivered by Word of Chriſt's Mouth, between the Seal, and the Book-Prophecy, doth belong unto both; as containing an exact Chonology of that laſt Period of the Time of the World's Monarchies: By means of which, we may eaſily compute, how much that whole Time is that both the Prophecies do run over, (as ſhall be ſhewed in the Interpretation Anſwer.

PART I. pretation of that Chapter). And withal, there is a Signal given, of ſuch eminent Occurrences befalling the Church, as ſhould be moſt proper and ſuitable Signs of the dawning of Chriſt's Kingdom ſhortly after to follow; and ſo, of the ending of the Time of both Prophecies. That as the Old Hieruſalem before it was deſtroyed, had Signs given of its deſtruction imminent; So hath the New Hieruſalem alſo, before it is reared.

Now that theſe Paſſages in the 11*th* Chapter do belong thus unto both Prophecies, appears;

1. In that he ſpeaks of Matters contained, and afterwards mentioned in the Book-Prophecy, chap. 13, and 16. as likewiſe of Matters mentioned in the Seal-Prophecy; namely, of the ending of the ſound of the ſixth Trumpet; which is declared in verſ. 16*th* of that 11*th* Chapter, and called, the paſſing away of the ſecond Woe.

And, 2. the Angel therein mentions how and when the expirations of the Times of both Prophecies do meet in the ſixth Trumpet of the Seal-Prophecy, ending about the time of the date of the Beaſt in the Book-Prophecy. And thus to inſert a Chronological Table (as it were) between both Prophecies, ſerving them both, and knitting together the Times of both, in one Period; how agreeable is it to the way of Hiſtorians, who when they run over much Time, and ſeveral Matters, uſe to affix a Table of Times unto that their Hiſtory; and ſo doth our Hiſtorical Prophet John in that 11*th* Chapter.

The third General Propoſition, or Head, ſhall be an enquiry into what is the Matter or Argument propheſied of in this whole Book: as alſo (more particularly) what are the differing Subjects of theſe two ſeveral Prophecies, the Seal, and Book-Prophecy.

I ſhall unfold and clear this by ſeveral ſteps and degrees, in theſe Propoſitions following.

1. It is certain, that the Subject of both Prophecies are the Fates and Deſtinies of the Kingdoms of the World, which ſhould be after Chriſt's Aſcenſion, until he take the Kingdom to himſelf. Therefore at the end or concluſion of the Seal and Trumpet-Prophecy, there is an acclamation that the Kingdoms of the World were then become Jeſus Chriſt's, (chap. 11. 15.) as having all that while before been under other Monarchs Hands, and of which the former part of the Prophecy had ſpoken all along. And therefore he ſays, Time ſhall be no longer; that is, for the Kingdoms of the World, (that is, not for their Worldly Kingdoms) unto which he oppoſeth that of Chriſt's. And therefore the Book-Prophecy alſo, which begins chap. 12. when it came to be firſt given, chap. 10. verſ. laſt, hath this Prologue or Preface unto it, Thou muſt propheſie again before Kings and Nations, &c. [before Kings]; that is, about Kings, (as the Stile of the Prophet is); and that word [again] implies his having propheſied about them before, in the Seal-Prophecy, although other Occurrences in them, and alſo his being to do it again in this other Prophecy following, in new Occurrences that concerned the Church.

The ſecond Propoſition is, That the whole Prophecy concerns only ſuch Kingdoms or Monarchies of the Gentiles, as had to do with the Church of Chriſt. For,

1. At the beginning of both Prophecies, the Church is made the Stage or Scene upon which all is acted; and ſo the Prophecies extend to no other Kingdoms than where the Church hath been. And this you may obſerve throughout both of them; as in the fifth Seal, chap. 6. you have bleſſed Martyrs then calling for Vengeance for their Blood; and under the Trumpets, (which are Miſeries upon Kingdoms) there are Men ſealed, as being Servants of God, ſcattered and mingled amongſt thoſe Nations, upon whom thoſe Trumpets blow. And the like may be obſerved in the following Chapter. So that they extend but to ſuch Kingdoms or Monarchies in the World, where the Church in all

Ages

Ages ſtill was; therefore, not to the Weſt-Indians, nor Tartarians, nor Chineſes, nor Eaſt-Indians, &c. where the Church hath not been (or not to any conſiderable purpoſe) not any of theſe Kingdoms doth this Prophecy concern. This likewiſe agrees with God's manner in the Prophets, who propheſied of ſuch Kingdoms only, as had to deal with his Church, thereby to ſhew Chriſt's Power in ruling Kingdoms for his Church's good. Chap. 3.

2. This Book being written for the comfort of his Church, and all the Judgments therein mentioned, coming out of the Throne of the Temple, which is the Church, and likewiſe upon the Prayers of the Church; it contains therefore the Fates of ſuch Kingdoms as the Church ſhould have to do withal. Now if ſo; then,

The third Step, or Propoſition, is this, That the Roman Monarchy, or Empire, with the Territories both in the Eaſt and Weſt Sea, which were under its Juriſdiction (which Empire when John wrote, was in its height and flouriſh; and with which the Church had moſt to do, and in the Juriſdiction of which the Church had always been chiefly, and in a manner, only ſeated) muſt needs be (in the ſeveral Revolutions and Changes of it) the main Subject of this Book of the Revelations, together with the State of the Church under it. Now this Empire, and the Dominions of it, was extended well-nigh as far for Circuit, as the Dominions under the Turk in the Eaſt, and the ten European Kingdoms in the Weſt. All which, in John's Time, were wholly and ſolely under the Emperor of Rome. And in this Empire, and throughout all the Territories of it, did God place his Church and Goſpel; and throughout all which the Chriſtian Profeſſion doth remain unto this Day, (even in the Eaſt as well as in the Weſt, though darkly and corruptly) and in a manner here only. This Empire therefore, with its Dominions, is in the New Teſtament called the World, even all the World, for the greatneſs of it, and becauſe indeed, this was the World which God had ſet up to act his great Works upon. Thus, Luk. 2. 1, 2. the whole World is ſaid to have been taxed by Auguſtus: and Acts 11. 28. there is foretold a Famine that ſhould rage throughout all the World, in the Time of Claudius Cæſar. And this World was the Line, (as the Apoſtle's phraſe is) beyond whoſe reach the Apoſtles preaching never ſtretch'd to any conſiderable purpoſe. This was their chief Auditory, as appears by Mat. 24. 14. where before the Deſtruction of Hieruſalem, foretold verſ. 15, 16. (as a Sign forerunning it) it is ſaid, the Goſpel ſhould be preached to all the World; that is, over all the Dominions of the Roman Empire, (as it was, by the Apoſtles, before the ruining of it). Now that this Empire, and the Territories under it, (together with the Church in it) ſhould be the main Subject of this Book, there are theſe Reaſons for it;

1. Becauſe (as hath been ſaid) it is the chief (and in a manner only) ſeat of the Church; which was, and ſtill is extended ſo far, and no further. And by the Power of this Empire, and the ſeveral Succeſſions of it, hath the Church been mainly oppreſſed in all Ages. If therefore this Book-Prophecy be of the Church, then ſurely, of the Church under this Empire; and if of the Judgments upon any Kingdoms for their Oppreſſion of the Church, then ſurely upon this, for the Church's ſake. And if the Judgments which are in this Book, ſet out under Seals, and Trumpets, and Vials, do come for the Church's ſake, and be made to fall upon her chief Enemies; then they muſt eminently light upon this Grand Enemy, (for ſuch it hath been) and ſo, this Prophecy muſt note out the Judgments and Wars that ruined the Empire for its perſecuting the Saints; who, chap. 6. 10. do cry out for Vengeance; and the Trumpets are the hearing of their Prayers, chap. 8. 3.

2*dly*, The Roman Empire (and the Succeſſions of it Eaſt and Weſt) was that Fourth and Great Monarchy that ſhould oppreſs the Earth, now only left, when Chriſt Aſcended. Now in the Prophecies of the Old Teſtament, their main Subject, was the Great Monarchy then in being, or preſently to come. So in Daniel, two or three Chapters are chiefly taken up with the Succeſſions of the Grecian Monarchy, and then of the Roman. And Daniel foretold that this Roman Roman ſhould be the moſt terrible of all the reſt. And therefore ſurely God in this Prophecy of the New Teſtament, doth (according to his manner in the Old) lay out the Fates of that Fourth Monarchy now only left; as he had done of thoſe others that were gone and paſt e're Chriſt aſcended.

PART I.

3*dly*, This muſt needs be ſo, eſpecially ſeeing the ſcope of this Book is the enſtallment of Chriſt into his Kingdom, and ſo, to ſhew how, in the mean time, he puts down all Rule that keeps it from him, and takes it to himſelf; ſo erecting a Fifth Monarchy, ſucceeding the other Four. Now then, this Roman Monarchy, in the ſeveral Succeſſions of it in the Eaſt and Weſt, being the chiefeſt Rule and Power that was left on Earth for Chriſt to put down, (and which his own Kingdom was immediately to ſucceed) it is therefore fitly made the Subject of this Book, to ſhew how he puts down the Rule of it, and preſerves his Church under it. And ſo it anſwers yet more fully unto the like ſcope of Daniel's Prophecy; who being to propheſie of the Kingdom of Chriſt, chap. 7. 9. God doth firſt, on purpoſe give him a Viſion of the four Monarchies that were to precede that of Chriſt; and eſpecially inſiſt on the fourth, namely, this of Rome, (verſ. 7.) as being that which Chriſt, after his Aſcenſion, was to encounter with, and put down, e're himſelf take the Kingdom. And then he ſhews Daniel how Chriſt will ruin it (verſ. 11.) and then take the Kingdom to himſelf. So that this Revelation, which is the Prophecy of the New Teſtament, doth more largely and particularly ſet forth that which Daniel in the Old Teſtament (according to the Diſpenſation then) ſaw more generally, even the ruin of the Fourth Monarchy, which Chriſt's Monarchy ſucceeds.

4*thly*, That this ſhould be the Subject of this Prophecy, ſuits alſo with the chief Prophecies delivered by other of the Apoſtles in the New Teſtament; which were reduced to three Heads;

1*ſt*, Foretelling the Ruin of the Roman Empire, which, 2 Theſſ. 2. Paul calls a taking out of the way him that letts.

2*dly*, The Diſcovery of the Pope (who is the laſt Head of that laſt Fourth Monarchy) and his Ruin.

3*dly*, The Kingdom of Chriſt to ſucceed.

Theſe three things were ordinarily preached by the Apoſtles, as appears plainly by 2 Theſſ. 2. from the 2*d* verſe to the 9*th*, where Paul (having ſpoken of theſe three things) ſays, verſ. 5. Remember you not, that when I was with you, I told you theſe things? So that the Apoſtles did certainly tell the Churches of theſe three things, which ſurely therefore are the main Subject of this Propheſy alſo; but they are more largely delivered unto John. Wherefore this Revelation may anſwerably be divided into theſe three Parts.

1. The Story of the Roman Empire, and the taking of it out of the way; which is the Subject of the 6*th*, 7*th*, 8*th*, and 9*th* Chapters of this Book.
2. The Diſcovery of the Man of Sin, and his Ruin, Chap. 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, and 19.
3. Chriſt's Coming, and Kingdom, Chap. 20. 21.

Now then, the fourth and laſt Conſideration ſhall be ſpent in an enquiry after the Difference of the Subjects of theſe two Prophecies, the Seal and Book-Prophecy: For in this Roman Empire, and the ſeveral Succeſſions and Revolutions of it, there are theſe two things to be conſidered in the Story thereof:

1. The Empire, or Political Body, and the State thereof.
2. The Church under it, and the State and Condition thereof.

And therefore ſome Writers have written the Eccleſiaſtical Story (or Story of the Church in all Ages) apart by it ſelf. Others have writ the Story of the Empire, and its ſeveral Revolutions. As among us here in England, (to give you you this Inſtance only for an illuſtration) the Book of Martyrs is chiefly a Story of Church Affairs, and the Conflicts of it with Antichriſt, in England; but Speed's Chronicle is chiefly a Story of the Affairs Civil, falling out in that Kingdom in the ſeveral Invaſions, Wars, Conqueſts, and Inteſtine Broils of it. Now the like Method hath the Holy Ghoſt been pleaſed to obſerve in this Prophetical Story of this Empire, and the Church ſpread through the Territories and Dominions of it. Theſe two Prophecies before mentioned, (namely, the Seal and Book-Prophecy) do ſhare theſe two between them. The one does apart contain (more particularly) the ſeveral Wars, Events, and Revolutions of the Empire it ſelf; and that is the Seal-Prophecy. And the other (which is the Book-Prophecy) contains the ſeveral Conditions and States of the Church of Chriſt in all Ages. Now this difference of the Subjects of thoſe two Prophecies doth appear in the ſeveral Characters, and in the very place and ſcituation of the Viſions themſelves. Chap. 3.

Firſt, The differing Shews or Faces of the Viſions in theſe Repreſentations, do argue this difference; for in the firſt Prophecy, you read of ſeven Seals, and four Horſes, chap. 6. and then of Trumpets, chap. 8, and 9. noting ſometimes Sealed Judgments and Devaſtations by Plagues, Famines, and Wars; of which latter, Trumpets are in all Nations the Signal and Symbols, and in Scriptures uſed to ſignify [Wars]; and ſo do note out the ſeveral Judgments by Conqueſts and Devaſtations by War brought upon the Civil State of the Empire. But in the Book-Prophecy, the chief Actors are Women; fit Emblems of the Church. Thus, chap. 12. it ſpeaks of a Woman with Child, ready to be delivered; and, chap. 14. of Virgins, free from her Fornications; then of a Whore repreſenting the falſe Church, chap. 17, and 18. and then, chap. 19. of a Bride preparing, and prepared, perſonating the State of the Church, when Chriſt ſhall come to fetch her, and bed her everlaſtingly in his Fathers Houſe and Kingdom. Thus artificial is the Holy Ghoſt in handling things of differing Nature, apart.

2dly, Anſwerably; The differing ſcituation and place which theſe two Prophecies had, do ſhew this. The Seals which contain the Prophecies of the Empire, were on the back-ſide, as containing Matters (extra Eccleſiam) without the Church; but the Book it ſelf contains things within: even as the Church is ſaid to be within, 1 Cor. 5. 12. For what have I to do to judg them alſo that are without? do not ye judg them that are within? Whereas thoſe that are not of the Church are ſaid to be without: Rev. 22. 15. For without are Dogs, and Sorcerers, and Whoremongers, and Murderers, and Idolaters, and whoſoever loveth and maketh a Lie. And ſo the Prophecy thereof is caſt to be, as it were, without the Book, even upon the Seals of it; as denoting that the Seal-Prophecy treats of things Outward, and of the temporal State of the Church: whereas the Book-Prophecy treats of Spiritual Things within the Church. And as in the General Diviſion this appears, ſo it will appear in the interpretation of all particulars throughout this Book: for John puts things of a ſort together; as the beſt Hiſtorians uſe to do. Only take this Caution along with you; that neither in the one nor the other of theſe Prophecies, the things of the Empire or the Church are ſo handled apart, as that nothing at all of the Church-Affairs were handled in the Seal-Prophecy, or that nothing of the Affairs of the Empire were mentioned in the Book-Prophecy. But it is ſo to be underſtood, as that eminently the Eccleſiaſtical Story is contained in the one, and the Imperial Story in the other. For as in the Books of Kings and Chronicles, though the firſt does more eminently and ſetly contain the Story of the Kings of Iſrael; yet ſo, as Matters of Judah are withal intermingled: And again, in the Story of Judah, Iſrael's Affairs are interwoven; even ſo is it here: Some things appertaining to the Church, are ſcatteredly mentioned in the Prophecy concerning the Empire; and ſome things touching the Empire are diffuſed through the Prophecy of the Church, or the Book-Prophecy.

PART I.

Now briefly then to ſum up all this Book;

It is a Trage-comical Viſion of the Occurrences of the World, and of the Church in the World, through all Times and Ages: whereof this may truly be the Title, [The Story of Chriſt's Kingdom, and the Removal of the ſeveral Difficulties of his coming to it].

Chap. 4. The Stage for this is ſet up in chap. 4. where there is a repreſentation of the Univerſal Church in all Ages, ſet forth according to the exact Pattern of a Church Viſible and Inſtituted; into which all Saints on Earth ſhould be caſt.

Chap. 5. Then enters the Prologue, chap. 5. in which is ſet forth Chriſt's taking upon him the Kingdom and Government, by taking the Sealed Book; as thereby ſhewing, he undertaketh to be God's Commiſſioner, to execute the Decrees contained in this Book, and to give the Viſion of it unto John. At which Enſtalment of him into his Kingdom, there is a Song of Praiſe ſung to the Lamb, by the four and twenty Elders, and four Beaſts, (who are the Chorus in this Show) with a triumphing Aſſurance, and Expectation of what will be the happy Concluſion of all, even, our reigning on Earth with him, ſay they there.

Now the Scene or Place where all was to be acted, which theſe Viſions here hold forth, is the Roman Empire, and the ſeveral Dominions of it in the Eaſt and Weſt, called, οἰκουμένη, the whole World.

Then begins the Story it ſelf at Chap. 6. The General Argument of which is, That whereas Chriſt's Government was to be executed and ſeen; Firſt, In putting down all oppoſite Rule and Power that ſtand in his way, as St. Paul ſpeaks 1 Cor. 15. 24, 25. Then cometh the End, when he ſhall have delivered up the Kingdom to God even the Father, when he ſhall have put down all Rule, and all Authority, and Power. For he muſt reign, till he hath put all Enemies under his Feet. And, ſecondly, in a viſible taking the Kingdom to himſelf and his Saints (which makes the Fifth Monarchy) Accordingly here the Story of this Book,

1. Shews how Chriſt doth put down all the oppoſite Rule, and Power, and Dominion, whatſoever, in the fourth and laſt foregoing Monarchy of the Romans, in the ſeveral Succeſſions and Revolutions of it, one after another, till that he hath worn them all out that were ordained to ſtand up in it. And theſe many Difficulties of his coming to, and obtaining his Kingdom, do exceedingly ſerve to make the Story of it appear the more glorious.

Then, 2. it cloſeth and endeth in a glorious viſible Kingdom which Chriſt ſets up on Earth, and peaceably poſſeſſeth together with his Saints, as the Cataſtrophe of all.

More particularly the Story is this, according to the ſeveral Contents of each Chapter.

Chriſt when he aſcended up to Heaven, found the Roman Monarchy (whoſe room he was to poſſeſs) ſtretched both over Eaſt and Weſt, even over all thoſe parts of the World, where he was to ſeat his Church and Kingdom; and all this wholly in the Hands, and under the Dominion and Power of one Monarch or Emperor; under whoſe Government all that were ſubjected, were altogether Heatheniſh, and Idolatrous, and wholly brought under the power of Satan, who was ſet up therein, as the God of this World.

Chap. 6. Hereupon, Chriſt the deſigned King firſt ſets upon the Conqueſt of Satan's Dominion and Worſhip in it; and by the preaching of the Goſpel, overturns that Chap. 12. vaſt Empire as Heatheniſh, throws down Satan from his Throne, and height of Glory in it, and brings it into ſubjection and acknowledgment of himſelf as King; and turns both it and its Emperors to Chriſtianity, within the ſpace of three hundred Years. This is the ſum and mind of the ſixth Chapter of the Seal-Prophecy, and likewiſe of the 12*th* Chapter of the Book-Prophecy.

But this Empire, though wholly turned Chriſtian in outward Profeſſion, yet having perſecuted his Church whilſt Idolatrous, and alſo after it was Chriſtian, (when

(when Arrian) therefore at the Prayers of the Martyrs ſlain (mentioned chap. 6. 11.) and in vengeance of their Blood (chap. 8. 4.) he further proceeds to ruin the Civil Imperial Power of the Empire it ſelf, by the Trumpets in the 8*th* and 9*th* Chapters. And the Empire then becoming divided into two parts, the Eaſtern and Weſtern Empire, (as they were commonly called) firſt he ruins the Imperial Weſtern State and Power in Europe, by the four firſt Trumpets, the Wars of the Goths by four ſeveral ſteps, in the 8*th* Chapter; and then the Imperial Eaſtern State (which ſtood after the other) and this by two degrees; firſt, by the Saracens, then by the Turks, (and theſe two are the fifth and ſixth Trumpet) which two poſſeſs all that Eaſtern Part unto this day; and this is the Contents of the 9*th* Chapter only, before theſe Trumpets bring theſe Evils upon the Empire; he ſeals up a Company of 144000 Chriſtians in the Eaſtern Part (as chap. 7. verſ. 2.) to be preſerved and continued in the true profeſſion of his Name, under theſe two ſoreſt and longeſt (and there called the Woe, Woe) Trumpets, which were to fall upon the Eaſtern Part of the Empire, in which theſe Servants of his there ſealed were to be; as appears by chap. 9. 4. And this their ſealing is the ſum of the ſeventh Chapter.

Chap. 3.
Chap. 8.
Chap. 9.
Chap. 7.

Now then that old Roman Empire, as under thoſe Emperors, being thus in both parts of it removed; yet ſtill, as that Eaſtern part of it is left poſſeſſed by the Turks, chap. 9. ſo this Weſtern part of it, in Europe, being by the Goths broken into ten Kingdoms, they all conſented to give their Power to the Beaſt, the Pope, who ſo becomes a Succeſſor to the Weſtern Emperors, and poſſeſſeth their Seat and Power, (though under another Title) and ſo heals that wound given to the Roman Monarchy, and reſtores it. And this Beaſt, the 13*th* Chapter deſcribes, and gives the Viſion of his Riſe, Power, and Time of his Reign; which the 17*th* Chapter doth expound and interpret.

Chap. 13.
Chap. 17.

Under whoſe Antichriſtian Tyranny (as great as that of the Turks themſelves towards Chriſtians) Chriſt yet preſerveth another-like Company, of one hundred forty and four thouſand Virgins (who are in like manner ſealed) Chriſtians, in the Weſt (as under the Tyranny of the Turks and Saracens he had done the like in the Eaſt, chap. 7.) himſelf ſo keeping poſſeſſion ſtill, by preſerving his Church under both theſe Parts of the Empire, as being his Inheritance. And this Company of 144000 Chriſtians, oppoſite to the Whore, are there called Virgins; and their ſeparation from her, and oppoſition to her, is recorded in chap. 14.

Chap. 14.

But now, theſe two, the Pope and Turk (both Enemies to Chriſt) thus ſucceeding in the Empire, and ſharing the two parts of it between them; we ſee that Jeſus Chriſt is ſtill as far off from his Kingdom deſigned him (which is to be ſet up in theſe Territories) as he was before; for Mahumetaniſm, under the Turk, tyranniſeth in the one; and Idolatry, under the Pope, over-ſpreads the other; even as Heatheniſm had done over the whole Empire at firſt. And ſo Chriſt hath a new Buſineſs of it yet, to come unto his Kingdom, and as difficult as ever.

Therefore he hath ſeven Vials, which contain the laſt Plagues (for he means to make this the laſt Act of this long Trage-comedy) to diſpatch the Pope and the Turk, and wholly root them out, even as the Seals had done Heatheniſm, and the Trumpets had done the Civil Power of the Empire: And the Plagues of theſe Vials, are the Contents of the 15*th* and 16*th* Chapters.

Ch. 15, 16.

The firſt five Vials do diſſolve, and by degrees ruin the Pope's Power in the Weſt; then the ſixth Vial breaks the Power of the Turk in the Eaſt; ſo making way for the Jews (whom he means to bring into the fellowſhip of his Kingdom, in their own Land) there called the Kings of the Eaſt.

But by theſe ſix Vials, their Power and Kingdom being not wholly ruined, both the Turkiſh and Popiſh Party do together join, uſing their utmoſt Forces (and together with them, all oppoſite Kings of the whole World) againſt the Chriſtians, both of the Eaſt and Weſt, (who when the Jews are come in, and converted, do make up a mighty Party in the World); unto the help of whom, againſt thoſe and all oppoſite Power whatſoever, Chriſt himſelf comes,

PART I. and makes but one Work of it, with his own Hand from Heaven deſtroying them. And ſo it is done, as the Voice of the laſt Vial is, in the 16*th* Chapter.

Chap. 17. The 17*th* Chapter is an Interpretation concerning the Beaſt, ſhewing who he is, and where his Seat is.

Chap. 18. The 18*th* Chapter ſings a Funeral Song of Triumph for the Whore's Ruin, (which is the fifth Vial) after which comes in Chriſt's Kingdom, the New Hieruſalem, and the preparations to it. Which New Kingdom of his ſhall be made up,

1. Of Eaſtern Chriſtians, (who endured the Bondage of the two Woe-Trumpets, the Saracens and the Turks) yet continuing to profeſs his Name. And therefore unto thoſe 144000 in the ſeventh Chapter, is ſaid to ſucceed an innumerable Company, with Palms in their Hands, who have the ſame very Promiſes of the New Hieruſalem made to them, that are mentioned in the 21*ſt* Chapter, which ſhews their Intereſt therein.

And, 2. it is made up of Weſtern Chriſtians, whoſe 144000 in chap. 14. do ariſe to an innumerable Company alſo; who therefore after the rejection of the Chap. 19. Whore, Chap. 19. from verſ. 1, to 9, are brought in ſinging in like triumphant manner, decking themſelves for the Marriage, in fine Linnen.

But, 3. and eſpecially, it is alſo to be made up of Jews diſperſed both Eaſt and Weſt, and over all the World: and from them hath this Kingdom the Name of the New Hieruſalem.

With whom, 4. come in (as Attendants of their Joy) other Gentiles too, who never had received Chriſt before. The Glory of the Gentiles is ſaid to be brought into it.

And ſo both Eaſt and Weſt, Jew and Gentile, and the fulneſs of both, do come in, and become one Fold under one Shepherd for a thouſand Years, and one Kingdom under this Root of David their King, [King Jeſus the Conqueror] even as it firſt was under one Heathen Idolatrous Emperor, when Chriſt had firſt ſet to conquer it. And ſo that Prophecy of this his Kingdom, in Iſa. 59. 19. is fulfilled; where, after the final deſtruction of all Chriſt's Enemies, foretold verſ. 18. he ſays, They ſhall fear his Name, [from the Eaſt unto the Weſt] and the Redeemer ſhall come unto Sion: which words Paul interprets of the Jews final Call, and this Reſtauration of the World with them; Rom. 11. 26. Even ſo, Lord Jeſus, come quickly.

CHAP.

CHAP. IV.

Of the Six first Seals in Chapter the sixth.

HAving thus given a Scheme and Diviſion of the whole Prophecy, and a general Argument of the Story of it, briefly ſet together in one view, I will now run over each Chapter apart; yet I ſhall largely inſiſt only on the ſixth Chapter, as being taken off by other Occaſions from commenting ſo copiouſly, with Obſervations, upon the reſt, which I ſhall paſs over with a more ſlight glance of Interpretation, (as haſtening to the ſecond Part, which I more eſpecially aim at); which although it ariſe not to a full and copious Commentary, ſhall, notwithſtanding, ſerve to hold forth that to be the true Portraict of the Holy Ghoſt's Mind in this Story, which in the General Argument foregoing I have given it out to be.

The Seal-Prophecy concerns the State of the Empire from John's Time downward. Which State (as all Story will repreſent unto you) is to be conſidered, Either,

1. Whilſt Heatheniſh, when falſe Gods were worſhipped, as Jupiter, Mars, &c. and the Profeſſors of Chriſtian Religion were perſecuted and maſſacred; during all which time, the Empire ſtood whole, undivided, and entire, under the Government of one Emperor, under whom both Eaſt and Weſt were ſubjected, and this for the ſpace of three hundred Years after Chriſt.

Or elſe, 2. when turned Chriſtian, as by Conſtantine it was; from whoſe time the whole Empire more generally was ſubjected to the outward Profeſſion of Chriſt; but withal, it began to be divided and broken into two Parts: Which Rent was afterwards eſtabliſhed by Theodoſius, the Eaſtern part of Europe (whereof Conſtantine made Byzantium, from him called Conſtantinople, the Seat) being allotted to one Emperor, (which Eaſtern Part the Turk now poſſeſſeth); and the Weſtern Part (which had Rome for the Seat of it) unto another, (which Weſtern Part the Pope for many hundred Years hath entirely had under him); ſo that the one was called the Eaſtern, and the other the Weſtern-Empire. And according to this Diviſion, the Seal-Prophecy divides it ſelf into two parts.

1*ſt*, The firſt ſix Seals, Chap. 6.
2*dly*, The firſt ſix Trumpets, which the ſeventh Seal brings forth in the 8*th* and 9*th* Chapters; from the Woe of which Trumpets, the Servants of God are ſealed, Chap. 7.

Here, in the ſixth Chapter, the firſt Prophecy begins, and that with the Primitive Times: Of which theſe two Things are Evidences;

1. That in the firſt Seal is the going forth, (the preaching of the Goſpel) conquering, and to conquer, (for as then, and in that manner it had begun). This was the Foundation of all God's after-proceedings, the firſt Corner-Stone of Chriſt's obtaining and ſetting up his Kingdom.

2. That the fifth Seal mentions the Martyrdom of Saints, crying out for Vengeance: which being the firſt mention of any ſuch Martyrdom in this Book, muſt needs refer to thoſe famous firſt Perſecutions under Heatheniſh Rome, which was followed by the Arrian a little after; as verſ. 11.

Theſe ſix Seals are ſeveral ſteps and degrees, ſetting forth the moving Cauſes and Means of God's plaguing and ruining the Empire of Rome as Heatheniſh.

Chriſt

PART I. Chriſt being to put down all adverſe Power, he finds not only this Empire to ſtand in his way, but Gentiliſm, the worſhip of falſe Gods, and of Satan, under thoſe Idols of Jupiter, Saturn, Mars, &c. Firſt therefore he encounters Satan's Worſhip, Heatheniſm; which had all the Power of that Empire to back it: and then in the Trumpets he encounters the Empire it ſelf: He went forth conquering, and to conquer, and that but by degrees. The firſt Judgments on that Empire, left the Empire ſtanding. Therefore, Seal 5. the Martyrs, after thoſe Puniſhments foregone, in the ſecond, third, and fourth Seal, do yet cry for Vengeance on the Empire it ſelf.

They are called Seals;

I. In a General Relation to this whole Prophecy; it being,

1. A Book of Decrees to be executed by Chriſt, and theſe are the Seals of them.

2. This Book being not to be opened till the Time of the End, (as Daniel foretold) is ſealed up till juſt before the end of all; as there 'tis propheſied, Dan. 12. 4. But thou, O Daniel, ſhut up the Words, and ſeal the Book, even to the time of the End: many ſhall run to and fro, and Knowledg ſhall be encreaſed. Towards this End of all you have (mark this) the ſame Angel in Dan. 12. coming in the 10*th* Chapter of this Revelation, with a Book in his hand open; which as it was to give a New Prophecy, ſo to ſhew, that when all the Seals were off, (that is, when theſe Judgments were all executed on the World) then the Book ſhould be underſtood; and accordingly, not till all theſe Seals were paſſed, was the Revelation underſtood.

II. More particularly they are called Seals, becauſe,

1. They are Judgments decreed by God, that ſhould certainly come upon that Empire. Now what is decreed inevitably, is ſaid to be ſealed. So the Salvation of the Elect is ſaid to be, 2 Tim. 2. 19. [the Foundation of God ſtandeth ſure, having this Seal, the Lord knoweth who are his]. So alſo Judgments decreed are ſaid to be ſealed, Deut. 32. 34. [Is not this laid up in ſtore with me, and ſealed up among my Treaſures!] even to puniſh them; for ſo it follows, [to me belongeth Vengeance, &c.] Thus Job 14. 17. My Tranſgreſſion (ſays he) is ſealed up in a Bag; that is, God had before appointed ſurely to puniſh it.

2. They are ſaid to be ſealed, in that they are Judgments hidden, ſtealing in upon the World e're they were aware of them, and which they knew not the meaning of. And accordingly we find, by the Apologies of Tertullian, Cyprian, Arnobius, and others, that the Heathen Romans obſerving ſuch ſtrange unheard of Famines, Civil Wars, and Plagues of Peſtilence (typified out here by the Red, Black, and Pale Horſes) did exceedingly wonder at the Reaſon of them, and laid it on the new Sect of the Chriſtians, as with whom their Gods were angry for contemning their Worſhip; for it was never ſo with them before, and therefore they attributed it to that Cauſe. Theſe Judgments were ſealed, and Chriſt here opens the Cauſe of them, the contempt of the Goſpel.

3. They are Sealed Judgments, for Pledges and Aſſurance of all that follow. That is the uſe of Seals to give Aſſurance. For that end is the Seal of the Spirit. And ſo here, there being other things in this Prophecy foretold, as the Ruin of the Empire it ſelf, the Riſing of Antichriſt, and of the Turk, the Ruin of them both, by the ſeven Vials, and then Chriſt's Kingdom. That all theſe things ſhould certainly come to paſs in their Time, God firſt ſent theſe Judgments as Seals; that as we read in Story the truth of theſe to be evidently fulfilled, ſo we may aſſure our ſelves of the accompliſhing all the other.

Obſerv. Obſerve from this General,

A ground of confirming your Faith about all theſe things propheſied of by God; in that the fulfilling of one is a Seal, aſſuring that the other ſhall be fulfilled. That Heatheniſm is ruined (and no Adorers of thoſe Pagan Gods left (as

(as this Chapter ſhews) which was more firmly rooted (being of 4000 Years continuance) than ever Popery was, is a Seal to us that Popery ſhall be ruined. You ſee many things paſt, and fulfilled; The Beaſt of Rome (the Pope then, when John wrote this, not Riſen) is now up in your Days; which may confirm your Faith, that he ſhall as certainly be ruined: For the ſame Prophecy foretells his Fall, chap. 18. as his Riſe, chap. 13. and that after this there is a glorious Kingdom to come, of which all theſe are Seals. You find (in the 11*th* Chapter) before the End, the Temple meaſured anew, and the outward Court of Carnal Worſhippers and Worſhip caſt out; and you ſee it now in your days fulfilled; yea, your ſelves fulfil it: You may therefore as certainly expect that which follows in the ſame Chapter, and prepare for it. Thus Zechary begins his Prophecy, ſo to aſſure them of the truth of it; Did you ever know Prophecy fail! My words, (ſays he, Zech. 1. 6.) did they not take hold of (or arreſt) your Fathers? by the Judgments threatned, and like as the Lord thought to do unto us, —ſo hath he dealt with us; therefore believe the reſt. Chap. 4.

Now the four firſt Seals are repreſented unto us, under the Viſion of four Horſes, in alluſion to the Viſions in Zechary, Chap. 1. and Chap. 6. Chriſt in the firſt Chapter of that Book, verſ. 8. is preſented riding on a Red Horſe; and behind him ſtood other Horſes, Red, Speckled, and White: And verſ. 10. they are interpreted to be Angels, who walk to and fro through the Earth; and, chap. 6. 5. to be four Winds, or Spirits, that go forth from ſtanding before the Lord of the Earth. So the good Angels, Heb. 1. 14. are called miniſtring Spirits ſent forth, &c. Thus Pſal. 104. 3, 4. compared with Heb. 1. 7, 14. Ezek. 1. where they are called Winds, as in that of Zech. 6. 5. So in like manner are the Evil Angels ſent forth to do miſchief, as 1 Kings 22. 21. and Job 1. 7. The Angels are the Executioners of all God's great Deſigns; and therefore whatſoever is done in this Book by Men, is ſtill ſaid to be done by Angels. So chap. 8. 2. Seven [Angels] with ſeven Trumpets, &c.

Here the Viſion is of Horſes going forth in like manner with Commiſſion from God. And this alluſion to thoſe Horſes, who there were Angels, ſhews either, that theſe Executions, under theſe Seals, (by whomſoever viſibly executed) were yet performed under the Conduct of Chriſt the firſt Horſe, (preſented here, as alſo in that of Zech. 1. as an Angel) accompanied with other Angels his Followers, who are thoſe other Horſes; or elſe however, to ſhew, that as thoſe Angels upon Horſes in Zechary went their circuit over the Earth; ſo that here were Commiſſions ſealed to theſe Executioners, to traverſe and compaſs the Earth, as Angels uſe to do. God begins here to war with the World, and ſends out four Horſe-men to give the firſt On-ſet. That this Viſion is preſented under Horſes, is but for variety ſake.

The Revelation takes all the eminent Viſions of the Old Teſtament, and makes uſe of them. The Elegancies of all the Types in the Prophets, ſerve but to ſet forth and adorn the Viſions of this Book: as if you ſhould make up one beautiful Picture out of all Beauties, by taking what-ever is elegant and excellent in any one. The Viſion of the Throne, chap. 4. is borrowed from Iſaiah, and Ezekiel; That of the Book ſealed, from Daniel; this of Horſes here, from Zechary; and ſo that of the Olive Trees, and Candle-ſticks, chap. 11. from Zech. 4, &c.

Obſerve from hence;

I. The Perfection of this Book: It is a Poſy of all Flowers, a Viſion compoſed out of all Viſions; as Solomon's Song was a Song of Songs. All the Types in Moſes's Law, and all the Stories and Viſions of the Prophets, are borrowed to adorn it. Obſerv. 1.

II. Obſerve, That the Occurrences under the New Teſtament, and the Story of the Church under it, have all the Perfections of all kinds that were under the Old. For in the New Teſtament the Old is more eminently acted over, in all Paſſages of Providence. Was there a Temple? Here is one more glorious; this ſecond exceeds the firſt. Was there an Egypt, a Sodom, a Babylon? Here alſo is one far worſe than all thoſe were. So Rome is called in this Book, ch. 11. Obſerv. 2.

and chap. 18. Was there a reſtoring of the Temple, decayed in the Captivity of Babylon? Here is the like, and that at twice, and by degrees, as then. Had they a Hieruſalem? The Revelation hath a better, a New Hieruſalem. Did the Bond-man of Old perſecute the Free? even ſo it is now; Gal. 4. 24, 29. Which things are an Allegory; for theſe are the two Covenants; the one from the Mount Sinai, which gendreth to Bondage, which is Agar. But as then he that was born after the Fleſh, perſecuted him that was born after the Spirit; even ſo it is now. We have all the ſame things befal us, that befel them, and that, more eminently, as Paul ſaid, Are they Apoſtles? I much more. Had they Perſecutors? We much more, and thoſe worſe. Had they Phariſees that ſinned againſt the Holy Ghoſt, and Crucified Chriſt? So hath the New Teſtament, ſuch as ſhall after this great Conviction wrought by the Goſpel, prove like a Generation of Phariſees, ſcorched with the heat of Hell Fire, (as in the Fourth Vial) and that ſhall kill the Witneſſes, ch. 11. The Alluſion is to theſe Times. The Apoſtle hath ſaid it in one word, and given the Reaſon of it; 1 Cor. 10. 11. All theſe things happened unto them for Types: So alſo did all their Viſions, being written for our Admonition, upon whom the Ends of the World are come, (you may read it, Perfection of the World is come): We have the Perfection of every thing under the Old Teſtament, both good and bad.

This may ſerve to give a general Light into the Stories and Viſions of this Prophecy. As for the ſeveral Viſions themſelves;

The firſt Horſe is a White one, and his Rider Crowned, &c. This Rider is Chriſt himſelf, going forth (in the preaching of the Goſpel) conquering and to conquer; alluding unto Pſal. 45. 4, 5, 6. where Chriſt having a Kingdom to poſſeſs, as verſ. 6. [Thy Throne, O God, is for ever and ever] (ſpeaking of Chriſt, as appears by Heb. 1. 8. But unto the Son he ſaith, Thy Throne, O God, is for ever and ever: a Scepter of Righteouſneſs is the Scepter of thy Kingdom). He is ſet out in his going forth to conquer it; for he muſt win and wear it: And he is deſcribed as here, [In thy Majeſty proſper thou, ride thou] (or ride thou proſperouſly) that is, go forth conquering; and that being accoutred with Bow and Arrows, as verſ. 5. [Thy Arrows are ſharp in the Hearts of the King's Enemies] that is, his own Enemies, who is King.

Now anſwerably this Book alſo tells us, that Chriſt was to have a Kingdom; and here you have his firſt ſetting out to conquer it. The firſt Foundation of his Kingdom laid, was the preaching of the Goſpel in the Roman Empire by the Apoſtles, which was now begun; therefore he is ſaid to go forth conquering already. And he goes firſt forth; for all the other Horſe-men do but attend him; He is the General of theſe Horſes. Thus likewiſe, in Zech. 1. he is deſcribed with other Horſes with him. And he goes forth firſt on a White Horſe; which, as it was a ſign of Triumph, that he was to conquer, (for ſo in Triumph their Chariots were drawn with White Horſes) ſo eſpecially of Meekneſs and Candour, offering at firſt Conditions of Peace in the Goſpel, unto the Empire of Rome, and to all Nations, if they would ſubmit to him as their King. God had given him the Nations for his Inheritance, and he goes forth peaceably to challenge it: with Conditions alſo, that the World ſhould yet hold their Crowns of him, only turn Chriſtians they muſt, and do Homage to him as their King. This the Colour of White denotes; for here it is oppoſed to the colour of the Red Horſe that followed, which Colour betokened Blood. Thus Tamerlane, before he denounced War, firſt hung out a White Flag, in token of Peace offered. Therefore in Pſal. 45. 4. Chriſt is bidden to ride on, becauſe of the Word of Meekneſs: And the Progreſs of the Goſpel is compared to that of an Horſe and his Rider; for it had its progreſs over the Earth, from one Country to another, by Commiſſion; [Their ſound went out to all the Earth] Rom. 10. 18. [Come to Macedonia and help us] Acts 16. 9. His Weapons to conquer, if Men yield not, are here but Arrows: but, chap. 19. when his Conqueſt is to be finiſh'd, you have him with a Sword: In Pſal. 45. he is deſcribed with both. The Threatnings of the Goſpel are Arrows, ſtriking ſecretly, and dartingly, into Men's Hearts, and wounding them mortally; hæret lethalis arundo.

He

Chap. 4.

He is Crowned; for God (when Chriſt firſt aſcended) made him a King. We ſee Jeſus—crowned with Glory and Honour,—though yet we ſee not all things put under him, Heb. 2. 8, 9. yet we ſee him crowned; for all muſt be ſubject to Him.

He goes forth conquering: for whether Men obey, or not, Chriſt ſtill conquers. Paul ſpeaks like a Conqueror, 2 Cor. 2. 14. God always cauſeth us to triumph in Chriſt: For if Men turn, there is a triumph of Grace pardoning, and ſo ſubduing Traitors; and if not, it is a ſavour of Death, like a Box of Venemous Ointment which poiſons by the ſmell.

Now if you ask, How the preaching of the Goſpel can be a ſtep of Ruin, and a Sealed Judgment, it being in it ſelf ſo great a Bleſſing? The Anſwer is, That it was truly a ſtep unto the Ruin of Heatheniſm in the Empire, which was the firſt oppoſite that Chriſt encountred. When Chriſt firſt ſent his Diſciples forth, (ſpeaking of the Event of it) he ſays, I ſaw Satan fall from Heaven like Lightning. The Devil was ſtruck dumb in his Oracles, when Chriſt began to publiſh His: And ſo Chriſt already conquered, in part; but e're he had done, he threw Satan out of Heaven, as the ſixth (and laſt) Seal ſhews. So that though the Goſpel was a Bleſſing to the World, yet it was a Curſe to Gentiliſm; as the firſt Vial, by converting many People's Hearts from Popery, is called a Vial on the Earth.

Obſerve from hence,

I. The Mercifulneſs and Meekneſs of Chriſt: He goes not forth firſt on a Red Horſe, but on a White, and makes offer of Peace; but if Men turn not, he hath other Horſes to do that Work of deſtroying them. He loves unbloody Conqueſts; Who therefore would ſtand out againſt ſuch a Saviour! Obſerv. 1.

II. The ſtrangeneſs of Chriſt's courſe to get his Kingdom; even by no other means at firſt, but preaching the Word. He takes no Weapons but a Bow, the Tongues of Men to dart Arrows into the Hearts of them that reſiſt. It was a ſtrange unlikely courſe to ſet twelve Men ſcattered (and Fiſher-men) to conquer the World, the Roman Empire; as if twelve Men ſhould be ſent into Turky to conquer the great Turk, and throw down Mahumetaniſm, [Not by Power, nor by Might, but by my Spirit] Zech. 4. 6. Obſerv. 2.

III. Obſerve; That where Chriſt begins to conquer, he will go on to perfect his Conqueſt. Fear not the Cauſe of God in England; there is a Battel to be fought, Chriſt in his Angels growing more and more Holy, and fuller of Light; and Satan in his growing worſe and worſe, deceiving, and being deceived. Chriſt comes up with freſh ſupplies of new Light, with his Bow and Arrows bears up as hard as they. And it is certain, that Chriſt will not be foiled. The Primitive Chriſtians, although their Light grew dimmer and dimmer, yet they conquered Heatheniſm; Theſe now muſt needs conquer much more. Obſerv. 3.

After the going forth of this White Horſe, there follow three others, as Light-horſemen, attending this their General. So Zech. 1. 6. he ſaw a Man upon a Red Horſe, and behind him were other Horſes, Red, Speckled, and White. Now that Man was Chriſt, (verſ. 8.) who hath always other Horſe-men his Attendants to fulfil his Will, as here he hath. Chriſt there was upon a Red Horſe, for ſo he appeared, as being to revenge himſelf on the Enemies of his Church; but here he is on a White Horſe, as being to ſend forth the Goſpel. But thoſe other Horſes that do here follow after him, are indeed Judgments that follow for the contempt of that Goſpel, and which plagued the Empire ſucceſſively. Their Colour is ſuitable to the Plague they brought; therefore the ſecond Horſe is Red, a Colour betokening Blood, Iſa. 63. 2. And anſwerably, this Horſe is [War] for his Commiſſion is to take Peace from the Earth; that is, the Roman Empire, the Subject of this Seal-Prophecy. And [Civil War] it is, as thoſe words note out, that Men ſhould kill one another; not Perſecution of the Saints,

PART I.

(as ſome take it) but mutual Blood-ſhed, as that phraſe imports: All which was for their contempt of the Goſpel.

For, 1. if they take Peace from the Saints, it is a ſuitable Plague that God ſhould take Peace from the Earth.

2. If they will not embrace the Goſpel of Peace, it is ſuitable that God ſhould take away their Peace.

And, 3. if they will kill the Saints, is it not a proportioned Judgment, that God ſhould turn their Swords into their own Bowels?

And this Power is ſaid to be [given him]; it proceeded from a Commiſſion from God; and ſo was a Sword given him. God puts the Sword into an Enemie's Hand, and gives it its Commiſſion. As Magiſtrates do bear God's Sword, ſo Souldiers; who therefore, in the Prophets, are often called God's Sword. Now, how after the preaching of the Goſpel in the Apoſtle's Time, ſuch Wars fell upon the Empire in the Weſt, is moſt evident in Story; nor are there greater Civil Wars mentioned, than in the Roman Stories. John wrote his Revelation juſt before Trajan's Time, in the Reign of Domitian, about the Year of Chriſt 94, and died in 104, ten Years after. Now in Trajan's Time (in whoſe ſixth Year John died) theſe Wars began. And ſo then, when the Apoſtles were all dead, and had preached the Goſpel to the World, the Jews riſe, and with Armies raged through all the Parts of the Empire; and ſo devaſtated and depopulated Lybia of her Inhabitants, that Hadrian was afterwards forced to ſend thither new Colonies. About Cyrene they deſtroyed 22000; in Egypt alſo, and in Cyrus, 24000; and in Meſopotamia likewiſe a great number: And Hadrian afterwards ſucceeding in the Empire, deſtroyed 58000 of them. Then after Trajan's Time, the Parthians revolt, and the Empire was leſſened, having in his Time had the largeſt extent: And in Antoninus his Time, Anno 140, all the Northern Nations came down upon the Eaſt, and upon all Illyricum: yet they, as a Land-flood, were dried up; ſo that the Empire ſtood entire: And that theſe Wars might be the more eminently taken notice of, as following upon the Apoſtle's Deaths; as they had none before, ſo for 44 Years after this, there was an Univerſal Peace, and Wars ceaſed through the Empire.

The third Horſe is Famine; his Colour (anſwerably) Black, for Famine makes Men's Countenances ſuch. So, Lament. 4. 6, 7. Her Nazarites that were purer than Snow, and more ruddy than Rubies, their Viſage is blacker than a Coal; and this, by reaſon of Famine, as appears by verſ. 9. His Rider hath Scales in his hand, to ſhew, that he ſells Corn by Weight, not by Meaſure; as Levit. 26. 26. When I have broken the Staff of your Bread, Women ſhall deliver you your Bread by weight. And a ſmall quantity of Corn, even ſo much as ſerves a Man in Bread for a Day, (for ſo the Chænix was) was ſold for a Penny, which amounts to 7 d. ob. yet with Commiſſion not to hurt the Oil and the Wine. Now becauſe Hiſtorians are ſilent concerning any notable Famine, and Univerſal, that fell out in the next Age after theſe Wars in the Roman Empire, therefore Mr. Mede carries it to the juſtneſs of thoſe Emperors, (ſignified by the Ballances) which in Severus and others was eminent; eſpecially in Laws againſt Theeves, and in publick Proviſion for Corn. But this was Heterogeneal to the reſt, which are all ſteps to the ruining or plaguing of the Heatheniſh Empire. And for the Holy Ghoſt to take notice of a Moral Vertue, and to inſert it thus among the midſt of his Judgments, I cannot be induced to believe it. But this Scarcity being not of Oil and Wine, but of Corn only, might well be ſlipt over by Hiſtorians. When yet the Chriſtians of that Age, as Tertullian and others, do mention a Famine of Corn as a Judgment on the Empire for their contempt of Chriſt, and their perſecuting of the Saints. I have ſearched diligently for ſuch foot-ſteps in them of that Age, 200 Years after Chriſt and upwards, as might confirm the truth of this.

And, firſt, I find, that in Commodus his Time, Anno 190, there was a Commotion made for Bread, within the City of Rome, by the poorer Sort. Thus ſays

ſays Herodian, Fames Romanos afflixit, the Romans were afflicted by reaſon of Famine and Scarcity: When Cleander, Commodus his great Favorite, detained the Corn from the common People, (he being keeper of the Store-houſe of it) upon which they mutiny, requiring him to be put to Death; and proceeding further in their Rage, they throw down Houſes, oppoſe the Souldiers, ſtone the Captains, &c. ſo that Commodus was enforced to cut off his Favorite's Head, and ſet it upon a Pole, and to deſtroy his Children alſo, ſo to pacify the People. Yea in thoſe very words which Mr. Mede quotes for Severus his Juſtice, and care about Oil, &c. there is an intimation of the exhauſture of the Corn of the publick Storehouſe, through that Famine: The words are theſe, Rei frumentariæ quam minimam reperiebat ita conſuluit, &c. So likewiſe there is ſuch an intimation in that other place which he quotes for Alexander Severus his care, (Anno 118.) which only was occaſioned by Heliogabalus his having overthrown the publick Stock of Corn, [Frumenta evertiſſet.] Chap. 3.

Then, 2*dly*, for the Chriſtian Writers of theſe Times: Tertullian, who lived in Anno 203, doth more confirm this; for in his Apology for the Chriſtians, he brings in this Calumny as uſual among the Heathens; that they laid the cauſe of all their Miſeries upon the Chriſtians: His words are theſe, Si Cœlum ſtetit, &c. if it rained not, if Nilus overflowed not Egypt, (which was the Granary of the Empire) from whence aroſe a Famine; or if the Peſtilence devoured them, &c. Statim, (ſays he) they cried, Chriſtianos ad Leones; away with theſe Chriſtians to the Lions. I obſerve, he inſtanceth moſt in Famine, and the Cauſes of it, as being that which then they were moſt puniſh'd with. And he, in his Apology, pleading for Chriſtians, how they faſted in Times of Judgments; He inſtanceth in that of Famine only, ſaying, If Famine be threatned by want of Rain, ſo that their Annona, or Proviſion of Corn (as de la Cerda reads it) were in danger to be ſpent, that then they Chriſtians faſt, whilſt other Romans pour themſelves out to all Licentiouſneſs. It is obſervable, that he ſtill inſtanceth in the Judgment of Famine. And in his Apology to Scapula, the African Preſident, he ſhewing that no City that perſecuted the Chriſtians did go unpuniſh'd; inſtanceth, how lately, under Hillarian's Preſidentſhip, (his Predeceſſor) the Chriſtians begging a Floor of Corn, a Voice was heard from under-ground, ſaying, Areæ non ſunt: And indeed they were not, for they had no Harveſt nor Corn the next Year, to threſh in them, it being ſpoiled through a great Wet in the Time of Harveſt, as he there ſays. And you (ſays he) condemning a Chriſtian to the Beaſts, Statim hæc vexatio ſubſecuta eſt; which Baronius underſtands of that wet Year before ſpoken of, which brought ruin to the Corn. But Origen ſpeaks more clearly to this, who preſently after (about 226 Years after Chriſt) writing upon the 24*th* of Matthew, and taking occaſion to anſwer the ſame Calumny, objected ſo generally againſt the Chriſtians by the Heathens; namely, That becauſe of the multitude of Chriſtians among them, they had been vexed with Wars, Famine, and Peſtilence, although he reckons up all thoſe three Plagues as objected; yet to make it good that the Heathens did ſo object, he eſpecially inſtanceth in Famine; Frequenter enim (ſays he) Famis cauſa Chriſtianos cultores culparunt Gentiles; (for the Heathens oftentimes laid the fault of their being afflicted by Famine, upon thoſe of the Chriſtian Religion); though they did ſo becauſe of other Plagues alſo, yet they often laid their Famines in the Diſh of the Chriſtians. Which evidently argues this Puniſhment to have been very frequent in thoſe Times, as being taken notice of by the Heathens themſelves, and alſo by Origen, to have been the eminent puniſhment of that Age, which made up the third Seal.

Now then the Fourth Seal produceth a fourth Horſe, and that a Pale one, for his Rider is Death; Mors pallida, pale Death as they uſe to call it. And this Horſe brings Death upon the fourth part of the Empire, called the Earth, and his Work was to kill with all ſorts of Death, both Plague, and Famine, and Wars, and Wild-Beaſts, all God's Plagues let looſe at once. Before, Civil Wars came alone, and Famine came alone; but now, for their impenitency, he lets looſe all four Judgments mentioned in Ezek. 14. 21. God now brings forth all his Treaſures of Wrath. Peſtilence is here (verſ. 8.) called Death, as it is likewiſe by the Chaldee Paraphraſe, and the Greek; and by the Fathers it is called Mortality, as by us the Sickneſs. Now from the Year 240 after Chriſt, it is wonderful to read, what a Stage of Miſery and Blood the Empire was made, by reaſon of all theſe Plagues raging at once. Civil Wars ſo raged, that in the ſpace of 33 Years, there were ten Emperors kill'd. Under Gallus and Voluſianus, Anno 250, the barbarous Nations came down upon the Empire and harrowed it; and among them the Scythians, from whoſe Rage, no place under the Roman Juriſdiction was exempt; but almoſt all Towns were by them depopulated: and this was followed by an extream Famine. When we had a breathing time from them, then came the greateſt Plague of Peſtilence, worſe than all the former, ſays Dionyſius Alexandrinus, who lived in thoſe Times. The greateſt Plague (ſays Lypſius) that ever was read of in any Age, a Plague of fifteen Years continuance. And to add the laſt hand for the making the Miſery of thoſe Times compleat, God let looſe thirty Tyrants at once, who, as ſo many wild Beaſts, preyed upon, and made Havock of the Empire.

Now to come to ſome Obſervations;

Obſerv. 1. I. Take notice, that after the going forth of the White Horſe, then go forth theſe other three. The Goſpel is always followed by terrible Judgments upon the World, for the contempt of it. You know what Peter ſays, The time is come that Judgment muſt begin at the Houſe of God, but it will not reſt there, as he ſays. The Time of the Goſpel's preaching, was a Time of Judgment; which began with the Church, but after that, fell moſt heavy upon the Empire, and upon the Heathens in it. So that as you look for Storms in Autumn, and Froſts in Winter; ſo expect Judgments where the Goſpel has been preached. For the Quarrel of the Covenant muſt be avenged and vindicated. If Men deſpiſe it, God cannot hold his Hands.

Uſe. Wonder not therefore if God go over all the Churches in Judgments, as he hath done by Germany, Bohemia, &c. They had the Goſpel firſt, and ſo the Cup of Tribulation firſt; but God will viſit the reſt in their order, and it may be, that of Holland laſt, becauſe they have had the Goſpel but a little while.

Obſerv. 2. II. Obſerve, that God uſeth to riſe higher and higher in his Judgments. He began with Civil Wars, and they not working, he ſent Famine, which is worſe, and then War, as Lam. 4. 9. and then he came upon them with the Peſtilence, and all the other three at once. Which agrees with that in Levit. 26. 22. If you repent not, I will puniſh you ſeven times worſe. So in the Trumpets, the three laſt are the Woe Trumpets. And ſo in the Vials too, God will riſe higher and higher, as here he does.

Obſerv. 3. III. Obſerve, That all Plagues have their Commiſſion from God; they go forth only when Chriſt openeth a Seal. Of the ſecond it is ſaid, Power was given him, and a Sword. And ſo to the third, a Commiſſion of Reſtraint was given, not to hurt the Oil and Wine. And to the fourth, only to kill the fourth part. They are therefore compared to Horſes ſent forth, that are guided by Riders; God's Providence to direct them, and have their way chalked out, as the Egyptian Plagues had: Pſal. 78. 50. it is called, a Path made for his Anger, chalk'd out where it ſhould go, and into what Houſes. So, Jer. 15. 2. Thoſe that are for the Sword, to the Sword; and thoſe that are for the Famine, to the Famine, &c. Now in all theſe Circuits of God's Judgments, let us wait for his turning towards us in Mercy. In the way of thy Judgments have we waited for thee.

Object. And whereas it may be objected, That theſe are Plagues that were ever common in the World, and in all Times as well as theſe.

For Anſwer; Theſe Conſiderations made theſe Plagues then more eminently to be ſet down.

1. They

1. They were as eminent in the Roman Empire in thoſe firſt Ages, as in any other afterwards. Chap. 4. Anſw. 1.

2. Though the Empire had ſuch Plagues in after-times alſo, yet theſe were all the Plagues which it had whilſt Heatheniſh, and ſo were proper Puniſhments of their Gentiliſm, and contempt of the Meſſage of the White Horſe, and ſo intended by God; and therefore brought in here as ſuch. Neither did theſe at all ruin the Empire (which ſtood unbroken) but ſimply puniſh'd it for its Idolatry. But ſuch Plagues as fell out after theſe, had other effects accompanying them, even the Ruin of the Imperial Government, by dividing it, leſſening it, and the like; which theſe did not. Anſw. 2.

But, 3. and more eſpecially, the Holy Ghoſt doth mention theſe Plagues here (although the like were in other Ages) as Puniſhments attending upon the Goſpel: Becauſe this was the very Obſervation and Objection that the Heathens of thoſe Times made; That ſince the Chriſtian Religion began in the Empire, Wars, Peſtilence, and Famine raged more than ever they did in former Times; and ſo laid it upon the Chriſtians as the Cauſe, in that they contemning the Gods, provoked them to ſend theſe Plagues. This we find to be the main Complaint and Calumny which the Chriſtian Writers of thoſe Times writ Apologies to wipe off; as appears in Tertullian, Cyprian, Arnobius, &c. whoſe Apologies I purpoſely read, and found theſe Judgments to be moſt frequently taken notice of by the Heathens themſelves, and this Calumny by the forementioned Authors anſwered. Yea, Cyprian in his Apology ſays, That to wipe off this Calumny, was the ſole Motive and Occaſion that put him upon writing. I held my peace (ſays he) till they laid all theſe Plagues upon us, as the cauſe of all. Now how properly therefore did the Lord Chriſt ſingle out thoſe eminent Plagues following the Goſpel, and preſent them under theſe Seals, as the moſt notable occurrent Puniſhments of thoſe Times rather than any other? And how fitly are they called Seals, ſeeing they were ſo hidden, that the Heathens were utterly miſtaken in the Cauſes of them? For they being Puniſhments of their Perſecuting the Saints, they turned the matter clean contrary, and imputed it to the Anger of the Gods for the Chriſtians contemning their Heatheniſh Religion. But though they were hidden, ſealed Plagues (in reſpect of the cauſes of them) to the Heathens; yet the four Beaſts did then inſtruct John, (who perſonates the Church) and ſo the Church in him, concerning the true cauſe of them: And therefore every Seal hath a Voice of one or other of the Beaſts, ſaying, Come up and ſee. For the Officers or Miniſters of Churches inſtructed them, how that all theſe Plagues were from the Goſpel, and the contempt of it, and their perſecuting the Profeſſors of it. This you may read in the Apologies of Tertullian, Arnobius, and Cyprian, (whoſe Apology I will inſtance in for all the reſt); who, as he lived under the Fourth Seal, in the rage of theſe four Plagues, ſo he ſpeaks in the very Language of the Fourth Seal. He writes againſt one Demetrianus, who had long barked at Chriſtian Profeſſion. And (ſays he) I forbore till he laid to our charge, that all theſe Miſeries on the Empire we Chriſtians were the cauſe of: Cum dicas plurimos conqueri quod Bella crebriùs ſurgant, quod lues, & fames ſæviant, ultrà tacere non oportet: When I hear you ſay that many complain of us as the Cauſes why thoſe Wars ſo often ariſe, and why the Peſtilence and Famine rage ſo; I can be no longer ſilent, but muſt needs give you an Anſwer; and he plainly declares, from the Lord of Hoſts, that their Idolatries and Perſecutions of the Chriſtians, were the cauſe; and that theſe Puniſhments, non eveniebant caſu, came not by chance, but were the Vengeance of God, who hath ſaid, that Vengeance is his, and that he will judg the Cauſe of his People. And he withal tells them, that if they repent not through theſe Plagues, Hell would then follow. Manet poſtmodùm (ſays he) carcer æternus, jugis flamma, & pœna perpetua: There remains, after all this, an eternal Priſon, a continual Flame, and an everlaſting Puniſhment. He ſpeaks in the very Language of this fourth Seal, not knowing it, nor referring to it, for he lived under it. Thus doth Tertullian alſo in his Apology, wherein he attributes the cauſe of their Famine, and other Plagues, unto their perſecuting the Chriſtians. And this is the Myſtery Anſw. 3.

and chap. 18. Was there a reſtoring of the Temple, decayed in the Captivity of Babylon? Here is the like, and that at twice, and by degrees, as then. Had they a Hieruſalem? The Revelation hath a better, a New Hieruſalem. Did the Bond-man of Old perſecute the Free? even ſo it is now; Gal. 4. 24, 29. Which things are an Allegory; for theſe are the two Covenants; the one from the Mount Sinai, which gendreth to Bondage, which is Agar. But as then he that was born after the Fleſh, perſecuted him that was born after the Spirit; even ſo it is now. We have all the ſame things befal us, that befel them, and that, more eminently, as Paul ſaid, Are they Apoſtles? I much more. Had they Perſecutors? We much more, and thoſe worſe. Had they Phariſees that ſinned againſt the Holy Ghoſt, and Crucified Chriſt? So hath the New Teſtament, ſuch as ſhall after this great Conviction wrought by the Goſpel, prove like a Generation of Phariſees, ſcorched with the heat of Hell Fire, (as in the Fourth Vial) and that ſhall kill the Witneſſes, ch. 11. The Alluſion is to theſe Times. The Apoſtle hath ſaid it in one word, and given the Reaſon of it; 1 Cor. 10. 11. All theſe things happened unto them for Types: So alſo did all their Viſions, being written for our Admonition, upon whom the Ends of the World are come, (you may read it, Perfection of the World is come): We have the Perfection of every thing under the Old Teſtament, both good and bad.

This may ſerve to give a general Light into the Stories and Viſions of this Prophecy. As for the ſeveral Viſions themſelves;

The firſt Horſe is a White one, and his Rider Crowned, &c. This Rider is Chriſt himſelf, going forth (in the preaching of the Goſpel) conquering and to conquer; alluding unto Pſal. 45. 4, 5, 6. where Chriſt having a Kingdom to poſſeſs, as verſ. 6. [Thy Throne, O God, is for ever and ever] (ſpeaking of Chriſt, as appears by Heb. 1. 8. But unto the Son he ſaith, Thy Throne, O God, is for ever and ever: a Scepter of Righteouſneſs is the Scepter of thy Kingdom). He is ſet out in his going forth to conquer it; for he muſt win and wear it: And he is deſcribed as here, [In thy Majeſty proſper thou, ride thou] (or ride thou proſperouſly) that is, go forth conquering; and that being accoutred with Bow and Arrows, as verſ. 5. [Thy Arrows are ſharp in the Hearts of the King's Enemies] that is, his own Enemies, who is King.

Now anſwerably this Book alſo tells us, that Chriſt was to have a Kingdom; and here you have his firſt ſetting out to conquer it. The firſt Foundation of his Kingdom laid, was the preaching of the Goſpel in the Roman Empire by the Apoſtles, which was now begun; therefore he is ſaid to go forth conquering already. And he goes firſt forth; for all the other Horſe-men do but attend him; He is the General of theſe Horſes. Thus likewiſe, in Zech. 1. he is deſcribed with other Horſes with him. And he goes forth firſt on a White Horſe; which, as it was a ſign of Triumph, that he was to conquer, (for ſo in Triumph their Chariots were drawn with White Horſes) ſo eſpecially of Meekneſs and Candour, offering at firſt Conditions of Peace in the Goſpel, unto the Empire of Rome, and to all Nations, if they would ſubmit to him as their King. God had given him the Nations for his Inheritance, and he goes forth peaceably to challenge it: with Conditions alſo, that the World ſhould yet hold their Crowns of him, only turn Chriſtians they muſt, and do Homage to him as their King. This the Colour of White denotes; for here it is oppoſed to the colour of the Red Horſe that followed, which Colour betokened Blood. Thus Tamerlane, before he denounced War, firſt hung out a White Flag, in token of Peace offered. Therefore in Pſal. 45. 4. Chriſt is bidden to ride on, becauſe of the Word of Meekneſs: And the Progreſs of the Goſpel is compared to that of an Horſe and his Rider; for it had its progreſs over the Earth, from one Country to another, by Commiſſion; [Their ſound went out to all the Earth] Rom. 10. 18. [Come to Macedonia and help us] Acts 16. 9. His Weapons to conquer, if Men yield not, are here but Arrows: but, chap. 19. when his Conqueſt is to be finiſh'd, you have him with a Sword: In Pſal. 45. he is deſcribed with both. The Threatnings of the Goſpel are Arrows, ſtriking ſecretly, and dartingly, into Men's Hearts, and wounding them mortally; hæret lethalis arundo.

He

Chap. 4.

He is Crowned; for God (when Chriſt firſt aſcended) made him a King. We ſee Jeſus—crowned with Glory and Honour,—though yet we ſee not all things put under him, Heb. 2. 8, 9. yet we ſee him crowned; for all muſt be ſubject to Him.

He goes forth conquering: for whether Men obey, or not, Chriſt ſtill conquers. Paul ſpeaks like a Conqueror, 2 Cor. 2. 14. God always cauſeth us to triumph in Chriſt: For if Men turn, there is a triumph of Grace pardoning, and ſo ſubduing Traitors; and if not, it is a ſavour of Death, like a Box of Venemous Ointment which poiſons by the ſmell.

Now if you ask, How the preaching of the Goſpel can be a ſtep of Ruin, and a Sealed Judgment, it being in it ſelf ſo great a Bleſſing? The Anſwer is, That it was truly a ſtep unto the Ruin of Heatheniſm in the Empire, which was the firſt oppoſite that Chriſt encountred. When Chriſt firſt ſent his Diſciples forth, (ſpeaking of the Event of it) he ſays, I ſaw Satan fall from Heaven like Lightning. The Devil was ſtruck dumb in his Oracles, when Chriſt began to publiſh His: And ſo Chriſt already conquered, in part; but e're he had done, he threw Satan out of Heaven, as the ſixth (and laſt) Seal ſhews. So that though the Goſpel was a Bleſſing to the World, yet it was a Curſe to Gentiliſm; as the firſt Vial, by converting many People's Hearts from Popery, is called a Vial on the Earth.

Obſerve from hence,

I. The Mercifulneſs and Meekneſs of Chriſt: He goes not forth firſt on a Red Horſe, but on a White, and makes offer of Peace; but if Men turn not, he hath other Horſes to do that Work of deſtroying them. He loves unbloody Conqueſts; Who therefore would ſtand out againſt ſuch a Saviour! Obſerv. 1.

II. The ſtrangeneſs of Chriſt's courſe to get his Kingdom; even by no other means at firſt, but preaching the Word. He takes no Weapons but a Bow, the Tongues of Men to dart Arrows into the Hearts of them that reſiſt. It was a ſtrange unlikely courſe to ſet twelve Men ſcattered (and Fiſher-men) to conquer the World, the Roman Empire; as if twelve Men ſhould be ſent into Turky to conquer the great Turk, and throw down Mahumetaniſm, [Not by Power, nor by Might, but by my Spirit] Zech. 4. 6. Obſerv. 2.

III. Obſerve; That where Chriſt begins to conquer, he will go on to perfect his Conqueſt. Fear not the Cauſe of God in England; there is a Battel to be fought, Chriſt in his Angels growing more and more Holy, and fuller of Light; and Satan in his growing worſe and worſe, deceiving, and being deceived. Chriſt comes up with freſh ſupplies of new Light, with his Bow and Arrows bears up as hard as they. And it is certain, that Chriſt will not be foiled. The Primitive Chriſtians, although their Light grew dimmer and dimmer, yet they conquered Heatheniſm; Theſe now muſt needs conquer much more. Obſerv. 3.

After the going forth of this White Horſe, there follow three others, as Light-horſemen, attending this their General. So Zech. 1. 6. he ſaw a Man upon a Red Horſe, and behind him were other Horſes, Red, Speckled, and White. Now that Man was Chriſt, (verſ. 8.) who hath always other Horſe-men his Attendants to fulfil his Will, as here he hath. Chriſt there was upon a Red Horſe, for ſo he appeared, as being to revenge himſelf on the Enemies of his Church; but here he is on a White Horſe, as being to ſend forth the Goſpel. But thoſe other Horſes that do here follow after him, are indeed Judgments that follow for the contempt of that Goſpel, and which plagued the Empire ſucceſſively. Their Colour is ſuitable to the Plague they brought; therefore the ſecond Horſe is Red, a Colour betokening Blood, Iſa. 63. 2. And anſwerably, this Horſe is [War] for his Commiſſion is to take Peace from the Earth; that is, the Roman Empire, the Subject of this Seal-Prophecy. And [Civil War] it is, as thoſe words note out, that Men ſhould kill one another; not Perſecution of the Saints, PART I. (as ſome take it) but mutual Blood-ſhed, as that phraſe imports: All which was for their contempt of the Goſpel.

For, 1. if they take Peace from the Saints, it is a ſuitable Plague that God ſhould take Peace from the Earth.

2. If they will not embrace the Goſpel of Peace, it is ſuitable that God ſhould take away their Peace.

And, 3. if they will kill the Saints, is it not a proportioned Judgment, that God ſhould turn their Swords into their own Bowels?

And this Power is ſaid to be [given him]; it proceeded from a Commiſſion from God; and ſo was a Sword given him. God puts the Sword into an Enemie's Hand, and gives it its Commiſſion. As Magiſtrates do bear God's Sword, ſo Souldiers; who therefore, in the Prophets, are often called God's Sword. Now, how after the preaching of the Goſpel in the Apoſtle's Time, ſuch Wars fell upon the Empire in the Weſt, is moſt evident in Story; nor are there greater Civil Wars mentioned, than in the Roman Stories. John wrote his Revelation juſt before Trajan's Time, in the Reign of Domitian, about the Year of Chriſt 94, and died in 104, ten Years after. Now in Trajan's Time (in whoſe ſixth Year John died) theſe Wars began. And ſo then, when the Apoſtles were all dead, and had preached the Goſpel to the World, the Jews riſe, and with Armies raged through all the Parts of the Empire; and ſo devaſtated and depopulated Lybia of her Inhabitants, that Hadrian was afterwards forced to ſend thither new Colonies. About Cyrene they deſtroyed 22000; in Egypt alſo, and in Cyrus, 24000; and in Meſopotamia likewiſe a great number: And Hadrian afterwards ſucceeding in the Empire, deſtroyed 58000 of them. Then after Trajan's Time, the Parthians revolt, and the Empire was leſſened, having in his Time had the largeſt extent: And in Antoninus his Time, Anno 140, all the Northern Nations came down upon the Eaſt, and upon all Illyricum: yet they, as a Land-flood, were dried up; ſo that the Empire ſtood entire: And that theſe Wars might be the more eminently taken notice of, as following upon the Apoſtle's Deaths; as they had none before, ſo for 44 Years after this, there was an Univerſal Peace, and Wars ceaſed through the Empire.

The third Horſe is Famine; his Colour (anſwerably) Black, for Famine makes Men's Countenances ſuch. So, Lament. 4. 6, 7. Her Nazarites that were purer than Snow, and more ruddy than Rubies, their Viſage is blacker than a Coal; and this, by reaſon of Famine, as appears by verſ. 9. His Rider hath Scales in his hand, to ſhew, that he ſells Corn by Weight, not by Meaſure; as Levit. 26. 26. When I have broken the Staff of your Bread, Women ſhall deliver you your Bread by weight. And a ſmall quantity of Corn, even ſo much as ſerves a Man in Bread for a Day, (for ſo the Chænix was) was ſold for a Penny, which amounts to 7 d. ob. yet with Commiſſion not to hurt the Oil and the Wine. Now becauſe Hiſtorians are ſilent concerning any notable Famine, and Univerſal, that fell out in the next Age after theſe Wars in the Roman Empire, therefore Mr. Mede carries it to the juſtneſs of thoſe Emperors, (ſignified by the Ballances) which in Severus and others was eminent; eſpecially in Laws againſt Theeves, and in publick Proviſion for Corn. But this was Heterogeneal to the reſt, which are all ſteps to the ruining or plaguing of the Heatheniſh Empire. And for the Holy Ghoſt to take notice of a Moral Vertue, and to inſert it thus among the midſt of his Judgments, I cannot be induced to believe it. But this Scarcity being not of Oil and Wine, but of Corn only, might well be ſlipt over by Hiſtorians. When yet the Chriſtians of that Age, as Tertullian and others, do mention a Famine of Corn as a Judgment on the Empire for their contempt of Chriſt, and their perſecuting of the Saints. I have ſearched diligently for ſuch foot-ſteps in them of that Age, 200 Years after Chriſt and upwards, as might confirm the truth of this.

And, firſt, I find, that in Commodus his Time, Anno 190, there was a Commotion made for Bread, within the City of Rome, by the poorer Sort. Thus ſays

ſays Herodian, Fames Romanos afflixit, the Romans were afflicted by reaſon of Famine and Scarcity: When Cleander, Commodus his great Favorite, detained the Corn from the common People, (he being keeper of the Store-houſe of it) upon which they mutiny, requiring him to be put to Death; and proceeding further in their Rage, they throw down Houſes, oppoſe the Souldiers, ſtone the Captains, &c. ſo that Commodus was enforced to cut off his Favorite's Head, and ſet it upon a Pole, and to deſtroy his Children alſo, ſo to pacify the People. Yea in thoſe very words which Mr. Mede quotes for Severus his Juſtice, and care about Oil, &c. there is an intimation of the exhauſture of the Corn of the publick Storehouſe, through that Famine: The words are theſe, Rei frumentariæ quam minimam reperiebat ita conſuluit, &c. So likewiſe there is ſuch an intimation in that other place which he quotes for Alexander Severus his care, (Anno 118.) which only was occaſioned by Heliogabalus his having overthrown the publick Stock of Corn, [Frumenta evertiſſet.]

Then, 2*dly*, for the Chriſtian Writers of theſe Times: Tertullian, who lived in Anno 203, doth more confirm this; for in his Apology for the Chriſtians, he brings in this Calumny as uſual among the Heathens; that they laid the cauſe of all their Miſeries upon the Chriſtians: His words are theſe, Si Cœlum ſtetit, &c. if it rained not, if Nilus overflowed not Egypt, (which was the Granary of the Empire) from whence aroſe a Famine; or if the Peſtilence devoured them, &c. Statim, (ſays he) they cried, Chriſtianos ad Leones; away with theſe Chriſtians to the Lions. I obſerve, he inſtanceth moſt in Famine, and the Cauſes of it, as being that which then they were moſt puniſh'd with. And he, in his Apology, pleading for Chriſtians, how they faſted in Times of Judgments; He inſtanceth in that of Famine only, ſaying, If Famine be threatned by want of Rain, ſo that their Annona, or Proviſion of Corn (as de la Cerda reads it) were in danger to be ſpent, that then they Chriſtians faſt, whilſt other Romans pour themſelves out to all Licentiouſneſs. It is obſervable, that he ſtill inſtanceth in the Judgment of Famine. And in his Apology to Scapula, the African Preſident, he ſhewing that no City that perſecuted the Chriſtians did go unpuniſh'd; inſtanceth, how lately, under Hillarian's Preſidentſhip, (his Predeceſſor) the Chriſtians begging a Floor of Corn, a Voice was heard from under-ground, ſaying, Areæ non ſunt: And indeed they were not, for they had no Harveſt nor Corn the next Year, to threſh in them, it being ſpoiled through a great Wet in the Time of Harveſt, as he there ſays. And you (ſays he) condemning a Chriſtian to the Beaſts, Statim hæc vexatio ſubſecuta eſt; which Baronius underſtands of that wet Year before ſpoken of, which brought ruin to the Corn. But Origen ſpeaks more clearly to this, who preſently after (about 226 Years after Chriſt) writing upon the 24*th* of Matthew, and taking occaſion to anſwer the ſame Calumny, objected ſo generally againſt the Chriſtians by the Heathens; namely, That becauſe of the multitude of Chriſtians among them, they had been vexed with Wars, Famine, and Peſtilence, although he reckons up all thoſe three Plagues as objected; yet to make it good that the Heathens did ſo object, he eſpecially inſtanceth in Famine; Frequenter enim (ſays he) Famis cauſa Chriſtianos cultores culparunt Gentiles; (for the Heathens oftentimes laid the fault of their being afflicted by Famine, upon thoſe of the Chriſtian Religion); though they did ſo becauſe of other Plagues alſo, yet they often laid their Famines in the Diſh of the Chriſtians. Which evidently argues this Puniſhment to have been very frequent in thoſe Times, as being taken notice of by the Heathens themſelves, and alſo by Origen, to have been the eminent puniſhment of that Age, which made up the third Seal.

Now then the Fourth Seal produceth a fourth Horſe, and that a Pale one, for his Rider is Death; Mors pallida, pale Death as they uſe to call it. And this Horſe brings Death upon the fourth part of the Empire, called the Earth, and his Work was to kill with all ſorts of Death, both Plague, and Famine, and Wars, and Wild-Beaſts, all God's Plagues let looſe at once. Before, Civil Wars came alone, and Famine came alone; but now, for their impenitency, he lets looſe all four Judgments mentioned in Ezek. 14. 21. God now brings forth all his Treaſures of Wrath. Peſtilence is here (verſ. 8.) called Death, as it is likewiſe by the Chaldee Paraphraſe, and the Greek; and by the Fathers it is called Mortality, as by us the Sickneſs. Now from the Year 240 after Chriſt, it is wonderful to read, what a Stage of Miſery and Blood the Empire was made, by reaſon of all theſe Plagues raging at once. Civil Wars ſo raged, that in the ſpace of 33 Years, there were ten Emperors kill'd. Under Gallus and Voluſianus, Anno 250, the barbarous Nations came down upon the Empire and harrowed it; and among them the Scythians, from whoſe Rage, no place under the Roman Juriſdiction was exempt; but almoſt all Towns were by them depopulated: and this was followed by an extream Famine. When we had a breathing time from them, then came the greateſt Plague of Peſtilence, worſe than all the former, ſays Dionyſius Alexandrinus, who lived in thoſe Times. The greateſt Plague (ſays Lypſius) that ever was read of in any Age, a Plague of fifteen Years continuance. And to add the laſt hand for the making the Miſery of thoſe Times compleat, God let looſe thirty Tyrants at once, who, as ſo many wild Beaſts, preyed upon, and made Havock of the Empire.

Now to come to ſome Obſervations;

Obſerv. 1. I. Take notice, that after the going forth of the White Horſe, then go forth theſe other three. The Goſpel is always followed by terrible Judgments upon the World, for the contempt of it. You know what Peter ſays, The time is come that Judgment muſt begin at the Houſe of God, but it will not reſt there, as he ſays. The Time of the Goſpel's preaching, was a Time of Judgment; which began with the Church, but after that, fell moſt heavy upon the Empire, and upon the Heathens in it. So that as you look for Storms in Autumn, and Froſts in Winter; ſo expect Judgments where the Goſpel has been preached. For the Quarrel of the Covenant muſt be avenged and vindicated. If Men deſpiſe it, God cannot hold his Hands.

Uſe. Wonder not therefore if God go over all the Churches in Judgments, as he hath done by Germany, Bohemia, &c. They had the Goſpel firſt, and ſo the Cup of Tribulation firſt; but God will viſit the reſt in their order, and it may be, that of Holland laſt, becauſe they have had the Goſpel but a little while.

Obſerv. 2. II. Obſerve, that God uſeth to riſe higher and higher in his Judgments. He began with Civil Wars, and they not working, he ſent Famine, which is worſe, and then War, as Lam. 4. 9. and then he came upon them with the Peſtilence, and all the other three at once. Which agrees with that in Levit. 26. 22. If you repent not, I will puniſh you ſeven times worſe. So in the Trumpets, the three laſt are the Woe Trumpets. And ſo in the Vials too, God will riſe higher and higher, as here he does.

Obſerv. 3. III. Obſerve, That all Plagues have their Commiſſion from God; they go forth only when Chriſt openeth a Seal. Of the ſecond it is ſaid, Power was given him, and a Sword. And ſo to the third, a Commiſſion of Reſtraint was given, not to hurt the Oil and Wine. And to the fourth, only to kill the fourth part. They are therefore compared to Horſes ſent forth, that are guided by Riders; God's Providence to direct them, and have their way chalked out, as the Egyptian Plagues had: Pſal. 78. 50. it is called, a Path made for his Anger, chalk'd out where it ſhould go, and into what Houſes. So, Jer. 15. 2. Thoſe that are for the Sword, to the Sword; and thoſe that are for the Famine, to the Famine, &c. Now in all theſe Circuits of God's Judgments, let us wait for his turning towards us in Mercy. In the way of thy Judgments have we waited for thee.

Object. And whereas it may be objected, That theſe are Plagues that were ever common in the World, and in all Times as well as theſe.

For Anſwer; Theſe Conſiderations made theſe Plagues then more eminently to be ſet down.

1. They

1. They were as eminent in the Roman Empire in thoſe firſt Ages, as in any other afterwards. Chap. 4. Anſw. 1.

2. Though the Empire had ſuch Plagues in after-times alſo, yet theſe were all the Plagues which it had whilſt Heatheniſh, and ſo were proper Puniſhments of their Gentiliſm, and contempt of the Meſſage of the White Horſe, and ſo intended by God; and therefore brought in here as ſuch. Neither did theſe at all ruin the Empire (which ſtood unbroken) but ſimply puniſh'd it for its Idolatry. But ſuch Plagues as fell out after theſe, had other effects accompanying them, even the Ruin of the Imperial Government, by dividing it, leſſening it, and the like; which theſe did not. Anſw. 2.

But, 3. and more eſpecially, the Holy Ghoſt doth mention theſe Plagues here (although the like were in other Ages) as Puniſhments attending upon the Goſpel: Becauſe this was the very Obſervation and Objection that the Heathens of thoſe Times made; That ſince the Chriſtian Religion began in the Empire, Wars, Peſtilence, and Famine raged more than ever they did in former Times; and ſo laid it upon the Chriſtians as the Cauſe, in that they contemning the Gods, provoked them to ſend theſe Plagues. This we find to be the main Complaint and Calumny which the Chriſtian Writers of thoſe Times writ Apologies to wipe off; as appears in Tertullian, Cyprian, Arnobius, &c. whoſe Apologies I purpoſely read, and found theſe Judgments to be moſt frequently taken notice of by the Heathens themſelves, and this Calumny by the forementioned Authors anſwered. Yea, Cyprian in his Apology ſays, That to wipe off this Calumny, was the ſole Motive and Occaſion that put him upon writing. I held my peace (ſays he) till they laid all theſe Plagues upon us, as the cauſe of all. Now how properly therefore did the Lord Chriſt ſingle out thoſe eminent Plagues following the Goſpel, and preſent them under theſe Seals, as the moſt notable occurrent Puniſhments of thoſe Times rather than any other? And how fitly are they called Seals, ſeeing they were ſo hidden, that the Heathens were utterly miſtaken in the Cauſes of them? For they being Puniſhments of their Perſecuting the Saints, they turned the matter clean contrary, and imputed it to the Anger of the Gods for the Chriſtians contemning their Heatheniſh Religion. But though they were hidden, ſealed Plagues (in reſpect of the cauſes of them) to the Heathens; yet the four Beaſts did then inſtruct John, (who perſonates the Church) and ſo the Church in him, concerning the true cauſe of them: And therefore every Seal hath a Voice of one or other of the Beaſts, ſaying, Come up and ſee. For the Officers or Miniſters of Churches inſtructed them, how that all theſe Plagues were from the Goſpel, and the contempt of it, and their perſecuting the Profeſſors of it. This you may read in the Apologies of Tertullian, Arnobius, and Cyprian, (whoſe Apology I will inſtance in for all the reſt); who, as he lived under the Fourth Seal, in the rage of theſe four Plagues, ſo he ſpeaks in the very Language of the Fourth Seal. He writes againſt one Demetrianus, who had long barked at Chriſtian Profeſſion. And (ſays he) I forbore till he laid to our charge, that all theſe Miſeries on the Empire we Chriſtians were the cauſe of: Cum dicas plurimos conqueri quod Bella crebriùs ſurgant, quod lues, & fames ſæviant, ultrà tacere non oportet: When I hear you ſay that many complain of us as the Cauſes why thoſe Wars ſo often ariſe, and why the Peſtilence and Famine rage ſo; I can be no longer ſilent, but muſt needs give you an Anſwer; and he plainly declares, from the Lord of Hoſts, that their Idolatries and Perſecutions of the Chriſtians, were the cauſe; and that theſe Puniſhments, non eveniebant caſu, came not by chance, but were the Vengeance of God, who hath ſaid, that Vengeance is his, and that he will judg the Cauſe of his People. And he withal tells them, that if they repent not through theſe Plagues, Hell would then follow. Manet poſtmodùm (ſays he) carcer æternus, jugis flamma, & pœna perpetua: There remains, after all this, an eternal Priſon, a continual Flame, and an everlaſting Puniſhment. He ſpeaks in the very Language of this fourth Seal, not knowing it, nor referring to it, for he lived under it. Thus doth Tertullian alſo in his Apology, wherein he attributes the cauſe of their Famine, and other Plagues, unto their perſecuting the Chriſtians. And this is the Myſtery

PART I. of the four Beasts, calling upon John to come and see, and behold the mind and meaning of these Judgments on the World; the Officers of Churches in their Sermons so instructed them.

Observat. The only Observation I shall raise from this Instruction of the four Beasts, is this, That during the first four Seals, (which indeed bring us to 260 Years after Christ) the Officers of Churches remained according to the Institution in the purer Churches; but afterwards you hear not of them, Corruptions coming in upon all the Churches, and perverting their right Institution and End. You meet not with any more mention of them, till the Vials begin (chap. 15.) which was in the first separation from Popery; and then you reade not that all four, but only one of the Beasts gave those Vials. But after a second measuring the Temple before Rome's Ruin, as Chap. 11. you reade of four Beasts, chap. 19. in their right order again, praising God.

The fifth Seal, is that great and bloody Persecution which followed after all these Plagues, in the Time of Diocletian, about the Year 300, which was of all the ten Persecutions foregoing it, the greatest, and therefore is put in for all the rest: Under it there suffered 144000 in one Province of the Empire; how many therefore in the rest? Now this last is here mentioned instead of all the rest.

1. Because indeed those other Plagues, for the contempt of the Gospel, did but enrage the Heathens the more; for they thought that all this came upon them for their suffering the Christians to live.

2. This being the last, and greatest, is brought in as crying for Vengeance in the Name of all the foregoing Martyrs; for so their Cry intimates, How long, Lord, wilt thou not avenge our Blood!

The Vision is,

1. Of Souls severed from their Bodies, even of Men slain, or of Martyrs.

2. These Men are presented as new sacrificed, and with their Throats cut, lying bleeding at the foot of the Altar, alluding to the Sacrifices, for Martyrdom is no other than a Sacrifice; 2 Tim. 4. 6. For I am now ready to be offered, and the time of my departure is at hand; and Phil. 2. 17. Yea, and if I be offered upon the sacrifice and service of your Faith, I joy and rejoice with you all. And whereas many understand this Altar to be Heaven, that comes in afterward, when white Robes are given them. It is an allusion to the Altar of Burnt Offerings, whereon their Bodies were offered; but, chap. 8. their Prayers are offered up upon the Altar of Incense.

3. They are presented as crying for Vengeance for their Blood: Mark it, It is not simply the Blood that cries, (as 'tis said of Abel's Blood) but the Souls themselves cry, and that for Vengeance and utter Ruin on the Empire: A Lapide makes it [liberationem] so the Hebrew word signifies; and so vindicare is to free, as praying for the Liberty of the Church below. But these cries are in the behalf of their own Blood already shed; and for that there was no such liberty to be sued for.

The Satisfaction to their Cry is double;

1. A Reason why Vengeance is delayed; they had Brethren to be made perfect as they were.

2. In the mean time they are received to Glory.

1. For the Reason; it consists in this, that the Empire was yet a while to stand in Power, because they had other Brethren to be perfected as well as they, after a little Season. So that, it refers not to the Persecutions of Antichrist, which were a thousand Years after; but to those of Arrianism, when under those Emperors, as cruel Persecutions for the Time, were raised some thirty Years after this, as ever before; and then the Trumpets sound, and they ruin the Empire it self through their Prayers, as chap. 8.

2. For

Chap. 4.

2. For their Glory; it is expreſſed by White Robes given them.

Which is, 1. a Sign or Badg of Heavenly Glory; ſo chap. 3. 4. They ſhall walk with me in White. So Chriſt, when he gave a ſhine of the Glory of his Kingdom, he cauſed his Garments to look as white as any Fuller could make them.

2. It denotes Joy. In Triumphs they were wont to wear White Robes, as a Token of Gladneſs; Let thy Garments be always White.

3. Robes were worn only by Noble Perſonages; Mulier ſtolata was differenced from togata, as calling for a more ſpecial Honour. Thus Mordecai was apparell'd in the Royal Robes, Eſth. 6. 11.

This giving them White Robes, is an alluſion to the bringing the Prieſts firſt into the Temple, when their thirty Years were expired; they clothed them in White.

Obſerv. 1. In that this Perſecution was the laſt and greateſt of all, take notice that it is God's manner to bring ſoreſt Trials juſt before deliverance. So to David at Ziglag, a few hours before he was proclaimed King. In chap. 11. there is a Perſecution and War of Antichriſt yet to come, for the ſpace of three Years and an half, when for ever the Witneſſes ſhall caſt off their Sackcloth. I fear it, for 'tis the laſt.

Obſerv. 2. That though great Puniſhments had befallen the Empire by thoſe three Horſes; yet this is not Vengeance enough for Martyrs Blood, which nothing will ſlack but the ruin of that Kingdom and State which ſhed it; this Puniſhment therefore is brought in after all the other. So Manaſſe's blood-ſhed nothing would pacify, but the Captivity and Ruin of that State.

Obſerv. 3. That in a Buſineſs wherein many Ages have an Intereſt, the Saints in the laſt Age foregoing, do put up their Prayers in the ſtrength of all Prayers and Crys of Blood preceding. So do theſe theirs, in the name of all foregoing Martyrs: How long! &c. That as in a Generation of Wicked Men, the laſt of them do inherit the Sins and Puniſhments of all their Fore-fathers; ſo do a Generation of Godly Men go forth againſt their Perſecutors in the ſtrength of all their Fore-fathers Prayers, and Bloodſhed. How comfortably therefore may we pray againſt Rome and Spain, and the Abettors of them, the Biſhops, who all have even wallowed in the Blood of the Saints, and againſt whom we have the Prayers of all Ages to join their Forces to ours for the more ſure prevailing; and we may juſtly cry in the ſtrength of them, How long! &c. I have ſeen many Cords ſo linked together upon a Pully, and with ſuch an Artifice, that a Child might draw up a mighty Weight, for he pulled in the ſtrength of all the Cords. So here, though we be weak, yet praying in the ſtrength of all the Saints Prayers, and of their Blood, we muſt needs be heard. It is but a little reſting, till our Brethren (it may be our ſelves) the Witneſſes, are killed; and then down goes Rome, and the Hierarchy with it. In this reſpect it is good living in the laſt Ages of the World, for we drive a Trade with all our Fore-father's Stock.

Obſerv. 4. That the Power of Perſecutors ſtands no longer, than till they have finiſhed the great Work of perſecuting the Saints. The Empire ſtood ſo long as it did, mainly for this end; and therefore this Reaſon is here given. Thus Hab. 1. 12. Thou haſt ordained them for Judgment, (on themſelves) and eſtabliſhed them for Correction (of thine). We think much that they ſhould have ſo great Power; why, they have it to this end, to perſecute.

Obſerv. 5. That the Souls themſelves are here ſaid to cry, and not their Blood only: A wicked Man being murthered, his Blood calls for Vengeance; but not only the Blood of a Godly Man, but his Soul alſo calls and crys for Vengeance; which cry muſt therefore needs come up with much clamour in the Ears of the Lord of Hoſts. Think you that he will not avenge his Elect! Yes, he will do it ſpeedily. And from hence raiſe up your Thoughts higher, that if Abel's Blood hath hath a force in its cry, and his Soul that ſtill lives, a greater force; then how much more hath Chriſt's Blood, and how much more yet hath Chriſt himſelf, who liveth to make interceſſion for us. Thus the Scripture riſeth in expreſſing the efficacy of the Interceſſion of Jeſus Chriſt for us.

Obſerv. 6. That the Souls in Heaven, following their Intereſts on Earth, they proſecute the revenging of their Blood. There is the ſame reaſon for other Intereſts; as for Friends, for Children, for Buſineſſes, and the like; which having prayed for on Earth, they ſtill do proſecute them in Heaven.

Obſ. 7. That the Souls in Paradiſe know the reaſon of God's Diſpenſations, and his Counſels, which are ſatisfactory to them. God here opens his utmoſt Reaſon, why the Empire was as yet to ſtand; and that was, to kill a few more Martyrs. They are guided by a Spirit of Prophecy as Chriſt is, they being Prophets as well as Prieſts.

Obſ. 8. That in all Diſpenſations, if we knew what reaſon God hath for them, we ſhould reſt: So the Souls do in this ſtanding of the Empire. Let our Faith apprehend that God hath a Reaſon for what he does, otherwiſe we ſhould have no Perſecutions.

Obſ. 9. That Saints that were not yet born, are called their Brethren, as being ſuch in God's Election; this Perſecution came not till forty Years after: So Chriſt calls all his People Brethren, God having given them unto him before all Worlds. He knows perfectly who are his, and their Number in all Ages, and choſe not Qualifications, but Perſons: So ſays Chriſt, I have Sheep which are not of this Fold. Labour we therefore to love the Jews, as thoſe who are to be called; and the Saints departed, as thoſe who are our Brethren.

Obſ. 10. That Martyrdom is a perfection; it is ſaid, till they are fulfilled [πληρώσωνται]; ſo Chriſt calls his Suffering: I will watch to day and to morrow; and then (ſays he) I ſhall be perfected. If thou haſt all Holineſs, and wanteſt this Coronis, thou art not ſo perfect as Martyrs for Chriſt are.

Obſ. 11. That Saints departed do preſently enter into Bliſs. They ſleep not, but have white Robes given them, as the Prieſts had when they were firſt brought into the Temple. Theſe have the like when they are brought, as Prieſts, into the Inner Temple of Heaven. And their Robes of Glory are new ones, which they had not before; for they are given them anew. Glory cloaths them, till they and their Bodies meet again; and theſe are called Robes, as reaching from Head to Foot; they are all over happy and glorious.

Obſ. 12. They reckon us Fellow-ſervants and Brethren, though we be ſinful; and do hold a Communion with us. Let us do the like towards our weak Brethren, and eſteem them ſuch notwithſtanding their Infirmities, and although we be holier. There is a greater diſtance between us and theſe Saints in Heaven, in reſpect of purity, than can be ſuppoſed between us, and the meaneſt Saint here below.

Obſ. 13. That the Cauſe for which they are reckoned Martyrs, is for the Word of God, and their Teſtimony to it. So that if it be for any Truth in the Word, though never ſo ſmall, it is accepted as if it were the greateſt.

Obſ. 14. God may defer to anſwer Prayers for the preſent: He doth ſo to Saints in Heaven; he puts them upon ſtaying a while; much more therefore may he deal ſo with us. And yet God in the mean time recompenceth this Demur ſome other way. As he gave theſe White Robes of Glory, ſo will he give thee other Bleſſings that are better, in which thou mayeſt reſt ſatisfied and content.

The

Chap. 4.

The Sixth Seal follows, from verſ. 12. to the end of the Chapter. Now as the former Seals contained ſeveral Puniſhments upon the Heatheniſh Roman State; ſo this Sixth expreſſeth the final accompliſhment of God's Wrath upon the Heatheniſh Religion in it, in throwing it down; and upon Heatheniſh Worſhippers, and upholders of Gentiliſm, in confounding them; and is therefore called, the great Day of the Lamb's Wrath. Now, becauſe it is thus called, and ſome Phraſes are uſed concerning it, that are uſed of the immediate fore-runners of the Day of Judgment, (as Matth. 24. 19. when before the Son of Man's coming, the Sun is ſaid to be darkned, &c.) therefore ſome Interpreters have underſtood it, of the great Day of Judgment only; and ſo you may have heard it often quoted by ſuch as by piece-meals take up Interpretations of this Book, not having framed them to the ſeries of the whole.

But, 1*ſt*, the Great Day of Judgment it cannot be; the Series of this Prophecy will not admit that Expoſition. Which is argued,

1. From what goes before it: For John having but now ſpoken of the Primitive Times, in the five former Seals, and brought us but to three hundred Years after Chriſt, in the tenth and laſt Perſecution: Now to make a leap over the 1300 Years ſince paſſed, and after thoſe Primitive Perſecutions, to bring in the Day of Judgment, were too great a Stride, too wide a Chaſma and Gulph in this orderly Story.

2. From the Series of things after this; for there is a Seventh Seal yet to be opened, and that to produce ſeven Trumpets, which are new and freſh ſucceeding Puniſhments upon that Empire. And it is certain, that there are no ſuch Puniſhments to come after the great Day of Judgment.

And as for the Phraſes here ſounding ſo like thoſe uſed of that Day, it is certain that there is never a Phraſe here uſed, but is frequently and ordinarily uſed to expreſs great Mutations and overturnings in Kingdoms, and great Calamities brought upon Men in thoſe Kingdoms by God, long before the Day of Judgment.

As, 1. that it is called the Great Day, in which who can ſtand? (verſ. laſt;) and that the Sun and Moon are ſaid to be darkned, &c. You ſhall find the ſame Expreſſions uſed Joel 2. 9. to ſet forth the great overturning the Jewiſh State by the Armies of the Chaldeans in the Captivity. Their Armies the Prophet deſcribes, verſ. 2, 3, and 8. and their ſacking Jeruſalem, verſ. 9. and the Confuſion and Calamities brought upon that State, he expreſſeth, (by the ſame Metaphors that are here uſed) verſ. 10. The Earth ſhall quake before them, the Heavens ſhall tremble; the Sun and Moon ſhall be dark; the Stars ſhall withdraw their ſhining. And verſ. 11. becauſe theſe were God's Executioners of his Vengeance, therefore he is deſcribed as their General, making a Speech to them; The Lord ſhall utter his Voice before his Army; his Camp is very great. Therefore that Time is called (as here) the great and terrible Day of the Lord; and who can abide it! as here, Who can ſtand! Thus Iſa. 34. where the Prophet plainly deſcribes the overthrow of Edom, as appears by verſ. 5. though he calls all the World to conſider her Example as a warning to them, (as verſ. 1.) that he would go on to do the like to them, (as verſ. 2.); yet thus he deſcribes it, (juſt as here) verſ. 4. All the Hoſt of Heaven ſhall de diſſolved, and the Heavens ſhall be rolled together as a Scroul; and all the Hoſt (or Stars) of Heaven, ſhall fall down as Figs from a Fig-Tree: and yet all this foretells but the Sword upon Edom, overturning that State, as appears by verſ. 5, and verſ. 8. It is the Day of the Lord's Vengeance for their perſecuting of Sion, juſt as here. And thoſe other Phraſes alſo, of hiding themſelves in Caves and Rocks of the Mountains; and calling upon the Hills to cover them: They are but Expreſſions of ſuch Shames, and Miſeries, and Calamities, as the Vengeance of God in ſuch great Changes doth work. Thus Iſa. 2. 19. when God comes to puniſh Iſrael for their Idols, and to ſend forth the Light of the Goſpel unto them; the Idolaters, as confounded, are ſaid to go into the Holes of the Rocks, and into the Caves of the Earth, for fear of the Lord, and the Glory of his Majeſty. And when the ten Tribes were carried Captive by Aſſur, their Calamities were expreſſed by this, (Hoſ. 10. 8.) They ſhall ſay to the Mountains, Cover us; and to the Rocks, Fall upon us. So that Chriſt, the giver of this Viſion, and opener of this Seal, hath but borrowed the Similitudes and Expreſſions uſed by the Prophets in ſeveral places, to ſet forth the like Change, Calamity, and Confuſion, that befel the Heatheniſh State of the Roman Empire.

But then, 2*dly*, Becauſe theſe places of the Prophets alluded unto, do ſpeak of the overthrow of Kingdoms by Wars; therefore Mr. Forbes would have this Seal to be that utter overturning of the Weſtern Empire of Rome, by the Goths and Vandals, which began four hundred Years after Chriſt; and ſo, to note out the Ruin of the Empire it ſelf, and not of Heatheniſm in it. And but for theſe Reaſons following, I ſhould have thought ſo alſo: As,

1. That the firſt Seal beginning but with the Conqueſt of Heatheniſm in the Empire, (for Chriſt in the preaching the Goſpel, did at firſt ſeek outwardly to overcome or plague nothing elſe) here in this Seal muſt be the accompliſhment of that Victory or full Conqueſt gotten, deſcribed and ſet forth; and ſo, the ſame thing made the Subject of the compleat Conqueſt deſcribed here, that is, made the Subject of the firſt Onſet, in the firſt Seal, verſ. 2, and 3. and that was, the Heatheniſh Religion in the Empire, and the Upholders of it. And ſo Chriſt's firſt ſtep, or degree of Conqueſt in order to his Kingdom, is compleatly in this Chapter preſented: with his firſt full Victory over the firſt Enemy, whom he encountred in the World, even Satan, and his falſe Worſhip; to ſhew, that what Chriſt begun with, he makes an end of. And ſo this Book ſtill ſhews how he makes a clear and full diſpatch of ſuch Enemies firſt, as firſt he encounters. He encountred Heatheniſm firſt by the Goſpel, then by Plagues: but now as one grown angry, he compleats the Victory by Power and Might, and by a violent concuſſion and ſhaking of that State. And having diſpatch'd this Enemy, and ſo made clear work as he goes, (as wiſe Conquerors uſe to do) then he falls upon the Empire it ſelf, in the Trumpets. And that is the reaſon why this laſt Act of this Tragedy is repreſented under ſuch Metaphors as the Great Day of Judgment is ſet out by: even for this, that it imports a full and a compleat Victory, and a final overthrow of that which he had encountred. That as the Day of Judgment is a final Conqueſt of all Enemies by the Lion of Judah; ſo is this a like final Conqueſt by the Lamb, of this firſt Enemy whom he did ſet himſelf to conquer, even Satan and his falſe Worſhip ſet up by that Roman Monarchy.

2*dly*, The Trumpets that come after, are reſerved for the Ruin of the Empire, as a diſtinct thing from Heatheniſm in it: and the Vials for the overthrow of Popery, and the Faction of Mahomet.

And, 3*dly*, Thus the parts of this Prophecy are found to run on ſimilarly; and things alike are put together in diſtinct Viſions. Here are three ſorts of Enemies, and ſo of Plagues to ruin them in this Prophecy.

1. The ſix Seals; which are the beginnings of Sorrows to the World; and they fall upon Satan's falſe Worſhip, which ſtood in Chriſt's way.

2. The ſix Trumpets; which fell upon the Empire it ſelf, for having perſecuted and proſecuted the Church.

3. The Vials; which fall on the Pope, and his Idolatry, and on the Mahumetan Faction, the Turks, his laſt Enemies; Theſe therefore are called the laſt Plagues, chap. 16.

And for a fourth Reaſon, obſerve, That the 12*th* Chapter, (which begins and contains the Story of the Church in the firſt Primitive Times, as this doth of the Heatheniſh Empire) doth wonderfully agree with this Chapter here, containing the like ſpace of Time, and deſcribing the ſame Conqueſt and Victory over Satan (the Dragon) in the Roman Empire (in Heaven); only with this difference, that here the Calamities and Confuſion that befel the Kings or Emperors, and the Chieftains of Heatheniſh Worſhippers, that did ſeek to uphold that Religion ligion ſtill, are ſet out; whereas there, only Satan's Confuſion in being thrown down, is deſcribed; which was very ſuitable, that being the Story of the Church, this of the Empire more eminently. Chap. 4.

So then two things are diſtinctly ſet out unto us under theſe Phraſes and Metaphors.

Firſt, By the darkning the Sun, Moon, and Stars, according to the Analogy of the Prophets, is expreſſed the depoſing of thoſe Heatheniſh Emperors and Governors in that State, conſidered as they did ſtrive to keep up Heatheniſm, (with whom Satan and his Worſhip alſo fell): So as though the State ſtood ſtill, yet thoſe Governors, and the Heatheniſm of the State, were removed and deſtroyed, and thrown down from their Heaven, the Superior Government of that State; which was done by Chriſt's ſending Madneſs and Diſeaſes upon Dioclefian and Maximinianus, Heatheniſh Emperors; inſomuch, as they, out of a ſenſe of the Lamb's Wrath, gave over their Government (whilſt they were in the Meridian of their Glory) to the wonderment of the World. And afterwards Maxentius and Maximinus (Heathen Emperors alſo) were overcome by Licinius, whilſt he favoured the Chriſtians, and was Colleague with Conſtantine; by which Conſtantine it was afterwards more compleatly furthered and carried on; for when the foreſaid Licinius made a Revolt unto Heatheniſm, Conſtantine ſubdued him and his Chieftains, (for Heatheniſm went not down without blows) and turned that whole State Chriſtian, when he had depoſed Heatheniſh Perſecutors. Now ſuch a Depoſing of Governors in a State, and overthrowing their Armies, is in the Prophets expreſſed, by darkning the Sun, Moon, and Stars, as well as the overthrowing the State it ſelf. So Iſa. 13. 10. the depoſing the Babylonian Monarch and his Nobles by the Medes, is ſet forth, verſ. 2, 3, and 4, by the darkning the Sun, their King; the Moon, their Queen; the Stars, their Nobles. And in another place it is ſaid, How art thou fallen, O Lucifer, thou Son of the Morning! ſpeaking of the bright Star the King of Babel; who, Iſa. 14. ſaid, He would aſcend to Heaven, and exalt his Throne above the Stars. In the Dialect and Phraſe of Speech uſed in the Eaſtern Countries, (as among the Arabians and Jews, &c.) To throw down any ones excellency, is expreſſed by caſting down his Heaven to the Earth. And ſo it may be ſaid, (that which alſo ſome Interpreters would have) that that which after follows, expreſſeth but the ſame thing which was at firſt metaphorically uttered under the Prophets Alluſions, of Sun, Moon, and Stars; all which John afterwards literally expoundeth, verſ. 15. when he ſays, [and the Kings of the Earth]; that is, thoſe Roman Emperors, the Suns of this Firmament were ſtep'd off from their Glory and their Stars; the Heatheniſh Nobles, that adhered to them, were depoſed; their Mountains removed, that is, their Chieftains and ſtrong Men, as ſuch are called, Iſa. 2. 14. ſo that the one is but an expoſition of the other. And thus, only the miſerable overthrow of the Heatheniſh Worſhippers is here deſcribed, as became the Seal-Prophecy, even as the putting down of Satan and his Worſhip, is expreſſed in the Book-Prophecy. And that which may ſtrengthen this Interpretation, is, That the reſt of the Prophecy being to proceed with the like Metaphors, of Plagues upon the Sun, Moon, Stars, Earth, Trees, &c. (for in ſuch Language and Metaphors, are the Contents of the Trumpets and Vials expreſſed): He therefore here gives one literal Explanation of them in this, which is his firſt mention of ſuch, which one may ſerve for all; that ſo by the Analogy of the Holy Ghoſt's own Expoſition here, the reſt might be interpreted; who makes Kings to be as the Sun, and Nobles as the Stars, &c. To this purpoſe you muſt know, that in Scripture Deſcriptions and Expreſſions, (the Prophets uſing to point things out by Similitude) every Kingdom, State, or Body of Men, is compared and aſſimilated to a World; in which, what is ſuperiour and higheſt, is called the Heavens; and therein, the higheſt the Sun, the next the Moon, and next to them the Stars, &c. And what is of lower Rank, is called the Earth, Sea, Rivers, and Trees, &c. And therefore Puniſhments on States and Kingdoms, in this Book, are expreſſed by caſting them down from their Heavens, and by Miſeries falling upon the Rivers, the Sea, &c. whereby ſuch things are underſtood, as anſwering in States amongſt Men in neareſt reſemblance unto the Sea, Earth, &c. in the great World. And this is the Key, as of this Viſion, ſo of the Trumpets, and the Vials that follow. And ſometimes the Scripture expreſſeth the Alterations of Kingdoms themſelves, and of all places of Rank and of Government, by this darkening the Heavens, the Sun, &c. So Haggai 2. 21, 22. Speak to Zerubbabel Governor of Judah, ſaying, I will ſhake the Heavens and the Earth; And I will overthrow the Throne of Kingdoms, and I will deſtroy the ſtrength of the Kingdoms of the Heathen, and will overthrow the Chariots, and thoſe that ride in them, and the Horſes, and the Riders ſhall come down, every one by the Sword of his Brother. And ſometimes only the depoſing of Perſons from thoſe Places and Dignities, the Places ſtanding ſtill. Now in the Trumpets, the caſting down the Sun, Stars, &c. is ſpoken of in the Abſtract, even the altering the very State, (together with depoſing the Perſons) Power, and Dignity of the Empire: But here it is to be underſtood of depoſing the Perſons only (in the Concrete) who had that Power, but were put down from it. And ſo, it imports the throwing down the Chieftains of Heathen Emperors, and the depoſing them from their Places, not yet medling with the Places themſelves in the Empire.

The ſecond thing that theſe Expreſſions hold forth, is not ſimply the overthrowing of Kingdoms and States, or of Governours, &c. and ſo to be underſtood of Political Mutations only; but they are uſed to ſet forth a Change and Mutation of Worſhip and of Religion in a State. For as Bodies Politick are compared to a World, (as was ſaid) ſo Religious Bodies, and States conſidered in reſpect to their Worſhip or Religion, are thus compared alſo. So Jeſus Chriſt is ſaid to have His World, Pſal. 8. 3. [Thy Heavens, thy Moon and Stars, &c.] where the Sun is not mentioned, becauſe Chriſt himſelf (who is the Sun of Righteouſneſs) is the Sun therein. Now, Heb. 2. 5, 6. that Pſalm is interpreted of Chriſt's World, the World to come; as it is called, verſ. 5. both this of the Goſpel, in oppoſition to Adam's World, and Chriſt's Kingdom hereafter. Moreover, for the preſent, the State of Chriſt's Worſhip and Worſhippers under the Goſpel, and his Ordinances, are compared to a World, wherein are Heavens, and Moon, and Stars. Thus Pſal. 19. 1. [The Heavens declare the Glory of God] which is interpreted of the preaching of the Goſpel, Rom. 10. 18. But I ſay, Have they not heard? Yes verily, their Sound went into all the Earth, and their Words unto the Ends of the World. The Apoſtles and their Doctrine are the Heavens, the Lights in this Heaven of Chriſt, to declare his Glory to the World. And therefore the words of the 4*th* Verſe of that 19*th Pſalm*, are there in the 10*th* to the Romans, applyed to their Preaching. And (you know) Miniſters are called Stars, in the firſt Chapter of this Book of the Revelation. So likewiſe Churches are called Heavenly Lights ſhining in the World, Phil. 2. 15. [φωστῆρες] [Light-bearers] the ſame word that is given by the Septuagint to the Stars, Gen. 1. 14. And it appears by that place, that they irradiate the World; not an Houſe, as a Candle or Torch does, but the World, as Stars do. And the Apoſtles Miniſtry is compared to twelve Stars; which the Primitive Church was crowned with, Rev. 12. 1. And ſo Heb. 12. 27. it is one part of the meaning of ſhaking Heavens, that is the Ordinances of the Goſpel which are called the Heavens. That Frame of Worſhip which Chriſt hath erected, and inſtituted to be under the Goſpel, is interpreted to be meant by the Heavens, (for as they are the Ordinances of Day and Night, ſo are theſe of the Church) as oppoſitely; the legal Worſhip is there called the Earth. Yea, the Temple-Worſhip, with the Prieſts and Elders of that Religion, are ſo called. Therefore Dan. 8. 9, 10, Antiochus his cauſing that Worſhip to ceaſe, and putting down thoſe Prieſts, is expreſſed to us, by his prevailing over the Hoſt of Heaven, and his caſting down ſome of the Hoſt and Stars unto the Ground. Yea, verſ. 11. he is ſaid to magnify himſelf againſt the Prince of that Hoſt; that is, againſt God, and Chriſt, the Sun in this Firmament, as the Sun is Prince of the Stars. Now then as Chriſt thus hath his World, ſo Antichriſt alſo hath his Heavens, and Sun, and Earth, &c. which are to be interpreted Spiritually, as well as Politically. And thus Satan's Heatheniſh Religion and Worſhip in the Roman Empire, is in like manner here expreſſed expreſſed unto us. The falſe Gods of the Heathens are called in Scripture, the Hoſt of Heaven, as Deut. 17. 3. not only becauſe ſome of them worſhipped the Sun and Stars immediately, but alſo becauſe the Romans and Grecians did entitle the Stars by the Names of their Gods, or Men famous among them, whom they worſhipped, and ſo they worſhipped both at once, under one and the ſame Name. The Sun they entitled Apollo, and the other Planets by the Names of other Gods and Goddeſſes, as Saturn, Jupiter, Mars, Venus, and the Moon they called Phœbe, or the great Goddeſs Diana: All which had once been Men and Women among them, though now being dead, they were worſhip'd for Gods and Goddeſſes. So that they worſhipped the Hoſt of Heaven under the Names of Men; though really, and indeed, under both theſe, they worſhip'd Satan and his Devils, (though not immediately, yet interpretatively). Thus ſpeaks the Apoſtle, 1. Cor. 10. 20. The Things which the Gentiles ſacrifice, they ſacrifice to Devils. Now then, this advancement of Satan, under the Names and Titles of the Hoſt of Heaven, was truly his Heaven, wherein the Devils, by that Religion, were ſet up as the Gods of this World, as 2 Cor. 4. 4. And anſwerably the throwing down of Satan's Worſhip and Religion, is expreſſed by a change of the Heavens, even as Chriſt expreſſeth the throwing down the Heatheniſh Worſhip by the Apoſtle's preaching, to be, its falling from Heaven like Lightning; which Chriſt ſpeaks, of their caſting out Devils then, when ſent out to preach, as a certain Omen which his Faith had before-hand, that Satan in like manner, with all his Worſhip, ſhould be thrown down by the preaching the Goſpel in the Empire; and ſo accordingly, chap. 12. Satan and his Angels are ſaid to be caſt down from Heaven, when he and they were acknowledged for Gods no longer. Now the alteration of this Heatheniſh Worſhip, and change of this Religion in the Empire, is the ſhaking the Heavens and Earth here meant. The word for Earthquake is not only to be confined to the Earth, (in Engliſh we have no word large enough) for it imports the concuſſion, or throwing down by a commotion of that Heatheniſh World, the Heavens and Earth, and all of that Religion, even of all that had a ſtation in that accurſed Frame. Thus, Haggai 2. 17. you have the like Alluſion for the alteration of the Jewiſh Worſhip into the Goſpel Worſhip; and then, that alteration yet to come, of this Goſpel Worſhip, when the Kingdom of Chriſt ſhall be ſet up: The one is expreſſed by ſhaking the Earth, the other the Heavens. And that ſhaking is interpreted, verſ. 27. to be, removing away of the things ſhaken. And ſo the throwing down Satan and his Devils from being worſhipped any longer, under the Names of the Hoſt of Heaven, and thoſe Appellatives given the Stars, and Titles to Men departed, (whereof he received all the real honour) may fitly be here underſtood to be the darkning the Sun and Moon, and the falling of theſe Stars from Heaven. As Chriſt is the Sun in his Heaven; So Satan the Prince of Devils, the Prince of this Hoſt of Heaven, (as Daniel's phraſe is) was the Sun in this Firmament. And the leſſer Devils, with him worſhipped under the Title of the Leſſer Gods, and of the Stars, are the Stars here, which fall from Heaven. And as the Moon is Chriſt's Church, and the Queen in his Heaven; ſo the Colledg of Prieſts (who were then in Rome, as the Pope and Cardinals are now) that were the Inſtruments of his Worſhip, they were the Moon in his Heaven. And ſo his conſecrated Places, his Iſlands and Mountains, the high Places of his Worſhip were removed out of their place; that is, diverted from that uſe which they were once put to in that Idolatrous Worſhip.

NEW JERSEY COLLEGE LIBRARY

Chap. 4.

So then this mutation of the Heatheniſh Religion from Conſtantine's Time downward, during the ſpace of an hundred Years (for ſo long was it e're Heatheniſm could be utterly extirpated, and wholly aboliſh'd, for ever riſing again) is here ſet forth unto us by two Things here diſtinctly and apart laid down.

Firſt, The overthrowing the Worſhip and Religion it ſelf, expreſſed by thoſe Metaphors before-mentioned. As,

1. By the eclipſing of the Sun and Moon, [the Sun became Black, — and the Moon as Blood] that is, the glory of theſe their chief falſe Gods, and the Prieſts of them, was darkned.

2. By

PART I.

2. By the falling of the Stars, as Figs not fully ripe] that is, by a violent Wind. Shewing that Mens Hearts were not looſened of themſelves to a diſlike of that Religion, nor brought ſo freely off from it at the firſt; they would have ſtuck on ſtill, had not the Wind of Power and Authority ſhook them down.

3. By the vaniſhing of the whole Heaven of this Worſhip, as a Scrowl folded up. The manner of the Jews was to write on Parchment, which from being folded or rolled up, they called Volumen, a Volume; and with us Parchment is from thence called Vellume to this day.

Which Metapor imports;

1. That as when a Scrowl is folded up, not a Letter of it is to be ſeen, but immediately upon the rolling up, all do diſappear: ſo theſe Gods vaniſh'd, not any of their Worſhip retains the ſame Name now, that was then uſed; there is not a Tittle of thoſe Gods left, they have had no Worſhippers theſe thouſand Years.

2. As a Book or Scrowl folded up is not uſed, ſo neither is this Religion.

In the ſecond place, this Mutation is repreſented unto us, in the Confuſion that befel the Upholders of that Ethnick Worſhip, the Atlas's of theſe Heavens that endeavoured to ſupport them, and oppoſed Conſtantine and other Emperors in the diſcarding of this, and bringing in the Chriſtian Religion. The Devil goes not out of a Man poſſeſſed, nor out of our Hearts, without Blows, nor till a ſtronger than he comes. So neither did he leave that Station of his in the Empire eaſily, and without reſiſtance; but egg'd on Kings, namely ſome Emperors, and Generals, and the common ſort of People with them, to join together for the upholding of the Old Religion and Worſhip of his. Theſe the Lamb encounters, and in his Wrath confounds. Now it is obſervable, how John uſeth ſome of the very Names which were given the Romans in their ſeveral Ranks. For here are three ſeveral Ranks mentioned.

1. Higheſt Governors, as Kings.
2. The middle ſort of Men, as the Rich and Strong.
3. The Inferior Multitude of falſe Worſhippers, as Bondmen and Free.

1. Kings; that is, Emperors, for which the Greek Tongue had no word but [βάσιλεὶς] which therefore the Apoſtles uſed for [Emperor] ſo Peter, 1 Pet. 2. 3. and Paul, 1 Tim. 2. 1. Then χιλίαρχοι, Captains of Thouſands. The Roman Legions over whom theſe were Captains, conſiſted of 7000.

2. Rich Men, and Mighty Men, who made up the middle ſort of Men.

3. Bondmen and Free, who made up the lower and inferior Rank of Men. Theſe were uſual Diſtinctions of Men's Ranks among the Romans.

Now their Confuſion is expreſt;

1. By their ſhameful overthrow; they fly for ſhame, and hide themſelves in Dens, a phraſe expreſſing ſhameful confuſion and diſappointment.

2. Their deſpair of help, intimated in that phraſe, [they ſhall ſay to the Mountains, fall upon us, &c.] So Luke 21. 30. and Hoſ. 10. 8. where when common Calamities came upon the ten Tribes, and upon the State of Jeruſalem, their being at their Wits end, in reſpect of getting rid out of them, is expreſſed by their calling to the Mountains to cover them, and the Hills to fall upon them; as wiſhing for Death, rather than the preſent Miſeries. Not that they ſhould uſe theſe very words, but that their State ſhould be ſuch as ſhould make them wiſh ſome ſuch thing, or any thing, rather than that Miſery then brought upon them. Thoſe of other Nations, who are reduced to ſome extream and miſerable exigent, are wont to expreſs their Grievance, by wiſhing the Earth to ſwallow them; but this particular phraſe is peculiar to the Jews, who had a rocky Country, full of Caves, to which they for refuge were wont to fly, (and therefore it is uſual in Scripture to ſay, Enter into thy Rock and hide thy ſelf, as Iſa. 21. 10.) and being in thoſe Caves, their Fear and Deſpair did oft-times put them upon wiſhing, that thoſe Rocks would fall on them, and make an end of them.

3. The phraſes import, that all this is done with a ſenſe and conviction in the Hearts of theſe Enemies of Chriſt, that it was by the Power of Chriſt, whom they they called accurſed, and derided; and that he was indeed the King of the World, and Conqueror of them. For they that are thus confounded, do within themſelves call to the Rocks to cover them from the Face of the Lamb, with whoſe anger their Conſciences were ſtruck, in thoſe Victories got over them, and Miſeries brought upon them. And therefore it is here brought in as their Speech, to bid the Rocks cover them from the Face of the Lamb, for the great Day of the Lamb's Wrath is come, and who ſhall be able to ſtand or to abide it? as Joel 2.11.

Now the Story of thoſe Times (when the Heatheniſh Religion was altered in the Empire) preſents ſuch a Face of Things as this Seal doth. For Dioclesian and Maximinian, (the greateſt Perſecutors that ever the Church had) in the height and ruff of their Imperial Glory and Rage, did give over their Authority and Empire, and retired themſelves, whereof no Hiſtorian could give the reaſon, but imputed it to madneſs; but indeed, they did it ſo, (as it were) to hide themſelves from the Face of the Lamb. To theſe ſucceeded Galerius, and Maximinus, and Conſtantius, the Father of Conſtantine. Maximinus perſecuting the Chriſtians, was ſmitten with a ſtrange Diſeaſe, and being ever and anon convinced that Chriſt was King, he recalled his Edicts for the Perſecution of them; and yet, like Pharaoh, he afterwards put them forth again, till at length he died miſerably, acknowledging Chriſt's Wrath. Then was Maxentius ſet up by the Romans a Defender of the Heatheniſh Cauſe. But being overcome by Licinius, he threw away his Imperial Robes, fled, and lay hid for the ſafeguard of his Life, and acknowledged Chriſt by a Decree; but his Fleſh was eaten of Worms. Then Licinius oppoſing Conſtantine, (joined in the Empire with him) was overcome by him, and he and his Complices condemned, at the place of Execution, acknowledging Chriſt to be God. What afterward befel Julian, who attempted to ſet up that Heathen Religion again, (as how being ſhot in his Wars againſt Perſia, he took his Blood, and flinging it into the Air, cried out, Viciſti O Galilæe) you cannot be ignorant of.

Obſerv. 1. Learn, when you ſee any notable overthrow given the Enemies of Chriſt, to raiſe up your Hearts to thoughts of the Day of Judgment. We find, as here, ſo elſewhere, notable Judgments on God's Enemies, ſet forth and deſcribed under the Language of that Day. It is frequent in Scripture, as Pſal. 18. and elſewhere. They may mutually help to ſtrengthen our Faith in each other; a particular Judgment, in that of the Great Day, that it will alſo come; and that Great Day doth alſo aſſure us, that Chriſt will here be avenged on his Enemies. Chriſt hath many great Days that forerun that Great Day; and wicked Men, and wicked Cauſes, have Days of Judgment here.

Obſerv. 2. How eaſy it is for the Lamb to make an alteration of Religion in a Kingdom, cauſing the new One which he brings in to prevail. Thus in a few Years he turned the whole Empire Chriſtian, even when Heatheniſm was rooted in all Mens Hearts, and when Satan had a Throne fix'd in appearance to continue, then by his Power poſſeſſing himſelf of the Emperor's Heart, he (as the phraſe is 1 Kings 2. 15.) turned the Kingdom about; and this, when Men's Hearts of themſelves were not turned, but were as Figs not fully ripe, yet ſhaken off by this Wind. And he folded up the Heavens as a Scrowl, not one Conſtellation or Star of all thoſe falſe Gods (that then ſhone ſo bright in all Men's Eyes) having ſhined in the World theſe many hundred Years. And Chriſt hath promiſed to do the like againſt Popery. Which State, as it is the Image of that Empire and Religion, ſo it ſhall bear the likeneſs of its Puniſhment. What a mighty change was wrought in the Hearts of Kings and Princes, upon the firſt Reformation! And God will work the like upon the ſecond Reformation, before Rome is deſtroyed, and will put it into their Hearts to ruin her utterly.

Obſerv. 3. Chriſt thinks it not enough for him to confound his Enemies, but he will make them alſo to acknowledg his Truth. Thus he did by Nebuchadonezzor, by Antiochus, and by thoſe Perſecutors; and thus he will do by all the Proud of the Earth. He will not only confound the Falſe Church and Synagogue gogue of Satan; but he will make them come and acknowledg, that God hath loved the Philadelphian, Rev. 3. 9. How often in the Prophets is this made the Fruit of their Puniſhment! (and by this it is expreſſed) they ſhall know that I am the Lord. It is ill ſtanding out with Chriſt in any thing. Chriſt will have, not only every Knee to bow, but every Tongue to confeſs his Name. Learn we therefore not to ſtand out againſt Convictions of any kind. The Lamb will in the end have, not only a real Victory in Men's Puniſhments, but he will have Men render it more compleat by their Confeſſions and Acknowledgments.

PART I.

Obſerv. 4. How in diſpenſing Puniſhments, Chriſt meets with Perſecutors in their kind: They cauſed poor Chriſtians to fly into Caves and Dens, and to worſhip the Lamb in Corners, (as the Apologies of thoſe Times ſhew); now Chriſt comes forth and appears openly, and drives them into Corners wherein to hide their Heads.

Obſerv. 5. What a glorious and long Time, Satan the God of this World, and his Devils with him, had of it, when they were counted as the only true Gods, and were worſhipped for ſuch by the whole World during the ſpace of three hundred Years. They who are reſerved in Chains for Hell, were then counted the Immortal Gods, Poſſeſſors of Heaven; and had their Seat (in all Men's Opinions) above the Stars, having all the World for their devout and zealous Worſhippers. What therefore is it to have a great Name, or the beſt Name, the Name of a Saint for a while here! The Devils had not only the Names and Titles, but the Honours of Gods; and that, for ſome thouſands of Years; for whom notwithſtanding, the loweſt Place in Hell is deſigned.

Obſerv. 6. You will not wonder at the proſperity of wicked Men, that they carry it ſo long in the World, if you conſider but how long the Devil carried it, without encountring any ſtop in his way; as having all Nations for his Inheritance; God was worſhip'd but in one poor corner of the Earth, but the Devil poſſeſſed the Heavens, and was as the Sun in the Firmament, and his Prieſts as the Moon and Stars, as if they had been perpetual Ordinances. Think not much at the continuance of Popery for 1200 Years; Heatheniſm ſtood far longer, and Chriſt will make more quick Work in the laſt Days, than in thoſe paſſed.

Obſerv. 7. That Chriſt, though he be a Lamb, yet he can, and will be angry. Men have all ſuch ſweet thoughts of Chriſt, as if he had no Anger in him; but when his Anger is kindled but a little, then bleſſed are all they that put their truſt in him.

Obſerv. 8. That God puniſheth Idolaters and their Idols together. Here both the Heatheniſh Emperors, and their Religion, and Gods, are together removed. Thus, Iſa. 2. 17, 18, 19. And the loftineſs of Man ſhall be bowed down, and the haughtineſs of Men ſhall be made low; and the Lord alone ſhall be exalted in that Day. And the Idols he ſhall utterly aboliſh. And they ſhall go into the Holes of the Rocks, and into the Caves of the Earth for fear of the Lord, and for the Glory of his Majeſty; when he ariſeth to ſhake terribly the Earth. Which Place is parallel to this here, and a Prophecy of the Kingdom of Chriſt. Thus God puniſh'd Egypt, as appears by Numb. 33. 4. where it is ſaid, upon their Gods alſo he executed Judgments. The like you have in Jer. 43. 11, 12, 13. So alſo was Babylon and her God's puniſhed, as Jer. 50. 2. Declare ye among the Nations, and publiſh, and ſet up a Standard, publiſh, and conceal not: ſay, Babylon is taken, Bel is confounded, Merodach is broken in pieces, her Idols are confounded, her Images are broken in pieces. And thus God alſo did, when he began to ruin Popery, the Spiritual Egypt and Babylon. He puniſh'd Monks, pulling down Monaſteries and their Idols together; his Anger was againſt them as well as againſt their Perſons. And ſo Superſtitious Ceremonies and Will-Worſhip will down together.

Obſerv.

Chap. 4.

Obſerv. 9. How fearful and terrible will the Day of Judgment be, when Chriſt ſhall come as the Lion of the Tribe of Judah, if now, when he reigns as a Lamb, (carrying things meekly, and with much patience) he brings ſuch confounding Judgments? All Vengeance here is but the Vengeance of a Lamb, in compariſon of the renting of a Lion that is to come: For (as I take it) he is ſet forth as a Lamb, in reſpect to his Governing and Diſpenſations until the Day of Judgment; but then he will come as the Lion of Judah, and ſhew himſelf ſo much more terrible then, as a Lion is more terrible than a Lamb. All Terrors of Conſcience which Men ſuffer here, (which yet make them call for the Hills to cover them) are but the Wrath of the Lamb in compariſon of thoſe roarings of the Lion at the Great Day. O conſider this, you that forget God, leſt he come and tear you in pieces, and there be none to deliver you.

I ſhall now proceed no further by way of a large commenting, or raiſing any more Obſervations, until I come to the Second Part.

CHAP. V.

The Six First Trumpets.

NOw the six first Trumpets contain several Steps and Degrees of ruining the Imperial Government of the Empire it self when turned Christian, by several Wars and Incursions of Barbarous Nations upon it; whereof Trumpets are suitably made the Denouncers, and this, in revenge of so much Christian Blood, as was spilt when the Empire was Heathenish; even as the Captivity of Babylon did break the Jewish State for shedding Innocent Blood in the Time of Manasses; at which Time that State was Idolatrous, though he and all Judah did afterwards turn to the True Worship of God again. And according to the Division of the Empire, East and West, accordingly was God's Method in the Ruining.

First, Of the Western Parts of it, by the Goths and Vandals, who utterly shattered the Government of the Occidental Emperors, and broke it into ten Kingdoms; over which the Pope succeeded.

Then, secondly, after that, overturning the Oriental Part.

1. By the Saracens; of whom Mahomet was the Head, who wrung one great part of the Eastern Empire in Arabia, Egypt, and Assyria, out of the Emperor's Hands, and subjected those Dominions unto Mahumetanism.

And then, 2. by the Turks professing Mahumetanism also; who conquered and subdued, not only what the Saracens before them had done, but also that other part of the Eastern Empire remaining still Christian, namely, in Natolia and in Greece, over which the Greek Emperors (successors of the Roman) till then continued, but were now wholly subjected (together with Constantinople it self, the Seat of their Empire) unto the Turks, who thus alone possess the whole Eastern Empire unto this day.

And according to this Method of ruining the Empire, the Trumpets are answerably divided by the Holy Ghost.

The four first Trumpets (which are made the lesser Evils and Miseries) are the Wars of the Goths and Vandals, in four several Incursions, chap. 8. but the two latter, (the fifth and sixth) Trumpets, (which are made the Woe Trumpets, chap. 8. vers. last. chap. 9. 12. chap. 11. 14. and so are distinguish'd from the former) are those Infinite Calamities and Inbondagements which were brought upon the Eastern part of the Empire by the Saracen's Wars and Conquests; who are the Fifth Trumpet; and by the Turks, who are the sixth Trumpet; both longer for Continuance, and greater for Extremity, than the four first, and that by far.

Now to give a little general Light into these Trumpets, as I have done into the Seals. The Trumpets are the Vengeance upon the Empire it self, for the Blood of the Saints therein shed; which therefore was promised unto the Martyrs under the fifth Seal, chap. 6. 11. whose Prayers are here, chap. 8. 5. offered up by Christ, the Time being come, for the Vengeance promised, and so the Trumpets sound.

SECT.

Chap. 5.

SECT. I.

The Exposition of the Eighth Chapter. The four first Trumpets signifying the Ruin of the Western Empire.

THE four first Trumpets are chiefly upon the Western Empire extended all over Europe; which was performed by four Steps or Degrees.

The First falling on the Earth, vers. 7.
The Second on the Sea, vers. 8.
The Third on the Rivers, vers. 10.
The Fourth on the Sun, Moon, and Stars, vers. 12.

You must remember (as before was said) that Kingdoms and Empires are represented in Scripture, by a World that hath Heaven, Earth, Sea, &c. (as Jer. 4. 23.) Wherein,

1. The Earth, and Grass, and Trees thereon, are the lower sort of People, both the Richer and Poorer, as Zech. 11. 2. Howl Fir-Tree, for the Cedar is fallen, because all the Mighty are spoiled: Howl, O ye Oaks of Bashan, for the Forrest of the Vintage is come down.

2. The Sea is the Extent of the Jurisdiction of an Empire or Kingdom over several Dominions. Therefore Rome is said to sit on many Waters, and to arise out of the Sea; which is but the Collection of many Waters; that is, many Nations. The like phrase to which is used of the Babylonish Monarchy over many Kingdoms; they are called Her Sea, Jer. 51. 36. and 44. compared, Therefore thus saith the Lord, Behold, I will plead thy Cause, and take Vengeance for thee, and I will dry up her Sea, and make her Springs dry. And I will punish Bel in Babylon, and will bring forth out of his Mouth that which he hath swallowed up, and the Nations shall not flow together any more unto him, yea, the Wall of Babylon shall fall. And the many Nations under the Assyrian Monarchy are so called, Ezek. 31. 4. The Waters made him great, the Deep set him up on high, with her Rivers running round about his Plants, and sent out her little Rivers unto all the Trees of the field.

3. The Rivers are the several Cities and Magistrates over them, who have a lesser kind of Jurisdiction over those Cities or Provinces.

4. By the Sun, Moon, and the other Stars in this World, are meant the Superior Magistrates, and the Glory of them, as Isa. 13. 10. For the Stars of Heaven, and the Constellations thereof, shall not give their Light: the Sun shall be darkned in his going forth, and the Moon shall not cause her Light to shine. Jer. 15. 9. She that hath born seven, languisheth; she hath given up the Ghost; her Sun is gone down while it is yet day; she hath been ashamed and confounded, and the residue of them will I deliver to the Sword before their Enemies, saith the Lord.

Now these four Trumpets, contain four several Degrees of Calamities by Wars that befel the Western Empire, and the City of Rome, the Head of that Empire, by the Incursions of the Goths and Vandals, from the Year of Christ 400, to the Year 540. Of which,

The First harrowed the Earth, the People of that Empire, as Wars at first used to light most heavy upon them. It proceeded to no further harm, than the burning up of the Trees and Grass, as Rev. 8. 7. The first Angel sounded, and there followed Hail, and Fire mingled with Blood, and they were cast upon the Earth, and the third part of the Trees was burnt up, and all green Grass was burnt up. 1. Trumpet.

The Second fell on the Sea; for the Goths did break off from the Imperial Yoke, those Nations that were subject to it; and gave them opportunity to set up Ten Kingdoms, which remain in Europe to this day, beginning in France, Anno 413; and by 450, all the Ten were up, (as the Chronicles shew). And this renting of the Kingdoms from it, with the burning of that great Mountain, the sacking of Rome it self (which, as Babylon of old, Jer. 51. 25. is called a de- 2. Trumpet.

PART I.

ſtroying Mountain, as overſhadowing all Cities; and her Sacking by Cyrus, is there called the burning of the Mountain; ſo this ſpoiling and ſacking of Rome by Allaricus King of the Goths, Anno 410.) is called the burning of the Mountain, Chap. 8. 8. And the ſecond Angel ſounded; and as it were a great Mountain burning with Fire, was caſt into the Sea, and the third part of the Sea became Blood.

3. Trumpet. The Third Trumpet produceth the Fall of that bright Star, which is called a great Star burning as a Lamp, that is, a Blazing-Star, or Comet, which was the utter extinguiſhing and putting down of Emperors, Anno 476. who ceaſed in Auguſtulus, whoſe Fall is expreſs'd like that of the King of Babel's, Iſa. 14. 12. How art thou fallen from Heaven, O Lucifer (or Morning Star) Son of the Morning! Which Prince, upon his Fall, hath his Name given him, Wormwood, for that he was a Prince of Bitterneſs and Sorrows. And together with him, many Provincial Cities and Magiſtrates (which are called Rivers and Fountains) had their Dignity taken from them; and this is the Third Trumpet, verſ. 10, 11. And the third Angel ſounded, and there fell a great Star from Heaven, burning as it were a Lamp, and it fell upon the third part of the Rivers, and upon the Fountains of Waters: And the Name of the Star is called Wormwood, and the third part of the Waters became Wormwood, and many Men died of the Waters, becauſe they were made bitter.

4. Trumpet. Rome now being in the Hands of the Goths, was the Seat of thoſe Kings that won it, who yet conſerved in it the Senators, Conſuls, and Supream Magiſtrates, in their ancient Glory. But then comes the Fourth Trumpet, (verſ. 12. And the fourth Angel ſounded, and the third part of the Sun was ſmitten, and the third part of the Moon, and the third part of the Stars, ſo as the third part of them was darkned, and the Day ſhone not for a third part of it, and the Night likewiſe) and this totally deprives this City of Rome of her ancient form of Government, under Conſuls, Senators, &c. with the Glory and Majeſty of which it had ſhined many hundred Years, before ever the Imperial Power was placed over it; and therefore that Government is here called the Sun, &c. becauſe of the Glory and Majeſty of that State, under which it had won to it ſelf the Monarchy of the World; which Ancient Government had ſtill continued under the Emperors, but was now wholly and utterly ſubverted; and this was done in the laſt War, Anno 542. Here was the Glory of the Weſtern Empire and Rome utterly extinguiſhed, but that the Pope (whom you ſhall find in the 13*th* Chapter, when we come to the Book-Prophecy) obtains a Power there (though upon another Title than theſe Emperors had) over theſe Ten Kingdoms, and builds up another Rome upon the Ruins of the Old, and ſo poſſeſſeth the Seat of the former Beaſt, the Empire. But becauſe the Title he pretends, is the Title of the Church, although a falſe one; therefore his Story comes not in in this Seal-Prophecy, but in the Church-Prophecies, chap. 13.

But theſe four Trumpets that fall upon the Weſt, are but leſſer Evils in reſpect of thoſe that are to fall upon the Eaſtern Part, which during all theſe Alterations in the Weſt, ſtands entire and whole, profeſſing the Chriſtian Faith. The other two Trumpets, which are their Portion (chap. 9.) do, for continuance, and extremity of Calamities, infinitely exceed the other; and therefore they have this Preface to them, chap. 8. 17. [Woe, woe, woe, to the Inhabitants of the Earth, by reaſon of the Voices of the other Trumpets that are yet to ſound]; for ſo God ordered it, (as his manner is) that that Eaſtern Part, ſtanding longeſt, ſhould be reſerved unto the ſorer Puniſhment.

SECT.

SECT. II.

The Expoſition of the Ninth Chapter. The Fifth and Sixth Trumpets betoken the Ruin of the Eaſtern Empire, which was firſt broken by the Saracens, and at laſt utterly deſtroyed by the Turks, Anno Domini 1453.

HEre the Fifth Trumpet ſounds, which produceth the falling of a Star from Heaven, which opens the Bottomleſs Pit, and lets out Smoak as out of a Furnace, which darkens the Sun and Air, and lets out an innumerable company of Locuſts. Whoſe cruel Deſcription you have, verſ. 7, 8, 9, 10. And the ſhapes of the Locuſts were like unto Horſes prepared unto Battel, and on their Heads were as it were Crowns like Gold, and their Faces were as the Faces of Men; And they had Hair as the Hair of Women, and their Teeth were as the Teeth of Lions. And they had Breſt-plates, as it were Breſt-plates of Iron, and the ſound of their Wings, was as the ſound of Chariots of many Horſes running to Battel. And they had Tails like unto Scorpions, and there were Stings in their Tails; and their Power was to hurt Men five months. Who torment Men ſo, that they ſhall ſeek Death, but ſhall not find it; ſuch ſhall be the Calamities of thoſe Times. By all which is ſet out the bringing in of Mahumetaniſm, the greateſt Impoſture that ever the World knew; which darkens the Sun and Air, by putting out the Light of Chriſtian Profeſſion. And this was done by Mahomet, who is that Star that fell from the Profeſſion of Chriſtianity, and opened Hell to bring forth that damned Religion of his, making himſelf the Prophet of God. Unto whom an innumerable Company of Arabians, his Country-men (who are here called Locuſts for their Multitudes, as the Midianites and Amalekites are alſo called, Judg. 7. 12.) did cleave, and ſet him up as King. (verſ. 11. And they had a King over them, which is the Angel of the Bottomleſs Pit, whoſe Name in the Hebrew Tongue is Abaddon, but in the Greek Tongue hath his Name Apollyon) wringing from out of the hands of the Eaſtern Empire, Arabia, Egypt, Aſſyria, Armenia, and much of Aſia the Leſs; and extending their Dominion further, over Perſia, Eaſt India, and a great part of Africa and Spain; they became almoſt as great an Empire as that of Rome had been, although this Dominion of Mahomet extended another way; yet withal poſſeſſing the one half of the Eaſtern Empire: Only they were bidden by God not to hurt the Servants of God ſealed in their Foreheads (ver. 4.) for God had ſome true Believers in that part of the Eaſtern Empire, who yet remained Chriſtian; and among them God had ſome alſo whom you read to have been before-hand ſealed, (chap. 7. 3. Saying, Hurt not the Earth, neither the Sea, nor the Trees, till we have ſealed the Servants of our God in their Foreheads) e're that any Trumpets blew; ſuch was God's care to prevent all hurt unto them, (of which I ſhall afterwards particularly ſpeak); And this Kingdom began to be ſet up, Anno 630, and continued many hundred Years. 5. Trumpet.

Then ſucceeds the Sixth Trumpet, which is the ſecond Wo Trumpet, and ordained to bring Calamities on the other part of the Eaſtern Empire, which was left ſtanding ſtill under the Succeſſors of the Roman Monarchy, and profeſſing the Chriſtian Religion in Aſia the Leſs, and in Greece, known commonly in Hiſtorians by the Name of the Empire of Greece; to Ruin which, God had ready prepared four Angels, with four ſeveral Armies of Horſemen, which amounted to 200000000, (as chap. 9. 14, 15, 16. Saying to the ſixth Angel which had the Trumpet, Looſe the four Angels which are bound in the great River Euphrates. And the four Angels were looſed, which were prepared for an hour, and a day, and a month, and a year, for to ſlay the third part of Men. And the number of the Army of the Horſemen were two hundred thouſand thouſand; and I heard the number of them); which Armies, with the Angels their Leaders (being a long while reſtrained) lay hovering about the Borders of the River Euphrates: Whom the Angel of this Trumpet lets looſe, by the command of God, like ſo many Furies, 6. Trumpet.

to fall upon the laſt part of this Eaſtern Empire remaining; and alſo to conquer thoſe other Dominions, which the Saracens (under the fifth Trumpet) had before over-run. Now according to all the Characters and Foot-Prints which we find in the Turkiſh Stories, no Prophecy doth, or can more punctually deſcribe any Nation or Event, than this doth the Turks, and their Irruption upon the Eaſtern Empire; who when they came firſt out of their Native Country, about the Year 1040 after Chriſt, did ſeat themſelves firſt by the River Euphrates, and were divided into four ſeveral Governments or Kingdoms, known commonly in Hiſtorians by theſe four Names; Firſt Iconian, ſeated at Iconium; the ſecond at Aleppo; the third at Damaſcus; and the fourth at Bagdat, or Babylon, bordering on the River Euphrates. Who having lain hovering thereabouts for the ſpace of 200 Years, did, about the Year of Chriſt 1300, over-run all Natolia, or Aſia the leſs; and joining all into one Kingdom, under Ottoman, (the Fore-father of the preſent great Turk) did not ceaſe till they had won Conſtantinople it ſelf, and all Greece, the Empire of which they put down, (which was now the only Relict of the Ancient Roman Empire) and this in the Year 1453, (which is 186 Years ſince*) who poſſeſs that whole Eaſtern Empire unto this day; for the Number of the Turk (which is an Hour, a Day, a Month, and a Year) is not yet fulfilled or expired, being by computation 396 Years from his firſt breaking out. The raiſing of the Turkiſh Empire by Ottoman in Aſia the Leſs, was Anno Dom. 1300. Laonicus Chalcocond. de Rebus Turcicis. Lib. 1.

SECT. III.

The Expoſition of the Seventh Chapter, why reſerv'd till after that of the Eighth and Ninth. Who are intended by the 144000 Perſons that were ſealed in their Foreheads.

HAving given you the meaning of the ſix Trumpets, Chap. 8, and 9, I muſt now return to ſhew you the meaning of thoſe 12000 out of every Tribe, in all 144000, which you read of Chap. 7. and to tell you who they are that were there before-hand ſealed. For though God, to ſhew his care, is ſaid to Seal them before theſe Trumpets blew; yet I could not tell you who they were, ſo fitly, until after you ſhould have heard, upon what parts of the World theſe Trumpets chiefly blew.

The Perſons ſealed, are, verſ. 3. called, Servants of God; ſo that they are true Believers: they are alſo called Jews, not that they were ſo by Birth, both for that the Company they grow up into, and of whom theſe are the Predeceſſors, are ſaid to be out of all Nations, Kindreds, and Tongues, verſ. 9. and therefore are of the Gentiles; as alſo becauſe the Jews have generally been hardned all along the Times of this Prophecy, to this day. But the Revelation ſpeaking in the Language of the Old Teſtament, and the Types thereof, calls true Believers [Jews], and [the Iſrael of God]. Gal. 6. 16. And as many as walk according to this Rule, Peace be on them, and Mercy, and upon the Iſrael of God; and Falſe and Idolatrous Chriſtians it calls Gentiles, (as chap. 11. 2. But the Court which is without the Temple, leave out, and meaſure it not; for it is given unto the Gentiles, and the Holy City ſhall they tread under-foot forty and two Months) [Who ſay they are Jews, and are not] that is, profeſs themſelves Chriſtians, and are not, [but do lye] Chap. 3. 9.

Theſe are Numbred up by Thouſands, in alluſion to the Thouſands of Iſrael, as the Phraſe commonly is in Moſes's Writings, (Iſrael's 72 Perſons brought into Egypt being now multiplied by Thouſands) as Numb. 10. and Numb. 31. And theſe are ſaid to be ſealed, in alluſion to that ſealing of the Mourners before the Captivity of Babylon, Ezek. 9. So theſe, before the Miſeries and Captivity of theſe Trumpets, as thoſe that were to be preſerved under them in all Ages. God perſevering by a kind of Miracle (for it is no other to conſider it) in the midſt of of all this Mahumetan Tyranny, both under Turks and Saracens, (in the Eaſtern part of the World) thouſands of true Believers, even 144000, as he did under the Tyranny of Ahab, preſerve 7000 that did not bow the Knee to Baal; and as he did the like Number of 144000, under the like Antichriſtian Tyranny in the Weſt, as in chap. 14. in the Book-Prophecy will appear. Only there, (chap. 14.) they are more roundly in the general ſummed up together to the Number of 144000; whereas here they are only reckoned by twelve ſeveral particular Parcels, 12000 out of the Twelve Tribes; whether to ſhew their more ſcattered and divided Condition, happily alluding to the Twelve Tribes (then when the Apoſtles wrote) ſcattered (as James ſpeaks, Jam. 1. 1.) in thoſe Eaſtern parts; or if not ſo, yet to the Twelve Tribes, as living apart in ſeveral Quarters of the Land of Judea, and not as aſſembled at Hieruſalem in the Temple. So likewiſe theſe dwelling ſcatteredly in ſeveral Nations, which were to be overcome by the Trumpets, not aſſembled in publick Worſhip or Churches, ſuch as were acceptable to God, but remaining ſingle; they are numbred by a ſet Number, to ſhew that they ſhall be few: For this defining of their Number, is in oppoſition to the innumerable Company that are to grow out of them, as verſ. 9. [After this I ſaw a great Multitude which none could number]; and their Number being multiplied by 12, (as their Root) and a 1000, hence it is a long Number, extending in length much further than in breadth; to ſhew, that he ſpeaks not of Chriſtians as in one Age ariſing to this Number, but through many Ages continuing. And they are multiplied by 12, to ſhew their Breed and Kind to be from the Apoſtles, and of the Apoſtolick Faith, (which chap. 21. 14. is made the Myſtery of this Number, And the Wall of the City had twelve Foundations, and in them the Names of the twelve Apoſtles of the Lamb). And they are preſented in one Uniform State during all that Time, even unto the New Hieruſalem: of which, becauſe theſe, and their Succeſſors, are to be made partakers, therefore it is that thoſe Promiſes of the New Jeruſalem, and the repreſentation of it, comes in from the 9th to the end, to ſhew their partaking therein, as the Reward of the great Tribulation they come out of; verſ. 14,15. And I ſaid unto him, Sir, thou knoweſt. And he ſaid unto me, Theſe are they which came out of the great Tribulation, and have waſhed their Robes, and made them white in the Blood of the Lamb. Therefore are they before the Throne of God, and ſerve him day and night in his Temple: and he that ſitteth on the Throne ſhall dwell among them.

Chap. 5.

Now theſe ſeem to be a differing Company, from that 144000 in the 14th Chapter; for thoſe there do not remain till the New Hieruſalem, in that dark and looſe condition, upon Mount Sion; but long before do break forth into a ſeparation from Antichriſt, and ſet up glorious Temples, filled viſibly with the Preſence of God, as Smoak, out of which come the Vials: but theſe continue in one uniform Condition ſtill alike, untill the very approach of the New Hieruſalem, and do then come newly out from under a ſore and long Bondage, (here called great Tribulation) and are preſented as more ſcattered and divided, as being more ſpread over the Face of the Earth, ſingly here and there, and therefore reckoned up by ſeveral Tribes, whereas thoſe there are ſummed up together, only in their total Number they are alike, being but a few both of them, and in like Times of Darkneſs and Deſolation; yet with this difference, that the one continues to the very New Jeruſalem, but the other long before grows up to a glorious Light, and then out-grows that Number.

Now who theſe 144000 are, (out of whom (as being the Predeceſſors of them) do come that innumerable Company, that ſhall, together with the Jews, poſſeſs the New Hieruſalem) is made the enquiry of John, and is one of the Wonders of this Book; which therefore one of the 24 Elders would have John eſpecially to mark and obſerve, as a ſtrange thing, beyond the expectation and imagination of Men, that God ſhould ever take thoſe (ſo numerable a Company) into ſo great a Priviledg, as to be made Deniſons of the New Hieruſalem, and have their Names found there. This you may obſerve, by the Queſtion which the Elder asketh John, to provoke and ſtir up his Obſervation, (verſ. 13.) What are theſe? and whence come they? Thence! where (when you are told) you

PART I. you will ſcarce believe that God ſhould intend this ſo great a Priviledg unto ſuch, even the poor Chriſtian Elect Believers, diſperſedly ſcattered over the Eaſtern parts of the World (the now Turkiſh Dominions) which were anciently called the Eaſtern Empire, and the Churches therein, called the Grecian Churches. And for this, I take the Holy Ghoſt's own deſignation, (and as it were his pointing with the Finger at them) to be my Guide and Warrant for this Interpretation; as alſo the Characters of, and Notes of difference of the 144000 here, and in chap. 14.

1. It is evident, their Sealing here is for their preſervation from hurt, (as verſ. 3. Saying, Hurt not the Earth, neither the Sea, nor the Trees, till we have ſealed the Servants of our God in their Foreheads) from the four Winds that were to be let looſe, (mentioned verſ. 1. And after theſe things, I ſaw four Angels ſtanding on the four Corners of the Earth, holding the four Winds of the Earth, that the Wind ſhould not blow on the Earth, nor on the Sea, nor on any Tree); by which are meant the cruel Blaſts of devaſtating and depopulating Wars of fierce and cruel Nations, daſhing againſt each other, as Winds uſe to do. Thus the Wars that ſcattered Elam or Perſia, (in Jeremy's Prophecy) are expreſſed Jer. 49. 36. And upon Elam will I bring the four Winds from the four Quarters of Heaven, and will ſcatter them towards all thoſe Winds, and there ſhall be no Nation, whither the out-caſts of Elam ſhall not come. Now theſe Wars, or Winds, are all one with the Blaſts of the enſuing Trumpets, (chap. 8. 9.) for to prevent the hurt of theſe Servants of God under them Trumpets is it that theſe are thus aforehand ſealed. Only, what is there particularly expreſſed by Trumpets, is here in general expreſſed by the four Winds. Now then, according to Reaſon, look which of theſe enſuing ſix Trumpets are the foreſt, and bring moſt hurt and danger to the Servants of God, the ſealing of them muſt moſt reſpect the Times, and Plagues of thoſe Trumpets. Now according to the Note of Aggravation, which the Holy Ghoſt himſelf hath put upon the fifth and ſixth Trumpets, is that they are the Væ Tubæ, the Wo Trumpets; ſo chap. 8. 13. And I beheld, and heard an Angel flying through the midſt of Heaven, ſaying with a loud Voice, Wo, wo, wo to the Inhabitants of the Earth, by reaſon of the other Voices of the Trumpet of the three Angels which are yet to ſound; in reſpect of which the four firſt are but mild and gentle: And then, according to the former Interpretation given, theſe two Wo Trumpets being the over-runnings of the Saracen and Mahumetan Nations, the greateſt Plague in reſpect of outward War and Bondage that ever befel the Chriſtian World; which Trumpets were to be (and have been) for Time, five times double the continuance of the other four Trumpets, for it is already 1000 Years ſince they began; and the other four took up but 200 Years; and for extremity of Bondage, there hath been no compariſon between thoſe four firſt Trumpets, and theſe two latter. The Wars of the Goths indeed, did rather relieve the Servants of God againſt the Flood of Arrian Perſecution, (as chap. 12. 16. And the Earth helped the Woman, and the Earth opened her Mouth, and ſwallowed up the Flood which the Dragon caſt out of his Mouth) although it did break and harrow the Empire. Hence therefore ſurely the Hurt aimed at by God, which theſe 144000 were in danger of, muſt needs in reaſon be from theſe two Trumpets eſpecially; and therefore muſt chiefly reſpect the Elect Chriſtians in the Eaſtern Parts, where theſe Trumpets ſounded; for the Chriſtians in the Weſt were in no danger of them. It muſt therefore reſpect theſe Tribes ſeated among them. Add to this, that even the Winds of ſome of thoſe four firſt Trumpets alſo reached unto great devaſtations of ſome of theſe Eaſtern Parts. And the firſt breaking forth of thoſe Goths and Barbarous Nations, was upon Thrace, Macedon, Theſſaly, and Greece, ruining all the Cities therein, except Athens and Thebes; and then after five Years harrowing the Eaſt, they fell upon the Weſt, but firſt began in the Eaſt. So then, the two firſt, and longeſt, and foreſt, being upon the Eaſtern Chriſtians, and they beginning and ending thus alſo with them; in reaſon, the ſealing of them muſt principally and eminently be intended, according to the proportion that the Trumpets fell upon them; which was ten-fold to what they did upon the Weſtern.

Chap. 5.

2. And as in reaſon it muſt be ſo, ſo the Holy Ghoſt hath declared, that the preſervation from the Hurt of thoſe Mahumetan Invaſions, was the aim of this ſealing thus afore-hand, (ſo great was God's care) and that therefore theſe Servants of God, the 144000 ſealed here, are indeed the Chriſtians of the Eaſt, who were only in danger to be hurt in their Souls by Apoſtacy, through the tyranny of theſe Trumpets. You may read in the 9th Chapter, verſ. 4. that when theſe Saracen Locuſts, under their Ring-leader Mahomet, were firſt let looſe, and had their Commiſſion, that then comes in this Clauſe of Exception, that they ſhould hurt only thoſe Men that were not ſealed. In that therefore then, and not till then, and there only, the mention of this Priviledge of their being ſealed comes in, it manifeſtly argues, that the main and primary intention of the ſealing of this Company, had its place and accompliſhment in Perſons that were under the Blaſts of theſe Locuſts. The Holy Ghoſt hath ſet this as an hand in the Margent, to point at them; and to ſhew, that although in the Viſion their ſealing comes in before-hand, (chap. 7.) yet here eſpecially it receives its intended aim and fulfilling, in the real execution of it; as if he had ſaid, Now comes in the Myſtery of the ſealing of thoſe 144000, (chap. 7.) in theſe two Trumpets, the fifth and ſixth. Neither can it be objected, that even the Chriſtians in the Weſt were preſerved from the Hurt of theſe Incurſions; in that theſe Mahumetans were reſtrained from breaking in upon theſe ten Kingdoms; and that ſo they might be meant.

For, 1. the Myſtery of Sealing, notes the ſingling out, and marking of ſome here and there, from the croud of others (deſigned to ruin) by God's ſpecial hand of Providence; even as the Door-Poſts of the Iſraelites were marked, as a Man marks his Sheep when he puts them in among other Droves: And ſo the Mourners going into Captivity with the reſt, were marked: But ſo, not the Servants of God in the Weſt only, but all the Kingdoms of the Weſt ſhould have been ſaid to be ſealed; which is contrary to the Myſtery of Sealing here intended. And therefore it muſt mean God's ſcattered Ones, under the Blaſts of thoſe Trumpets ſcattered (like the twelve Tribes, Jam. 1. 1.) here and there in thoſe Countries, but their Souls preſerved faithful unto Chriſt, maugre all the Mahumetan Seducements or Bondage they were then ſubjected unto.

And, 2. they are ſaid (when they partake of the New Jeruſalem, verſ. 14, 15.) to come out of great Tribulation: and therefore it muſt be meant of ſuch as were not wholly kept free from Mahumetan Incurſions, but were under them, and in great Tribulation by reaſon of them. For (as Forbes well obſerves) that great Tribulation (chap. 7. 14.) muſt needs be the danger of thoſe Locuſts, (chap. 9. 4.) from the Hurt of which (ſo as not to damn their Souls, though afflict them they might) they ſhould be preſerved; (although he indeed interprets both this Tribulation, and the Hurt done by the Locuſts, to be that Antichriſtian Perſecution in the Weſt, but is rather that Tyranny of Mahumetans in the Eaſt.)

Add to all this the many Characters in the Text, that carry it to theſe Eaſtern Chriſtians, affording probable Reaſons that they ſhould be intended: As, Firſt; That the Angel, who ſeals them, is ſaid to aſcend from the Eaſt, (verſ. 2.) or from the riſing of the Sun, (as it is in the Original) as coming up like the Sun when it riſeth, in the Eaſtern Part of the Horizon, or of the World. And his ſtanding there to Seal theſe Chriſtians, manifeſtly thereby draweth our Eyes to the Eaſtern parts of the World, as the place where theſe ſealed Ones are to be found.

And, ſecondly, That they are preſented as a few that may be numbred, and as making up but a few in many Ages (as was ſaid) and living in that condition, even to the very Times of the New Jeruſalem, under great Tribulation, and ſcattered apart like to the twelve Tribes; and that from the Primitive Times, in this uniform condition of Paucity, and Tribulation, and Darkneſs; which (as was obſerved) thoſe 144000, in chap. 14. are not, but do ariſe up to a greater Light and Victory, before the Time of the New Jeruſalem under the

PART I.

Vials: Now how doth this agree with thoſe poor, forlorn, Eaſtern Chriſtians, whoſe Churches have remained corrupt and dark, and overwhelmed with Superſtition and Ignorance under all theſe Times, (and ſo but a few among them Holy) and have been under theſe Mahumetan Tribulations a thouſand Years, the one half of them, and the other half two hundred Years, and continue ſtill to do ſo under the Turks, without any eaſe from Miſery, or reſtoring to Light and Beauty. And yet Chriſt hath had a Company among them, though ſcattered and divided; for ſo they are parted into ſeveral Sects and Companies, as the Grecian and Armenian Chriſtians, &c. And therefore God hath preſerved among them the Knowledg and Profeſſion of Chriſt, and of much more Truth than is in the Roniſh Church (in the dark Times of it) to be found; which God ſanctifies to ſome of them. And in that, according to all the beſt Interpreters, this Turkiſh Tyranny and Tribulation is to continue, even till the New Jeruſalem, (for the Turk is to be overthrown, to make way for the Jews, the Kings of the Eaſt, under the ſixth Vial, and to be deſtroyed by the Seventh); how doth this accord alſo with this, that the ſtate of theſe Eaſtern Saints is repreſented here to conſiſt of ſo few, and thoſe to be under great Tribulation until the Time of the New Jeruſalem, as that which ſhould prove their firſt Deliverance; and when they come into the New Jeruſalem, to be as it were but new come out of that Great Tribulation. And the wonder that is made at this God's gracious dealing with a People, ſo of all Chriſtians forgotten, and not accounted of, (that ever they ſhould be taken into this New Jeruſalem) doth further confirm it: For that the Weſtern Churches, that have born the heat of Antichriſtian Perſecution, and overcome Antichriſt, (and ſhall in the end perfect their Victory) and have ſet up Temples, encreaſing more and more in Light and Glory, even until the New Jeruſalem; that theſe ſhould be made partakers of the New Jeruſalem, is no wonder, no ſtrange thing; for they growing up unto it, it were ſtrange if it ſhould prove otherwiſe: And therefore, chap. 19. 1, &c. we find them (after the Ruin of the Whore) preparing themſelves yet more for the Marriage of the Lamb. But that theſe forlorn Grecians ſhould be taken into it, among whom we ſcarce imagine any Believers at all to be, this might well be made one of the greateſt Wonders of God's richeſt Grace and Mercy, (and hath as much affected my Heart to conſider, ſince the time God led me into the thoughts of it, as any thing through the whole Book) that (as the Prophet ſaith) this Ephraim ſhould be his pleaſant Child, who would have thought! But this is juſt like God, whoſe Ways are unſearchable, and his Works paſt finding out. And therefore one of the Elders ſays here unto John, verſ. 13. (as provoking him to obſerve this Paſſage, as much as any thing in this Book) What are theſe? and whence come they? And John ſays unto him, Thou knoweſt; and he ſaid, Theſe are they who come out of great Tribulation; and indeed the greateſt Tribulation that ever the Servants of God were under.

And there are theſe probable likelyhoods for this alſo, (even according to the courſe of God's Ways and Dealings) for God to chuſe ſuch a People from under ſo great Tribulation, and who are of all the loweſt; and therefore, or for this cauſe (as it is verſ. 14.) to make them partakers of ſo great a Priviledg; this is juſt like God, who loves to do Acts of Mercy, which may juſtly ſet all the World a wondering. And they having born the Heat of the Day, and continued in the Profeſſion of Chriſt as well as we; reaſon is, they ſhould be recompenced, and have their Penny alſo. And they being ſeated in thoſe very Dominions where the Turk is ſeated, who is to be overthrown by or for the Jews, to make way for them to get poſſeſſion of their own Land, which lieth in thoſe Eaſtern Countries, and in the midſt of thoſe Nations, (who are therefore called Kings of the Eaſt, Chap. 16. 12.); how probable is it therefore that upon the Ruin of the Turks, they ſhall be thus delivered! and that if any Gentiles be partakers of the Jew's Priviledg, thoſe Chriſtian Gentiles ſhould, who have been oppreſſed by this their Common Enemy, and who dwell and inhabit in Countries near, and about the Land of the Jews; eſpecially if their Land ſhall be made (as is thought by ſome) the chief Seat of that Fifth Monarchy; then ſurely, theſe Nations that are neareſt them, are like moſt to partake take the Benefit and Light of it; which alſo the Prophets have foretold, that the Gentiles (yea, and theſe Gentiles) ſhould walk in. Chap. 5.

Laſtly; If mention be not made of the Grecian Churches here in this place, then there is none, or ſcarce any (according to the courſe of the beſt Interpreters) in all this Book. The Book-Prophecy is wholly taken up with the ſtate of the Weſtern Churches oppoſing Antichriſt, (chap. 14,15,16,17,18,19.) as being they whom God means chiefly to uſe for the ruining of that great Antichriſt, among whom therefore he hath continued the Knowledg of Chriſt, and the Face of Churches in the greateſt Power and Purity; and therefore the Revelaton ſpeaks moſt of them. But yet, there having been a continuance of the Profeſſion of the Chriſtian Name in thoſe Grecian and Armenian Churches, even from the Primitive Times; and at this day their number amounting to as many as the Profeſſors in Europe do, notwithſtanding Mahumetan Incurſions: can we think that God hath paſſed them over in ſilence in this Book? ſurely no. Seeing therefore that the Book-Prophecy is taken up with the Weſtern Oppoſitions, to the great Antichriſt of the Weſt; hence, moſt fitly, in this Seal-Prophecy, (wherein the Mahumetan Oppreſſors bear ſo great a part) does come in, the Repreſentation of the State of thoſe Eaſtern Chriſtians under Mahomet, Chriſt ſo keeping poſſeſſion, both in the Eaſt and Weſt. And the Event hath been according to the Prophecy: True Believers have been, and yet are continued among them, even as our Eyes may read in all Stories of thoſe Eaſtern Parts, and our Ears have heard the Report of to this day: whoſe Confeſſion of Faith you may read, being printed in English, Anno 1629. ſet forth by Cyril the preſent Patriarch of Conſtantinople: and you may, with joy, find it in all Fundamental Points, as our own Confeſſion is. See alſo Field of the Church, Book 3. Chap. 1, 2, 3, and 5.

SECT. IV.

A ſhort view of the Tenth and Eleventh Chapters. The Ends for which the Mighty Angel, i. e. Chriſt, deſcended from Heaven. The Seal-Prophecy being cloſed, a New Prophecy is given, which begins at the Twelfth Chapter.

THus the Seal-Prophecy, under the Viſions of theſe Seals and Trumpets, having run over the Story of all Times, which concern the Ruin of the Roman Empire downward, from Chriſt's Time even to our Days, (for the Miſeries of the ſixth Trumpet ſtill continue, and ſhall laſt till near the Time of the ſeventh Trumpet, which is to bring in the Kingdom of Chriſt, Chap. 11. verſ. 14, 15. with whoſe ſounding, this firſt Seal-Prophecy, (as do all Kingdoms and Times) ends. Jeſus Chriſt therefore, in the likeneſs of a Mighty Angel, comes down from Heaven; and that to a double end:

Firſt, To give the World and the Church warning by an Oath, that now Time ſhould be no longer, but till this Wo of the ſixth Trumpet (that is, the Turks Dominion) ſhould expire and paſs away, (as his Speeches in the 10*th* Chapter, verſ. 6, 7. And ſware by Him that liveth for ever and ever, who created Heaven, and the Things that therein are; and the Earth, and the Things that therein are; and the Sea, and the Things which are therein, that there ſhould be Time no longer. But in the Days of the Voice of the ſeventh Angel, when he ſhall begin to ſound, the Myſtery of God ſhould be finiſhed, as he hath declared to his Servants the Prophets. And in the 11*th* Chapter, verſ. 14,15. compared together do ſhew; The ſecond Wo is paſt, and behold, the third Wo cometh quickly. And the ſeventh Angel ſounded, and there were great Voices in Heaven, ſaying, The Kingdoms of this World

PART I. World, are become the Kingdoms of our Lord, and of his Chriſt, and he ſhall reign for ever and ever.

And ſecondly, To give withal a New Prophecy, this Seal-Prophecy being thus ended. Wherefore he now comēs with the Book open in his Hand, which chap. 5. John ſaw ſealed, the Seals being now taken off, and the Viſions of them already paſt; which Book contains another diſtinct Prophecy to be given anew unto John, which therefore he is bidden to eat, (as Ezekiel of old was) and he ſhould be enabled to receive and write a New Prophecy, (as appears chap. 10. verſ. 9, 11. And I went unto the Angel, and ſaid unto him, Give me the little Book. And he ſaid unto me, Take it, and eat it up, and it ſhall make thy Belly bitter, but it ſhall be in thy Mouth ſweet as Hony. And he ſaid unto me, Thou muſt propheſy again before many Peoples, and Nations, and Tongues, and Kings); which new entire Prophecy begins chap. 12. after this Angel had further, by word of Mouth, a while diſcourſed what ſhould be the State and Face of his pureſt Churches in the Weſtern part, (verſ. 1, & 2.) in thoſe laſt days, to which this Seal-Prophecy had brought John, namely, the Times immediately, or not many Years before that ſeventh Trumpet was to bring in his Kingdom; and after that this Angel had fore-warned thoſe Churches of a great and ſore Conflict which they were to have with Antichriſt towards the end of all; out of which they ſhould riſe again; and then comes the end of Antichriſt, and of the Turk alſo. After he had given all this as a ſignal or warning to the Church when the End ſhould be (all which he doth chap. 11. 1. and from verſ. 7, to the 14.); then (I ſay, after that ſhort digreſſion made by this Angel (Chriſt) who came principally to give John a new compleat Prophecy) doth that new Book-Prophecy begin in new Viſions, (at the 12*th* Chapter) which contains the Fates that ſhould befal the Church in all Ages from Chriſt's Time, as the Seal-Prophecy had done thoſe of the Empire.

CHAP.

CHAP. VI.

Of the Book-Prophecy, that begins at Chap. 12. An Account of the general Design of it.

THE State of the Church from Christ's Time, until the Kingdom of Christ, may be divided into two:

1. The State of the Church during the first 400 Years after Christ, usually called the Primitive Times.
2. The State of the Church during the Times of Antichrist, whom Jesus Christ is to destroy with the brightness of his Coming.

1. The State of the Church, during those first 400 Years, may be divided into its Condition until the Time of Constantine, the first Christian Emperor; and the State of the Church from his Time, under the Arrian Emperors, and others Christian, until the Rise of Antichrist, about an hundred Years after the beginning of Constantine's Reign. These were the two eminent various Conditions of the Church in those first four hundred Years.

2. For the State of the Church during the Times of Antichrist, namely, the Pope, who succeeded the Western Emperor here in Europe, (for of the State of the Church in the Eastern part of the Empire, especially under the Turks and Saracens, you formerly heard in the Seal-Prophecy, chap. 7. and therefore this Book-Prophecy speaks little of it, but (in a manner) only of the Western Church, which now indeed was made the more eminent Stage, as for Antichrist, so for Christ to play his Part upon) this State of the Church in the West (I say) was,

1. Either that of the false pretended Church, whereof Antichrist is and was the Head: Or,
2. The State of the True Church under Antichrist, and during his Time, whereof Jesus Christ is the Head.

Now, answerably to this Division, are the ensuing Chapters to be divided. The 12*th* Chapter shews you the State of the Church under the first four hundred Years. And Chap. 13, 14, &c. shew the State of the Church afterwards, during Antichrist's Times. These are the Divisions of the State of the Church from Christ's Time hitherto.

And, first, This 12*th* Chapter shews the Face of the Church in these Primitive Times, and that under those two fore-mentioned eminent Conditions.

First, As under Heathenish Rome until Constantine's Time, when the Empire turned Christian; from the 1*st* Verse to the 13*th*, under the Vision of a Woman bringing forth a Male Child to rule all Nations; (that is, a Christian Emperor) wherein she is opposed by a Dragon, (the Devil in the power of an Heathenish Emperor, endeavouring to devour her Child).

The Vision and Appearance of this Woman is such, and so glorious, as it fits no state of the Church, but that pure and glorious Church of the Primitive Times. She is a Woman, weak, yet glorious, as being clothed with the Sun, (the Righteousness of Christ) crowned with a Crown of twelve Stars, (the twelve Apostles); her Head (the first part of that Church) having been honoured with their Preaching, and holding forth the Light of their Doctrine; She had the Moon under her Feet, she was above the World, and the rage of Heathenish

PART I. Heatheniſh Perſecution, (for they loved not their Lives unto the Death); and, as a Woman, all that while labouring in ſore Travail, under ten ſore Throws of Perſecution, yet labouring with God, Day and Night, in Hopes and Prayers in the end to bring forth, and obtain Chriſtian Emperors that ſhould ſet Chriſt in the Throne to Rule with them, and throw down Heatheniſm from the Imperial Throne, in which the Devil ruled; the Empire being all that while under the Heatheniſh Throne of Satan, and is therefore repreſented under a Dragon having ſeven Heads and ten Horns, which are ever in this Book the Character of the Roman Empire. And it is now called the Dragon, becauſe Satan did openly and viſibly act it. Now the throwing down the Dragon from the Throne, (which was his Heaven, and where he was worſhipp'd as God) doth this Woman in the end obtain, and prevails through the help of Michael (namely Jeſus Chriſt) and his Angels, (the Apoſtles and Preachers of their Goſpel.)

And then, ſecondly, The State of the True Church, when the Roman World was now turned Chriſtian, for the firſt hundred Years after Conſtantine; which Church was alſo perſecuted by Arrian Emperors, though Chriſtians, and was like to have been ruined by the multitude of Carnal Profeſſors; in ſo much as ſhe is preſented, as haſting to fly into a Wilderneſs; that is, into an hidden retired Condition; and in her flight, hath a Flood of Arrian Perſecution ſent after her, to drown her, but that the Earth, the Goths and Vandals (whom you heard of under the firſt Trumpet) came in accidentally, by God's Providence, and helped her, by breaking the Arrian Faction; which is the ſwallowing up the Flood. (The Arrians, though they profeſs'd Chriſt, yet they denied him to be God; into which Hereſy the whole Empire fell, and perſecuted the Church for profeſſing the contrary, as much as ever the Heathen Emperors had done.) And this State of the Church you have deſcribed from the 13*th* Verſe, to the end of the 12*th* Chapter.

CHAP. VII.

The Exposition of Chap. 13. in which is set forth the State of the False Church under Antichrist. What his Name, and the Number of his Name denotes to us. A short account of the Time which some fix for his Fall.

THE State of the Church, and her Conflicts with Satan the first four hundred Years, being thus described chap. 12. in the following Chapters is set forth the State of the Church from that Time, during the Times of Antichrist; all which Time there was, and is, both his false Antichristian Church, and the True Church under him, running along together. Now the Description of Antichrist (the Pope) and his False Church, in his Rise, Power, Greatness, and extent of his Dominions, and of the Company that should cleave to him, is set forth in the Visions of the 13*th* Chapter: which afterwards in the 17*th* Chapter, the Holy Ghost himself interprets and makes a Comment on. And then the opposite Company of the True Church, who have the Lamb for their Head, are described in the 14*th* Chapter; and that in all those several States and Conditions, which during all that Time they should run under; and this from the first Rise of Antichrist, until these very Times wherein we live; with which (I take it) the Visions of that 14*th* Chapter do end.

First, for Antichrist and his Church in the 13*th* Chapter; and this set forth unto us under the Vision of a Two-fold Beast, which points at the Pope according to his double pretended Claim of Power and Headship in the Church; Which is,

1. Temporal; which he claims over all Kings and Kingdoms, to Depose and Excommunicate them and their Subjects at his pleasure. Unto which the Ten Kings and Kingdoms of Europe (into which the Western Empire was now by the Goths reduced) did tacitly, and with one consent, submit themselves, and gave their Power up, (as you may read it interpreted, chap. 17. from vers. 12, to 17.) And so, the Pope, together with the Body of these ten Kingdoms joining into one, whereof he becomes the Head, is that first Beast with ten Horns, described in this 13*th* Chapter, from vers. 1, to 11; which New Beast is a true Image of the former Roman Monarchy in the 12*th* Chapter; which being wounded and slain in the Emperor's being Deposed, is healed and restored to Life again in this Beast; and so, the Roman Monarchy comes still to continue, though under another Head, namely, the Pope.

2. Besides this Temporal Power which he receives from the Kings of these ten Kingdoms, (who in that respect do together with him make up one Beast); He and his Clergy do claim a Spiritual Power of Binding and Loosing, of pardoning Sins, and of cursing Men to Hell, which is peculiar to Christ alone. And in that respect, he, and the Body of his False Clergy with him, do make up another Beast, having two Horns like a Lamb, as exercising that Spiritual Power of Christ; for which, they and he are properly called Antichrist. And this Description you have of him from vers. 11. to the end of this 13*th* Chapter: He being Head of two Bodies, Ecclesiastical and Temporal, is described under two Beasts. Now this Spiritual Beast (the Pope and his Clergy) is he, who by his lying Doctrines, did perswade the Ten Kings and their Subjects, to subject themselves in one Body under him as their Head; and is said to make the Image of the first Beast, namely, of that Dragon mentioned in the 12*th* Chapter, that is, of the former Heathenish Empire, and the Religion thereof; which is therefore said to live again.

For,

PART I.

For, 1. both these Kingdoms becoming one under the Pope as their Head, are in their very Form of Government, the Image of the Empire under one Emperor formerly; and so, the Roman Monarchy, in the joining of these ten Kingdoms under one Head, the Pope, may be said still to continue.

But besides, 2. This new Beast is called the Image of the first Beast, not simply in respect of like Form of Government and Tyranny; but further, in a Religious respect, in that the Pope and his Clergy do mould the Christian Religion (which now they profess) and the Worship thereof, into a true likeness and conformity to the Heathenish Religion, which the Empire before was framed unto. For all the Popish Worship is but the translating of those Ceremonies, wherewith those False Gods, Jupiter, Apollo, &c. (who were cast down under the sixth Seal) were worshipped, into Religious Ceremonies in their Worship, wherewith they worship Christ and his Saints. So as, were any of the ancient Heathen Romans now alive, and should come into their Assemblies, and behold their Priests in White, their Processions, their Sprinkling with Holy Water, their Altars, Tapers, Images of Saints departed, and their worship of them; their Pontifex Maximus, or Great Bishop and High Priest, &c. they would cry out, and say, This is just our old Roman Heathenish Religion; only Jupiter is turned into Christ, and the Priests of the God's of old, into Popish Bishops; and our Ancient Gods, Mars, Janus, Æsculapius, &c. (who were Men departed) are changed for Saints departed: So that the Life of the old Religion remains still, tho there be a change of the Gods worshipped. Thus, as Babel of old made an Image, and put to death all that would not fall down before it; so hath Mystical Babylon (for to that Babel, and to that Image, is the Allusion) set up an Image of the old Heathenish Religion and Worship, and upon the like Penalty enjoyns the Adoration of this Image, and a conformity in Worship, to all the Subjects of these ten Kingdoms.

Now the Company that cleave unto this Beast, and may more or less be esteemed the Followers of him, are (as Mr. Brightman hath well observed upon vers. 16, 17.) distingnished into three Ranks of Men in several Degrees, some more, some less, acknowledging or cleaving to him, and to this his Image and Worship. Some receive his Mark or Character; Others his Name only; Others the Number of his Name: But so, as those who will not receive or submit to one of these, more or less, during the Time that is allotted him to Reign, may not buy nor sell, that is, cannot subsist or abide in these his allotted Dominions. This receiving of a Mark, &c. is a Similitude drawn from the old Roman Custom, which was to print on the Forehead of Servants, the Names of their Masters; and on the Hands of Souldiers, the Names of their Emperors or Generals. So these Men that do belong unto this Great Lord, and that are of his Faction, do accordingly more or less receive that, whereby they may be known to be his.

1. Some receive his Character, as all Priests and Religious Persons do, whether they be Jesuits or others, who are this Grand Seignieur's Janisaries, his sworn Soldiers and Prætorian Band. Their Doctrine is, that a Man entred into Holy Orders, doth, by his Ordination, receive an indelible Character, a secret invisible Stamp or Impress, which can never be rased out.

2. Others receive his Name; and so though not in Orders under him, yet so cleave to him and his Worship, as themselves openly profess that they are his, by suffering themselves to be called by his Name, which is that whereby they own him. Thus as he is called Papa (the Pope) they profess themselves Papists, or to be of the Pope as their Head. And as he is called Pontifex, they are called Pontificii. And even as Christ is called the High Priest of our Profession, (Heb. 3. 2.) and so we accordingly called Christians from the Profession of him: so the Pope being their Pontifex, or High-Priest of their Profession, they, to shew so much, do hold forth the Profession of him, by taking his very Name, and in all things fully subjecting themselves unto him as his Sons.

But now, 3. what should be meant by the Number of his Name; that Mr. Brightman carries rightly to a Company taking part with him, by a more remote kind of Subjection: but he not knowing well whom to fasten it upon, brings brings in the poor Grecians, that are Strangers unto him, and out of the Dominion of any of his Ten Kingdoms; who although they renounced all acknowledgment of the Pope for their Head for many hundred Years; yet were at laſt, through ſleights, and the baſeneſs of one of their Emperors, together with the Conqueſt that the Europeans made of Conſtantinople for a while, brought to yield a ſubjection thus far, as to acknowledg him for their Head, and ſo were called Latins, or of the Profeſſion of the Latin Church, (which Name I find ſome to this day (that are Popiſh Chriſtians among the Greeks) to be called by, by way of diſtinction from the other) and ſo received (ſays he) the Number of his Name λατεῖνος, Latinus; the Numeral Letters whereof (in the Greek Tongue) make 666, the Number that follows in the laſt Verſe of this Chapter. But this forced Subjection of the Grecians ſo remote, as it might be intended (for thoſe more Ancient Times) yet withal I think, that it is not only or principally meant:

Firſt, Becauſe theſe Grecian Chriſtians are not Inhabitants within the Juriſdiction of thoſe Ten Kingdoms of Europe, the Subjects whereof are mainly intended, as being thoſe Inhabiters of the Earth, that ſhould be the Worſhippers of this Beaſt, and cleavers unto him, (verſ. 8, & 14.) and ſo of them, and among them, muſt be found this Number of his Name, as well as thoſe that receive his Name.

And, ſecondly, becauſe the Chriſtians in the Weſt, who aſſiſt the pouring forth the Vials, are as well ſaid (ſome of them) to overcome the Number of his Name, as (others of them do) his Image, or Idolatrous Worſhip, or his Character of lying Prieſts, or the Beaſt himſelf; ſo chap. 15. 2. I take it therefore, that this Number of his Name muſt be found in Europe, in ſome of theſe ten Kingdoms, where that Company are that pour out the Vials.

Now take the Times of Popery before the Reformation (that is, afore the Time that Proteſtant Kingdoms did firſt begin to caſt off the Pope) and there were none that were ſuffered to have ſuch a remiſs (no nor any leſſer) kind of owning the Beaſt, but muſt all (as they did) receive his Mark, or his Name, and be profeſſed Papiſts, coming to Maſs, acknowledging the Pope, and worſhipping his Image; or they might not buy and ſell, they might not live quietly as others did. Therefore theſe that receive the Number of his Name, muſt be ſome Generation of Men riſen up ſince, and that alſo within thoſe Kingdoms (ſome of them) that have renounced the Pope: For within the Popiſh Dominions (unto this Day) either the Inquiſition ſuffers none to profeſs leſs than the receiving his Name at leaſt; or in others, thoſe that are of Papiſts the moſt moderate, yet receive the Name of the Beaſt at leaſt, and ſo, more than the Number of his Name. But this Number of his Name ſeems to be a Company that proceed not ſo far as to receive his Character, profeſſing themſelves to be Prieſts of Rome, nor to receive his Name; for they do not profeſs themſelves to be Papiſts, and yet are of the Number of his Name; that is, do hold and bring in ſuch Doctrines and Opinions, and ſuch Rites in Worſhip, as ſhall make all Men reckon, account, or number them among Papiſts in Heart and Affection; and ſo, they are of the Number of his Name, that is, in account ſuch, they behave themſelves ſo as they are, and deſerve to be accounted and eſteemed Papiſts, and to aim at Popery, in the Judgment of all Orthodox and Reformed Proteſtants: and that juſtly, for although their Profeſſion deny it, yet when their Actions, and their corrupting of Doctrine and Worſhip ſhall ſpeak it to all Men's Conſciences, they cannot but judg that the Pope, and the fear of him, is before their Eyes, (as David ſpeaks of wicked Men.) And as thoſe in Titus, that profeſs they know God, yet in their Works deny him, are juſtly accounted Atheiſts; ſo thoſe that ſhall profeſs the Reformed Religion, yet in all their Practices, and under-hand Policies, depreſs it, and advance the Popiſh Party, are juſtly to be accounted Papiſts, and to have received the Number of his Name.

The phraſe, [Number of a Name] is not only taken for a Name conſiſting of Numeral Letters, and ſo, not only for Number Arithmetical; but the word [Number] is in many Languages put for the Account, Reckoning, or Eſteem, that is commonly had of Men; as in Latin we ſay, He is one nullius Numeri, of no Number, or Account; and ſo among the Grecians, ἐν πολέμῳ ἐναρίθμιος, is uſed by Homer, for one in great Account in War, being numbred or eſteemed a Souldier.

PART I.

So then, Number of a Name, is a common Eſteem or Account to be ſuch or ſuch an One; and ſo the Number of the Beaſt's Name here, is the common repute or eſteem to be a Papiſt, procured through under-hand advancing of the Popiſh Cauſe. It being therefore ſpoken in a diſtinct and lower degree from receiving his Name or his Mark, (which note out an open Profeſſion) doth yet neceſſarily import ſo much, inclining and cleaving to him (though ſecretly) as ſhall deſerve that account and repute to be ſo numbred, as being indeed tacitely and in Heart, as truly of his Company, as thoſe that receive his Name. Now if in opening the meaning of the Holy Ghoſt in the Phraſe here, this Deſcription ſhall ſeem to the Life to picture out a Generation of ſuch kind of Popiſh Perſons as theſe in any (even the moſt Famous) of the Reformed Churches, certainly there will not want good ground for it: for though they, with an impudent fore-head, renounce the Pope's Character, and the Name of Papiſts, and will by no means be called Prieſts of Baal, (though Prieſts they affect to be called) but boaſt themſelves to be of the Reformation, and oppoſites to the Papal Faction; yet with as much impudence do they bring in an Image of Popiſh Worſhip and Ceremonies, adding to ſome old Limbs, never caſt out, other ſubſtantial parts, of Altars, Cruciſixes, Second Service, and the like, ſo to make up a full likeneſs in the Publick Service, to that of the Popiſh Church: they bring in the Carkaſs firſt, which may afterwards be inſpired with the ſame Opinions. And all this, not as Popery, or with the annexion of Popiſh Idolatrous Opinions, but upon ſuch grounds only, as upon which Proteſtants themſelves have continued ſome other Ceremonies. And as in Worſhip, ſo in Doctrine, they ſeek to bring in a Preſence in the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper, beyond that which is Spiritual, to Faith, which yet is not Popiſh Tranſubſtantiation; a Power in Prieſts to forgive Sins, beyond that which is declarative, yet not that which Maſs-Prieſts arrogate: Juſtification by Works, yet not ſo groſly as in the way of Popiſh-Merit, but as a Condition of the Goſpel as well as Faith; and many the like to theſe; thus truly ſetting up an Image of Old Popery in a Proteſtant Reformed Way, even as Popery is an Image of Heatheniſh Worſhip in a Chriſtian Way. Say theſe Men what they will, that they hold not of the Pope, nor any way intend him, or the introducing of his Religion into theſe Churches, yet their Actions do (and cannot but) make all Men number them as ſuch; and therefore we ſay, They have gained that eſteem at Home and Abroad in all the Churches: and it is no more than what the Holy Ghoſt propheſied of, who hath fitted them with a Deſcription ſo Characteriſtical, as nothing is more like them than this of theſe here, who are ſaid to receive the Number of his Name. And they doing this in a way of Apoſtacy from their former Profeſſion and Religion in which they were trained up, and in a Church ſo full of Spiritual Light, where God hath more Witneſſes than in all the reſt of the Churches, and with an intention and conſpiracy in the end to make way for the Beaſt, (this going before, as the Twi-light doth ſerve to uſher in Darkneſs) therefore the Holy Ghoſt thought them worthy of this Character, (in this Prophecy) and of a diſcovery of them unto whom they do belong; eſpecially ſeeing they would ſo profeſſedly deny it. And though haply but in one of the ten Kingdoms, (although the Lutherans elſe-where look very like this Deſcription alſo); yet ſeeing they were to grow ſo potent a Faction, as to have power to hinder the (buying and ſelling) quiet living of others amongſt them, who will not receive this Worſhip and Doctrine, (which is a new refined Popery) and with it the Number of his Name; that is, thoſe Opinions and Practices which do deſerve that eſteem. And further, becauſe they were to be the Pope's laſt Champions before his Fall, whom thoſe that are the true Saints, (of whom the greateſt Number in the laſt Age before the Pope's Ruin, is in, or belonging to that one Kingdom) are to encounter and overcome, before the ruin of Rome; therefore the Holy Ghoſt thought not fit to leave ſuch a Company out of the Beaſt's Number and Followers; and that alſo, although they were to continue but a ſhort time; for the Doom of these Men we have in another Prophecy, (as their Description also) 2 Tim. 3. from the 1*st* verse to the 10*th*, the Prophecy there being of a Generation of Men to arise in the last Days, (the Papists rising is attributed to the Latter Days, in 1 Tim. 4. chap. but the rise of these to the last of the last Days) who shall set themselves principally against the Power and Spirit of True Worship, and set up a Form or Image instead of it, vers. 5. but their Doom is, (vers. 9.) These shall proceed no further, they shall have a stop; and their Folly, and Madness, and Hypocrisy (to attempt to bring in Popery with denying it; and when it is going down, then to build this Babel again) shall appear to all Men; and being discovered, will be their overthrow: but notwithstanding they must proceed further than as yet they have done, even to the killing of the Witnesses in that Kingdom, or tenth part of the City, (as chap. 11. will shew, when in its due order it shall be opened). And because these last Champions of the Beast, and Healers of the Wound given him, should come in the last Days of all, they are therefore last named, and are said to be last overcome by the Witnesses and pourers forth of the Vials, as chap. 15. 2. Chap. 7.

Doom

There is but one seeming Objection or Difficulty in this Interpretation; and that is, That in the next verse the number of the Beast is made 666.

But the Answer and Solution is, That the Number of his Name in this Verse is one thing, and the Number of the Beast in the last Verse is another. It is not said, that the Number of his Name is 666, but the Number of the Beast, which betokeneth another thing, (as we shall presently see) only the Holy Ghost, by a wise Transition, passeth from the mention of one, unto the other, as agreeing in Phrase of Speech, yet differing in Sense; which is frequent in Scripture, and (particularly) in this Book, as Chap. 22. vers. 17. The Spirit and the Bride say [Come] as speaking unto Christ to come to Judgment quickly, (as vers. 20.) but in the following words [Let him that is athirst [come]; there the word [come] is spoken of the coming of a Soul unto Christ, (by believing) as unto the Waters of Life. Even so the Number of the Beast, and the Number of his Name, are here mentioned, the one upon occasion of the other, because of the affinity of the Phrase in Speech; yet to a differing Sense.

Now the Number of the Beast in the last Verse, is the Time or Term of his ending; which is spoken in reference to the Time allotted him for his reigning, vers. 5. which is to be (as there) 42 Months; which counting thirty Days to a Month, according to the Egyptian Account, (which is the Account of this Spiritual Egypt) is one thousand two hundred and sixty Years from his first rising, (being the same space that the Church hath to lie hid in the Wilderness, chap. 12. 6. which though she began to hasten into from Constantine's Time; yet she first began to enter into her desolate Condition, wherein she still remains.) But then, when the Pope's Power began to rise, and during the same space of 1260 Years, the Witnesses are said to prophesy in Sack-cloth, chap. 11. 3. that is, in a mourning and mean condition; for the eminent Professors of the Truth, and opposers of the Beast, who with their Prophecy do feed the Church in the Wilderness all that while, (as Chap. 12. 6.) these are the two Witnesses, Chap. 11. 3. Which dates of Time, both of the Witnesses casting off their Sack-cloth, the Woman's coming out of the Wilderness, and the Beast's dejection from his Kingdom and Seat (Rome), will all expire about the same Time; which some think will be about the Year 1650, or 1656, which if not the Pope's Ruin, yet the Jew's call, as they say it to be, or (at the farthest) in 1666, to which latter some incline; as thinking it probable, that it may be the meaning of that account mentioned in the last Verse of this 13*th* Chapter, which doth cast up the Number of the Beast; that is, the date and period of his Time and Power, which was given him to continue forty two Months, as vers. 5. which Days shall then be Numbred, that is, finished, (as the phrase is of Old Babylon's ending, Dan. 5. 26. God hath numbred thy Kingdom, and finished it): and this his Number the Holy Ghost hath computed to be in the Year: that according to Man's computation, shall be called, six hundred sixty six. And for the confirmation of this Interpretation, the word [Number] is often put to expreſs Time; the very definition which the Philoſopher makes of Time, is, Numerus motus ſecundum prius & poſterius: it is the Number of Motion. And therefore Johannes Viterbienſis (in his Gloſs upon this place) plainly renders it thus; Numerus eſt illius Tempus, This his Number is his Time. Therefore ſome have made this Number to deſign out the Year of the Beaſt's beginning, or confirmation in his Kingdom, in the Year after Chriſt, 666. But Number, when it is put to ſignify Time, doth not ſo properly ſignify the beginning of it, as the ending of it, when the Number is finiſh'd and made compleat, and caſt up (as I may ſo ſpeak), for then his Time is numbred, and the account of it ſummed, and not before. And therefore Daniel (whoſe phraſe (as whoſe Viſions) this Viſion in this 13*th* Chapter exactly follows) uſeth this phraſe to note out the ending of the Time of a Kingdom, and not the Beginning, [thy Days are numbred]. And (which is ſtrange) Ireneus himſelf, who was the firſt that interpreted this 666, to contain the Numeral Leters of λατεῖνος, as the Name of this Latin Kingdom, does withal ſeem to think, that the end of the Times of the Beaſt, ſhould in a Myſtery be hiddenly contained, (*Lib.*5. adver. Hæreſes, towards the end of the Book) refert hunc Numerum 666, ad ſexies Millenos annos Mundi in quibus (ait) Diabolica malitia conſummabitur. He miſtakes indeed, referring it to the ſixth Thouſand Year of the World, (according to the Old Tradition of the Rabbins, commonly received among the Fathers) but yet in this he agrees that it ſhould ſignify the Time of the Conſummation and ending of the Beaſt's Reign, and the Devil's Malice, as that which is to determine with the end of the World. And I obſerve the Holy Ghoſt puts an eſpecial Wiſdom on it, to reckon this Number; which if it had lain in Numeral Letters only, had been no great point of Wiſdom to have ſuch an Emphaſis put upon it; the like whereof is uſed but once more in this Book, and that in Chap. 17. 9. when the Beaſt, and the Time of his riſing with the Ten Kings, is ſet forth, as there, from the 9*th* to the 12*th* Verſe; and ſo now here, when his Ending is ſpoken of, for this Wiſdom indeed lay in reckoning the Time of his beginning with the Ten Kings: and ſo the Time of his Ending; by computing the whole Time of his Reign 1260 Years. The vulgar Computation of Years kept now in the World, is (as we all know) from the Year of Chriſt's Birth; by an Account from which, we difference one Year from another: And that is the Stile of the whole Chriſtian World, to ſay, ſuch a Year of our Lord, (reckoning from Chriſt). And this Computation is called the Number of a Man, for it is the ordinary vulgar way of reckoning Years, and the meaſure of Time uſed by Men: and therefore ſo called, in that Man doth uſe ſo to number the Years. Even as the meaſure of the Wall of the City, Chap. 21. 17. is ſaid to be 144 Cubits, according to the meaſure of a Man; that is, the ordinary Cubits in uſe with Men, or taken from the proportion of the meaſure of Man's Stature. So here, ſay they, the Beaſt's Year of ending, when his Number ſhall be compleat, will be in the Year, which, according to Man's Computation of the Years from Chriſt, ſhall be ordinarily termed 666. Now the Number of the Thouſand is not mentioned, as in vulgar phraſe among the Greeks and Hebrews, it ſeldom was, neither among other Nations is it ordinarily uſed to this Day; we uſing to ſay, in 88, for 1588. And here eſpecially it was needleſs; for if his Number was to end in a Year, which according to Man's account, ſhould be called 666, it could be no other, according to them, but that of 1666 after Chriſt; for the Year 666 after Chriſt (which is paſt) it could not be, there being not 200 of his Years (allowed him to continue) as then run out; and in the Year 2666, (to come) the Years allotted him, would have been well nigh doubly run out; his Years from his firſt riſing to this his ending being to be but 1260 Years. Now then, according to this their Account, ſo as to end his Time in 1666, his Time of Riſing muſt begin in the Year 406 after Chriſt; and that the Pope's Riſe did about that Time begin, we are not altogether without the Holy Ghoſt's Warrant, who tells us, that the Roman Empire (ſeated at Rome) over the Weſt, muſt begin to be taken away, e're this Man of Sin could be revealed, or come up and appear in the World, 2 Theſſ. 2. 7, 8. And it was the Weſtern Empire which was that which letted, whereof Rome it ſelf was the Head and Seat; and therefore the

Holy

Holy Ghoſt affixeth this Empire to the City of Rome as the Seat of it, which he calleth Seven-headed, in reſpect of her Seven Hills, and ſo meaneth not that Eaſtern Empire, whereof Conſtantinople was the Seat. Now this Weſtern Empire, whoſe Seat was Rome, began then to be taken away, and the firſt foundation of its Ruin laid, when the Goths and Vandals (of whom you heard under the Trumpets) began to break that Empire into theſe Ten Kingdoms; and the beginning of the firſt Kingdom broken off from the Empire, was in the Year 410, the Emperor by Covenant allowing the Goths to ſet up a Kingdom in France. Then was Rome alſo firſt ſack'd and taken by thoſe Barbarous Nations, and firſt loſt her Virginity; and Honorius the Emperor, to recover Rome again, and reſtore it to her former flouriſhing Eſtate, was forced to part with one piece of the Empire, namely France, which was the firſt of all the Ten Kingdoms that were broken off. And in the Year 412, he was forced to grant to the Hunnes to do the like. And Anno 415, he was forced to grant the like to the Goths in Spain. And by the Year 456, all the Ten were up, who gave their Power to the Beaſt. And this punctually agrees with what the Holy Ghoſt ſays more expreſly of the very hour of Antichriſt's Riſing, Chap. 17.12. That the Ten Kings ſhould begin to receive Power as Kings, one hour with the Beaſt, and the Beaſt one hour with them; the Holy Ghoſt reckoning from the beginning of the firſt of theſe Ten Kingdoms, the Riſing of the Beaſt, becauſe therein was laid the firſt Foundation of his Empire over theſe Ten Kingdoms, for they were to ſet him up. And (which is ſtrange) Jerome, who lived in the Times of this firſt Incurſion of theſe Barbarous Nations, and wrote ſo complainingly of it, (who died about the Year 420.) when he ſaw Rome taken, and the Goths obtain pieces of the Weſtern Empire, ſaid, (then in thoſe Times when it was a doing) in his Epiſtle, ad Gerontium, Qui tenebat de medio fit, & non intelligimus Anti-chriſtum appropinquare. He ſeeing the Empire begin to break, ſaid, Antichriſt muſt needs be at hand. Some read, [μετα το δειον] as importing the Riſe of theſe Ten Kingdoms, to be after the Beaſt firſt riſen; which if meant of the Time, when theſe Ten Horns were compleatly grown up, is true; for in Nature the Horns grow up after the Birth of the Beaſt that beareth them. But whether it be after the Beaſt, or with the Beaſt, it was but one hour after the Beaſt, or one hour with the Beaſt; ſtill implying, that both the Riſe of the one, and of the other, were near in Time, and in the ſame Age. And if the Time be reckoned from the very firſt Riſe of that firſt Kingdom in France, granted unto the Goths, Anno 410. it will appear, that it fell out together, or not an hour after the Riſe of that Beaſt, from whoſe Time the Centuriſts and others have made the Birth of the Beaſt to have been, though his Conception were before. And indeed, it ſo happened, through God's Providence (who made all things concur in this one hour) that he who was as then Pope, (namely Innocentius the Firſt, created Pope (as ſome ſay) Anno 404, (ſome 406) began to uſurp and challenge Juriſdiction over all Churches, (as I could out of many Authorities ſhew, but you may ſee it in Simpſon's Hiſtory of the Church, in Engliſh, 2. Book, 5. Century) and did ſet on foot that famous Falſification of the Canons of the Nicene Council, as pretending that they gave theſe Biſhops of Rome that Power; for which, there is an Epiſtle of this Innocentius among the * Epiſtles of Auguſtine, where he writing to Auguſtine, and the reſt of the African Biſhops aſſembled, challengeth Power over all, ex Patrum illorum Inſtitutis, from the Decrees of thoſe Fathers of Nice, which his Succeſſors afterwards proſecuted: ſo that a Copy out of the Authentick Records of that Council, held in the Time of Conſtantine, was ſent for, by which this Falſification was detected. This Man alſo began firſt to arrogate a Power over Princes; for he Excommunicated the Eaſtern Emperor Arcadius (who yet was out of his Juriſdiction) for baniſhing Chryſoſtom; which no Biſhop of Rome before him had ever adventured to do; and this in the Year 407, (the Copy of whoſe Bull of Excommunication is * extant to this Day). In his Time alſo, the Emperor Honorius granted the Clergy an Exemption from Secular Power, and Civil Tribunals; ſo making them a diſtinct Body for the Pope their Head. See here the firſt and ſecond Beaſt (in this Chapter) riſing both together, firſt in this Pope's proud uſurping over Churches and Princes, and then

PART I. then in exempting his Clergy, to make up, and conſtitute that ſecond Beaſt with him as their Spiritual Head; and the Ten Kingdoms which were to conſtitute the firſt Beaſt under the Pope as their Head, then alſo beginning to ariſe.

And thus I have given an Account of their Opinion, who fix the Time of Antichriſt's Fall in 1666; together with the Arguments which they urge to prove it.

CHAP. VIII.

The Expoſition of Chap. 14. wherein the State of the True Church under Antichriſt is deſcribed.

AS in the 13*th* Chapter you have the Falſe Antichriſtian-Church, whereof the Pope is the Head; ſo in this 14*th* Chapter begins the Deſcription of the true Church during the Time of Antichriſt, whereof the Lamb is the Head; which Church is made up of that Seed of the Woman mentioned Chap. 12. laſt; whom, during her lying hid in the Wilderneſs, Satan through Antichriſt's Power did perſecute. Now the ſeveral Conditions of the Church, during thoſe Times of Antichriſt unto this Day, may be reduced to three Heads.

1. The State of True Believers in thoſe darker Times of Popery, when they were mingled with Papiſts, as making no open ſeparation from them, and yet preſerving themſelves pure from much of their Idolatrous Worſhip and Opinions; and this during the ſpace of 700 Years from the Pope's Riſing.

2. The State of the Church, when firſt a Separation began to be made from the Church of Rome, and the Goſpel to be preached from the Year 1100.

3. The State of the Church under the Reformation ſince the Times of Luther and Calvin, for theſe laſt hundred Years.

Into theſe three ſeveral States the Church of God doth eminently fall divided, to the view of any that are ſkilled in Eccleſiaſtick Stories. And theſe three States are lively deciphered in this Chapter.

1. The State of that confuſed Company under Antichriſt his firſt Times, from verſ. 1, to the 6th.

2. The Church's firſt ſeparation from the Company of Antichriſt, in three ſeveral degrees of it, from verſ. 6, to 14.

3. The State of the Reformation ſince Calvin's Time, from verſ. 14, to the end.

Firſt, The State of Believers mingled among Antichriſt's Company, and not ſetting up Churches diſtinct from them under him, though oppoſing the groſſneſs of his Idolatry, and keeping themſelves pure from it. And theſe are ſet forth in Characters ſuitable to that Condition; They are a ſcattered Company of 144000, joining themſelves to the Lamb Chriſt, having his Father's Name written in their Foreheads, that is, profeſſing the True God, in the ſincere Obedience and worſhip of him, whilſt the oppoſite Company of Antichriſt went wondering after the Beaſt, even a World of them, as Chap. 13. 3. and received his Mark, verſ. 17. Theſe are ſet forth by the ſame Number (of 144000) that the Chriſtians in the Eaſt, under the Mahumetan Bondage and Darkneſs are, (who were the 5*th* and 6th Trumpets) their State and Condition being much alike in this, as they are a Company of Perſons ſingly to be numbred and ſcattered up and down, here and there, (as they were) in the midſt of the Corruptions of thoſe Eaſtern Churches, under the darkneſs and oppreſſion of Mahu-

Mahumetaniſm. So in like manner, Theſe are a Company of True Believers ſcattered up and down under the growing Superſtitions, and encreaſing Darkneſs of Popiſh Antichriſtianiſm; which until the Year of Chriſt 1100, did increaſe more and more upon the World. They ſtand upon Mount Sion, which was called the City of David, as not yet having a Temple, or inſtituted Churches diſtinct from Antichriſt, erected and built, as in David's Time Mount Sion had not. And though they ſung a New Song, (the Truth of the Goſpel which themſelves believed) yet ſo confuſedly and indiſtinctly, as none could learn it, or underſtand, that they differed from them. It was a New Song, differing from what the Papiſts taught about Chriſt, yet they did not propagate it to many; there were few or none (it is ſaid) that could learn it. And they are ſaid to ſing it ſecretly, before this Repreſentative Chorus of the four Beaſts, and the four and twenty Elders, (as they are conſidered as a ſtanding Company, that do view all the Viſions of this Book) but themſelves were not caſt into ſuch an Order of Worſhip, they not having Churches or Officers to begin the Song, as in other Times you may obſerve, that it is ſaid, the four Beaſts began, and the four and twenty Elders ſung that Song. So that, they had no diſtinct Churches and Aſſemblies, nor Officers of their own who ſung this Song; their Voices being ſometimes as the Voice of many Waters confuſedly murmuring againſt the Superſtitions daily ariſing in thoſe Times, and thundering aloud. Firſt, Againſt ſetting up of Images, Anno 707, both in France and Germany: And then, againſt Tranſubſtantiation: ſometimes ſweetly harping melodious Strains of true Devotion; which Believers (and ſome Writers of thoſe Times (as we in their Writings find) were full of. Thoſe kept themſelves Virgins from the groſs Idolatries of the Whore, not defiling themſelves with the reſt of thoſe Women; by which are meant the Daughters of the Whore, that is, thoſe Cities and Kingdoms in which they lived; which (as the Daughters receiving themſelves the Fornications of Rome, the Mother City) allured theſe alſo unto Spiritual Fornication with them. Thus during thoſe Times of groſs Idolatry, we read of thoſe who profeſſed their deteſtation of Images, and that Idol of Tranſubſtantiation. Chap. 8.

The ſecond State of the Church is, that of the Separation which Believers made from Antichriſtian Churches, having a new and a further Light broke forth among them; which we have deſcribed unto us by three degrees, riſing higher and higher, preſented under three ſeveral Angels, from the 6th Verſe, and ſo on, (according to the uſual courſe of this Book) the firſt of which flies in the midſt of Heaven, being to publiſh his Meſſage unto many Nations, having the Goſpel to preach, that is, Jeſus Chriſt and Juſtification by him, and the true Worſhip of him: which in thoſe Times was counted a New Goſpel, therefore in oppoſition to that made Calumny, the Holy Ghoſt here calls it the Everlaſting Goſpel. And this began to be done about the Year 1100.

But becauſe I mean to begin the Second Part of this my Expoſition of this Book, with the Story of the Church's firſt Separation from Popery, which here begins at the 6th Verſe of this Chapter; therefore I reſerve the particular Expoſition thereof unto that Second Part in its due place, and break off this Firſt Part here, although in the middle of a Chapter, yet at a right Joint or Period.

AN EXPOSITION OF THE REVELATION.

The Second Part,

BEING

The Story of the Church from the Times of the first Separation from the Beast, the Pope, until the Glorious Kingdom of Christ.

As it is laid down Chap. 11. and from the 6th Verse of the Fourteenth Chapter, unto the beginning of the Twentieth.

THE PREFACE.

THE main Thing I aimed at, both in my first studying this Book, and also in this my Exposition of it, was, to search into such Passages therein, as did concern and fall upon the last Days, especially the present Times of the Church; and to enquire and find out under which of these Constellations our own Times do fall; and what is certainly yet to come. Now what hitherto hath been expounded by me, I found, by the general consent of the best Expositors (though upon divers grounds) to belong unto more Ancient Times, long since past. And hence it is, that in the Exposition of those 6th, 8th, and 9th Chapters, I have been the less inquisitive; therein especially following Mr. Mede, (whose Scheme and Division also of this whole Prophecy into the Seal-Prophecy and Book-Prophecy, and making the one to contain the Fates of the Empire, and the other of the Church, I ever accounted an happy Notion for the understanding of this Book, and have therefore enlarged it); although, in the Exposition of the 7th Chapter, I altogether differ from him, as also in some few things else. Now those parts of this Prophecy, which belong to more elderly Times, being thus briefly run over and dispatch'd, I have now selected and singled out all that I find, both in the Seal-Prophecy and in this Book-Prophecy, to have an Eye to these present Times, or to those yet to come; and have cast them apart by themselves, as being those things in this Book, which it concerns us more especially to search into. And to the end that I might begin at a right Joint, without mangling the whole, I have chosen to begin from that State and Time of the Church's separation from Popery, and of the Reformation which this Book-Prophecy begins at; namely, Chap. 14. vers. 6. and so to give upon this (but especially what concerns the present Age) a larger Exposition than upon the former I have done; having written that First Part, (especially that brief Exposition of the 6th, 7th, 8th, and 9th Chapters) but to make way for the understanding of that which now follows; It being impossible for any Man to be confirmed in the true Interpretation of any Part, without some general insight into the Whole.

Now in general, if you would know what belongs to these latter Times in this Prophecy;

1. The Seal-Prophecy, from the 6th Chapter to the 12th, running over all Time from John's Days, unto the Kingdom of Christ, and the Passages thereof in the 10th and 11th Chapters (being the laſt under that firſt Prophecy) do therefore belong unto the laſt Times, (as hath been abundantly declared in that General Scheme given in the firſt Part); And indeed, moſt of the things in the 11th Chapter, do belong to the Times of the Vials, Chap. 16. as will appear in the Expoſition of it.

Then again, 2. at the beginning of the 6th Verſ. Chap. 14. in the Book-Prophecy, begins the great Reſtauration of the Goſpel from under Popery, and ſo, the Story of the laſt Days; which is continued along in ſuch things as ſhall befal the Church unto the Kingdom of Chriſt, which begins not until Chap. 20. Hence therefore all theſe Paſſages in thoſe Chapters mentioned out of both Prophecies, being put together in their due place and order, do fitly fall in together, to make the Story of the Church compleat, from the firſt Separation from Popery, unto Chriſt's Kingdom: and do indeed take in all that in this Book of the Revelation is ſpoken of theſe Times. Which therefore I call a Second Part of the Expoſition of this Book.

A Particular Scheme and Diviſion, preſenting, in their due Order and Succeſſion, all the Contents of thoſe Chapters which do concern our Times.

BEcauſe the right ordering and ranking of the particular Viſions of this Book in both Prophecies in their due Times, either of Succeſſion after each other, or their ſynchronizing or falling out together at the ſame Time, is the chief Key of Interpretation; therefore as I gave a more general Scheme and Diviſion of this whole Book at the firſt, to make way for the Expoſition thereof; ſo I will now premiſe a particular Scheme of theſe Chapters mentioned, ſo to make way for the underſtanding of the Expoſition thereof alſo.

Firſt, Therefore I will ſet together the Materials therein contained, according to that right and due order, either of ſynchronizing each with other, or due ſucceſſion after each other; that is, ſhew what Times the ſeveral Viſions of thoſe Chapters do belong unto; which of them are, in order of Time, before the other, and which fall out at the ſame Time with other. The full proof of which Method, and my ſo ordering them, I ſhall in part reſerve to the larger Expoſition it ſelf, which follows. Only now take it briefly, for the better clearing the Expoſition.

Two Repreſentations of the Church, from the Separation to the New Jeruſalem.

The Church of Chriſt, from thoſe Times of Separation unto the New Jeruſalem, is preſented; Either,

1. In the various Conditions which in it ſelf it ſhould run through, all the time until then, in ſeveral Ages, both in reſpect of the Progreſs of its Separation further and further off from Rome, and ſo, of its encreaſe of Light, Purity, and Reformation; as likewiſe in reſpect of Perſecutions and Judgments upon it, and its Reſtitution and Deliverance again from under them. Or elſe,

2. It

2. It is preſented in one uniform, entire, and general Condition, ſuiting with all thoſe Times of it, firſt and laſt, both as within it ſelf, it partakes of like Priviledges all that time, and eſpecially alſo in relation to the execution of Plagues and Puniſhments (poured out of the ſeven Vials) on the Enemy of the Church, whom this True Church is to be the Inſtrument of Ruining. And both theſe ways the Holy Ghoſt hath been pleaſed to repreſent the Story of it.

The Church's uniform and alike Condition entirely ſet forth together, Chap. 15, 16.

1. This ſame entire Condition of it, during all this long Time (as I take it) is ſet forth in the 15th and 16th Chapters.

2. In the 15th Chapter, is ſet forth the common, uniform, and like State of the Church all that while. Chap. 15.

1. As within it ſelf, from verſ. 2, to the 5th.

2. In the common and like Deſcription of the Angels or Powers out of the Vials which come out of thoſe Churches, from verſ. 6, to the end. Which Repreſentation of the Church, and of theſe Angels all that whole Time, is alſo made as the immediate Sign, great and wonderful (or the Fore-runner) of the New Jeruſalem, verſ. 1, 2. There being after theſe Vials, and this State of the Church, a more glorious State of it to come; which, verſ. 5. is called, The opening the Temple of the Tabernacle, (ſo called by way of diſtinction from the Temple of the ſeven Angels) as wherein the Ark (Chriſt himſelf) is to be ſeen, as Chap. 11. v. laſt. Which until the Vials are all poured out, ſtands vailed, as the Holy of Holies did. And ſo this preſent State of the Church (which is the Temple out of which the ſeven Angels come forth, verſ. 6.) holdeth but the Proportion and Alluſion of the inward Court of the Prieſts unto the Holy of Holies in the Jewiſh Temple, in compariſon unto that other Church or Temple to come after this, as verſ. 5. ſpeaks. And ſo the Erection of it is made the Sign or immediate Fore-runner of this Holy of Holies, as verſ. 1, and 5. compared, do evidently ſhew.

And then, 2. in the 16th Chapter, you have the execution and pouring out of theſe ſeven Vials by the Angels out of this Church or Inner Temple, erected from the firſt Separation from Antichriſt, all along thoſe times unto the New Jeruſalem, which in their ſeveral Orders and Succeſſions, are in one view exhibited in that 16th Chapter. Chap. 16.

The various Condition of the Church, ſcatteredly preſented in three parts.

Now, 2. although this common uniform Condition of the Church all this time, is ſet thus (in relation to the execution of thoſe Vials on the Enemies) in one entire view, in the 15th and 16th Chapters; yet that other various Condition of the Church, as in reſpect to its own particular and diverſe State in all thoſe times, the Holy Ghoſt was pleaſed variouſly, and in ſeveral places of this Prophecy to deſcribe and ſet forth (as beſt ſuiting to a ſpecial End and Occaſion) yet with ſuch infallible Characters of their Times, of the Vials they belong unto, and alſo unto what Times of each Vial, as cannot deceive us.

Thus

1. Part in Chap. 14. from verſ. 6. where begins its Separation from Popery.

Thus the Firſt Part of the Story of the various Condition of the Church during the four firſt Vials, is ſet forth Chap. 14. from the 6th Verſe to the end. At which 6th Verſe, the ſeparation of the True Church from Anti-chriſt beginning, there began alſo the firſt erection of True Churches, or the Temple, (firſt made mention of in that Chapter) when Waldus and his Company firſt fell off from Rome. And the reaſon why this was firſt done, e're the Viſion of the Vials was preſented, was, becauſe it was meet to ſhew how the Temple was firſt built and reared, e're the ſeven Angels and their Vials poured forth out of this Temple ſhould be mentioned. And therefore Chap. 14. ſhews that firſt Part of the Church's Story in all its firſt comings forth from Anti-chriſt, and laying the Foundation of Churches; but then it breaks off at the Times of the fourth Vial, for that ſo far proceeds the Reformation of the True Church, as it reſpected a ſeparation from Antichriſt, and ſo runs along with ſuch Vials as ſhould by degrees firſt prepare for his Ruin, as the three or four firſt Vials do.

But then, 2. the next ſtate of the Church, from the time of the fourth Vial to the fifth Vial, (when Antichriſt's Time of 42 Months is to expire); That the 11th Chapter (which comes in as a Chronology, to ſhew the end and expiring of thoſe Times of Anti-chriſt) doth ſupply the Story of it, from verſ. 1, to 14. And this Story comes in there, rather than here in Chap. 14. becauſe that was to be as an immediate Signal of Antichriſt's Downfal; and ſo comes in moſt fitly there in that 11th Chapter, that Chapter being intended as an exact Chronology or Computation of the Times of the Beaſt's Reign, to the end it might be diſcerned when his Time ſhould end; and ſo, the immediate Sign afore it is therefore annexed, for the Church's warning and comfort againſt the approaching of the time of his ending, and a fatal prevailing of Antichriſt over them juſt afore. And ſo the Story of that 11th Chapter doth indeed begin, where that 14th Chapter endeth, or about the ſame time. And as the 14th Chapter preſented us with the Story of the Reformation of the Church, from Antichriſt and his Falſe Church: And ſo, what befel the Church during that time, ſo the 11th Chapter begins with a New Reformation of the Reformed Churches among themſelves, and what ſhould befal them upon that Reformation; namely, the killing the Witneſſes, between the fourth Vial and the fifth, or (at the utmoſt) before the ſixth Vial.

And then the third part of the Church's Story, from after the fifth Vial, until the New Jeruſalem, (which New Jeruſalem begins Chap. 20. of the Book-Prophecy, and Chap. 11. verſ. 15. of the Seal-Prophecy) the 19th Chapter preſents us with in its due place: For the 17th and 18th Chapters being, the one but an Explanation who was the Beaſt, and where his Seat was, that ſo the Church might be able to diſcern this Antichriſt; and the other being a Funeral Song for the pouring out of the fifth Vial, when the Seat of the Beaſt, the Whore (the City deſcribed in the 17th Chapter) is ruined, when alſo Antichriſt's Kingdom (as it is moſt probable) doth end: Therefore fitly after both theſe Digreſſions, comes in, in its due order, the State of the Church from the time of that fifth Vial, or the Ruin of the City, unto the New Jeruſalem. And therefore the 19th Chapter, verſ. 1. thus begins, And after theſe things, I heard the Voice of an innumerable Company, &c. that is, after the Ruin of the City and Whore, deſcribed in Chap. 17. and ruined Chap. 18. and ſo goes on to deſcribe the State of that Church then, until the New Jeruſalem.

Now

Now to ſum up all. As the Story in the 14th Chapter, containeth the firſt Reformation and Separation of the Church from Antichriſt, in ſeveral degrees; and the 11th Chapter containeth a ſecond Reformation of the Church within it ſelf from prophane mixture; ſo this 19th Chapter contains a third Reformat on Perſonal, of the Saints themſelves in it, as then with might and main preparing and adorning themſelves for the Marriage of the Lamb, (which then they ſhall evidently ſee approaching, now when the Whore is caſt off and burnt) and there you may ſee them getting all the fine Linnen they can, that is, of Holineſs and growth in Grace, [the Righteouſneſs of the Saints]: that ſo, their Lord and Husband might greatly delight in their Beauty, as you may ſee verſ. 7, 8. And this is the true general coher ence and order of what yet remains to be interpreted.

The Particular Synchroniſm of the ſeveral Viſions and Contents of all thoſe Chapters: And firſt, of the 14*th* Chapter, from verſ. 6, with the 15*th* and 16*th*, to its 8*th Verſe.*

NOW becauſe, according to this Diviſion, and general Scheme given, the Viſions of the 15th and 16th Chapters (namely, thoſe of the Vials) do run along the ſame whole courſe of Time through divers Ages, that the Viſions of the 14th Chapter, from verſ. 6. and alſo of the 11th Chapter, to verſ. 15. and of the 19th Chapter alſo do, (though the one in an uniform continued way, the other in a ſcattered ſucceſſive repreſentation of the Church's Condition, all along the ſame tract of Time through many Ages): Therefore it will be expedient to ſhew, which of theſe ſeveral parts of theſe two Repreſentations do ſynchronize and fall out together in the ſame Age, and which of them do ſucceed each other.

I will therefore a little more particularly ſet together the ſeveral parts of theſe Stories; both of that of the ſeven Vials, which are put together, Chap. 15, and 16; and thoſe other ſeveral Pieces, and ſcattered Paſſages of thoſe other Chapters, in all their due Times as they fell out together.

1. That ſame Temple filled with Smoak, Chap. 15. 8. (out of which come the ſeven Angels) I conceive to have been begun to be ſet up in the Times of the firſt Separation from Antichriſt, Chap. 14. 6. When alſo the Everlaſting Goſpel was begun diſtinctly to be preached, both by Waldus and his Followers, who did erect True Churches unto Chriſt, (as the Hiſtory of the Waldenſes ſhews) when thoſe Harpers on the Glaſſie Sea, Chap. 15. began more diſtinctly to ſing the Song of Moſes and the Lamb; that is, the Doctrine both of the Law and Goſpel, which the 144000 in the darker Times of Popery had but muttered, and that ſo confuſedly, as none could learn it. For this, compare Chap. 14. 6, 7. with Chap. 15. 3, 4. So that, the Doctrine of the Goſpel, and the Erection of the Temple, out of which the Vials do come, and the Separation from Popery do all begin together.

2. This

2. This erection of the Temple, and preparation being thus made by the first Angel, Chap. 14. 6. the first Vial out of that Temple, Chap. 16. 1, 2. began with the Voice of the second Angel, Chap. 14. 8. So that the first Angel, Chap. 14. 6. sets up the Temple, and the second Angel brings forth the first Vial. And therefore accordingly, the Voice of that Angel, Chap. 14. 8. is, Babylon is fallen, Babylon is fallen; that is, now is the first Foundation of her Ruin laid, (as in opening the Vials, I shall afterward shew) or, now do those Vials begin, which shall be her Ruin.

The second Vial, Chap. 16. 3. follows with the Voice or Cry of the third Angel's preaching, Chap. 14. 9. then when the Sea of Antichrist's Doctrine was both proved and pronounced damnable by Luther's Doctrine, and the Waters which the Whore sate on fell from her, that is, those Kingdoms and Common-Wealths, which had subjected themselves unto her. For this, compare the Year of Luther's preaching, recorded Chap. 14. 9, 10, 11. and that second Vial, Chap. 16.

The third Vial, Chap. 16. 4. hath been pouring out since that Harvest began, Chap. 14. 14. since the Summer-Weather, and setled peace of the Reformed Churches, meant by Rivers and Fountains, (as in the opening the meaning of that Vial, will appear).

The fourth Vial, Chap. 16. 8. (I take it) began about the time of the Vintage, Chap. 14. 18. whereof this to me is an infallible Character, that an Angel who had Power over Fire, is said to excite unto it. Now, Chap. 16. 8. The fourth Angel, who poured out this fourth Vial, is said, to have Power given him to scorch Men with Fire. And so that De-Description, Chap. 14. 18. is of the same Angel, to shew that these two (the fourth Vial, and this Vintage) fall in the same times: and so, it is evidently evinced, that the 14th Chapter, and the times of it, reach but to the fourth Vial.

The Synchronism of the Vision of the 11*th* Chapter, in the Age between the Fourth and Fifth Vial; and of the 17*th* and 18*th* Chapters, with the Times of the Fifth Vial: and of the 19*th*, with the Age after the Fifth Vial unto the New Jerusalem.

COme we next to the 11th Chapter.

Which, First, under the Seal-Prophecy, begins (now about the Times of the Fourth Vial) afore the expiration of the World's Monarchy, Antichrist's Times, and the Church's Oppression, and before the 7th Trumpet, which blows, vers. 15. And it begins with the representing the Temple of the Reformation, the same which the 14th Chapter had represented, (out of which the Angel, with his Sickle for the Harvest, did come, vers. 15. of Chap. 14.) in which these Reformers, who erected that Temple in the 14th Chapter, having committed this Error, to lay an outward Court unto it, (John there bearing the Persons of the Godly of this Age) are bidden to measure measure that Temple anew, as not fully conformed to the Pattern; and to cast out the outward Court. And so, it contains a further Reformation of the Temple in that 14th Chapter erected. And as in the Vintage, Chap. 14. the Popish Gentiles had (as was said) trod down the Grapes in Germany: so here, Chap. 11. vers. 1. the like Outward Court in other Churches elsewhere, is given unto these Gentiles to tread down; and so, with that exploit to end their date of treading down the Holy City for 42 Months, (or 1260 Years) with this their re-entry, which shall be their last upon the Churches of the Reformation. And so you see the 11th Chapter begins, where the 14th Chapter ends.

Then, secondly, vers. 5, 6. of that Chapter, (in the description of the Witnesses) you furthermore expresly have the first four Vials briefly summed up: and no more of them, than the first four mentioned therein, to shew that these Witnesses in these latter Times of their Prophecy, are the same with those Angels that pour out the Vials, Chap. 16. And observe, that that mention of them comes in but by way of Parenthesis in this Speech of the Angel unto John, that he might discern who they were, and know them again in this New Book-Prophecy; and all to this end, to shew what after these four Vials, or from the time of the Fourth, and before the Fifth should befal them, in the expiring of the 1260 Years allotted them to prophesy in in Sackcloth, or in a mourning condition; which now should end with the Beast's Reign also, which ends with the Fifth Vial. And so, vers. 7. when they shall be about to finish their Testimony, (that is, just now, at the ending of their Prophecy) they that formerly have had the power to execute four such Vials on the Beast's Company already, must now, before they do fatally darken and overcome his Kingdom by the fifth Vial, be themselves once more overcome by the Beast. Which killing of them, being thus mentioned after four of the Vials, summed up vers. 5, 6. and in the end of their Prophecy, and in the very expiring of their time of Mourning, must needs therefore be from after, or upon the time of the fourth Vial, and before the Fifth, or at furthest with the sixth. And then, vers. 13. the Witnesses they rise, and the tenth part of the City falls; which some have interpreted to be the fifth Vial, the Ruin of the City of Rome. But of that hereafter in the Exposition.

After that, vers. 14. the second Wo passeth away; which notes the removing of the Turkish Power and Tyranny (which was the second Wo, or sixth Trumpet, spoken of Chap. 9. 12, 13.) which is all one with the sixth Vial, Chap. 16. the drying up the River Euphrates, or the preparation unto it, as in the Exposition will appear.

Then follows the seventh Trumpet, Chap. 11. 15. to the end; at which time the seventh Vial begins, as is evident, by comparing the 9th verse of Chap. 11. and Chap. 16. 18, and 21 verses; as also Chap. 10. 7. in that 'tis said in one place, that Time shall be no longer, than until the seventh Trumpet blows, and in the other, It is done, (says the Voice) when the seventh Vial is poured out, Chap. 16. 17.

And lastly, As under the seventh Trumpet comes in the Holy of Holies, which (as was said) is the opening the Tabernacle of the Testimony in Heaven, in which the Ark is seen, Chap. 11. 18. so you may read Chap. 15. 5. that after the Vials, (he says there, μετὰ ταῦτα, after these Things) this Temple of the Tabernacle of the Testimony in Heaven, is said to be opened. That Temple out of which the Vials come, being but as the Inward Temple which was begun to be erected (for else they had no True Churches) from the first Separation, but polluted with the adjoining of the Outward Court by the Reformers. But under the Times of the fourth Vial, this Temple is measured and purged, and that Court cast out, Chap. 11. 1. now ending in the Holy of Holies succeeding it.

But whereas still what should befal the Church from the Time of the rising of the Witnesses, (which falleth out about the fifth Vial) is not expressed in that 11th Chapter, nor what should be the Church's Condition from that space between the fifth Vial, and the seventh Trumpet, and Holy of Holies: But we are still to seek that, for the 11th Chapter does fetly describe only what befel the Church just afore the expiring of the Reign of Antichrist, as a Signal added for the Church's Warning: Therefore this Part the 19th Chapter supplies, (the 17 and 18 Chapters being but a larger Explication of the fifth Vial (as all agree) namely, the Ruin of the City) the first Verse of which begins thus; After these things, I saw an innumerable Company in Heaven, praising God for the Downfal of the Whore, (at large set forth Chap. 17, and 18.) and therefore it must needs set forth the State of the Church now after the fifth Vial until the Seventh, (as in the Exposition will appear). And then that great Battel, at the Lamb's Marriage-Supper, which follows in that Chapter, how that agrees with the seventh Vial, let any one judg, that shall read Chap. 16. from the 14th Verse to the end, and Chap. 19. from the 11th Verse to the end. And then come in the 1000 Years, and New Jerusalem, Chap. 20. 21, 22. which is all one with the Holy of Holies.

The End of the Preface.

AN

AN EXPOSITION OF THE REVELATION.

PART. II.

CHAP. I.

The Thirteenth Chapter explained, from Verſe the 6th to the end.

NOW having ordered and caſt theſe Chapters, remaining to be expounded, into this Mould: I begin this Expoſition here, where the Story of the Church's firſt Separation from Antichriſt doth indeed begin, (where alſo I brake off the Firſt Part of this Expoſition).

In which my ranking of theſe Chapters was ſhewed, That as the 13*th* Chapter does throughout ſet forth the Condition of the Falſe Antichriſtian Church, and the ſeveral ſorts of that Company which ſhall cleave to the Beaſt: So that this 14*th* Chapter does in like manner ſet forth the Company of True Believers, which ſhall apart by themſelves cleave unto the Lamb, and that, in thoſe ſeveral Conditions which they are to run through. As,

1. The Condition of the Church in the dark Times of Popery; from his firſt riſing, until the Goſpel's Light did break forth more clearly, and a Separation was made from the Church of Antichriſt. And this (as I have opened it) you have from the 1*ſt* verſe unto the 6*th*.

Or, 2. The Condition of the Church from that firſt Separation from Popery, and Believers erecting Churches and Aſſemblies by themſelves, from verſ. 6. to the end. Which now begins to be expounded.

And the ſcope of the Holy Ghoſt in this remainder of Chap. 14. is but to ſhew by what degrees the Goſpel ſhould firſt break forth, and how Churches ſhould at firſt be erected, and a glorious Reformation made. And ſo, it reacheth no further than till the Times of that prevailing again of the Beaſt, which after this great Reformation, he ſhould a ſecond Time obtain to have over theſe Churches, about the Times of the Fourth Vial, which is executed by the Angel that hath Power over Fire, who is mentioned, verſ. 18. Which prevailing of his, the 11*th* Chapter (the ſcope whereof is to ſhew how the Beaſt's Reign is to end) does more fully ſhew forth.

Now when as the Holy Ghoſt had in this 14*th* Chapter given the Story of that firſt Separation and Reformation, as being ſufficient to ſhew the Foundation and Progreſs of this New Temple and True Church, erected in oppoſition to the Falſe; he then breaks off, and preſents the general and common condition and ſtation of Believers in this new erected Temple, ſeparate from the Church of the Beaſt, and from its Doctrine and Worſhip; and ſhews the Judgments to be executed upon the Falſe Church all that while, until the Kingdom of Chriſt, entirely together in one view in the 15*th* and 16*th* Chapters.

Now this State and Condition of the Church, as firſt breaking forth from under Antichriſt, and ſo coming out of Babylon and Egypt, laid forth in this 14*th* Chapter, until Antichriſt's ſecond prevailing, ſpoken of Chap. 11. hath two Parts.

1. Their firſt Separation, in the dark and elder Times of the Goſpel, before the Reformation.

2. The Reformation it ſelf, made by Calvin and others.

1. The firſt Separation, made and continued in the Elder Times before Luther, hath three degrees of it orderly ſet forth, as Light encreaſed in the Church, from verſ. 6, to 14.

2. The Reformation it ſelf, from the 14*th* verſe to the end.

Firſt; Of that firſt Separation.

It hath three Degrees (as was ſaid) ſet forth by Three Angels, (as by whoſe Miniſtry all the great things done in the Church and World throughout this Book is ſtill ſaid to be effected) who in their Voice and Cry riſe higher and higher, and louder and louder againſt Antichriſt and his Company.

The firſt Angel who lays the Foundation of all, is ſaid to have the everlaſting Goſpel to preach unto them that dwell on the Earth, and to every Nation, and Tongue, and People, and ſo to fly into the midſt of Heaven, as reaching his Voice to all. And he alſo calls upon Men to fear and worſhip God alone who made Heaven and Earth, verſ. 7. So that, the Matter of his Preaching is the Goſpel, which brings to light the free Grace of God in Chriſt, for the juſtification of a Sinner, and alſo the true Worſhip of this God alone; withdrawing Men from Idolatry and falſe Worſhip of Saints and Angels, which the World was then overwhelmed with: which becauſe in thoſe Times it was called the New Goſpel, therefore in oppoſition to that Calumny, the Holy Ghoſt calls it the Everlaſting Goſpel, which was now reſtored and brought to light. And by the preaching of theſe two Things to all Nations, was the foundation of that whole Separation from the Pope that followed, firſt laid.

Now this firſt Angel's preaching, doth moſt lively ſet forth the firſt Proceedings of Waldus and his Followers, who firſt began to make Separation from Popiſh Doctrine and Worſhip. This Waldus, an Alderman of Lions in France, about the Year of Chriſt 1100, being Converted by occaſion of the ſudden death of a Friend of his, as they were walking abroad together, (which mightily terrified and amazed him; God uſing that as a means to humble him and bring him to Chriſt) fell a preaching in that City, and converted many others to the ſaving Knowledg of Chriſt. And he being a Man learned alſo, (as even Popiſh Writers ſay of him) opened the Scriptures, and turned them into the vulgar French. And he and his Followers thinking it their Duty to preach this Goſpel unto others, as did the Apoſtles; they forthwith ſent abroad ſome of their Company a preaching: Which when it came to the Ears of the Pope, they were prohibited, as being Lay-Men. But they affirming, it was better to obey God than Men; and it being an Article of their Faith, unicuique licere Verbum Dei liberè prædicare, that it was lawful for any Man to preach the Goſpel; they went on in the courſe they had begun, though they were perſecuted for it. And look as in the Primitive Times, when Perſecution aroſe after the Death of Stephen, and that the Church of Jeruſalem was diſperſed, it was an occaſion of further ſpreading the Goſpel unto other Nations. So Waldus being himſelf excommunicated, came into Picardy, and ſo into the Low Countries, and there, by his preaching, made many Diſciples, and then went into Germany, and laſt of all into Bohemia; and his Followers were diſperſed into Savoy, Lombardy, and the Countries on this ſide the Alpes; and Arnoldus his Companion went into Spain. Inſomuch that Poplinerius the Hiſtorian gives this Teſtimony of them, That theſe Waldenſes, (mauger the Power of all Chriſtian Princes) about the Year 1100, did broach a Doctrine little differing from what the Proteſtants now hold; and not only diſperſed it through France, but over all the parts of Europe. Of theſe things you may read at large in the Engliſh Hiſtory of the Waldenſes, and in Biſhop Uſher's Book de Succeſſione Eccleſiæ. Thus you ſee they preach'd, as here; yea, it was their Profeſſion; and they preach'd to all Nations, and the Doctrine they preach'd was only the Goſpel, and to call Men from Idolatry to Worſhip God aright, (as you may read at large in thoſe Books mentioned) as the Angel is here ſaid to do, verſ. 7. Chap. 1.

But in an Age or two following, their Number encreaſing in all Kingdoms, and their Light growing more clear, there follows out of this Company a Second Angel, who with open Mouth proclaims, That Rome was Babylon, and the Pope that Beaſt, and that Antichriſt, in this Revelation deſcribed, and ordained to Ruin. Which thing Waldus did at the firſt but begin to mutter; for in one more ancient Breviary of the Articles of their Opinions, (as you have them in that forenamed Book, de Succeſſione Eccleſiæ, Cap. 6. N. 16.) this is the firſt, concerning the Church of Rome, in theſe modeſt words only, Romanum Præſulum reliquis parem eſſe Epiſcopis; that the Pope of Rome was but equal to all other Biſhops. But afterwards in the following Ages, their Followers grew more bold; and in another Edition of their Articles, in the ſame Chapter, N. 17. you find this, Romanam Eccleſiam eſſe Meretricem Babylonicam, that the Church of Rome was the Whore of Babylon. Which thing the Profeſſors in thoſe next Ages did inculcate, and inſiſt on, and made it the eminent Article of their Profeſſion and Confeſſion. But this was eſpecially done by Wickliff and his Followers, beginning about the Year 1371 in England; and after him by John Hus, and Jerome of Prague, and their Followers, Anno 1400. Verſ. 8.

But then follows a Third Angel, more vehement than the reſt, and that was Luther and his Followers: and he proceeds further, and ſays, That not only Rome is Babylon, but that all thoſe who cleave unto her Doctrine and Superſtitions, ſhall drink of the Wrath of God for ever; that is, be certainly damned, and go to Hell. He ſhewing, that her Worſhip and Doctrine (the Image of the Beaſt) was a damned Doctrine, and laying open the Falſhood and Errors of it ſo manifeſtly, that now under ſo clear a Light of the Goſpel as this Age held forth, it could never ſtand with Salvation to live therein. And ſo he urged a ſeparation from Rome under pain of damnation. The Voice of this Angel is from verſ. 9, to 12.

Then follows an Intimation, once for all, of thoſe Martyrdoms and bloody Perſecutions of all thoſe three Angels and their Followers, as the effect of this their Preaching, and as a Trial of the Truth of their Doctrine, and their own Sincerity. So, verſ. 12, 13. Here is the Patience of the Saints; that is, here comes in Matter for the trial of it. And for their encouragement, there is a comfortable Acclamation ſubjoined, Bleſſed are thoſe that die in the Lord. Now how, upon the preaching of all thoſe Angels, Perſecutions were raiſed, (which from the Times of the Heatheniſh and Arrian Perſecutions, for the ſpace of 800 Years paſt before, in the dark Times of Popery, the Church was free from) and there followed the Martyrdoms of the Followers of Waldus, Wickliff, Hus, and Luther, and of thoſe that embraced their Doctrine (eſpecially upon, and after this Third Angel's preaching) this the Book of Martyrs will inform you.

PART II. In the ſecond place comes the Time of the Reformation, after Luther; the ſtate of which is preſented to us under a double Viſion; the one of a Harveſt, the other of a Vintage, (which uſeth to come after Harveſt).

The firſt betokens that glorious Peace and Sunſhine of the Goſpel which followed after thoſe Perſecutions in Germany, England, &c. for ſixty Years and upwards, and this from verſ. 14, to 17. By an Harveſt, in Scripture, is meant the Converſion and gathering in of the Elect by the Preaching of the Goſpel. So in the Old Teſtament, Iſaiah propheſying of the Converſion of the Jews in Egypt and Aſſyria, Chap. 27. 12, 13. he uſeth this Expreſſion, That God would threſh or beat off all along from the River Euphrates unto Egypt, thoſe his Elect People, that, as Corn, ſhould grow upon the Shores thereof; and that he would threſh ſo clean, that they ſhould be gathered one by one; not leaving one grain of Election behind, nor one Ear of Corn ſtanding unreaped. It is an Alluſion to an Harveſt, and having in of Corn, and threſhing it. Like unto which, is that Speech of Chriſt, when he ſent out his Diſciples. Lo, the Regions are White, and ripe for the Harveſt, and the Harveſt is great. Which he ſpake when there were multitudes of People ripe, and ready to receive the Goſpel. And ſince the preaching of the Goſpel by the Third Angel, what multitudes of ſuch hungry Souls have there been in theſe Kingdoms? And what a glorious Time of Summer and Harveſt have we had? And this preaching of the Goſpel, that hath reaped this Corn, hath been authorized by the chief Magiſtrates, and by Kingly Power, even whole Kingdoms profeſſing it. And therefore he who in this Viſion hath the Sickle given him, to Reap, is preſented crowned with a Golden Crown: which according to the Analogy with the other Contents of this Book, Chap. 14. 5. is when Jeſus Chriſt, the Son of Man, is viſibly ſet in the Throne, ruling by Chriſtian Magiſtrates, they uſing their Power for him; as when the Emperors turned Chriſtians, you find the like Expreſſion uſed, Chap. 10.

The other Viſion is of a Vintage, from verſ. 17, to the end; which, as a Vintage comes after Harveſt, ſo this falls out in the end of this Summer, and after the Harveſt of the Reformation, and ſo ſhuts up the Story of it. Wherein God, after he hath had in his Corn, falls upon the Grapes, the Wild Grapes, and cuts them down; but with another manner of Sickle, than he had done his own Corn: He had reaped them with a Sickle of Converſion, but theſe he cuts down with the ſharp Sickle (twice ſo called) of vengeance; and therefore it is ſaid, that they are caſt into the Wine-preſs of God's Wrath. And theſe Grapes, are thoſe Carnal Proteſtants and Profeſſors of Religion, who, together with the Elect, have enjoyed the Heat of this fair long Summer, and hung like to Grapes in the Sun, but retaining their Sowrneſs, have been ripened indeed, but only for Wrath and Vengeance. And lo, how this ſharp Sickle hath gone up and down in Germany for well nigh theſe twenty Years, being ſuch a Wine-preſs of fierce Wrath, and ſuch a treading down to an overflowing of Blood and Miſery, as hath ſcarce been parallel'd in any Age. For it is the Vengeance of the Temple, not ſo much deſtroyed, as defiled and diſhonoured by their Mixture; which as much provokes God unto Wrath, as the Perſecution of his Temple would have done. And therefore the Angel that is the Executioner of it, is provoked unto it by the Cries of an Angel that comes from the Altar, as one who is zealous of God's Worſhip, and diſdains as much that the Temple and Altar (the Ordinances of Worſhip) ſhould be peſtered and defiled with ſuch as call themſelves the Church, ſaying, We are the Temple of God, and ſo cauſe God's Name to be blaſphemed; as that the Idolatrous Papiſts, (whom this Book calls the Gentiles, Chap. 11. 1.) ſhould tread down this Holy City and Sanctuary. For even theſe are no better than Gentiles alſo, who ſay they are Jews, but are not.

And that this Vengeance ſhould be meant of this execution of it upon the Proteſtant Party, ſeems evident unto me by this, that the Wine-preſs is ſaid to be troden without the City; that is, without the Juriſdiction or Reach of the Power of the City of Rome; (for ſo that word [City] according to the Stile of this Book, Book, doth ſtill import, as chap. 11. 8. chap. 16. 19, &c.) and ſo is on purpoſe added, to ſhew, that it befals even ſuch Kingdoms and Places as had caſt off the Pope's Supremacy. And it appears alſo by this, that it is mentioned apart from the Vials which follow; which are all the Judgments that fall upon the Popiſh and Turkiſh Enemies of the Church; but this upon a third ſort of Enemies within the Church it ſelf. And although it be true, that ſo far as there hath befaln (through theſe German Wars) a Plague upon the Popiſh Party in Germany, (as upon the Emperor, and thoſe Popiſh Princes under him) ſo far indeed as upon them, it is to be reduced to one of the Vials, (which do contain all the laſt Plagues on the Popiſh Party) and particularly comes under the 4*th* Vial: Yet ſo far as theſe Wars have brought Miſeries and Deſolation on the Proteſtant Party, ſo far in that reſpect it is preſented in this Vintage. And therefore you may obſerve, that the Angel, who (it is ſaid) hath power over Fire, (who is indeed the Angel of the Fourth Vial, as the Angel of the Third is called the Angel of the Waters) becauſe he hath power to ſcorch Men with Fire, Chap. 16. 8. that Angel it is that incites and provokes this Angel here, with the ſharp Sickle, to cut down, and tread theſe Grapes. So that this Vintage is a diſtinct execution from that of the Fourth Vial, and yet contemporaneous with it. In a word; theſe Wars, ſo far as they hurt the Popiſh Party, are the fourth Vial, and ſo far as they hurt the Proteſtant Party, they are the Vintage here meant. That Horſes are mentioned as treaders of this Wine-preſs, moſt fitly carries it to theſe German Wars; the German Horſes being the moſt approved War-horſes in Europe, and theſe Wars having been chiefly maintained and acted by them. And then alſo this Alluſion of Grapes trodden in a Wine-preſs, was as ſuitable to expreſs the Miſeries befallen thoſe Countries; which are famous for Vines and Vintages, (as the Palatinate and other places in Germany are). And for the like Reaſon the Judgments upon Edom and Boſrah are expreſſed by a Vintage, Iſa. 63. 1. becauſe it was a Country famous for Vines. And then again, haply the ſpace of 1600 Furlongs here mentioned (which ſome make more Miles, ſome leſs) may for the length be found as fitly to agree unto the chief Seat of theſe Wars and Wine-preſſe; which (take the length of the Proteſtant part of Germany troden down, and here only intended) may not every way extend much further. But the computation, and meaſuring of this, I leave unto others. And whether or no God will bring this Wine-preſs into any other of his Vineyards, as England, Scotland, &c. and by bloody Wars tread down the Grapes there, as he hath done in Germany, keeping ſtill to the ſame proportion of 1600 Furlongs, (as our Brightman reckons the length of England to be) and fulfilling it over and over in other ſeveral Proteſtant Kingdoms and Dominions, He only knows who is the Lord both of this Harveſt and Vintage. Only this may be more confidently affirmed, that the reſt of thoſe Carnal Proteſtants in England, and other Places, who like the outward Court have been laid and joined to the People of God, ſhall yet, before the expiration and ending of the Beaſt's Kingdom and Number, be more or leſs given up to the Papiſts, and to the Juriſdiction of the City of Rome, and be troden down, and made to vail to them, if not all of them by bloody Wars and Conqueſts, yet by ſome baſe and unworthy yielding to them, as a juſt Puniſhment of their Carnal Profeſſion of the Goſpel. And this in England (we ſee) they begin to do; and this (I take it) the 11*th* Chapter, verſ. 1. doth foretell and propheſy of. Which Chapter being intended to give a Signal or Fore-runner of the Beaſt's Ruin, and the expiration of his 1260 Years, and Period of his Kingdom, (which now is approaching); doth preſent the State of the Church, and what ſhall befal it, not long before his Ruin; and ſo withal, that Face of the Church juſt afore, is preſented there, (Chap. 11. verſ. 1.) And the ſetting down what ſhould befal it (from verſ. 7, to 14.) muſt neceſſarily belong to theſe Times, and ſo is to be ſubjoined unto this 14*th* Chapter (though it comes in there, as a common ſignal of the ending of both Prophecies, and therefore between both) to make the Story of the Church compleat.

Chap. 1.

And this I ſhall handle, and make to appear, when I have firſt opened the meaning of the Vials, eſpecially of the four firſt of them; which though for order-ſake are by the Holy Ghoſt put (as in this Book things of a ſort uſe to be) with

with the reſt, after this 14*th* Chapter; yet they have been a pouring forth upon the Beaſt and his Company, from that firſt preaching of the Goſpel until now, (as will further appear). And the Reaſon why I would open theſe four firſt Vials, e're I open the 11*th* Chapter, is, becauſe they ſynchronize with this 14*th* Chapter: and becauſe four Vials are mentioned, as poured out, chap. 11. e're the Witneſſes being ſlain, which cannot be underſtood till theſe be firſt explained.

CHAP. II.

The Expoſition of Chap. 15.

THE Holy Ghoſt having thus firſt of all ſhewn how the Reformation from Popery was to be brought about, and Churches erected; he here beginneth to ſet before us the uniform State of Believers in this Temple, and the ſeveral degrees of their ruining the Falſe Church, by ſeveral Vials. And this, as ſet together in one continued view throughout all theſe Times, from the firſt Separation from Popery, until Chriſt's Kingdom. Concerning which, in general, I ſhall premiſe three Things.

Firſt, The difference between their Condition here, and the Condition of the Churches under the dark Times of Popery, as is uniformly deſcribed chap. 14. from verſ. 1, to the 6. And obſerve this difference in theſe four Particulars.

1. Thoſe, chap. 14. were Virgins, but not ſeparate; but theſe here ſtand alone in a Temple by themſelves, waſhing themſelves from the Defilement of Popery, as being ſeparated therefrom.

2. Thoſe ſung a New Song confuſedly, but theſe ſing the Song of Moſes and the Lamb, (that is, the Law, and the Goſpel) diſtinctly.

3. Thoſe there ſtood naked upon the Hill of Sion, as it was, e're a Temple was reared upon it; but theſe here are gathered into a Temple, and roofed over their Heads.

4. Thoſe ſung their Song in Egypt; but theſe are come out of Egypt, and ſo ſing Moſes his Song.

The ſecond Thing to be premiſed is, That theſe ſeven Angels, and their Vials, and this Company here, are in the general deſcription of them, (or in that Preface to their deſcription prefixed, verſ. 1.) called a Sign, great and marvellous, and another Sign.

1. It is called a Sign. A Sign is always a fore-runner of ſomething to come. Now what it is that is here pointed at as to come, verſ. 5. tells us; namely, that after theſe things, (that is, after theſe Vials) the Temple of the Tabernacle of the Teſtimony was opened in Heaven. So then, theſe Vials, they are the Sign of that glorious Holy of Holies, which John ſaw was to come after them; or they are the Sign of the New Jeruſalem, (for by that Temple of the Tabernacle of the Teſtimony, is that ſtate meant) and alſo of Chriſt's coming; and ſo they are that Sign of the Son of Man ſpoken of, Matth. 24. And theſe Plagues do here go before him, as in like manner the Prophets uſe to deſcribe his Progreſs with Plagues and Peſtilence afore him. And therefore (if you obſerve it) juſt when the laſt Vial approacheth, Chap. 16. 14. then warning is given, Behold, I come as a Thief, &c.

2. It

2. It is called another Sign; for that Sign, *chap.*12. was the Sign of the Devil's being thrown down in Heatheniſm; but this, of the Devil's throwing down out of Popery, and Chriſt's coming to ſet up his Kingdom. So that we of this Age do indeed ſtand in the midſt of the Times of theſe Vials, and ſo may ſee how much of Chriſt's Train is gone before, and what is to come hereafter, himſelf being to come in the Rear of all. Chap. 2.

The third Thing to be premiſed and obſerved, is, That they are called the laſt Plagues.

Chriſt had three ſorts of Enemies to ſubdue, by three ſeveral ſorts of Plagues.

1. Satan and his Falſe Worſhip, together with the Heatheniſh Empire, which he diſpatch'd by the ſix Seals, chap. 6.

2. The Roman Empire, which he ruined by the ſix Trumpets.

3. The Pope in the Weſt, and the Turk in the Eaſt, who ſucceeded in the place of the Roman both Eaſtern and Weſtern Empire; and for theſe he hath prepared ſeven Vials. And becauſe theſe are the laſt Enemies, therefore theſe Vials are called the laſt Plagues.

Thus much in general; now more particularly to deſcend to the ſeveral Contents of this Chapter.

There are two Things which are more eminently preſented to our view in this 15*th* Chapter.

Firſt, The Church, or Company of Believers ſtanding in the Temple, deſcribed from verſ. 2, to 5. and verſ. 8.

Secondly, The Angels, who are Executioners of the Vials out of that Temple, deſcribed from verſ. 6, to 8.

Firſt, For the Company from among whom the Angels come:

1. They have a Temple over their Heads, as verſ. 8. continually filled with Smoke, verſ. laſt; as at the firſt dedication of Moſes his Tabernacle, Exod. 40. 34, 35. and at the dedication of Solomon's Temple, (which was a larger Edition of that which Moſes had given the Pattern of) 1 Kings 8. 16. To ſhew, that during the Vials, there ſhould be new Erections, and Editions, and Reformations of the Temple; unto all which God ſtill gives the teſtimony of his Preſence.

As, 1. when that firſt Separation from Popery was made, and True Churches were ſet up by the Waldenſes, and Smoke filled their Temples.

2. In the Reformation made by Luther and Calvin, there was a farther Edition of the Temple, and Smoke did afreſh fill it alſo.

3. In the 11*th* Chapter, verſ. 1. you will meet with another Reformation, and caſting away the Outward Court; and Smoke will afreſh fill thoſe Newmeaſured Temples alſo: God ſtill giving new Teſtimonies of his Preſence, as new Editions of purer Churches do come forth.

2. Their Station in this Temple is upon a Sea of Glaſs; which (as you heard out of the 4*th* Chapter) was an alluſion to that Braſen Sea, in which the Prieſts waſhed themſelves. To ſhew, that this Company of Believers, from out of which the Vials do come, ſhould be ſuch as ſhould ſtill more and more purify themſelves afreſh in their ſeveral Ages, from thoſe Defilements of Doctrine and Worſhip which Antichriſt had brought into the Church. And they, in their ſeveral Succeſſions, diſcovering new and further Defilements, are therefore ſtill preſented as coming forth freſh and anew out of the Sea of Glaſs; and accordingly are preſented ſtanding upon the Brim, as being new come out from waſhing themſelves, and ſo growing purer and purer, until they become a Bride fully prepared for their Lord and King.

3. They are alſo preſented as Victors and Conquerors; for ſuch, through pouring forth theſe Vials, they do become; and in the end ſhall fully prevail over the Beaſt, and over his Image, and over his Mark, and over the Number of his Name; which are ſeveral Degrees of Popery and Antichriſtianiſm, whereof ſome are more groſs, and ſome more refined. All which they in like manner do by degrees, in their ſeveral Succeſſions, go on to diſcover, and to overcome; until by that time that theſe Vials are all poured out, they have got a full and perfect Conqueſt over all. And therefore in this general Deſcription are ſet forth as thoſe that had ſuch a full Conqueſt; for that (take them firſt and laſt) they ſhall have a perfect and compleat victory over all theſe. The meaning is not (as Mr. Brightman underſtands it) that this Company had firſt got a compleat Victory over all theſe, before the Vials began: but this is ſpoken of the whole Company and Succeſſion of them firſt and laſt conjunctively, the intendment being, to give a general deſcription of them, and to ſet down what they ſhould do and accompliſh by that time their whole Time is expired, and to ſhew, how by that time they ſhall have poured out their Vials, they ſhall obtain the Victory. Thus in like manner of Speech it is ſaid, verſ. 1. That in them is filled up (or fulfilled) the Wrath of God; expleta eſt ira Dei. Which is ſpoken as if it were already accompliſh'd and fulfilled; but the meaning is, that by that time they are all emptied, the Wrath of God will be throughly exerciſed and fulfilled through them and by them. And ſo doth this here, note out, not a full Victory before the Vials, but a compleat Victory in and through the pouring out of theſe Vials; and that this Company, e're the time of the Vials is fully expired, obtains it: For the Vials are themſelves the Means by which they do overcome; and for each degree of which Victory, they ſing a triumphant Song.

4. Theſe ſing the Song of Moſes. For the former of the Vials are alluſions to the Plagues of Egypt; and by that time that the fifth Vial comes, they will have drowned the Egyptians in the Red Sea, and ſo will ſing that Song, Exod. 15. And after that, they will ſing the Song of the Lamb, even his Marriage Song; as in the 19*th* Chapter, (which comes in after the Funeral Song of the City of Rome, or the fifth Vial in chap. 18.) verſ. 6, and 7. Let us be glad and rejoice, for the Marriage of the Lamb is come; that is, is approaching. Or this Song may refer to the Doctrine of the Goſpel, which now began to be taught among them more clearly: For Moſes his Song, Deut. 32. was Doctrinal; and ſo in the Old Teſtament it was ordinary to utter Matters of Doctrine in Songs. And thus in this Book the Doctrine of the Church is ſtill expreſſed, and is called a Song. And ſo whereas, during the dark Times of Popery, they ſung (as it were) a New Song, differing from Popiſh Doctrine; yet ſo confuſedly, that none could learn it, as Chap. 14. 3.

Now they have the Everlaſting Goſpel to preach, as Chap. 14. 6. and they ſing Moſes his Song, and the Lamb's, diſtinctly; they preach the Law and the Goſpel clearly and rightly, and make manifeſt his δικαιώματα, which we tranſlate [Judgments] but ſignifies his Juſtifications (as Rom. 8. 4.) of poor Sinners made manifeſt, as verſ. 4. The Doctrine of Juſtification by Chriſt being eminently revealed and made known in the Time of theſe Vials, and the Works of Redemption moſt clearly manifeſted.

And moreover theſe do alſo ſet up Chriſt, both in himſelf, and in his Relations to his Church, as calling him:

1. The Lord Almighty.
2. King of Saints.
3. The only Holy One.

And ſo,

1. As the only Ruler and Lord of his Church.
2. And King that muſt give Laws unto it.
3. As the Fountain of all Grace and Holineſs.

(In

Chap. 2.

(In a word) As a God only to be believed in, and worſhipped, as being only and alone Holy; They magnify nor Saints, nor Temples, nor the Pope, no, nor any Creature whatſoever: For ſo, Jer. 10. 7. the like Speech is uttered in oppoſition to all Falſe Gods; and therefore, ſay they, Who will not fear thee? or worſhip thee, and that, according to thine own ways preſcribed in thy Word, and not according to Men's Inventions. Juſt, and True, and Righteous are thy Ways, (that is part of their Song) and all Superſtitions and humane Inventions in Worſhip are falſe: So ſays David, I hate every evil Way, but thy Law do I love, as being only True and Righteous, Pſal. 119. Thus much for their Song.

Secondly, The Deſcription of theſe Angels, and their Preparations to pour out their Vials, you have from verſ. 6. of this 15*th* Chapter to the end, as you have the execution and pouring out of their Vials in the 16*th* Chapter.

The Angels are deſcribed as cloathed in White, as Prieſts, and girt with a golden Girdle of Alacrity, Strength, Sincerity, and Truth; for in Scripture Men are ſaid to be girt with all theſe. And one of the four Beaſts (that is, of the Officers of the Churches, whoſe Mouths in praying the Officers ſtill are) is ſaid to give theſe Vials unto theſe Angels, in that theirs and the Church's Prayers do fill up theſe Vials in their ſeveral Succeſſions. And the Plagues they execute are ſaid to be in Vials, both becauſe the Prayers of the Saints do fill up the Wrath poured out, (for chap. 5. the Vials are interpreted the Prayers of the Saints); and alſo in alluſion to the Expreſſion in the Old Teſtament, where God's Wrath is deſcribed by a Cup or Vial in the Hand of the Lord; as often in the Pſalms you have it. And Rome's Sin being expreſſed by a Cup of Abomination in her Hands; her Plagues are therefore fitly expreſſed by Vials and Cups of Wrath, irreſiſtably poured out upon their Heads from Heaven. And they are ſaid to be filled with the Wrath of God, that liveth for ever and ever: For that theſe Plagues are Spiritual as well as Corporal (as I ſhall ſhew); and are but the beginnings of an Everlaſting Wrath, as that Fire from Heaven upon the Sodomites, is ſaid to be an Everlaſting Fire, and ſo called by Jude.

Again, theſe Vials are ſaid to come out of the Temple; that is, out of the Church or Churches then erected. Which becauſe it follows the mention of the opening the Temple of the Tabernacle in Heaven: therefore ſome have miſtaken it, as if theſe Angels had come out of the Temple of the Teſtimony, mentioned verſ. 5. whereas that Temple there, is, by way of diſtinction, called, The Temple of the Tabernacle of the Teſtimony, even the Holy of Holies; and the opening of that Temple, not ſpoken in relation unto the Angels coming out, as opening upon their coming forth; but for the diſcovery of the Ark, as you have it interpreted under the ſeventh Trumpet, chap. 11. verſ. laſt, in alluſion to the Holy of Holies, which was kept vailed. Now by that 11*th* Chapter, it evidently appears, that the Vials are poured out before the opening of this Tabernacle of the Teſtimony in Heaven. For verſ. 5, and 6, you read of four Vials before the killing of the Witneſſes; and the fifth Vial is after their riſing; and the paſſing away of the ſecond Woe is the ſixth Vial; and then the ſeventh Vial, and the ſeventh Trumpet are all one, (as hath been often times ſhewed); and then comes the Tabernacle of the Teſtimony, or Holy of Holies to be opened, and the Ark to be diſcovered and ſeen in it, verſ. laſt of that Chapter. And in like manner here alſo, the opening of this Tabernacle is ſaid to be μετὰ ταῦτα, after theſe things; that is, after theſe Vials; which is a phraſe in this Book, always noting out things in a ſeveral Succeſſion performed, and a differing Viſion, as chap. 4. verſ. 1. and chap. 7. verſ. 9. And the mention of it comes in here, only to ſhew the Event of theſe Vials. The Temple therefore that theſe Angels come out of, is at the pureſt but the Temple of Prieſts; and yet filled with Smoke from the Glory and Power of God, it betokening his ſpecial, glorious, and powerful Preſence in and with the Church during the Time of the Vials, which the Smoke that filled the Temple at the Dedication, was a Sign of. And this Smoke here implies, and is the Sign of three Things.

PART II.

1. Of God's Preſence in theſe Churches: So Iſa. 4. 5. under the Alluſion to the Smoke in the Temple; God's Preſence in his Aſſemblies under the New Teſtament, is there ſpoken of. And here it is interpreted the Glory of the Lord; for ſo it follows, The Temple was filled with Smoke from the Glory of the Lord; that is, his glorious Preſence, which Iſa. 6. 1. is ſaid to fill the Temple.

2. Of God's Defence, and Protection of his Church; and therefore it is here alſo added, [and from the Power of the Lord]. So that none can enter in to hurt them within the Temple. And thus alſo Iſa. 4. 5. the Smoke is interpreted a Defence; and verſ. 6. there is ſaid to be a Covert and a Refuge from the Storm, &c.

3. Of Offence alſo to their Enemies. So in the 18*th Pſalm*, Smoke is made a Sign of God's Anger and Wrath; A Smoke aſcended in his Anger. And ſo, whereas it is ſaid, That no Man was able to enter into the Temple, one probable meaning of that expreſſion (to me) is, That whereas God poured forth upon the Enemies of his Church Vials of Wrath, and theſe Plagues were rained abroad upon them, (againſt which this Temple, (as was ſaid) was the only Refuge and Covert, Men ſtill uſing to fly unto the Temple, and to the Horns of the Altar, as being their Sanctuary) God in his juſt Judgment hardneth, and ſo keepeth thoſe his Enemies of the Popiſh Party, from joining themſelves to this his Temple; ſo that they, through the obdurateneſs of their Hearts, (of which you may ſtill read in the Vials) are not able to enter into it, and ſo periſh, and are deſtroyed by theſe Plagues. And whereas it is ſaid, They entred not in, till the ſeven Plagues were fulfilled; the meaning is, that they never entred, as Gen. 8. 7. and Pſalm. 112. 8. and Acts 3. 21. [Until] is put for [Never].

CHAP.

CHAP. III.

The Expoſition of Chapter 16. A Diviſion of the Vials; the two laſt briefly touch'd.

THE Execution of theſe two laſt Vials doth follow the five Firſt, from verſ. 1. to the 12*th*; and they are Vials upon the Beaſt, the Pope, and his Adherents; God by degrees plaguing them as he did the Egyptians; until the Fifth falling eminently upon the Seat of the Beaſt, Rome it ſelf, his Kingdom be ſo darkened and deſpoiled of its Glory and Power; that although the Beaſt may remain, for Jeſus Chriſt himſelf (at his coming, under the ſeventh Vial) to have the laſt blow at him, and the full glory of the Conqueſt; yet ſo weakened and darkened, as that I believe the Period of his Power to do (as the word is in the Original, chap. 13. 5.) for 42 Months, or 1260 Years, is there ſet, and the Date of his Leaſe expired.

Now for the 6*th* and 7*th* Vials; becauſe they are further off to come, and that the 7*th* Vial, and the preparation unto it, from verſ. 13. belongs to the Kingdom of Chriſt, as being the immediate making way thereunto; therefore I will but briefly touch upon both theſe, and diſpatch them firſt. The five firſt (eſpecially the 4*th* and 5*th*) being thoſe that concern theſe Times, and which chiefly ſerve for the opening the 11*th* Chapter, I ſhall treat more largely upon.

Now the 6*th* Vial is upon the great River Euphrates; that is, the Turk, whom the ſixth Trumpet left ſtanding in the Eaſt. And he is compared to the great River (which is the Epithete given to the River Euphrates in the Old Teſtament) as the Aſſyrian Monarch and his Army are called, in the 8*th* of Iſaiah, and the 7*th* verſe. And to the River Euphrates; for his firſt Seat was (as you heard out of Chap. 9. 14.) upon that River. Now this River is to be dried up, for the Kings of the Eaſt, the Jews, to poſſeſs their own Land, according to that Prophecy of their laſt Converſion, Iſa. 11. 13, 14. compared with the 15*th* and 16*th* verſes of the ſame Chapter.

The 7*th* Vial is general, upon the Air, the whole Power of Satan all the World over. The Reliques both of Turk and Pope, and of all the Churches Enemies throughout the World, (as verſ. 14.) muſtering up all their Forces againſt the Chriſtians in the Weſt, and the Jews in the Eaſt, are to be overthrown by Jeſus Chriſt himſelf, and his Armies; as you may read more at large in the 19*th* Chapter, from the 11*th* verſe to the end, that being an Explication of this Vial, the laſt upon the World, as the 18*th* Chapter is of the 5*th* Vial, the moſt eminent upon the Beaſt.

SECT.

PART II.

SECT. I.

Seven Things premiſed for the underſtanding the five firſt Vials, which are upon the Beaſt and his Company.

NOw for theſe five firſt Vials upon the Beaſt, Antichriſt, and his Adherents; I ſhall premiſe theſe things for the true underſtanding of them.

Firſt, That for the Times of them, they (as was ſaid) began with the Times of the firſt Separation from Rome, recorded Chap. 14. 6. and ſo do indeed contain all thoſe Steps and Degrees of ruining Antichriſt, firſt and laſt, from the firſt Time of the Church's attempting to come forth out, and ſeparating from this Egypt. And therefore the three firſt Vials are an Alluſion (as you ſhall ſee in the next Premiſe) unto thoſe Plagues which Moſes and Aaron, in bringing Iſrael out of Egypt, executed upon the Egyptians; and ſo do refer to the Times of the Church's Separation and firſt Reformation. It appears alſo from the thing it ſelf; for how can we think that all thoſe Diſcoveries of the Whore's Nakedneſs, and the falling off of theſe Kingdoms from her, (although they for a time ſhould begin to court her again) ſhould not be reckoned among the Vials, they having been well-nigh as great Plagues as are like yet to befal her, (except that her laſt Ruin)! And it appears likewiſe from this, that in the Vintage of the 14*th* Chapter, we find (as was obſerved) mention made of the Angel of the fourth Vial: Therefore the Times after that Vintage, muſt belong unto thoſe three Vials which preceded this fourth. And for the Time of the beginning of them, whether at the Harveſt, or the Voices of thoſe Angels that made the Separation, the Holy Ghoſt hath not left us without ſome Character whereby we may diſcern it, in the Story of that 14*th* Chapter, where the Song which the Church ſings, when the Vials do begin, is, (as you may ſee it there) Who ſhall not fear thee, O Lord, and glorify thy Name? for all Nations ſhall come and worſhip before thee; for thy Judgments are made manifeſt, &c. Of which this is one meaning, (though there is another) that the Plagues of theſe Vials now beginning, the Judgments of God are made manifeſt. Now ſee what the Voice of the firſt Angel is, (he who began the firſt Separation from Antichriſt, and firſt preach'd the Goſpel to every Nation) Chap. 14. verſ. 6, 7. His Meſſage unto all Nations is, Fear God, and give glory to him; for the hour of his Judgments is come; and worſhip him who hath made Heaven and Earth. That Angel did but begin to give warning to Antichriſt and his Company, of the Vials that approached: But then obſerve the Voice of the Second Angel, and you will find that the firſt Vial did begin as the effect of theſe two Angels preaching: For this ſecond not only calls Rome, Babylon, and diſcovers the Pope to be Antichriſt, but ſays, Babylon is fallen, is fallen; that is, the Foundation of her Ruin is laid. Now here began the firſt Vial, even in this diſcovery of him to be Antichriſt, whom before that, the ſuperſtitious World did never ſo much as ſuſpect. And whereas it is ſaid, Babylon is fallen, the Scripture ſpeaks of a Thing as done, when the Foundation of it is laid: So the Weſtern Empire is reckoned as taken away, then when the Wars of the Goths began, and when the firſt of the Ten Kingdoms was broken off from the Empire, Anno 410. (as was before ſaid, in the Expoſition of the 13*th* Chapter). And the Pope is from that Time reckoned to riſe with his ten Horns, though it was forty Years after e're all the ten Kingdoms were fully erected; yea, and ſeventy Years after e're the Power of the Weſtern Empire was wholly extinct. Thus in the like manner Iſa. 21. the Prophet ſays of Old Babylon, She is fallen, he propheſying at the very Time when the Medes firſt revolted from that Monarchy, and began to ſet up a Kingdom of their own, which afterward was to deſtroy Babylon, being alſo enabled thereto by that Revolt. Now ſo is it here, when the firſt open and profeſſed Revolt from Rome (as from a ſecond Babylon) was made by our Predeceſſors, then was the Foundation of her Fall laid, then (ſays the Angel) Babylon is fallen; and ſo there begins the firſt Vial (for the Vials are the means of ruining of it). Chap. 3.

A ſecond Thing to be premiſed is, That theſe Vials are expreſſed in an Alluſion unto the Plagues executed in Egypt by Moſes and Aaron; of which the firſt were not ſo great, but they ended in the drowning of thoſe Egyptians in the Red Sea; even as theſe do in the utter ruining of the Seat of Antichriſt.

The firſt is upon the Earth, and the effect of it, a noiſom and grievous ſore on the Men who have the Mark of the Beaſt; in Alluſion to that Plague of throwing Duſt in the Air by Moſes, which cauſed a Botch on Man and Beaſt then in Egypt.

The ſecond on the Sea, and the Waters thereof.

The third on the Rivers and Fountains, turning all their Waters into Blood. All this is a manifeſt Alluſion unto that turning the Egyptian Rivers, &c. into Blood, by Moſes.

The fourth is upon the Sun, and tormenteth Men with Fire. Which may be an Alluſion to the Puniſhment of Sodom. For ſo in the 11*th* Chapter, (where theſe four firſt Vials are enumerated) verſ. 5, 6. the Antichriſtian State is called Egypt or Sodom. Or rather it alludes to Moſes his conſuming by Fire that Company that offered up ſtrange Fire in the Wilderneſs, when they were come out of Egypt.

A third Thing to be premiſed is; That as in the Trumpets the Holy Ghoſt compared the Empire to a World, ſo here in the Vials he uſeth the ſame compariſon, comparing the Kingdom of the Beaſt, and the ſeveral parts of it to be plagued, unto ſeveral parts of the World. And as the four firſt Trumpets were ſo many degrees of ruining the Weſtern Empire; ſo are theſe Vials of ruining the Beaſt's World or Empire. The firſt Trumpet was on the Earth; the ſecond on the Sea; the third on the Rivers; and the fourth on the Sun. And whereas it was there ſhewed, that in Scripture any Kingdom or Body is uſually compared to a World, (which hath an Earth, and Heavens, &c.) wherein what is loweſt is the Earth, and what is higheſt is the Heavens, the Sun and Stars, &c. So in that Empire then, and now in this Antichriſtian Kingdom here, the parts of it are compared to an Earth, Sun, Sea, Rivers, &c.

Fourth Premiſe. And as I obſerved in the 13*th* Chapter, that the Pope and his Company were reſembled by a double Beaſt, one repreſenting the Political State of theſe Ten Kingdoms, which made up one Body under him as an Head; and the other, the Spiritual State of his Church and Clergy, (as they call it) which make up a diſtinct Body under him as their High Prieſt and Spiritual Head: So (anſwerably) this his Earth, and Rivers, and Sun, (which are the Parts of theſe his Kingdoms) may (according to the Analogy of this Repreſentation) be interpreted in a double ſenſe; either his Spiritual Earth, Sea, &c. or his Political Earth, Sea, &c.

Fifth Premiſe. Seeing that in the 11*th* Chapter, verſ. 8. his Kingdom is called Spiritual Egypt and Sodom; and this, in relation unto theſe very Plagues of the Vials (which are enumerated there, verſ. 5, 6.) [The City (ſays he) which is ſpiritually called Egypt and Sodom]; and that is more than meerly, or allegorically ſuch, it importing that this his Kingdom is a Spiritual Egypt, and a Spiritual Sodom. And it is a State (we know) that claimeth Spiritual Juriſdiction in Spiritual Things, and over the Souls of Men, (as Chap. 18. verſ. 13. hath it) and not only or principally in things outward and political, but in ordine ad ſpiritualia, in order to things Spiritual. Now therefore the Plagues (and ſo theſe Vials, they being the Plagues upon this Egypt and Sodom) upon this City, muſt needs be underſtood of Spiritual Plagues, upon the Souls and Spirits of Antichriſt's Adherents, as well as outward. For they muſt be anſwerable to the Egypt, upon which they are Plagues; yea, and ſeeing that it is both a Spiritual State, and yet withal, a Temporal Kingdom alſo for outward Power and Pomp; having an Earth, Sea, &c. as other worldly Kingdoms have: therefore they

ſhall

ſhall have double Plagues, Spiritual and Outward alſo, on their Spirits, and alſo on their outward worldly Kingdom. Even thus it became the Righteous God (as in relation to theſe Plagues he is called, Chap. 16. 5.) to proportion their Plagues to their Sins, and ſo to double unto her, double, according to her Works, (as the phraſe is. chap. 18. 6.) For him to ruin this Beaſt and his Adherents but outwardly only, (as he hath done other Monarchies) was not enough; for he ſinned, not only in aſſuming outward Power, Pomp, and Glory, and a Kingdom like to other Monarchies, (under the Name and Pretence of having Chriſt's Power) but a Spiritual Kingdom alſo. The Merchandize of this City was not only Gold and precious Stones, &c. chap. 18. 12. but likewiſe the Souls of Men too, (as it is there). She traded in Spirituals as well as Temporals; and therefore the higheſt Spiritual Judgments (as well as Temporal) ſhall befal that State, and the Abettors of it. And as the Plagues of Pharaoh and his Egyptians were Spiritual (in the hardening of their Hearts) as well as Temporal; ſo ſuch a ſpiritual Hardneſs and Impenitency is made mention of in ſome of theſe Vials, as well as outward Plagues. And therefore they are alſo ſaid, chap. 15. 7. to be the Wrath of God that liveth for ever, an eternal Wrath ſeizing upon the Souls of them on whom they are poured. And ſuch are theſe four firſt Vials, and ſo to be underſtood, both of Spiritual and Temporal Plagues.

I mention the four firſt eſpecially, becauſe there, where this City is called Spiritually Egypt, theſe four are enumerated, namely, chap. 11. 5, 6. And as it is evident that theſe Vials are in that 11*th* Chapter to be underſtood ſpiritually; ſo it is as evident, that the ſame Vials (as here in chap. 16. they are made mention of) are to be underſtood of outward Plagues; and ſo meant of both.

6. For the right underſtanding theſe Vials, I premiſe, That though there be a Firſt, Second, and Third Vial in order ſucceeding each other, and which in a ſucceſſive Order begin after each other, and have ſome ſpecial preciſe Time for their eminent pouring out and execution; yet ſo, as ſome ſprinklings of the Firſt may continue ſtill under the Second, Third, and Fourth; and ſome Reliques of the Second, under the Third, Fourth, &c. and ſo of the reſt. And this ſeems evident to me, in that their Sores begun under the firſt Vial, are made mention of under the fifth Vial, verſ. 11. of that Chapter. And ſo in like manner the ſame effect (namely, Blaſpheming) which is a part of the fourth Vial, (and an effect of it) is alſo continued in a further height under the Fifth. And ſo again, on the contrary, it may fall out that ſome droppings of a ſucceeding Vial, may begin in the Times of the Vial foregoing it, and go before, as the droppings of Storms do, before their Strength and Fulneſs comes; and ſo may theſe, before the extremity of pouring forth the Vial it ſelf. As for Example; During the Times of the fourth Vial, ſome droppings of the Fifth may begin, and ſome preparations to it, though ſtill the fulneſs of that, and every other Vial, hath a ſpecial Time in its due order ſucceeding.

The ſeventh and laſt Thing to be premiſed, is; That all the Plagues on the Popiſh Party, firſt and laſt, are reduceable to one of theſe Vials: For, Chap. 15. 1. they are ſaid to be the laſt Plagues, in which the Wrath of God is fulfilled upon that Party; and ſo every Drop and Sprinkling of Wrath and Vexation poured out, goes to fill up ſome Vial or other, as a part of it.

SECT.

SECT. II.

A particular and more large Explication of the five first Vials on the Beast and his Company.

NOw for a more particular Explication of them :

The first Vial is principally upon the Beast's Earth, the lowest part of his Kingdom (and this according to that Rule given) both Spiritual and Political. Now this Vial was the effect of those first and second Angel's preachings, Chap. 14. especially of that second Angel there : For the preaching the Gospel, and the discovery of the Pope to be that Antichrist, did draw away many of his Inferior Subjects, and of the common People in all Kingdoms, (namely the ten European Kingdoms, which are his Earth Political. And so his Authority and Interest in the Hearts of the People all Europe through was weakned, and the Number of the Worshippers of the Beast lessened. So as all the World did not now, without contradiction, go after him as they had wont. And there was an effect of this Vial also, upon his Spiritual Earth; which his Clergy were : for the Waldenses and their Followers, by their preaching in those Ages, discovering the uncleanness, idleness, and hypocrisy of the Priests, Monks, and Nuns, (who were the Beast's Enchanters) they did (as it were) cast up Dust in their Faces, as Moses did; and so they brake out in Botches, and became odious to all the People. So speaks the Vial, v. 2. There fell a noisom and grievous Sore upon the Men that had the Mark of the Beast. Now they are properly his Clergy; who being exempted from the Civil Power, are more peculiarly his Subjects and sworn Vassals; and indeed by Ordination do receive from him a Character indelible. (For this, see the Exposition upon *Chap.*13.) Who are also called the Worshippers of his Image, they being the upholders of his Idolatrous Doctrine. And accordingly we find in Story, that all those first Gospellers before Luther, made it the chiefest Subject and End of their Writings and Disputes, to render odious and vile, the Pharisaical Popish Clergy, (as in the Book of Martyrs abundantly appears).

Neither was this Judgment meerly outward, as only bringing shame through such an outward discovery of their hateful and abominable Iniquities, which was also the beginning of their Ruin; (for it made way for it in all Mens Hearts): But further, it is most certain, that the Effect of the Light of the Gospel, which in their preaching was discovered, proved really a Curse unto this Popish Clergy, in order to this their breaking forth in Filthiness and Botches : in that for this their not embracing it, but shutting their Eyes against it, God gave them up (by way of a Curse) unto all manner of gross Sins, of Uncleanness, Sodomy, &c. so as after this, to commit them with more greediness, than before this preaching of the Gospel; even as he did the Gentiles, Rom. 1. Because they with-held the Truth in Unrighteousness, therefore he gave them up the more unto vile Affections. So these, after the first Light of the Gospel began to dawn, they daily brake out into Botches and Boils more than ever they did before. And thus this Vial was a Spiritual Judgment upon them, as well as an Outward, in discovering their Sores unto their shame. And this is the first degree of their Spiritual Judgment under the first Vial.

The Second Vial is upon the Sea. And this is the Fruit and Effect of the third Angel's preaching, namely, Luther and his Followers; who as in their Doctrine they were raised up to a greater Light, (comparatively to the former); so the Fruit of their Doctrine was a further Plague, both upon the Political and Spiritual Sea of the Beast. The Sea in a Kingdom or Body Politick, is put for Jurisdiction over many People, (as was shewed in the second Trumpet, chap. 8.) and so here the Sea of the Beast, are those many Kingdoms, and Peoples, and Nations, and Tongues, which she sits upon, (as you may see it expounded pounded, chap. 17. 15.) Now after Luther's preaching, and his Followers, not only particular Persons (as before) were divided from the Pope, but whole Nations were rent from him, (as England, Germany, Sweden, Scotland, &c.) and his Sea lessened by a third part and more, and some of the ten Horns of the Beast wrung off, so becoming like as Members when divided from the Body, and (as the Similitude is vers. 3. to express that Division) as the Blood of a dead Man. And every living Thing died in those Seas divided from him; in that now those of the Popish Faction could not, through the alteration of Religion by Law, live in their Idolatrous Worship, so quietly, safely, and peaceably, as before. There was no free living or breathing for them in these separated Kingdoms.

And in like manner his Spiritual Sea also had a Vial poured upon it, even his abominable Doctrine and Worship; as, the Doctrine of Purgatory, Indulgences, Merit, &c. in which, as in the Sea, his Merchants (namely, his Priests) had brought in Gain, both to themselves, and to the Pope's Custom-house, (as the Expression is, chap. 18. 17.)

This Sea of the Beast's Doctrine is turned into Blood, and does (like the Blood of a dead Man) begin to putrify and stink; yea, and (which is a further Plague) to be damnable. Insomuch that those, who after so clear a Light of the Gospel now discovered, will still continue in that Doctrine, die and perish eternally. And so in that sense also it is true, which is said, vers. 3. that every living thing died in the Sea. And see how this agrees with the preaching of the third Angel, chap. 14. 9, 10. He preaching, that not only that Rome was Babylon, as the former was, but that if any one did worship the Beast, or his Image, the same should drink of the Wine of God's Wrath. And by that Wrath is meant Hell; for it follows, the Smoke of their Torments ascends up for ever and ever; that is, now they shall be sure to be all damned, who know the Truth, but embrace it not. And this was a further Spiritual Punishment upon them, above what their Doctrine was unto them in former Times, wherein through Ignorance Men remaining, many more of them were saved than now there are.

The Third Vial is upon the Rivers and Fountains; that is, those who serve to enlarge, or any way recover that his Sea again, or to sweeten it. They are therefore called Rivers, because as Rivers run from the Sea into the Sea again, so do these.

I shall now explicate both the Rivers and Fountains severally.

First, For his Fountains; They are the lesser Springs; and those,

1. The Spiritual Ones. When the Egyptian Waters were turned into Blood, we read, that they digged Fountains and Wells; and that they also were turned into Blood by Moses. So here, they when their Sea is become bloody, dig Fountains to live in. Which Fountains are their Writings and Writers since the Reformation, that with Learning and Eloquence, would labour to sweeten and make good some of their Sea-waters again, but in vain: Our Writers again confuting them, and turning all into Blood, as it was before. So as, still those among them that shall read the one and the other, cannot but so be convinced, that if they persist still in their Doctrine, they will be damned, (as the Curse is, 2 Thess. 2. 11, 12.)

2. Their Fountains Temporal and Political also. Such we may account those Politick Agents, the Jesuits, and others, that have, in all these Separated Kingdoms, attempted to restore this his lost Power and Jurisdiction. And the lesser Springs, (namely, particular Persons) have many of them been turned to Blood, whilst Laws enacted against them, (in England, 1581. in Holland, 86. in France, 84. and again in England 1605.) cut off many of them, and gave them Blood to drink, many of them being martyred; insomuch that they have a Martyrology, or Book of Martyrs, even as we have. Thus they have had a just Reward, as the Angel from the Altar cries, vers. 7. that is, True Worshippers in Churches, who through their Prayers had procured these Edicts, and therefore do now return the praise unto God's Justice, in retaliating to them and upon them. That Phrase [from the Altar] notes not out Martyrdom, (as some think) think) neither here, nor chap. 14. 18. (but this Phraſe [the Souls under the Altar] is, that which importeth Martyrdom, as chap. 6.) but [Altar] is here put to ſignify Worſhip; and ſo, the Angel out from the Altar, or place of Worſhip, is put to ſignify thoſe publick Worſhippers and Prieſts of God that ſtand at the Altar, or in publick Aſſemblies, and give thanks for theſe Judgments upon all Occaſions. Their Acclamation is, that as they had dealt by us, ſo now themſelves were dealt with, and indeed, juſt in the ſame manner; for they had ſingled out particular Perſons, and put them to death by bloody Laws eſtabliſhed; and theſe Kingdoms being fallen off, have enacted the like, and put them to death in the like publick manner. Chap. 3.

In the ſecond place; this third Vial is upon his Rivers alſo, and greater Streams, namely, thoſe Armadoes and Navies from out the Sea of thoſe Kingdoms that continue ſtill to uphold the Beaſt, and endeavour to lay all Kingdoms into this one Sea again. As the Spaniards, both againſt England in 88; and againſt Holland often ſince, ſent out to regain Rome's Juriſdiction; who yet have ſtill been defeated. And unto this Head may be reduced the Defeatment of that late Navy, 1639, (ſent forth to the ſame end) as a ſprinkling of this Vial, (though now be the Times of the fourth Vial) ſtill going on, according to the Rule given in the 6th Premiſe.

The Fourth Vial is upon the Sun; and to the Angel that is Executor of it, there is power given to ſcorch Men with Fire. The Effect whereof is, their Blaſphemy. This Vial ſeemeth to me to have two diſtinct parts;

1. The Effuſion of this Vial upon the Sun.
2. The ſcorching with Fire thoſe that adhere to the Beaſt. And according to my former General Rules, I do interpret it, both of Outward, and of Spiritual Plagues, and both of them falling on the Popiſh Party. And ſo, the former Part of the Vial to import an Outward Plague, and the latter a Spiritual Puniſhment.

Now, 1. for the Vial upon the Sun. The Sun here (according to the third Premiſe or Rule given) may be put for the more illuſtrious Light, or Prince, adhering to the Popiſh Party, and ſhining in his Political Heaven, whereof he is the great God or Jupiter. And this muſt be either the Emperor, or the King of Spain, or (as it may be) both; they both being of the ſame Family of Auſtria.

The iſſue of theſe German Wars (when the Popiſh Party ſhall once have had Blood enough given them to drink) ſhall be either the Ruin of the one, or the other, or both; and if not of them both, then of the Auſtrian Family in Germany (as Mr. Mede firſt well conjectured) though it may be the Hint of his Conjecture might have been taken from what was Mr. Parker's Opinion of this Vial long before; who interpreted this Sun to be ſome Proteſtant Prince in Germany, who ſhould firſt have a part of this Vial poured upon him by the Popiſh Party; but being thereby provoked, and afterwards raiſed again, ſhould (like the Sun) ſcorch them with his heat, and ſo only the latter part of this Vial ſhould fall on them. Thus Mr. Parker, Anno 1616, did firſt interpret this Vial, long before theſe German Wars. But I do much rather incline to Mr. Mede's Opinion, becauſe theſe Vials are wholly peculiar to the Beaſt and his Company, and to thoſe profeſſed Enemies of the Church who adhere unto him. And ſo this firſt part of the Vial upon the Sun, cannot be underſtood of any Proteſtant, but of thoſe that do adhere to the Beaſt, even as well as the latter part of it, ſcorching them with Fire.

Now if this Sun be one of theſe two, either the King of Spain, or the Emperor, I rather take the latter: For the King of Spain, though now the greater Light in the preſent Horoſcope, and ſo would, rather of the two, ſeem to be this Sun: Yet conſidering thoſe more elderly and former Times, the Empire of Germany hath, for this 800 Years, been the eminenteſt Principality in Europe, and hath upheld the Pope the moſt, and in thoſe Times done more that way PART II. than any other King, (though indeed ſome of the Emperors oppoſed the Pope). Now God in bringing Puniſhments on Kings and Kingdoms, reckoneth with them for what their Predeceſſors in State have done, and reſpecteth former Times as much, if not more then preſent. And beſides, this German Empire was peculiarly of the Pope's Creation, being by him ſet up in the firſt Foundation of it, in Charlemain; Even as God is ſaid to ſet up the Sun in his Firmament, the Work of his Hands, Pſal. 19. So the Pope may be ſaid to have ſet up this Sun in his. And ſo the Ruin of the Emperor is more peculiarly a Puniſhment, reſpecting the Papal Seat and Authority, than the Ruin of any other Prince: He having ſo peculiar an Intereſt in him, as in his Eldeſt Son, and chief begotten. This Vial Mr. Mede thought to have been in execution in that great prevaling of the King of Sweden againſt the Emperor, (Whoſe Death diverted many Mens Thoughts from that Interpretation). But ſurely, though he proceeded not to throw down that Sun from his Heaven, yet thoſe glorious Victories of his, and quelling of the Popiſh Party, may well be accounted in it ſelf a Vial, although it ſhould proceed no farther, and ſuch a darkning of this Sun, as he will never more recover his ancient Glory and Splendour; and that King did lay ſuch a Foundation of weakening his Power, as may end in the utter ruin of that Family in the iſſue of theſe Wars. Others have interpreted this Vial to be upon the Pope's own Temporal and Spiritual Authority, which is his Sun, or chief Glory (for ſo Sun in the Old Teſtament, and the darkning of it, is put for Glory, and the obſcuring of it; as Iſa. 60. 20. Jer. 15. 9.) And ſo, that Power and Authority which the Pope once had in Temporals, is here to be underſtood; He ſo eminently and conſpicuouſly ſhining over Princes in their Temporal Power, that (as their own Decretals ſpeak) they uſed to call the Pope, and the Emperor, the two great Luminaries in Heaven, the Sun and the Moon, entitling the Pope the Sun, and the Emperor the Moon. But how hath this his Glory, in the Conſciences of his own Vaſſals, and in the Eyes of thoſe Princes who ſometimes were ſubject to him, waned more and more? (which now at laſt may haply grow yet more dim). The whole Kingdom of France ever denied him that abſolute Temporal Power he once challenged. And in theſe latter Times, how is the King of Spain rather become the Sun, and the Pope the Moon? who is glad to beg Light from him, and to flatter other Princes, to be by them upheld, who once flattered him, and whom he excommunicated at his pleaſure. So that the Pope indeed is but the Chaplain to the King of Spain, whom he makes uſe of for the acquiring of an Univerſal Monarchy. But which of theſe, or whether both of theſe are here meant, the Event muſt judg. And thus much for the firſt Part of this Vial.

Now, 2. for that other part which follows, [and power was given him to ſcorch Men with Fire]. This hath been much miſtaken; As if becauſe the Sun uſeth to ſcorch with Heat, therefore that Power were here given to this Sun, to ſcorch with Fire; and ſo it ſhould refer to the Sun's Heat. Whereas (I take it) it is mentioned as a diſtinct Power given to this fourth Angel; that as he hath power to pour out a Vial on the Pope's Sun, (be it taken as Political, or otherwiſe) ſo alſo that he hath a further Power given him, to ſcorch all thoſe with Fire, that ſhall continue to advance the Pope in theſe his declining Times. Which (as I take it) doth (according to the Rule given) properly refer to a further and greater height of Spiritual Puniſhments, (and ſo this latter part makes up the Spiritual Plague, as the former part did the Political and Outward Plague) inflicted upon the Upholders of the Beaſt in the Times of this Vial; even upon the Learned among them, eſpecially thoſe who now take pains to write for him, or to bring in his Authority into theſe European Kingdoms again, where the Light of the Goſpel ſhines ſo clearly and perſpicuouſly, as they cannot but long ſince have been convinced of it; their Sea being turned into Blood, and diſcovered to be corrupt, and their Writings (their Springs) ſo clearly refuted and turned to Blood alſo, that thoſe that live in thoſe Kingdoms, and ſtill labour to bring in Popery again, cannot but manifeſtly go againſt their own Light and Knowledg.

Now

Now to puniſh this ſo preſumptuous and high Rebellion, againſt ſo much Light ſtill ſhining, and Age after Age encreaſing, the Angel (or the Executioners of this Vial) hath Power to ſcorch them with Fire. And this is manifeſtly interpreted, chap. 11. where the Holy Ghoſt, ſpeaking of this Vial, ſays, (verſ. 5.) I will give Power to my Two Witneſſes, (who are all one with theſe Angels); and if any Man will hurt them, Fire ſhall proceed out of their Mouths, and devour their Enemies: and if any will hurt them, he muſt in this manner be killed. The Puniſhment there recited is Spiritual, (as all the reſt there mentioned are) for they do execute it as Witneſſes, by propheſying; and therefore this Fire is ſaid to come out of their Mouths. And thoſe other Plagues (as their ſtopping the Rain, &c. verſ. 6.) muſt needs be ſo underſtood, namely, in a Spiritual Alluſion. And ſo this of devouring with Fire, notes out the higheſt kind of Puniſhment that Men are capable of, as being killed with a Witneſs, [in this manner muſt they be killed]. And it is alſo there made the Puniſhment of a wilful ſinning of Men, even of thoſe that ſet their Wills againſt God, and theſe his Witneſſes: For ſo the Emphaſis is put [if any Man [will] hurt them] and it is twice ſaid, as making them go wholly and fully againſt Knowledg, and ſo to ſin wilfully. Now both this here, and that in Chap. 11. do ſeem to be an Alluſion, either to the Fire of Sodom (this City being called Spiritually Sodom) which Jude 7. is called, the Vengeance of the Eternal Fire; becauſe that Fire that came down from Heaven upon the Sodomites, was but a beginning of Hell unto them, and a Type of it unto us. Or elſe (to which I rather encline) it is an alluſion unto that Fire that came out of Moſes his Mouth (namely at his Prayer) unto Nadab and Abihu, for offering ſtrange Fire unto God, Levit. 10. 1, 2. and upon Corah's Company, Numb. 16. when they ſaid, All the People are Holy. Which, Heb. 10. 27, 28. is brought in as the Type to expreſs their Puniſhment, who ſin wilfully after the knowledg of the Truth, and ſo ſin againſt the Holy Ghoſt, verſ. 26. [If we ſin wilfully, after we have received the Knowledg of the Truth, there remaineth no more Sacrifice for Sins, but a certain fearful looking for of Judgment, [ἐκδοχὴ κρίσεως] or receiving Judgment in their own Conſciences; which he there calls fiery Indignation that ſhall devour the Adverſaries, [ὑπεναντίους] under-hand Adverſaries, (ſo the word is) as that Company was unto Moſes, pretending to be for God and his People; all the People are Holy (ſay they) and ſo themſelves were. And that unto this Fiery Indignation that fell on that Company, the Apoſtle's alluſion there was (who in that Epiſtle openeth many Types) as making it a Type of the Torment and Puniſhment of ſuch kind of wilful Sinners under the New Teſtament, is evident by what follows in the next, verſ. 28. He that deſpiſed Moſes Law, died without Mercy, under two or three Witneſſes; then of how much ſorer Puniſhment ſhall he be thought worthy, &c. Now bring but Paul's Expoſition of that Type there, unto this Alluſion, that is uſed both in Chap. 11. and alſo here; and it helps fully to expound this part of this Vial, (as I ſhall ſhew when I come to open the 11*th* Chapter, verſ. 5. unto which I muſt refer you for the full Expoſition of it). As Paul there calls this Sin, a ſinning wilfully: So, chap. 11. their Sin is expreſt twice by the malice of the Will. And that it is this Sin, or at leaſt an high kind of preſumptuous ſinning againſt Knowledg, accompanied with Terror, that is here meant in this Vial, chap. 16. 8, 9. appears further alſo by the Effect here mentioned, namely, their blaſpheming the Name of God, who hath Power over theſe Plagues. Now blaſpheming the Holy Ghoſt, or the workings of him, in others (knowing they are his Works, as here theſe do blaſpheme God, knowing they are his Plagues) this is the very Spirit of this Sin: And then final Impenitency is here alſo added as the Effect of it, that they repented not. So that it is preſumptuous ſinning at leaſt, that is here meant. And you may further obſerve, that this Plague goes on in the fifth Vial; and this Sin againſt Knowledge, grows up to a further height under that Vial; for there they are ſo ſcorched, that they gnaw their Tongues, as Men in Hell. And that in theſe Times (the Times of the fourth Vial) this ſin againſt the Holy Ghoſt grows very riſe and common, by reaſon of the abundance of Light and Conviction that ſhineth in Churches, hath long been the obſervation of Godly Men, who have had Senſes exerciſed to diſcern the Spirits of Men growing in Rage and Madneſs, beyond the ſuppoſal of any other Principle that ſhould

PART II. act them in their wrap'd and eccentrick Motion, and violent Proceedings. And surely, how that many of the Learned among the Jeſuits themſelves, ſhould come to commit this Sin, is not hard to conceive : For in their Younger Years, they are bred up in ways of Devotion, and have Truth and Light enough among them to give them a taſte of the Powers of the World to come : Who yet, after their ſtudying our Writings, and diſcerning the Truth, do, for Worldly ends, wilfully go againſt it ; and being once engaged in thoſe ends, they fall to deſpiſe the Truth, and are given up unto a wilful ſinning of this great Sin, through a juſt hand of God upon them ; they being ordained to grow worſe and worſe, as their Light encreaſeth ; even as it became God under theſe Vials to puniſh them. And ſo, as that firſt ſmall and weaker Light under the firſt Vial being rejected, their Puniſhment was, a giving of them up unto groſs Sins : and then further, under the ſecond and third Vials, their Doctrine having been by a clearer Diſcovery made to the Perſiſters in it, damnable ; nothing was now left, (they yet perſiſting, and God being engaged to riſe higher in his Plagues) but that God ſhould ſtrike Hell-Fire into their Conſciences, and ſeal up Reprobation unto them. And thus it became him not to leave theſe Oppoſers and Murderers of the Saints and Holy Witneſſes of God in all Ages, till he had given many of them up to this Sin, of all other the higheſt, ſo to make full the meaſure of their Iniquities, before that Kingdom and State be finally ruined ; as he did the Phariſees in that laſt Age (when he meant to bring on them all, their Fore-fathers killing his Prophets in Jeruſalem, giving them up unto this Sin, as the effect of Chriſt's Miniſtry, (as this here of the Witneſſes Teſtimony).

But (above all), how thoſe that Apoſtatiſe, and become of the Popiſh Party, having lived, and been brought up in a Land of Uprightneſs, (as it is Iſa. 26.) and yet will not behold the Majeſty of the Lord ſhining round about them, but relinquiſh the Truth they are educated in, and would bring in the Worſhip and Doctrine of the Beaſt and Whore, after ſo clear a Light and powerful Preaching ſo long enjoyed, (towards the latter end of the Harveſt, and Summer growing more bright than ever) who yet in Hypocriſy deny this to be their Aim, and yet their Deeds do ſo manifeſt it, that all the World accounts them Popiſh, and to be of his Faction, (and ſo they merit the Title of the Number of his Name) being Spirits, ſuch as Rome hath not worſe, in Malice and Enmity againſt God's Witneſſes : How a Man's Thoughts (I ſay) ſhould excuſe many of theſe as innocent, from preſumptuous Sins at leaſt ; yea, and this great Tranſgreſſion alſo ; is as hard not to think it, as the Thing it ſelf is hard to be thought of them. For their Venom, Rage, Subtilty, Hypocriſy, and under-hand oppoſing the Saints, is ſuch, as the Godly do almoſt generally ſuſpect them for this Sin. And indeed, what other Principle could act Men ſo, cannot well be imagined. Their Caſe being in this, worſe than that of the Phariſees ; in that they had been brought up in Darkneſs and Ignorance of the Righteouſneſs of God, and of the Meſſiah, when the Miniſtry of John and of Chriſt came upon them, calling on them to acknowledg and embrace Chriſt as the Meſſiah ; whom being but a Carpenter's Son, they never acknowledged ; and yet they ſinned that Sin, through their ſmothering that New Light, (becauſe their owning him, would have put themſelves out of Credit, and have ſet up Chriſt). But theſe Men in this our Age have been brought up in the contrary Truth and Light, and have both profeſſed it, ſubſcribed to it, and preached it ; and yet they love this darkneſs of Popery, and embrace this Carted Whore, and courting her, would bring her into their Tents in the Face of Moſes, and of the whole Congregation ; and they loath the Truth of the Goſpel, and of the Faith they once received, and this, in the face of the cleareſt Sun-ſhine, and Light (that ever ſhone) round about them. One would think God ſhould deſtroy them viſibly : but they muſt do one exploit for him firſt ; their Deſtiny further is, that they ſhould kill the Witneſſes for this their ſcorching them through the powerful Teſtimony of their Lives and Prophecy ; and ſo be even with them, and overcome them yet before the fifth Vial comes. And though as yet they have not got a full Victory, yet they are now a making War, and ſhall prevail, and baniſh and diſperſe them among Tongues and Nations throughout out Europe. But by that Time the fifth Vial comes, theſe Witneſſes in the end ſhall again have overcome them, who are indeed that Number of the Beaſt's Name, the laſt of all his Company to be overcome, as Chap. 15. 2. they being the laſt ſort of his Champions, even theſe Names of Men [ὀνόματα ἀνθρώπων] (as they are called chap. 11. verſ. 13. and they ſhall be killed inſtead of the Witneſſes, at their Reſurrection, as the firſt Degree and Preparation to the fifth Vial. Chap. 3.

The Fifth Vial is upon the Throne, or Seat of the Beaſt; which is plainly Rome it ſelf, which was the old Seat of the Dragon, the Heatheniſh Empire, which Satan did, as it were, openly govern that Empire under Heatheniſh Idolatry. But after that, this Seat was reſigned by the Dragon unto the Pope, at his firſt Riſing, Chap. 13. 2. Which City the Sybills long ſince propheſied of, ſhould again become a Sheep-coat. And the Holy Ghoſt, in Chap. 18. that it ſhould be thrown down as a Mill-ſtone, and be no more found at all, but ſhould become the Habitation of Devils only, and the dwelling of every foul Spirit for ever. Of this Vial we may ſay, as the Diſciples ſaid to Chriſt; Now he ſpeaketh plainly, and not in Parables, as before. Only, as the other Vials are to be taken in the largeſt ſenſe, ſo I think this is, (though not in a Spiritual Senſe; for he ſpeaks plainly, and not in Figures). And therefore, as was ſaid chap. 13. in the explaining of that ſecond Beaſt, That not alone the Pope is that Beaſt, but concrete, and together with him, his Clergy, who make up one Body with him as their Head. And ſo it may be, that by Seat of the Beaſt here, is not only and ſimply meant Rome, the Sea and Seat of that chief Biſhop the Pope; but it may be extended to other Seas and Seats that fall together with it; namely of ſuch of the Clergy, whether in Italy or elſewhere, as cleave unto the Beaſt, and profeſs themſelves of his Number and Company. Who now under this fifth Vial, are tumbled down from their uſurped Seats, Thrones, and Dignities; together with this their Head, whoſe whole Kingdom is now become full of Darkneſs and Obſcurity. Yet ſo, as eminently Rome, the proper Seat of the Beaſt, is here intended, and in the Letter of this Vial held forth as the Subject of it upon which it falls. And with the fall of Rome, the Number and Time of the Beaſt's Reign and Kingdom, is reckoned as fulfilled; namely, his 1260 Years allotted him to do in. Which Years have now their Period. And although the Popedom remains to be deſtroyed by the ſeventh Vial; yet his Glory is here reckoned as gone and taken from him; and he is now reſerved alive, only for a further and more glorious execution. Therefore it is ſaid, His Kingdom is darkned; For now he is put by his ſeven Hills, his Seat: His Seaven-headed Kingdom is no longer reckoned of, (as Mr. Mede reaſons). But that which hath chiefly confirmed me in the Opinion, that the Period of the Beaſt's Kingdom is by the Holy Ghoſt reckoned to end with this fall of the City of Rome, is, That I obſerve the 17*th* and 18*th* Chapters are principally and on purpoſe added; firſt, to preſent this City of Rome in all her Bravery, before her Ruin, as chap. 17. and then to ſing a ſolemn, ſtately, and triumphant Song, for her Ruin and Deſtruction, as Chap. 18. throughout. Now that the Holy Ghoſt ſhould make this Ruin of the City that hath ſo long reigned (as verſ. laſt of Chap. 17.) over the Kings of the Earth, ſo great a matter of Triumph, and ſo eminent above all Things elſe in this Book, imports, That the laſt and fatal Period of that fourth Roman Monarchy (of which that City was to be the Seat, and the Beaſt the laſt Head) is here to be accounted as come, and the number of its Years expired, the Beaſt's Kingdom being now as good as at an end. He may indeed raiſe ſome trouble, and again make ſome reſiſtance, after the ſixth Vial; but Reign any more he ſhall not: For otherwiſe, this had been Pæana Triumphalem ante Victoriam canere, to triumph before an aſſured Victory; which the Holy Ghoſt would not have done, upon this Occaſion, but reſerved it till after the ſeventh Vial.

But then was to come another manner of Triumph, more high and glorious, for the Marriage of the Lamb, when Rome's Ruin, and the Beaſt's Kingdom, will be forgotten. And therefore God ordained it to be performed at the Funeral

PART II. Funeral of this Great Whore, the City of Rome. And it is much that two whole Chapters ſhould be ſpent on purpoſe to ſet forth the Pageants of the Church's Triumph over her. Surely, here this Great Kingdom ends; and therefore, after that the Church prepares for the Lamb's Marriage, Chapter 19.

Now that that Whore preſented in thoſe two Chapters, (the 17*th* and 18*th*) is this City of Rome, is evident by the laſt words of the 17*th* Chapter. The Whore is that great City that reigns over the Kings of the Earth. And ſo thoſe two Chapters are but a fuller ſetting forth, and enlargement of this ſame fifth Vial, as being the moſt Eminent, and the moſt Fatal of the Vials upon the Beaſt. Which Chapters therefore, I ſhall not need to ſpend time in explicating of, but do now haſten to the Expoſition of the 11*th* Chapter, which was by me mainly intended, becauſe that contains the State of the Church, and the Condition of it in theſe Times, and thoſe that are next a coming upon us. And I join that next unto the Vials, becauſe theſe Vials ſerve directly to expound it; and it mentioning the four firſt Vials, goes on then to ſhew what ſhall befal the Churches of the Reformation, under the fourth Vial, and afore the Fifth; with which fifth Vial thoſe 1260 Years, or 42 Months of the Pope's Kingdom (there in that Chapter computed) are to end and expire, (according to the Notion even now given). And as the 14*th* Chapter ſhewed us the Condition of the Church within it ſelf, to the Times of the fourth Vial (as was proved); ſo this 11*th* Chapter begins where the 14*th* Chapter ends. And from thence the Supplement of the Story of the Church's various Condition is to be fetch'd; as will appear in the opening of it.

SECT. I.

PROLEGOMENA.

Five Generals premiſed for the underſtanding of it.

THE firſt is to ſhew, Who this Angel here ſpoken of is, and what is his Purpoſe, and when the Time of his coming down here in this Viſion. And for this, know, that the Angel who comes down here, and delivers all the Contents of this 11*th* Chapter, unto verſ. 15. unto John, and that, immediately by word of Mouth, is Chriſt himſelf; as appears by his words, verſ. 3. [I will give power to my Two Witneſſes] which no Created Angel could ſpeak. And obſerve withal, that Chriſt himſelf doth ſpeak no where in this Book, but only in this, and in the firſt Chapter. And above all obſerve, that this is the very ſame Angel that came to Daniel in the end of his Prophecy, to confirm it with an Oath, chap. 12. of that his Prophecy. This his alike Geſture here and there, doth argue: there, lifting up his right Hand to Heaven, and ſwearing by Him who liveth for ever, verſ. 7. and ſo here, taking the very ſame Oath, with the ſame Ceremony alſo, verſ. 6. of chap. 10. And then you may take notice, that his Oath is taken about the very ſame thing, and to the ſame purpoſe. You ſhall find that that Prophecy of Daniel, containeth (though more confuſedly) the very ſame things that this Prophecy of the Revelation does more clearly. As namely, the Tyranny of the fourth Roman Monarchy, and the oppreſſion of the Church thereby, firſt by the Heatheniſh Empire, then, under the laſt Head of it, the Pope (of whom Daniel had propheſied, chap. 11. of his Prophecy, from the 36*th* verſe to the end); after whoſe Time expired (as Daniel had ſhewn) ſhould come in a Fifth Monarchy of the Saints, chap. 7. All which things you have in this Book, and the Viſions of them more diſtinctly preſented. As, namely, how under the ſeventh Trumpet, after the Time of the Beaſt expired, that ſame glorious Kingdom was to come in. Thus, in the ſubject Matter of both they do agree; and ſo alſo in ſetting down the Time determined by God, how long this laſt Head, the Pope, and his Tyranny, ſhould continue, do theſe two Prophecies and theſe two Angels both agree. For concerning this Time, and the ending of the Tyranny of this laſt Head (the Pope) over the Church (after which ſhould come in the Kingdom of Chriſt) it is, that the Angel there in Daniel doth take that his Oath: And diſcourſeth of that his Time, and the manner of the ending of his Tyranny, in that 12*th* Chapter of Daniel, and at the end of that whole Prophecy. And (anſwerably) concerning the ending of that very Time, and the manner of the ending of the Beaſt's Tyranny, and the ſucceeding of Chriſt's Kingdom when that is ended; that is the very thing that the Angel here ſweareth about, and in like manner diſcourſeth of juſt at the end of this firſt Seal-Prophecy. So that his Oath and Speech, both there and here, are about the very ſame thing. And obſerve the accord in both: for there (Dan. 12. 7.) he ſwears, That, It (namely, the Pope's Reign) ſhould be for a Time, Times, and half a Time; (ſo mentioning it there confuſedly, and more indefinitely); And when he (that is, that laſt King, the Pope, the Head of that Monarchy, whom Daniel had laſt propheſied of in the fore-going Chapter, from the 36*th* verſ. to the end) ſhall have accompliſh'd to ſcatter the Power of the Holy People; then all theſe things ſhall be fulfilled: that is, then is the Time, when theſe things (which he had ſpoken of to be done juſt before Chriſt's Kingdom) ſhall begin to take end and accompliſhment.

Now in a direct correſpondency and anſwerableneſs unto the Angel in Daniel, doth this Angel here come down in this Viſion, now, at the very end of that Time, (according to that courſe of Time run out in this firſt Seal-Prophecy) which that Angel in Daniel had ſworn about; even now when this fatal Period of the Fourth Monarchy (according to the Series of this Viſion) was near approaching.

And firſt he renews the Oath then taken, and ſwears again here, (chap. 10.7.) That Time ſhall be no longer; but that in the Days of the ſeventh Trumpet, the Myſtery ſhall be fulfilled, which is ſpoken of by all the Prophets: that is, the Fifth Monarchy, or the Kingdom of Chriſt, (which was to ſucceed the other) of which all the Prophets ſpeak, as you have it Acts 3. 21. Theſe words of the Angel's Oath do imply, that now that the Viſions of all Times paſt in the former Seal-Prophecy, from the Primitive Times, had brought Things to the laſt Scene of the World's Time; Now (ſays he, as ſtanding in the Extremity, and towards the approaching end of all) Time ſhall be no longer, (or, as Mr. Brightman well interprets the word) [Delay] ſhall be no longer. Stay now but a little (ſays Chriſt,) here you are at the laſt Sands; tarry but till the ſeventh Trumpet blows, it will end all.

And (accordingly) the Angel here in this 11*th* Chapter, explains diſtinctly by word of Mouth, what, and how much that Time of the Pope, mentioned in the Oath in Daniel, was; and what that accompliſhing to ſcatter the Holy People, (which in the Oath in Daniel, was made the immediate Fore-runner of the fulfilling of all things) alſo was. So that indeed this 11*th* Chapter here is, as concerning the Point of Time, but an Explication of that 12*th* Chapter of Daniel, at leaſt of that part thereof, and by this Angel's Oath and Speech there. And it is the ſame Angel cometh here to expreſs diſtinctly (as became the Revelation) what was there delivered darkly and indefinitely. And it is as if the Angel here had ſpoken thus, or to this effect, (in more plain words, for the comfort of the Church):

'Now Beloved, I come now, after ſo long a while worn out, to bid you to 'lift up your Heads; for Time now in theſe days of the ſixth Trumpet is expi-'ring, and my Kingdom is at the Door: for the Times of the Beaſt, propheſied 'of by Daniel, (of which Beaſt you ſhall hear more in this little Book-Prophe-'cy, which is open in my Hand, and which I here bring with me, and give you) 'do now ſhortly end and determine. Daniel's period of a Time, Times, and 'half a Time, allotted the Beaſt, the Pope, the laſt Head and King to reign in 'the Fourth Roman Monarchy, is now in theſe Times very ſhortly to expire, 'and with him the Times of this preſent oppreſſing World. And that you, my 'Church, may know, and have infallible warning, when the expiring of this 'Beaſt's Time to ſcatter the Holy People ſhall be, I will both explain to you how 'long this Time in Daniel, (where it is but confuſedly mentioned) is allotted 'him to ſcatter the Holy People, my Witneſſes; and I will alſo tell you, how 'or in what manner it ſhall be, that he ſhall accompliſh (as Daniel's phraſe is) 'to ſcatter the Power of the Holy People; that is, for your comfort I will reveal 'to you, and deſcribe the very manner of that eminent and laſt Scattering, 'which in the Oath in Daniel is made the immediate Sign, when Antichriſt's 'Ruin, and all thoſe other things, ſhould begin to be fulfilled. And further, I 'will preſent to you what the Face of the Church ſhall be in that Age imme-'diately before the ſcattering the Holy People; that ſo you may have, together 'at once, both a true compute of the Time, as alſo of ſuch Occurrences (and 'ſuch a Face of the Sky preſented) as may be an eminent Signal unto you: 'that when you ſee theſe Things done, then know, that the Time is expiring,

'and determining. And this I my ſelf do thus immediately inform you of, be- Chap. 4.
'cauſe that laſt ſcattering will be ſo great a one, as all the Faith you have
'will be put to it: and therefore it is that I have took that Oath, as it were,
'(now) in theſe Times; for that your Faith had need of it, to confirm it.
'Which Oath therefore do you remember and have in your Eye; for even now 'your Redemption draws nigher than you are aware of. This is the firſt Thing I premiſe.

2. PROLOGOMENON.

Now in the ſecond place, obſerve in how fit a Scene or Place in this Comedy, or Viſion of all Times ſucceſſively, hitherto acted before John, and by him penned for us, doth this Angel Chriſt here take to enter upon the Stage, and act this Part in. You before heard at large, how that the Seals and Trumpets, in Chapters 6, 7, 8, 9. contained one Prophecy, that ran over all the Times from John until the end: and then, that the little Book, that is open in the Hand of this Angel here, Chap. 10. doth contain another Prophecy of the Church, which in like manner begins at the Times of John, and ſo again runs over all Times unto the End.

Now this Angel ſteps in now, juſt now, as in the laſt Age, and towards the expiring of the ſixth Trumpet, and ſo of that firſt Revolution of all Time, with his New or Second Prophecy in his Hand, ready to be delivered. And yet becauſe that ſome Sands, or ſpace of Time remained under the firſt Prophecy, not yet compleated; He therefore in this, as a convenient Seaſon between both, fills up that little ſpace of Time, that this firſt Prophecy had yet left to continue, with an additional Diſcourſe of his own; to inform the Church what ſpecial Occurrences were now, before the final conſummation of all under the ſeventh Trumpet, to fall out in this ſmall Interim, as a Warning to them when the End of all, even of both Prophecies, (viz. of this Seal-Prophecy, and alſo of that other Book-Prophecy) ſhould be.

Now the Sixth Trumpet, which is the Turkiſh Empire, we yet ſee ſtanding. An utter End of the Roman Empire had been as compleatly ſet forth in the Sixth Seal, as it could be; and only now the Ending of it remained, and ſo there was no other Matter of that kind, or belonging thereunto, to be added: And yet that being to continue ſome hundreds of Years afore its ending ſhould be, and the Seventh Trumpet ſhould blow, he therefore fills up that Space of Time, until the Seventh Trumpet ſhould blow, and entertains John, with relating what ſpecial Occurrences, that moſt nearly concerned his People, ſhould fall out in the Weſtern Church, over which the Pope had the Dominion, now towards the End of both Turkiſh and Popiſh Empire, and ſo in this laſt Age, before the ending of theſe Times: Which Occurrences, though they properly belonged to the Book-Prophecy, which (as was ſaid) properly takes cogniſance of Matters of the Church; yet they fitly come in here between both Prophecies, as the Signal of the ending of the full Courſe of both Stages of Times. And when he had thus, in this Diſcourſe, filled up that remaining Time in this Interlude, with ſuch Occurrences as were indeed yet to fall out together with it, in the Times before the Sixth Trumpet's ending; then (I ſay) he concludes his Diſcourſe with this, The ſecond Wo is paſt: That is, the Time of the Sixth Trumpet ends alſo hereabouts; and ſo then, as in its orderly Time, blows the Seventh.

Obſerve the manner of his delivering all this to John; namely, that he utters this his Narration as a Chorus, or as an Interlocutor in a Comedy uſeth to do his Speech, and not by Viſion only, wherein he opens and explains what could not by Viſion well have been underſtood; and therefore gives it by word of Mouth. And as thus this Angel doth here, ſo the like doth that Angel in the 17*th* Chapter. (And I the rather put together the Parallel Speeches of theſe two Angels, PART II. (Chap. 17. and here Chap. 11.) becauſe that, as the ſcope of him there, was to give an Interpretation and Explication who the Whore was; ſo his ſcope here, is to give a clear interpretation of the Times of this Beaſt and Whore, and the immediate Tokens or Signals that ſhall fore-run the ending of them). And look as in that 17*th* Chapter, when one of the Angels of the Vials (and as it is thought, the Fifth) gives the Interpretation who the Beaſt and Whore is; he doth it by a Speech, meerly as an Interlocutor, to inform John; ſo here, in like manner doth this Angel. Yet ſo, as you may alſo obſerve that his Narration here in this 11*th* Chapter, is firſt occaſioned by a Viſion preſented, of the Face and State of the Church, as it ſhould be in that laſt Age wherein theſe Things are to be accompliſhed; namely, of a Temple preſented ſtanding with an outward Court ſurrounding it, and an Altar in it, and two Witneſſes ſtanding before the Lord, and miniſtring in it. Which Viſion firſt to have been made unto John, is tacitly implied, in that the firſt entrance of his Speech begins with bidding John to ariſe, and to do a real Act towards the Temple, even to meaſure it. And therefore ſuch a Temple, &c. muſt needs have been preſented to his view. And thereupon obſerve how that this Viſion of a Temple, and of an Outward Court adjoined, is made the ground or occaſion of the Angel's following Speech; as from which the Angel takes the riſe of his following Diſcourſe. So that this Viſion of the Temple's meaſuring, and giving its Outward Court to the Gentiles, is the firſt Occurrence that is here preſented as belonging to that Age, (wherein Time is to expire) as from whence he takes the ground of that his Diſcourſe, (wherein he explains how much time the Beaſt was to have, and how and when it ſhould end); which Diſcourſe, after that explained, cloſeth again with the Relation of another Occurrence, (verſ. 7.) that ſhall fall out after this, in that Age, as the laſt ſignal of all. And this is done juſt in the like manner, as chap. 17. one of the Angels of the ſeven Vials (who therefore muſt be ſuppoſed to ſtand in the Times of the Vials) being to make a Deſcription of the Beaſt, and of the Whore, (namely, Rome, the Seat of the Fourth Monarchy) in all the Times allotted her; yet takes his riſe from a Viſion of that Whore, as then in her laſt old Age, and in the Times of the Vials, ſhe ſhould appear drunk with the Blood of the Saints, juſt before her ruin. And yet there, in that his Speech about her, he ſpeaks of her as in her whole time of reigning ſhe ſhould be. Juſt ſo here, this Angel (Chriſt) firſt enters upon the Stage but as an Actor, under the Times of the ſixth Trumpet, and in the very declenſion of it, and takes his Oath as under thoſe Times; and then preſents to John a Viſion of the Face of the Church, (in that preſent Age, under the latter Times of the ſixth Trumpet) as of a Temple which in theſe preſent Times he will have meaſured by John, as repreſenting the Perſons of the Saints of that Age) and leaving out the Outward Court of it, as to be given again unto the Gentiles: And then from that Occaſion, (it being part of that ſcattering the Power of the Holy People which Daniel aimed at) he plays the part of an Interlocutor, and makes a Narration of the whole Times of Popery, which after this their treading down this Outward Court of the Temple, were to expire. And he takes occaſion alſo to relate and diſcourſe of that oppoſition which the Witneſſes ſhould make againſt the Beaſt, or theſe Gentiles, all the Time of his whole Reign; and ſo deſcribes them, verſ. 3,4,5,6. And all this, as an Interlocutor, or a Chorus in a Comedy uſeth to do. Till at laſt he comes again to that laſt Occurrence which belonged to that Age wherein he ſtood, when he began his Speech, (namely now towards the end of the ſixth Trumpet) as that which ſhould then befal theſe Witneſſes. With which he determines his Speech about them, from verſ. 7. to the end of the Chapter. Unto the better and clearer underſtanding of which, all his former deſcription of them, and what elſe he related concerning them, had only made the way. Namely to ſhew, both what that Time was, which in Daniel had been ſo darkly delivered, and how it ſhould end, and how (to uſe the Phraſe in Daniel) the ſcattering of the Holy People ſhould be accompliſh'd. So then,

4. PROLE-

Chap. 4.

4. PROLEGOMENON.

Obſerve how fitly the words of the Oath in Daniel, do agree with all the Things delivered in this 11*th* Chapter, from verſ. 1. unto the ſeventh Trumpet, verſ. 15. where the Angel's Speech ends.

Now thoſe Things are reduceable unto two Heads:

1. This Angel's Computation and Interpretation of that Time mentioned in Daniel, (which when it ends, the Fourth Monarchy ſhall begin to end alſo, and ſhortly after it the Kingdom of Chriſt begins).

2. Such eminent Occurrences as ſhall fall out at the ending of it, as Signals thereof. Or rather, thus.

In the Angel's Oath in Daniel, four Things were intimated.

1. The Time that the Beaſt, the laſt Head of the Roman Monarchy, ſhould have to reign; which was a Time, Times, and half a Time.

2. A Holy People, who all that Time ſhould yet continue to oppoſe him, and whom he ſhould oppreſs.

3. Who yet towards the end ſhould get ſome Power againſt him; ſo it is there called, [the Power of the Holy People].

And, 4. which Power of theirs he ſhould, in the ending of that Time ſcatter, and themſelves alſo, and that with an eminent ſcattering, which yet is the Accompliſhment, or laſt Act of his ſo doing; that is, he ſhould never ſcatter them any more, but after that his Reign was to end, and their Mourning and Oppreſſion to ceaſe.

Now anſwerable to this, you here have;

1. That Time, confuſedly mentioned in Daniel, but here exactly computed by a double account (not to fail) both of Months, and alſo of Days; the one, as expreſſing Antichriſt's whole Time of Reigning, even 42 Months; and the other, the Holy People's Time to oppoſe him in, even 1260 Days; though yet in Sack-cloth and Oppreſſion. But ſo, as both have one and the ſame Period; and as they begun, ſo they end together.

2. You have the Holy People in Daniel here interpreted by Chriſt, to be his Two Witneſſes.

3. You have the Power of this Holy People all that while ſet forth, (eſpecially that Power they obtained in their laſt days) I will give to my Witneſſes, &c. verſ. 3. They had Power given them to erect a Temple, back'd with a mighty Party of an Outward Court. And out of that Temple they have had Power given them to pour out four Vials already: So as that if any Man hurt them, they will ſcorch him with Fire, &c. verſ. 5. And in the weakeſt days of their Prophecy, they have had power to ſhut Heaven that it rained not, verſ. 6, &c.

4. This Angel here ſhews, how in the end of this Time, when they are even about to caſt off their Sack-cloth, and to finiſh their Teſtimony againſt this Beaſt, verſ. 7. (ſo the word in the Greek is, [are about to finiſh, &c.] that then this their Power ſhall be ſcattered, their Outward Court trodden down, and ſo they left expoſed to the Beaſt's Fury and Outrage, to be by him ſcattered among the Nations, and killed; Which Nations ſhall ſee their dead Bodies lying in the Streets, &c. And then he gives a particular deſcription of this their oppreſſing, unto verſ. 14. telling us withal, for our comfort, that thus they ſhall accompliſh to ſcatter them, being never to ſcatter them again any more, after they are once riſen again, ſo verſ. 11, 12, 13. And thus you ſee how this 11*th* Chapter is but a Comment on the Oath in Daniel.

5. PROLEGOMENON.

Laſtly, Obſerve this in General concerning the joint mention or bringing in both theſe Occurrences, and this computation of Times together. They are mentioned thus together principally and chiefly in this reſpect, to ſhew how this whole

PART II. whole Series of Time ſhould end and expire; namely, with thoſe Occurrences here mentioned. So that, the Angel's ſcope is not ſimply to mention this Period of the 1260 days, &c. only to compute it, (though ſo alſo he makes mention of it); but withal to ſhew how that with theſe Exploits and Occurrences, or when theſe things here mentioned ſhould fall out, this Time was near its end and expiration. Whereby this Angel here doth directly hit the very aim and ſcope of that his former Oath taken before Daniel; which was, that with the very expiring of that his allotted Time, he ſhould accompliſh to ſcatter the Power of the Holy People. And therefore he ſo mentions this whole term of Time here, as withal to ſhew how it ſhall at laſt be accompliſh'd and fulfilled; and to that end he mentions ſuch particular Exploits, as this Beaſt to his very laſt ſhall play, even till his Kingdom be taken from him.

Now to explain this further; In the 13*th* Chapter, the Beaſt had power given him to do (as the word is) 42 Months; and during that Time, to make War with the Saints, and overcome them. And Power was given him over all Tongues, and Nations, and Kindreds; (that is, over the Ten Kingdoms of Europe) verſ. 5, 6, 7. Now the Gentiles here, and that Idolatrous Company that worſhip this Beaſt, (verſ. 3, 4. of that 13*th* Chapter) and that ſet up this Power of his, are all one and the ſame; and their Leaſe here, of treading down the Holy City, runs, and is made (as you ſee) for the very ſame term of Years here, that it is there. Only mark the different ſcope of the mentioning of them in that 13*th* Chapter, and here; namely, that here it comes in to ſhew, how this whole Time ſhould end, and fully be accompliſh'd; and alſo with a Narration of that very particular laſt War and Victory, which this Idolatrous Company ſhould obtain againſt the Holy People, even their laſt ſcattering them before the ending of this their Time. But it comes in there, as it was conſidered wholly, and entirely, as yet through all Times to be fulfilled; with all thoſe Wars and Slaughters, which in that whole Time Antichriſt ſhould make againſt the Saints. So in chap. 13.

Now that the mention of theſe two Computations of that whole Time, does thus come in here in relation to theſe laſt Exploits, and War of Antichriſt, at and towards the ending of that Time, is many ways evident. Of both which I ſhall demonſtrate this ſeverally, and apart.

And, 1. for the mention of their treading down the Holy City, for 42 Months; this comes in but (as you may obſerve it) upon that one particular Occurrence of giving up the Outward Court anew to the Gentiles; to this, or the like purpoſe, as if the Angel had ſaid, 'Caſt out that ſame Outward Court of the 'Temple of this preſent Age, (which hath indeed help'd againſt the Papiſts, 'and kept them off, but yet hath defiled the Churches) leave them out; for this 'Court is given to the Gentiles now in this laſt Age, for them to re-enter upon, 'and to get power over. And ſo with this laſt treading down, and overcoming 'that Outward Court, (which once they had poſſeſſed, but loſt from their Do-'minions) it is that they ſhall have accompliſh'd that whole term of 42 Months 'allotted them for the treading down of the Holy City, (namely Europe, the 'deſtin'd Seat of this Church, and of their Reign). And thus their full Dominion over the whole for 42 Months ſpace, or length of Time, ſhall be made good by this; that however they had loſt for a while part of their Dominion over it, yet they regaining this Outward Court now towards the end, they will be found to have poſſeſſed the whole 42 Months, firſt and laſt. That look as upon the giving in of the laſt Payment, we uſe to make mention of the whole Sum as paid: ſo here, upon that laſt eminent regaining their loſt Power over ſome of the European Kingdoms, the whole term of the Time of their reigning comes to be mentioned.

This I here premiſe, to prevent that great Miſtake which hath diverted Interpreters from taking the meaſuring this Temple here, and giving up the Outward Court, to be meant of ſome ſpecial Occurrence to fall out, or ſome Act to be done done to the Churches of these latter Times; but they rather take it of the Papists themselves their possessing throughout all Ages the Face of the Church (which they interpret the Outward Court) because of this that is added, and that followeth upon it, [and they shall tread down the Holy City for 42 Months]. As if it imported, that after the Outward Court is given up to them, they should have so many Years of reigning over it. Which if it were so, it could not be meant so particularly of the Temple or Church in this last Age, and the Outward Court thereof. But this (according to the former coherence given) need not divert any Man's Thoughts from the present Age to former Times (as it hath done some Mens, to think the Churches of the Primitive Times to be the Temple measured, and the Outward Court to be the Outward Face of the Church, which the Pope hath possessed these 1200 Years) the coherence may easily be found to be this; as if the Angel had said, 'Measure anew the Temple you now see 'standing in these last Times of the sixth Trumpet, and of Antichrist before his 'Fall, and cast out the Outward Court thereof; for it is again given to the 'Gentiles: and so (namely with this last treading down of it, and regaining, 'as it were, the whole anew) they shall fully accomplish their allotted Time 'of treading down the Holy City, namely, their 42 Months. Chap. 4.

But the removal of this Mistake more fully, I refer to the Appendix that follows. Only for the present, for a Confirmation that this is, and may well be the meaning of the coherence of these words, Observe,

1. It is not said, that they shall tread down the Outward Court for 42 Months; but the Holy City, which is much vaster than the Outward Court; the greater part of which City, (namely of Europe) they kept the Lordship over, even when the Outward Court was separated from them, and not yet recovered. So that to me, the Outward Court here is one thing, and the Holy City another, (though this Court indeed stands in the City) even as the Outward Court and the Temple were distinct Things from the Holy City of Jerusalem, though standing therein, (as I shall afterwards in the particular Exposition more fully shew).

And, 2. The purpose and scope of the mention of their whole Time of 42 Months here, is to shew how in this latter Age it should be fulfilled and ended; even in a full Power and Jurisdiction over the Holy City, in a re-entry on that part of it the Outward Court also; which is again laid common with, and unto the rest of the City. And so now it may be said of them, as of a King who reigns, and hath Jurisdiction over a Country (suppose) for fifty Years, it may be said he hath reigned over it fifty Years, (although some few Years before the end of his Reign, some of his Subjects haply revolted from him) if so be he were their King before the Revolt, and in the end again recovered his Royalty over them; (the Account being taken from the beginning to the end, first and last).

And one Reason why Antichrist's Time of doing is reckoned by Months, and not by Days, may be to shew, that though he hath not, the whole Time of his Reign, the same continued Jurisdiction; yet by Months he hath, from such a Time to such a Time, though not the like Power all that Time. For so at first the Goths interrupted him much in the exercise of his Power.

And then, 3. these words [and they shall tread down the Holy City for 42 Months] do fitly come in, as a just Reason, why this Outward Court is now in these last Times given to these Gentiles; and so do insinuate a Reason why Antichrist is thus permitted again to take Possession of the most (and chief part, if not all) of this Outward Court, so as to have fair hopes of recovering all Europe again. [And they shall, &c.] The word [καὶ] or [And] is often used as a Causal Particle, and notes out a Reason of a Thing. So then, the term of their Commission over all the Nations and Tongues of Europe being 42 Months, and none exempted, but such whose Names are written in the Book of Life, (as you have it, Chap. 13. 7, 8.); therefore, though this Outward Court of Carnal Protestants, and Unregenerate, hath made a Separation together with

with the True Worſhippers; yet they being inwardly Gentiles, and their Names not written in the Book of Life; therefore they are given unto theſe Gentiles again, as being their allotted Inheritance (as it were) for ſo long a Time here mentioned; which is not fully run out as yet, in this Age of the ſixth Trumpet, of which Chriſt ſpake this. They are yet within the Bounds and Date of their Leaſe, which is 42 Months, not yet expired; and therefore they are to be re-entred upon by them. So that the mention of this their Term comes thus in; as if in a Suit at Law, to recover one's own Ground leaſed to one for 21 Years; a Man pleads and ſhews, at the 18*th* Year's end, how the whole term of his Leaſe was 21 Years, as yet not expired; which he exhibits as a juſt Plea, why ſome part of it with-held from him, ſhould be reſtored to him, it being included in the Tenure of his Leaſe, as well as the reſt. Juſt ſo is it here; this Outward Court being within the Bounds of the City, and being Land belonging to the Pope by Gift, for ſo long time (they being not written in the Lamb's Book) and his Leaſe of 42 Months not being expired; therefore ſays the Angel, Here it is given or reſtored to him again; and ſo he ſhall accompliſh to tread down it, and the reſt of the Holy City for 42 Months. Which are the Angel's words in Daniel, Chap. 12. and which this Angel came to interpret.

And in the ſecond place; for the mention of that other Computation of 1260 Days; it is yet more plain, that this is brought in here, principally to ſhew, how this Time ſhould end and determine now at the laſt. And ſo, that both this long Deſcription of the Witneſſes, and the declaring their whole Time, is indeed but in order to this their laſt Accompliſhment. This is apparent by the 7*th* Verſe, which is the cloſe of all the former Narration. The words there are, [and when they ſhall have finiſhed their Teſtimony] that is, held out to teſtify, during that whole Time of 1260 Years. Or they may (and ought rather to) be rendred [and when they are about to finiſh] [ὅταν μέλλωσι]. Which notes out, not a full end firſt made, but a being about to make it: So that when they are about or near the finiſhing of this their Teſtimony, then ſhall this befal them. And further, In that he ſpends the better half of his Diſcourſe in this Chapter, in the ſetting forth this one particular, namely, their laſt ſcattering, upon the finiſhing their mentioned days of Propheey; this apparently ſhews, that this was the chief ſcope which that former part of his Diſcourſe had tended unto. And in that, although Antichriſt, the Beaſt, hath had many famous overcomings of theſe Witneſſes in former Times (and killings alſo of them); yet that he ſhould ſingle out this (which alſo is no where mentioned in the larger Book-Propheey, and yet) here, and that haply not for the greatneſs of the prevailing in it ſelf conſidered, but for its eminency in this reſpect, that it ſhould be the laſt, and with which their whole Time ſhould end. Which alſo is made eminent by this, that after theſe Witneſſes had got ſo much ground upon the Beaſt, and won a Temple and an Outward Court from him (ſet up upon his ground, as it were) that then, after all this, this prevailing of his ſhould fall on them. Hence it ſerveth as the moſt eminent Prognoſtick and Sign of their Times expiring; and therefore is here mentioned. So that I ſhall conclude with this brief Series of the coherence and connexion of one thing with another in theſe firſt Verſes.

Here is the ſame Period of Time twice mentioned, under a ſeveral computation; The one of 42 Months, the other of 1260 Days; both which come all to one. But the one is mentioned as the Time that the Pope and his Company ſhall reign; and the other, as the Time for the Witneſſes to propheſy in Sackcloth. And they both come in, in order and reference, unto the two of thoſe laſt Occurrences, which ſhall accompliſh the Reign of the one, and the Oppreſſion and mournful Condition of the other.

1. Their whole Time of treading down the Holy City, ſhall end with a recovery and treading down the Outward Court of the Temple, the Reformed Churches. And ſo the mention of that their Time comes in only in that reſpect, to ſhew how it ends. And accordingly the Viſion of the Temple, and the Angel's bidding John to meaſure it, comes in but as an Introduction to the mention of this laſt Occurrence.

And

Chap. 4.

And then, 2. being in like manner to mention the ſame Time of 1260 Days, as the Time of the Holy Witneſſes Prophecy, in order to their laſt Scattering and Oppreſſion; he inverts the Order, and firſt mentions the Time of their Prophecy, by way of a continued Narration with what went before; and then after that, mentions their laſt ſcattering as the accompliſhment of that their Time. And it was fit that this mention of their whole Time ſhould firſt be immediately connected to the foreſaid mention of their Enemie's whole Time, and the Times both of the one and the other firſt ſet together; for that this latter ſerves to explain the former, which elſe were ambiguous and dark, (as I ſhall ſhew hereafter). And eſpecially, becauſe theſe Witneſſes are mentioned as the continual Oppoſites ſet up againſt theſe Gentiles, and as the main Butt and Object of their Malice. That ſame [καὶ] (verſ. 3.) [and] I will give Power, is uſed here (as often elſewhere) adverſatively, for [but]; as if he had ſaid; 'Whereas they have 42 Months allowed them to tread down the 'Holy City, (Europe, the chief Seat of Chriſtian Profeſſion) and the Witneſſes 'in the compaſs of that Time, have won a Temple and an Outward Court from 'them: Yet that this allotted Time of their Reign may therefore be made good 'unto them, even to the laſt; they ſhall regain that Outward Court of the 'new erected Temple ſeparated from them; But ſo as they ſhall not ſo Reign 'all that while, as to carry it without oppoſition; But I will give power to, or 'uphold my Two Witneſſes by their Teſtimony, to oppoſe them continually '(though in Sack-cloth) that whole Time of 1260 Days, and even at this 'their laſt treading down the Outward Court, to avenge themſelves of theſe 'Gentiles with Fire, &c. But yet for all that, theſe Gentiles ſhall go on, and 'in the end of theſe their Days prevail yet further, even over theſe my Witneſſes alſo; and when they are about to finiſh their Teſtimony, ſhall kill, and 'deſtroy them.

So that, the mention of their Time, though it comes in a good way off before; yet is in order to this their laſt killing; to ſhew, (as in Daniel) how it ſhould be accompliſh'd.

SECT. II.

The Meaſuring the Temple, and caſting out the Outward Court, Chap. 11. verſ. 1, 2.

Section 1.

An Explication of this double Computation

Of { 1260 Days. / 42 Months.

And why they are together here mentioned.

THeſe things thus premiſed, I come to interpret the Contents of this Chapter, from verſ. 1, to 15. which are reducible to three Heads.

1. This double computation of the Times above-mentioned.

2. The Occurrences that were to fall out in thoſe Times of Antichriſt, in the Age juſt before their fatal Period; unto the accompliſhment whereof, thoſe Occurrences do conduce, (which Age, as I take it, is that that we live now in).

PART II.

3. What is withal ſaid of the Two Witneſſes, as woven in by the Angel in his Diſcourſe of them, by way of deſcribing them, in order to the explanation of what ſhould at laſt befal them.

1. For theſe computations of the Times, both of the Beaſt's Reign, and the Witneſſes Oppreſſion here mentioned; theſe things are to be explicated about them.

1. That they are both the ſame term of Time, that in the Oath in Daniel the Angel intended. This appears by Chap. 12. v. 6. compared with v. 11. for what in verſ. 6. is called 1260 Days, is in the 11*th* verſe of the aforeſaid Chapter, expreſſed by this, A Time, Times, and half a Time.

2. He makes this double computation of that Time, firſt by Months, then by Days; ſo without ambiguity to explain how much Time was meant in Daniel by that indefinite Number, Time, Times, and a half. Which as it is laid down in Daniel, is altogether ambiguous; For who could tell what is meant by a Time, and Times? or who could tell but that 100 or 1000 Years might be the Time, and 10000 the Times here meant (they being only expreſt in the Plural Number, and indefinitely) as well as Two of thoſe Times? Therefore clearly to free it of all ambiguity, he explains this firſt Time here by 42 Months. Now reckoning 12 Months to a Year, theſe 42 Months make three Years and a half. So then, by Time is meant a Year; by Times, two Years; and by half a Time, half a Year more. And yet becauſe there was ſome ambiguity in that alſo, in that ſome Nations reckon but 28 Days to a Month, whereas others reckon more, (ſo the Jews reckon 28, but the Egyptians 30 Days) therefore he reckons the ſame Time by Days alſo, even [1260 Days]; which 42 Months do make up, reckoning 30 Days to a Month.

Now all theſe are not Solary Days, that is, Natural Days, conſiſting of Day and Night; but the Prophetical Days, as in Daniel a Day is put for a Year, and a Week for ſeven Years; and ſo thirty Days for thirty Years, and 1260 Days for 1260 Years. And that thus they are to be taken, appears by this, that the Witneſſes, verſ. 8. are ſaid to lie in the view of all Nations (as being haply baniſh'd out among them) for three days and an half; and their Enemies are ſaid to ſend Gifts one to another in the mean time: Which if they were but three Natural Days and a half, all this (in three Natural Days and an half) could not be done.

3. By joining together theſe two Computations here, and ſo ſhewing them to be the ſame, he thereby clears the mention of them, as they are apart named Chap. 12. and Chap. 13. of which otherwiſe there might have been a Doubt, whether the 42 Months, Chap. 13. had been 1260 Days of Years. But by thus linking them together in this 11*th* Chapter, it is made certain that thoſe Numbers are the ſame.

4. Though both Daniel there, and the Angel here, do mention only the Times of the Pope's Reign, who is the laſt Head of the Roman Monarchy; and not the whole Time from John's Days, but only the latter part of it for the laſt 1260 Years under the Pope: Yet ſo, as this was ſufficient enough for the computation of the whole Time that the Viſions of the Revelation do run through, and ſerved fully enough to ſhew the contemporariouſneſs of things in both Prophecies, and to ſhew when the Fourth Monarchy ſhould end, and ſo when the Fifth ſhould be towards its beginning. Which was his principal aim; And therefore as in the 17*th* Chapter, v. 8. he explains who this Beaſt was, and what he ſhould be at laſt; ſo in this Chapter he ſhews what the Time of this Beaſt's reigning is, and when it ſhould end.

Now to demonſtrate all theſe.

1. This Explication of this Time may ſerve as a ſufficient meaſure of the Computation of the whole Time ſpoken of in the Revelation. For if you know but either when this Time of the Pope's Reign begins, or when it ends; you who live in theſe latter Days, may know how much time the Prophecy of this whole Book runs over. We know, by Story, when John began to write this Prophecy, even 94 Years after Chriſt, or thereabouts. So that it is about 1550 Years ſince John. Now 1260 Years are to be allowed the Beaſt the Pope, from his his beginning to his end. And to know when, and in what Age he began, the Holy Ghoſt hath given us a Hint and Character, Chap. 17. telling us that he riſeth one hour with the ten Kings; which was not long after the Year of Chriſt, 400. So that 300 Years are all, that before that, even from John's Time, do belong to the Primitive Times, before the Pope's Reign. And then after the end of this Pope's or Beaſt's Time, there is but the Turks Ruin to come, (which is the ſecond Wo mentioned here, verſ. 14.) and then comes in the New Jeruſalem. And if we who live in theſe laſt Days, could but know when he either begins his Time, or ends it, we might eaſily tell (at leaſt with a conjectural knowledge) how long it will be from the Incarnation of Chriſt unto his Kingdom here on Earth, which is the Fifth Monarchy. Chap. 4.

2. I might alſo, at large ſhew, how this Computation coming in here in this Chapter, ſhews the true ſynchroniſing and contemporaneouſneſs of things, both in the Seal and Book-Prophecy; which was neceſſary ſomewhere to be done, and is here in this Chapter moſt fitly done, between both theſe Prophecies. For the ſixth Trumpet of the Seal-Prophecy is verſ. 14. made to end upon (or not long after) the ending of the Pope's Reign, whoſe Story belongs to the Book-Prophecy. For, ſays the Angel there, (after the Riſing of the Witneſſes) The ſecond Wo is paſt, and behold the third Wo cometh quickly. Now that ſecond Wo is the ſixth Trumpet of the Seal-Prophecy, (ſo *chap.*8. 13.) and the paſſing of it away, is the ſixth Vial in the Book-Prophecy, the effect of which is the Ruin of the Turk, or at leaſt a preparation thereunto, by the calling of the Jews. And then the ſeventh Trumpet begins with the ſeventh Vial. And ſo (as it is probably thought) theſe 1260 Years of the Beaſt, and the riſing of the Witneſſes, do end with the fifth Vial; after which the ſixth Vial ſhall not ſtay long.

And it is probable, that the Angel's Diviſion of things into this double Series, of ſix Seals and Six Trumpets, is ſuited to his diviſion of all Times. Which, from John's Time to the Kingdom of Chriſt, he branches, either into the Time of the Beaſt's Reign, which he defines to be 1260 Years, or the Time before his Riſing, which he defines not. For the beginning and ending of the Beaſt's Time being once known, thereby the other Times foregoing (or the Primitive Times) might eaſily be computed. So as when we know (through the help of this Angel's Speech in this Chapter) that the Book-Prophecy and the Seal-Prophecy do meet towards their ending and cloſure downwards; then, how they run along upwards, is not uneaſy to conjecture. For the Seal-Prophecy being branched into two ſo equal Diviſions, of ſix Seals, chap. 6. and then ſix Trumpets, chap. 7, 8, 9. the ſix Seals, containing the Story of the Empire till the Beaſt's riſing, and ſo taking up all that tract of the Primitive Times before the Beaſts 1260 Years do begin; it is therefore likely, that the ſix Trumpets do contain the Story of the Empire during thoſe 1260 Years, in which the Pope is to Reign. And then, as they end not far off from each other (as was even now ſhewed): So alſo the Times of theſe ſix Trumpets, and the Beaſt's Reign of 1260 Years, ſhould begin not far off of each other. Thus the mention of this one Term or Period of Time here, ſerves (as you ſee) for the meaſure of the Computation of the whole Times of this Book, and both Prophecies of it; and ſo comes fitly in between both for ſuch a purpoſe.

And laſtly, the Reaſons why the Holy Ghoſt ſingleth out only the Times of this laſt Head, the Pope, thus to be the Rule and Meaſure whereby to ſum and caſt up the Account of all the Times of this Book, are,

1. For that the Beaſt's Reign was to have the longeſt Time allotted it of any Monarchy after Chriſt, and the longeſt of all the Heads of the Roman Monarchy foregoing him; yea, it was to contain as much Time, as had paſſed from Rome's firſt Building, until his Riſing; and ſo, would afford a Computation of the greateſt part of that Time, and indeed three parts of the whole Time from John until the Kingdom of Chriſt.

2. The Matters of this Book being not ſo fully to be opened, till about the Time of the end, (as it is in Dan. 12. 4.); if the Times of the Beaſt (whoſe Reign was to continue till towards the end) ſhould then come to be known; then the whole Time from John downward, would be known alſo by them that live in theſe latter Days; for whoſe Benefit and Comfort (as moſt concerning them to know it) this Computation was made, and here given.

3. This Beaſt, the Pope, being the laſt Head of the Fourth or Roman Monarchy, (which but for him had failed, but was in him healed again and reſtored); To know when he ſhould end, and with him that Monarchy, this would be inkling enough of the approach of Chriſt's Kingdom which is immediately to ſucceed it. To give the inkling of which, for the Church's comfort in theſe latter Days, was the thing herein principally aimed at.

And, 4. this Beaſt being to be the moſt eminent Oppreſſor of the Church in the Times after Chriſt. Therefore the Computation of his Time, beginning and ending, and the oppreſſion of the Witneſſes by him, would be moſt acceptable to be known, and ſo be moſt enquired after by the Church. And thus much for the Computation of the Times here mentioned.

The Occurrences that fall out towards the expiring of theſe Times here computed. And firſt, A general View and Diviſion of them.

AS Chriſt was thus careful (as you have ſeen) to give us this Computation of Times; ſo further, for our Comfort, he makes a Relation of ſuch Occurrences alſo as ſhould fall out towards the ending and expiration of theſe Times, which is the ſecond Head we are to explain.

And as the Computation of Antichriſt's Times was two-fold; ſo anſwerably the chief Occurrences of things appertaining to the accompliſhment of thoſe Times, are two.

1. The re-giving up the Outward Court to the Gentiles, with the treading down whereof they are to end their whole Reign and Time of the treading down the Holy City.

2. Their killing the Witneſſes, with which their 1260 Days of propheſying in Sack-cloth do end alſo. The one is annexed as the ſignal of the Period of their Reign, and the ending of their 42 Months; the other as the Signal of the Accompliſhment of theſe Witneſſes Oppreſſion for 1260 Days, with this moſt eminent Victory of the Gentiles over them.

And then again obſerve, how each of theſe Occurrences have two others here mentioned with them, as conjunct Appendixes to them, or Occaſions of them.

1. The giving up the Outward Court to the Gentiles, is accompanied with a meaſuring the Temple by John, repreſenting the Godly of that Age; who leaves out the Outward Court, as being ordained by God to be given up to the Gentiles.

2. This laſt killing the Witneſſes, is much occaſioned, and in a more eſpecial manner Enemies are provoked unto it by the hurt theſe Witneſſes did them by Fire, in the Times juſt afore (as we ſhall ſee anon); in revenge of which, they are encouraged to kill them.

Or, (for the better conceiving all theſe) I caſt them into this Mould.

John and the Angel ſtanding here in the very extremities of Time, even the Times of the fourth Vial, (this Age, as I take it) wherein Antichriſt's Reign is drawing near to its end; John hath repreſented to him (as an Introduction unto all that follows) the Face of the Church in that Age, and is himſelf bidden to repreſent the Work of the Godly of that Age towards that Church.

And,

Chap. 4.

And, 1. the Church in this Age is repreſented to him as the Temple ſtanding in the Holy City Jeruſalem, (as it was repreſented to Ezekiel, Ezek. 40. which he alſo meaſured with a Reed, as John is bidden to do here) namely, the Temple inward, into which the Prieſt only was to come, and in which ſtands the Altar, with a Company of true Worſhippers: but round about it (as incloſing the Temple without) lies a vaſt Outward Court, into which (as of Old, the Multitudes and Croud of the People of the Jews profeſſing the True God, ſo here) all ſorts of Profeſſors of true Worſhip do come. This Temple, the Church of this Age is moreover repreſented, as adorned within, with Golden Candleſticks, and two ſtately Olive Trees, verſ. 4. being two eminent Witneſſes and Prophets, that miniſter before God in his Church. And the Gentiles, they poſſeſs the City already, and have done a long time, and are ſtill to poſſeſs it, till their 42 Months be expired. But the Temple, and the Outward Court about it, of late days erected in this City, they have been kept out of; and ſo could not come at theſe Witneſſes who are within the Temple, nor have been able to overcome, and kill them, as in former Times; againſt whom notwithſtanding, in that they have ſo tormented them with Fire, and other Plagues, out of this Temple, they are even mad again with vexation, and an eager deſire to be avenged on them. But now, before the expiring of their 42 Months, God being angry, both with the Carnal Goſpellers in the Outward Court, ſo prophanely mixing themſelves with his Worſhippers, and laying themſelves to his Building and Temple, and alſo with the Carnal Goſpelling of the two Witneſſes among them, and with the imperfection of his Temple Building, not yet anſwering the Pattern, and therefore intending to erect a purer Temple; He,

2. Bids John (repreſenting the Godly of that Age) meaſure the Temple anew; and ſo begins to make a new Reformation therein more anſwerable to the Pattern in the Mount; for he is not pleaſed with the Old one that now hath ſtood ſo long. And therefore in this new Reformation, he commands John to leave out that Outward Court, as intending (after his purer Churches ſhall thus firſt have (as it were) excommunicated them) to give up that Outward Court to theſe Gentiles, who have already took poſſeſſion of the City, and kept it a long time, but ſhall now again enter upon this Outward Court, it being within their Leaſe and Demiſe. And ſo with this over-running the outward Court of the Church, ſhall they accompliſh their Reign over the whole City, being then to be driven out of all for ever; which makes them ſo angry, as you have it verſ. 18.

And thus they having gained the Outward Court, which fenced and kept ſafe the Witneſſes, as from Perſecution by the Papiſts, who yet had vexed and plagued them, by ſhooting of Wild-fire out of the Temple, (though they had alſo ſhot back again that which had hurt the Witneſſes all that while): But now the Beaſt can come to them to overcome them and kill them quite, (for their Outward Court was won) and ſo utterly ſcatter the Power of the Holy People; but yet ſo, as with this the days of their Oppreſſion ſhall ceaſe, this being the accompliſhment of their Years of ſcattering, and the laſt War wherein Antichriſt ſhall any way prevail: He (the Reliques of him left) ſhall indeed make head again, before the ſeventh Vial; but it ſhall not come to a Victory as this doth.

PART II.

Sect. 3.

The Occurrences, verſ. 1, 2. (the meaſuring the Temple, Altar, &c. and the leaving out the Outward Court, and treading down the Holy City) more particularly and fully explained.

SO then, here are two things to be explained;

1. What this Temple and Outward Court are, and what the meaſuring of the Temple, &c. and the leaving out, and treading down the Outward Court and City.

And, 2. who theſe Witneſſes are, what their Deſcription, and what this their laſt Killing.

For the firſt; I will make good and eſtabliſh what I think to be the true Interpretation, and then conſult thoſe other falſe Interpretations given of it.

It is wonderful to me, to ſee how exactly this Viſion, in the whole Series of it, repreſents the preſent Face, the Affairs, Stirrings, and Alterations now a working in the Churches of Europe; the Type and Anti-type ſo fully anſwering and ſuiting each the other.

For the firſt; The Holy City here (wherein theſe Gentiles have a Leaſe of 42 Months Reign) are theſe Kingdoms of Europe, which for theſe 1000 Years and upwards, have been the Metropolis and chief Seat of Chriſtian Profeſſion, as Jeruſalem of old was of the Worſhip of the True God; which therefore in the following part of this Book-Prophecy, is made (from the Riſe of the Beaſt) the only Stage of all, until that New Jeruſalem and Holy City, which comes from Heaven and ſucceeds this; this being in the mean Time the Old Jeruſalem, as that the New.

Yet, 2. this City (for the puniſhment of the World) God permits the Gentiles to tread down for 42 Months, (alluding to that Expreſſion which Chriſt uſed of the ſacking of that Jeruſalem in Judea, by the Romans, Luk. 21. 24.) Now the Beaſt, the Pope of Rome, with his Idolatrous Crew, they are theſe Gentiles; and ſo called, becauſe they ſet up the Image of that Worſhip which was practiſed under Heatheniſh Rome and Gentiliſm. So chap. 13. 15. and as the 144000, the Company of True Worſhippers, are called the Iſrael of God; ſo are theſe called the Gentiles; their Religion and Worſhip being (as was ſaid) the Image of the firſt Heatheniſh Religion, under the Heathen Empire, the firſt Beaſt. And this City they were to have Power and Juriſdiction in, till 42 Months were fulfilled, as in chap. 13. appears.

But, 3. towards the end of their Time, there begins a great part of this City to fall from them, (though they ſtill kept poſſeſſion of the greateſt part) and they loſt much Ground, and Encloſure and Separation being made from them, and within it a Temple built, (namely, Churches ſeparate from Antichriſt, which you heard of in chap. 15.): And further, as that in Jeruſalem was built on the North ſide of that City, Pſal. 48. 2. ſo is this Temple built in the Northern Parts of Europe, (the City here meant, as was foretold in Iſa. 49. 12. and Dan. 11. 44.) for in theſe Northern Kingdoms hath been the Reformation of Religion.

Unto which Temple (4*ly*) there hath been an Outward Court laid of Carnal and Unregenerate Profeſſors, who have made the greateſt ſhew in this Building, and took up ſo much of the Room, that although true Churches and Temples, by reaſon of the true Worſhippers among them, have been ſet up, yet they have been defiled with the addition of an Outward Court, into which all ſorts came.

came. So that indeed these Reformed Churches are Outward Courts more than Inward Temples. And by reason of this their Mixture, great Corruptions and Defects, both in the form of the Temple, or Church-Fellowship, and impurities in the Worship, and about the Altar, have been continued among them. Chap. 4.

Now for the understanding of these Allusions, we must know, that there were belonging to the Temple in Jerusalem;

1. The Holy of Holies, which was at one end enclosed and separated from the rest of the Temple, after the manner of our Cathedral Quires.

2. The Body of the Temple, whereinto came the Priests only; and in which stood the Altar of Incense, which was answerable to the Body of our Cathedral Churches, compass'd by the Inner Court: Wherein,

3. There was a larger Outward Court encircling the whole Temple, into which the People of all sorts, both Men and Women, did come. And this was answerable to the Church-Yards which go round about our Churches.

Now this third and last Court is, that which is here said to be without, that is, without the compass of the Temple. And it is called the great Court going round about the other, namely, encompassing the Inward Court of the Priests, and the Holy of Holies: Thus, 1 Kings 7. 12. it is expressly called. And it is by Ezekiel called the Outward Court very often, in distinction from the Inward Court or Temple where the Altar was; which in distinction from this, is also called the Court of Priests. So 2 Chron. 4. 9. where it is said, Solomon made the Court of the Priests, and the Great Court, namely that into which the People came.

There was indeed a fourth Court for Strangers to come into, built by Herod. But that is not here alluded to, for the Scripture mentioneth it not. But the Outward Court here is, that which Ezekiel (as I said before) does so often call by that Name, in distinction from the Court of Priests, (for to his measuring there, is the allusion of this measuring here); of which you may read chap. 40. vers. 17, and 27. And the Inner Court is put for the Temple, and the Temple for it, as being all one.

Bring this then to the New Testament: The Scriptures and Prophets, by the Notion of a Temple, do still express the true Church, as 1 Cor. 3. 17. Ephes. 2. 21. and many other places. And by Priests, who only are to enter into the Inner Temple, they express True Worshippers. You have both these Expressions put together, in 1 Pet. 2. 5. You as lively Stones, are built up a Spiritual House, and an Holy Priesthood to offer up Spiritual Sacrifices, acceptable to God by Jesus Christ. And whereas the People entred not into the Temple then; Now all that are Holy, are bidden to draw near, having their Bodies (or whole Man) wash'd with Water, (as the Priests were wont to be) even Water of Regeneration and Sanctification, as Heb. 10. 22.

Now in distinction from these True Worshippers, the carnal Professors of Religion, and croud of Unregenerate Men, (that join themselves to the Church by professing the same Religion and Faith, though yet continuing in the natural Uncircumcision of their Hearts) are called the Outward Court here; they having no right to approach this Altar. And (by the Law of Distinction and Opposition) if the True Worshippers now under the Gospel, be typified out by the Priests, (who were in a peculiar manner Holy unto God, and whose Holiness typified forth inward Holiness under the Gospel) then Carnal Professors now, who are Jews outwardly only, are left typified out by that common croud of Jews who came then into the Outward Court. And these may most truly be tearmed an Outward Court, in a comparison with this Temple and True Worshippers, be the Notion of Temple taken in what sense it may: For whether Temple or Church be taken for the Mystical Temple or Church of the Elect and sincere Worshippers. These are without, (as the Apostle's Phrase is, 1 Cor. 5.) in comparison to them, and are Carnal Worshippers, worshipping God in the the Letter, not in the Spirit, with outward bodily exerciſe, not in Spirit and Truth, (as 1 Tim. 4. 8.) and they are ſuch, as to a ſtander-by, who hath skill to judg, are, (for the generality) apparently ſuch; even Jews outwardly only, not within, as Rom. 2. 28, 29.

Or if Temple be taken for Churches Inſtituted, or Congregations of True Publick Worſhippers, (as Epheſ. 2. verſ. laſt it is taken; as alſo Heb. 10. 22. compared with verſ. 25. where the aſſembling together to worſhip, is called a drawing near, &c.) in that reſpect alſo theſe carnal Men joined with them, are but as the Outward Court laid to the Temple, who join in the ſame Service, but do draw near with their Lips only, and (as Iſaiah ſpeaks, chap. 1.) tread his Courts, with Sacrifices abominable to God: whilſt the other, as an Holy Prieſthod, are only within the Temple, and do draw near with aſſurance of Faith, having their Hearts ſprinkled, and their Bodies waſh'd with Water, (as the alluſion to the Prieſt's entring into the Inner Temple where the Altar ſtood, is, in Heb. 10. 22.)

So that, in what ſenſe ſoever the Papiſts, (whom ſome would have to be the Outward Court here meant) might be called the Outward Court, theſe alſo may. As whether becauſe they arrogate to themſelves the Name of the Church, and ſay, they are Jews, and are not. but do lie

In this reſpect may theſe alſo be called the Outward Court, who with impudence do arrogate to themſelves the Name of the Church, and under that Name do in ſome places caſt out the True Worſhippers; and who, by reaſon of their multitude and number, (the beſt Congregations of the firſt Reformation, conſiſting of many more apparently bad than good, and many of thoſe Churches having none but Men unregenerate) are in view only or chiefly the Church; whilſt the true viſible Worſhippers are a Company of hidden Ones (in compariſon); and therefore the Outward Court, in the Type, was called the Great Court.

Yea, theſe Unregenerate Proteſtants, are much rather to be accounted the Outward Court, and ſo are mainly here intended: Which will appear, if you put but two things together.

Firſt, Outward Court here is oppoſitely put unto all theſe other Particulars enumerated, that were to be meaſured; both unto Temple, Altar, and Worſhippers therein; and ſo oppoſitely doth import, not meerly an outward Face and Place of Worſhip; but as withal including Perſons worſhipping alſo; and ſo Carnal Worſhippers. in full oppoſition to the other. For otherwiſe this Expreſſion anſwers not the Type, namely, the Outward Court in the Jewiſh Temple, in which were the Multitude, as in the Inner Temple the Prieſts. So that, the Outward Court imports and includes a Company or ſort of Worſhippers, as well as it imports the outward viſible Face of the Church; and that by a Metonimy, the Continers being put for the Contentum, the thing containing for the thing contained: Even as theſe Phraſes [Heaven] and [Earth] do often import, and are put for all things therein contained. And ſo [Outward Court] here implies, a ſort of Worſhippers therein; and in that reſpect is oppoſed to, and diſtinguiſh'd from the Temple, and the true Worſhippers therein. And indeed, Churches, and the Face thereof, in the Notion of the New Teſtament, conſiſting not of Material Buildings, (as Cameron well ſhews) it is the Perſons worſhipping, who have the Name of Churches. And ſo here, Perſons worſhipping, diſtinct from the Temple and True Worſhippers, muſt needs be meant, as thoſe that do conſtitute and make up this Outward Court. So that take Perſons away, and the Face of an Outward Court ceaſeth to be. Thus Cornelius a Lapide upon the place. In hac parte Templi (ſays he) & in adorantibus Sacerdotibus ſymbolicè ſignificantur Fideles, qui Antichriſtum tempore erunt optimi, religioſiſſimi, Deo conjunctiſſimi, & in cultu ejus ſolidiſſimi. Per Atrium exterius intelligit Chriſtianos infirmiores, & vitæ laxioris, ideoque a Deo remotiores. Hos (ait) ejice foras, (id eſt) extra Eccleſiam. Quaſi dixiſſet, Rejice eos inter infideles & Apoſtatas; quia ita cedunt Gentibus & Antichriſto affectis, & ideo indigni ſunt qui inter Fideles numerentur.

Now

Now then, 2. add to this, that this Outward Court thus conſiſting of a Multitude of Falſe Worſhippers, is here made diſtinct from the Gentiles: for this Outward Court, and the Worſhippers thereof, are given to the Gentiles; and therefore are to be left out in the New Meaſure taken.

Now a Company of Worſhippers, who are diſtinct, both from the True Worſhippers of the Temple, and from the Gentiles or Papiſts, muſt needs be the multitude of Carnal Proteſtants that fill our Churches, and make an Outward Court, together with the Temple. For if the Gentiles be this Outward Court themſelves, then who are theſe Gentiles that are to tread it down?

Neither, 3. can it be thought that the Gentiles, poſſeſſing the outward Face of the Church, ſhould ſo fill up this Outward Court here meant, as to be made (as they are here) the other ſole contradiſtinct and oppoſite Party to the Temple and true Worſhippers: Unleſs we would ſay, That all Proteſtants are the Inner Temple, as well as the Prieſts and true Worſhippers therein, and both to be here meaſured; and ſo the Papiſts and they ſhare theſe two alone between them. But we aſſuredly knowing that of Proteſtants, not one of an hundred are True Worſhippers, (according to outward Judgment, by thoſe Rules the Reed warrants us to judg of others by) may as aſſuredly alſo conclude, that this multitude of Carnal Profeſſors are not here intended by the Angel, as at all included in the Temple, and among the True Worſhippers; eſpecially ſeeing he puts the Reed into John's Hand, to meaſure none but ſuch as are viſibly True Worſhippers. And therefore they muſt neceſſarily make up that third Party, diſtinct both from the Temple Worſhippers, and from the Gentiles; and are they, who are to be caſt out by the one, and ſeized on by the other, as the Outward Court is here ſaid to be. And more ſure I am, that according to Apoſtolical Inſtitution, ſuch as they ought to be left out by thoſe that build true Churches, and Churches to be meaſured anew without them. And therefore, if this meaſuring the Temple fall under the Times of this ſixth Trumpet; I cannot but imagine this New Reformation begun, to be intended; and that reentry the Gentiles are now a making upon the Outward Court of our Churches, and their yielding to them, to be the giving thereof unto the Gentiles here.

And, 4. the Papiſts cannot ſo well be meant here by the Outward Court, as ſome would have them. For I ſee not, that the Angel would vouchſafe them in this his mention of them here through this Type, ſo much as the bare Name of the Outward Court unto his Temple. That Romiſh Church is not worthy in his eſteem to be ſo accounted of in the proportions of this Alluſion. But he rather calls them Gentiles; as being Idolatrous Worſhippers; and elſe-where, the Synagogue of Satan, Worſhippers of the Beaſt and his Image, Sodom, Egypt, &c. as being in a further diſtance and degree of Compariſon remote from the True Temple here, and the Worſhippers therein. And ſo between the True Worſhippers in the Inner Temple, and theſe Gentiles, he placeth a third ſort of Worſhippers, who are not Gentiles in their Worſhip, but ſeparate from them in it as well as the True Iſraelites; and who worſhip the True God after the manner of the Worſhip of the Temple, outwardly; and yet are but outwardly Jews (as Rom. 2. 28.) and remain uncircumciſed in Heart and Life. And theſe in this Alluſion doth God allow the Place and Name of the Outward Court; which till the Reed, the Light of the Word came, diſtinguiſhing True Worſhippers from them, were accounted as of the Inner Temple, but are now diſcovered to be without, (as the Word in the Original is). So that, the Outward Court doth typifie out a Company, who in theſe Times have a greater nearneſs to the True Worſhippers than the Gentiles have, and yet are but without. And though this Outward Court is here ſaid to be given to the Gentiles; yet (mark it) not to them, as thoſe who are reckoned the Worſhippers therein, not as the Treaders of the Outward Court (as in Iſa. 1. the Phraſe is of God's Houſe); God reckoneth not them ſuch; but as the treaders down of this Outward Court, (as they are ſaid to do by the Holy City in the next words) God bringing in upon theſe Carnal Profeſſors, for their contempt of the Goſpel, and of the True Wor-ſhippers, the worſt of the Heathen upon them, to tread them down by Violence, either of Conqueſt over their Bodies, (as in Germany) or over their Conſciences, in making them again to ſubmit to their Superſtitions and Idolatries, (as they ſhall go on to do in other places).

And obſerve the glorious Wiſdom that is in God's proceeding herein, as the reaſon of it: For God intending to have a Church moſt Holy unto himſelf, under the ſeventh Trumpet, in which the Ark ſhall be ſeen, (which notes out the Holy of Holies) as it is verſ. ult. of this 11*th* Chapter; and his manner being, to carry on his Church unto perfection, by degrees; he doth therefore, about the midſt of that Time, between the firſt Reformation long ſince made, and that ſeventh Trumpet (in an Age or ſo foregoing it) ſet his Builders on work (whom John here repreſents) to endeavour to erect a new Frame, and a Reformation of that Reformation; and to take the Reed, and meaſure over anew, both Temple, Altar, and Worſhippers, and to caſt out that Outward Court of Worſhippers, with thoſe Corruptions of theirs which hindred that thorough Reformation; and ſo, to contract his Temple into a narrower compaſs (as the proportion of the Inner Temple to the Outward was); yet purer and more refined: He delighting more in Truth, and purity of Worſhip, then in magnitude or multitude of Sacrifices and Worſhippers: And ſo, to make to himſelf a Church that ſhall conſiſt of Prieſts, and an Inward Temple ſeparated from that Outward Court, into which the True Worſhippers are called up from the other, which afore lay common to both. And how elegant is this Alluſion here! whereby he ſets forth the ſeveral States and Conditions of his Church, growing up unto Perfection.

The firſt Reformation he ſets out by an Inner Temple, more imperfect, unfurniſh'd, and beſides, defiled by the adjoining of an Outward Court unto it.

The ſecond Reformation more pure, he repreſents by the Inner Temple meaſured again, to be finiſh'd and cleanſed from that Mixture.

And then, in the laſt Verſe, he opens the Holy of Holies, into which no unclean Thing ſhall enter, as it is chap. 21. 27. For though their ſecond Reformation, and the Reed thereof, keeps out Men civil and prophane, whom viſibly ſo to be Godly Men (whom John here repreſents) may judg; yet many an Hypocrite that maketh a lie, may ſcape and croud into this Inward Temple ſtill; whilſt the Judgment of Men (who often err) applies this Reed. But into the other Temple to come, under the New Jeruſalem, ſhall none of theſe enter. There ſhall be a Golden Reed then, as chap. 21. verſ. 26. whereas now there is but an ordinary Cane, Reed, or Staff, which though in it ſelf it be ſtreight, yet being to be applied by Men, they may be deceived.

Now having given this more general view what is meant by the Temple and Outward Court; I will more particularly explain, what it is to meaſure the Temple, Altar, and Worſhippers therein; and what it is to leave out this Outward Court.

1. To this end Chriſt puts a Reed into John's Hands, (who repreſents the Builders of this Age); that is, puts into their Hearts and Hands the Word, and the Light thereof, as alone a ſufficient Rule to ſquare Churches (both Worſhippers and Worſhip) by. Other Reeds Men would have, but God hath given us Rules in his Word, to ſquare the whole Frame and Model of this Temple by. And this is to be laid as a Principle, that we admit of nothing in Matters of the Church, which the Word does not warrant. Which Principle was never yet ſo fully taken up and practiſed by our Reformers hitherto; though it hath long been contended for, as the fundamental Ground-work of this Building.

2. By Temple here I underſtand, not only the Church of the Elect, (for they are all one and the ſame with them that worſhip God in Spirit and Truth; whereas here, in this enumeration, Temple and Worſhippers therein ſeem to import diſtinct Conſiderations at leaſt). But I rather underſtand, Churches or Congregations of Publick Worſhippers conſidered as ſuch; Church-Fellowſhip, (as you call it), which as well as the Company of the Elect, was typified out, and and called the Temple, as Epheſ. 2. 20, 21, 22. For the Apoſtle there having firſt ſaid of the Epheſians, that as they were Saints in common with others, ſo they were built up with all the Elect, into a Temple unto God, and this verſ 20, 21. and ſo made part of Templum Electorum: He after that, ſays again of the ſame Epheſians, as they were a Company knit in Church-Fellowſhip, that they were built together for an Habitation to God, verſ. 22. And ſo the particular Church at Epheſus, made a Temple and an Habitation apart, and, as it were, a little Sanctuary. Now every ſuch particular Church bears the Name of the whole, and may alſo juſtly be called the Temple; becauſe in a Church ſo gathered, the Ordinances of Church-Communion and Worſhip (as the Sacraments, Excommunication, &c.) are to be adminiſtred, and not out of ſuch a Church-ſtate, or ſuch Aſſemblings; as at the Temple of Jeruſalem only, Sacrifices were to be offered. Chap. 4.

And therefore, 3. by Altar here, which was that main Ordinance of Temple-Worſhip ſerving for Sacrifice, (which was no where out of it to be uſed) I underſtand Church-Ordinances of Publick Worſhip and Sacrifice.

And, 4. by Worſhippers, I underſtand the Perſons who only are to be of this Temple, and to approach to this Altar; as only the Prieſts then did into the Inward Temple, and unto the Altar: even ſuch only who are lively Stones, built up in a Spiritual Houſe, and an Holy Prieſthood, to offer up acceptable Sacrifice unto God; as it is in 2 Pet. 5. So that, although Temple here doth connotate and import Worſhippers, (for now under the New Teſtament, Temple and Worſhippers are materially the ſame; as by that place of Peter appears, though formally they may be conſidered as diſtinct, as here they ſeem to be); and ſo Worſhippers importeth theſe Perſons conſidered in ſuch meet Qualifications as belong to them as Saints, and are required in them to make them meet Worſhippers in this Temple, which this Reed lays forth: Yet formally Temple notes out theſe Perſons as to be gathered up in a Church-Aſſembly, according unto Chriſt's Inſtitution.

Now then, 5. to meaſure all theſe with this Reed, implies a drawing of a true Platform by the Rules of the Word; by ſhewing both,

1. What a True Church or Temple is, and how to be built; and what the Power, the Frame and Conſtitution of it, &c. this is rightly and truly meaſuring the Temple.

And, 2. laying out the right way of the adminiſtration of all Church-Worſhip and Ordinances, as Excommunication, Sacraments, ordaining Officers of Holy Things, who partake, and ſerve at the Altar, and all this by the Word. This is to meaſure the Altar. In a word; all that which, Rom. 12. 1. the Apoſtle calls λογικὴ λατρεία, Word-Service or Worſhip. He ſpeaking to the Romans in that Chapter, as they were a Body of a Church, as in the 13*th* Chapter he ſpeaks to them as Members of a Common-Wealth.

3. Meaſuring the Worſhippers is with the Reed, laying forth who are True Saints, and ſo are meet Matter for, and to be Worſhippers therein; and ſo, judging of Men by the Rules of the Word, and accordingly admitting into, or rejecting from this Fellowſhip, and judging them when within, as the Apoſtle ſpeaks.

And thus meaſuring is taken for drawing a Plat-form of all theſe things. As appears by that meaſuring the Temple by Ezekiel, (unto which the Angel here alludes) Ezek. 43. 10, 11. where it is called a ſhewing them the Pattern, the Form of the Houſe, and faſhion of it; together with the goings out and comings in for Adminiſtration, &c. all the Ordinances thereof, and all the Forms of thoſe Ordinances, and all the Laws thereof. And as there Ezekiel ſees diſtinctly and apart meaſured the Temple, Chap. 41, & 42. then the Altar, Chap. 43. 13. and then concerning the Worſhippers, the Angel gives Laws, chap. 44. blaming them that they permitted Strangers, Men uncircumciſed in Fleſh and Heart (ſpeaking in the Language of the Type) to be in his Sanctuary, verſ. 7. giving a Law, verſ. 9. that none ſuch ſhould enter in; ſhewing whom he would have to be Prieſts and Levites, and who not, and their Duties, in the reſt of that Chapter: Even ſo here John is bid to caſt out the Outward Court, as being Strangers unto God, and unclean, and uſing ſtrange forms of Worſhip.

PART II.

And 2. Measuring is here also put to signify, that such a Temple, Altar, and Worshippers, should now in this Age begin to be built and erected, and Men set on work to do it. So in Ezek. 43. 10, 11. the Measure is taken to that end, that Israel seeing the true Pattern, might be ashamed of their former Aberrations, and for the time to come, might keep to, and do according to that Pattern, and square all by it. Measuring here respects not the Old Temple so much, as if the Temple that had hitherto stood were to be Measured: but it respects a New Building, or finishing of a Church. So also Zech. 2. the measuring the City, ver. 2. was to signify not the taking the Platform of Jerusalem as then it stood built: but as further anew to be built and inhabited, ver. 4, 5. So also the Temple, as then being yet unfinish'd by the Jews, after the Captivity, the Plummet or Measuring-Line, chap. 4. 10. (which answers to the Reed here) signified that the Temple should be finished; which appears, if you compare the above-named Place, with ver. 9. of the same Chapter.

And 3. Measuring imports Protection also: So Zech. 2. the measuring the City there, is in the Interpretation given, ver. 5. explained, that God would be a Wall of Fire round about them, and their Glory in the midst of them. And so here, so much may be intimated, and so, hoped for: For the Outward Court is therefore not measured, because it is given to the Gentiles. But on the contrary, the Worshippers are measured, and called up as it were, out from the Outward Court, that they may be preserved from the re-entry of those Gentiles upon them, or power over them; at least, from such power as they had over the Outward Court. To get into this Temple, is the greatest preservative to keep the Saints from the over-growing Corruptions and Defilements of these Gentiles; and it may unto many prove a Protection, and Sanctuary, from their Power, (as to those Churches in New-England it may be hoped it shall): God will create a Defence upon his Glory. And however, they shall hereby be reserved for that Resurrection which afterward is to come, ver. 11, 12, &c.

Now in the second place, on the contrary, the not measuring, and the leaving out the Outward Court (and yet measuring the other) is,

1. By the Word, exactly putting a difference between them that fear God, and them that fear him not; measuring out who fear him, by Marks, Signs, and Spots upon his People, (as in Deuteronomy God speaks) which the Word gives. And this distinguishing and putting a Difference between Men and Men, the Word calls excluding, or leaving them out: Which accordingly, to make way for the right Constitution of Churches, in discerning the true Matter of them; hath been the chief work of the Godly Ministers in England, in this last Age: Who though they wanted the Ordinance of Excommunication in their Churches, yet in lieu of it they had excommunicating Gifts; and were forced, because of that prophane mixture in Churches, to spend most of their Ministry, in distinguishing Men, by giving Signs and Marks of Mens Natural and Regenerate Estates, and convincing and discovering carnal Men to themselves, and others: Which God in Providence ordained, to make way for the erection of more pure Churches. For by this Light, was set up in Godly Mens Hearts a Spirit to discern between the clean and the unclean; and so, to hew and set apart the Materials for this Temple; as the Stones for Solomon's were.

2. This implies a rejecting them from Church-Fellowship, and not admitting them into this new-reared Temple, as being not fit Matter for this Building. Which is a kind of Excommunication of them.

3. This leaving out the Outward Court, may also imply, a rejecting such Forms of Administration in Worship, (Liturgies, &c.) and Corruptions therein, which are not found agreeable to the Word. For I take the Phrase of [Outward Court,] to import a full Opposition to those Particulars mentioned in the former Words: Which (as you have heard) are these, Temple, Altar, Worshippers. And therefore oppositely, all carnal and corrupt Worshippers, or Forms of Worshipping, cleaving to Ordinances, and left in the first Reformation, (as the Filth which the Sea leaves behind it at an Ebb), these are all comprehended under that Expression of [Outward Court.]

Now (in the last place) consider the Reason given, why God stirs up his People, now in this Age, to do thus by this Outward Court: Which is, because, as their Forms of Worſhip came from Popery, and themſelves are inwardly, and in Heart Gentiles: So he hath (for many glorious Ends of his) ordained them unto Popery again, more or leſs to be ſubjected to it. And therefore he declares this as the Reaſon, why he would now, and not before, put it into the Hearts of his Builders, thus ſtrangely and ſuddenly to reject them; becauſe that the Time is now come, when by his Decree, they muſt return to the Gentiles again: Only ere the Gentiles ſhould thus again ſeize on them, they muſt firſt be left out by the Templers, the true Church, which being once done, they forthwith become as Heathens (as Chriſt ſays); and being caſt out, they wither, and become a Prey to Men, as it is John 15. 6. Popiſh Opinions and Practices take them again. And how by degrees, do theſe Gentiles win Ground upon the Outward Court in England? And how does their winning Ground drive the true Worſhippers into the Inner Temple, and cauſe them to abandon their Mixture with the Outward Court? So that as this new Reformation made way for their ruining the Outward Court; ſo the Gentiles winning more upon the Outward Court, doth further this new Reformation: God carrying on theſe two Works at once.

Now the Word [given] (It is given to the Gentiles) imports an eaſy kind of Conqueſt, which the Popiſh Party obtains over them; they yield, and give up the Fort as it were, and ſuffer the Papiſts to come in upon them, without much, or long holding out. Now in ſuch a Diſpenſation of God towards the Carnal Proteſtants, thus to give them up again unto the Gentiles, there are many and glorious Ends which God may have in it, that may make it the more probable, that ſo indeed he intends to do, ere he means to bring in that glorious Church to come.

As, 1. That he might have a purer Church, according to the Primitive Inſtitution; theſe Treaders of his Courts, becoming loathſome to him, with their Oblations. And though the firſt Reformation, was outwardly in ſhew, more precious and glorious, for the Multitude of thoſe that Reformed, and this is to be by much a ſmaller and narrower Building, (even as in Proportion, the Outward Court did far exceed the Inner Temple); yet this conſiſting of purer Worſhippers, and Worſhip, ſquared by the Word: this ſecond Building ſhall in true Glory excell that other.

2. God may do this, to let many of theſe Worſhippers taſte of the Fruit of their own Ways. They took upon them to be the true Church-Zealots, and Defenders of Religion, againſt the Papiſts, and yet caſt out God's true Worſhippers, and their Miniſters, ſaying, Let God be glorified, whilſt they beat their Fellow Servants (as the Parable hath it). But here they are met with, being caſt out by them again: And upon their being rejected from their Fellowſhip, the Protection and Defence of theſe from the Gentiles ceaſe, and they are given up to them.

3. For the ſame Cauſe that God let Popery come in upon the World at firſt, for the ſame he ſuffers it thus again to overflow; even becauſe Men received not the Truth (ſo clearly ſhining in the Prophecy of the Witneſſes amongſt them) in the love of it.

4. To throw out this Rubbiſh, that would hinder that Temple, which after all he intends to build and make moſt glorious. For theſe, like thoſe Samaritans, Ezra. 4. 1, 2. offer indeed to build with them; but being according to God's Appointment not to have a Hand in it, they would be a hindrance to it, (as indeed they have been.)

5. That of that glorious Reſtauration, and Reſurrection of the Church, and Witneſſes, which is yet to come, and is foretold in the 12. and 13. Verſes of this Chapter, only true Worſhippers (who in this Time of Trial, ſtood out as faithful Witneſſes againſt Popery, and the Invaſion of it) might have the Honour and Praiſe. Therefore God brings this Trial upon all the Churches, ſo to burn up and conſume this Droſs, and to diſcover thoſe Carnal Proteſtants (that have ſpoken as big Words, and talk'd as hotly againſt Popery, as any, and made that the Evidence of their Sincerity) to be ſuch, and unſound, by a baſe yielding unto the Gentiles the Papiſts: That ſo, when Chriſt ſeems to revive his Church again (after this) ver. 13. then (as you have it in Iſa. 66.) Chriſt may appear to his Peoples Glory, but to their Shame; who yet before caſt them out, and ſaid, Let God be glorified.

6. That

PART II.

6. That the Gentiles, and the Pope might thus accompliſh their Time and Period of 42 Months, with an inveſtment of the Pope into his old Territories, now towards the expiring of that his Time. Which Reaſon the next Words do give. [And ſo they ſhall tread down the Holy City for 42 Months] and be found domineering in it (in a manner) as fully as before, towards the end of their 42 Months; that ſo their Leaſe may well nigh expire in a full Poſſeſſion: And that ſo the confuſion of Anti-Chriſt (the greateſt work to be done for the Church, from the Apoſtle's Days) may be the more glorious unto God. Thus Daniel ſeemed to fore-tell, that after thoſe Tidings out of the North ſhould trouble him, (which was this Separation of theſe Northern Kingdoms from him); as alſo out of the Eaſt, (through the prevailing of the Turk, when he came ſo near unto his Territories) that enraged with this, he ſhall go forth in great Fury, chap. 11. 44 and plant his Tabernacle, (his Power and Juriſdiction) again, upon the glorious holy Mountain, (where the Temple ſtands) between the Seas. And what follows? even that after all this his recovery of Power over theſe Churches of the Reformation towards his End, yet he ſhall come to his End, and none ſhall help him. And after Rome's recovery of her Power thus; and when the Whore begins to ſing her Siſter Babel's Song, juſt afore her Fall, (as Rev. 17. 7, 8.) and ſaith in her Heart, I ſit as a Queen, and am no Widow, as having her ancient Paramours again; and ſo, thinks ſhe ſhall (now) ſee no Sorrow: therefore ſhall her Plagues come in one day; for ſtrong is the Lord that judgeth her: And thereby will be ſeen God's Omnipotent Power in her Confuſion. There is nothing alſo in it, that chap. 17. the ten Kings, or States of Europe are twice mentioned, as giving their Power unto the Beaſt; and ver. 17. are the ſecond time ſaid to agree to do it; through ſome ſpecial Hand of God to fulfil his Will: even till thoſe Words of God, uttered by Daniel, in the fore-cited place, ſhall be fulfilled; (For unto ſome Word of the Old Teſtament, do theſe Words here refer.)

Sect. 4.

An Appendix to the firſt and ſecond Verſes of Chap. 11. Refuting other Interpretations, given of the Meaſuring of the Temple, and Outward Court. (which you may read, or not read, as you pleaſe.)

THis Interpretation of John's Meaſuring the Temple, as in this latter Age to be performed, being thus made forth, to hold in all things (as you have ſeen); I ſhall not need to ſpend much time (and yet ſome) in refuting other Interpretations.

Mr. Mede would have the New Book-Prophecy to begin here at this 11*th* Chapter, and the ſixth Trumpet under the Seal-Prophecy, fully ended before, at the concluſion of the 9*th* Chapter; and the Oath of the Angel, Chapter 10. to ſupply the ſeventh Trumpet: And ſo makes the Angel here in chap. 11. to begin again anew, aloft from John's Time: And ſo, this 11*th* Chapter, to be a ſhort compendious repreſentation of the Story of the Church, in all Ages, beginning here anew from John's Time; and as it were, the Contents, and brief Sum of that larger Story, which begins at Chapter 12. And ſo, would have all the ſeveral States of the Church, in all Ages, more briefly here repreſented through all Times: As,

1. That of the Primitive Times, until Anti-Chriſt's riſing, under the Type of the Temple meaſured; till when (ſays he) the Church remained Pure, according to the Pattern: And therefore, John is bidden to meaſure it, as a Pattern of the Truth unto after-Ages.

And then, 2. The Face of the Church, during Anti-Chriſt's Time, for 1260 years, under the Type of the Gentiles treading down the Outward Court, and Holy City: Thereby (ſays he) repreſenting, how the Papiſts ſhould arrogate and poſſeſs the Name and Face of the Church ſo long time; which yet, becauſe it will not bear the Meaſure of the Reed, John is therefore bidden to leave out, as neither in Doctrine, nor Diſcipline, keeping to the Word, nor unto the Primitive Pattern, Pattern, but utterly ſwerving from it, as the Church of Rome hath done. And in this State the Church continues for 1260 Years: the Gentiles having that Time allowed them to tread down the Holy City: And the State of the True Church all that while, is but as of theſe Witneſſes in Sack-cloth. This Interpretation the Reverence had to the Integrity of the Church for the firſt 400 Years did beget; together with that appearance, (at firſt view) that the Outward Court ſhould here be ſaid to be given to the Gentiles, to be by them trodden down as the Holy City is, for 42 Months. Which miſtake I have abundantly removed in the firſt Section, and in the fifth general Premiſe to this my Interpretation. Chap. 4.

But further, to remove the Suppoſition on which this Interpretation of his is founded;

1. The ſixth Trumpet, and the Times of it in this Viſion, are not yet ended here in this Angel's Intention. For the Angel, after his long diſcourſe of the Occurrences that are to fall under the Times of the ſixth Trumpet, doth then (when the Time of it, according to the Series of this Viſion, did indeed come to end) ſay (verſ. 14. of this Chapter) The ſecond Wo is paſt, and the Third cometh quickly. And you may obſerve, that after the expiration of the Time of theſe Wo Wo Trumpets, (which are the Fifth, Sixth, and Seventh) ſuch a cloſure comes in after each of them, [one Wo is paſt, another comes, &c.] And thus, after that the Times of the fifth Trumpet were out, according to the Series of the Viſion, this Cloſure is added, (*chap.*9.12.) [One Wo is paſt, and behold there come two other Woes more].

Now at the end of the 9*th* Chapter, there is no ſuch cloſe annexed. But here, chap. 11. 14. when the Angel had related the Occurrences which are to fall out in the latter days of the ſixth Trumpet, that is, whilſt the Turkiſh Kingdom yet ſtands, and which ſhall fall out not long before his Fall, then, and not before, he brings in that cloſe of the Times of that Trumpet, [The ſecond Wo is paſt, and behold the Third cometh quickly] Which ſhews, that either part of the Matter, and of the Wo, that goes to make up that ſixth Trumpet compleat, remained to be uttered by this Angel, chap. 11. (which when he had declared, he ſays, The ſecond Wo is paſt); or that, (according to the courſe of the Viſion) the Time of it was now expired.

And then, 2. the Angel takes his Oath, chap. 10. as yet ſtanding under the Times of the ſixth Trumpet, and after the Times of the Seventh; and that ſeventh Trumpet's Time yet not come to blow, according to the order of Time preſented in this Viſion. And therefore it is not a meer ſuſpenſion of the Viſion it ſelf, until he had begun with, or run over all Times again, (as Mr. Mede would have it): But its Time to blow was in this Viſion not yet come. This the very words and phraſe of the Angel's Oath, chap. 10. do imply; when he ſays, In the days of the ſeventh Trumpet, when he ſhall begin to ſound. Mark that phraſe, [The Days of the ſeventh Trumpet]. It implies that he ſpeaks according to the compute of Viſion-Time (as I may ſo call it); for Viſion being a repreſentation of Events, even as a Comedy is of Stories, accordingly theſe Viſions that ſucceed each other, have a ſuppoſed Artificial Time that runs along with the repreſentation of thoſe Events in theſe Viſions, in their due Order; Even as the ſeveral Seaſons of the Year are in a Prognoſtication laid forth, according to Artificial Names (as in an Almanack you read of Dog days, and the like) or, even as in a Map all Countries are repreſented with their ſeveral Climates or Scituations, by Lines of Longitude and Latitude, which have Artificial Names by Geographers given unto them. So from the 6*th* Chapter of this Book, hath been repreſented a Map or Viſion of all Times, and theſe, as ſucceſſively governed by Angels, from whence they have their Names, as Seaſons have from their Planets that govern them, (as the Dog-days in Summer, from the Dog-ſtar's Reign at that time). So the days of Chriſt's Kingdom to come, are called the Days of the ſeventh Angel: And ſo the Times before it, are called the Days of the ſixth Angel, or the ſixth Trumpet, (under which the Turk reigns). Now then, in that the Angel ſwears, Time ſhall be no longer, but till the Days of the ſeventh Angel; when he begins to ſound, all ſhall be finiſhed; it implies, that according to the courſe of Time in this Viſion begun, this Time was not yet ended.

that

To demonſtrate this; conſider,

1. That thoſe words [Time ſhall be no longer, but till the Days of the ſeventh Angel] do imply a long Series of Time already paſt in the Viſions of the former Angels, and Time hitherto brought down; and ſo, he muſt needs ſpeak this, in a reſpect to Viſion or Repreſentative Time, (as I may ſo call it) which he, as an Actor coming in his due Place and Order ſtood under. And accordingly likewiſe he muſt be ſuppoſed to ſpeak unto John as a Spectator brought to the laſt Stadium or Scene of Time: And therefore he ſpeaks, as taking it for granted, that there was ſome Time yet left, according to the Series of this Viſion; and yet, no more, but until the Days of the ſeventh Trumpet, which was next to come upon the Stage. And ſo the Angel muſt be ſuppoſed to ſpeak thoſe words, as yet ſtanding under the Days of the ſixth Trumpet, as yet not ended, but as having ſome Time ſtill to come. For ſhould he be ſuppoſed to begin again aloft at the top of Time, and ſo to bring John thither, as having ended the former Prophecy; and then, with a New Viſion, to begin to run over all Time again; he ſhould, in the ſame Speech, take in two ſeveral Accounts of Time at once. For whilſt he ſays, Time (or Delay) ſhall be no longer, (which imports that whole ſpace of Time under the former Trumpets, from the Age wherein John lived, to be paſt and off the Stage already) in reſpect thereto he muſt be ſuppoſed then to ſtand under the ſixth Trumpet, as viewing all that Time gone over. But in the following words, when he ſays, [But in the Days of the ſeventh Trumpet, when he ſhall begin to blow], he ſhould ſpeak, as taking all Time afore him anew, and as beginning all Time again, (according to this Opinion). And it were ſtrange, if in the ſame Sentence, two Speeches ſhould bear ſuch differing Dates.

2. Thoſe words [But in the Days of the ſeventh Angel, when he ſhall begin to ſound] do alſo argue this. For,

1. He ſays not to John, The Viſion of that Angel, and his ſounding, I will not give thee now (John) which yet ſhould now in order follow; but he ſays, The Days of his ſounding (as ſpeaking of Viſion-Time) are yet to begin. [When the Angel (ſays he) ſhall begin to ſound] as manifeſtly noting the Time of ſounding according to the order of Repreſentative Time in the Viſion, not yet to be actually come to be preſented; and not the Viſion only ſuſpended unto John.

And, 2. when he ſaid, chap. 11. 14. that the ſecond Wo is paſt, he adds; Behold, the third Wo cometh quickly; as noting yet ſome ſpace of Time between this and the ſeventh Trumpet to come, as between the ſixth Vial, and the Seventh, there is to be. So that the Viſion is not ſuſpended only, but really (according to the Series of this Prophecy) it ſtill went on, and this Seventh was to follow.

And, 3. accordingly, when in the 11*th* Chapter, the ſeventh Trumpet doth indeed ſound, there is a Voice heard (in anſwer, as it were, unto what the Angel had ſaid, chap. 10. that Delay ſhould be no longer) that, Now that Time is come, &c. He had ſaid it ſhould be no longer then till then; and now, when it ſounds, the Voice ſays, that Time is come. So that then, and not till then, according to the Series of this Viſion, was the Time of the ſounding of it. And all this argues the Viſion of this 11*th* Chapter, and the Occurrences of it, to be a Supplement or Addition, to come in towards the end of the ſixth Trumpet, and not to begin again at the top of Time. So that rather I take it, he ſtill ſpeaks all in this 11*th* Chapter, as ſtanding in the laſt days of the ſixth Trumpet, the Times whereof are not ended; and ſo mentions ſuch Occurrences as ſhall fall out in the latter Times of it, in which John and he do ſtand (as hath been ſhewn).

And, 2. for that other thing ſuppoſed, namely, Mr. Mede's making the firſt 400 Years until Antichriſt's riſing, to be the Temple meaſured, as ſo long agreeing with the Reed, and ſo continuing as an exact Pattern for Churches, and ſo intended in this meaſuring, I ſay two things;

1. If

Chap. 4.

1. If the meaning ſhould be, that theſe Primitive Churches are therefore meaſured, that they might be held forth as a Pattern to Churches afterward (as is intimated in his quoting Ezek. 43. 10, 11. and applying it to this meaſuring, in ſuch a ſenſe only) I cannot imagine, that although a juſt and a due reverence is to be given to thoſe Times, that yet Chriſt would ever impart ſuch an honour to any Church not purely Apoſtolical, as to make them the Pattern for Worſhip and Doctrine; which is Honour due only to the Word, and unto thoſe Churches extant in the very Times of the Apoſtles, only ſo far as they kept thoſe Ordinances in which the Apoſtles ſetled them; ſo 1 Cor. 11. 2, 22. Otherwiſe the Apoſtle pulls down the Pride of that Corinthian, and of all other Churches, for arrogating this unto themſelves, ſaying, What, came the Word of God out from you, or to you only? Chap. 14. of that Epiſtle, verſ. 36. It is therefore too much to give to thoſe Primitive Times, eſpecially for the firſt 400 Years.

For, 2. although the Doctrine and Diſcipline of the firſt Age in which John lived, and in which Churches were then ſetled by the Apoſtles, might then be thus meaſured to be held forth, and ſo to ſerve for a Pattern, (as we have the Story of it in the Word, which on purpoſe relates the State of thoſe Churches); yet to make ſuch an integrity to extend to thoſe other following Ages, until the very Times wherein Antichriſt roſe, (which in many Matters, both of Worſhip and Government, did ſo much ſwerve one Age after another, ſtill more and more from the Rule) this were unſafe. For the Corruptions which ſtill did ſteal in upon the Doctrine and Worſhip, in the firſt 300 Years after the Apoſtles Deaths, were indeed the occaſion of the Riſe of Antichriſt; the Myſtery of whoſe Iniquity began to work in the Apoſtle's Times; and in every Age more than other ſo prevailed, as that Antichriſt aroſe in the view of the beſt Churches and Fathers, though then undiſcerned by them. Which, had they kept that Primitive Integrity, had been utterly impoſſible. And therefore to reduce our Worſhip, &c. now unto the Pattern of the firſt four or five hundred Years, (which is the plauſible pretence of our New Deformers) is to bring Popery again in by the ſame degrees now, as it at firſt crept in by. And this the Devil, who knew the way of introducing it then, to that end cryeth it up now.

For my part, I reſt aſſured, that the Light which hath broken forth in many of our Reformed Churches, ſince Calvin's Time, and which ſtill encreaſeth, and ſhall, until Antichriſt be conſumed, is both in Matter of Doctrine, Interpretation of Scriptures, Worſhip, Church-Government, &c. much purer, and might be taken for a truer Meaſure, than what ſhines in the Story and Writings of thoſe three latter Primitive Ages. But yet it were too much to attribute that to it, which this Opinion puts upon the Light of thoſe Primitive Times. But all that I have ſaid in my fore-gone Expoſition is, that now in this Age Light coming in, and diſcovering how far the conſtitution of Churches in their outward Government, &c. hath ſwerved from the true Pattern: Therefore John is ſet at work afreſh to meaſure it. Which uſe of the Phraſe is very proper, as implying only a Reformation and Reſtitution of the Church attempted, after a ſwerving from the Rule. In which ſenſe Beza and other Interpreters underſtand it, without any arrogation to theſe Times.

And, 3. for his making the Outward Court to repreſent the Churches ſtate as in order of Time ſucceeding this Temple of the Primitive Times; I only ſay this, That it ſeems to me, that theſe two, the Temple, and the Outward Court, are repreſented as rather exiſting together, and contemporaneous, the one being bid to be meaſured, and the other to be caſt out, at one and the ſame Time, as being not capable of the true Meaſure. And the contrary Opinion would make no Churches erected according to the Pattern in this Reformation, ſince Luther and Calvin, but ſtill to remain, as it were, hidden under Popery as an Outward Court, until Antichriſt's Times are fully out. Whereas Churches are, and have been, long ſince erected, and that, as exactly according to the Pattern as any we read of, (the Apoſtle's Age only excepted).

And then, 4. for that other Suppoſition, that the 11*th* Chapter ſhould be a Compendium of all Times from John's Age unto the ſeventh Trumpet, ſo to ſhew the ſynchronizing of two Prophecies; I ſay,

PART II.

1. It were ſtrange, that in a Compendium, one particular Paſſage (of the killing of the Witneſſes) ſhould be inſiſted upon more largely than all the reſt, and take up the half of that Diſcourſe, as from verſ. 7. to 14, this doth; and that ſuch a Paſſage or Occurrence as this, that is not mentioned in the large Prophecy that follows (whereof this ſhould be the Compendium and Argument) ſhould yet come in here by it ſelf; would it not rather argue, that the Angel here did chiefly intend to give ſome ſpecial Occurrence, which ſhould go before the ſeventh Trumpet in the Church of the Age that preceded it, as a ſign of its approach?

2. It is true indeed, that one end of this Angel's coming down, was to ſhew, what was the Time and Period of the fourth Monarchy, under that laſt Head the Pope, whoſe Time and Continuance Daniel had mentioned but indefinitely. But yet, his purpoſe was to make mention (and but a mention) of no more Times than ſimply thoſe 1260 Years of the laſt Head; which were enough to interpret Daniel, (which was his ſcope) and not explicitly to aſcend to the whole Time of the Revelation. And then, his annexing to that Computation ſuch Occurrences belonging to the Book-Prophecy, as ſhould fall out at the ending of that Time; and his ſubjoining the expiring of the ſixth Trumpet (which belongs to the Seal-Prophecy, it being the paſſing away of the Second Wo) verſ. 14. preſently upon the ending of theſe Occurrences; this ſerveth ſufficiently enough to ſhew the Connexion of all Times in both Prophecies, and more clearly than that other way of Mr. Mede's.

There is but one Objection, both againſt this way of mine, and that makes moſt for that Opinion of his, that I know of; and that is, that chap. 10. John eating a little Book, which contains a New Prophecy, (and therefore, verſ. 12. he ſays, he muſt prophely again); hence therefore it follows, that the Seal-Prophecy muſt be ſuppoſed ended; and ſo, this 11*th* Chapter to contain a New Prophecy from the beginning.

To which I Anſwer; That the Angel's coming down now towards the end of the Old Prophecy, had a double ſcope; the one to give a New Prophecy, the other to give an exact computation of the Times of both Prophecies, himſelf as yet ſtanding in the end of thoſe Times of the one Prophecy, and being ſhortly to enter into the other; and ſo withal intending to give a ſignal of the ending of thoſe Times for the Church's warning. Which Occurrences that were to be the Signs, becauſe they were Paſſages belonging to the Book-Prophecy, as being the Fates of the Reformed Churches in the Days before the Pope's Ruin, (which are Matters belonging to the Book-Prophecy) hence it is neceſſary, that John ſhould now firſt eat that little Book, (the Story of which was entirely to begin at the 12*th* Chapter) that ſo thereby he might be, as it were, enabled to conceive of theſe Paſſages related, chap. 11. they being ſuch as belonged to that Book-Prophecy. For John had not yet ſeen the Beaſt aſcending out of the bottomleſs Pit, who is mentioned, verſ. 7. nor heard of the Witneſſes and their Vials; but by eating that little Book, now was ſignified to him, that therein was contained the Viſion of theſe things, which theſe Paſſages here related did concern. And beſides this, there was likewiſe ſignified unto him thereby, that now in the laſt Days of the ſixth Trumpet, the Book was open, (as Daniel ſays).

But for a more full Anſwer to be added to theſe, take in that fifth Precognition, or premiſed Conſideration, which in the beginning of this Expoſition of Chap. 11. I laid down afore-hand, tending to the opening of it.

I might do the like by the Interpretations of Mr. Brightman, and Mr. Forbes; who though they make the meaſuring to ſignify and repreſent the Godlies diſcerning the difference between the Temple, the True Church, and the Outward Court, the Popiſh and Falſe Church, (in theſe latter days of the firſt Reformation); Yet ſo, as they make the Outward Court here, to be the Outward Face of the Popiſh Church, the Seat and Name of which they poſſeſſed; and the Temple to be the Church of God in all Ages hid under Popery, (as the Temple was, within the Outward Court) and for many Ages not diſcern'd; whilſt the Popiſh

Popiſh Church poſſeſſing the Outward Court, ſtood only outward to the Eye, and held the Name and Face of the Church, but became now to be diſcerned or meaſured by the Reed of the Word; which is (ſay they) the meaſuring here. So that, they make the Church, in theſe Anteriour Times under Popery, to be the Temple, and the outward Face of the Church all that while to be the Outward Court. And having placed this Temple, and Outward Court, in the firſt days of Antichriſt, and this meaſuring of the Temple thus high, even from the dawning of the Goſpel ſo long ſince; they accordingly go on to make the following Occurrences of this Chapter to be all already fulfilled.

The 1260 Days of the Witneſſes (which they would have to be the two Teſtaments) their Prophecy in Sack-cloth they make to be expired, and their Slaughter paſt in that Council of Trent, coincident with the ſmal-Caldique War in 1547, or thereabouts: After which there was in Germany a reſtauration of the Goſpel, after three Years and a half; where the tenth part of the City fell off again from Popery. After which the ſeventh Trumpet ſounded (ſay they) when theſe Northern Kingdoms ſetledly embraced the Goſpel, and became the Kingdoms of Jeſus Chriſt, (where, that he may for ever reign without any recovery again by the Beaſt, I ſay Amen, as Jeremy did).

But this Interpretation I cannot aſſent to; for (as we ſhall ſee afterward) this killing the Witneſſes, and the paſſing away of the ſecond Woe, (or the Turkiſh Dominion) together with the ſounding of the ſeventh Trumpet, are all yet to come.

And for their making the Temple meaſured, to be the Company of Elect paſt through all the Ages until then, but now in the beginning of the Goſpel diſcovered, theſe things are againſt it:

1. The Viſions of this Book are ſtill of things preſent, or to come, and not of things paſt. And therefore this ſeems much rather to note out the preſent ſtate of the Temple, exiſting as then unto John, under ſome of the Times of the ſixth Trumpet, than a diſcerning what was paſt and gone before that Time.

2. The Condition of the True Worſhippers, whilſt hidden in thoſe Anteriour Times of Popery until the Reformation, are rather repreſented in chap. 14. (which Chapter ſummarily contains the ſeveral Faces and Conditions of the Church through Antichriſt's Reign, as the 13*th* Chapter doth the State of Antichriſt during that Time) to be as a Company of 144000 upon Mount Sion, whereon as yet a Temple was not built; and ſo diſtinguiſh'd from them under the Times of the Reformation, when only we come to have the firſt mention of the Temple, verſ. 15, 17. and of the Altar, verſ. 18. therein alluding (as it ſeems to me) unto the State of the Holy City, wherein, until Solomon's Time, there was not a Temple built; though in David's Time, that Mount was by the Jews inhabited. So nor was this Virgin-Company as yet formed up into a diſtinct Temple and Altar of Worſhip diſtinct from the Popiſh, in any eminent manner, but rather lay ſcattered in the Popiſh Churches, and were hidden among them, although they were not of them. But now in the Reformation, they began to be built up into a Temple apart, and to ſet up an Altar diſtinct from that of theſe Samaritans.

And then, 3. to make the meaſuring this Temple to be an after-ſight, or diſcerning of them, does not enough fill up the meaning of that Phraſe, (though that be connotated and implied in it); which we find elſe-where uſed, (as Ezek. 43. 11.) for drawing a Platform of God's Houſe, and the Ordinances thereof, to keep them, and put them in practice; or elſe for building and finiſhing an Edifice, as Zech. 2. verſ. 2, and 4, compared, and Zech. 4. 9, 10. Which muſt therefore rather reſpect a Temple as in theſe Times exiſting, and in being, or to be built and finiſh'd, than a Temple in Ages paſt, and but now diſcovered.

And, 4. thoſe oppoſite Negative words [meaſure not, but leave out the Outward Court] do import a real Act of Rejection put in execution, and in Fact done towards that Outward Court as then exiſting; and not meerly a diſcovery or judging them only to have been but an Outward Court in Ages paſt. They do imply an Act of leaving them out in that Building that was now erecting; as being ſuch whoſe Form and Frame was not for this Building, nor capable of that meaſure which was now to be applied.

All theſe things argue to me, that this Viſion and Work appointed John here, reſpected not Anteriour Times, but the Face of that Church, the Times whereof he then ſtood in, and the Work of that Age about it. Whereas (according to their Interpretation) the Outward Court muſt have exiſted at the beginning of the Times of Antichriſt; for they ſuppoſe the Outward Court (that is) the Face of the Church poſſeſſed by Antichriſt 42 Months, even from the beginning.

There is a Third Interpretation, which to me ſeems more probable than either of theſe (and which I exclude not in this of mine); and that is, That this meaſuring the Temple, &c. ſhould be that firſt Reformation and erecting of Churches, with that Separation made from Popery by our Worthies, they caſting out that Catholick Romiſh Church as not agreeing with the Rule. And ſo that Reformation and Separation falling out together with (or not long after) the Turks poſſeſſing the Eaſtern Empire, (which is the ſixth Trumpet, chap. 9.) This 11*th* Chapter beginning with that Reformation of the Church, ſhould thereby orderly continue the Story of the ſixth Trumpet, without any Chaſma or void ſpace of Time between the 9*th* and 11*th* Chapters. Whereas, to draw it down to our Time, leaves an interim or vacuity of an hundred Years.

But, 1. I conceive the Scope of the Angel here not to be ſo much to make up a compleat Story continued to the other, chap. 9. For the former Story of the Trumpets, having contained only the Fates of the Empire, it therefore ſuited not his Scope to annex this Reformation of the Church thereunto, as any homogeneal part of one continued Story, although in Time immediately ſucceeding it: For that more properly belonged to the Book-Prophecy that follows, and is at large ſet forth, chap. 14, 15, and 16. But his Scope ſeems rather to be, to give a computation of the Times of Antichriſt, and a ſignal of their ending, by the Occurrences of the Age juſt afore; ſingling out to that end ſuch particular Paſſages, (that otherwiſe belonged to the Book-Prophecy) about the Church in that laſt Age, as ſhould be moſt eminent, and likewiſe deſignatory of the ending of thoſe Times, being ſuch alſo as ſhould fall out before the expiring of the ſixth Trumpet, or ſecond Wo.

And if theſe Occurrences have any affinity with the ſixth Trumpet, it rather lies in this, that whereas the fifth and ſixth Trumpets had contained two Woes on the Chriſtian World in the Eaſt, (for their Idolatry) from the Turks and Saracens; This contains a like Wo on the Churches of the Reformation in the Weſt, by the Papiſts over-running their Outward Court, as a puniſhment of their Carnal-Goſpelling. Which added to thoſe Woes brought upon thoſe Grecian Churches by the Turks, ſhould make the Wo of the ſixth Trumpet compleat. And ſo, the treading the Wine-preſs without the City, (in Germany) chap. 14. ſhould be reduced to the ſixth Trumpet, as a part of it, rather than to any of the Vials. The Vials being upon the Turk and Pope only, but theſe other Woes upon thoſe other Profeſſors of Chriſt, and his Name, after a fleſhly way, both Grecians and Proteſtants; the one by the Turk, chap. 9. the other by the Papiſts here in this 11*th* Chapter.

And then, 2. The main eminent Buſineſs of the firſt Reformers from Popery, being chiefly about Matters of Doctrine corrupted by the Papiſts, and about the Idolatries of Rome; therefore both in chap. 14, in the Voices of thoſe three Angels; and in chap. 15. in their Song there, Matters of Doctrine only are mentioned. And though they laid the Foundation of the Building of all Churches, yet that was not τὸ ἔργον, that very Work unto which they did ſo ſpecially attend. It was not ſo much the right meaſuring and conſtitution of Churches, and of the Materials of them; as here (you ſee that) that is made the main thing intended, even to meaſure the Temple, Altar, &c. and indeed is, and hath been eminently, and peculiarly the Work in hand now in this laſt Age.

3. Let it be conſidered, that the Popiſh Party in this Alluſion, cannot ſo properly be called the Outward Court; but they are rather intended by Gentiles here:

here: And ſo, the Outward Court muſt note out that third ſort of Worſhippers between theſe Gentiles and the Templers, (as I before ſhewed). Chap. 4.

And, 4. this being that exceeding great Error and Defect laid in the Foundation of the Churches of the firſt Reformation, (eſpecially in our Britiſh Churches) namely, the adjoining this Outward Court of Carnal and Unregenerate Proteſtants, and receiving them from the firſt into the Temple, Worſhip, and Communion of all Ordinances; ſo that, the Bounds of the Church were extended as far as the Bounds of the Common-Wealth. Which was done out of Humane Prudence, ſuddainly to greaten the Party againſt the Gentiles in the City. That as the Earth helps the Woman, chap. 12. ſo this, as an Outward Court, might round about ſhield the True Temple and Worſhippers in it againſt the Beaſt. And then, on the other ſide, this being in this New-begun and ſecond Reformation of theſe Churches, the main fundamental Principle which is here mentioned, of receiving none into Churches, but only ſuch Worſhippers as the Reed, or Light of the Word, (ſo far as it gives Rules to judg others by) applyed by the judgment of Men (who yet may err) ſhall diſcover to be truly Saints, (which belongs to another Diſpute); and this Viſion falling out in, and as belonging to the Times of this latter Age, and being purpoſely intended (as it were) to amend and correct that very Error: Hence it ſeems moſt properly to belong to this Work of a ſecond Reformation.

Yet, becauſe that was a true meaſuring, and this but the finiſhing of that Building, whereof their Hands had laid the Foundation, (and like Zerubbabel's finiſhing the Temple); therefore I verily think the Holy Ghoſt had an aim at both, as unto two ſeveral gradual Accompliſhments of it. For this I perceive in almoſt all Prophecies; that there are ſeveral Accompliſhments which the Holy Ghoſt hath in his Eye; yet ſo, as he fixeth upon one, (and uſually, the laſt of them) as the main intended. For which I could bring many Inſtances; of which one I ſhall hereafter give. And that he might have ſuch a double aſpect in this, I ſhall ſhew when I come to the killing of the Witneſſes.

CHAP. V.

The Expoſition of the Eleventh Chapter continued. The Deſcription of the Witneſſes, Verſe 3, 4, 5, and 6.

SECT. I.

Some Things in general premiſed. The Diviſion of the particular Acts aſcribed to them: with the Order and Time of each.

NOw I come to the Angel's Diſcourſe concerning the two Witneſſes; who are the Holy People, whoſe Power is at laſt to be ſcattered. The Deſcription of whom is ſet down, to make way for the relation of that their ſcattering.

Two things (as was ſaid) are here related about them.

1. The Deſcription of their Condition and of their Power, ver. 3, 4, 5, & 6.
2. The laſt ſcattering of them, and of this their Power.

I. For their Deſcription (which the Angel makes, to the end that John might know whom he ſpake of, who were at laſt to be thus killed); He deſcribes them as throughout all Ages they had oppoſed Anti-Chriſt: which he doth upon that occaſion, that he had for to mention their whole Time. But eſpecially he ſets them out by what in their latter Times (the Age immediately foregoing this their killing) they ſhould have power to oppoſe the Beaſt in; and yet, how that after all, he ſhould prevail againſt them. So that there is this uſe and end of this ſo large a Deſcription of them, ver. 3, 4, 5, & 6. that the Time of this their laſt killing might be more evidently diſcerned, when it was to come; namely, after they ſhould have done thus and thus againſt the Beaſt and his Company: To wit, ſet up a Temple, and poured out four Vials, and when they ſhould be come to one of the higheſt Plagues, even to devour them with Fire (which is the fourth Vial); that then their Enemies ſhould prevail againſt them.

Now this Deſcription of them, is abſolved many and ſeveral Ways: As

1. By their Office; they are Witneſſes and Prophets.

(1.) Witneſſes, As being in all Ages to teſtify againſt Anti-Chriſt; but eſpecially now at laſt.

(2.) Prophets, As being to Propheſy, and thereby to feed the Church, whilſt in the Wilderneſs, the ſame term of 1260 Years, as you have it Chap. 12. 6. where it is ſaid, that They (that is, theſe Prophets and Witneſſes) ſhall feed her, &c.

2. They are ſet out by their Condition, which is in Sack-Cloath and Mourning; whilſt the Pope and his Clergy, are in their Silk Triumphing.

3. By their Number; they are Two.

For, 1. By the Mouth of two Witneſſes (at leaſt) every Word is to be eſtabliſhed.

And, 2. They are Two, in Alluſion to thoſe famous Parts or Couples (for by Couples they have ſtill gone) in the Old Teſtament, living in the like Times; and which were fit Types of theſe Times of Anti-Chriſt, and the Churches State therein, in the various Progreſs of it throughout all Ages of Anti-Chriſt's Reign.

The

Chap. 5.

The Couples were theſe.

1. { Moſes / Aaron } Prophets to the Church in Egypt, and in the Wilderneſs.

2. { Elias / Eliſha } Prophets to Iſrael in Ahab's Time, wherein Idolatry prevailed, and no Face of a Church was ſeen, and but 7000 hid in Corners that were Godly.

3. { Zerubbabel / Joſhua } Prophets in the Days of the finiſhing the Temple, after the People were come forth from Babylon's Captivity.

And that to theſe three Pairs the Alluſion is here made, is manifeſt.

1. To Moſes and Aaron: For

(1.) Theſe execute Egypt's Plagues, ver. 6. like as they did.

(2.) They devour Men with Fire, ver. 5. as Moſes did twice by his Gain-Sayers in the Wilderneſs.

2. To Elias and Eliſha; for as they ſhut up Heaven, that it rained not; ſo theſe here do the like, ver. 6.

3. To Joſhua and Zerubbabel; for therefore in ver. 4. theſe are called the Two Olive Trees, and Candleſticks that begun and finiſh'd the Temple after the Captivity.

Now out of this Alluſion made to ſuch Perſons, you may in the general obſerve, That they are eminent both Miniſters and Magiſtrates (for ſuch were all theſe Types in their Times); who eſpecially are here intended, under the Notion of Two Witneſſes. And thus we have had the Deſcription of their Quality, Office, Condition, and Number.

Then further, They are ſet forth to us by their ſeveral Exploits, which they are to perform and execute during the whole Time of their Prophecy. And theſe are particularly related in each Verſe following: Which before I explain particularly, let me Premiſe this in the General to your Notice about them. That the Angel doth enumerate them, and order his recital of them ſo, as to draw our Eyes unto two of theſe Exploits or Facts eſpecially, as being the more eminent, and as thoſe which were neareſt to the Times of this laſt Age, wherein John meaſured the Temple. And theſe are,

1. Their devouring their Enemies with Fire, which is mentioned, ver. 5.

And 2, Their being Two Olive Trees, &c. ver. 4.

Which Two are firſt mentioned, and ſet in the firſt view, as being ſuch, as did ſet forth theſe Witneſſes according to what they ſhould be in this latter Age. And to confirm this, you may obſerve.

1. That thoſe Words in the 5*th* Verſe, [If any Man hurt them, Fire comes out of their Mouths, &c.] have indeed a direct reference to thoſe Words, ver. 3. [And I will give to my Two Witneſſes, &c.] So that it is as if he had ſaid, I will give to my Two Witneſſes Power, that if any Man hurt them, Fire ſhall come out of their Mouths, &c. And the Particle [καὶ] [And] I will give, &c. is there (ver. 3.) adverſatively put for [But]; as noting out that ſpecial oppoſition, that theſe Witneſſes ſhould have Power to make againſt the Gentiles, that ſhould enter upon their Outward Court. But (ſays he) I will give to my Two Witneſſes Power, that if any Man hurt them, &c. To this (I ſay) do theſe Words [And I will give] ver. 3. refer, as well as to thoſe other Words [They ſhall Prophecy, &c.] which follow in the 3*d* Verſe, (as Piſcator alſo obſerves.) That whereas he had ſaid three things in the 1*ſt* and 2*d* Verſes; As

1. That the Temple was to be Meaſured and Finiſh'd in this latter Age, by the Godly in it (whoſe Perſon John ſuſtains.)

2. That their Outward Court (which fenced the Temple and Witneſſes) was to be regained by the Papiſts, and trodden down.

And 3. That the Gentiles whole Time of raigning (upon this Occaſion mentioned) was to expire.

An-

PART II.

Anſwerably and oppoſitely (as [καὶ] is taken) he ſays three things of theſe Witneſſes; As

1. That the ſame ſpace of Time that the Gentiles are to have to reign in, the ſame theſe have (even as many) to propheſy in, and ſhall be enabled to oppoſe them all that while. The Witneſſes are to have their 1260 Days, for the Gentiles 42 Months; ſo ver. 3.

And 2. Whereas this Temple was in his latter Age to be begun to be Meaſured, but that Work is interrupted and hindred, by this Aſſault and Invaſion made by theſe Gentiles, upon this Outward Court and Temple: Yet theſe Witneſſes ſhall be as thoſe Two Olive Trees, (ver. 4) That miniſter before the Lord of the whole Earth; (whoſe Power is engaged in that Work.) And thus they are called, to ſignify, that as Joſhua and Zerubbabel then, (who were called two Olive Trees in that Viſion, Zech. 4. in reſpect, that they were to perform the like work of finiſhing the Temple, againſt all Oppoſition made); ſo ſhould theſe two Witneſſes now compleat the finiſhing of this Temple meaſured, notwithſtanding this Interruption, by the Gentiles Invaſion of the Temple and Outward Court. And ſo, this is oppoſitely ſpoken to that ſecond thing ſaid of the Gentiles.

And 3. Although theſe Gentiles in their ſubduing the Outward Court, do much hurt to the Witneſſes, who ſhall oppoſe them in this their Aſſault upon it, and the Temple: Yet they again ſhall be able to avenge all the hurt done to themſelves, by Fire returned upon their Enemies, and ſpit out of their Mouths againſt them, whilſt they are thus endeavouring to regain the Outward Court from them. And this is the firſt thing in General to be obſerved.

Now 2. To the ſame purpoſe you may obſerve, that this Power given them to hurt their Enemies, is ſpoken of as a Matter of Fact, done at that preſent Time, and in the Age wherein John in the Viſion ſtands, bearing the Perſons of the Godly who were to meaſure this Temple. Yea, and that this is ſpoken of, as an encouragement to that work, that If any Man will hurt them, Fire comes out of their Mouths.

But now, 3. On the other ſide, it may be obſerved, that whatever elſe is ſaid of their Power in the 6th Verſe (beſides theſe two things in the 4th and 5th Verſes) is brought in meerly as a thing added for illuſtration ſake, to ſhew, what Power beſides this, they have in their Days formerly exerciſed: As thus, Theſe have Power in the Days of their Prophecy, &c. ver. 6. But the prime and eminent thing which is firſt mentioned, is that their devouring their Enemies with Fire; which is plainly the fourth Vial, mentioned next the meaſuring the Temple, as conjunct with it.

And again, 4. This Exploit of theirs hath an Emphaſis ſet upon it alſo, ver. 5. [In this manner he (ſpeaking of him that ſhall hurt them) muſt be killed,] as noting the greateſt Plague which theſe Witneſſes could execute, and that which ſo vexeth and tormenteth their Enemies, (as ver. 10. hath it) and ſo ſcorcheth them, (as the fourth Vial expreſſeth it) that they are thereby provoked to kill them for it, and ſo to rejoice over them chiefly in this very reſpect, as ver. 10. tells us.

Yea, 5. Theſe four Plagues being plainly the four firſt Vials; you may obſerve, that they are here mentioned ordine inverſo, in a clean contrary Order from what they are ranked in, Chap. 16. For the fourth Vial of Fire, which in Chap. 16. is made laſt in Execution, is yet here ranked firſt: And that Vial on the Earth which is firſt there, is mentioned laſt here; meerly to ſhew that this of Fire, was that which belonged to the preſent Times of this Chapter, and the Viſions of it; namely, when the Temple is Meaſured, and alſo as that which was mainly intended: and the other to come in only for illuſtration ſake, to ſhew more fully who theſe Witneſſes were, (even the ſame, that the Pourers forth of thoſe Vials.)

SECT.

Chap. 5.

SECT. II.

The Acts of the Witneſſes; firſt in the darkeſt Times of Popery, withholding the Rain, What? Next in the Times of Separation from Popery, in the three firſt Vials, verſ. 6.

THis being Premiſed, to the end that you might know what Times to refer theſe unto; I come now particularly to explain theſe ſeveral Exploits here againſt their Enemies, and that great Service they do for God all this long Time of their Prophecy. Which ſerviceable Acts of theirs have a double Aſpect.

1. Towards their Enemies.
2. Towards the Temple, the Church of God.

Or they may be divided, according to the ſeveral Times in which theſe Services were performed. As,

1. What in this laſt Age they were to do before their killing, and now when the Temple is meaſured, and the Outward Court to be troden down: and this in the 4th and 5th Verſes.

And, 2. what in the former Ages of their Prophecy they had alſo done; which is laid down verſ. 6.

And this Diviſion you will here ſee to fall in according to that Diviſion which I made of theſe Times, Chap. 14. and in the Vials.

For the firſt, What they did to their Enemies: And,

1. What they did againſt them in the days fore-going this latter Age, wherein John is ſuppoſed to ſtand. Which Acts of theirs are ſet forth in the ſixth Verſe.

1. And thoſe were either done in thoſe firſt Times of all, even in the darkeſt Times of Popery, when the 144000 ſtood on Mount Sion without a Temple, and when Idolatry overſpread the World, (Chap. 14. from the beginning of it, unto verſ. 6.) Then theſe Witneſſes did ſhut Heaven, that it rained not; which in the Alluſion refers to the Times of Ahab, as the fitteſt Type of theſe firſt Times. For that Exploit carries us unto what Elias then in like manner did, when he brought that Curſe on the Land for their Idolatry, That it rained not. When alſo the Church was ſo ſmall, that Elias thought himſelf alone; and when Ahab, and his Prieſts of Baal (that is, the Pope and his Maſs-Prieſts) ruled all the World. But hereby is ſignified, that then theſe Prophets had this Priviledg, to have true Grace only, and the Dews and Influence of Heaven to come down upon themſelves, to have a Truth of Doctrine among them to ſave them; which fell not into the Knowledg and Hearts of theſe Prieſts of Baal; (you heard, Chap. 14. 3. that they had a peculiar Song unto themſelves, which none elſe could learn). Now all theſe Dews of Grace, and Saving Doctrine, were reſtrained and with-held from thoſe Idolaters, as a juſt curſe upon them for their Apoſtacy.

Or, 2. in the Times ſucceeding, next to theſe firſt Times; that is, from and after the Times of their Separation from Popery, and upon their coming out of that Egypt. Then, as Moſes and Aaron, they execute the like Plagues to thoſe of theirs on Egypt, even the three firſt Vials, which are therefore alſo mentioned in this 6th Verſe; (for which I refer you to the 16th Chapter). And theſe are the Days of that Separation of Churches from Antichriſt, and firſt Reformation, ſet forth in the 14th Chapter.

PART II.

SECT. III.

The Acts of the Witnesses in this their last Age of Prophecy. And first, their Devouring with Fire, (verſ. 5.) What? The Alluſion thereof unto Moſes his deſtroying Nadab and Corah's Company with Fire, applied.

BUT then, 2. in their laſt days of all, towards the Time of this New Reformation of the Temple, and afore this their killing to come, they pour out the fourth Vial in ſcorching and devouring their Enemies with Fire, as verſ. 5. ſhews us. Even as Moſes and Aaron, when the Church was come out of Egypt, and in the Wilderneſs, devoured Nadab with Fire, Levit. 10. 1, 2. and 250 Princes in the Rebellion of Corah, Numb. 16. 35. And this devouring their Enemies with Fire, holds not only of thoſe that profeſs Popery, but of any Men that ſhall hurt them, (though living among them) as you have it verſ. 5.

Now obſerve how this Type agrees with the Face of Things in this latter Age: For, as when this fell out, Moſes had then brought the People out of Egypt, and had long afore begun to ſet up the Tabernacle, and other Ordinances of Worſhip. So when falls out the Rebellion of theſe Men here devoured with Fire? It is after the Church is come out of that Spiritual Egypt where theſe former Plagues were executed, and after that Publick Worſhip is erected, and ſet up, according to God's appointment in many things; that is, after the firſt great Reformation made by Luther, &c. But here is a Company of Rebels that riſe up againſt Moſes for his endeavouring to keep to the Word in his Temple's Frame and Fabrick, and for his calling for this at the Builder's Hands.

Obſerve the Quarrel of both thoſe Companies then, and of theſe now.

The firſt Quarrel then was about introducing Humane Inventions in God's Worſhip, which himſef commanded not.

The Second was, not only a renewing and continuing that Quarrel; but further, to take away all diſtinction of Perſons in Worſhipping.

For the Firſt; Nadab and Abihu, they offer ſtrange Fire, (namely, the common culinary Fire, which in God's Worſhip was ſtrange Fire) before the Lord; which God commanded them not: For by his Command, only Fire from the Altar ſhould have been offered, which originally came down from Heaven. And ſo, the Sin for which they were devoured with Fire, it was a Tranſgreſſion in bringing in, or continuing to uſe ſuch Humane Inventions in Worſhip as God had not commanded, and a juſtifying ſuch to be warrantable.

And, 2. that other Company that clave to Corah, their Sin was, as their Offering Incenſe, not being true Prieſts; ſo their quarrelling Moſes and Aaron for putting ſuch a difference between the People, as making ſome to be Prieſts, (of the Tribe of Levi) and others not: Whenas (ſay they) all the People are Holy; and therefore ye take too much upon you ye Sons of Levi, &c. ſeeing every one throughout the whole Congregation is Holy, and ſo is as fit to worſhip and draw near to God as you; Wherefore then lift you up your ſelves above the Congregation of the Lord? (who they thought were God's People, and whom he had choſen to draw near unto him). This was the Quarrel, as Moſes ſtates it, verſ. 5. and unto this Sin they added Rebellion, verſ. 14.

Now what has been the Quarrel, that in England (which I inſtance moſt in, as being beſt known to us) and in ſome other Reformed Churches, which hath ſince the firſt Reformation been continued (of the latter days of which Times, this is eſpecially here underſtood, for 'tis the fourth Vial) but about Humane Inventions? which are as that ſtrange Fire then, which God commanded not; which yet are introduced and continued in Worſhip, and by the moſt, juſtified againſt the few Witneſſes, the Pleaders for the Commands of God, to be the only Rule of Worſhip.

And again, 2. for that other, the putting ſuch a difference between Men and Men, by the faithful Witneſſes and Prophets, between the Holy and the Prophane; phane; this hath been another, and a greater ground of hot and violent Oppoſition againſt theſe Witneſſes. And for this (the latter of the two, as then alſo it was) theſe Witneſſes have all generally ſtill preached: That only thoſe who have ſuch or ſuch a Work of Grace upon their Hearts, and that do endeavour to walk thus and thus holily in their Lives; That ſuch only are Saints, and the Children of God. The ſtream of their Miniſtry in England hath ſtill run in this Channel, thus to diſtinguiſh Men from Men, and to ſeparate the Precious from the Vile, (and this occaſioned from that promiſcuous mixture of all ſorts): the chief Work and Bent of their Miniſtry hath been, to mark out whom God hath choſen, and who only are True Prieſts, and Worſhippers of him in Spirit and Truth. And for this (what-ever hath otherwiſe been pretended) have thoſe of the other ſide quarrelled, oppoſed, and ſilenced them, ſaying, as Corah's Company, Are not all the People holy? Have they not all been baptized? You take too much upon you, (you preciſe Ones) out of the pride of your Spirits, to lift up your ſelves above the Congregation of the Lord. Chap. 5.

Or elſe the Quarrel hath been about God's own Election of a few to be Prieſts unto him, (even as then, that God choſe the Tribe of Levi from the crowd of common Iſraelites) who are his, and whom he hath choſen, as verſ. 5. of Numb. 16. This was the Quarrel then; and theſe now plead the Cauſe of all Mankind in Univerſal Grace and Redemption.

All the Quarrels between the Popiſh Party (the Number of the Beaſt's Name) and the Witneſſes, are reducible to theſe two Heads.

1. True purity of Worſhip: And,
2. True Holineſs, and peculiar Election of Worſhippers.

And the Light in both theſe Things, hath in our days grown up ſo high and clear, as that many of thoſe who oppoſe either or both of theſe, do ſin even out of Rebellion and Preſumption in oppoſing that, the Truth of which they are convinced of, as Corah's Company did. And ſo their Puniſhment riſeth to be like to that of Nadab, and thoſe 250 of Corah's Conſpiracy, even Fire from the Lord devouring them; which is (as was ſaid in the fourth Vial) a Spiritual Puniſhment on their Souls; and is the effect of the powerful Conviction of the Word out of the Mouths of the Witneſſes, who ſpit Fire into their Conſciences, and begin Hell-Fire afore-hand. And this very Alluſion is thus interpreted and applied to that fearful expectation of Wrath, which thoſe have in their Conſciences, who ſin wilfully againſt the knowledg of the Truth, and ſo, againſt the Holy Ghoſt, Heb. 10. 26, 27.

And indeed, bring but Paul's Expoſition there of this very Type, and Example of thoſe Iſraelites then, unto this Alluſion here made unto it by the Angel; and that of Paul may clearly expound this of John. The Alluſion there, is to thoſe who died by Moſes's Hand, and that without Mercy, for deſpiſing the Law which he brought from God to them, and more particularly to thoſe who died by Fire, (as that Phraſe [the expectation of fiery Indignation to devour the Adverſaries] doth ſhew); who therein were true Types of thoſe that ſin wilfully under the Goſpel, and deſpiſe it; they were Types of theſe, both in their Sin and Puniſhment.

For, 1. their Sin is Rebellion, as the others alſo was. Corah's Company, after Moſes his conviction of them, came to a deſpiteful ſcorning of Moſes, and doing opproby to him for bringing them out of Egypt, as you may read, Numb. 16.13,14. And ſuch is their Sin mentioned, *Heb.*10.26. even a ſinning wilfully, after the receiving of the Truth. And ſo here in this 11*th* of the Revelation, the Emphaſis of their Sin is put upon their Wills, [if any Man [will] hurt them]; and again it is repeated, [if any Man [will] hurt them], verſ. 5.

And, 2. As they then were ſtruck dead by God, upon their deſpiſing Moſes his Law, and conviction of it under two or three Witneſſes, (as Paul interprets it, Heb. 10.) (Moſes and Aaron themſelves teſtifying againſt them, and convincing them); ſo here, the Angel adjudgeth them to this notorious Death, for deſpiſing the Teſtimony of theſe Two Witneſſes, and the Light of the Goſpel in their Mouths. Thus in their ſinning they were true Types of theſe.

PART II. And then, ſecondly, in their Puniſhment, they were their true Types alſo: For,

1. A Puniſhment they there have executed on them, of all the ſoreſt, which Paul calls a dying without Mercy. So in that 10*th* to the Hebrews; How much ſorer puniſhment (ſays Paul) ſhall he be thought worthy of, &c? ſorer than that of Nadab and Corah's Company there being devoured with Elementary Fire; and indeed ſo ſore, as he knows not how to expreſs it, but utters it by an imperfect indefinite Speech, [how much ſorer?] rather leaving it to us (from comparing their Sins together) to conceive it, than that he was able to expreſs it. And in like manner here alſo, their Puniſhment (you ſee) hath this Emphaſis put upon it [in this manner he muſt be killed] as noting out the extreameſt puniſhment that could be.

2. A Puniſhment it is, not ſo much killing their Bodies as their Souls. So in the Type, the Fire that came forth rather blaſted than burnt them. Their Bodies and Cloaths were left whole, Levit. 10. 5. It burned and ſcorched their Souls, not their Bodies, (ſay the Hebrew Doctors); and ſo it was the livelieſt Type that could be, to lay a Puniſhment upon their Souls. Now unto ſuch Sinners under the Goſpel, doth God anſwerably become a conſuming Fire.

Again, 3. That which here in the Revelation is called Fire, is there by Paul expounded fiery Indignation, and a fearful looking for of Judgment, (namely, in the Conſciences of thoſe Men who ſin this Sin) [φόβερα ἐκδοχὴ κρίσεως] a fearful and certain expectation of Judgment, (as it is in the Original) God ſealing up, by ſome flaſhes of his Wrath, theſe Men's eternal damnation, who do ſin this Sin. And this fiery Indignation ſparkles forth upon all Occaſions, from the Writings and Lives, and from the Preachings and Teſtimonies of theſe Witneſſes Mouths, as this place implies.

And, 4. As Paul there uſeth the word [devouring] the Adverſaries; ſo the ſame is uſed of them, Levit. 10. 3. And ſo alſo here you ſee the ſame Phraſe uſed, [devouring] their Enemies. In the Original the ſame Verb is uſed in one place that is in the other; and the word for [Enemies] uſed Heb. 10. 27. is [ὑπεναντίους] Subcontrarios, under-hand Adverſaries]; ſhewing, that not always thoſe that thus ſin, do preſently renounce all profeſſion of God, (as the Phariſees did not); for then they ſhould not have place and opportunity to hurt the Witneſſes. So that they profeſs God ſtill, but do under-hand, and by pretences, oppoſe his People.

The like to this, we read the effect of the powerful Light of the Miniſtry of John Baptiſt, and of Chriſt, to have been: whoſe crucifying, as it is manifeſtly alluded unto here, in killing the two Witneſſes, from verſ. 7, to 14. So alſo this effect of his Miniſtry on thoſe Phariſees in thoſe his Times, who were tormented with it, is in the like manner alluded unto here, in thoſe that were tormented with the Light and Heat of theſe Witneſſes Prophecy (as verſ. 10. of chap. 11. expreſſeth it) which, Chap. 16. 6. is called a ſcorching Men with great heat and pain. Now John, and after him Chriſt, were burning and ſhining Lights, (as Chriſt ſpake of John) which the Phariſees deſpiſing, the effect of their Miniſtry upon many of theſe was this very Sin, and ſo a tormenting of their Conſciences with this fiery Indignation.

And accordingly, in the Prophet Malachi, we have the Times of Chriſt's Miniſtry, in this reſpect, called, a terrible Day that ſhall burn as an Oven (thoſe Phariſees Conſciences) ſo Mal. 4. 1. And as it was the torment from Chriſt's Miniſtry, that made theſe Phariſees crucify him, (though knowing him to be the Son of God): So it is the torment of theſe Witneſſes Miniſtry here, encreaſing ſo in Light and Power under the fourth Vial, that cauſeth their Adverſaries to kill them, as verſ. 10. of this 11*th* Chapter is expreſt.

And thus you have ſeen the Power which they have againſt and over their Enemies.

SECT.

Chap. 5.

SECT. IV.

Secondly, Their Temple-work in their laſt Days, in being two Olive Trees, explained; from the Alluſion to Joſhua's and Zerubbabel's finiſhing the Temple.

BUT, 2. their Power is alſo further ſet out in that Temple-work which they do for Chriſt and his Church in theſe latter Days; eſpecially in that meaſuring, building, and finiſhing the Temple, ſpoken of verſ. 1. To repreſent which to us, the Holy Ghoſt hath culled and ſingled out the moſt proper and choice Type, and the moſt lively Alluſion that the Old Teſtament doth afford us. Theſe (ſays he) are the Two Olive-Trees, and the Two Candle-ſticks, that miniſter before the God of the Earth.

Now where in the Scriptures do we find this ſpoken, and of whom, and upon what Occaſion? Find but this, and by having recourſe thereto, you will ſee all things ſuit and conſpire to make up a full Type of that Work of this Age. You have this Viſion of two Olive-Trees and a Candle-ſtick, made unto Zechary, (as you may read in the 4*th* Chapter of his Prophecy) and the Interpretation thereof. And it is made unto him upon this Occaſion: The People coming out of Babylon's Captivity, Joſhua and Zerubbabel had from their firſt coming forth begun to Sacrifice, and to ſet up Publick Worſhip: and after two Years began the erection of the Temple, laid the Foundation of it, and ſet up the Altar, (as you may read in the third of Ezra); but left the Work imperfect, without the Roof covered, or the Temple as then adorned with all thoſe Holy Utenſils and Ornaments of it, which yet were Ordinances that to the Complement and Perfection of his Worſhip then, God had appointed.

And you may further find, that they had then left the Temple ſo incompleat, through the oppoſition of a Samaritan Faction, that pretended to be for God as well as they. So Ezra 4. 2. We ſeek your God (ſay they) as you do. Who yet were of a mungrel Religion, between the Jews and Gentiles (as 2 Kings 17. 41. you may read). And being not taken into this Work of building the Temple, nor owned by the true Jews, they therefore hindred the People in building, verſ. 4. and raiſed up the oppoſition of the Perſian Monarchy to fruſtrate their purpoſe, verſ. 5. and made them to ceaſe by force, verſ. 24, 25. and ſo the Work lay imperfect for many Years, (and yet notwithſtanding, it was a true Temple and Place of God's Worſhip) until God ſtirred up the Prophets Zachary and Haggai, by their Prophecy to move Joſhua and Zerubbabel unto the finiſhing of this Work, Ezra 5. 1.

Now among other Viſions which (to excite them to finiſh the Work) the Prophet Zechary had had, this (in his 4*th* Chapter) of two Olive Trees, and a Candle-ſtick (into which the Olive Trees did empty their Oil) was one. The meaning of which Viſion was this. The two Olive Trees were Joſhua and Zerubbabel; Sons of Oil, (as in verſ. 14. they are called). Which Phraſe notes out their being full of Oil; as being thoſe two who ſhould lay out their Grace, Gifts, and Eſtates, (which was their Oil) and ſpend their Fatneſs, and uſe their heartieſt Endeavours in, and for the repairing and finiſhing the Temple. Which finiſhing of it is there repreſented by the Candle-ſtick, the Candle-ſtick being one of the moſt neceſſary Utenſils that went to make compleat the Glory of the Temple; and ſo (by a Synechdoche) is put for all the reſt. And it being one of the laſt to be brought into the Temple when once fully finiſhed, and when the Roof is covered; therefore it fitly ſerved to reſemble the finiſhing of that Temple, and the adorning of it with all thoſe Accoutrements and Ordinances which God had appointed for the perfection of it. And hence in the Expoſition position of this Vision in that Chapter, is Zerubbabel presented with a Plummet in his Hand, and a Measuring Line, to measure this Temple to be now fully finish'd, (even as here John is presented with a Reed) and this Promise is annexed, that in despite of that Mountain of Opposition raised by that Samaritan Faction, ver. 7. Zerubbabel's Hands which had laid the Foundation of this House, even His Hands shall also finish it: as you have it, ver. 9.

And all this is made the meaning of that Hierogliphick, there represented, in a Vision of Two Olive Trees and a Candlestick; for ver. 5. when the Angel said to Zechary, Knowest thou what these be? (that is) knowest thou the meaning of this Vision? And he said No; the Angel answers, This is the Word of the Lord (namely, his Mind in this Vision) unto Zerubbabel, &c. Namely, this which I before recited, about Zerubbabel's and Joshuah's finishing the Temple, (as you may there read it interpreted by the Angel.)

Now this is the very Type alluded unto here: And how fully suits it all our former Interpretations given, of Measuring the Temple? The Church having been long since come out of Mystical Babylon, hath set up Publick Worship, and by the Authority of Princes hath begun the Foundation of the Temple; but hath been hindred from going on to full perfection of Discipline intended and endeavoured, through the mixture of a Samaritan Party, by whom they have been still interrupted, from attaining that perfection which many have contended for. But in the end, God stirs up many of the English Spirits (like Joshua and Zerubbabel) to finish what was before left incompleat, and to begin to make a further and purer Edition of Churches according to the Pattern. And so, they stand in this Age with a Measuring Line (as Zerubbabel) or a Reed (as John here) in their Hands; and (like these Two Olive Trees) do empty Oil out of themselves, unto this Work; endeavouring to add unto this Temple such Ordinances as (though to the being of a Church not absolutely necessary, (for they were Temples before) yet) are Institutions of God, and do tend (as the Candlestick then did) unto the Perfection, Beauty, Complement, and Glory of it. And though the Foundation of this Temple, laid in the first Reformation, is in this Allusion included; yet the Allusion principally falls upon this finishing of it. For that is the most proper and peculiar aim of the Vision of the Olive Trees, as in Zechary it is presented; unto which the Allusion here is: the End of Zechary's Propheey being to excite unto the finishing of the Temple.

These Two Witnesses the Holy Ghost here calls the Olive Trees and the Candlesticks; which are the Churches themselves, as Chap. 1. last ver. So that both eminent Persons and likewise Churches themselves, (the purest of them) are the Witnesses against the false Church, that are here spoken of.

But some would carry it thus; that the Witnesses are the Two Olive Trees [unto] the two Candlesticks, the Churches: For so in the Vision of Zechary they are mentioned, as pouring Oil into the Candlestick. And besides, the Copulative [and] being in the Hebrew sometimes put for the Prepositon [unto]; according to this Hebraism [καὶ] here should be so taken. And the Churches now under the New Testament are called [Two] Candlesticks; (whereas there in Zechary is mention but of one Candlestick) because now there is not one Church only, as the Jews then had; but they are multiplied by particular Congregations. There are Sister-Churches now, and not one Mother-Church only. And you shall sometimes in the Allusions to the Temple find in this Book the Proportion doubled to what it then was; to shew the encrease of the Gospel (as we observed out of the 4*th* Chapter.)

Now this New Reformation of the Church here typified out, though it be as yet, but as their first attempts to finish the Temple then were, even a Day of small things, (which who (almost) despiseth not?) yet it shall go on and spread, and at length be perfected (as that work then was); For it is of God, the God of the whole Earth; which Attribute of his is here mentioned, to shew the Power that backs these Builders; and to shew, that now the Work is not to be effected so much by Power and Might, (as that finishing the Temple then, is said to have been,) been,) but by the Spirit, cauſing the Hearts of the Godly to fall to it. And that Samaritan Mountain of Oppoſition, even Rome it ſelf, that hath ſtood in the way of it, ſhall in the End become a Plain before it; as there (Zech. 4, 5, 6.) that Samaritan Faction did before Zerubbabel. Chap. 5.

And out of this Temple are the Vials to come, and to pour out their Plagues upon this falſe Church: (as you may read chap. 16. 1.) So that the True Church is ſtill ordained to be the ruin of the Falſe. And when that which is more perfect comes, that which is imperfect will be done away.

And however the beginning of this Work may ſeem ſmall and contemptible; yet the Work it ſelf is of ſuch moment and concernment for God and his Glory, and ſhall ſo far go on and proſper, as he is pleaſed in this Book to take notice of it, as of any further progreſs of his Church unto Purity, he ſtill doth, (as in the 14*th* Chapter we have ſeen.) And yet I fear theſe Olive Trees and Candleſticks among us, will (as the reſt of the Churches in Europe) have their Power ſcattered, ere this Building be fully finiſh'd. But after this, they ſhall revive again, and grow up into an Holy Temple unto the Lord, from tne Times of the Witneſſes riſing, after their being killed, until the New Jeruſalem, as Chap. 19. will ſhew.

Now to make the Alluſion to the Condition of Joſhua more full, I will only add this: That as theſe Witneſſes are here preſented in Sack-cloth, ſo is Joſhua there, in filthy Apparel, Zech. 3. 4. And as there he had change of Raiment given him, ſo after a few Years will theſe Witneſſes alſo have the Garments of Praiſe for the Spirit of heavineſs (as Iſaiah ſpeaks): and their Teſtimony being ended, they ſhall put off their Sackcloth, and put on fine Linnen, the Wedding Apparel of the Lamb's Bride: as Chap. 19. you have it. And ſo in the end, the Glory of this Temple, ſet up after Antichriſt's demoliſhment, will yet be rendred more glorious (as that of Zerubbabel's alſo was) by Chriſt's coming into it. And an Holy of Holies ſhall be added unto it, (or rather ſwallow this up) in which the Ark ſhall be ſeen (as it is in the laſt Verſe of this 11*th* Chapter): But theſe Witneſſes muſt be killed firſt; (which is the laſt thing I am to ſpeak of in this Chapter.)

CHAP. VI.

The Killing of the Witneſſes, Verſ. 7, 8, 9, 10. of Chapter the 11*th.*

SECT. I.

The Time of their three Years and a half not yet come. A reconciliation of this and Mr. Brightman's Opinion, in a double fulfilling of it.

THis Angel's Scope is (as was ſaid) to ſhew, how, according to the Angel's Oath, in Daniel, Antichriſt ſhould accompliſh to ſcatter the Power of the Holy People, towards the end of his Reign, of a Time, Times, and half a Time. And ſo, what is here ſaid of the Beaſt's War and Victory, refers not to the Conqueſts and Slaughters which Antichriſt, during his whole Reign, ſhould make of the Holy People or Witneſſes (ſpoken of chap. 13.) but particularly deſigneth out an eminent prevailing over them at the laſt, or (as the firſt words of *verſ.*7. have it) ὅταν τελέσωσι, &c. when they are about to finiſh, or end, the term of their Prophecy in Sack-cloth, even their 1260 Years, (which is the ſame ſpace that Antichriſt hath allotted to him to reign in). Now what Power theſe Holy People, the Witneſſes, had got before this their laſt ſcattering, hath in their Deſcription been declared. They had power to erect a Temple to themſelves, and out of it to pour forth four Vials upon their Enemies, as hath been ſhewn. And that they might the better fence themſelves againſt the Beaſt, (poſſeſſing the greateſt part of Europe, the Holy City) we have heard how they had environed the Temple with a mighty party of Carnal Profeſſors, (ſeparating with them from the Beaſt) as with an Outward Court; which we have ſeen by verſ. 1. the Gentiles are again to ſubdue unto themſelves, and to tread down. Which treading down their Outward Court, is indeed one part of that his laſt accompliſhment, to ſcatter the Power of the Holy People; or haply it may rather be termed a Preparation unto it: For come at the Witneſſes they could not, till this Outward Court were gained. Which when they ſhall have more fully won, (which is now a doing) then they further ſhall kill the Witneſſes; for then both they and their Inner Temple will be expoſed to the Irruptions of the Gentiles, and will be eaſily ſubdued by them, when-as their Outworks ſhall firſt be thus taken and recovered. And this will not be fully done, till even towards the finiſhing their allotted Time of propheſying in Sack-cloth, (and ſo, of the Beaſt's reigning, which is to expire ſoon after it) with their aſcenſion into Heaven.

Now, 1. for the Times when this laſt killing of them here intended ſhall come to execution; the Queſtion among Interpreters is, Whether it be yet paſt, or yet to come?

Mr. Brightman (as was ſaid) maketh this meaſuring the Temple, to be long ſince fulfilled and paſt; ſo alſo this killing the Witneſſes here, and the expiration of their Time of propheſying in Sack-cloth, to be already wholly paſt; and this, in that great overthrow of the Proteſtant Party in Germany, by Charles the Fifth, Anno 1547. and in that condemning the Scriptures (which he makes the Witneſſes) by the Council of Trent, about that Time, now well-nigh an hundred Years ſince.

But

Chap. 6.

But moſt others, as Graſerus, Matthias Hoè, Mr. Mede, Mr. Wood, &c. do think it yet to come. And according to that Series of Interpretation hitherto by me given, (if that hold good) it muſt neceſſarily be as yet to be executed. And it ſeems to me moſt evident, both by what is ſaid to go before it, and alſo to follow after it; of which nothing (that is to follow after it) is yet fulfilled, although an hundred Years, ſince the Time that Mr. Brightman interprets it of, are run out.

For, 1. this is to fall out towards the ending of their Prophecy in Sack-cloth, or of their mourning and oppreſſed Condition, after which they are to caſt off their Sack-cloth. As Joſhua's filthy Garments (who was one of the Types of theſe) were taken from him, and a fair Mitre was ſet upon his Herd; ſo after their Reſurrection, theſe Witneſſes are to be clothed in fine Linnen, as you may read chap. 19. Now it is evident that the Time of their propheſying in Sack-cloth, of bewailing the Condition of the Church under Antichriſt, and of their Oppreſſion by him, is not yet out. The filthy Garments they wore during their Captivity in Babylon, they ſtill have on; as Joſhua alſo had his on in Zechary's Time, which was a long while after they were come forth out of Babylon. So the true Witneſſes are ſtill in an oppreſſed Condition, whilſt Antichriſt's Church, and thoſe of their Enemies, even in the Reformed Churches, are as the Church-Triumphant, in Silk, and at their full liberty.

2. This is here to fall out towards the ending of the Reign of Antichriſt, in reſpect of his Power to do: For this is that laſt ſcattering (propheſied of by Daniel) with which he is to accompliſh his Times. Now we ſee he hath his Kingdom yet ſtanding, and his Power to do; and there are an hundred Years more run on ſince that havock made of them by the Papiſts in Germany, and yet Antichriſt's 42 Months are not expired, we being now but under the fifth Vial: And when the Seat or Throne of the Beaſt (Rome it ſelf) ſhall come to be ruined, then ſhall his Kingdom be full of darkneſs, and the Glory of it ſo dampt and extinguiſh'd, as it is thought, that from that time his Reign is accounted of as at an end.

And, 3. we ſee Antichriſt as yet but in his firſt march towards this War, he is but now going forth to win the Outward Court, which he muſt again recover, e're he can come at the Witneſſes; and this killing of them is placed here, after his recovery of that. And though he hath trod down Germany, yet he is but ſetting up and advancing his Engines of Aſſault and Battery, upon other ſuch Places where God hath the moſt of his powerful Witneſſes in theſe laſt Times. Though already he be evidently ſet down in his Siege of them alſo, by his Inſtruments, and thoſe that receive the Number of his Name, who are to be his laſt Champions.

4. We evidently ſee by what is gone before in the Deſcription of theſe Witneſſes, that four Vials of the ſeven are to be poured out by them, before this their killing. For in the days of their Prophecy, they ſmite the Earth with Plagues; which is the firſt Vial, and turn the Sea and Rivers into Blood; which is the ſecond and third Vial; and then devour Men with Fire, which is the Fourth. And then after all theſe exploits of theirs, comes their killing. So that this falls out after, or under the fourth Vial: But that Slaughter, an hundred Years ſince, was but under the ſecond Vial, and indeed but in the beginning of that Vial; and we as yet ſee not the full effect of the fourth Vial, which is but now a pouring forth. And therefore this killing of the Witneſſes here is not as yet fulfilled.

5. After their riſing again, the ſecond Wo is ſaid to paſs away. Now that ſecond Wo is the ſixth Trumpet, which then is ſaid to paſs away, when the Times of it are expired, or the Foundation of its ruin laid. And that ſixth Trumpet is (as hath been ſaid) the Turk, and his great Power and Tyranny. Whoſe Kingdom we ſee yet to ſtand in its full vigour and flouriſh, and no fundamental blow of weakning given to it.

6. Much leſs is the ſeventh Trumpet begun to be blown, (which yet is to come quickly after that Sixth, as you have it verſ. 14.) For although Jeſus Chriſt, in theſe Northern Kingdoms, hath been aſſiſted in that his Harveſt of his Elect ſince the Reformation, by ſupream and Princely Authority; and therefore, chap. 14. that peaceable Harveſt was reaped by an Angel crowned: Yet,

1. The Kingdoms of the World becoming Chriſt's, for him to reign for ever, and this, at the beginning of this ſeventh Trumpet; his Kingdom then ſhall be another manner of one than as yet he hath had; even that fifth Monarchy which is mentioned in Dan. 7. 14. and is to begin at the end of the Days of the Beaſt. And (if you mark the words) this ſhall be a Kingdom that ſhall not be adminiſtred by Deputies, and by a delegated Power; but by Chriſt the King his immediate Rule and Government: Thou haſt taken to thy ſelf thy great Power, and haſt reigned, &c. verſ. 17.

And, 2. when that ſeventh Trumpet ſhall begin to ſound, then (as chap. 10.) ſhall that Myſtery be fulfilled, ſpoken of by the Prophets, (and which Paul calls a Myſtery, Rom. 11.) even the New Jeruſalem, and Kingdom of the Saints, and the firſt Reſurrection, as appears by verſ. 15, 16, and 17 of this Chapter, compared with chap. 20. 21, &c. But now ſince that Reſurrection of the Witneſſes, which Mr. Brightman would have this to be, is almoſt an hundred Years, and yet none of theſe things are begun, nor as yet to begin.

3. The ſeventh Trumpet, and the laſt Vial, (as hath been often ſaid) do fall out together; or rather, the laſt Vial begins the ſeventh Trumpet, as the laſt Verſe of this 11*th* Chapter, compared with the ſeventh Vial, chap. 16. doth ſhew; for there are the ſame Thunderings, Hail, &c. in them both. Now we are yet but under the fourth Vial, and ſo, very far off from the laſt.

Yet I will add this, which may reconcile that Opinion of Mr. Brightman with this other, and haply ſerve in the cloſure of all, to give ſome ſmall further hint about the Time of the laſt Vials fulfilling; and ſo, concerning the expiring of Times before mentioned.

As I ſaid before, about the meaſuring the Temple, that the Angel might have an aim, both at that firſt laying the Foundation of True Churches, and alſo at this ſecond Reformation now in hand, and take both in his view at once, they both being degrees of the ſame Work; yet ſo, as ultimately he looks unto the latter, as the ſpecial intendment of this Place, (though the other were in it ſelf infinitely far the greater Work); ſo I conjecture that he might take in two Killings of theſe Witneſſes, which ſhould follow after, or (it may be) accompany both thoſe Meaſurings; the one at, or after that Foundation laid, the other at, or upon the finiſhing to be begun, and ſo ordered, that the firſt ſhould be a fore-going reſemblance, of this other to ſucceed. Yet ſo, as his ultimate aim and ſcope ſtill ſhould be at a latter killing of them, which is yet to come.

I have obſerved it in many Inſtances which I could produce, That many Prophecies in Scripture have had two ſeveral gradual Accompliſhments; whereof, both the one and the other, are intended by the Holy Ghoſt; yet ſo, as the latter is uſually more eminently intended, and the firſt ſometimes intended as a fore-going Type of that which is to follow. You may obſerve many Paſſages quoted out of the Prophets, and applied by the Apoſtles in the New Teſtament, unto the Times of the Goſpel, as being then fulfilled; which yet had a gradual accompliſhment under the Old Teſtament, in the Times after the Captivity of Babylon. So that the Holy Ghoſt aimed at both. Thus the 9*th* verſe of the 1*ſt* Chapter of Iſaiah is quoted by Paul, Rom. 9. and applied unto the Goſpel-Times.

Yea, and you ſhall ſometimes find the ſame Prophecy even under the Old Teſtament, fulfilled over and over; and ſo, to have two ſeveral intended Accompliſhments. For inſtance, I will give one which ſome Learned Men have fallen upon, (though I find others do diſſent from them in it). And I rather pitch upon it, becauſe it is proper to the thing in hand: for it is made the Type of this meaſuring the Temple. It is that Prophecy of rebuilding the Temple after the ſeventy Years Captivity in Babylon. Which (as ſome think) had a double Accompliſhment aimed at. And as there were two eminent Leadings into Captivity, the one of Jeconias, the other of Zedekias, when the City was deſtroyed; ſo (according to Learned Chronologers, and beſt Interpreters) I find a double Reckoning of the ſeventy Years, and of the Building again of the the Temple. Some reckoning from that Captivity of Jeconias, in the firſt Year of Nebuchadnezzer; ſome from that of Zedekiah, in the 19*th* Year of Nebuchadnezzer, (as the Jeſuits, Sanctius and Ribera do affirm). I will not meddle with the Diſpute about it; but that God kept a double Reckoning of that ſeventy Years, in reſpect to a double gradual Accompliſhment, to me ſeems evident. For Ezekiel begins the Captivity from that carrying away of Jeconias, Ezek. 1. 2,3. & chap. 11.15. and the Prophet Jeremiah, in the 29*th* Chapter of his Prophecy, verſ. 10. comforts thoſe that were carried away with Jeconias, with this, that after ſeventy Years God will viſit them, &c. Now one ſeventy Years was ended, when Cyrus gave leave to lay the Foundation of the Temple, as reckoning from the firſt Captivity. And yet after this, in Zechary's Time, when the Temple was to be again meaſured and finiſhed, there is another ſeventy Years ſaid to be ended; as the Time wherein this Temple, which hitherto had lain imperfect, was to be perfected. This you may ſee by Zech. 1. 12, and 16, compared. For there the final ending of the ſeventy Years, is made the Foundation of the laſt Work of perfecting the Temple, and God's returning in Mercy, according to his Promiſe, for to do it. So that, a double Captivity, and a double ſeventy Years, ending in a double Work, (the one of laying the Foundation, the other of finiſhing the Temple) ſeem to have been in the Holy Ghoſt's Eye. Chap. 6.

Now why may it not be ſo, even in this alſo, That the Computation of the Beaſt's Reign, and the Church's coming out of Babylon, the killing of the Witneſſes, and the meaſuring of the Temple, may have a double Accompliſhment and expiration, and all intended; yet ſo, as the latter mainly aimed at.

The like Inſtance might be made of the Computation of another Period of Time and Prophecy fulfilled, (which becauſe I may, in the cloſure of this 11*th* Chapter, have particular cauſe to mention, I will alſo inſtance in). It is that of Daniel, Chap. 12. 11. the things in which Chapter refer to the Times of the End, under the New Teſtament, (when is the Time of which the Angel tells him, that Knowledg ſhould be encreaſed, &c.) And Daniel enquiring when theſe things ſhould be, the Angel anſwers, From the Time that the daily Sacrifice (namely of the Jews) ſhall be taken away, and the Abomination that maketh deſolate, ſet up, ſhall be 1290 Days. Now by Hiſtory it is evident, that there hath been a double taking away of the Jewiſh Sacrifice under the Days of the New Teſtament, and a double ſetting up the Abomination of Deſolation, (that is, Heatheniſh Idolatry). And ſo, a double Computation muſt needs be taken, of theſe 1290 Years.

When Veſpaſian and his Son Titus ſacked Jeruſalem, deſtroyed the Temple, and advanced Heatheniſh Idolatry in the room of it, then was one Time when both theſe things were evidently done, (both the Jewiſh Sacrifice taken away, and the Abomination that maketh deſolate ſet up). And if from that Time we reckon 1290 Years; that firſt ſetting up Heatheniſm inſtead of the Jewiſh Worſhip, being in the Year after Chriſt's Birth, 69 or 70, they end in 1359, or 1360. When indeed, the firſt great encreaſe of Knowledg, and diſcovery of Antichriſt began, under Wickliff, Thaulerus, &c. and a great diffuſion of the Light of the Goſpel amongſt us Gentiles. But there was another, both ceaſing of the daily Sacrifice, and ſetting up of Heatheniſh Idolatry by Julian the Apoſtate Emperor, about the Year 363, who both ſuppreſſed the Chriſtian Religion, (typified out by the daily Sacrifice) after it had been ſet up by Chriſtian Emperors, and alſo advanced Heatheniſh Worſhip. Yea, he did ſet up the Jewiſh Sacrifice again, which till his Time had ceaſed, and was then taken away, and never unto this day ſet up again. And it is obſervable, how ſpecial an Hand God hath had in binding the Jews from ſetting up their daily Sacrifice at Jeruſalem again. The Turk, whom they live under, tollerates all other Religions, and theirs alſo in all other exerciſes of it, but ſuffers them not to live at Jeruſalem, or to Sacrifice there; and yet permits the Chriſtians to inhabit in it, and to poſſeſs the Sepulchre of the Lord, and to perform all Rites of their Religion; And though the Jews would give much more for the like kind of Liberty, to have that place to dwell in, and to Sacrifice there, yet it is prohibited them.

PART II.

Now from either of these Times above-mentioned, may this Computation of 1290 Years be taken; the one respecting the blessed Times when the more clear Light of the Gospel, and the discovery of Antichrist, began to come among us Gentiles; the other those happy Times to come, when the Jews shall first be re-called, which some fix about the Year 1655, or 1656. And to two Accomplishments of those 1290 Years.

Now then, to return unto the thing in hand. Mr. Brightman, he reckons the beginning of Antichrist's Reign, and the Witnesses beginning to prophesy in Sack-cloth, from the Time of the Roman Emperors removing to Constantinople; which he interprets to be, that taking him that letted, out of the way, (as Paul to the Thessalonians hath it); namely, the Emperor; who being removed to Constantinople, and the Pope having Rome (ordained to be the Seat of the Beast) thus left him, he might soon begin to gain Power. And that indeed, from thence his first Conception did begin, may not be (nor is it by most) denied. And so Mr. Brightman from thence beginning the 1260 Years of the Witnesses prophesying in Sackcloth, (which falls 18 Years short, according to the Account he makes, after that of Egypt, and of our vulgar Account) makes the end of those Years to fall out in 1550. When the rising again of the Protestant Cause in Germany did begin. And thus in like manner the term of Antichrist's Kingdom or Power to do (namely, as formerly he had wont) might be reckoned to have had one kind of Period in the falling off of these Kingdoms of England, Scotland, &c. which fell out not many Years after this, even before 1560, (which Mr. Brightman (according to that his Series of Interpretation) interpreteth to be the seventh Trumpet; when the Kingdoms of the World became the Kingdoms of Jesus Christ) and so, before that setled Peace of the Gospel established, and the throwing of Antichrist and his Power out of those Kingdoms. In all which Kingdoms the Witnesses had first their Times of being overcome and killed for three Years and an half, though at several Times in each of them. So in Germany, in that Victory got over the Protestants, Anno 1547, (or thereabouts) just three Years and a half after which, they revived and enjoyed that Peace which since they have had.

In like manner, in England, after that, in Queen Mary's days, whose Reign, although it lasted five whole Years, yet the first part of her Reign was spent in making War upon the Witnesses, or (as I may so speak) in the Preparations of War against the Witnesses, in getting Statutes made for their Burning, &c. and the killing and martyring of them was but for three Years and an half. After which ended, they rose again in Queen Elizabeth's beginning to Reign, and have since that Time hitherto enjoyed, as it were, an Heaven.

Thus also in France, in the Year 1572, (which was 14 Years after) and about 1260 Years after Constantine, (according to our account of Years) the Massacre of the Protestants began, and in appearance, an extinction of the Religion (as they called it) for three Years and an half: When, An. 1576, their Peace and Liberty was again granted them, and they had a manifest Resurrection. Thus God observed a gradual fulfilling of this their Killing and Rising, as a shadow foregoing that great and last one to come.

But then there is another Computation of the beginning of Antichrist's Reign, (and of the Witnesses prophesying in Sack-cloth, in opposition to him) reckoning it from his Birth, and bringing forth into the World, (as that former was from the Time of his Conception) about an hundred Years after Constantine, in Anno 406, or 410, when not only the Roman Emperors were removed out of the way, unto Constantinople; but also the Western Empire it self began first to break into ten Kingdoms: Which is the truest and utmost Character of the Time of the Beast's rising, (as was shewed in our Exposition of the 17*th* Chapter). Which breaking the Western Empire, was that taking out of the way, which Paul especially aimed at. For then the Pope had full scope to get his Power, which these New Kingdoms were to give unto him. Which term of his (if the Reckoning be made, after the ordinary compute of Years) will end in 1666, or there-about.

Now

Now as there is this other Computation of the Pope's Times, (beginning and ending) which falls out in this Century of Years now running on: So alſo in this ſame Century ſince the Year 1600, there hath anſwerably been begun another, or ſecond meaſuring the Temple, as being to precede the expiration of this other Computation of the Witneſſes propheſying, which is yet to come. And in like manner alſo there will follow another great and eminent ſlaughter of the Witneſſes, and prevailing of the Beaſt over them, before this ſecond Computation of his and their Time be ended; that is, before 1666. Chap. 6.

SECT. II.

The Alluſion unto Chriſt's laſt Paſſion, in this laſt ſlaughter of the Witneſſes, explained.

THus much in General, for the Time of the Witneſſes killing.

Now, 2. to come to the Thing it ſelf. For the underſtanding of which, I ſhall alſo in the general premiſe this:

That this their laſt Killing, Riſing, &c. is repreſented in an Alluſion unto the Story of Chriſt's own Crucifying and Riſing again. Which makes this the moſt remarkable of all former Sufferings, in that it is in an exact conformity to his Death, and to the Circumſtances of it. In all other Paſſages of this Book, the Alluſions are ſtill to Stories of the Old Teſtament: But this (in a manner alone) alludes to that great and eminent Story of Chriſt's Paſſion and Reſurrection, which are the Center of all, both in the Old and New Teſtament. And whereas all other Stories in the Old, are but Types of the Sufferings, and Reſurrection of Chriſt; Here theſe Sufferings, and that Reſurrection of his, are made the Pattern of theſe of the Witneſſes; and that, not in reſpect of that general, common Conformity that is in all the Sufferings of all the Saints (for Chriſt and his Goſpel) unto thoſe of Chriſt, (as Paul ſpeaks, Phil. 3. 10. and therefore calls them the after-ſufferings of the Body of Chriſt, Col. 1. 24.) but this here is made ſuch in ſome peculiar eminency and tranſcendency, above all Sufferings that have been formerly in any Age: And it being the laſt, it is in a ſingular manner ſet forth unto us thereby. Which may at once both provoke us to prepare for it, as Chriſt did, when he knew what he ſhould ſuffer; and alſo comfort us againſt it, as being therein in a peculiar manner to be made conformable unto Chriſt: which will draw on with it, a peculiar conformity alſo in reigning with him in Glory.

Now that the Alluſion here, is indeed unto the laſt Sufferings of Chriſt, &c. is acknowledged and obſerved by all Interpreters. And it appears in every Circumſtance here related.

As for Example, in that, as he, after three Years and an halfs Preaching upon Earth, once finiſh'd (when that he had almoſt carried it in the Peoples Hearts, the World going after him) was yet in the end prevailed upon by his Enemies, and put to death by the Forreign Power of the City of Rome, having then Juriſdiction over Jeruſalem, and for three Days did lie in their Power: So in like manner that theſe Witneſſes, after three Years and an half (for that is the exact Compute of 1260 Days, or 42 Months) propheſying well-nigh expired; and now when they are about even to finiſh it, (having ſo mightily prevailed in the Peoples Hearts, that their Phariſean Enemies are afraid of utterly loſing their Credit and Authority) that then theſe Phariſees again acknowledging the Forreign Power of Rome, ſhould prevail over theſe Witneſſes, and that ſo far, as by, and under the Authority and Juriſdiction of the Beaſt, and for his ſake, ſhould now at laſt kill them, and have them in their Power for three Years and an half (which do bear a like proportion to thoſe 1260 Years, or Days, fore-paſſed, that Chriſt's three Days did to his three Years fore-paſſed); their Enemies alſo

PART II.

alſo rejoicing, feaſting, and ſending Gifts for Joy that they had them thus down, and in their Power; (even as the Phariſees did at that their great Feaſt of the Paſſover, when they were (as they thought) rid of the torment which Chriſt's Miniſtry had put them to; and made it the joyfulleſt Feaſt and Paſſover that ere they kept.) After all which, that thoſe Witneſſes ſhould notwithſtanding riſe again, (even as our Lord did) and riſe with an Earth-quake (as He then did) and with an affright to their Enemies that ſee it, (as befel thoſe Souldiers who ſaw His, as you may read in the Story of his Reſurrection,) and after this, ſhould aſcend up to Heaven (as He then did); all this makes the Alluſion here very full and obſervable. And becauſe the Holy Ghoſt thus alluded unto Chriſt's Sufferings, therefore John by way of Parentheſis, puts in theſe Words (ſpeaking of the Place where this Slaughter was to be) [in the City (ſays he) where our Lord alſo was crucified] ver. 8. That ſame [ὅπου καὶ] [where alſo] may have a double reference; it may as a Copulative relate to the former Cities unto which he had reſembled it, (even Sodom and Egypt); in this Senſe [and [thāt City alſo] where our Lord was crucified] that is, Jeruſalem. And it may as well refer unto the Word [Crucified] in this Senſe, where our Lord was before in like manner [crucified] there are theſe now in like manner to be [killed.]

SECT. III.

That this killing of the Witneſſes is to be executed by, and under the Power of the Beaſt of Rome: And ſo could not be meant of any of the former Perſecutions in the Reformed Churches, which were from among themſelves.

THus much in General, for the Underſtanding this great Occurrence, which is yet to come in the Church.

Now more particularly, to explain ſome things about it (though it be a difficult thing to hit right in the underſtanding, and much more in applying the Circumſtances of a Prophecy unto things to come, and which the Events do beſt interpret.)

I. Take notice, that the Power and Authority by which this Slaughter ſhall be made, is to be that of the Beaſt, or the Pope of Rome: and this, as having regained more or leſs Power in theſe Places where theſe Witneſſes are. This is evident,

1. In that not ſo much their Enemies who are among them, and of the Reformed Religion with them, (that yet hate them) but the Beaſt that aſcends out of the bottomleſs Pit, is ſaid to kill them.

And, 2. In that he calls the Place where their dead Bodies lie, (and ſo, (by conſequence) where this Slaughter is to be executed,) the City where our Lord was crucified. Which is not ſpoken of Jeruſalem, but of Rome; that being here called the great City, which Chap. 17. ver. laſt, is called the City which then ruled over the Kings of the Earth: Which can be none but Rome. And to make this good, we are to know, that the Juriſdiction of the Roman Empire, was then in John's Time called the City: And therefore the whole World was called Orbis Romanus, the Roman World. (And in like manner now, all Kingdoms ſubjected to the Pope, are called the Church of Rome, as together making that great City.) And in that World the City of Rome was as the Regal Palace, from whence iſſued out Edicts and Commands over all. And in ſuch a ſenſe it is ſaid [the City where Chriſt was crucified]; becauſe it was the Roman Power and Authority by which he was put to Death, though it were done at Jeruſalem (for thither did the Juriſdiction of Rome reach); and therefore Chriſt ſays, they ſhould deliver him up unto the Gentiles, Mat. 20. 19. that is, the Romans, who then had trodden down that Holy City, and got the command of it; the Phariſees owning Cæſar for their King. And thus now for the killing theſe Witneſſes, it muſt be, that the Beaſt of Rome ſhall ſhall again recover, ſo much owning and acknowledgment in the Places of the Reformation, (whether by ſecret combination, or by profeſſed avouchment, God only knows); where the Witneſſes are to be killed; ſo as, for his Sake, and at his Inſtigation, theſe Phariſees, either as joining with him, or elſe uſing the help of his Party, ſhall kill them. And ſo far muſt the Beaſt have a hand in it, that he may truly be ſaid to do it; and that, in order to the further advancement of his Power in thoſe Places.

And therefore, 3. The Place where their dead Bodies are ſaid to lie, is ſaid to be πλατεία πόλεως τῆς μεγάλης, The Street (the extention of the Juriſdiction) of the great City; as being within the Juriſdiction or Walls of it (as it were). You heard before, how that the Gentiles were to regain the Outward Court, and ſo it to become part of the City again, and within the extent of its Juriſdiction.

So that, however the Witneſſes have had Enemies from among themſelves, who have been (as thoſe Phariſees were to Chriſt) of the ſame Nation and Religion, and yet have perſecuted them from the firſt, even from the Times of the firſt Reformation downward (and therefore it hath been, that the faithful Witneſſes have continued to propheſy in Sackcloth, and Mourning, even now in their laſt Days, when yet a Separation hath been made from Antichriſt, becauſe thoſe among them ſtill continued to oppreſs them): Yet none of all thoſe Wars and Prevailings againſt them all that while, by thoſe of their own, are this ſame War and killing of them here ſo eminently ſet out: For this muſt be by the Beaſt, even by their Enemies combining with the Papiſts, or uſing the help of the Beaſt, to join with them againſt the Witneſſes; or (it may be) beginning again to ſubmit to the Beaſt, in a more open and avowed manner (as thoſe Phariſees did to Cæſar): And ſo, for his Sake, and to advance his Power, ſhall they kill thoſe Witneſſes, who indeed are only and alone, the greateſt and moſt hearty withſtanders of him, and that will ſtand it out againſt him. Or if when this is done, they do not ſo openly avow the Beaſt's Power; yet it may be ſaid to be done by the Beaſt, if by a Party or Combination of Men that are for him, though not profeſſedly, yet who in order to reduce his Power into thoſe Churches, do raiſe this War againſt the Witneſſes and oppreſs them. And that which may give Suſpition of this, is, becauſe (as I ſhewed out of Chap. 13.) there is a Generation of Men ſet forth as the Beaſt's laſt Champions, who yet ſhould not (at leaſt at the firſt) ſo openly own his Name or Character, that yet receive the Number of his Name. And theſe are there reckoned his as truly as the other, as being they who ſhould interdict buying and ſelling to the Beaſt's oppoſites, in order unto his Advancement. And they doing this in order unto the Beaſt and for him, the Beaſt therefore, and his Power may be ſaid to do it.

But I fear that they ſhall proceed yet further, even to an open acknowledgment and profeſſing the Pope's Power, (though perhaps not as infallible Head of the Church, yet as Univerſal Patriarch of the Weſt) and ſo endeavouring to effect an Union and Reconciliation with him. For theſe Men (as was ſaid) are to bring in but an Image of Popery (as it was of Heatheniſm) eſpecially at firſt, though with intent to introduce more. And with this doth that Speech of the Angel, in his Oath, in Dan. 12. 7. accord (which, as I ſaid, this Angel here came to renew and interpret); That when He (namely this Beaſt) ſhall have accompliſh'd (namely with this laſt killing) to ſcatter the Power of the Holy People, &c.

That which I here cite this for, is, that it muſt be he, and his Power that muſt do it. And in that the Gentiles are here ſaid to obtain the Outward Court, ver. 1. ſo as to tread it down with the reſt of the Holy City; this would argue a prevailing of them, ſo far as to gain a ſubjection from carnal Proteſtants, by reaſon of which it ſhall be, that even the Beaſts Power as entertained, and owned by the moſt, may be ſaid to kill them. And likewiſe the Alluſion here to Chriſt's Suffering, by the Power that then Rome had in Jeruſalem, the Holy City, would argue this alſo: That even as then, a Governor, or Preſident, from Rome, (namely Pilat) lay at Jeruſalem, and was in the Name and Power of Rome, the Author of Chriſt's Crucifying; ſo, at leaſt, that Rome ſhould now in like manner have her Legats, that ſhould have power, in theſe places, to procure the Depoſition and Death of theſe Witneſſes. That ſo, as God ordained Jeruſalem the City where Chriſt was Crucified (unto which the Alluſion here is made) to be the Slaughter-houſe of all the Prophets, (inſomuch that Chriſt ſaid, It was not poſſible that a Prophet ſhould periſh but in Jeruſalem; and therefore it was, that himſelf was ſo ſecure, that he ſhould not be killed until he came thither): So, that Rome is in like manner ordained to have a hand in the Deaths of all the Witneſſes, (though others may perſecute them too). And ſo this laſt and great Slaughter and Martyrdom of them ſhall be executed by her. That ſo when at her downfal ſhe comes to be reckoned with, it may be ſaid (as it is in Chap. 18. verſ. ult.) that in her was found the Blood of the Prophets, and of the Saints, and of all that were ſlain upon the Earth. And therefore, until the Romiſh Flag be advanced upon the Walls of the Outward Court of this Temple; reckon not this Time of the Witneſſes three Years and an half to be come. But when you ſee that Abomination of Deſolatiou begun to be ſet up, then flee into the Mountains, (as Chriſt in another Caſe ſpeaks).

to

SECT. IV.

The Time of the Beaſt's enjoying this full Victory but three Years and an half. The Time of obtaining it, and of killing the Witneſſes, may be longer.

FOR the Time of the continuance of this Slaughter. Whereas there is here mentioned the Beaſt's making War againſt them, and overcoming and killing them, than when they are about to finiſh their Teſtimony, (that is, towards the Time of the end of it) and then their lying dead for three Days and an half: We muſt herein warily take heed we miſtake not this only mentioned Time of three Years and an half, as if that were all the Time allotted for this laſt War againſt them, victory over them, and ſlaughter of them: No, it is not ſaid they ſhould be overcoming and killing them only ſo long Time; but that theſe Witneſſes ſhould lie dead no longer, after a full Victory obtained, and Slaughter once made. So that that War againſt them, and killing of them, may be much longer in execution, than for three Days and an half only. And indeed, how long that ſhall continue afore theſe three Years and a half begin, we know not. The Gentiles have already been a long while a beſieging and making War againſt the Temple, and have not as yet prevailed: It is not yet come to an overcoming of ſo much as the Outward Court; that Out-work is not yet fully enough gained: (for the winning of the Outward Court, I account part of this their making War againſt the Witneſſes). But how long ſoever this War may prove, and how far ſoever it may be lengthened out, yet when it comes to a compleat Victory once, then (for our comfort) we are ſure, that the Time of the Witneſſes lying dead ſhall be but for three Years and an half, until their riſing, or beginning to riſe again. And as in a great Eccliſe of the Moon, the Time whilſt all or moſt of its Body is darkned, and whilſt that Eclipſe is in its fulneſs, uſeth eſpecially to be ſet down and taken notice of by Aſtronomers, and that Time is eſpecially accounted the Time of the Eclipſe, and not ſo much the Time when it begins to loſe, or after that to recover ſome Light: So is it here in this great and laſt hour of Darkneſs which the Church is to have; wherein the Time of its total Eclipſe is only reckoned. The Phariſees were long a laying their Plots againſt Chriſt, and conſulting how to ruin him, but at the laſt prevailed only for three Days. And thus all hitherto done, is but the War in order to this Conqueſt; the Enemies are as yet but a taking the Out-works, and making their Approaches, &c.

3. For this Time here mentioned of their lying dead; it is but for three Years and an half, which is here called three Days and an half; whereby three Natural Days, conſiſting of 24 Hours, cannot be meant. For how ſhall the noiſe of this full Victory be carried to Nations and Tongues, (who are ſaid to ſee their dead Bodies, partly in that reſpect, of having the news of it)? And how ſhall the

the whole Roman Party univerſally rejoice, and ſend Gifts one to another to congratulate this Victory? Theſe three Days therefore and an half, in which they are to lie dead, are ſuch as thoſe 1260 Days (formerly mentioned) were; even Prophetical Days, taken according to the Stile of the Prophets, namely, Days for Years. And ſuch a three Years and an half had Jeruſalem the Holy City under Antiochus, when the Temple was polluted, and the daily Sacrifice (God's true Worſhip) taken away, and Heatheniſh Idolatry (which there, and ſtill elſewhere, in Daniel, is called, The Abomination that maketh deſolate) ſet up: And when thoſe that were the moſt eminent for Godlineſs, did fall by the Sword, and by Captivity (as you have it, Dan. 11. 31, 32, 33, &c.) for many Days. But the laſt Perſecution of his Reign, was for three Years and an half, as in the 1*ſt* of Machab. 1. from verſ. 30, to chap. 6. you have it recorded. But in the 11*th* Chapter of Daniel, where this Antiochus is propheſied of, he is in this made the Type of Antichriſt; and therefore after that the Prophet had thus ſet forth and ended that his Tyranny, at verſ. 35 of that Chapter, he begins, verſ. 36. to ſet out the Pope and his Tyranny unto the end of the Chapter: So paſſing from the Type to the Anti-Type, even as Chriſt doth, in the 24*th* of Matthew, from the Story of the deſtruction of Jeruſalem, to that of the end of the World, becauſe that was a Type of it. And therefore it is, that Daniel uſeth this Tranſition, verſ. 35. of that 11*th* Chapter, when he had ended Antiochus's Story. That there remains yet a Time ordained, (ſo Graſerus and others read it); that is, yet another Series of the Fates to be related, whereof this was the Type: and ſo he paſſeth on to deſcribe Antichriſt (who is that King mentioned verſ. 36.) unto the end of that Chapter; whoſe Ruin and End, he ſays, ſhould be, after ill Tidings to him out of the North (that is, the Reformation of Religion in theſe Northern Countries) had ſo enraged him, as to cauſe him to go forth in fury, at his laſt endeavouring utterly to root out, &c. And in which Expedition he ſhould ſo far prevail, as to plant his Tabernacle on the glorious Holy Mountain; that is, to over-run the Church. Which indeed, I take to be all one with this laſt War, and killing the Witneſſes here (for it is there juſt afore his end too) for three Years and an half; whereof that laſt prevailing over the Jews by Antiochus, was the Type. And ſuch alike time (as I ſaid before) had the Phariſees over Chriſt, even three Days; which Chriſt calls the Hour of Darkneſs; even as this is thought to be that Hour of Temptation to come over the whole Chriſtian World, Rev. 3. 10. The Enemies indeed think to have the Day of it, but they ſhall have only the Hour of it: This great and fearful Eclipſe, in the fulneſs of it, ſhall laſt no longer; this is their Hour.

And ſuch a like ſpace of Time is uſed in Scripture, to expreſs a ſhort Time: as Hoſea 6. 2. After two Days he will revive us, and in the third Day raiſe us up, &c.

Again, ſuch a like Time had Julian over the Church, when he had again ſet up Heatheniſm. Some ſay his Reign was three Years long (though others ſay leſs). And ſo hath God ordered it, (for the like Holy Ends) that as Heatheniſm had a prevailing again in the World, (before it was utterly extirpated) For that ſmall Time in Julian's Reign, (and this, even after that Chriſtianity had been ſet up forty Years before, by the Imperial Power of Conſtantine): So that Popery (the Image of it) ſhould in like manner expire, and after a glorious Reformation made by Kingly Power, and caſting out of Popery in many States, that it ſhould yet have a prevailing over thoſe Churches, or the eminenteſt of them once again, before its final and utter extirpation.

PART II.

SECT. V.

The ſharpneſs and the extent of this Victory, how great; whether unto Death natural, or Martyrdom, diſcuſſed.

CONcerning the ſharpneſs of this Victory, of the Beaſt, and of the Popiſh Party, how far it ſhall extend: As,

1. Whether unto Blood, or to Martyrdom, and to death Natural of the Witneſſes; and whether this killing here be meant of ſuch a kind?

I find ſome who interpret all done to them to be meant of a Civil Death, not a Natural; that is, a killing them, conſidered as Witneſſes, not as Men; that is, a taking away all Power from them, of propheſying as they had wont; a general ſilencing of Miniſters, and depoſing Magiſtrates and Men of worth, that profeſs and uphold Religion, putting them from their Places, ſhutting their Shops, burning their Books, &c. And for this, makes,

1. That their Death, and lying dead here, is but correſpondent to their Reſurrection. Now their Reſurrection is not from a Natural Death, and therefore ſuch not their killing.

2. That their Bodies, when dead, are ſaid to lie in the Street of the great City for three days and an half; and after that, a Spirit of Life to come into thoſe dead Bodies. Now that cannot be meant of naturally dead Men: for their Bodies cannot be ſuppoſed to have lain naturally dead ſo long above-ground. And then, in that the Spirit of Life is ſaid to enter into thoſe Bodies that were dead; and in that it muſt be ſuppoſed, that thoſe lay dead, who are firſt here ſaid to be killed: All this would ſeem to carry it to the very ſame individual Perſons that were killed, that they ſhould riſe. Which to ſuppoſe of a Natural Reſurrection, before the Day of Chriſt, we have no warrant, nor any ground for.

And accordingly they interpret that following Paſſage; That thoſe of the Nations, Tongues, and Kindreds, ſuffer them not to be put in Graves; as that which may be conſtrued and taken in the better part; as ſhewing what ſhould hinder their Enemies from killing them out-right, namely, that there was a Party of Proteſtants in the Nations about them, that ſhould hinder their Enemies from martyring and utterly extinguiſhing them, and ſhould preſerve them above-ground for a reviving; even as Men whom we think not dead, but in a Swound, we uſe to keep out of the Grave, and not bury them, becauſe we hope they may revive again. And ſo theſe Proteſtants, that the Cauſe may again prevail, they may preſerve the Perſons. And this the rather appears the Intendment here; In that theſe of the Nations, Tongues, and Kindreds, ſeem to be a diverſe and diſtinct Company from the Enemies of the Witneſſes. For of their Enemies, that is ſaid which follows in the next verſe; And thoſe that dwelt on the Earth, rejoiced over them, &c. As if the Angel went about to deſcribe the differing Spirits of the two ſorts of Men, of whom he ſpeaks, towards theſe Witneſſes: The one (whom he calls thoſe of Nations, Tongues, and Kindreds) as Friends doing them this kind Office, as not to ſuffer their Bodies to be put in Graves: But the other (whom as diverſe from theſe, he calls under a new Phraſe, Thoſe that dwell on the Earth) as Enemies rejoicing over them. Which makes this ſuffering of the Witneſſes herein alone to differ from Chriſt's (unto which, in all other Circumſtances, the Alluſion holds) that Chriſt was really killed, and therefore buried: But theſe, though killed as Witneſſes, yet are not ſuffered to be buried; as noting out a keeping them from an Extinction, or an utter taking them out of the way, though by their Enemies they be ſuppreſſed. And it may be, that as Chriſt foretold his Reſurrection the third Day, and ſo, it was commonly known and bruited, that even the Phariſees had knowledg of it, and ſaid unto Pilate, This Deceiver ſaid, he would riſe the third Day; which they laughed at as a vain Dream: So it may be, this very Notion of ſuch a prevailing of the Popiſh Party for three Years and an half, which hath been ſo long and ſo much ſpoken of in the Church, ſhall be ſo commonly known, (as already it begins to be) that for that very Cauſe, theſe Friends of theirs may ſo far interpoſe, as to hinder the utter extinction, or the Burial of them, wholly underground (as it were), as hoping that this Notion given out of their Reſurrection, after three Years and an half, may prove true, as the Diſciples hoped of Chriſt's Reſurrection all the while that he lay in the Grave. Chap. 6.

And whereas it may be thought, that becauſe the Holy Ghoſt ſingleth out this one laſt Killing, and inſtanceth in it alone, above all thoſe other that have fore-gone it throughout the Beaſt's whole Reign, (although he hath made many Wars againſt, and Slaughters of the Witneſſes in former Times); that therefore this ſhould be the worſt and ſharpeſt; their Anſwer hereunto is, That this killing of them here, is thus particularly and alone mentioned, in another reſpect; namely, as it is the Signal of the Pope's Ruin: and ſo, that this argues not the forenes of this their laſt Killing above any foregoing. This is that which uſeth to be ſaid for this Opinion. But for my part, I think it cannot be denied, but that,

1. This lying Dead here of theſe Witneſſes, muſt needs be Metaphorically meant, and underſtood of ſuch a Civil Death, and of a ſuppreſſion of them and their Cauſe, and, as they are Witneſſes, to be ſo put down and extinguiſh'd, that they, for a Time, remain as Men laid forth by the Walls for dead, and as Men in whoſe Teſtimony there is in appearance no Life, or likely-hood of a Revival, their Enemies having now got ſuch a Power over them. This is certainly made the great Matter of their Enemies rejoicing; that as the Phariſees they had Chriſt ſure enough when they got him condemned and crucified, and had him in the Grave: ſo theſe their Enemies ſhall think they have the Witneſſes down ſure enough for ever; ſo great, deſperate, and helpleſs in all view, will the ſuppreſſion of the Witneſſes by theſe their Enemies be. And this was principally intended, in their being ſaid to lie dead. And oppoſitely, the revival of them and their Cauſe, is ſet forth by a Reſurrection from the Dead.

And to this purpoſe there may be ſomething in that Phraſe in Daniel, when the Angel, ſpeaking (as I take it) of this laſt War of the Beaſt, ſays, He ſhall accompliſh to ſcatter the Power of the Holy People; as noting out rather the diſſolving their Power as Witneſſes, than killing them as Men. So that what-ever Proceedings the Power of their Enemies may reach unto, further to kill or martyr the Natural Bodies of theſe Witneſſes; yet this is the Thing eminently held forth in this Metaphorical Expreſſion, and therein eminently intended. That the Cauſe and Teſtimony of theſe Witneſſes ſhould be as deſperate and hopeleſs, without any appearance of Life. And the Holy Ghoſt would have us take notice, that their Enemies prevailing ſhould ſo far reach.

But yet withal (in the ſecond place) I am notwithſtanding afraid, leſt that ſo great a Victory over them, and ſuppreſſion of them as Witneſſes, ſhould alſo be followed with great effuſion of Blood, and with martyring many of them. And although this their lying dead, and riſing again, be metaphorically meant and intended, to ſet out the deſperateneſs of their Cauſe and Teſtimony, and ſo, to illuſtrate that glorious Revival of theirs afterward: yet thoſe other foregoing words, [He ſhall make War againſt them, overcome them, and kill them] may import further Proceedings, by which they got this compleat Victory. I confeſs I am afraid of thoſe many Metaphors; leſt this ſame Killing mentioned after Overcoming, ſhould not be meant really and properly of ſome further Cruelty in Enemies ſo malicious, when they have got the Power in their own Hands. For if the intent of that word [Killing] were to expreſs their ſuppreſſion only as Witneſſes, that word [Overcoming] had then been ſufficient to import it. Sure I am, in the 13*th* Chapter, (where the rage and utmoſt cruelty which the Beaſt ſhould at any time, through his whole Reign, exerciſe againſt the Saints, is ſo propheſied of) all that cruelty of their Enemies, which proceeded to ſo great Slaughters of them, is expreſſed in the ſame words that here, [and it was given him to [make War] againſt the Saints, and to [overcome] them], verſ. 7. And yet under thoſe two Expreſſions (whereas here are Three [Killing] being added) are contained all thoſe bloody Executions and Butcherings of the Saints, by Martyrdom and Death; which afterwards, in the 10*th* Verſe of that Chapter, is more fully expreſſed, when it is ſaid, He that [kills] with the Sword,

PART II. must be [killed] by the Sword; as ſhewing the Cauſe and Manner of the Beaſt's bloody Fall and Ruin in the end, and what it is that ſhould provoke God and Man unto it; even their butchering of the Saints. And although Antichriſt's Power is in general there ſet out, as it ſhould be in his Height and Ruff, and during the whole Time of his Reign, as getting Power over all Nations, Tongues, and Kindreds, and here only his laſt particular War againſt the Witneſſes is deſcribed, (which ſhould immediately forego his Ruin); yet it follows not, that this Expreſſion here ſhould not be of the ſame Nature and Kind, and import the ſame Cruelty and manner of prevailing that is there intended. For notwithſtanding that the Iſſue of the laſt particular War, is the fatal and utter Ruin of the Beaſt; yet that hinders not, but that he may firſt recover again the like Power, and exerciſe the like Cruelty over theſe Witneſſes for this ſmall ſpace, which he had done in former Ages, when he obtained Power ſo long to continue over them. Yea, it may be feared, by that Dirge of her own Funeral Song, which her ſelf at laſt makes, in the 17*th* Chapter, verſ. 7, 8. that ſhe ſhall recover her ancient Power again, or at leaſt entertain certain Hopes and Expectations of it, through her prevailing over ſome (and thoſe of the chief) of her loſt Kingdoms. For there you may read that (when the next day (as it were) ſhe is to be burnt for a Witch, and a Whore) ſhe ſaith in her Heart, and ſings, I ſit as a Queen, and am no Widdow, and ſhall ſee no Sorrow. Which is ſpoken of her preſent Condition juſt before her Fall; for it follows, [therefore ſhall her Plagues come in one day, and ſhe ſhall be utterly burnt with Fire; for ſtrong is the Lord who judgeth her] All which implies, that as her deſtruction ſhould be ſuddain, and in the midſt of her rejoicing; ſo that ſhe ſhall have got ſuch Power and Footing again, as that God's Omnipotent Power muſt be put forth in that her ſo ſuddain and unexpected Ruin after all this.

There is the like intimated in that mention of the Beaſt's recovery of his Power, in Daniel, Chap. 11. verſ. ult. where it is added, [Yet] he ſhall come to his end]; as importing the greatneſs of that Work, and the utter unlikelyhood of it, now when he ſhall have gained his Power ſo ſetledly again. That [yet] comes in there, as that [yet] in the 2*d Pſalm* does; [Yet] I have ſet my King on my Holy Hill of Sion, maugre all the Oppoſition and Rage of the Gentiles and Phariſees; though they have ſo far prevailed as to crucify him; Yet I have ſet my Son as King on Sion, and raiſed up him and his Cauſe again to prevail.

And I therefore encline to think, that that Song of the Whore, mentioned verſ. 7. of the 17*th* Chapter, is uttered by her as during this her merry Time at laſt; when ſhe and her Friends rejoice ſo, and make merry during theſe three Years and an half, (verſ. 10. of this 11*th* Chapter); when ſuddainly after it ſhe is to be ruined. Yea, I believe, that the Cruelties, which upon this recovery of her Power, ſhe may now at laſt exerciſe (according to her manner in former Ages) may be the means to revive the Memory of all her former Slaughters, and ſo to provoke God and Men, as for this her laſt Blood-ſhed to bring upon her the Blood of all the Prophets and Martyrs before ſhed, even as the Blood of Chriſt at laſt brought upon the Jews the Blood of all from Abel, to provoke God to ruin Jeruſalem. That as the Ten Tribes were enraged againſt the Benjamites, with eagerneſs to root them out, becauſe of their great Victory at firſt got over themſelves: So may the Proteſtant Party be whetted on by theſe freſh killings of the Saints (which may revive the memory of all the former, otherwiſe apt to be forgotten) to do execution upon theſe their Enemies without all Mercy. And ſo ſhall be fulfilled what is ſaid, chap. 13. He that killeth with the Sword, muſt be killed by the Sword: They ſhall reward her, as ſhe had rewarded them juſt before, as chap. 17. verſ. 6.

And whereas it is alledged; That this being but one particular War againſt the Witneſſes, why ſhould it be alone mentioned, (laſt as ſome way peculiar, if it were ſuch as Antichriſt had commonly made upon the Saints all his former Days, which are mentioned chap. 13? The Angel would not have recorded it thus alone by it ſelf, if it had not been a different War from thoſe former ones which the Beaſt made againſt theſe Witneſſes.

The

The Anſwer is ; That it follows not that this is not ſuch a kind of War and prevailing as formerly Antichriſt had. For this (though ſuch as the former) is thus particularly and alone mentioned, meerly for this reſpect, becauſe it is the laſt of them all, and ſo, as a Signal to ſhew the Time of Antichriſt's ending, and to make known the wonderful dealing of God, both with his Church and with his Enemies ; that after ſo great Victory by it obtained againſt the Beaſt, he ſhould notwithſtanding thus prevail over it again, and have power to do for this ſpace of Time, even as in former Ages ; when thinking himſelf as ſecure as ever, that then he ſhould for ever be overthrown ; the Wonder of this deſerved to be made a Sign, and that this War of all other ſhould particularly be inſtanced in.

Then again, add to this, that it is that laſt, great, and eminent Suffering of the Church, (namely, of the European Churches) ; and therefore it of all others, may be ordained to be the ſoreſt. Theſe Witneſſes do now die to riſe, and ſo to die no more, (as Chriſt did not after his Reſurrection, Rom. 6.) but to enter into their Glory, as Chriſt alſo did. I have obſerved, that thoſe laſt Afflictions, which are the immediate Fore-runners of the greateſt Happineſs and Good, are ſtill the ſharpeſt. So it was with Chriſt himſelf ; ſo with all Chriſtians in their laſt conflict with Death, the King of Fears, who yet is the Porter to let them into Heaven ; and ſo it is with the Church in her Perſecutions. The Egyptian Bondage was ſoreſt at the laſt. And (ſays Paul) God hath ſet forth us Apoſtles [laſt] as it were appointed unto Death, 1 Cor. 4. 9. alluding to thoſe Gladiators or Fencers in the Roman Games, the laſt of whom (there being three ſorts that uſed to come upon the Stage) were appointed not to go off, but to fight it out till they were killed, (they being ordinarily either Slaves, or elſe Malefactors). The greateſt Perſecution that ever the Church had under Heatheniſh Rome, was that laſt one under Dioclefian, and the fifth Seal. And therefore all the former Martyrdoms of the Saints by that State, during the Times of the former Seals, do, with a general cry of their Blood, come but then in, when-as that the cruelleſt of all the former was come. And yet that was not the laſt neither, of thoſe Perſecutions that the Church ever was to have : For it is there told thoſe Saints, that they had other Brethren yet to be killed : But here theſe Witneſſes are to Riſe, and die no more ; For as they died, as Chriſt did ; ſo they ſhall riſe, as Chriſt did.

Yea, and further ; you may obſerve, that this is now mentioned not only alone, and above all other Conqueſts over the Saints ; but alſo as the very Epitome of all their former Sufferings during the whole Time of the Witneſſes Prophecy. And therefore in the very Time of the duration hereof, (namely, three Days and a half) it is ſet forth as bearing the proportion of a Compendium of the whole Time of their Propheſying and Suffering, which was for three Years and an half, or 1260 Days. As in like manner Chriſt's Sufferings (unto which the Alluſion here is) were all ſummoned up in his Death ; which is therefore put for all his Sufferings. When therefore it came to a [My God, my God, why haſt thou forſaken me ?] then he was heard and delivered from what he feared. And ſo in this laſt brunt of the Church, when you ſhall hear the like Voice uttered by it ; know then, that Delivery is near.

We may alſo further conſider, that now the Beaſt hath been ſo chaſed by theſe Witneſſes propheſying, and hath had ſo many Vials emptied upon him and his Company ; they will thereby be ſo enraged, when once they ſhall get the Victory and Power into their Hands, that ſurely in their Rage they will be cruel, (as was ſaid of Reuben). And the Angel in Daniel, Chap. 11. 44. expreſly attributes this his laſt Invaſion of the Churches unto his Rage for their oppoſing him by this Northern Reformation, (which in theſe Kingdoms hath been the occaſion of it). Therefore (ſays he) he ſhall go forth with great Fury to deſtroy, and utterly to make away many. So that, nothing but Blood and Cruelty will be in their Hearts. And therefore if God reſtrain not their Spirits, or cut them ſhort by an Almighty Work of his Power, this laſt muſt needs come to be far the ſoreſt of all former Perſecutions.

Add

PART II.

Add unto this, that in chap. 17. verſ. 6. the Whore (the City of Rome) is preſented as ſhe ſhall be juſt before her Ruin; and this, as drunk with the Blood of the Saints. Which unto me ſeems to argue, that Drunkenneſs now at laſt ſhall be added to that her thirſt of Blood, which by her being ſcorched with Fire by theſe Witneſſes, hath been encreaſed. I know it may be ſaid, that it is ſpoken of her in relation to her former Bloody Martyriſings of the Saints. But that Viſion being made of her, as juſt afore her Fall: for verſ. 1. John ſays, That one of the ſeven Angels of the Vials (and as it is conjectured by Interpreters, the Fifth, becauſe he it is that pours out his Vial upon the Seat of the Beaſt, the Whore) ſhewed him the Judgment of the Great Whore, with whom the Kings of the Earth have committed Fornication, &c. that is, in ſo many Ages fore-paſted. So that he preſented her in her old and laſt Days; and that then ſhe appears ſo drunk, makes me fear, that it is by reaſon ſhe was new come out from her Cups of Blood; and that now at laſt, (after theſe Years for her to ſleep in) ſome freſh Cup, ſome new Draught ſhall make her tipſy again, that ſo ſhe may be ſurpriſed, Somno Vinoque ſepulta, buried in Sleep and Drunkenneſs, (as Babylon was); which will be the greater Judgment and Confuſion unto her.

But yet, whether it ſhall be thus, or no, I dare not, nor cannot certainly and peremptorily determine. For on the other ſide, how God may reſtrain their Wrath, and cut ſhort their Spirits, (as the Pſalmiſt ſpeaks) we know not. Yea, notwithſtanding all their Rage, Malice, and Spirit of Revenge, yet how far their own Wiſdom and Policy may move them of themſelves to forbear the full execution of that Vigour, which their Power gives them opportunity of, we know not. For when their Victory is gotten, they may uſe it more moderately; eſpecially in a reſpect to that Proteſtant Party, which though outwardly overcome by them, yet they cannot but in their Hearts and Conſciences continue firm unto the Cauſe of theſe Witneſſes. The Light of the Goſpel hath took ſuch a deep impreſſion on Men's Spirits, as it cannot be extinguiſh'd, nor they be brought ſo ſuddainly to embrace Popery as the Truth. And as the Phariſees, for fear of the People, forbear many Attempts againſt Chriſt, ſo may theſe for fear of theſe Tongues, Kindreds, and Nations, here mentioned, (which are in Heart inclined to the Proteſtant Cauſe) forbear the extremity of their Rage, though for the preſent they have the Power; eſpecially conſidering, that they may wait for, and promiſe to themſelves, ſome after-Age and Time when their Power ſhall more perfectly be recovered and ſetled, and Men's Conſciences quieted in Popiſh Ways, and when the Adverſe Proteſtant Party ſhall be brought low and diminiſhed. And ſo they may come to forbear and defer their full Revenge ſo long, until this limited and ſhort Time of their full Power (namely, their three Years and an half) be expired, and out of Date ſooner than they dream'd of. Which may prevent and hinder the execution of their cruel Intentions to deſtroy and utterly make away many. And we have experience of the Wiſdom of this Generation of Men, who love eaſy and gradual Conqueſts. And their own experience hath and doth teach them, that the martyring and butchering of the Saints, hath ſtill advanced the Cauſe of the Proteſtant Religion, and branded theirs with Blood and Cruelty, as a Mark of the Falſe and Whoriſh Church. And though they be full of Malice, which puts them on to uſe the utmoſt extremity; yet their Wiſdom having ſome further miſchievous end, may keep down the rage of that their malice; even as in Julian the Apoſtate (who ſinned againſt the Holy Ghoſt) it did. For he ſeeing that Martyrdoms did tend rather to add unto and encreaſe the Church, than to diminiſh it; and knowing that Martyrdom would procure to thoſe that ſuffered it, a fairer Crown of Glory: Out of Envy therefore, and a witty Malice, he would make no Edicts for the killing of the Chriſtians, but rather uſed ways of Subtilty, by laying Snares and Temptations to draw Men from the Truth, and to ſhipwrack their Conſciences; and ſo with his prophane Hands to paddle in the Blood of their Souls, (a ſweeter Victory to him) rather than of their Bodies, and to triumph over them in their Falls from the Truth, rather than in their Deaths. And to that end he invented another way to miſchief and diminiſh them, by denying them Schools of Learning, and the uſe of Books, and ſuffered none of the Chriſtians to bear any Office, either in War or Peace.

Moreover, there may be inſinuated ſome mitigation of this Rage of theſe Gentiles in the purſuing this their laſt Victory, in that which follows the forecited Place in Daniel; where although it be ſaid, that he ſhall go forth in ſuch Fury and Rage, and with an intent to root out many; yet all his prevailing is in the Iſſue and Succeſs expreſſed but by this, that he ſhall plant his Tabernacle upon the Glorious Holy Mountain. Which may imply, that although his Intention is utterly to deſtroy; yet for the execution of it, no more ſhall be done, than getting a poſſeſſion again in the Church, and a planting his Tabernacle, his Power and Throne therein; which is therefore called a Tabernacle, becauſe it muſt preſently be pulled down again.

The Event only muſt declare how far this prevailing ſhall ſucceed. In the mean Time, we have cauſe to fear, and to prepare for the worſt; both from the Sins of the Witneſſes in yielding too far unto the Superſtitions of Rome, and in ſuffering ſome of thoſe Superſtitions to be left in their Churches, by the overflowing of the Romiſh Sea, (as we ſee much filth uſeth to be left on the Shore by the overflowing of the Ocean) and from many other Sins of theirs, as Carnal-Goſpelling, Worldly-mindedneſs, &c. and alſo from their baſe yielding up the Outward Court, and deſerting the Cauſe. For (as the Angel in Daniel ſays) many among them ſhall do wickedly.

Now to conclude this Point; That whereto my laſt and utmoſt Thoughts and hopes concerning this Matter do chiefly encline and ſway me, is, to think, that it will be but ſuch a Time with the Church, as that under Julian was; and that haply that Perſecution of his, was a kind of Type of this: That being the laſt prevailing of Heatheniſm, as this of Popery. Julian abſtained from extremity of Cruelty, in reſpect of Blood, eſpecially at the firſt: but having the Power in his Hands, he endeavoured, by crafty means, to undo and extinguiſh Religion, by denying the Chriſtians the uſe of Schools of Literature and Books, &c. (as I before told you) and rather ſhewed his Malice, in flouting and jeering of them, than in killing them; and ſtudied Snares for their Conſciences, ſetting up his own Image with the Idols of the Heathen Gods round about it, in the Forum or Market-place, that ſo in doing reverence to his Image, they might ſeem to reverence the Gods, and refuſing to bow towards theſe Falſe Gods, they might be accuſed, as denying reverence to the Emperor. Which courſe, in the end, was the cauſe of much Blood-ſhed, though by no Publick Edict of his made, (as formerly by other Emperors). And the People knowing his hate unto the Chriſtians, they fell upon them in diverſe Parts of the Empire, and perſecuted them even unto Death.

Now for this Prevailing to come, I think that through many Temptations and Snares laid, together with Cruelties inflicted, it may prove worſe than Death and Martyrdom it ſelf. And it may perhaps be eminently rather an Hour of Temptation and Trial, then of the blackneſs and darkneſs of Martyrdom unto the generality of Believers; though haply accompanied with the Martyrdom of many; and therefore the Gentiles are alſo ſaid to kill theſe Witneſſes. Theſe Times are like to be (as Paul to Timothy hath it, 2 Epiſt. 3. 1.) καιροὶ χαλεποὶ, difficult Times, rather than Bloody Times, (the Apoſtle there ſpeaking of the laſt Days, as in his firſt Epiſtle, chap. 4. verſ. 1. he ſpeaks of the latter Days of Popery). And theſe are called Difficult Times, becauſe of the cunning and ſubtilty that ſhall be uſed to enſnare Men, and the Temptations laid for them; and yet they may be ſtained with much Blood alſo.

Yet ſo, as however this we may be ſure of, that many ſhall ſurvive this War, and only be made white and tried, (as it is in Daniel). Which is the rather to be hoped, becauſe ſo ſuddain a Reſurrection of ſo great a Multitude, as chap. 19. 1. are mentioned, who ſhall poſſeſs that glorious State of a Church deſcribed in that Chapter, from verſ. 1, to 10, after that three Years and a half once ended; is not likely to ariſe meerly out of a Succeſſion of New Converts; but is probably to be made up of the ſame Perſons ſurviving, and out-riding that great Storm.

SECT.

PART II.

SECT. VI.

Of that Concomitant of the Witneſſes Killing. The Nations ſeeing their dead Bodies, and not ſuffering them to be put in Graves. Several Senſes given of it: Whether taken as an Office of Favoar, or an Injury. And whether to be underſtood of Friends, or Enemies, diſcuſſed.

NOw for that particular Clauſe that follows, That thoſe of the Nations, Tongues, and Kindreds, ſhould ſee their dead Bodies lie, and not ſuffer them to be put in Graves, (which is interpreted in a way of Favour to the Witneſſes); Although I think their lying Dead to be meant in a Metaphorical and Alluſive Senſe; yet it is exceeding doubtful unto me, whether or no this Clauſe be not to be taken in malam partem, in the worſer ſenſe; as rather expreſſing inhumanity by this Metaphor, than Kindneſs and Love. And this ſeems to me to be the meaning of it; (whether thoſe of the Nations, Tongues, and Kindreds, be taken for Friends or for Enemies) and ſo to have been here added, further to repreſent unto us the extream Miſery, and deſperate Calamity, into which theſe Witneſſes ſhall be brought, in this their Time of Trial.

1. If theſe Nations, &c. be meant of Enemies; this Phraſe [they ſaw and ſuffered not, &c.] doth imply their feeding their Eyes with this ſight, and making it a ſpectacle of delight and joy unto them. For to ſee or view a thing, (when the Sights are of this nature) is in ſuch a ſenſe uſed in Scripture: and implies that the Thing ſeen is made a Spectacle and Gazing-ſtock; and in the Seers and Beholders, it imports Deriſion and Triumph. Thus in Chriſt's Sufferings (unto which the Alluſion is) they are ſaid to come out to ſee him, and to mock at him. And Pſal. 22. 8. All they that [ſee] me do mock at me, (ſays the Prophet there in Chriſt's Name). And in the 109*th Pſalm*, verſ. 24. They [ſaw] me (ſays Chriſt there (for of him is that Pſalm made) and ſhaked their Heads, &c.

And thus ſeeing is uſually mentioned in this Senſe, when any Judgment is executed, to ſhew how the oppoſite Party comes forth, and ſees it, and rejoiceth at it. Thus when Judgments are executed on the Wicked, the Righteous ſhall [ſee] and laugh at him, Pſal. 52. 6. So Iſa. 66. verſ. ult. They ſhall [look] upon the Carcaſſes of them that have tranſgreſſed againſt God; which ſhall become an abhorring unto all Fleſh.

And ſo that other Phraſe that follows [and they ſhall not ſuffer them to be put in Graves] may alſo import a height of inhumanity. For, Pſal. 29. 4. when that like miſerable deſolation of the Temple, and Slaughter of the Saints (be it either that of Antiochus, (the Type of this) as ſome think it meant) or that of the Babyloniſh Captivity, as others) this Aggravation is there added unto their Slaughter, that there was none to bury them. Yea, and that here it ſhould rather be taken in ſuch a bad ſenſe, appears by this, That their Killing being an Alluſion unto Chriſt's Paſſion, this Circumſtance is therefore mentioned, as heightning this Suffering of the Witneſſes above that of Chriſt's, in this reſpect. For though his laying in the Grave, (as endured by him) is accounted a part of his Humiliation; yet it is noted as a Work of Humanity in Pilate, to ſuffer his Body to be taken down from the Croſs, and laid in a Grave; and eſpecially in Joſeph of Arimathea, who begg'd it to that end, and afterward honourably entombed it. This was an Office of the greateſt Charity (and therefore recorded); which this Prophecy notes out as that which ſhould be wanting in theſe Nations and Tongues here, whether they be Friends or Enemies.

And, 2. if they be taken for Friends unto theſe Witneſſes, and as ſuch among thoſe Nations, Tongues, and Kindreds, as are in heart of the ſame Religion with them, and who do in Heart reſpect and love them, (as the People did Chriſt); the Query then will be, Whether this their not ſuffering them to be buried, be a friendly Office? I confeſs indeed, they ſeem to be ſome diſtinct Company from thoſe their Enemies, who do ſo rejoice over them, verſ. 14. and ſome ſpecial Company alſo of the Nations, and Tongues, and Kindreds. For it is not ſaid, that [all] Nations, Kindreds, and Tongues, &c. (as in the 13*th* Chapter, when Popery was in its firſt height undiſcovered, it is ſaid, that Antichriſt had power over [all] Nations and Tongues, &c.) Nor is it ſaid [The Nations], &c. but [they] of the Nations], or [ſome of the Nations] [ἐκ τῶν λαῶν, καὶ φυλῶν, καὶ γλωσσῶν, καὶ ἐθνῶν, &c.] and not [all] in thoſe Kindreds, and Peoples, and Nations, among whom theſe Witneſſes are. And ſo the Phraſe of Speech ſerves fitly to note out a contradiſtinct, ſpecial Party, or Company; even the Proteſtant Party, who are not in all Nations: neither are they all univerſally Proteſtants in thoſe Nations where the Goſpel is preached and profeſſed. But only ſome Nations are Proteſtant, and but ſome in, and of thoſe Nations. And ſo the mention of them here may come in to ſhew what part they ſhould play in this Tragedy. Chap. 6.

For this killing the Witneſſes, falling out in an Age, when ſo many among the Nations, do in Heart ſtill continue of the ſame Religion with the Witneſſes; the enquiry would be, What will they do? Will they endure it when it ſhall come to ſuch extremity? Will they not put to their hand to help the Witneſſes of their own Religion? No, (ſays the Angel here) they ſhall ſee their Dead Bodies, and not ſuffer them to be put in Graves.

1. It is ſaid, They ſhall ſee their dead Bodies lie in the Street, or publick Market-place, (as the word may alſo ſignify). Which their ſo publick lying in ſuch a Place, notes out the greateſt ſcorn put upon them by their Enemies, that may be. And yet theſe behold them as Friends that have no heart to help them, and ſo will not once ſtir to relieve them; but like ſtanders-by, and meer lookers-on, are ſhie, and liſt not to intermeddle in their killing, one way nor other. They ſtand aloof off, as Men uſe to do from Malefactors Executed, although they be Friends and Well-willers to them; or as Men that paſs by, and go on the other ſide of the Street, when they ſee a dead Carkaſs lying before them. Thus the Phraſe [ſeeing them] is alſo uſed in Scripture, and particularly in this Book. For thus when the Wheel is turned about, and after this, Rome's turn comes to be burnt, her Friends, the Kings of the Earth, that ſhall in Heart ſtill cleave unto her, are deſcribed as ſtanders aloof off, and Spectators that [ſee] her Smoke, (as Abraham did the Smoke of Sodom): So chap. 17. 9, 10. and 18. And thus it may be, Theſe of the Peoples, Kindreds, Tongues, and Nations, who have taken part with theſe Witneſſes formerly, ſhall now not dare to do it, but ſtand afar off (as it were) and paſs by and ſee them kill'd, and not have Hearts to help them. This the Phraſe [ſeeing them] may import.

Or further, it may be ſaid, that Thoſe of the Peoples, Kindreds, &c. ſhould ſee them, in that theſe Witneſſes ſhould be driven out among thoſe Peoples, Nations, &c. and ſhould fly unto them for refuge and help.

And ſo (in the ſecond Place) that which follows, may come in as a further degree of inhumanity, which theſe their falſe Friends ſhould ſhew to them, which ſhall be added unto the Indignities put upon them by their Enemies, ſo to make the calamity and diſtreſs of theſe Witneſſes the more compleat. Namely, that theſe their Friends, of the Proteſtant Party, ſhould be ſo far overcome and prevailed upon by the Power and Dread of the Papiſts, that they ſhall deny theſe Witneſſes all help and ſhelter which they ſhall ſeek for, and all thoſe common Offices of Friendſhip and Humanity which might be expected from them. Thoſe that are Friends, uſe to bury the dead Bodies of thoſe whoſe Lives they could not reſcue out of the Hands of their Common Enemies; but theſe here ſhall be ſo far from helping the Witneſſes, that they ſhall not ſuffer them to be buried among them, or to be laid in Graves; which are here metaphorically put for Reſting-places, where they might be ſheltered from the ſhame, contempt, and indignities impoſed on them by their inſulting Enemies, who now were compleat Victors over them.

And thus the Alluſion herein may be unto the Sufferings of Chriſt, who though he had a great Party of the People for him, crying, Hoſanna in the Higheſt; yet thoſe very Jews were ſo far prevailed upon by the Phariſees, (when they once had Chriſt down in their Power) as to cry with the reſt, Crucify him, Crucify him, and to run out in Troops to ſee him executed. So Luke 23. 35.

PART II.

The People (ſays the Evangeliſt) ſtood beholding him, and the Rulers alſo with them derided him. The People that before had rejoiced in his Miniſtry, now take part with the Phariſees his Enemies. And even ſo (it is to be feared) ſhall the Proteſtant Party, over-awed with the Power and Tyranny of Rome, (which ſhall have Power to tread down them alſo) comply with her againſt the Witneſſes; though not ſo far as to have their Hands in their Blood. Yet ſo far, as not to ſuffer them to be put in Graves, and to be harboured amongſt them, or by them; ſo far as thus Negatively to be againſt the Witneſſes, as not to ſhew any office of Kindneſs in relieving them.

And ſo this their inhumanity is, after the manner of Men (who uſe to perform this as a common Office of Humanity, to put dead Men's Bodies into Graves) expreſſed unto us by this contrary carriage of theirs, that they ſuffered not their Bodies to be put in Graves; A Metaphorical Speech it is.

And particularly; the Alluſion here is made unto the putting the Carkaſſes of dead Men into Graves; which (you know) is an honour and a ſhelter to them; and indeed, all the Office of Kindneſs that lies in the Power of Friends to afford them. And ſo kindneſs unto Men in that dead Condition, is by this here fully expreſſed. Now therefore when theſe Witneſſes are depoſed from their Station, and haply baniſh'd from forth the Nation in which they lived, (which haply is their Death here meant) and caſt forth with the higheſt Contempt, and perſecuted with the greateſt Malice of their Enemies; and ſhall come to thoſe of other Peoples, Nations, and Tongues, (who are of their own Religion and Party) for ſuccor and ſhelter from theſe Indignities and baſe Uſages from their Enemies, ſo to find reſt to themſelves, (who are now, in reſpect of that active Life of witneſſing by Prophecy, laid by the Walls ſpeechleſs, and as Dead) and to have only a harbour among them (which unto thoſe that are among Strangers of another Language, is but of the Nature of a Grave) and a Place of reſt, (where, at beſt, they cannot ſo much be ſaid to Live, as to lie ſtill in quiet as Men dead); when they ſhall ſeek but thus much, and ſhall not obtain it, theſe Nations and Kindreds who refuſe it them, may juſtly be ſaid, not to ſuffer their dead Bodies to be laid in Graves: Which yet to perform for them, were but a common favour of Humanity, and by the Law of Nations to be imparted unto baniſh'd Strangers, eſpecially to thoſe of their own Religion. And we ſee it hath hitherto been allowed the Witneſſes flying out of England, by the Low-Countries, and to the Proteſtants flying out of Germany, by the Engliſh. And ſo in Queen Mary's Days, the Engliſh Profeſſors found Graves at leaſt; ſome at Geneva, ſome in Germany, and others elſewhere; where they lay quietly enjoying their Conſciences, though put by that active Life of Propheſying, which before that they lived in, and enjoyed in King Edward's Reign. But now ſuch ſhall be the ſurpaſſing miſery of theſe three laſt Years and a half, above what in former Times, and ſo potent the prevalency of the Popiſh Faction, and ſuch their Vigilancy to ſtop all Holes of Refuge, againſt theſe Witneſſes, that they ſeeking only for Graves among theſe States of their own Party and Religion (which formerly they had permitted them) ſhall yet be refuſed it by theſe Nations, Tongues, and Kindreds, who ſhall ſo inhumanely be carried on againſt their own Principles, as not to ſuffer them to have ſuch Graves among them, namely, a condition of Harbour, Reſt, and Quiet.

And further; Becauſe this ſhall be done with a Prohibition to the contrary; therefore it is thus expreſſed, That they ſuffered not their dead Bodies to be laid in Graves; that is, by Edicts prohibiting any of the baniſh'd Witneſſes to have harbour among them. And although this Phraſe [putting their dead Bodies in Graves] may ſeem improper to expreſs oppreſſed Men's flying for ſhelter, becauſe [to be put in a Grave] is a Paſſive Phraſe in reſpect of them that are dead, and imports a thing done by others; we muſt therefore ſtill remember, that this is a Metaphorical Speech, and ſo a Civil Death, and civilly lying dead, are here to be underſtood. For theſe Witneſſes (many of them) are not to be killed with a Death Natural, as they are Men, but with a Civil Death, as they are Witneſſes; and ſo, may ſeek for ſhelter as Men, when they are dead as Witneſſes, which ſhelter in this Alluſion, is called a Grave. And becauſe dead Men cannot bury themſelves, therefore (according to the Metaphor of Men dead) the Holy Ghoſt expreſſeth their ſeeking a place of Reſt, by their being put into Graves: So, paſſively expreſſing it: For how elſe (ſpeaking of them under the Notion of dead Men) could it be expreſt? It is but τὸ πρέπον Figuræ; the Decorum of following the Metaphor taken up, requir'd this, and no other kind of Expreſſion. The like unto which, is uſual in Scripture Phraſe, and in all other Languages. Which putting the Witneſſes into Graves (in this ſenſe taken) theſe their Friends ſhall yet not ſuffer or permit. Chap. 6.

And thus, as it may be mentioned, to note out the inhumanity and cowardiſe of their Friends; ſo withal, the great miſery and deſperate calamity of the Church in this their laſt being ſubdued; which will prove worſe than ever any before it, in that now they ſhall have no Sanctuary, no ſafe retiring Place to reſt in throughout all Europe; which ſhall in this reſpect univerſally become the Juriſdiction of the Great City, (ſo ſome interpret that word [πλατεῖα] Street). It ſhall not now be, as at other times it hath been, that when they were perſecuted in one City, they might flee to another, and there have quiet and ſafety. But the Juriſdiction of the Popiſh Party ſhall ſo far now prevail in Proteſtant States, (if any ſuch remain) as they ſhall not dare to receive and protect the oppreſſed Witneſſes, ſeeking a refuge and a harbour amongſt them, but ſhall rather prohibit them ſo doing. Which in this Alluſion is ſpoken, in oppoſition unto that Humanity and Charity in Joſeph of Arimathea, who honourably laid Chriſt's Body in a Grave, when yet he had not power to hinder his crucifying.

And that even the Proteſtant Party may turn thus inhumane towards the Witneſſes, the unfaithful carriage of many Proteſtant States towards their Neighbours and Brethren, now whilſt this War is but begun againſt the Witneſſes, may give us cauſe to fear and ſuſpect.

How hath the Lutheran Party in Germany, complied and took part with the Popiſh for the ruin of the Calviniſts? And it were happy for other States, profeſſing the Calvin Religion, if they could waſh their hands of the Blood of the Churches, not only not aſſiſted, but even betraied by them.

Thus I have propoſed another different Interpretation from that formerly given, by way of mitigation of this Extremity; yet leaving both it and the other unto the Event to determine, and to the Reader to judge of.

SECT. VII.

Of the Univerſality of this Slaughter. Whether reaching to all Churches Reformed, and in them, to all Profeſſors, or only to eminent Witneſſes. That ſome one may be more eminently deſigned. What is meant by the Street of the City, &c.

THE next Query may be concerning the Generality or Univerſality of the extent of this Slaughter; How far it may reach. As,

1. Whether to all ſorts of Profeſſors of Religion, or whether to eminent Perſons in the Church only.

Now for that; It may ſeem principally to be of Witneſſes; that is, thoſe that are eminently ſuch. It is probable, that the pureſt and beſt Profeſſors will be ſingled out to a Duel or ſingle Combat, as it were. The Gentiles before this, had the Outward Court of Carnal Profeſſors more eaſily given up unto them; but among theſe truly Godly Ones, they find ſerious and ſtiff Oppoſers, that will never be brought to yield unto them. And this the Popiſh Party themſelves do both ſee and find; namely, that the Godly of the Proteſtants are their only real Enemies, and thoſe who ſtill put the great Bars and Impeachments to their Plots; and that are the great Stakes in the Hedg of the Church, which ſtand in the Gap againſt their Irruptions. And theſe are they, who only by their Lives and Profeſſion, do torment the ungodly, (as you have it, verſ. 14.) who there-therefore rejoice for their Victory over them. And therefore this is not like to be a Maſſacre of all ſorts of Profeſſors at large (as was that in Paris, Anno 1572.) but a particular Combat, and ſet Battel againſt the ſincere Witneſſes only: Whom their Enemies have been taught to know and diſtinguiſh from others, by the Fire they have ſhot into their Conſciences, as verſ. 5. Thus in Antiochus his three Years and an half (the Type of this) the Perſecution fell eſpecially upon thoſe that were Teachers and Inſtructers of others. So Dan. 11. 35. And thus will this do.

Only let me add this; That theſe Witneſſes being the Golden Candleſticks alſo, (as may ſeem by verſ. 4.) therefore a ſcattering of them (namely, of the purer Churches) will be joined with it. And if their Olive Trees be felled and removed, if their Prophets and Rulers be ſcattered, themſelves then muſt needs be ſcattered. [Smite the Shepherd, and the Sheep will be ſcattered] as Chriſt ſpake of himſelf and his Diſciples; which ſmiting of his there, (namely at his Paſſion) is here alluded unto.

But a ſecond Query may be: Whether this Killing will be over all the Reformed Churches, and ſo generally of the Witneſſes in all Proteſtant States and Kingdoms? Graſerus, a judicious Lutheran Divine, thinks that it will be Univerſal: and that this is the Angel's very ſcope here, thus particularly to deſign out this laſt Killing, as herein differing from all other former Ones, that it ſhould at once be a general and total Eclipſe of True Churches for three Years and an half. And ſo (ſays he) Quod hactenus per partes impleri nunquam deſiit, jam plenarie & univerſaliter perficietur: that is, That Perſecution which in ſome place or other hath never ceaſed, and ſo by parts hath been fulfilled, at ſeveral Times, that ſhall now at once more fully and univerſally be accompliſh'd. And I muſt confeſs, that the treading down the Outward Court, and the Sins of all Churches, ſo great and ſo general in all, do univerſally threaten this. And it may be part of the drift of that Speech which we have explained, that thoſe of the Peoples, Kindreds, Tongues, and Nations, ſhould ſee their dead Bodies lie in the Street (or Juriſdiction) of the Great City; as importing, that generally, in all thoſe Nations where Witneſſes are to be found, they ſhall be killed; and ſo, by that means, they ſhould all have opportunity to view and ſee their dead Bodies.

This I deny not, but think it may be the Event, more or leſs. Yet however, I believe, That ſome one Kingdom or State, will more eminently be made, Sedes Belli, the Field of this Battel, the Shambles of this Slaughter.

And one Reaſon hereof is, Becauſe where the Witneſſes riſe from this their dead Condition, there is an Earth-quake joined with it, which ſhakes the tenth part of the City; that is, (as I take it, and ſhall afterwards give my Reaſon for it) one of thoſe ten European Kingdoms, that have given up their Power unto the Beaſt, ſhall now in this Slaughter begin to fall from, and ceaſe to be a part of the City, or to belong to the Juriſdiction of Rome any longer; under which, for the ſpace of theſe three Years and an half, it had been. Now that falling away of the Tenth Kingdom, being joined with theſe Witneſſes riſing again, it would argue, that Accident of the Earthquake to fall out for the eſpecial help and furtherance of the Witneſſes riſing, who are in, or do belong unto that Kingdom, or tenth part of the City. Some one particular State or Kingdom ſhall aſſiſt the Witneſſes in it in their Riſing and Aſcending into Heaven; and ſhall revenge their Slaughter, by killing 7000 Names of Men, who were their Enemies, and had been Executioners of them in their fore-paſſed Slaughter. Now if their Reſurrection and Aſcenſion be in ſome one part of the ten Kingdoms made more eminently glorious, and ſo, the ſpecial Priviledg of the Witneſſes belonging unto that tenth Part; then one would think, that the killing or ſlaughter of them ſhould alſo be in that tenth part of the City more conſpicuous than in the reſt. For in this ſuffering, whereof Chriſt's Paſſion is propounded the Type, thoſe that ſuffer moſt with him, ſhall riſe and enter into this their Glory ſpoken of; which is to be anſwerably proportioned to their Suffering. If therefore the Glory that follows, ſeems to be more peculiar to one tenth Part; the ſuffering fore-going it would alſo ſeem to have been more peculiar peculiar to that tenth part likewiſe, and the main ſhock of the Storm to have fallen there: though haply all the Heavens may be covered with black, and all Churches feel ſome drops and ſprinklings of it. Chap. 6.

It hath alſo ſomewhat moved me, that the Place where they are ſaid to lie dead, is called πλατεία, [the Street] not [Streets] of the Great City], as noting out ſome one eminent Place or Street of that City, or ſome State belonging to the Juriſdiction of Rome: ſo comparing the Juriſdiction and Power of Rome through and over all Europe, unto a City, and the Kingdoms and States of it, unto ſeveral Streets. And ſo ſome one State or Kingdom is this ſame πλατεία τῆς πόλεως, this ſame Street of that City. I know what Criticks ſay, That this is, Numerus Singularis pro Plurali, [Street] for [Streets]. But the Elegancy of the Allusion ſeems better made up, by taking it for ſome one place of the City, by this Slaughter, made the Market-place, and (as it were) the Shambles therein, more eminently than the reſt of the Streets.

And thus alſo that former Interpretation (of [thoſe of the Peoples, Kindreds, &c.] (they being taken as meant of the Proteſtant Party of other Nations round about) and their [Seeing, &c.] to be their knowing and taking notice of this Slaughter, as ſtanders-by, aloof off; and their [not ſuffering them to be put in Graves] to be their prohibiting them a Sanctuary and Reſting-place among them, when they fled unto them for help); that Interpretation (I ſay) is made more clear by this, That the Slaughter falling more eminently upon ſome one Part, or Kingdom, the reſt of the Kingdoms and Nations about it, do deny them of that Kingdom ſhelter, and a Grave to hide their Heads in, when from thence they flee unto them, and ſeek it at their Hands.

And if in this laſt Combat, the Witneſſes be ſingled out as the one Party, and by Witneſſes be meant only ſuch faithful Chriſtians and Profeſſors, as do, in reſpect of their Godlineſs and Sincerity, hold forth an eminent Teſtimony and Witneſs, above that which others of the croud of common Profeſſors do, and ſo not Men of Learning, but of Holineſs and Zeal, are they who are here ſaid to be the real Tormenters of theſe their Enemies: then ſurely in that Part of the Reformed Churches, where ſuch Witneſſes are chiefly found, who do continue eminently to hold forth ſuch a kind of powerful Teſtimony as Holy Men (for this is a Teſtimony of Holineſs, not of Learning) their Fore-fathers (who were killed before them for the ſame Cauſe) have done; ſurely there eſpecially will be the Seat of this War, and the Field where this Combat is to be fought.

Now then, look generally over (almoſt) all the Reformed Churches; and how few of ſuch Witneſſes, with difference from the common Croud, do appear amongſt them; the Fire, the Heat of thoſe Godly Men, their firſt Reformers (which is the thing that ſhould torment theſe Enemies at laſt) being gone, and the Light only remaining; which gives but a faint, cold, and dull Teſtimony, and which theſe Enemies do therefore deſpiſe. Only in the Witneſſes of Great Britain, both the Light and Heat of Religion have been kept up and encreaſed; and among them only hath the Profeſſion of the Power of Godlineſs been continued, with difference from the croud of common Profeſſors. And (according to what appears in view) more of ſuch True Witneſſes now in theſe laſt Days, (wherein this Slaughter is to fall out) are to be found in it, and belonging unto it, than in all the Reformed Churches beſides; and that, according to the Teſtimony which they of thoſe Churches (who in theſe Times of Scattering have come hither for Refuge) have, and do give.

And ſurely, the Place of this killing the Witneſſes, muſt be where moſt Witneſſes are. And ſo, that Kingdom may be deſigned more than any other; as in which alſo more eminently are found thoſe laſt ſort of Champions for the Beaſt, who receive only the Number of his Name; who yet ſhall be the chief Executioners of this laſt Slaughter, and who are to be overcome laſt of all the Beaſt's Company, before the fifth Vial on the Seat of the Beaſt, as chap. 15. tells us.

Add unto this, this Conjecture upon Dan. 11. ult. which Chapter, from verſ. 36. hath Graſerus excellently, and Mr. Mede, in his Diſcourſe of Dæmons, upon upon 1 Tim. 4. 1, 2. applyed unto the Pope; who is that King there mentioned; and whom Antiochus (whose Story is contained in the former Part of the Chapter) typified out. But the larger Interpretation and Application of all from vers. 36. I leave to be fetch'd from them; and shall only mention my own Conjecture (as supposing their Interpretation good) upon the last Verses, unto the Purpose in hand. It is evident, that the Angel's scope there, is, (as I find others to acknowledg) to shew the issue of the Beast's last Expedition against the Reformed Churches, after their Reformation, and before his End; and so to denote out this last War here propheſied of, namely, Antichrist his accomplishing to scatter the Power of the Holy People, (as before hath been at large related).

Now when he shall go forth in this his last War, in such Fury and Rage, with a purpose utterly to destroy; the main Event and Issue of that Expedition of his, is made to be this, That he shall plant the Tabernacles of his Palace between the Seas, in the glorious Holy Mountains: Yet he shall come to his end, and none shall help him, vers. ult.

The Allusion in that Phrase [the Holy Mountain] is to that of Sion, where the Temple stood; which therefore in the usual Phrase of the Prophets, is often put to express the true Church; which is the Mountain of the Lord. This Mount, and the Temple thereon, was erected in Europe by the Northern Reformation mentioned vers. 44. which he shall prevail against, and tread down, and place the Tents of his Throne upon it (or some part of it) again. This Usserius, and others, acknowledg to be the meaning of the place. And so, it agrees with what this Angel (who came here to expound what he had told Daniel) affirms, That the Outward Court, now at last, was to be given up unto the Gentiles.

That which to Graserus occasioned the greatest puzzle in the Interpretation of this Verse, was this phrase which is added, to describe the situation of this Mountain, [inter Maria] [between the Seas] that there the Pope should at last replant his Ancient Throne; He stands wondering, why to the mention of 'Mount Sion, (which nakedly (says he) without this addition, had been 'enough) there should be subjoined [between the Seas]; which (says he) 'hath puzled all Interpreters. For Sion stood not between two Seas. And 'therefore (says he) those words must be added by way of difference and di-'stinction from the Holy Mountain: By the Type and Name of which, the Angel had yet expressed the State of the Church. And if his scope had been thereby to set forth the Church Universally throughout Europe; then the bare mention of the Holy Mountain, (as chap. 14. 1. it is expressed by) had been sufficient, and suitable enough unto so general a scope. But it being with this addition of difference concerning the scituation, that it was [between the Seas] or [among the Seas]; it therefore must more particularly design out some Church or People of God, whose Place and Habitation is for the Scituation of it, thus between the Seas, and thereby singled out from the rest.

Luther, He makes it to point out Rome, (which is the Seat of the Beast) which stands in Italy, between the Adriatique and the Tirkene Seas. But his Ancient Seat (Rome) cannot be here meant; for, vers. 44. he is said to go forth, as from that his old Seat; and to plant, as noting out this to be a new-gained Seat, which was not the ordinary Place of his Residence, as Rome is.

Graserus gives a touch, that Germany may be intended, as that Place which should again be subdued unto the Pope, as lying between the Baltick and the German Oceans; which it does but very remotely; and only the Northern Parts of it, being bounded with, and touching upon those Seas.

But I rather fear, that these British Islands are here intended; in that they so eminently, above all other Places of the Churches Reformed, and with difference also from all others, do stand between the Seas, even wholly among Seas; [Penitus toto divisos Orbe Britannos] which Islands likewise God hath made the eminent Seat of the Church in these latter Days; and which he hath loved above all the Habitations of Jacob.

And

Chap. 6.

And in that the Angel there calls this Mountain, in an high and tranſcendent Phraſe, yet of further difference, [the Mountain of Delights of Holineſs] or as Junius turns it, [Mons Decoris Sancti] [the Mountain of holy Comelineſs]; it ſeems in ſome way of peculiarity from others, even in that reſpect alſo, to note out a Place, which for Holineſs ſhould more eminently be God's Delight, and comely in his Eyes; where he ſhould have a moſt Holy People, and which he ſhould make a Land of Uprightneſs, where his Majeſty and Glory ſhould more eminently ſhine. Which place, notwithſtanding, (for the Tryal of the Witneſſes in it) God ſhall again give up unto the Power of Antichriſt, there to plant the Tabernacle of his Palace, or Throne, (or his Clergy, as Graſerus reads it); even as Nebuchadnezzar did his Throne at Taph-hannes, when he had conquered Egypt, as a ſign of that his Victory. By the Conqueſt of which Kingdoms, and regaining them unto him, he ſhall ſeem ſo rooted in his Ancient Power, that in hope of all the reſt, the Whore ſhall ſing, I am now no Widow, and that, juſt before her fall. And yet this prevailing, is but a preparation to Antichriſt's Ruin: For it follows, there in Daniel, Yet he ſhall come to his End, and none ſhall help him. Which notes out, as that this is to be done juſt before his End; ſo alſo, that that regaining his Power ſhould ſeem ſo to ſtrengthen him, that he ſhould be, as it were, out of the danger of Ruin, and as for ever ſecure.

But this his ſuddain Victory, is but as the planting of a Tent, or Tabernacle, in a Field, not to ſtand paſt three Years and a half, though that Party, and their Abettors, do in their Hopes think they build for Eternity. But it being of Man's, not God's planting, it ſhall therefore come to nothing; for every Plant which the Father plants not, ſhall be rooted up.

CHAP. VII.

The Riſing of the VVitneſſes; from Verſ. 11. to the 15*th of Chap.* 11.

SECT. I.

Three Things in General obſerved. Chriſt's Reſurrection the Pattern of this. The Proportions between their Killing and Riſing. This Reſurrection a Shadow of that to come.

I Come now to their Riſing again, and to thoſe Events which do accompany it.

Three Things in the general I obſerve about it.

I. That the particular Circumſtances of it, are like to thoſe in Chriſt's Reſurrection and Aſcenſion; this Riſing of theirs being an Alluſion to that Reſurrection of his, (as was before ſaid); and Chriſt Myſtical being in theſe laſt Days, when his viſible Kingdom approacheth, more eminently to be made conformable unto Chriſt Perſonal, both in his Death and Reſurrection, the laſt of his Acts done on Earth before that his Kingdom then. Yea, and (for our comfort) although there are ſome evident Characters of likeneſs to that his laſt Paſſion, mentioned in this their Killing here: Yet there are more apparent ones of a conformity unto his Reſurrection, in this their Riſing again. The ſeveral Particulars whereof, will ariſe to our obſervation in the Explication. This but in the General.

II. That God hath ſo recorded the more eminent Circumſtances of this their Reſurrection, that they do, as it were, anſwer unto thoſe more eminent Circumſtances noted in their Killing; and this, as it were, a Reward ſuited and proportioned unto the debaſement in the other. For,

1. Then they are ſaid to be killed; and, now a Spirit of [Life] is ſaid to come into them.

2. Then they are ſaid to lie dead in the Street; and now they are ſaid to ſtand upon their Feet.

3. Then theſe their Enemies, or Falſe-hearted Friends, are ſaid to ſee them, either as rejoicing over them, or at leaſt-wiſe as not helping them: but now at their Reſurrection, it is twice noted and indigitated, that their Enemies ſaw them, and that, both when they Aroſe and Aſcended. So verſ. 11, 12. both which Acts are done in the very Face of their Enemies, the more to ſpight and vex them. Yea, and (as Pareus obſerves) the Greek word for [See] is here changed; for as there it imported, that they then ſaw them with pleaſure, ſo here it intimates, that they now behold them with horror.

4. Then their Enemies rejoiced over them, but now great Fear is ſaid to fall upon their Enemies who beheld them.

5. Then they were expoſed to ſuch contempt, that their Bodies were not ſuffered to be buried (which is a degree of Humiliation beyond Death; but now inſtead of this, they have therefore a farther degree of Glory put upon them, beyond reſtoring to Life. A Voice calls them up to Heaven, and they aſcend, that is, to a far more glorious Condition than they had before.

And,

And, 6. Their Enemies are now killed in their ſtead; as being ſacrificed unto them, for their killing them before ſeven thouſand of their Enemies were ſlain, verſ. 13.

And all this is but to make the Parallel of their Reſurrection and Aſcenſion, unto that of Chriſt, the more full. For ſo it was in Chriſt; the lower he Deſcended, he higher he Aſcended, Epheſ. 4. 9. Now that he aſcended, what is it but that alſo he firſt deſcended into the lower parts of the Earth? And (as 'Dr. Ames hath well obſerved) the degrees of his Exaltation were anſwerably 'oppoſite to the degrees of his Humiliation; his riſing from the Dead, being 'oppoſed to his Death; and his aſcenſion into Heaven, to his deſcent into the 'Grave, and going down to Hell, (or into the State of Death); and his ſit-'ting at God's right Hand, to his remaining in the Grave, and in the Eſtate 'of Death.

The Third Thing which in General I obſerve, is, That in this their Reſurrection, there is a fore-running Shadow of that laſt great Victory, which brings in the Kingdom of Chriſt, and of his Saints, for the Thouſand Years. Of the glorious beginning whereof, under the ſeventh Trumpet enſuing, verſ. 15. this is ordained to be the Dawning.

But the Particulars thereof I ſhall obſerve, when I have diſpatch'd the Particular Interpretation. It is enough now, in General to have obſerved it.

SECT. II.

The ſeveral Steps and Degrees of their Reſurrection and Aſcenſion.

1. THE firſt ſtep of their Reſurrection, is the entring of the Spirit of Life from God into them; even as in Chriſt's Reſurrection, the coming of his Soul into his Body, was the Principle of that his future Life. And ſuch a Principle this ſame [Spirit] of Life here imports. And ſo here in this Allusion, it notes out their full reſtoring to their former State; even to that Life and Power which at any time before their Killing they had had. This Reſurrection here is not to be underſtood of the Reſurrection of their Natural Bodies; which is not to begin till the thouſand Years, (yet 'tis the Reſemblance and Shadow of it); but it ſhall be a Riſing of the Perſons of theſe Witneſſes who ſhall ſurvive this ſhort Storm, or of their Succeſſors ſtanding up in their Cauſe. That whereas they were laid as Men utterly dead, during theſe three Years and a half, in reſpect of any active Life of Prophecy; and partly, it may be, through the diſcouragements and baſe Fears of their own Spirits, they lay too ſtill and quiet, (like dead Men) and ſuffered their Enemies to carry it, by their not oppoſing them ſo boldly as they ought to have done: Yet now, a bold and ſteeled Reſolution, to lie ſtill no longer, together with an active Spirit, comes upon them, and they ſtand up upon their Feet, and make Head againſt their Enemies, and ſo, in that Senſe, are ſaid to riſe again from the Dead, as it were, namely comparatively, to their dejected Eſtate during thoſe three Years and an half. And as for thoſe who were bodily ſlain by their Enemies the Gentiles, during that War and Slaughter; They may be ſaid to riſe in their Succeſſors, who continue to profeſs the ſame Cauſe. For the Saints are a Holy Nation, and Community, and what the next Succeſſion doth, through the Prayers or Sufferings of a former Generation, that former Generation is ſaid to do; as Iſa. 58. 12. and ſo John Baptiſt roſe up in the Spirit of Elias; and when Chriſt preached, they thought John was riſen from the Dead. And this Spirit of Life is ſaid to be from God, ἐκ τοῦ θεοῦ, as noting out a more than ordinary Hand of God therein, and a ſpecial demonſtration of his Power, ſuch as he put forth, when he raiſed up Jeſus Chriſt from the Dead, as Epheſ. 1. 18, 19. and Rom. 1. 4. If in any thing

PART II. Chriſt was declared the Son of God with Power, it was in his Reſurrection from the Dead. And ſuch a Power ſhall raiſe up theſe Witneſſes.

II. They ſtand upon their Feet: that is,

1. As in their former Station or State.

2. As Men erect, and taking Heart, their Cauſe being juſt, though before condemned.

And, 3. as ready to defend it, and as Men able and reſolved now to confront their Enemies; which ſtrikes a mighty dread into their guilty Conſciences. [Great fear fell upon them that ſaw them]; that is, a diſheartnedneſs and dejection of Mind. Their Hearts begin to ſink and die, at the Witneſſes firſt beginning to live: For they ſee this Prophecy, beyond all expectation, fulfilled, that (as Chriſt foretold he ſhould riſe again the third Day, ſo (it being generally foretold) that) theſe Witneſſes ſhould riſe after three Years and an half; which they (as theſe Phariſees) had ſlighted: But now (think they) ſurely the Ruin, both of us, and of our Cauſe, will follow. So the Hearts of Haman's Friends miſgave them, when they ſaw him begin to fall before Mordecai. And now may the Church well begin to ſay, Rejoice not againſt me, O mine Enemy; when I fall and lie in the Street, I ſhall ariſe: —Then ſhe that is mine Enemy ſhall ſee it, and ſhame ſhall cover her; — and ſhe ſhall be troden down as Mire in the Streets, (never to riſe again) as you have it Mic. 7. 8, 10.

Or (it may be) this great Fear that is here ſaid to fall upon them that ſaw them, is meant of thoſe ſtanders-by of the Peoples, Kindreds, Tongues, and Nations, that had before ſeen their dead Bodies, but relieved them not, though they were Friends unto them. Upon whom therefore this great Fear and Reverence of God and his Truth in theſe Witneſſes doth fall, ſo as now to take part with them, and be on their ſide; being moved thereunto by the marvellous Spirit of Life, and zealous Courage, which God (according to the Prophecy which before run of them) did now cauſe to come upon them. The word [θεωρεῖν] implies, a fixed diligent obſervance and intention of mind; ſuch as, upon ſeeing a wonderful Work of God, we uſe to have. They ſee the Finger of God in this, and that makes them to fear and dread his Power and Majeſty. For in that ſenſe we often find in Scripture, that upon ſome great and eminent Deliverance, or Work of an Almighty and Divine Power put forth, Fear is ſaid to fall upon the Beholders; ſo Jer. 33. 9. and elſewhere.

III. As Chriſt Aſcended up to Heaven in a Cloud; ſo alſo theſe being called up to Heaven by a great Voice from thence, ſaying, Come up hither. Where, by Heaven, the Place into which they are called, is meant, a condition more honourable and glorious than ever they had before, and which, comparatively to their former eſtate, is a Heaven. For now they are about to caſt off their Sackcloth for ever. And again, as Chriſt roſe, to die no more, Rom. 6. 9. ſo ſhall theſe; they ſhall die no more, (as Men that aſcend to Heaven do not). And thus, as Chriſt ſaid of himſelf, Luke 24. 26. It became him to ſuffer, and ſo to enter into his Glory: ſo it may be ſaid of theſe. So that, by Heaven here, is not ſimply meant the Church, (as often in this Book it is): For theſe that riſe, are of the True Church already, and were ſo even when they lay dead: But it is meant of their following Condition, which for Liberty and Honour ſhall be as a Church in Heaven, in compariſon to what it was before; which was but as a Church on Earth.

Thus [Aſcending into Heaven] is uſed to expreſs an obtaining of new Power, Freedom, and Glory, as Iſa. 14. 12, 13. And this is done in recompence of that Contempt which they lay in before, eſpecially juſt before, when they lay Dead. And indeed (as I take it) the dawning of the Glory of the New Heaven, and New Earth approaching, begins firſt in this Glorious Condition, which the Church after this Riſing of the Witneſſes, ſhall within a while be raiſed up unto, and quietly enjoy, (as thoſe in Heaven do) whoſe State is deſcribed, Chap. 19. I ſaw a great Multitude in Heaven, &c. Of which hereafter. And thus much of their Reſurrection and Aſcenſion it ſelf.

SECT.

SECT. III.

The Events that accompany their Reſurrection.

NOw further; As there were certain Events which accompanied Chriſt's Reſurrection, ſo the like do accompany theirs. When Chriſt aroſe, there was an Earth-quake, which affrighted the Souldiers that watch'd him; and ſo was there here likewiſe, as verſ. 13.

Now to explain what is here to be underſtood by this Earthquake.

1. For the Time of it; it is ſaid to be at the ſame Hour, namely, with this their Reſurrection, or beginning to riſe; and ſo may ſeem to be mentioned as one of the Means which did make way for, and facilitate this their Riſing, by removing the Impediments of it, and, as it were, rolling the Stone away, that ſo theſe Witneſſes might riſe from under the Power of their Enemies; which former obtained Power of theirs, this Earth-quake doth ſcatter and diſſolve.

Now whereas their Reſurrection and Aſcenſion, are both together mentioned in verſ. 11, and 12; and then, after both comes in the mention of this Earthquake, verſ. 13. [There was the ſame hour, &c.] Yet (as I take it) this follows not, that all of them (Reſurrection, Aſcenſion, and Earth-quake) were at the ſame Time, or Hour, together: For their Reſurrection and Aſcenſion are two diſtinct Degrees of their Exaltation, (as in Chriſt they were) and therefore may not ſo immediately follow one after the other (as in Chriſt they did not; his Aſcenſion being forty Days after his Reſurrection) and yet they are both recorded and ſet together, becauſe they are Things of a Kind and ſort; as pertaining both of them unto the Exaltation of the Witneſſes. So that, for this Paſſage that follows, verſ. 13. that there was an Earthquake the ſame Hour; It may perhaps not refer to the Time of both (namely, their Riſing and Aſcenſion) but unto the beginning of the Time of their firſt Riſing, as an Occurrence that fell out the ſame Hour when this great Turn began; or rather indeed, as the Way and Means God firſt uſed to remove Impediments, for the ſetting free of theſe Witneſſes, and reſtoring them unto their former State and Life.

2. For the Thing it ſelf, and the Place where this Earthquake ſhall be, and what ſhall be the Effects of it: This is expreſſed in what follows: The tenth part of the City fell; and of the Names of Men were ſlain 7000. Great Earthquakes have oft-times ſhook down Cities and Buildings, &c. and many Men have often periſhed by them. And ſuch ſhall be the Effects of this here.

SECT. IV.

The Fall of the tenth Part of the City, What? Whether thereby be meant the Ruin of Rome, (the Fifth Vial)?

BUt the main Queſtion is; What is meant by [the tenth part of the City] and what by [the Names of Men]?

Mr. Mede thinks, that by the tenth part of the City, is meant Rome it ſelf, and its Ruin, by the fall of that tenth part: As being that which ſhall fall out immediately upon, or at the ſame Hour with this Riſing and Aſcending of the Witneſſes; and ſo to be all one with the fifth Vial. And his Reaſon is, becauſe this being an overthrow of the Popiſh Party, who are the Enemies of theſe Witneſſes, (for the Beaſt kills them) it muſt therefore be reduced to one of the Vials: and to which of them, but to the Fifth? for four are mentioned before, in verſ. 5, 6, 7. and the Sixth ſeems to be all one with that which follows, verſ. 14. when it is ſaid, The ſecond Woe is paſt: and then the ſeventh Vial is all one with the ſeventh Trumpet. And this Interpretation he thus makes out.

Rome, which now is the Seat of the Beaſt, being but the tenth part of Ancient and Imperial Rome, (as Hiſtory and Chorography tells us) the ſcope therefore of the Angel here muſt be, to ſhew how that Relique of Rome before brought to a tenth part, by the former Wars and Trumpets, chap. 8, & 9. ſhould now wholly and for ever be defaced and overthrown. And ſo (accordingly) the Names of Men that are ſaid to be ſlain, he makes to be thoſe Dignities, (haply, Eccleſiaſtical Dignities, ſays he) whereby Men are ranked in Italy whilſt Rome ſtands, as Cardinals, Arch-Biſhops, Biſhops, &c. the Merchants who in Italy have enjoyed ſo great Traffique, by reaſon of this Whore's Merchandiſe, theſe are together, with the Fall of the City, to be depoſed, and civilly to die (as the Witneſſes before had done) this Seat of the Beaſt now falling into the Proteſtants Hands. (An Interpretation, learned, and ingenious).

But that which hath carried my Thoughts to ſome other diſtinct Event from this, (though this ultimately may be intended) hath been the Obſervation of that ſo different Effect, mentioned verſ. 13. as wrought upon the Hearts of the Remnant of thoſe (and ſo of the ſame Company with them) that are ſlain with the fall of the City, in this Earthquake; together with that other contrary Effect, which the full and fatal Ruin of the Seat of the Beaſt (under the fifth Vial) is ſaid to have upon the Remnant of the Beaſt's Company there, as the Event of that Vial. Here the Remnant of Men that are not Slain, are ſaid to be affrighted, and to give Glory to the God of Heaven; but there, upon the execution of that fifth Vial, in the height of it, it is ſaid, They gnawed their Tongues for pain, and blaſphemed the God of Heaven, becauſe of their Torments, and their Sores; and repented them not of their Deeds; ſo chap. 16. 10, 11. Now if we interpret this, their giving Glory to God, here in this Chapter, in the loweſt and moſt diminiſhing ſenſe that can be ſuppoſed, and as not ariſing to true Repentance; yet at leaſt it implies an acknowledgment of God to his praiſe, (ſuch as Achan made) though happly forced, and out of fear conſtrained; and if it be ſo taken, yet it is utterly oppoſite to blaſpheming the God of Heaven, which theſe other feeling his Hand, (upon the Ruin of Rome) are ſaid to do: This Remnant here (chap. 11.) being ſuch as were, through fear, drawn in to be of the Popiſh Party, and therefore do now repent.

So that, it rather ſeems to me to be ſome ſpecial Occurrence, more nearly and properly belonging unto the Witneſſes Riſing and Aſcenſion, as immediately making way unto them both, in thoſe Parts of Europe, where the Witneſſes had chiefly been killed; where, for the helping forward their Reſurrection, God cauſeth this Earthquake, and mighty Commotion of the State of Things, and of the Peoples Hearts. That whereas through a forced Conſent and yielding, the Popes Power had again been entertained by that tenth Part of the City, for the Killing the Witneſſes; they now do caſt off that Power, with a mighty Commotion and Inſurrection, and ſo proceed to ruin the Oppoſite Party unto the Witneſſes, who were the Inſtruments of that former Slaughter. Of which Party, the Remnant unſlain do, as Men affrighted, give Glory unto God, and turn back again to embrace the Truth, and acknowledg God to be in theſe Witneſſes, and in their Cauſe.

So that, although this may, and ſhall end in the Ruin of Rome, (which is the higheſt Effect of the fifth Vial) (for this Reſurrection and Aſcenſion of the Witneſſes, are truly the preparation unto it); yet this other Paſſage of the Earthquake, &c. that here is ſaid to be the ſame Hour with their Riſing, is rather to be underſtood of the Means, or Thing, making way unto that their Reſurrection. So that, this Inſurrection, or Riſing of the People in the tenth Part of the City, (which is meant by the Earthquake) is the preparation unto their Reſurrection, which ends in the Ruin of Rome. The Scope of the Holy Ghoſt here, being to ſhew, what did properly and peculiarly concern the Riſing of the Witneſſes, as the Means to it. Yet ſo, as ſtill this Earthquake here, and fall of the tenth part of the City, are reducible unto that fifth Vial, as a degree unto it. And ſo, that fifth Vial may alſo be ultimately intended in this Paſſage recorded of the Witneſſes Riſing, as the preparation unto it. Thus in the Interpretation of the Vials, I ſhewed, that there may be many Sprinklings of the ſame Vial, both long before it come to its ἀκμὴ and Vigour, and alſo after; all which are, notwithſtanding, to be reduced unto that Vial of the kind whereof they are, or unto which they are either Preparations or Appendixes. Chap. 7.

Paſſage

Yea, further, The word [City] being taken in a double conſideration in this Book, one (more ſtrict) for the City of Rome it ſelf, another (larger) for the Juriſdiction of that City, (as was before obſerved); accordingly may the tenth part, both of the one and the other, be here meant, as the one is ſucceſſively to follow and fall after the other. And ſo both Interpretations may aptly be here intended; the Fall of the one, being as a degree unto the Fall of the other, which is the height of that fifth Vial. Unto this I do the more encline, for that ſuch a double Scope and Aim, in things of equivocal ſignification, I find the Holy Ghoſt often-times to have in his Eye. So in the Vials, (as I before ſhewed); and ſo I believe in this Paſſage, and Event. So that, I exclude not that Interpretation of Mr. Mede's, but do only join another with it, though I think that may be mainly and ultimately intended.

SECT. V.

(More Particularly); that by [a Tenth Part of the City] is meant, one of the Ten Kingdoms of Europe. How it is ſaid to Fall. The Earth-quake in it, What? The Names of Men, What? and their Killing.

NOw to come to a more Particular Interpretation of this Place.

1. By the tenth Part of the City, I underſtand, (as Mr. Brightman before me) ſome one tenth part of Europe; which as it all once belonged to the Juriſdiction of the City of Rome, (and is in this Book called Ten Kingdoms), ſo now again, upon the Gentiles, or Idolatrous Papiſts, their recovering the Outward Court, ſhall now at laſt, more or leſs, come under the Juriſdiction of that City, but eſpecially, or at leaſt this tenth Part of it here intended; where moſt faithful Witneſſes ſhall be found, and where moſt of them ſhall be triumphed over and ſlain, ſhall, during theſe three Years and a half, become a Part of the City again; and ſo is called a tenth Part of the City; City being put here (as it often is in this Book) for the Extent of the Juriſdiction of the City of Rome, which had theſe ten European Kingdoms by Charter allotted unto it, chap. 17. and unto which theſe Kingdoms are a ſecond time to agree to give up their Power. In one of which Ten, or in the tenth Part of the whole, the Witneſſes ſhall firſt begin to riſe; and therein ſhall this Earthquake accompany their Reſurrection. This tenth Part of the City may perhaps be all one with that Street of the City, mentioned verſ. 8.

2. By the Earth-quake here (which is ſaid to be a great One) is meant (as ſtill in this Book it is) a great concuſſion or ſhaking of States, Politiques, or Eccleſiaſtical, (for of either, or of both, it is uſed). Thus under the ſixth Seal, the great Alteration wrought in the Roman Empire, when it turned from Heatheniſm to Chriſtianity, brought about by the Power of Conſtantine, (with the depoſing thoſe Heatheniſh Emperors, Captains, &c. and altering the Face of the Empire's Religion) is called an Earth-quake, Chap. 6. So that, the like mighty Commotion, with an alteration of the Face of Things, (either Civil or Eccleſiaſtick) ſhall fall out in a tenth Part of the City, and ſhall accompany, or uſher in this Riſing of the Witneſſes.

Now,

PART II.

Now, 3. by, and through this Earth-quake's falling thus out in a tenth Part of the City, this tenth Part of it is so shaken, that it falls; that is, ceaseth to be a Part of the City, or to belong unto its Jurisdiction any longer; or (which is all one) falls off (as we say) from being of the Number of those that give their Power to the Beast. Which if it prove to be any of the Protestant States, that should yet again (as was said) embrace the Beast's Power, and come under his Jurisdiction; or in order to the bringing in again of the Pope's Power, slay these Witnesses, and so thereby become a Part of that City, and be reckoned as pertaining unto its Jurisdiction; yet now revolting from under the Power of this City, and recoyling again through this Earth-quake, it may truly be said to fall; namely, qua Urbis Pars est, as it is a Part of the City, which it before was, but now ceaseth so to be, it now utterly renouncing either to belong to its Jurisdiction, or to be of its Party any longer. And as Earth-quakes are from inward Motions in the Bowels of the Earth, so this here may seem to arise from within that Kingdom it self; whether through the Supream Magistrate's beginning to hate the Whore, (as the Promise is, chap. 17.) or the People's abominating the Cruelty and Contempt put upon the Witnesses and their Cause; their Consciences having been enlightned in the Truth, while themselves were troden under, as the Outward Court, by these Gentiles, and so they come to shake off that Yoke; and the Witnesses having a Spirit of Life now come into them, these take Heart, and join with them and their Cause: Whether (I say) through the working of either, or both of these, I cannot determine; but I think, through both; For the ruin of the City (unto which this is at least the preparation) is to be effected through God's changing one of the ten King's Hearts so to hate the Whore, as to eat her Flesh, and burn her with Fire, Chap. 17. And this Voice speaking unto the Witnesses out of Heaven, Mr. Mede conjectures to be that of Supream Authority, with which the People also shall join; for an Earth-quake certainly notes out a Commotion in the People and Nations.

4. The Effect of this Earth-quake, and Fall of this tenth Part of the City, is the killing seven thousand of the Names of Men, (so it is in the Original). A Phrase, which as thus joining [Names] and [Men] together, is not so to be found in the whole Book of God. By these [Names of Men] are certainly denoted out those, (be it interpreted of whomsoever) that had been the Witnesses Enemies, and that had the great Agency and Hand in killing them, and in subjecting those Nations unto the Power of the Beast.

Mr. Mede conceives it to be, ὀνόματα ἀνθρώπων. [Names of Men] for [Men of Names] according to the usual Phrase of Scripture, (as [Riches of Grace] for [Rich Grace], &c.)

Now by [Men of Names] in Scripture, is meant Men of Office, Title, and Dignity. So Numb. 16. 2. those 250 Men, who were Princes of the Congregation, and in Corah's Conspiracy consumed, are called, Men of Name; (so in the Hebrew) that is, Men of Title and Dignity.

You heard before, how the last sort of Enemies unto these Witnesses, under the fourth Vial, were set forth unto us by the Type of those very Opposers of Moses and Aaron, who were then the two Witnesses of the Lord, (as was shewn in the Exposition of the 5*th* Verse of this Chapter). Now as there, in Numbers, the Spiritual Punishment of many of them, for their Enmity against the Witnesses, is noted out by that Fire, which then devoured them: So here a Civil Punishment falls upon these, for having thus killed these Witnesses, themselves are to be killed (happly) by being bereft of their Names and Titles, which are to be rooted out for ever, and condemned to perpetual forgetfulness.

This Mr. Mede carries to Ecclesiastical Dignities under the Papacy, those Latiales Episcopatus, &c. And for the number 7000, it is an Indefinite Number, and put for Many, (as the usual manner of the Scripture is). And certainly, if these Names here do prove to be Ecclesiastical Dignities and Titles, the Phrase here used fits them, and is most proper for them; for they use it of Themselves, and when they would in a word or two comprehend all the several Ranks and Orders Orders of the Hierarchical Miniſtry, from the higheſt to the loweſt, (which for them particularly to enumerate were too tedious) they involve all in this indefinite Expreſſion, [by what [Names] or Titles ſoever dignified or diſtinguiſhed]. Chap. 7.

Now as they call their Dignities Names, ſo the Holy Ghoſt (you ſee) calls them Names [of Men]; that is, meerly Humane, of Man's Inſtitution, and not of God's: For ſo are moſt of their Offices themſelves, and (in a manner) the Names of them all; they being not ſuch Names as the Holy Ghoſt teacheth us to call them by, but ſuch as the Canons and Conſtitutions of Men have impoſed. And this may indeed be the true Reaſon why this Phraſe, uſed no where elſe, is yet uſed here, now when the ruin of the Pope's Creatures comes to be mentioned, as moſt fitly, by [Names of Men]; denoting forth that Evil and Error of theirs, which is one true Cauſe of their Ruin. But now for Civil Offices and Titles, for them to be of Man, (that is, to have their Riſe from Men) is proper to them; and therefore they are called Creations, or Ordinances of Men, [ἀνθρωπίνη κτίσει, &c.] 1 Pet. 2. 13. and this, in oppoſition or diſtinction unto Eccleſiaſtical Offices. Whereas Eccleſiaſtick Offices and Names ſhould all (for the Foundation of the Calling and Office it ſelf) be of God, and not of Men. They are of another Building and Conſtitution, although Man deſigns the Perſons to them, and that too, in a way of God's Appointment. Thus this Phraſe [of Man] is uſed of this ſort of Offices, and to this very purpoſe, in other Places of Scripture. So when Paul ſpeaks of his Office of Apoſtleſhip, and his being deſigned to it, Gal. 1. 1. he uſeth this Phraſe, [An Apoſtle neither of Man, nor by Man]; that is, my Office it ſelf is not of Man's appointment, nor was I put into it by Man, that is, deſigned to it by Man's Choice. And although that Office of his was an Extraordinary Office; yet other Ordinary Miniſters Offices are Divine for the Inſtitution of them, and in that reſpect, not of Man, though by Man (that is, the Church) their Perſons be deſigned unto thoſe Offices. For Chriſt is Lord of theſe Adminiſtrations or Offices, (as you have it, 1 Cor. 12. 4, 5.) and ſo they hold of him as truly as Giſts (in the ſame place are ſaid to) do of the Spirit, and Operations of the Father. And Men are no more to aſſume to appoint Church-Offices, than they are able to give Gifts, or to bleſs thoſe Gifts with Operations; and when they do ſo, they derogate from Chriſt the Lord as truly, as they ſhould from the Holy Ghoſt, in attempting to beſtow (upon ſuch as Simon Magus, who deſired it) the Gifts of the Spirit. No, it is God, who hath ſet [ἔθετο] (as you have it, verſ. 28. of that Chapter) Teachers as well as Apoſtles in the Church. Paul there reckons up Ordinary Officers, as well as Extraordinary; for the inſtitution of the one is from God as well as the other.

Now therefore, when the Holy Ghoſt here ſpeaks of thoſe falſe Names and Titles of Church-Officers, which Chriſt appointed not; he diſclaims them from holding of him; but calls them Names of Men, as being of Humane Creation, whenas they ſhould be only of Divine Inſtitution. And ſo being Plants which God the Father planted not, they are here ſaid to be rooted out of this one Kingdom or State, where (it ſeems) they had been the Cauſes and Authors of all this Miſchief and Cruelty againſt the Witneſſes; and which through the efficacy of their working to uphold their Names, had again been become the tenth Part of the City; but now, by this Earthquake, falls from being any longer under that Juriſdiction. And together with it are all thoſe Steeples and Cathedrals, and all thoſe Names and Titles that belong thereto, utterly ſhaken down alſo; it being a juſt Puniſhment and Reward of their Conſpiracy againſt the Witneſſes, and agency in their Killing.

PART II.

SECT. VI.

What Tenth Part of Europe, or which of the Ten Kingdoms it is moſt probable that this Earthquake and Reſurrection of the Witneſſes ſhall fall out in.

NOw which of theſe Ten Kingdoms, or of the Ten States in Europe, and what tenth Part thereof, ſhall firſt have this great Priviledg, as a bleſſed handſel to the reſt that follow, is not hard to conjecture, though it be raſhneſs peremptorily to determine: for God maketh new choice of Nations and Churches therein, beyond the line and reach of our Conjectures; and his ways are paſt finding out; neither can the Face of his former Proceedings with any of the Churches, give us any certain and infallible deſignment, which of them he will do moſt good unto.

I will therefore only caſt in ſuch Conjectures, as according to the Face of the Sky in the Churches of this preſent Age, do ſeem to prognoſticate where, and in what Parts this Heaven (which the Witneſſes ſhall aſcend up into) is like firſt to clear up in, from under theſe Clouds, and from out of this Hour of Darkneſs to come upon the World.

1. The Saints and Churches belonging unto the Kingdom of France, God hath made a wonder unto me in all his Proceedings towards them, firſt and laſt; and there would ſeem ſome great and ſpecial Honour reſerved for them yet at laſt. For it is certain, that the firſt Light of the Goſpel, by that firſt and ſecond Angel's Preaching, chap. 14 (which laid the Foundation of Antichriſt's Ruin) was out from among them; namely, thoſe of Lions and other Places in France. And they bore and underwent the great Heat of that Morning of Perſecution which was as great (if not greater) than any ſince. And beſides, the Churches of France have ever ſince had as great a ſhare in Perſecutions; yea, greater than any other Churches. And though it be well nigh 500 Years ſince they began firſt to ſeparate from Antichriſt, and they ſtill continue a Glorious Church unto this day: Yet they never had that great Honour and Priviledg, (which other Churches have been ſo bleſt with) as to have a Supream Magiſtrate profeſſing their Religion; but either they have been bloody Perſecutors and Oppreſſors of them, or elſe they have apoſtatiſed from them. May it not therefore be hoped and look'd for, that their Kings in the end, ſhould be of the Number of thoſe Kings who (as you have it, Chap. 17.) are to be wrought on, to hate the Whore, and to burn her with Fire? And ſo that this Voice here, which calls theſe Witneſſes (who there have ever propheſied in Sack-cloth) up to Heaven, may proceed from one of their Kings. And ſo, as that Kingdom had the firſt great ſtroke, ſo now it ſhould have the honour to have the laſt great Stroke in the ruining of Rome?

But yet, 2. If you take a view of the Face of the preſent Condition of the Saints and Churches in Europe, as in this laſt Age (wherein theſe Things are in all likelihood to be fulfilled) it preſents it ſelf, together with a proſpect into the Times paſt alſo; and then, if you put all together, the Churches and Saints in Great Britain, and the Iſlands belonging to it, have, in my Thoughts and Conjectures, (not ſwaied unto it through Affection only, which may betray the Judgment, but through a ſerious and impartial Conſideration, and weighing of Things) more hopeful Characters upon them for this Glory, than any of the other Reformed Churches: and ſo appears the likelieſt unto me to prove the more eminent Stage, both of this great Slaughter, and alſo of the Riſing and Aſcenſion of the Witneſſes.

1. For the Ages paſt, there hath been theſe three hundred Years, as glorious a Succeſſion of Godly Witneſſes and Martyrs, as any other Nation can produce, as you may collect out of Mr. Fox's Martyrologie.

2. For

Chap. 7.

2. For the laſt fore-going Age, ſince the Times of the Reformation, and for the preſent one, the Marks of theſe Witneſſes deſigned to this Slaughter, and Glory (as in the former part of this Chapter you have had them laid forth) appear the livelieſt, and (in a manner only) upon them of Great Britain. For,

1. There hath God continued the moſt Faithful, and Called, and Choſen, (as they are called, chap. 17. 14.) who are of the Lamb's ſide, and who are together with him to overcome the Kings that ſhall hate and burn the Whore; and indeed, more of them that hold forth the Power of Religion with difference from the World, than in all the nine Kingdoms beſides. And ſurely, where moſt of the Witneſſes are, there will be their moſt eminent Slaughter; and where their greateſt Slaughter is, there will be their moſt glorious Reſurrection and Aſcenſion. For all theſe will certainly be commenſurated, and proportioned one to the other; magnitude of Sufferings, to multitude of Witneſſes; and then greatneſs of Glory, unto the greatneſs of Sufferings. Now that the Saints in theſe Kingdoms of Great Britain, are like to be the Subjects of that Slaughter, and thoſe Kingdoms made the Street, or open Market-place thereof, I ſhewed before.

2. There God hath eminently ſtirred up Men's Hearts to breath after a further and purer Reformation, and meaſuring of the Temple. And they have been put to contend for it more than all the other Churches: and this, more or leſs, ever ſince the firſt erection of the Engliſh Church at Franckford, in Queen Mary's Days. And in the contention about it, and through that bitter Perſecution for it, they even for this very Cauſe having propheſied in Sackcloth, more apparently than others in other Reformed Churches; their Spirits have encreaſed, both in Spiritual Light and Holineſs, and in Practical Knowledg in the Ways and Works of Sanctification, (by which the Worſhippers are to be meaſured); and alſo in further and clearer Light, about the Inſtitution and true Government of a Church, (by which the Temple and Altar are to be meaſured) more than all the Reformed Churches beſides have done: Who in the quiet enjoyment of much of what theſe contend to have in a further Purity, have run out almoſt into nothing but an Outward Court of Profeſſion, and a meer Form; there being few Prieſts, or true Worſhippers, that (with difference from others) do worſhip God in Power, in Spirit, and in Truth, that are to be found in the Inner Temple of their Aſſemblies. And let but the Expoſition of the ſix firſt Verſes of this Chapter be conſulted with, and that Interpretation given, be but impartially applyed to the Proteſtant Profeſſors this day in Europe; and how eminently, above the reſt, will the Condition of the Saints of Great Britain, and their conſtant Conflicts with the Beaſt and his Abetters, unto this Day, be found to fit the Meaſure thereof, and to look more like, and come nearer the Life of that face of Things therein preſented, than any other, or than all other the Reformed European Churches ſince that their firſt Reformation?

And, 3. That Deſcription of thoſe who are to be the eminent Oppoſites of the Witneſſes in theſe laſt Days, and the Authors of this their Slaughter, fits thoſe open and profeſſed Enemies of them in thoſe Kingdoms alſo. And there (if any where) are found thoſe that receive the Number of the Beaſt's Name, who, notwithſtanding hitherto have, and may yet for a while, deny his Character, and diſclaim his Name. Whom ſhall we liken this Generation unto? Or, where ſhall we find Similitudes that will ſuit them, if thoſe Deſcriptions forepaſſed in this Chapter ſuit them not? Sure, I am, if theſe be not they, they are as like as Ovum Ovo. And theſe (the Number of his Name) being the Beaſt's laſt Champions, (as appears out of chap. 13. 17. and chap. 15. 2. and are therefore there mentioned laſt) are to hold up the laſt great Quarrel of the Beaſt's Cauſe, and to fight this laſt Combat with the Witneſſes; and ſo, in this laſt Age to be overcome in open Field by them, as their Predeceſſors that had the Mark and Image of the Beaſt, have been overcome by the former Generation of Witneſſes in elder Times.

And, 4. In which of the Reformed Churches are theſe Names of Men (who are to be the Killers of the Witneſſes, and therefore are ſlain in this Earthquake in their revenge) continued but in theſe Kingdoms? And that in this (otherwiſe unuſed) Phraſe [by what Names or Titles ſoever diſtinguiſh'd]! Which Names, and Titles, and ſeveral Dignities, (take in all ſorts of them, from the higheſt to the loweſt) in all thoſe Kingdoms, may haply be found to amount to 7000, (that Number being an Indefinite kind of Number, and taken for more or leſs) even beſides ſuch Miniſters of Pariſhes and Aſſemblies, as have for the ſubſtance of their Office, a Warrant from God; though for their uſual Names, whereby they are called, they retain a Name of Man's deviſing. Yea, is not this very Thing made the Quarrel now, Whether their Ranks of Miniſtry, be Names of God, or of Men? About which the Witneſſes have, from the very beginning contended. Yea, is it not the Suſpicion, and general Opinion, that to continue, and to ſecure theſe their Names, they would again introduce Popery? And is not the Matter as thus ſtated, the very ground of their Quarrel? And hath it not long been the Ground of all the Oppoſition againſt the Witneſſes and Saints in this Kingdom; as of Silencing, Fining, Depriving them, and Depoſing them from their Miniſterial Charges, &c? leſt that (as the Phariſees ſaid of Chriſt) the People's running after the Witneſſes Doctrine, ſhould endanger their Names, Credits, and Dignities, and ſo take away their Kingdom! Hereat the Quarrel firſt began, and for that ſecret Cauſe hath all along been continued, though under other outward Pretences. Yea, this is the thing that ſhall provoke them to the enſnaring ſlaughter of theſe Witneſſes (which now approacheth): They ſay, within their Hearts, Let us kill theſe Witneſſes, and the Vineyard will be ours.

PART II.

Now upon all theſe Grounds, how fairly probable does it ſeem, that theſe Occurrences here mentioned, as thoſe that ſhall attend the Reſurrection of the Witneſſes, are to fall out in this tenth Part of Europe, and in one or both of theſe our Kingdoms above-mentioned, more eminently than in any other European State or Kingdom? And how juſt were it with God, to give up theſe Names of Men, (who have been the Enemies of his Witneſſes in all Times ſince the Reformation) to receive, at laſt, the Number of the Beaſt's Name; and under his Name and Power, to become, in the end, the killers of theſe Witneſſes, and his Trained Band, and Leaders in this his laſt War. And how wonderful and wiſe a Diſpenſation of God, will it be towards his own in theſe Kingdoms, to have reſerved the utter extirpation of theſe Names of Men, (though ſo long while contended for) unto ſuch a Time and Occaſion as this? And, that after they ſhall firſt have done this Feat and Exploit for the Beaſt, in killing the Witneſſes, they ſhould then be ſacrificed as Baal's Prieſt's were by Elias; even when theſe Witneſſes, whom they ſo perſecuted, ſhall riſe, and die no more; and ſo by this means, the ruin of theſe their Enemies, ſhould be made the Witneſſes Triumph, and the removing them out of the way by this Earthquake, made the Foundation of their Aſcenſion into Heaven: After which, the Work of meaſuring the Temple by theſe Samaritans interrupted, ſhall go forward in the Hands of Joſhua and Zerubbabel; and the People who before were afraid of thoſe Hinderers of the Work, ſhall now begin to cry Grace, Grace, unto it; and ſo, the rearing of theſe purer Churches, ſhall be upon the Rubbiſh of this Samaritan Mountain the Falſe Church.

And if the fifth Vial be alſo aimed at in this Earthquake, and the fall of Rome, the Seat of the Beaſt, (as ultimately I think it is); then how comely will it be, and ſuitable with the long expectation of God's Witneſſes and Holy Ones, that the Ruin of theſe Epiſcopal Seas, and Seats of thoſe that ſhall do Antichriſt ſuch Service, ſhould fall out with, or be a preparative unto the Fall of that great Biſhop's See, (as I ſaid in expounding the fifth Vial) and both to go down together, as alike pertaining to the ſame Building of Man's, not God's!

And laſtly; If this prove the Iſſue of God's dealings with theſe Kingdoms; How glorioufly ſhall God thereby acquit himſelf in the concluſion of all his Diſpenſations towards them? For to ſee two ſuch contrary Streams running ſo ſtrongly one againſt another in the ſame Channel, hath indeed cauſed a wonderment in the Godly-Wiſe of this laſt Age, what God means to do, and what end he means to make with England; This is that which is now the great expectation of the Churches there, how equally God means to proceed, both towards them that fear him therein, and alſo towards the oppoſite Party that are and have been been there. For it is ſtrange, even to a Miracle, (to ſee) how God upholds in the ſame ſtate, two ſuch contrary Factions and Parties; one of his own People riſing higher and higher in Spiritual Light, and in oppoſition to Superſtition, and breathing after further Purity of Holineſs, and perfection of publick Worſhip; and together with this (at the ſame time) another ſtrong Party looking towards Rome, and encreaſing in Superſtition, Darkneſs, and an impudent outfacing the Light of Truth; and that, then when it ſhineth hotteſt and cleareſt on them. Now for the All-wiſe God, who profeſſeth to have this Art and Skill, to preſerve the Righteous, and reſerve the Wicked unto Puniſhment, as Peter ſpeaks; for him now at laſt to come off ſo gloriouſly; what more equal, and ſo more likely Diſpenſation, than to run this courſe chalk'd out here in this Chapter, both towards the one and the other Party in that Kingdom, and which, according to the courſe of his dealings throughout the Scriptures, (though this Prophecy had not been left us in this Chapter concerning theſe very Times) the Godly-Wiſe might have hoped God moſt probably might intend to take? Chap. 7.

SECT. VII.

How this their Reſurrection and Aſcenſion, is a fore-running Shadow of the Reſtitution of all Things at the coming of Chriſt's Kingdom.

NOw further; Concerning this great Priviledg and Honour thus firſt befalling ſome one tenth Part of Europe; let me add this unto all that hath been ſaid of it, to make it appear yet the more glorious, That this Reſurrection of the Witneſſes, ſeems to be the beginning of the firſt great Turn of Things in the Church, haſtning to the New Jeruſalem; and ſo the very firſt dawning of the Kingdom of Chriſt approaching, and of the final Reſtitution of the Church's Liberty from under the Yoke of Antichriſt. When Chriſt aroſe, (as theſe Witneſſes here do) his Diſciples then asked him, Whether he would at that Time reſtore Iſrael? He denies not but that it ſhould be done; only he tells them, It was not for them then to know the Seaſons. But now, the Time of that Reſtitution approaching, the Riſing of theſe Witneſſes (which beareth the true Reſemblance of his) is here mentioned as the Signal of that Reſtitution, which, chap. 20. is called, the firſt Reſurrection; of which (I ſay) this is the fore-running Shadow. And indeed, thus have the Writers of all Ages, ſince Chriſt, underſtood it. For when they ſpeak of that Day, and the Signs of it, you ſhall generally find it among the Ancients, that this killing of the Two Witneſſes, and their Riſing, (though indeed it hath by them been interpreted of Henoch and Elias) are made the fore-running Signs of the approach of that joyful Day of Chriſt's Kingdom, (which they called the Day of Judgment.)

And, I confeſs, I have thought, that the true Reaſon why this Particular Occurrence, though falling out but in a tenth Part of Europe, is here made mention of, rather than other Occurrences which are like to fall out with it, or after it (as the Ruin of Rome, which in it ſelf is a greater one) is, becauſe that this one Paſſage ſhould have more fitneſs to become a ſign (which to give, is the ſcope of the Holy Ghoſt in this Chapter) of the approaching of the New Jeruſalem, (to come under the ſeventh Trumpet) than any other Occurrence: It being not only the firſt ſtep of the Reſtauration of the Church after Antichriſt's laſt ſcattering of it; (which ſhall for ever after go on, and encreaſe, untill the full Reſtitution of all Things); it is not only, I ſay, the firſt turn of the Stream, after that laſt low Ebb; the Waters whereof ſhall riſe and encreaſe, till it be full Sea, and never Ebb again, (theſe Witneſſes now riſing, as Chriſt did, never to Die again, but to caſt off their Sack-cloth for ever): but further alſo, in many Particulars, the livelieſt Picture and Model of that great Reſtauration of all Things (which is to come) above any other Paſſage; and ſo, is ſingled out as a fore-running Type and Reſemblance of it.

PART II.

This great Reſtoring of all things (of which we ſpeak) is to begin with the ſeventh Vial; which (as was ſaid) is all one with the ſeventh Trumpet; when old Things are to be done away, and all to be made New. Now as then there is ſaid to be a great Earthquake, (and that ſuch a one as never was ſince Men were upon the Earth, Chap. 16. 18.): So here there is ſaid to be a great Earthquake alſo. And as the Effect of that Earthquake, is the dividing the remainder of Babylon into three Parts, and the falling of the Cities of the Nations, verſ. 19. of that 16*th* Chapter; ſo here the Effect of this Earthquake, is the falling of a tenth part of the City, and the ſlaying of theſe Names of Men. And as that is uſhered in with a Reſurrection, which Chap.20.5,6. is called the firſt Reſurrection, (that is, the firſt Phyſical Riſing of the Bodies of the Saints:) So this alſo hath a Reſurrection (though not Natural and Phyſical, yet Metaphorical) of Dead Witneſſes unto a better Life than ever they had before. So wonderful a Work and Change is this to be, that it ſhall be even as Life from the Dead, (as the Apoſtle ſpeaks of the Converſion of the Jews).

And again, as then after that Reſurrection there is a New Heaven, and a New Earth; ſo here there is an Aſcending into an Heaven. So glorious ſhall the Condition of theſe Witneſſes be, in compariſon of what it was before, that it ſhall juſtly be counted a Heaven, if compared with their former beſt Condition before their Killing.

Thus among the Gentiles will God give one Inſtance, as a ſmall Scheme, Type, and Shadow of this his Kingdom; to confirm the Faith of the Saints in it; and that, (as is moſt probable) in thoſe Churches of Europe which he means chiefly to make Partakers (afterwards) of this his New Jeruſalem, under the ſeventh Trumpet.

SECT. VIII.

An Interpretation of that Clauſe, Verſ. 14. [The ſecond Wo is paſt]. A reconciling ſome Difficulties about it.

THere remains nothing now in this Chapter to be expounded, excepting this Clauſe which follows, verſ. 14. [The ſecond Wo is paſt, and behold, the Third cometh quickly] which is the cloſe of the ſixth Trumpet. For the three laſt Trumpets being called three Woes, Chap. 8. 13. when the fifth Trumpet had done ſounding, it is ſaid, chap. 9. 12. One Wo is paſt, and behold, there come two Woes more, &c. And now when the ſixth Trumpet's Time of ending comes, it is ſaid, The ſecond Wo is paſt, &c. which is all one as to have ſaid, The ſixth Trumpet, and the Wo of it, do here determine, or at leaſt begin to determine and end.

Now the ſixth Trumpet being the Empire and Tyranny of the Turk; and the ſixth Vial, being that great and deadly blow that ſhall be given that Empire, to make way for the Kingdom of the Jews, the Kings of the Eaſt, mentioned in that Vial: Hence Mr. Mede interprets this paſſing away of the ſecond Wo, to be the very ſixth Vial, (as this Fall of the tenth Part of the City he makes to be the fifth Vial). Which if it be ſo, the difficulty to me (which I ſee not ſo clearly by him reconciled) is, That this paſſing away of the ſecond Wo, as it is here recorded, ſeemeth, for the Time of it, to fall out together with this Reſurrection and Earthquake, and with the Aſcenſion of the Witneſſes, and Fall of the tenth Part of the City, and all theſe to determine and end (as it were) in one common Period. For as ſoon as the Holy Ghoſt had made the Narration of all theſe, he concludes with this, The ſecond Wo is paſt. And then, he making the fifth Vial to be the Period of the Pope's Reigns, and the Witneſſes neſſes ceaſing to propheſy in Sack-cloth, to be at their Riſing, and at the Fall of the tenth Part of the City: How then can the paſſing away of the ſecond Wo (if it be the ſixth Vial) be imagined to fall out at the ſame time with theſe; ſeeing the Vials, as well as the Seals and Trumpets, do fall out ſucceſſively each after other? and though not in equal, or alike diſtances of Time each from other, (as Napier would have it) yet all of them in ſome diſtance, (as is moſt likely); and it is certain, it hath held ſo in all the reſt.

Now to reconcile this Difficulty;

1. Either the fifth and ſixth Vial ſhall fall out altogether about the ſame Time; and ſo the Converſion of the Jews, and Riſing of the European Witneſſes, fall out together as Preparations unto them both, (which I confeſs, unto me ſeems not altogether improbable): For that Paſſage in Dan. 12. 1. compared with the laſt Verſe of Chap. 11. would ſeem to imply as much. In which laſt Verſe, the Angel had ſpoke of the end of the Reign of Antichriſt, and in the 1ſt Verſe of the following 12*th* Chapter, he ſpeaks of the Jews being delivered from their greateſt Time of trouble (which is to befal them from the Turk upon their firſt Converſion); and he ſeems there to make them both to be at the ſame time, or at leaſt ſo near each other, that the diſtance is not conſiderable: For he expreſly ſays, At that Time ſhall Michael ſtand up,—to deliver thy People, (ſo he calls the Jews by way of diſtinction from the Gentile Chriſtians, as being of Daniel's Nation).

Or elſe, 2*dly*, Whereas there are two things here mentioned concerning theſe Witneſſes:

1. Their Riſing, accompanied with this Earthquake.

And, 2. Their Aſcenſion into Heaven, which muſt needs fall out after their Reſurrection: It may be, that as Chriſt's Aſcenſion was forty days after his Reſurrection; ſo this their Aſcenſion (though mentioned immediately next their Reſurrection) may be ſome ſpace of Years after; when their Enemies are removed, and all Obſtacles and Impediments out of the way; then they have a Heaven granted them, and a Voice calling them up thither. And ſo it may come to paſs, that this Aſcenſion of theirs may not be until the ſixth Vial, though their Riſing were before the fifth Vial, and a preparation unto it.

But, 3*dly*, and laſtly, to ſalve all theſe Doubts; it may be, that the only ſcope and drift of the Angel in now bringing in this Clauſe, [the ſecond Wo is paſt] (here, verſ. 14.) was not ſo much, thereby to denote the exact common Period or Inſtant of Time for all theſe Occurrences mentioned; or to ſhew, how the ſixth Vial, and the end of the ſixth Trumpet ſhall, for the time of them, be together with this Earthquake, &c. but rather, whereas the Turkiſh Tyranny was one part of the ſecond Wo upon the Eaſtern Chriſtians, (ſpoken of chap. 9.) and the treading down the Outward Court of Carnal Proteſtants, by the Papiſts, and killing their Witneſſes, another ſecond part of that ſecond Wo; that therefore now, when he had related and put them both together, then he comes in with this Speech [the ſecond Wo is paſt]; that is, I have now fully declared what a Wo God will bring, both on the Eaſtern Chriſtians, and alſo on the European and Weſtern Chriſtians; and theſe two do compleat and perfect the Story of the ſecond Wo, and do alſo belong unto the Story of the ſixth Trumpet: which ſecond Wo conſiſting of thoſe two Parts I have now fully done withal, and ſo I paſs from it to ſpeak of the third Wo, which now cometh quickly, &c. And ſo, this Paſſage ſeems to be intended rather materially to ſhew, what appertains to the ſixth Trumpet, then Chronologically to ſhew the expiring of it. And ſo this great puniſhment from the Popiſh Gentiles upon the Proteſtant Party in the Weſt for their Sins, is fitly caſt under the Trumpets, and joined to that great Plague and Puniſhment on the Eaſtern Chriſtians by the Turk, as a part of the ſixth Trumpet, and ſevered from the Vials as no part of them: They being to fall only upon the Enemies themſelves of both theſe Chriſtian Companions, namely, upon the Pope, and the Turk. Thus the Holy Ghoſt homogeneally putteth together the puniſhment of Carnal Chriſtians, both Eaſtern and Weſtern, under the Wo of the Trumpets; and in like manner involveth thoſe other two grand Enemies unto the Chriſtian Pro-feſſion and Religion, wholly under the Puniſhments and Plagues of the ſeven Vials. And ſo, that may be the Reaſon, both why the Story of treading down the Outward Court, and of the Killing of the Witneſſes, comes in here, in Chap. 11. though the matter of them belongs unto the Book Prophecy: and why alſo the treading the Wine-preſſe, Chap. 14. laſt verſe (which is part of the treading the Outward Court in this 11*th Chap.*) is reckoned as no part of the Vials; it being to fall upon the Proteſtant Party: Yet ſo, as with what in the Trumpets, what in the Vials, God will be ſure to meet with all ſorts for their Sins, and ſo by a like juſt and impartial Rule proceed both towards Friends and Enemies, without any reſpect of Perſons.

But whether of theſe, or whether any of theſe will reach the Holy Ghoſt's meaning, I leave unto the Reader to judg.

I ſhall by and by add a fourth Interpretation of that Clauſe, to me as probable as any of theſe; when I have firſt caſt in a few Conjectures, about the Times of the fulfilling of theſe things; which I reſerved to the laſt, as the Cloſure and Coronis of this long Diſcourſe: Becauſe many things already delivered in this Interpretation do fall in, to ſtrengthen the Conjectures concerning the preciſe Time of the falling out of theſe ſo great Occurrences.

SECT. IX.

The Concluſion of this Diſcourſe. The Conjectures of ſome about the Time when this Killing and Riſing of the Witneſſes ſhall be.

I Find two Periods of Time more eminently pitc'd upon by Writers of this Age (according to the diverſity of Mens Conjectures), for great changes in the Churches of Chriſt.

The firſt is fix'd ſome time between the Years 1650. and 1656.

The other upon 1666. Both which Periods are not far off to come.

Concerning both of which, (as alſo any other that ſhall be made, upon Conjectures out of theſe Prophecies) this General Caution muſt be taken in.

That in theſe Computations a miſtake of a few Years may fall out, and the Event fall out ſooner or later than the Time conjectured, by reaſon that the vulgar Account of Years from the Birth of Chriſt is uncertainly kept; (according to the acknowledgment of Chronologers themſelves) ſo Arnobius at the writing of his Apology ſpeaks indefinitely of the reckoning of Years, how long it was from Chriſt unto his Time, Tricenti ſunt ferme anni (ſays he) aliquid plus vel minus, a quo cœpimus eſſe Chriſtiani. And therefore the beſt Chronologers (as Helvicus, &c.) reckon the true Account to reach two Years further than the vulgar Account doth; and ſo makes the Year 1650 with us, to be in Truth 1652, and ſo of the reſt. Others give a larger allowance, namely of four Years. And this indeed is the true reaſon of that difference about the firſt Period mentioned, namely between 1650, and 1656; ſome ſaying it ſhall be in 51, ſome in 52, and ſome in 56: yet all making the ground of their ſo fixing it one and the ſame, only varying about the preciſe Time by reaſon of ſeveral Computations and Accounts of the Years ſince Chriſt, (as we ſhall ſee by and by.) And for that ſecond Period of 1666, which is made to terminate the date of Antichriſt's raign, and is to that purpoſe underſtood to be that Number of 666, made mention of in the laſt verſe of Chap. 13. the firſt that ſo interpreted that Place was an unknown Engliſh Writer, Anno 1589. who in a little Book dedicated to the Church of Rome, firſt gave this obſcure hint of it [Yet (ſays he) Two Months, two Weeks, two Days and an half, and thy Number 666 ſhall be fulfilled] (as writing to that Church): Which caſting up, from 1589 (the Year his Book bare date of, from the Printing of it) I found him to aim at 1666. Now the Reaſon which they give for this Interpretation, and why they reckon the beginning of Antichriſts 1260 Years, or 42 Months, from Pope Innocent's Time, Anno 406. I have given upon upon Chap. 13. And I find Simpſon the Scotch Abbreviator of the Churches Story, to pitch the beginning of the Popes Uſurpation over Churches, in this Man's Time; who yet had no Eye at all unto this Interpretation of 666. And (as I remember) Mr. Wood (now with God) in his Manuſcript upon the Revelations, doth alſo encline to think the Year, 1666, to be the Time of the Popes downfall. And ſo alſo do ſome others. Chap. 7.

That other firſt Period of 1650, or 51, or 56, I find by ſome to be made the Time of the Jews firſt Call. And by others, that of 1656, to be the Time of the Expiring of Antichriſt's Reign, and the Fall of the City. The firſt that I know of, that ever pitch'd upon this Term of Years, was that Holy Man Hiltenius, (the great Fore-runner of Luther, in Germany); and who foretold the very Year of Luther's Riſing after him, to teach the ſame Doctrine that he had done; which, Melanchon ſays, he ſaw written under his own hand: Among other of whoſe Sayings, you ſhall find this as one of the laſt recorded in his Life, (written among the Lives of the German Divines, by Melchior Adamus); that the Year after Chriſt 1651, ſhall be the Time of the Change of this World, and ſo, the beginning of that New World to come. Since him, many others (though haply not from him) have fallen upon this Period of 1650. So Finch 'in his Book of the Calling of the Jews, makes it the Time when God will leave 'off (as ſays he) to ſcatter his Holy People, for then ſhall the Turks firſt de-'clining come, &c.

And the Jews themſelves have their Eyes upon this very Time; For it was a Secret communicated to old Mr. Forbes, by a Learned Jew, (as Mr. Forbes himſelf related it, not long before his Death) that the learnedeſt Rabby they had had in the World, of late Years, did pitch upon 1650, or thereabouts, as the utmoſt Time wherein they ſhould expect their Meſſiah to reveal himſelf unto their Nation; and how he had left this Secret with ſome of his Learned Friends that came about him when he was on his Death-bed, to know his Judgment about the Meſſiah.

I find alſo Mr. Mede, in his Clavis, to pitch upon 1656, though tacitly, and implicitly, yet clearly enough) as the Time (he moſt enclined unto) for the expiration of Antichriſt's Kingdom. For in his Synchroniſms, he makes the firſt Trumpet, and the Pope's 1260 Days, to begin together; and in his Comment, he makes the beginning of the firſt Trumpet to be in the Year 395. So that, if the Reign of Antichriſt begins at the Year of Chriſt 395, then his 1260 Days, or Years, will end in 1655. And thus there will be ſo many Years from Chriſt unto the beginning of the New World, as there was from the beginning of the Old World, until the Days of Noah, (unto which Chriſt compares his coming) even 1656 Years.

Now the beſt ground for this Opinion that ever I met with, (and which I ſuppoſe, all, or moſt of theſe have gone upon) is that Computation of Years given to Daniel, Chap. 12. verſ. 11. of his Prophecy, by this very Angel that gave this little Book here, and this 11*th* Chapter, by word of Mouth, unto John (as was ſaid before). Who there ſays, That from the Time that the daily Sacrifice ſhall be taken away, and the Abomination that maketh deſolate, ſet up, there ſhall be a thouſand, two hundred, and ninty Days, or Years. The beginning of which Account they fix (as I ſaid before) in Julian's Time, when was the laſt Time, both of the ceaſing of the daily Sacrifice by him ſet up, and of ſetting up Heatheniſh Idolatry in the World. Which Years, if otherwiſe they be reckoned, from Veſpaſian, and Titus his Son, their ſacking of Jeruſalem, were out almoſt 300 Years ago. This Place and Account in Daniel, I ſuppoſe Hiltenius (the firſt that pitch'd on it) had in his Eye for the ground of his Conjecture: For he was a great ſtudier of Daniel's Prophecies, and wrote Notes upon them, (as in his Life you may read). And ſure, I am, that Mr. Wood, Finch, and others, do make that the ground of their Opinions. And, I ſuppoſe, that moſt of all theſe Jews alſo do the like. And (as was ſaid before) the reaſon why ſome do ſo uncertainly pitch upon 1651, others 52, others 55, and others 56, is the variation and uncertainty of the Account of Years ſince Julian's Time, when, and how long he reigned: ſome pitching his Reign in the Year 361, ſome in 363, and others in 365.

Now I ſhall only ſhew how both theſe Periods, namely, of 1650, or 56, and 1666, may be reconciled, and how they both may ſtand together.

The fifth Vial (as hath been ſaid) hath two gradual Accompliſhments of it; whereof the one is a Preparation to the other. That Vial is emptied (as alſo are ſome of the other) by two ſeveral pourings forth of two ſeveral Portions, the one of the Top, the other of the Dregs of the Wrath of God; whereof this 11*th* Chapter mentions one, and the 16*th* Chapter the other. The firſt Degree of it begins at the Riſing of the Witneſſes, with the Fall of the tenth part of the City, (as taking the Word [City] for the extent of Rome's Juriſdiction); which is compleated by a ſecond Degree of it, namely, the Ruin of the City of Rome it ſelf, (which is now but a tenth part of the Ancient (material) City of Rome that once flouriſhed) with the Ruin of which City it ſelf, the Time of Antichriſt's Reign and Kingdom is reckoned to end; it being the full Accompliſhment and compleat Effuſion of the fifth Vial. Now (according to their Conjecture) the firſt of thoſe formentioned Periods (namely, 1650, or 56) may prove the Time of the firſt of theſe two Occurrences; and the ſecond (namely, 1666) may be the Time for the latter of them. That is, ſome Time between 1650, and 1656, may be the Period of the Witneſſes killing, and the Time of their Riſing, and of the Fall of the tenth part of the City, and the Earthquake, &c. and then 1666, may be the deſigned Time for the Ruin of Rome it ſelf, and for the Witneſſes their more glorious Aſcenſion into Heaven.

You heard, in the beginning of this Diſcourſe, that the Angel who here gave this 11*th* Chapter, is the very ſame whom we find to have uttered that 12*th* Chapter of Daniel's Prophecy: In which he ſpeaks of the End and Ruin of Antichriſt, Chap. 11. verſ. ult. and how long his Time ſhould be, and his Power laſt to ſcatter the Holy People; and when he ſhould accompliſh, to ſcatter them, and after that never hurt them more. This the Angel declares, verſ. 7. of Chap. 12. adding withal, that at, or about that Time, the Children of Daniel's People (that is, the Jewiſh Nation) ſhould be called by Michael their Prince, (that is, Chriſt, verſ. 1. and they ſhould be delivered out of the greateſt Diſtreſs, alſo from the Turkiſh Empire, that ever that Nation was in; this you have verſ. 1. After which Ruin of Antichriſt, and Calling home of the Jews, ſhould follow the Reſurrection of the Saints; with which Chriſt's Kingdom begins, verſ. 2, 3.

Now here in this 11*th* Chapter of the Revelation, he comes and explains, both what that Time of Antichriſt's Reign is, (namely, 1260 Years) and alſo what that laſt ſcattering the Power of the Holy People by him, ſhould be; even this very killing the Witneſſes, the ſignal of its expiring. And then, how the ſecond Wo ſhould paſs away, (namely, the Turkiſh Tyranny) and then, under the ſeventh Trumpet, ſhould come the glorious Reſurrection of the Saints, and the Kingdom of Chriſt, (which Daniel and all the Prophets have ſo much ſpoken of). Daniel being inquiſitive, after the Times when theſe things ſhould thus be finiſhed, the Angel in verſ. 11, 12. gives him two Periods; the beginning of the Time of both which, is to be counted from the ceaſing of the daily Sacrifice; that is, (as was before ſaid) from Julian's Time. Now the one of thoſe Periods, is that of 1290 Years, beginning from that his Time, and ending between 1650, and 1656. The other is that of 1335 Years, beginning from that his Time alſo, and ending between 1690, and 1700. Which two Periods (as I underſtand them) are ſet as two Poſts, the one at the beginning, and the other at the ending of that whole Stage of Time, which is allotted for the diſpatch of thoſe great Things propheſied of, to fall out afore the Kingdom of Chriſt. The firſt (of 1290 Years) is mentioned verſ. 11. and ſhews when the firſt turning of the Courſe of Things, for the Accompliſhment of all, ſhould begin. The other (of 1335 Years) you have in verſ. 12. ſhewing the Time of the full and final End, and compleat accompliſhment of all that the Angel had foretold. And ſo that ſpace of Time between theſe two Periods, (which is 45 Years or thereabouts) (for ſo many Years the latter Account, verſ. 12. adds to the former verſ. 11.) is allotted as the Time wherein thoſe Things propheſied of by him to fall out in the laſt Ages of the World, ſhould, each in their order, be accompliſh'd. And ſo, from the firſt Period, ſhould begin the great turn towards the accompliſhment of them, and the immediate Preparations thereunto. And in the Interim of that intermediate ſpace of Time between 1650, or 56, and 1700, ſhall follow the orderly performance of thoſe Things which are to end and conſummate all, before the glorious Kingdom of Chriſt. As firſt, the Ruin of Rome, and ſo, the end of Antichriſt's Reign; and then the deſtruction of the Turkiſh Empire; after which, ſhall begin that great Reſurrection, even at that laſt Period of 1335, falling out about 1700, which is the conſummation of all. Chap. 7.

Now the Queſtion is, What that Occurrence ſhould be, which the firſt Period of 1290 Years, falling out between 1650, and 1656, doth point at; as then, either to begin, or to be ended? Whether it be then that Antichriſt's Time, Times, and a half (which the Angel had ſpoken of, verſ. 7.) ſhould expire; or what elſe it is, that he would have our Eyes eſpecially upon in that firſt Period?

It ſeems unto me, that in the 7*th* verſe of Dan. 12. the Angel mentions theſe two Things as diſtinct, though he names them together. Firſt, For Antichriſt's Reign, that it ſhall be for a Time, Times, and half a Time. And then he adds this ſecond thing alſo, as a Note or Sign of the expiring of that his Time; with which, all thoſe Things foretold beſides, ſhould begin to be accompliſh'd, (namely, when he ſhall have accompliſh'd to ſcatter the Power of the Holy People); as ſpeaking of this very laſt and eminent killing of the Witneſſes; with which all their ſcatterings ſhould end, and for ever be accompliſh'd. Then, namely from that Time, ſhall theſe things begin in their order to be finiſhed, (namely, Antichriſt's Ruin, and the Turkiſh Empire's Deſtruction, &c.) For thus I underſtand thoſe words, [and when he ſhall have accompliſh'd to ſcatter the Power of the Holy People, all theſe things ſhall be finiſh'd] namely, theſe two things there propheſied of, even Antichriſt's Ruin, and the Turk's; he mentioning this laſt Scattering, as the Sign, or the beginning of the finiſhing of all. For it is hard to think, that all theſe things ſhould together, and exactly at one Time, be finiſhed.

So that, indeed (as it ſeems to me) the Angel's Scope in that firſt Period of 1290 Years, (beginning from Julian's Time, and ending between 50, and 56) is not ſo much to deſign out the End of Antichriſt's Time, Times, and half a Time; as it is to point out the firſt Turn of Things, preparing to the Kingdom of Chriſt, which ſhall begin from this laſt Scattering the Holy People, (which is all one with this killing of the Witneſſes here). And ſo, that ſome Time within theſe 45 Years (that are to run out between that Time and the End) ſhall be the expiring of that his Time.

And the Reaſons making me think, that Daniel's firſt Period of 1290 Days, do rather thus refer to the firſt Turn of Things, towards the Accompliſhment of all, (which is to begin with this Accompliſhment of the Scattering of the Holy People, or Slaughter of the Witneſſes, (and ſo, that to be made the eminent Occurrence that does Periodize theſe 1290 Days) are theſe:

1. The Angel's fixing the latter Period of 1335 Years for the final End of all. And his leaving 45 Years ſpace between, doth argue the former to be the Punctum, that begins that Time allotted for the accompliſhment of theſe Things during that Space. So that, thoſe, 45 Years are indeed the ſpace of Time for the fulfilling thoſe great Things; whereof Antichriſt's Ruin is one, and a great One. And ſo the ending of thoſe 1290 Days, is the beginning of theſe 45 Years, and the expiring of thoſe 1335 Years, is the ending of theſe 45 Years, which bring in the 1000 Years of Chriſt's Kingdom. For to what end ſhould this ſpace of 45 Years be thus ſet out, and meaſured, but as to be made famous by being deſigned for the fulfilling of thoſe Things, namely, the Ruin of the Pope, and of the Jew's Enemies, the Turks, in the interim of it, whereof Daniel had there propheſied?

PART II.

2. In the 10*th* Verſe (immediately before) he had again repeated, and a ſecond Time mentioned this laſt ſcattering the Holy People; and this, as a Preface to his Anſwer about the Time when it ſhould be, that all ſhould be finiſh'd. Many (ſays he) ſhall be made white, and tried, and purified, &c. (namely, by this their laſt Scattering); and then he ſubjoins, verſ. 11. [And from the Time that the daily Sacrifice is taken away, (that is, from Julian's Time) ſhall be 1290 Days] namely, unto the end of this laſt Tryal mentioned, even when this Scattering the Holy People, or killing the Witneſſes, ſhall be accompliſh'd. He mentions it thus, on purpoſe to ſhew, that he makes that killing the Witneſſes, the Terminus ad quem of his Account. You heard afore, that Antiochus's three Years and a half, (ſpoken of Chap. 11. 31, 32.) was the Type of this three Years and a half; and lo, he uſeth the very ſame Phraſe here of this, that he had there uſed of that Trial, Chap. 11. 35. Many (ſays he) ſhall then fall, to try them, to purge them, and to make them white. Yea further, I verily believe, that one Reaſon why he ſingleth out Julian's Time as the Term or Moment from which he reckons, unto this laſt ſcattering the Witneſſes, rather than any other Time from which to begin this Account, is, Becauſe that for the Comfort of the Church, he was to pitch upon the End of the like Scattering unto that of Julian's, when (as was before obſerved) Popery ſhould, after the Reformation, prevail again, and the Power of the Beaſt make a Scattering of the Saints, before the final Ruin of that Power; even as Heatheniſm, after it was purged out of the Empire, was then again ſet up by Julian, with the killing the Holy People, by the Authority of an Heathen Emperor, before its final overthrow and extirpation: And ſo, that Scattering in Julian's Time was choſen, rather than any other Occurrence, as that from which the Computation of this Time ſhould begin; Becauſe through the likeneſs of it, it was moſt ſuitable to reſemble the Occurrences about this killing the Witneſſes, with which this Time was to have end: This being juſt the like Time of Trial, as that in Julian's Days was; and therefore he thus pitcheth upon that. Whereas, had he intended to reckon the Pope's Time, Times, and a half, and the exact ending of it, he might (and ſurely rather would) have reckoned from ſome other more eminent Mark ſuitable unto it, that accompanied his firſt Beginning and Riſe, rather than this heterogeneal Paſſage of Julian's Perſecution, (which yet is homogeneal with this laſt Slaughter of the Witneſſes).

And, 3. Unto the Time of that latter Period of 1335 Days, verſ. 12. (when it ſhall come) he adds a [Bleſſed is he that cometh, &c.]; Which to me ſounds, as if the former Period had ſome eminent Bleſſedneſs alſo in the beginning or dawning of it; but yet, not to be compared with this other which is to follow. And it is, as if he had ſaid, Bleſſed indeed is he that cometh to the end of the 1290 Days, when the Scattering of the Saints ſhall be accompliſh'd, and when they ſhall Riſe, to die no more: But Bleſſed, and thrice bleſſed is he that cometh to the other Time of 45 Years more; for then begins that firſt and great Reſurrection, that brings us to Chriſt's Kingdom. And therefore he tells Daniel, Thou ſhalt ſtand up in thy Lot, &c. even thou, as well as others; and ſhalt enjoy the Bleſſedneſs of thoſe Times. And this Speech is (in a manner) all one with that which John uſeth, when he ſpeaks of the beginning of theſe Thouſand Years, Chap. 20. 6. Bleſſed is he that hath part in the Firſt Reſurrection. So that, in the firſt Period (of 1290 Years) ſhall alſo begin bleſſed Times in compariſon of thoſe fore-going: For now the Scattering of the Holy People by Antichriſt, is for ever accompliſh'd.

Now then, the Angel's Scope here in this 11*th* Chapter, being to explain that Speech of his in Daniel, (for this 11*th* Chapter I take to be as a Comment upon that his Speech there); and he (namely, the ſame Angel) there mentioning a Scattering of the Holy People, which ſhould accompliſh all, and ſo be the laſt of their Perſecutions; and making the ending of that Scattering, to be the beginning of that famous, and to be noticed Time, when is to be the finiſhing of all thoſe great Things (which are to be done, e're Chriſt's Kingdom begins, and the glorious Reſurrection) namely, the Ruin of the Pope and Turk, (the Preparations unto which, are to begin from the end of that Scattering): Hence it is, that he doth ſo largely inſiſt on this laſt and eminent killing of the Witneſſes, neſſes, here in this Chapter: And alſo upon this their Reſurrection. For this is placed as the Poſt, or Terminus a quo of the Race or Stadium of thoſe 45 Years wherein thoſe other great Things ſhould in their order be accompliſh'd. Chap. 7.

And this Reſurrection and Aſcenſion of the Witneſſes from under this their laſt Scattering, (they being now to die no more, as Chriſt did not after he aroſe) bearing (as was ſaid) a Shadow and Type of the Reſurrection, and New Heavens to come at the Thouſand Years; and ſo, being a glimpſe and ſcheme of the Bleſſedneſs then; how fit in this reſpect, was the Time of this Reſurrection placed at the firſt Turn of Things, haſtning to the bringing in that New World; and made the firſt Punctum, or Moment, beginning that 45 Years, whoſe End ſhall be the great Reſurrection, and the Thouſand Years of Chriſt's Kingdom. So that (to conclude this) that interim of 45 Years, is a Time which begins with a Reſurrection, and alſo ends with a Reſurrection; and that, an infinitely more glorious one; and in the middle courſe of which Time, the greateſt Things are accompliſhed (as Preparations to that Kingdom of Chriſt) that ever were done upon the Earth; even the Ruin, both of the Pope and the Turk.

Yea further, to make the Harmony herein yet more full; This firſt Period of 1290 Days, ending between 1650, and 1656, is made by thoſe who have pitch'd upon it, to be the Time for the Jews firſt Recalling and Converſion; and ſo of the Foundation of the declining of the Turkiſh Empire, (as I ſhewed before). And their Reaſon is, becauſe the Angel, in the firſt Verſe of this Chapter, makes mention of this their Call, as one thing to be accompliſh'd alſo, (But for this, ſee Finch, Brightman, and others). And that may be one Reaſon why he pitcheth on the taking away the Jews daily Sacrifice in Julian's Time, (as then become abominable unto God) as that eminent Mark and Poſt (as it were) at which he would begin this Account; even becauſe it was a Paſſage that would more conſpicuouſly occur to the Jews as a Mark, in a way of oppoſiteneſs, anſwering that which was to fall out at the ending of this Time. For their ſetting up the daily Sacrifice in Julian's Time, was their laſt attempt to erect their Temple-Worſhip, unto which they (refuſing the Meſſiah) unto this day do ſo cleave. Which Attempt of theirs, God from Heaven ſhewed his Hand againſt, by an Earthquake, overthrowing the Foundation of the Temple then by them laid; ſo more fully fulfilling that Prophecy of our Saviour; for not only above-ground, but even under-ground, was there not ſo much as one Stone left upon another. And therefore when he would hold forth unto them the Time when they ſhall turn unto the Meſſiah, typified out by that Temple and Sacrifice, he reckons from the taking away that their daily Sacrifice, which was made ſo remarkable unto them. And becauſe he mentioneth the beginning of a Bleſſed Time, (bleſſed in its beginning, both unto Jew and Gentile, of both whom the Angel in that 12*th* of Daniel doth ſpeak, and of the Ruin of the Enemies of both) which is to be compleated by the New Jeruſalem, as the Accompliſhment of all: Hence therefore this Period may alſo ſeem to reſpect the firſt Call of theſe Jews, as being that, which is the preparation unto their Kingdom.

And if theſe Two ſhould then at that Time fall out together, (namely, this famous Reſurrection of the European Witneſſes, and the Converſion of the Jews) how would this reconcile all theſe Opinions together; and ſhew a further reaſon why that Period of 1290 Days was ſo eminently held forth unto Daniel, as that which was to be made famous by two ſo glorious Reſurrections of Jews and Gentiles at once; when the Jews long ſcattering, and the Witneſſes among the Gentiles, their laſt Scattering ſhould both end together! And how harmonious were it, that in one day, as it were, the Foundations of the New Jeruſalem to come (which is to be made up of both) ſhould be thus laid together, and in a glorious Reſurrection of them both! For ſuch is that Revival which theſe European Witneſſes here have, from this their Death unto Life, and is ſo here reckoned. And ſuch, and no leſs, ſhall be the Converſion of the Jews, even no other than (as Paul ſpeaks, Rom. 11. 15.) a Riſing from the Dead. And thus ſhould the Preparations to that glorious Kingdom conſiſting of both, fall out together, at the beginning of theſe 45 Years. During which interim and ſpace of Time, the Enemies of them both are to be removed out of the World, who only do now ſtand in the way, and hinder the Revealing of Chriſt and his Kingdom, as the Roman Empire did the Revealing of Antichriſt, that Man of Sin, and his Kingdom. And ſo, both theſe Typical Reſurrections are in the end to be ſwallowed up by a more real and more glorious Reſurrection, which ſhall begin that New Jeruſalem and Kingdom of Jeſus Chriſt.

PART II.

And thus may the Reſurrection of the European Witneſſes be (as was ſaid) the Preparation to the compleat pouring out of the fifth Vial in the Ruining of Rome. Even as (on the other ſide) the Converſion of the Jews (which is their Reſurrection) is the Preparation to the Ruin of the Turk, which is the ſixth Vial. And that the Jews ſhall be called, before the pouring out of the ſixth Vial, (which is ſaid to make way for the Kings of the Eaſt, Chap. 16. that is, for the Jews coming into their own Land) hath long ſince been the Opinion of Mr. Brightman and others. And many alſo do hold, that that Call of theirs, ſhall begin 45 Years before the compleat erection of the New Jeruſalem. And ſo, thoſe 45 Years after that firſt Call of theirs, (e're they can obtain the full poſſeſſion of their promiſed Kingdom) do ſeem to anſwer unto thoſe 45 Years which they ſpent after their coming out of Egypt, e're they got poſſeſſion of their promiſed Land of Canaan, (for ſo long Time it was e're they were ſettled in it, if you take their 40 Years in the Wilderneſs, with the Time wherein Joſhua fought his Battels, as himſelf expreſly counts it, Joſh. 12. 10.) Which 45 Years do begin at the end of the 1290 Years; and at the beginning of that Time falls out the Riſing of the Witneſſes, (according to the Interpretation formerly given).

And now, to give that other Interpretation of that Clauſe, [The ſecond Wo is paſt] which follows upon this Reſurrection of the Witneſſes here, verſ. 14. (which I before reſerved unto this Place). [The ſecond Wo is paſt (ſays the Angel) behold the Third Wo cometh quickly.] May there not in this Paſſage be tacitly intimated (as the Calling of the Jews ſtill uſeth to be in this Book of the Revelation, which is chiefly written for the Gentiles) the Foundation of the Turks Ruin, by the Converſion of the Jews; as being that which was now to fall out together with the Reſurrection of theſe Witneſſes? For the Turkiſh Empire being the ſecond Wo, or ſixth Trumpet, with whoſe fundamental declining beginneth the Jews Call, (as Finch and others write of it); why then may not the Angel's meaning in that Clauſe be, that now, when he had, in his Narration, brought us to the Times of the Riſing of the Witneſſes, (contemporary with which, the Jew's Calling is to be, which is the firſt Foundation of the Second Wo's declining); then to pronounce this, [The Second Wo is paſt, &c.] that is, The Foundation of the Turk's paſſing away, and Ruin, is now laid, as is the Ruin of Rome in the Reſurrection of the European Witneſſes. And ſurely, then when the Jews are called, the Wo of that Turkiſh Tyranny may be reckoned and accounted of as paſt; for that the height and bitterneſs of it is paſt, (although the Empire it ſelf may for a while ſtill ſtand); the Wo of it lying in its Let and Hinderance of the Chriſtian Religion, which now among the Jews ſhall revive in his Territories. Yea, in the ſtile of the Prophets, and alſo of this Book, when the Foundation of the Ruin of any State firſt begins to be laid, when its Empire and Dominion is paſt the Meridian, and once begins to decline, it is ſaid to be paſt, (as you heard before). As when Things begin but to be accompliſh'd, they are then ſaid to be finiſhed. Which was the learned Obſervation of Mr. Mede upon that Paſſage in Chap. 14. (which alſo I have inſerted in the Expoſition of that Place there), when the ſecond Angel cried, Babylon is fallen, when yet the firſt Vial was but then begun to be poured out, and the open diſcovery of Antichriſt made. But becauſe at that Time, his Declenſion and Ruin began, he is therefore pronounced as then already fallen, (though again, afterwards, when his Deſtruction is compleated in the Ruin of the City it ſelf, his Seat, chap. 18. the ſame Phraſe is uſed). Even as in the Propheey of Iſaiah, (which Inſtance Mr. Mede alſo doth there bring) when the Medes firſt revolted from the Babyloniſh Monarchy, (which was done at the Time that Iſaiah uttered it, he having many Years before propheſied the Ruin of it); Yet becauſe that Revolt was the foundation of Babel's Ruin, (which was by thoſe Medes when revolted from it, to be effected) therefore it is then ſaid by the Prophet, (Iſa. 21. 9.) Babylon is fallen, &c. And ſo ſay I; The meaning of the Angel here, is, to pronounce the Second Wo, or the ſixth Trumpet, or (which is all one) the Turkiſh Empire to be now paſt, then when the Revolt of the Jews, in their Converſion unto Chriſt, doth firſt begin. This their Revolt being the Foundation or Preparation unto the paſſing away of this ſecond Wo; and that, moſt truly, in the ſtile of the Prophets, in that it now begins to paſs, &c. And ſo the Angel goes on, to give warning unto us of the Third Wo's approach; adding, [The Third cometh quickly] that is, the ſeventh Trumpet, or the New Jeruſalem and Kingdom of Chriſt. And both the ending of the Beaſt's Reign now ſhortly follows, together with the Ruin of Rome, (the Foundation of, and preparation unto which Ruin, is laid in the Reſurrection of the Witneſſes); and alſo the ſixth Vial, or the breaking in-pieces the Turkiſh Empire, is after that to follow; the Preparation unto which, is the Calling of the Jews. And thus this 11*th* Chapter of the Revelation, does indeed become a compleat Comment on that 12*th* Chapter of Daniel, and makes mention of all thoſe Things that are therein mentioned, as was at firſt obſerved. Chap. 7.

Angel

Add unto all this, this ſmall Obſervation.

I obſerved before, That God did uſe to fulfil Prophecies, and the Computations of them, over and over, in ſeveral degrees of Accompliſhment. For Inſtances whereof, I gave this of the 1290 Days in Daniel; and this alſo of theſe 1260 Years of Antichriſt's Reign: as in like manner thoſe three Years and a half of the Witneſſes Killing, and then their Riſing again; whereof ſome gradual Accompliſhments are already paſt, at ſeveral Times in Europe, within the Revolution of the Century of Years laſt paſt: And yet, I have withal proved, that another far greater Slaughter of them is yet to come. Now it may be, that the Obſervation of the Revolution of Time in the hundred Years laſt paſt, in which the former Killings of the Witneſſes did fall out, may indigitate, and put ſome note upon the Time when this great and laſt Slaughter in the Revolution of this Century of Years now running on (ſince 1600) may fall out. That is, As thoſe partial and ſmaller Killings of particular Witneſſes, fell out in Anno 1547, (as did that in Germany, which ended in 1550) and in 1556, (as did that in England, in the Days of Queen Mary); So accordingly about the Time of the Revolution of the ſame term of 100 Years, now running on in this next Age after that, the Time of this laſt Killing of the Witneſſes may alſo be.

I have long ſince obſerved it, (though not firſt to this particular purpoſe), That the Revolution of 100 Years hath produced (eſpecially in theſe latter Days) new Motions and Alterations in the Church, like unto thoſe that fell out 100 Years before. To this purpoſe that of John Hus is remarkable, who ſuffering Martyrdom at a Stake, Anno 1417, or thereabouts, poſt centum Annos, &c. After an hundred Years (ſays he) you Papiſts ſhall be called to an Account. (A Speech ſo memorable among the Bohemians, that they ſtamp'd it upon their Coins). And accordingly 100 Years after, Anno 1517, did Luther ariſe, and with him, the Goſpel in Germany. And then again, if we deſcend to the Revolution of the next 100 Years, we ſhall find (and our Eyes have ſeen it) that 100 Years after Luther, about the Year 1618, began thoſe notable Changes and Alterations in Germany, which ſtill go on unto this Day. From which Year 1618, I reckon, that the War of the Beaſt againſt the Witneſſes, and the Gentile's treading down the Outward Court, did begin; and ſhall ſtill go on till it end in this great Slaughter of thoſe Witneſſes there. And this hap'ned in an oppoſite correſpondency to what fell out 100 Years before. For as An. 1517, began Luther's Preaching, and the workings towards that Reformation that followed: So in Anno 1618, began the like workings towards the Deformation of the Goſpel (as I may ſo call it), which hath gone on with as ſtrange a Hand againſt the Church, as that other was carried on with, by God, for the Church. And to theſe I could add many other Inſtances. So that, I confeſs, that I am in like manner ſuſpicious of the Revolution of 100 Years from thoſe former (mentioned) Killings of the Witneſſes in the Century laſt paſt; leſt about the hundredth Year from thence, ſhould be the Time of this other great and laſt killing of them, (as yet to come, and whereof thoſe were but gradual Fore-runners).

And

PART II.

And (it may be, that) if England, and Scotland, &c. be that tenth Part of the City, which is to be the eminent Stage of this their Killing and Riſing again, as hath been argued; then this Period will fall upon the hundred Years after that former Trial of England. And let me add this, That as upon the Riſing of England and Scotland, began that Glorious Harveſt of Bleſſed Times, which laſted till theſe German Wars began: So in this Revolution of another hundred Years after that Time, (according to the Conjecture held forth) are like to ariſe unto the Church, like Times of far greater Bleſſedneſs (if that hold true, that then thoſe 45 Years (before ſpoken of) do begin, which are allotted for the accompliſhment of All).

But to put a ſtop unto too much Curioſity in theſe Matters; All theſe Notions and Conjectures (though as probable as any of this kind uſually given), I give up to further Light, and ſecond Conſiderations, knowing that ſuch have often failed, and deceived others. And conſidering alſo, that in fixing the Times and Seaſons for God's great Works of Wonder, there is the greateſt Modeſty that may be to be expreſſed. For, if thoſe 70 Years Captivity of the Jews in Babylon were ſo expreſly deſigned out by God, and are now long ſince expired; and yet when to begin the Account of thoſe 70 Years, is not agreed upon by the learned'ſt Chronologers unto this day: How much more difficult then muſt it needs be, to pitch the certain Time of any Period, before the accompliſhment of it?

But however, let an indefinite Warning, that theſe Things are approaching, and we within the reach of them, ſuffice, for to move us to prepare for them; which is the only uſe of knowiug them. It may be ſaid of the Time of theſe Things, as it is ſaid of the Day of Death, Latet hic Dies, ut obſervetur omnis Dies; The Day and Year of the Accompliſhment of theſe great Matters are hid from us, that ſo each Day and Year we may be found ready, when-ever they ſhall come upon us, (as in this Age wherein we live, they are likely to do). And although we may think this diſmal and black Hour of Temptation not likely to come ſo ſoon, (ſeeing the Clouds riſe not faſt enough ſo ſuddenly to o're-caſt the Face of the Sky with Darkneſs); yet we are to conſider, that we live now in the Extremity of Times, when Motions and Alterations being ſo near the Centre, become quickeſt and ſpeedieſt; and we are at the Verge, and as it were, within the Whirle of that great Myſtery of Chriſt's Kingdom, which will, as a Gulph, ſwallow up all Time; and ſo, the nearer we are unto it, the greater and more ſuddain Changes will Chriſt make, now haſtning to make a full end of All.

And for the Jew's Call, which is conjunct with this Killing and Riſing of the Witneſſes: As it depends not upon ordinary Means to effect it, ſo there are like to be no Preparations at all unto it, until it comes, (as there are not for Things extraordinary); but a Nation ſhall bring forth in a Day, (as the Prophet ſpeaks). And ſo, in the very Year before it, there will be no more outward Appearances, or Probabilities of it, than there are now, or than there have been many hundred Years ſince. And therefore our Faith need not be put off from this, by the ſeeing as yet no Stirrings or Motions at all unto it, or towards it. And the Truth is, both the Killing and Riſing of the Witneſſes, and alſo the Calling of the Jews, may fall out ſooner than we are aware of.

To the Enſuing TREATISE.

BOOK I.

OF the God-head, and the three Perſons within it ſelf. That there is but one God. That in the Divine Nature, or one God-head, there are three Perſons converſing with, ſpeaking to, and glorifying one another. Which Union and Communion of the Three Perſons between themſelves, is peculiar to the Deity, and incommunicable to any mere Creature.

Chap. 1. That God is one in Eſſence, Pag. 1

Chap. 2. That this God one in Eſſence, is three in Perſons, who jointly co-operate in all God's External Works, 3

Chap. 3. That theſe three Perſons in the Godhead, are Perſons diſtinct one from the other, 11

Chap. 4. That the three Perſons in the Godhead, have an Union and Communion between themſelves apart, and incommunicable unto us, 13

Chap. 5. Of giving Glory to God. That it is a Duty incumbent upon us, prov'd by numerous Inſtances in Scripture. That we are to glorify God, not only nor chiefly for the benefit he beſtows on us, but for the glory of his Name, and the excellence and bleſſedneſs of his Nature. Some Reaſons given, that Grace in us may be raiſed to this high ſtrain, 22

Chap. 6. A more punctual Explication, what it is to give glory to God, in Himſelf or Works; ſet out by a Comparative with all the other ways of glorifying God, which it far exceeds, 32

Chap. 7. The Glory of God which appears in his Kingdom, and Univerſal Dominion, whereby he rules over all; as it is deſcribed in Pſ. 89. from v. 6, to 15. 41

BOOK II.

OF the Son of God, the Second Perſon in the Trinity. What his Perſon is, conſidered in himſelf. He is the Eternal Son of the Father, one God in Eſſence with him. The Son, the Second Perſon took the Man Jeſus into perſonal Union with himſelf; and ſo Chriſt is God-Man joined into one Perſon.

Chap. 1. How greatly it imports us to have a true Knowledg of the Perſon of Chriſt. What his Perſon is. That he exiſted from all Eternity with God as a Perſon; and was not merely a Manifeſtation of the Deity in Time, and then only Exiſtent when he firſt appeared in the World, pag. 49

Chap. 2. Who this Perſon was that Exiſted from Eternity. The two Titles which are given to him, as Exiſting before the World was. 1. That he is the Word. 2. The Son of God. His firſt Title, the Word, imports two things; His being Eternally begotten of the Father, as the Image of his Eſſential Glory: And that he is given to us by God as his Word, whereby he manifeſts himſelf, 59

Chap. 3. That he was the Son of God, who exiſted throughout all Ages, and from Eternity. This prov'd by all thoſe Inſtances of Scriptures, wherein his Eternal Exiſtence is aſſerted, and wherein the Title of Son of God is alſo aſcribed to Him, 64

Chap. 4. What kind of Son he is to God, or in what ſenſe he is the Son of God. He is the proper Son of God in a ſpecial peculiar manner, ſuch as no other Perſon can be ſaid to be. He is ſtiled the only begotten Son of God, which can be affirmed of no Creature. This imports that his Eternal Generation is the Foundation of his Sonſhip. He is called the Son of the Living God; that he is begotten of him in his own likeneſs: and is of the ſame Nature and Subſtance with him. That he is God by an Identity of one, and the ſame Eſſence of the Godhead, and not by Union only, or Office, 69

Chap. 5. That the ſecond Perſon of the Trinity aſſumed humane Nature into perſonal Union with himſelf, and ſo is God-Man in one Perſon for ever, 81

BOOK III.

OF the Glories and Royalties that belong unto Jeſus Chriſt, conſidered as God-Man in one Perſon; (beſides what accrued to him from his performance of the Work of our Redemption:) and which were appointed for him by his Father from all Eternity. The apparent Manifeſtation of the Divine Attributes in the Perſon of Jeſus Chriſt God-Man. The Deſignation of him in God's firſt Decrees, as the End for whom all the Creatures were made. The part that he bore as God-Man in the Creation, as by him all things were created. The Appointment of him by God, to be one Lord over all, under him one God: and to be in a more ſpecial reſpect the Head of the Elect, on whom they were to hold the Tenure of all the Bleſſings beſtowed on them, above the Dues of Creation.

Chap. 1. A Preface giving a ſhort Sheme or Draught of the enſuing Diſcourſe. An Expoſition of Col. 1. from ver. 15 to 19. all that is ſpoken there of Chriſt, muſt be aſcribed to him as God-Man, pag. 95

Chap. 2. The perſonal native Glories and Royalties which belong to the Son of God, as dwelling in our Nature. How the Divine Attributes are Inherent, and ſhine forth in that Man Jeſus ſo united to the Son of God. In what ſenſe he is the Image of the Inviſible God. How he is the Wiſdom, and the Power of God. His humane Nature does not poſſeſs thoſe Perfections in that high degree, as they are Attributes in the Divine Nature, and ſo Infinite; but he hath them in a nearer reſemblance, than any mere Creature is capable of. In what reſpects he alſo has Independency and Sovereignty. It is upon the Union of the humane Nature with the Son of God, that it is inveſted with his high Priviledg, 103

The CONTENTS.

Chap. 3. The Honour and Royalties that appertain unto Christ God-Man, as ordained such in God's first Decrees, to be the final Cause or End of the whole Creation and Works of God. In what sense he is the First-born of every Creature. The Reasons why it is not to be understood in respect of his Eternal Generation as Son of God. It is spoken of him in consideration of a Dignity or Birth-right, which the Man Jesus Christ, united with the second Person in the Trinity, has above all other Creatures. He is also the First-born, in that he was first in order intended in the Eternal Purposes of God. He is the final Cause or End for which all things were created. And upon the presupposition of his being decreed to be God-Man, it belonged to him, as his due, to be the universal End for whom all things should be made: This was an high Prerogative of which no mere Creature could be capable, 109

Chap. 4. That by this designed Union of the Son of God to this Individual Creature the Man Jesus, and in the Person of this his Son so considered, God hath and doth make the highest manifestation of his Glory, and communication of himself, such as by no created Ways or Means else could have been attained, 117

Chap. 5. The Glory which Christ, as God-Man, had assigned him, before the World was, in his Election by the Father; manifested in an Explication of John 17. 5. Whether that Expression, Glorify me now with the Glory which I had with thee befor the World was, be spoken of Christ, as Second Person in the Trinity, as God, or as God-Man, appointed in God's Eternal Decree. In what proper sense this might be said by the Man-Jesus, Glorify now me, &c. How, as God-Man, he can be said to have had this Glory with the Father, before the World was; when, as such, he did not then Exist. What Glory it is that is here intended, it is a Glory due to his Person. God-Man distinct from, and Superior to what followed, upon his performance of the Work of our Redemption, 123

Chap. 6. The Exposition of some other passages in Joh. 17. That God having first predestinated Christ to be God-Man, this moved him to elect us to compleat his Glory. The first Motive was, That as he was to be an Head, there might not be wanting to him a perfect Body to participate with him in the enjoyment of his Blessedness. How the Marriage of Adam in Paradise, was a Type of the Relation between Christ and the Elect his Spouse, designed before the consideration of the Fall. The second Motive was, That a Glory additional to Christ's personal Glory, might accrue to him as God-Man, from their being Elected. The third Motive was drawn from the Interest and Part which Christ predestinated God-Man had, together with his Father, in electing them, Joh. 17. 1. And the Glory which thou gavest me, I have given them, that they may be One, even as we are One. The meaning of the Words explained, by Answers to some Queries. What that Glory is which the Father had given to Christ. What that Glory is which Christ thereupon assigns as his own Gift to us. When was the Time of giving this Glory to him and to us. The fourth Motive is, what Christ represents to his Father, viz. the Glory which the accomplishment of this Design will bring to himself, and to his Father, when the Union and Glory of the Saints, shall thereby be perfected at the last Day of the World, 138

BOOK. I.

Of the God-head, and the three Perſons within it ſelf. That there is but one God. That in the Divine Nature, or one God-head, there are three Perſons converſing with, ſpeaking too, and glorifying one another. Which Union and Communion, of the Three Perſons between themſelves, is peculiar to the Deity, and incommunicable to any meer Creature.

1 Cor. 8. 6.

But to us there is but one God, the Father, of whom are all things, and we in him; and one Lord Jeſus Chriſt, by whom are all things, and we by him.

CHAP. I.

That God is one in Eſſence.

THat God is but one, you have this declared concerning him by Moſes, Deut. 6. 4. The Lord our God is one Lord. Alſo by God's own immediate Teſtimony you have the ſame Truth pronounced, Deut. 32. 39. See now that I, even I am He, and there is no God with me. To which you may add, Iſa. 44. 8. Is there a God beſides me? I know not any. He puts that laſt Clauſe, as the cleareſt Evidence, and the moſt ultimate Demonſtration of the Truth of this, that God himſelf the true God, and the God of Truth could give us. It is Parallel for Certainty and Infallibility with God's adding an Oath to his Word; even ſuch is this Speech here, I know not any. It comes in, as upon ſecond deliberate Thoughts, after the former Speech declared: And to be ſure if there were another God beſides him, he muſt needs know it. For, 1. He that is God, knows all that are, if they be exiſtent; and therefore if there were another, he muſt needs be privy to it. Eſpecially, 2. Another God: for if there were another God, he muſt be Immenſe in Extent of Being, and ſo take up ſo much room for that his Being to dwell in, as he could not hide nor conceal himſelf from this one God, nor ſcape the Omniſcience of his Eye, who is the true God. And, 3. Another God would have been his Compeer for our true God his God-head, the Rival-ſhip would have been for no leſs. Such is the Intereſt of the very God in this matter, that his Jealouſy, (who profeſſeth of himſelf that he is a jealous God in point of Worſhipping him as God, otherwiſe than he hath appointed); his Jealouſy, I ſay, would have riſen to the heighth of it, and have provoked him to have ſeen to that, and to have ſearched out that of all things elſe. To have an Equal, (Pompeiusve parem) a Corrival for the God-head, would have detracted from the Glory of him, who hath ſaid it, I will not give my Glory to another, Iſa. 42. 8. Sole Dominion is the Eſſential Point to every one that is a Monarch; and God's Glory and Bleſſedneſs lies in that very Point of ſole Dominion: and therefore you find theſe two conjoined, viz. God's Bleſſedneſs and Sovereignty, who is the bleſſed and only Potentate, (ſays Paul of him) 1 Tim. 6. 15. You may therefore well believe him, and take it upon his Word, when he ſpeaks it in this manner, upon his Knowledg; I know not any.

BOOK I.

We need not ſeek out many Reaſons: one God, and one ſufficient Reaſon for it is enough; and that is ſufficient, which hath been in a manner mentioned already before: That there is no Room, or Space for two Immenſe Beings, divers from each other. When therefore God ſays, in Iſa. 63. 3. There is none with me, his meaning muſt be the ſame with this, in 1 Cor. 8. 5. There is no other God but one, i.e. no God divers from him. The God-head is but one, yet the Perſons in this one God-head are more than one. We may ſafely ſay of each Perſon, as of the Father, that He is God, and likewiſe of the Son, that He is God, and of the Holy Ghoſt, that He is God. And that there are three, each of whom is God, but ſtill it is but one and the ſame God for Nature, and that Oneneſs, 1 Joh. 5. 8. in and by which the three are ſaid to be one, is that they all three are one God alike. The God-head is but one, and we muſt be wary of ſaying there are three Gods, that would ſound at leaſt too much, as if there were one God diverſe from the other; whereas one and the ſame God-head is in all, and each of the three, you may ſay it of each thrice over, the Father is God, the Son is God, &c. But that there are three Gods, ſounds harſh, and is condemned by Scripture-Language, yea by the Text: There are many Gods, but to us but one.

And the Reaſon of it is his Infiniteneſs for Perfection, as well as his Immenſity: for he comprehends all Perfections within himſelf, or elſe he were not Infinite, and his Bleſſedneſs conſiſts in it, ſo that there cannot be a God diverſe from himſelf.

CHAP.

CHAP. II.

That this God one in Essence, is three in Persons, who jointly co-operate in all God's External Works.

1 Cor. 8. 6.

To us there is but one God the Father, and one Lord Jesus Christ.

HEre are two Persons mentioned in the Text, the Father, and Christ the Lord; and these two Persons are made distinct in the God-head. The Father is a Relate, and there must be a Son to answer as a Correlate thereunto, and an only begotten Son, for he is that one Lord over [us] Saints, and all other Things in the Text. So great a Father would put no other Person into that Sovereignty with himself, but such a Son who is of as high a Birth, and for substantiality of Nature, and Generation, equal with himself; and who in his very Person should greaten, and fill up this Office of Lord over all the Saints, by whom we and all things else, are, and do subsist.

There is a third Person in the God-head, the Spirit of God the Father, and of Christ; who, in my handling the Point will fall in, and appear to be that only true God, as well as these other two named.

And this is a prime Principle for me to premit, for it is influential into the most particular parts of this whole Discourse. It runs through every Vein of it, and we shall meet with it at every Turn, yea, whole Treatises in it refer to the Doctrine of three Persons in the Trinity, and therefore it cannot be omitted here, but deservedly and necessarily claims a place amongst these Principles I set first.

And further, there is this Occasion of my inserting it. We may, and cannot but know, that there hath risen up in this our Age, a Generation, of all others the most presumptuous, that have affirmed all the whole Creation to be but emanations of the God-head, or, in plain words, to be materially God himself, tho turquoised and transflated by himself into so many lesser parcels of Beings, which considered apart, we call Creatures: And that it is but the Folly and Ignorance of Men, to think themselves to be but Creatures different essentially from God: And that if Men would but believe themselves to be God really, and indeed, (which, say they, we all are); they would be freed from that fond dotage of being in subjection to the Law of God, and bondage to the fear of Hell, and should instantly be infranchised, and enter into all the Priviledges the God-head hath. And because they here of, and in Scriptures find three spoken of, to be in that one God, as Persons distinct, whom these Men foreseeing to stand in their way to this their Aspirement of each, and every Man to be as so many distinct Persons enjoying the God-head themselves with God; therefore they make no more ado, but throw down that blessed Society of three in the God-head, allowing them no other reality in the Divine Being, but as three Manifestations, or else Operations of God in us, and to us, doing herein like Men that are ambitious, and would rise, they cast down those that are in Rank above them: So these would deal with the Trinity, as if they stood in their way to this high Preferment: An high Preferment indeed, which Satan (having first sinned himself by the like impious Ambition) prompted our first Father unto, Gen. 3. 5. You shall be as Gods: And he has left the Seeds of this Aspirement in our corrupted Nature, upon which God said, Man is become as one of Us.

But the Nature of God blessed for ever, cannot admit of this, nor be able to raise a Creature unto it, for it is utterly inconsistent. For evidence of which, the Man Jesus, tho the Father loved him above all his Saints and Angels, yet all the Power in God could not make him God in Essence, or in Nature; all that could be done for him, was to be one in Perſon with him, who is God. This he might be, but to turn his Human Nature into the Divine Being, was incompatible with it.

A lower Degree of accurſed Pride than this, fell into the Heart of the Devil himſelf, whoſe Sin in his firſt apoſtatiſing from God, take the heighth of it then, is conceived to be but a ſtomaching that Man ſhould be one day advanced unto the hypoſtatical Union, and be one in Perſon with the Son of God, which his Proud Angelical Nature (then in actual Exiſtence the higheſt of Creatures) could not brook. But the Devil was modeſt in compariſon to theſe Men's Pride, which uſurps upon the whole of the three Perſons at once; and will not endure them Compeers with themſelves. And truly theſe could have no better way whereby to ſtep into theſe Thrones, in their Imaginations, than to depoſe our bleſſed Three, by ſetting up a Religion, and Opinion, whereby Millions of Perſons inſtead of thoſe Three bleſſed Ones, ſhould communicate of the God-head, in the ſame manner as theſe bleſſed Perſons do. This cauſed me to review the Scriptures afreſh for the diſquiſition of this great Truth.

My Method in diſpatching this great Point muſt be brief, and contracted. And therefore, tho the Scriptures afford plenty of evidence every where, yet I was ſatisfied with one full Paſſage of Scripture, which I met with at firſt in the very entrance of my diſquiſition about the Trinity of the Perſons in the one God-head, and which is uſually cited out of Moſes for it, in ſeveral Paſſages of his in that one Book of Geneſis. And I conſidered with my ſelf, that as he was the firſt Pen-man of any Scripture, ſo he muſt needs have laid the Foundation (tho more darkly and obſcurely) of ſuch Goſpel-Truths, as this of the Perſons muſt be ſuppoſed to be, if it proved to be a Truth at all; and I finding that Chriſt in his Concertations with the Carnal Jew, profeſſeth in preaching the Goſpel, which ſeem'd new to them, to witneſs and preach none other things, than thoſe, which Moſes particularly, and the Prophets did ſay: And the Doctrine of the Goſpel bringing forth this great Truth to Light more clearly, and ſo poſitively, and determinately, I judged that this great Truth, (if a Truth at all) muſt be extant in Moſes; and Paul having appealed unto Moſes to give Evidence, unto Moſes I did go.

And in the beginning of his firſt Chapter, I was accoſted with his Narrative of the Creation, as it is in the firſt Days work ſet out, ver. 1, 2, 3. And after that, more particularly, with that renowned Conſultation which God had about the making of Man, and his Speech uttered concerning it; Let us make Man (the ſummary of all things that he had made) in our Image, according to our Likeneſs, ver. 24. of that Chapter; in which Moſes bringeth God in, ſpeaking in the Language of an [Us] Let Us make Man. Which [Us] imports a plurality of Perſons to have been with God when he created Man. And we have the ſame [Us] twice uſed by Moſes, when in like manner he bringeth God in ſpeaking of, and to himſelf, Gen. 3 22. The Man is become as one of Us. And then Chap. 11. ver. 7. at the Confuſion of Languages, Let Us go down. And at the overthrow of Sodom, 'tis ſaid in Gen. 19. 24. That the Lord rained Fire from the Lord out of Heaven.

Ireneus in Præfat. lib. 4. Homo per manus Dei plaſmatus eſt, hoc eſt, per Filium, & Spiritum Sanctum, quibus etiam dixit, Faciamus hominem.

And tho I find ſome of our Divines ſomewhat difficult to admit thoſe Arguments, drawn from all the Proofs out of the firſt Chapter of Geneſis, and are exceptions here and there againſt ſome of them; yet finding in a ſearch and ſtudy of other Scriptures, which be alledged for the confirmation of the whole point it ſelf, that ſo many of thoſe Scriptures uſually brought for it out of the Prophets, and the New Teſtament, do flow into this Current of Moſes, and ſpeak the ſame Things, and well nigh in the ſame Phraſes, that Moſes hath uſed, and all unto this one purpoſe and intent, that there are ſuch bleſſed Perſons in the God-head, God with God; I thereupon reſolved to content my ſelf with thoſe few Allegations out of Moſes alone. And finding them ſo ſtrangely and ſtrongly back'd by thoſe other Scriptures, that came in with their Suffrages unto theſe of Moſes; I then ſet up my reſt in theſe Citations out of him, to make them the Rendezvous and Center of thoſe other Scripture-Proofs, which of themſelves, tho ſtanding ſevered and ſingle, might each be a ſufficient Argument alone by themſelves, yet marching marching under Moses's Banner, and being further Explanations of his Speech, they altogether have a joint united Force, as so many twisted Cords, or as so many smaller, they contribute their Waters into the same great Stream, and Channel.

1. For those Words used about the whole Creation, Gen. 1. 1, 2, 3. In the beginning God created the Heaven, and the Earth. And the Earth was without form, and void, and Darkness was upon the Face of the Deep: and the Spirit of God moved upon the Face of the Waters. And God said, Let there be Light; and there was Light. These Words being prefaced to the whole of the Creation, many judicious Divines insist upon them, as denoting the hand that each Person had in the whole Work of Creation, and this is no less back'd by other Scriptures, which follow. The Father is said to create all things by Jesus Christ, Eph. 3. 9. And the Son is said to create, Heb. 1. Unto the Son he says, Thy Throne, O God, is for ever, and ever, ver. 8. And God, even thy God hath anointed thee with the Oil of Gladness above thy Fellows, ver. 9. And, Thou Lord in the beginning hast laid the Foundation of the Earth: and the Heavens are the Works of thine Hands, v. 10. And the Holy Ghost is said to create, Psal. 104. 30. Thou sendest forth thy Spirit, they are created: and thou renewest the Face of the Earth. And the word Elohim being used of each Person singly, tho it be a Word of the Plural Number: yet, as when Magistrates are stiled Elohim, Psal. 82. 6. I have said, you are Gods: Each Magistrate may be called Elohim; so applied to each Person singly, it may be said, that Elohim the Father Created, and Elohim the Son created, &c. Creation being an Action that is common to the Persons jointly. Both the Plural in the Word, אלהים God, and the Singular in the Word ברא Created, are fitly joined then, when the Great, and materially the General Work of the Creation of the whole World visible and invisible, made out of nothing immediately, is first spoken of: as this of creating both Heaven and Earth in the beginning, was. And the Creation in a singular manner is common to the Three, without a special Appropriation to any one of the three. And then the Argument for this Interpretation will run thus, that who created Heaven and Earth, is that Elohim of whom Moses did speak; but out of other Scriptures it is plain, that the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost created Heaven, and Earth; and therefore these Words of Elohim, are spoken of all Three.

I will not utterly leave out that Argument from the first Words, God created, which many judicious and holy Divines insist upon. That the Word אלהים God, is in the Plural Number, signifying more than one; and yet ברא Created is in the Singular, because that the Persons were in a Plurality, or more than one; but the Verb Created, was in the Singular, to notify the Unity and Oneness of the God-head. But there are so many exceptions against this, which have broken the Wards of the Lock, that it is difficult to find a Key which shall open it. I confess, I like not to say of the Persons, that they are Gods in the Plural: to say of each Person singly, that he is God, that is safe, but it is not so to say of them, that they are Gods. It sounds a Diversity of the God-head, as well as Distinction of the Persons. The Word אלהים Elohim therefore, tho in the Declension of it it be of the Plural Number, yet in the sense of it 'tis a Singular, sometimes used to signify the God-head, sometimes applied to each of the Persons singly, and so no Argument can be fetch'd from it.

But the Argument I urge from these three Verses is, That in them the three Persons are distinctly rehearsed in the Work of the Creation. First, the Father, in that saying, God created Heaven and Earth: which Work of Creation is more generally attributed to the Father; as in our Creed, I believe in God the Father Almighty, the Maker of Heaven and Earth, &c. Then the Son, who is the Word of the Father, by whom he made all things, Eph. 3. 9. is hiddenly covered, and yet truly notified in the 3*d* verse, God said, Let there be Light, &c. And this word is in the Chapter repeated five times, in the second, fourth, fifth, and sixth Days Work of the Creation; and adds a Confirmation, that the Son was included, and aimed at ultimately in Moses his [God said]; for in John 1. 3. 'tis said, Without the Word nothing was made that was made. As in Moses, all was by the same [God said, Let there be] created, as well as the Light. And it is no Objection, to say, that the first Days Work, the Creation of Heaven and Earth, was without it, or that Heaven, and the Earth was made the firſt Day, before the Light, which was the ſecond Day: For the Heavens are ſaid to be made by the Word of God, Pſal. 136. 5. To him, that by Wiſdom made the Heavens, not by the Attribute Wiſdom; for in the Proverbs Wiſdom is the Perſon, and it is ſaid, Prov. 3. 19. The Lord by Wiſdom hath founded the Earth. They were therefore all made both Heaven and Earth, and all things in them by one, and the ſame; [God ſaid] and by his Word.

But finding the Word [Us] repeated again, and again in Moſes's Story, denoting Perſons whom God ſpeaks unto, as at the Creation of Man, and again in matters of Government about Man, as at confounding their Languages, Let Us go down, Gen. 11. 7. And in the Prophets the ſame; and ſo many other Scriptures flowing in, compared with theſe of Moſes to give Evidence, I reſolved to content my ſelf with the Teſtimony of Moſes alone, as it came illuſtrated unto me by ſo many concurrent Witneſſes, ſo that I will not divert, but will center in this one Proof alone, as the Seal for all the other.

Gen. 1. 26. Let us make Man in our Image, after our Likeneſs.

It is God ſpeaking himſelf, God ſaid, and not Moſes, as in the Name of God: And there is no Inſtance in the Hebrew, that We, or Us, is ever uſed of one ſingle Perſon, when God himſelf ſpeaks of himſelf. And,

Secondly, It is God ſpeaking, not by way of Declaration of what he could do alone ſingly; but uttered by way of Conference unto, and with ſome other Perſons. And not only ſo, but 'tis an Excitation or Calling upon them, to do it with him, as if he ſhould ſay, Come, Let us make, as thoſe that being with God at that Time, were to join in that Work alſo with him.

Thirdly, God ſpeaks not to his Attributes: No wiſe Man ever thus ſpeaks to his own Abilities, Come, let us do ſuch or ſuch a thing; which more eſpecially appears in that other Speech, Let us go down. 'Tis a Perſon, or Perſons, who are ſaid to deſcend: as elſewhere, the Holy Ghoſt is ſaid to deſcend in the likeneſs of a Dove, Mat. 3. 16. and the Son of God, often in the Goſpels, to come from Heaven.

Fourthly, Theſe ſpoken unto, were not the Angels, (as ſome think) for they are never called our Creators: But God alone is ſaid to create, expreſly, Job 9.8. Iſa. 45. 18. And he is ſtill ſaid to create by himſelf, becauſe he uſed no other Inſtrument: So expreſly in Iſa. 44. 24. Thus ſaith the Lord thy Redeemer, and he that formed thee from the Womb: I am the Lord that maketh all things; that ſtretcheth forth the Heavens alone, and ſpreadeth abroad the Earth by my ſelf: And Chap. 45. 18. Eſpecially, the Angels create not the Souls of Men, which God alone is the Father of, not Angels, Heb. 12. 9. Nor are we ſaid, to be made after their Image, but God's, Col. 3. 10.

Nor are the Angels meant, when it is ſaid, Thy Makers are thy Husband, as Jer. 54. 5. Or, Remember thy Creators in the Days of thy Youth; which ſtile of Creators is yet in the Plural uſed, when God is ſpoken of, in Multitudes of other Places, Pſal. 149. 2. In his Makers. Iſa. 44. 2. The Lord thy Makers. Yea, as Let us make, is in the excitation to it: ſo, in the next Verſe which mentions the performance of this Work, it is accordingly ſaid, [So, God created Man] which was the thing done, it is thrice repeated: 1. So, God created Man in his own Image; 2. In the Image of God created he him; 3. Male and Female created he them: God, not Angels. Nor did he uſe them as Inſtruments, as when he gave the Law he did, but not in the Creation of the leaſt Creature.

But let us further conſider things impartially, comparing the Old and New Teſtament together, as to the Explication of this one Paſſage, Let us, &c.

1. Let us enquire, whether it be not elſewhere in the New Teſtament ſaid, when the Creation is ſpoken of, that there were Perſons, yea that theſe Perſons were [with God] yea, and that when Man was made, John 1. 1. In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and again, ver. 2. The ſame was in the beginning with God. Yea, and is it not as expreſly there affirmed, that that Word that was with God, was at the making of Man? ver. 3. All things were made by him, and without him was not any thing made, that was made: And if all things were, and nothing made without him, then Man certainly: And doth it not follow alſo, from from ver. 4. that He was the Life of Man? In him was Life, and the Life was the Light of Men. Chap. 2.

Again, We find another Person, the Spirit of God, to have been with God at the Creation, Moving and upholding the Waters, Gen. 1. 2. And the Earth was without form, and void, and Darkness was upon the Face of the deep: and the Spirit of God moved upon the Face of the Waters. And Psal. 33. 6. By the Word of the Lord were the Heavens made, and all the Host of them by the breath of his Mouth. The Psalmist interpreting Moses, and referring to the Creation, speaks thus. And why should not we think then, these to be the [Us]; even the Father, Word, and Spirit. This at the Creation.

2. Again, In that other place, we find a Consultation about a Fact belonging to the Government of the World, to be done even as here, Let Us make: so, here; Come, let Us descend. Now, let us see, if more Persons than one are not said to have been of Counsel with God in these. 'Tis certain, he excludes all Creatures to be of his Counsel: Isa. 40. 13, 14. Who hath directed the Spirit of the Lord, or being his Counsellor, hath taught him? With whom took he Counsel, and who instructed him, and taught him in the path of Judgment? and taught him Knowledg, and shewed to him the way of Understanding? but professeth of his Son, that he is his Counsellour, Isa. 9. 6. For unto us a Child is born, unto us a Son is given, and the Government shall be upon his Shoulder: and his Name shall be called, Wonderful, Counsellour, the mighty God, the everlasting Father, the Prince of Peace. And the same of his Spirit, 1 Cor. 2. 10, 11. But God hath revealed them unto us by his Spirit: for the Spirit searcheth all things, yea, the deep things of God. For what Man knoweth the things of a Man, save the Spirit of Man which is in him? Even so the things of God knoweth no Man, but the Spirit of God. And as here, in Genesis, when God was to create Man: so there, when he was to judg and exert a great act of Government in the World. And it came to matter of Fact, which when it is to be done, he speaks to those of Counsel with him, as Persons interested therein, and shews them what he is about to do; even in like manner, as he doth at the creating of Man, Let us make Man, &c. Now then, when we shall read in the New Testament, and find that Word, who was with God in the beginning, John 1. 1. expresly called God at first dash. And to have been with God as a Person distinct from him, and this Person called the Word there, to be the only begotten Son of God, in ver. 14. And shall further hear, that the Son of Man, whom that Word is said to be made one Person with, is one with God; and that in his Person he says, Joh. 5. 19. Verily, Verily, I say unto you, The Son can do nothing of himself, but what he seeth the Father do: for what things soever he doth, these also doth the Son likewise. When we consider this, it will be then plain to us, that God doth nothing without an Us; and that his Son was an Original Co-worker with him in all things, which he accordingly sheweth unto him: for it follows, That doth the Son likewise. God doth nothing, but the Son likewise; he shews and tells his Son first, and by shewing it to him, consulteth with him about it: And mark the coherence, ver. 17. He not only consulteth with him, but they two are said to work together every thing that is done, from that first beginning of acting, any thing outwardly even from the Creation: My Father worketh [hitherto,] and I work: and the Jews thereupon, ver. 18. Seek the more to kill him, not only because he had broken the Sabbath, but had said also, that God was his Father, making himself equal with God. Having a joint hand with him, and working all and every thing as much as the Father, whom all acknowledg to be God. Where, upon such Words of theirs, it was that Christ pertinently replies, as you heard, ver. 19. Verily, verily, I say unto you, the Son can do nothing of himself, but what he seeth the Father do: for what things soever he doth, these also doth the Son likewise; acknowledging they had spoken rightly according to his very true Sense and Intent. Now judg impartially, you find this Man, this Person, speaks in the Name of one that was with God afore the World was, John 1. 1. One equal with God. Verse 18 of this 5*th* Chapter of John, you find himself say, that God doth nothing, but he shews it to him, as one to co-work and join with him. And you find here in Moses, that God, when he was to make Man, he consulted some or other Person, then with him, saying, Let Us make; that is, join together in the same Work; Let Us make Man; and shall we not judg, that this this his Son was here, and One of the Us? And there is a Spirit, who is of this Cabinet-Counsel, John 16. 13, 15. who shews, (as Christ's Word of him is) and over-hears all, and is privy to what the Father still says unto the Son. So then, here are Three that make the Us.

3. As in Creating, these are joined as an Us; so in Governing and Judging the World: My Father worketh hitherto, and I work, says Christ, Joh. 5. 17. In such Works also this Us is used; in confounding the Languages: and in bringing Vengeance on Sodom: In bringing them out of Egypt we find the same; Gen. 11. 7. Go to, Let us go down, and there confound their Language: The Holy Ghost descended to give Tongues; and he descended to confound them. And, for the Judgment on Sodom; I shall insist upon it a little: Gen. 18. ver. 1. 'Tis said, The Lord appeared; How? ver. 2. Three Angels came: One whereof was the Lord; and the other two created Angels, Companions of him. Two Angels went to Sodom, ver. 22. and the third stayed, Chap. 19. 1. who was the Lord himself that communed with Abraham; Of whom 'tis said, Chap. 18. 20, 21. The Lord said, Because the Cry of Sodom and Gomorrah is great, and because their Sin is very grievous, I will go down now, and see whether they have done altogether according to the Cry of it, &c. And he staying with Abraham, 'tis also said, ver. 22. But Abraham stood yet before the Lord. This Angel was God, or bearing the Person of one that was God; for Exod. 3. 2. the Angel that appeared in the Bush, says, ver. 6. I am the God of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob: the same, that as an Angel appeared to the Fathers: To Abraham, Gen. 18. To Isaac, Gen. 26. And to Jacob, Chap. 31. and Chap. 32. 9, 24. Whom, Gen. 48. 15, 16. Jacob, in his Blessings, calls both God, and an Angel; as Hosea also doth, Chap. 12. 3, 4, 5. This Angel, who was betrusted with the Government of the World, and said, he would see, ver. 21. was not the Father, for he is never Missus, Sent; as the word Angel imports this was, and yet withal was [GOD] though in the appearance and Office of an Angel. And we read of God sent by God, in Zech. 2. 8. Thus saith the Lord, He hath sent me to the Nation, &c. 'Tis Christ's Speech of his Father's sending him. So also, Isa. 48. 16, 17. — The Lord God and his Spirit hath sent me, &c. He that is the Lord, says, he was sent by the Lord; even as we read the New Testament also speaks of Christ: And he that is sent, must be distinct, and a Person distinct from the Sender. Now there are two Persons that send him there, The Lord God, and his Spirit, hath sent me: And he that was sent was God, and no less Jehovah than they; as all the Contexts afore and after shew. So then, you find three Persons there; and for this Cause it is, he is stiled the Angel of God's Face, Isa. 63. 9.

And there you meet with the three Persons too, as joining in that great work of Redemption out of Egypt. First, the Father is spoken of in ver. 7, 8. I will mention the Loving-Kindness of the Lord, and the Praises of the Lord, according to all that the Lord hath bestowed on us: and the great Goodness towards the House of Israel, which he hath bestowed on them according to his Mercies, and according to the multitude of his Loving-Kindnesses: For he said, Surely they are my People; Children that will not Lie: So he was their Saviour. The Son, in ver. 9. In all their Affliction he was afflicted, and the Angel of his Presence saved them: In his Love and in his Pity he redeemed them. And he bare them and carried them all the days of old. The Spirit, in ver. 10. But they rebelled and vexed his Holy Spirit. He that is called Holy Spirit, in the New, is according to the Hebraism, called the Spirit of Holiness, in the Old. But it is Christ, that was the Angel of his Presence, appearing afore God, interceding, and in whose Face God shines, 2 Cor. 3. Exod. 33. 2. My Angel, in ver. 14. is interpreted, God's Face, Presence. John 14. 9. He that hath seen me, hath seen the Father. And he it was that saw the Affliction of his People, Exod. 3. 7. who ver. 8. is said to come down; even as upon the occasion of Sodom, you have heard it, in like manner spoken. And it was this Angel, in whom (God says) his Name was; that is, his very Nature, Exod. 23. 20, 21, 22. And 'twas he that governed them in the Wilderness.

Now, this Angel, or, the Lord sent in that appearance, both to Abraham about Sodom: and to Moses, Exod. 3. And to the People of Israel, was one and the same, as all places shew: And this was the Lord himself; as Mal. 3. 1.

He

He is expresly called The Lord; and the Angel of the Covenant; Even Christ, the Second Person whom they tempted. So Paul, Neither let us tempt Christ, as some of them also tempted, and were destroyed of Serpents, 1 Cor. 10. 9. So Stephen expresly, Acts 7. 32, 37, 38. I am the God of thy Fathers, the God of Abraham, and the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob, ver. 37. This is that Moses which said unto the Children of Israel, A Prophet shall the Lord your God raise up unto you, of your Brethren, like unto me; Him shall ye hear. This is he that was with the Church in the Wilderness, with the Angel, which spake to him in the Mount Sinai. And this Person, who came down in the appearance of an Angel, to Abraham, about Sodom, Abraham as expresly enstiles, The Lord, and Judge of all the World, Gen. 18. 25. All which consider, how it punctually agrees with what in the New Testament out of John 5. hath been observed, as by comparing them, will appear. For, as the Son hitherto had wrought in all Works with the Father, as you heard out of John 5. 20, 21. So ver. 22. of that Chapter, God hath committed all Judgment unto the Son. And it is answerably said by Moses, Gen. 19. 24. The Lord, or Jehovah, rained down Fire from Jehovah; that is, the Son, who was God, he did it by Commission from the Father, that was God with him; as to whom he had committed the Judgment of the World: And so was, by his Office, the proper Executioner of this Vengeance upon Sodom: He also joining in all Works afore, and since, together with the Father, who shewing him all he doth, the Son doth it likewise; That all might honour the Son as well as the Father; as Christ there infers, John 5. 23. Chap. 2.

4. That which fully added to my Conviction, That the Us in Scripture-Language, when spoken of, and by God, intends these Three in God, whom we call Persons; and that to be spoken More Regio, after the manner and stile of Kings, is, That I further expresly find these Three, Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, each singly, and apart, using it in the Name of the other two, saying [Us] and [We.]

1. The Father, He whom all grant, is he that is to be understood, when 'tis said, [God said] Let Us; and as speaking to the rest.

2. The Holy Ghost, Isa. 6. 8. Also I heard the Voice of the Lord, saying, Whom shall I send; and who will go for us? If the question be, What Person spake this Us here; and what other Persons he speaks of as involved in it?

1. For the Person that speaks it, it is the Holy Ghost. Read Acts 28. 25, 26. Paul resolves it so; Well spake the Holy Ghost by Esaias the Prophet unto our Fathers, Saying, Go unto this People, and say, Hearing ye shall hear, and shall not understand, &c. Who is the same Lord, that in Isaiah says, Chap. 6. Verse 9. Go and tell this People, hear ye indeed, but understand not, &c. And He it is that said also Verse 8. Whom shall I send, and who will go for Us? And the like Speech and Character of Language, attributed to the Holy Ghost in the New Testament elsewhere, argues, that he is the Person. For upon the very same, or like, Occasion, we find him as a Person brought in, speaking of himself apart, under the Stile of Me. The Errand, or Business whereof he here speaks, Who will go for Us? was the sending forth Ministers, and Teachers, and Prophets: As it is expres's in that of the Acts, and in Isaiah. Nay, when the same Occasion or Errand came afore him, we hear him another time expresly speaking, Acts 13. 2. The Holy Ghost said, Separate me Barnabas and Saul for the work whereunto I have called them. 'Tis the same Employment of sending out Ministers, Paul and Barnabas, and it is the same Person, the Holy Ghost in both, and he a Person; for he speaks as a Person, [I] and [I], [Me] and [Me]; and one that was God. Add to this, that of Isa. 48. 17. And now the Lord God, and his Spirit hath sent me. Thus much that he was the Person that spake it. And,

2. For the Persons in whose Name he says Us, they are the Father and the Son. In ver. 3. you have the Angels cry, Holy, Holy, Holy is the Lord of Hosts. All that some would make of these Holies, is not in respect of the Three Persons, but to shew, God is ter Sanctus, ter Optimus, Most Holy, which alone I would not urge. But when I considered, that in this Chapter there is such a Presence and Mention of these Persons, I cannot but affix even that also, and BOOK I. that the [Us] verſ. 8. refers to it; and that the Holy Ghoſt in that Verſe doth give that Interpretation or Gloſs upon it.

The Father to be Lord of Hoſts, all acknowledg: And that the Son Chriſt is particularly intended, the firſt Verſe of Iſa. 6. compared with John 12. 37, 39, 40, 41. does manifeſt, Therefore they could not believe, becauſe that Eſaias ſaid again, he hath blinded their Eyes, and hardned their Heart, &c. Theſe things ſaid Eſaias, when he ſaw his Glory, and ſpake of him. What Him? He of whom he had ſpoke in verſ. 37. But though he had done ſo many Miracles before them, yet they believed not on him.

Again, Thoſe Words in Iſa. 6. verſ. 3. are alſo ſpoken of the Lord, who was that Angel that was tempted in the Wilderneſs, Numb. 14. 21, 22. which Lord was Chriſt, 1 Cor. 10. 9. who alſo ſate between the Cherubims.

Then the third Perſon is the Holy Ghoſt, verſ. 8. 9. whoſe work it is, to deal with Mens Hearts by the Word, ſoftening or hardening.

So then, there are an [Us] of Perſons diſtinctly and apart mentioned, and ſpoken of: And then the Holy Ghoſt at laſt, comprehending them all in this Word Us.

Then, Thirdly; For the Son, we find him likewiſe ſpeaking the ſame Language, Sure I am, that Word Us, John 17. is his Speech, to his Father the firſt Perſon, verſ. 11. —Holy Father, keep through thine own Name, thoſe whom thou haſt given me; that they may be one, as we are. And verſ. 21. —That they alſo may be one in Us.

Thus you have ſeen, I have proſecuted no other Argument out of Scripture, than what the [Us] in Moſes, in three Places, hath led me into; and alledged but ſuch other Scriptures as are Complices, and of ſtrict Intelligence with thoſe Paſſages, and ſerve to the Illuſtration of them.

CHAP.

CHAP. III.

That these Three Persons in the Godhead are Persons distinct one from the other.

WHO would not judg them to be so, by what hath been already said? But yet for further Evidence, it is apparent from this;

First; That they are found speaking, not only Us, as Persons, but also ordinarily, one to another, in the language of [I] and [Thou], as Heb. 10. 5. A Body hast Thou fitted Me, which Christ spoke to his Father, as a Person existing with Him, then when he took an humane Nature. And, Lo, I come to do thy Will, Heb. 10. 7. Again, the Father speaks to the Son, Psal. 110. 1. The Lord said unto my Lord. And again, from Heaven, This is my Son, Matth. 3. 17. And the Holy Ghost, as distinct from both, descending as a Dove.

And, secondly; One speaks of another, as another Person distinct from himself; thus, the Son of the Father, John 5. 30. — I seek not mine own Will, but the Will of the Father which hath sent me. Vers. 31. If I bear witness of my self, my Witness is not true. Vers. 32. There is another that beareth witness of me; and I know that the witness which he witnesseth of me is true. Likewise the Son, of the Father, and of the Holy Ghost; John 14. 16, and 26. And I will pray the Father, and he shall give you another Comforter, that he may abide with you for ever. But the Comforter, which is the Holy Ghost, whom the Father will send in my Name, he shall teach you all things, and bring all things to your remembrance, whatsoever I have said unto you. And John 16. 13. Howbeit, when he the Spirit of Truth is come, he will guide you into all Truth; for he shall not speak of himself; but whatsoever he shall hear, that shall he speak, and he will shew you things to come. He, the Masculine, is put with a Neuter Gender, in the word πνεῦμα, Spirit, which would never have been, but to design a personality in him.

Thirdly; You have each speaking of himself as a Person. Thus the Holy Ghost, Acts 13. 1, 2. Separate me Barnabas and Saul, for the Work whereunto I have called them.

Fourthly; There are Works proper to each assigned: To instance but in one Scripture; 1 Cor. 12. 4, 5, 6. Now there are diversities of Gifts, but the same Spirit. And there are differences of Administrations, but the same Lord. And there are diversities of Operations, but it is the same God which worketh all in all. All three are mentioned, and as having, to distinguish them, several Works: And the Spirit there is said to have his own Things proper to him, as the Son the Father's: And, vers. 11. He is said to distribute them as he will; which, to say, is proper only to a Person.

Fifthly; These Persons are spoken of as distinct, when also they are called God; Psal. 45. 6, 7. Thy Throne, O God, is for ever and ever.—Thou lovest Righteousness, and hatest Iniquity: Therefore God, thy God, hath anointed thee with the Oil of Gladness above thy Fellows. And there also we meet with all three Persons too, for Spirit is the Oil he is anointed with.

Lastly; There is this most evident Demonstration, That the Man Jesus being assumed and taken up into one Person with the Son of God, that He, the Son of God, existing in the Man as one Person with him, should speak of himself as a distinct Person from the Father and the Spirit: In Joh. 10. 31. I and the Father are one. Here he speaks of Himself and the Father, as Persons distinct, and yet both but one true God; as vers. 33. the Jews understood him, That thou being a Man, makest thy self God: One God and two Persons of the three, and yet it was not the Man as Man only that was that Person; but it was the Son who was truly God with the Father, and the Man being made one Perſon with the Son, ſpeaks this of himſelf; ſo thereby evidently declaring, that in the Godhead there was the Perſon of the Son diſtinct from the Father; and ſo, in his Defence of himſelf, he declares, Verſ. 36. Say ye of him whom the Father hath ſanctified and ſent into the World, Thou blaſphemeſt; becauſe I ſaid, I am the Son of God? And again, Verſ. 38. Know and believe, that I am in the Father, and the Father in me; as two ſtill, (as [I] and the [Father] imports) enjoying one Godhead: And elſewhere, he profeſſeth his Manhood not to be alone the Perſon. And it was not God the Father that was incarnate, and in that reſpect is ſtiled the Son, as ſome have wickedly affirmed; for if the Father had been one Perſon with this Man, this Man could not have ſaid, I and the Father; or elſewhere often [I] and [Thou], ſpeaking to his Father.

And indeed, I have judged one great End and Iſſue of God's ordaining this Perſonal Union of the Man Jeſus, and the Son of God, to have been, to demonſtrate and aſcertain us, That there is this diſtinction of Perſons in the Godhead; in that the Man now aſſumed, talks at that rate of himſelf, as of a Perſon with God, and yet diſtinct from his Father; and that he was ſo, he refers unto all his Works, to believe and know it by; for that, whilſt he ſo ſpake of himſelf, he ſhould do ſuch Works; This invincibly argues the Truth of what he ſo ſpake, as in that, John 10. in defence of himſelf, and thoſe Speeches of himſelf, verſ. 37, 38. he argues, If I do not the Works of my Father, believe me not: But if I do, though ye believe not me, believe the Works; that ye may know and believe, that the Father is in me, and I in him. Had the Scripture declared this diſtinction of Perſons over and over, in a Doctrinal Aſſertion, it had not been ſo great an evidence as this; to hear the Man, who when become one Perſon with the Son of God, ſhould himſelf ſtill uſe to ſay, [I] and my Father; and when he ſpeaks to his Father, to ſay, I and Thou. Himſelf came by this ſingular Way and Means, to declare it ſo invincibly, as nothing could have been more ſatisfyingly done. That I may ſay, as the Apoſtle to the Hebrews doth of other Revelations of Divine Truth, ſo I of this, That after God had, at ſundry times and divers manners, ſpoke this Myſtery of the Diſtinction of Perſons, he hath now ſpoke it to us by the Son himſelf perſonally, as now incarnate and made Man: Who though he appeared to the Fathers, yet never perſonally united to thoſe Appearances as now he did. So that put but theſe things together;

1. That he that was the Son of God, exiſted before the aſſumption of Man's Nature, as a Perſon.

And that, 2. The Man he took up, was not a Perſon of himſelf, but it was the Son that was the Perſon taking up that Man into One [I] or perſonality with himſelf; which that Speech of his own, when he came into the World, (Heb. 10. 5.—A Body haſt thou prepared me) evidently ſhews. The Body, or his Humane Nature, was not the [Me] or Perſon, but he that aſſumes it was the [Me], A Body haſt thou prepared Me.

And then, 3. That hence he ſhould then ſpeak unto the Father, as a Perſon diſtinct from the Father's Perſon, as thoſe their words [Me] and [Thou] do evince. And that He, even after the Man ſo aſſumed, that he ſhould ſpeak as the Perſon when once ſo united, in the Language of Thine and Mine, I and Thou, and the like: This invincibly argues what I have driven at, viz. That the Father and he are diſtinct. And then, that he ſhould ſpeak of [Another] or third, diſtinct from both; [Another Comforter] the Holy Spirit; And he ſhall take of mine, &c. John 16. 15. whilſt himſelf ſays, I the Son, and therefore alius, or Another from both Father and Spirit, and not alius, or another, by having become Man; but as Filius Dei, in whoſe Perſon the Man ſpeaks it of himſelf.

Uſe 1. Is to exhort you to retain and hold faſt this plain and fundamental Truth, and by Faith to receive it, (if you have been diverted from it) as from the Son, and not conſult with Reaſon in it, which yet is not contradictory to it. This I am ſure of, that if the Scriptures ſpeak any thing, they ſpeak this great Truth; and of all other, it hath been the moſt and longeſt tried, of any other.

other. It begun to be questioned in the first Age of Christianity; and, at times, hath been so ever since. Reason contributes little to it, but remains unsatisfied; and yet God hath still cast the Spirits of his People, and won them over to it. Receive it, I say, by Faith; Christ puts them upon bare believing it; John 14. 10, 11. Believest thou not, that I am in the Father, and the Father in Me? The words that I speak unto you, I speak not of my self; but the Father that dwelleth in me, he doth the Works. Believe me, that I am in the Father, and the Father in Me: Or else believe me for the very Works sake.— And when they required a demonstrative Argument, or rational Evidence of it; Christ only affirms it, and having affirmed, refers them to his Works, after he had said it; as was observed before, out of John 10. 38. for if he had not said true, such glorious Divine Works would not have followed such a Doctrine and Profession: And thereupon he calls for Faith, from that Evidence John 10. 37, 38. If I do not the Works of my Father, believe me not: But if I do, though ye believe not me, believe the Works; that ye may know and believe, that the Father is in me, and I in him. David is said to be in Spirit, when he brings in the Lord speaking to the Lord: By which Speech was discovered, both these Persons to be in the Godhead, and distinct as Persons, speaking thus one to another; The Lord said unto my Lord, Psal. 110. David in Spirit (says Christ) said this, Matth. 22. 43, 44. and I remember not that phrase spoken of David, upon any other occasion but this, although it be said, The Spirit of the Lord spake by me: And this was necessary, for Reason would, of all else, never have revealed it, nor entertained it as it is revealed. Heaven opened, when there was the first open distinct discovery of the Three: The Father spake, This is my Son, and the Holy Ghost descended. For but by opening Heaven, and upon occasion of discovering the Son, was this distinctly revealed.

Chap. 4.

CHAP. IV.

That the Three Persons in the Godhead, have an Union and Communion between themselves apart, and Incommunicable unto us.

THE Assertion which I undertake to prove, is this, That God, and Christ, and by consequence the Holy Ghost, have an Union and Communion of a higher kind, than what we are ordained ever to receive; and therefore I call it the supream Sovereign Union. In a word, the Creatures are not God, vailed under the appearance of Creatures, and so hidden as under a Veil, which is the impious falsification of many of the Ranters of our late Age, as appears by their Writings, and which put me upon writing this Discourse.

I. To prove that there is a Sovereign, Supream Union between the three Persons in the Godhead peculiar, and proper to themselves alone, and which cannot be communicated to any mere Creature; I have chose those Passages in Christ's Prayer, whereon to found my Discourse; John 17. 21, 22, 23. That they all may be one, as thou Father art in me, and I in thee, that they also may be one in us; that the World may believe that thou hast sent me. And the Glory which thou gavest me, I have given them; that they may be one, even as we are one, I in them, and thou in me, that they may be made perfect in one, and that the World may know that thou hast sent me, and hast loved them, as thou hast loved me. Whatever use I have made of this 17*th* of John, in discoursing of this Union to another purpose, my scope now is to shew, how all the Ancients have judged this very Thing, (which I have asserted) with clear evidence of Reason, from Christ's manner of Speech, both Negatively and Affirmatively, as I shall alledge their Testimonies by and by.

Vid. Discourse of Election. Book 2. c. 6, 7.

This

BOOK I.

This alone of it ſelf will evidence it, That an Eternity of Time did paſs, when there were no Creatures at all; but the Three Perſons wholly enjoyed themſelves all that Time without interruption. And this alſo will further be demonſtrated in the ſecond Head of this Diſcourſe, which will be a Demonſtration of the Differences and Diſtances of that Communion which is between Father, Son, and Holy Ghoſt, and that which we have with thoſe Perſons.

But to return to the Expoſition of John the 17*th*. That the Union of the Three Perſons in the God-head, is of a higher kind, and not communicable to us, is evident from the manner of Chriſt's Speech in that his Prayer.

1. Negatively, from what he forbears to ſay in it; He does not pray, That we all may be one with them, (as if ſpeaking of the Father, and Himſelf, and the Saints altogether); No, but that we all may be one in them, and ſo with a differing Union from theirs. Thus Auſtin, He prays not that they may be one with us, but one in us.

Non enim dicit Chriſtus ut nobiſcum ſint unum, aut ſimus unum ipſi & nos, ſicut nos unum ſumus: Sed ipſi in natura ſua ſint unum, ſicut nos in Noſtra unum ſumus. Auguſtinus Tract. 107. in Johannem.

2. Poſitively; He ſpeaks of an Union of him and his Father, as ſtanding apart entire from that of the Saints with them; and which though it admit this addition of that Union of the Saints, yet ſtill remains inviolate in it ſelf, notwithſtanding no way intermingled with, or entercommoning with it. He repeats that Union of his and his Fathers five or ſix times, from verſ. 11. to the end; and every time with a Character of ſuch a difference as this. 1. He ſpeaks of the Saints and their Union, as at a diſtance from Himſelf and his Father; and of their Union alſo between themſelves; that they all may be one as We: Of the We he ſpeaks, as of thoſe who are of a Superior Order, and are one by a Superior Union. But of them as with a diſtance, that they, that theſe underſort Creatures, this vulgus Creaturarum, utterly differing and ſeparated from us of themſelves, that they yet may be one in us. 2. In his repetition of it a ſecond time, verſ. 22. that they [alſo]; there is an Emphaſis in the word Alſo as to this purpoſe. 1. [Alſo] that is over and beſides that Union which we have and keep within among our ſelves, even then when they are ſuppoſed united to Us; One in Us: The Us ſtill remain in a ſeparate Aſſociation apart, and retain a Conſortium, an Aſſociation as a Superior [We]. 2. 'Tis a Speech of diminution of their Union in compariſon of the [Us], and ſounds thus; As if Chriſt, looking down from an higher Orb, Sphere, and Throne of Union, whereon Himſelf and his Father ſits, upon theſe poor Things infinitely below, who are void of ſuch a Condition in their Native proper State; upon them Chriſt looking down in love, prays, Let theſe poor Things [alſo] partake of Union with Us; little Ones, who of themſelves are ſo far below us, no way worthy to attain, aſpire to any ſuch Thing, and yet by Grace are capable of in Us. 3. In his ſaying, that they be one, as I in Thee, and thou in Me, verſ. 21. Obſerve, He ſays not either, 1. Ut ſint in te unum, ſicut ego in te unum ſum: That they may be One in Thee, as I am One in Thee: No, but that they may be one in Us, as I in Thee, and Thou in Me: He therein entertaining and reſerving ſtill an Union as peculiar to himſelf. Nor, 2. He ſays not, that Thou may'ſt be one in us, (as involving and reckoning himſelf but as one of them and their Rank) and we all one in Thee; No, but he ſays, As Thou in Me, and I in Thee, (ita ſe a Creaturis ſeparans) and they one in us: whereby he manifeſtly ſeparates himſelf from them, and betakes himſelf to a peculiar Union and Intereſt with God above them.

Athanaſii Oratio 4. adver. Arrianos.

Ambroſ. lib 4. de fide. c. 2.

The repetition of it a ſecond time, verſ. 23. (which I moſt obſerve) is put there by way of Caution, and as with a warineſs that that Union of himſelf and his Father be kept inviolate; I in them, and thou in me, that they may be made perfect in One: As if he had ſaid, when they arrive to their higheſt perfection of Union, yet let them know, 1. their diſtance, That I am above them in it; I in them, and thou in me. 2. Their dependence and derivation of it from me; I in them, and thou in me: And this ſtill continueth, that (ſo) they may be perfected in One: He ſeeks it not, nor would allow it them upon any other Terms. As if he ſhould have ſaid, when they are at their heighth of Union, Thou art not, nor ever can'ſt be in them, with that immediate Union thou art withal in me, and I in thee: I muſt come in as a middle between them and thee, when they are with us in Glory. The deſcent is, The Glory thou haſt given me,

I have given them, verſ. 22. they hold of me even then; I in them, thou in me; and this is their higheſt perfection. Yea, at the laſt Verſe, when he prays his Fathers Love might be in them filling them; His Prayer, you ſee, is not only, that God's Love may be to them, but in them: for the heighth of our Union is the fulneſs of God communicated in Love; as *Epheſ.*3.19. And to know the Love of Chriſt which paſſeth Knowledg, that ye might be filled with all the fulneſs of God. There is firſt Love, then all the fulneſs of God mentioned: for Heaven is but a communication of God in Love; yet even there Chriſt will needs ſtep in between, even God's Love in the Communications of it; and I in them. The Love of God is not ſo in us, ſo that we become the Love of God; nor is God, or Chriſt, ſo in us, as we become God or Chriſt; nor is Chriſt left out, when God communicates himſelf in the higheſt manner: But as Paul ſaith, Herein is your Calling; ſo ſay I of this, Here is the deſcent of that Union on them; God one with Chriſt, and you with God in Chriſt. Yea, I obſerve further his Caution in this great Point to be ſuch, that if in praying for our Oneneſs, he mention himſelf firſt, He will needs bring in his Father's being in him: So verſ. 23. I in you, (is not that enough to make them perfect in One?) No, but thou in me; again, if he mention his Father's Love firſt, as Verſe the laſt, He comes in himſelf for a ſhare alſo; and I in them; He turns it every way: So that whether God be in us, it is becauſe Chriſt is in us; or Chriſt be in us, and ſo we One; it is becauſe God is in Chriſt. Laſtly, which is Ambroſe his Note, Nos unum [erimus] ſed Pater & Filius unum [ſunt]; He ſpeaks of that Union of himſelf, and his Father, as already in Being and Perfection; yea, as that which he then needed not to pray for, and which never needed praying for by him, but he prays that we may be one. He prays not that his Father and he ſhould be One, for they were as fully One already as for ever they could be, (to be ſure, as Second Perſon naturally) and as Man; 'twas ſo beſtowed at once for ever, as it needed no praying for a New: for though it was a Grace at firſt, yet to the Divine Perſon that the Man was now One withal, it was none; yea, it was a condeſcending in him, the ſecond Perſon, to match ſo low, as his own Speech, when he was to aſſume it, imports; Heb. 10.5. A Body haſt thou fitted me; He ſpeaks diminutively of it, and yet aſſumes it. But that the Saints ſhall be one with this High and Mighty US, this US; this is, and was with Chriſt, a Matter of, and Subject for Prayer; and this at this time, when yet they were united unto Chriſt already, as this Text implies; for this of ours depends for ever on Grace, not ſo that of Chriſt's Humane Nature: But once the Union being made tranſit in jus, it then becomes a Right: though at firſt it was the higheſt Grace to that Nature: For why? He is thereby advanced to be the Natural Son of God.

And whereas the word καθὼς, that they may be One, (As) we are One, is urged by ſome for Sameneſs or Oneneſs of Union in kind, it is evident by all that hath been ſpoken, that it is but unum Similitudinis, of Imitation and Similitude, or perhaps of Cauſality, becauſe we are One: The Inſtances of which latter are ſo frequent I need not mention any of them; as, Be perfect, as your Heavenly Father is perfect: Forgive us, as we forgive: As we uſe the Speech in the Lord's Prayer.

Non eſt ſicut æqualitatis ſed hujus modi & ſimilitudinis: imitatione non perfectione. So Origenſis. Ut hæc voluntatis unio naturalis illius in Filio & Patre unitatis imago videatur. Cyrill.

II. There is not only this ſuperior Union of the Three Perſons ſo far above that Union which we poor Creatures have with God: but there is alſo a Supream and Independent Communion between thoſe Perſons in the Godhead, having an entire abſtracted Converſe among themſelves, and incommunicable to any meer Creature; And this Communion, which they had one with another from all Eternity, conſiſts,

1. In that Divine Eternal Life of the Three Perſons among themſelves.
2. In the mutual Intereſt, or Propriety, which they have in the Things of each other.
3. In a mutual Communication and Enjoyment.
4. In a mutual Knowledg and Acquaintance one with another.

5. In

BOOK I.

5. In a mutual Communication, and imparting of Secrets, a diſco very of each others mind.
6. In mutual Love and Delight.
7. In their poſſeſſion of one common and equal Glory and Bleſſedneſs.

I. As to the firſt; The Life of the Three Perſons among themſelves. That excellent Man, in his Age, Biſhop Uſher, in a Sermon before King James, expreſt the dependence which the beſt of Saints, the Apoſtles, held upon the ſupream Life of Chriſt, conſidered as Second Perſon in the Trinity; John 1. 16. And of his Fulneſs have all we received, and Grace for Grace. There is (ſaid he) Plenitudo Fontis, the fulneſs of the Fountain; Pſal. 36. 9. With thee is the Fountain of Life, ſpoken of God much more; and there is Plenitudo Vaſis, the fulneſs of the Veſſel; which is but the pittance of the beſt of Saints, and that but received, which is ſoon dried up, if not ſupplied; and they receive but Grace for Grace, Glory for Glory, all from Chriſt. We have our Grace and Glory by meaſure; but Chriſt had the Spirit without meaſure.

Life is an Excellency added to Being: And the Divine Life of God, is a pure Activity and Quickneſs, which never ceaſeth nor abateth: All three Perſons therefore have the Title of Living; Of the Father there is none that queſtions it; Jeſus Chriſt is the Son of the Living God, Matth. 16. 16. and that imports he is a Perſon of the ſame Subſtance and Nature with God: And as Man begets his like, ſo God begets his like, and he is his only begotten Son. The Spirit is ſaid, to the ſame purpoſe, to be the Spirit of the Living God, 2 Cor. 3. 3. And as Chriſt is compared to the Son of a living Father, as being begotten of his Subſtance: So the Spirit is compared to the Soul that dwells in a Man, which is his Life. 1 Cor. 2. 11. is expreſs for it, What Man knoweth the things of a Man, ſave the Spirit of Man which is in him? And the Life of all Three, is God, and the enjoying of the Life of God, and exerciſing all the Acts of Life among themſelves.

This is for their Life abſtracted, ſuch as they had in Eternity, when no Creature was.

Now to the Point propoſed, the Difference and Dependence of our Union, and the Life thereof. Upon this of the Three Perſons that has been ſpecified, take that place in the 6th of John, with the reſt that are to follow; when at the third Verſe Chriſt had declared of all Believers, He that eateth my Fleſh, and drinketh my Blood, hath Eternal Life; and then had explained himſelf, and founded that Communication of Life, verſ. 56. upon our Union with himſelf; wherein he ſpeaks of that ſort of Union which is between his Divine and Humane Nature, and alſo of our Union with himſelf, as the next words of the Verſe ſhew, He that eateth my Fleſh, and drinketh my Blood, DWELLETH IN ME, AND I IN HIM; which Union of ours with himſelf, the very ſimilitude of Eating and Drinking doth alone import, (for what we Eat, or Drink, becomes one with our Bodies). Yet his adding, Dwelleth in me, and I in him, doth explicitly declare it in the Letter: This done, as if he could not paſs over this Declaration of our Union, (as neither in that 17th of John he doth, as may be obſerved) without ſuperadding how it was, that it was communicated from that his Superior Union with his Father; and that from thence it is, that Life is firſt communicated to himſelf, and alſo from him to us; as it expreſly immediately follows, verſ. 57. As the living Father hath ſent me, and I live by the Father; ſo he that eateth me, even he ſhall live by me.

Yea, and withal, to give a clear and evident Inſtance, that this Union of his with the Father, and ours with him, are of a differing kind, yea, and infinitely differing; Let us but add to this, what himſelf had ſaid of this communication and deſcent of Life from his Father to us, by virtue of his own Union in the former Chapter: John 5. 26. the words are theſe, As the Father hath Life in himſelf, ſo he hath given to the Son to have Life in himſelf: The ſenſe whereof is, (as I underſtand it) that his very Subſiſtence, as a Son, is from his Father, as he is the only begotten of him. Can this be ſaid of us, or of our having Life, though Spiritual and Heavenly, that it is given us to have Life in our ſelves, as Chriſt hath, or as the Father hath in himſelf independently, and with power to give Life

Life to others; so as to be the Lord's of Life, and to be able to bestow it as we please? But thus doth Christ, vers. 21. For as the Father raiseth up the Dead, and quickeneth them; even so the Son quickneth whom he will. And this Power, to give Life to others, he declares to this end, vers. 23. That all Men may honour the Son as they honour the Father. May this be said of us, poor Things that we are? Alas! We are so far from having Life thus in our selves, or to be Lords of Life, that it is well for us, (take us as we are fallen) if as condemned Persons we have that Life derived unto us at all; nay, that we have our lives, it is well if we scape so. This infinite Grace, as I have thus set it out, the 24*th* Verse indigitates; Verily, verily, I say unto you, He that heareth my Word, and believeth on him that sent me, hath everlasting Life, and shall not come into condemnation, but is passed from Death to Life: Thus low and flat do we fall, when his Life, and Union with his Father, are compared with ours. To gather up this; our Tenure of Life, is but a Coppy-hold of Life in respect of our whole dependence for it, by way of influence from him, and as 'tis derived from him, and from his Life; Tenants at Will I may not call us, in regard he hath endowed us with an eternal donation of it, (Why else called Eternal Life?) and estated it on us for ever; yet still in regard, both of the Original of it at first from him, and his continual influential maintaining it, and keeping our Souls in Life; which is the very Phrase the Psalmist expresseth our Life by. There appears an infinite difference and distance between us and him, in that Eternal Life which is his and ours; but upon a differing Tenure, for he is the Lord Paramount of Life, to have life in himself: But we are to hold all from him, from first to last, (though for ever): And if our dependence on him for Life be so vastly different from his in himself, then our Union is accordingly answerable thereto, distant in inferiority, and subordination; and so in like proportion differing, for Life, as the Effect flows from Union as the Cause. Therefore, good Souls, see your Hearts at rest, know your own Imum, your own Bottom, and lowness you stand in, in the best Condition, as Saints, you could have been set in: Be not deceived neither, to soar or aspire too high, upon conceits of Unions which are above you, nor of which indeed you are not capable: You must needs acknowledg, that the setting these mutual Unions of Christ and the Father in their συζυγίαις, from that of the Saints; and first theirs, and then ours apart by themselves, that they hold forth, at least, this to you, That though by means of your Union with Christ, you have an Union with the Father; yet that Christ hath an Union separate from your Union apart by himself with the Father, and the Father with him, which you can never attain: Would you be all Christs? then let us see you redeem your lost Brethren of the Sons of Men, whom Christ died not for effectually, or who of them have not as yet taken hold of his Death to save themselves from Sin and Hell: The Psalmist speaks thus, None is able to redeem his Brother from the Grave, and to quicken whom he will; no, nor is able to raise up himself at the Day of Judgment, as Christ did. And are you Hypostatically united to the Person of Christ then?

Chap. 4.

You might see this Truth of the infinite disproportion between these two Unions of God and Christ, and us and Christ, in a thousand other-like Effects, which you might make Demonstrations, that argue it, if a Man had time to gather them, or indeed to utter them. I come to a second Instance like to this.

II. Mutual Interest, or Propriety which the Three Persons have in the Things of each other.

Mutual Interest and Propriety in one another, follows upon Union. Now there is a vast subordination of the mutual Interests, the one of Christ in and with the Father, and that other of Christ with us; and such therefore must there also be in the several Unions: Will you see your Pedigree Emblazoned? All things are yours, and ye are Christ's, and Christ is God's. Here is the Interest, the Propriety and Right of a Christian to God, Christ, all Things; yet in a Chain of Subordination set forth thus; therefore it must be so in the Union also. Christ is in the Father, and the Father in Christ; and this their mutual In-being, as the ground of their sharing in the same common Stock, causeth an answerable Intereſt in the Things of each other: Even of All Things. If you take a view of this, in the firſt and higheſt Supream Union of all, between Chriſt conſidered ſimply as a ſecond Perſon; They are one in the Godhead, and all things therein, or belonging to it, are thereupon equally common to both: All things the Father hath are mine, John 16. 15. And John 17. 10. All mine are thine, and thine are mine. And how is it that they have this equal mutual Intereſt in all Things? It is becauſe they are One, as the next Verſe hath it, verſ. 11. And their Union and their Intereſt runs Parallel. But we cannot ſpeak thus as Chriſt doth, we muſt lowly and humbly acknowledg all Things are Ours, becauſe they are Chriſt's, and Chriſt is God's. And again, that the Man Jeſus hath a perſonal Oneneſs with the Son, and ſo with God; hence it is, that all Things are committed unto him of the Father; and he alſo may ſay, All thine are mine, &c. And now we are Chriſt's, and Chriſt is God's; and ſo all Things become ours derivatively; as our Union is but a ſecondary Union; as the Unions have their Subordination, ſo anſwerably the Intereſts.

III. As to their Communication and Enjoyment mutual.

You may view theſe Gradations and Deſcents in the Communications, and Enjoyments mutual that paſs between God and Chriſt, Chriſt and us. Union is for mutual Delight, and Communication, and Knowledg each of other: As the Father and Son have an Union ſuperior and entire to themſelves, (with the Spirit) which is immediate, and differing from that of ours with them; ſo they have an entire Communication of themſelves one to and with another, diſtinct and apart from us; and they had it, e're ever any communicating of themſelves did deſcend unto us; and when they have communicated a ſuitable ſhare to us like theirs, yet theirs ſtill continues incommunicable to us, apart by themſelves.

IV. Compare the Communications of them in mutual Knowledg one of another, and Acquaintance.

Where there is an Union of Perſons, there is, or ſhall follow in the end, a making each other known one to the other: So it is in our Union which is inferior, John 14. 20. At that day ye ſhall know that I am in my Father, and you in me, and I in you. And becauſe theſe of Chriſt's, and the Father, and Ours, are Unions of a differing Order, you ſhall ſee he ſpeaks of their Knowledg ſtill in the ſame ſtile of tranſcendency, as he doth in parallel Language unto what he doth of Union: in thoſe Texts, John 14 and 17 Chapters; making one ſort of Knowledg, and ſo converſe by Knowledg, proper, and peculiar, and entire to the Father and the Son, diſtinct and apart from Us, and infinitely above Ours; and a Lower of ours, paſſeth between God, and Chriſt, and Us. Thus, John 10. 14. I am the Good Shepherd, and know my Sheep, and am known of mine. Here you ſee firſt there is an entercourſe between his Sheep and him expreſſed, as his Union with them here; but ſtill he having another ſort of entercourſe, which, as Son of God, he drave with his Father (and Chriſt had the experience of both) which was the Cauſe and Pattern of Ours, he adds, verſ. 15. As the Father knoweth me, even ſo know I the Father. You ſee he could not paſs by the mention of one ſort between him and his Sheep, but he muſt withal mention that other ſort between his Father and himſelf.

V. And together with this Knowledg, there paſſeth a Communication of, and imparting of Secrets, a diſcovery of each others mind.

Now as there is that ſuperior Order of Union, and a tranſcendent ſingular affection that accompanies it, between the Father and the Son, ſo the manifeſtation of the Father to the Son is anſwerable; John 5. 20. The Father loveth the Son, and ſhews him all things that himſelf doth. He ſhews them all unto his Son, as one that is a Co-worker with him in all the things himſelf doth; as the words afore and after ſhew, verſ. 19. Whatſoever Things he doth, theſe alſo doth the Son likewiſe. Thus high is this Original Union, that is proper and alone between themſelves, even to an equality; for this Speech of his comes in to juſtify himſelf againſt the Jews who accuſed him, in verſ. 18. that he called God his own Father

Father ἴδιον πατέρα, making himself equal with God; which he justifies against them, vers. 19. Then answered Jesus, and said unto them, Verily, verily, I say unto you, The Son can do nothing of himself, but what he seeth the Father do: For what things soever he doth, these also doth the Son likewise. But as for us, as our Union is far remote, so the manifestation both of Christ, and God to us, is also very far off from this: They shew us indeed, and reveal many blessed Secrets indeed to us that concern our own Salvation; but what we have thus discovered to us, is but at second-hand of what they speak about us among themselves. The Spirit tells us again what they say; as John 16. 15. The Spirit shall take of mine, and give it unto you: And vers. 13. Whatsoever he (speaking of the Spirit) shall hear, that shall he speak; namely, to you. He speaks of him as a Messenger sent, who conveys to us the mind of them that send him; but we have it but as from another's hear-say. And hence also, whilst Christ speaks of his Communication to us by his Spirit, by virtue of our Interest in him, he doth withal insert the mention of that his own Interest in, and Union with his Father, as the supream Original Union, so to shew the descent of ours; Vers. 15. All things the Father hath are mine, therefore said I, that he shall take of mine and shew it unto you; that is, Thus it comes to pass, that you have all manifested to you from me, in that I have all things that my Father hath, and so the Spirit reveals from us both. But still to shew that their Union is entire of Father, Son, and Spirit, apart, and incommunicable, kept up among themselves; He tells us, that their Communication, Conference, and Consultations, are thus in private held among themselves apart from us; that they hold a private, secret Counsel, which we are never immediately admitted unto: What the Father hath, the Son hath, and the Spirit heareth both; and as none knoweth what is in Man, but the Spirit of Man within him; so none knows what is in God, but the Spirit, who searcheth the deep things of God, and revealeth them, 1 *Cor.*2. 11, 12. and the Son, who, as in John 1. 14. is in the bosom of the Father. These three drive an entercourse and intelligence in Secret, into the bottom of which we never enter: but the Spirit reveals, and Christ declares, as is said in those places; and thus,but at second-hand, we have the Mind of God and Christ, 1 *Cor.*2.16. For who hath known the Mind of the Lord, that he may instruct him? But we have the Mind of Christ; and but how little (as in Job) do we know thereof! Chap. 4.

VI. Take and compare the Communications of mutual Love, breathings forth of Affection, mutual Delights, and mutual Pleasures in each other which follows Union.

They are represented to us in the very same gradation as Union here; Prov. 8. 30. I was (says Wisdom,the Son of God) daily his delight: His Son in whom he hath alone considered an entire compleat delight, an immediate delight in him; and I was always also rejoicing afore him, and so in him again, so that there was a communication of mutual Love, or interchangeable breathings forth, or casts of Love each to other. Mutual Love is the Consequent of Union; and the Father being united to the Son, with a supream Union, (transcendent in comparison of that of ours) loves the Son with a transcendent primary Love; who therefore is called the Son of his Love; υἱὸς τῆς ἀγαπῆς, *Col.*1. 13. as he that engrosseth the whole of it all to himself: likewise,This is my well-beloved Son,Mat. 3. 17. As the Son hath Life in himself, so the Father loves his Son for himself; with a natural Love,as that is wherewith he loveth himself: But his Love to us is secondary,and collateral,which shews our Union is at second-hand but as we are in Christ, and Christ in us. And from thence the care of the Father is derived to us, because Christ is in us, and we are united to him; this you have John 17. 26. And I have declared unto them thy Name, and will declare it; that the Love wherewith thou hast loved me, may be in them, and I in them. An original primary Union hath a love answerable, a derivative Union but a love proportionable. Our Union is immediate unto, and with Christ Jesus; so as he and we are the immediate Termini, or Correlates united: And thereby it is we become united to God, namely, through him: And therefore God's Love is said to be to us in him, Rom. 8. ult. Who shall separate from the Love of God in Christ Jesus? These were their proper, natural, incommunicable delights each in other; as their BOOK I. Union is, and was afore the World was; I in my Father, and my Father in me, John 14.10. as dwelling in one another, ſo rejoicing in one another always; and theſe continue proper to themſelves, and will do for ever, and cannot be communicated to us, otherwiſe than by way of Similitude and Likeneſs. But then they intended to make Creatures, and ſo to have their made artificial acceſſory delights, (as I may ſo ſpeak). The Father ſhewed the Son a Platform of a World below, in which Men ſhould dwell, which Chriſt calls his Father's habitable Earth, and therein the Sons of Men, his Elect, given to him to be one for ever with him. Now as he was God's delight, and God his immediately, and naturally, ſo theſe were made for Chriſt's Delight: He therefore ſubjoins, rejoicing in the habitable part of his Earth, and my Delights were with the Sons of Men, Prov. 8.31. Obſerve the Subordination ſtill, as he is in the Father, and the Father in him; ſo he was in his Father's delights, and he in is: And then, as we ſay of Men, we in Chriſt, and Chriſt in us. And the Union is more direct and immediate between us and him; ſo we were primitively his Delights; even as afore you heard Chriſt was God's, and we Chriſt's: The Chain of Intereſt, and of Delight alſo, have the ſame parallel Subordinate Links.

VII. Come we laſt to Glory, and the Communication of Bleſſedneſs, (as we began with that particular of Eternal Life) there is therein found the like Subordination and Deſcent, Rev. 3.21. Chriſt hath with his Father a Throne in thoſe words, As I am on his Throne; to which Throne we never aſcend (mark that); But there is another which he calleth his Throne, and which conſidered as Man, he admits us to a ſhare in our proportion: To him that overcometh, I will grant to ſit on my Throne. There is ſtill a differing Rank and Order; Thrones higher and lower, even as of the Unions alſo: And καθὼς, or [As] I with my Father, ſo they with me, you ſee, hath run along through all: for ſome parallel likeneſs will be found in all theſe Unions that are thus ſubordinate; though of ſo differing a kind, that they have their infinite diſtance and diſproportion proper to them; which muſt be taken in and conſidered, if we will know the Nature and Condition of each.

Uſes. Chriſt here, John 14.20. tells his Apoſtles, for their comfort, That there was a Day coming, in which they ſhould have a clear, and full, and intuitive Knowledg of this their Union, and its deſcent to them from the Father; and the parallel of it, with his own Union with the Father; In that Day ye ſhall know that I am in the Father, and you in me, and I in you. This being a Matter of ſo great moment for all Chriſtians to know, and to diſcern in their own Selves and Hearts: and accordingly reſerved as the proper Work of the Holy Ghoſt, when he ſhould come as a Comforter: That though this Union it ſelf is wrought when we are regenerate by him, yet the Senſe, the Knowledg of it, is reſerved to the laſt, after Chriſt's Reſurrection and Aſcenſion; yea, and as others would interpret it, until after our Reſurrection, and the Day of Judgment. The Uſes of which knowledg are;

1. For our Comfort; for this Knowledg, Chriſt here intends, is, That which the Spirit as a Comforter, verſ. 16. was to bring; and it conduceth much to our Comfort, to know and meditate our Genealogy and Alliance that we have, and derive (by reaſon of our Union with Chriſt) from the Father, and how it holds of him: that although our Union be of a lower degree and kind, yet it is the off-ſpring of the higheſt and nobleſt Union; even of that between God and Chriſt; a ſecond Perſon firſt, and then of the Man with the ſecond Perſon.

By which alſo we ſhall perceive the ſureneſs, the ſtability of our Union with, and ſtanding in Chriſt, when we underſtand how it is founded: that it is ſo rivited into, and indented with that ſupream Union of the Father and the Son; that as that of theirs is indiſſoluble, and cannot be broken, ſo nor ſhall this of ours.

It is counted a matter of great moment unto Noble Families, if but for Honour-ſake, to know their deſcent from Houſes more Ancient, and Sovereign; reign; (as of the King of Egypt, the Prophet speaks, that he was descended of Ancient Kings) that they have sprung from such and such Marriages, and Conjunctions of Sovereign Princes; although they be in alliance very far removed from them. So is this here to us; the Saints they are a Chosen Generation, a Royal Priesthood, as Peter speaks, 1 Pet. 2. 9. the Royallest Family Heaven or Earth affords; and that in respect of the descent thereof, which is here Heraldred, My Father in me, and I in you: And Ephes. 3. 14, 15. I Bow my Knees to the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, of whom the whole Family in Heaven and Earth is named. Chap. 4.

2. As for our Comfort, so for our Satisfaction to our Knowledg in this great Mystery: As in lower Matters, when we see the Rise, the Dependence, and derivation of Things, running along in the Channel of, and from their Causes, it uses to be a great contentment to us. Then here much more to see how our Union hath the Union among the three Persons, for its Foundation, and Pattern, and Original; and to hear the Story how Union is let down to the Man Christ Jesus first, and in him conveyed to us; to know and behold the Union of three Persons in one Divine Nature, Father, Son, Holy Ghost, one God blessed for ever, producing, in imitation of them, an Union of the two Natures of God and Man in the Person of Christ Jesus; to whom be all Glory for ever: And then, that occasioning a third Union, yea, the next that could be, though more removed: An Union of Persons, (though not personal) yea, of multitudes of Persons united unto one Christ Jesus; to make up one Body, yea, one Man, as Ephes. 2. 15. hath it, Having abolished in his Flesh the Enmity, even the Law of Commandments contained in Ordinances, for to make in himself, of twain, one new Man, so making Peace; to the end we may be one Spouse unto Christ as our Head and Husband; and then to see the derived Influence the first hath upon the Man Jesus, and both upon this Union of ours: As I live by the Father, so you by me, John 6. 57. As also the parallel and correspondency that is held between the one and the other: that same καθὼς ἡμεῖς, inculcated by Christ, John 17. again and again, [As] we are One, let them also be One: As also to close, how the one illustrates the other.

And, 3. this is chiefly necessary for our Knowledg in the Doctrine of it, until we come to have experience of it; to the end to fix, determine, and state the true Bounds and Condition of our Union with God through Christ; the right proportion of ours in their distance from God and Christ, of which there have been too many mistakes in these Times; some soaring too high, to Identities and Sameness with God, at least, with Christ, (whom they think they may be better bold withal) some falling too low, to Unions only by Grace and Assistance, and presence to assist; or in outward Relations to Christ. For when we shall come but to see, and acknowledg the Prerogatives and Priviledges of those Unions above us, that are between God and Christ (incommunicable to us) descending downwards towards us in a Subordination, we may the rightlier judg what is left us to be our Lot, and Share; that we are but meer Creatures still, notwithstanding our Union with God and Christ.

CHAP. V.

Of Giving Glory to God. That it is a Duty incumbent upon us, prov'd by numerous Inſtances in Scripture. That we are to glorify God, not only nor chiefly for the benefit he beſtows on us, but for the Glory of his Name, and the Excellence, and Bleſſedneſs of his Nature. Some Reaſons given, that Grace in us may be raiſed to this high ſtrain.

1 Pet. 5. 11.

To him be Glory and Dominion for ever and ever. Amen.

ERe I raiſe that Obſervation I wholly intend out of theſe Words, I ſhall firſt deſire you to conſult with me the multitude of Parallel Paſſages unto this which we find up and down in the Epiſtles, which do ariſe to a great Bulk.

I ſhall not barely refer you to the Chapters and Verſes, and ſo paſs them over, but to the end to lay the more ample Foundation to that Doctrine I intend; and withal to make the deeper Impreſſions of it upon your Hearts, I will ſingle forth thoſe Paſſages out of the Epiſtles.

I fear the high and glorious Elevations that filled the Apoſtle's Spirits in theſe Doxologies, as they came from their Hearts, have not their due weight upon us Chriſtians, for the imitation of them or aſpiring thereunto: their commonneſs in ſo many Epiſtles, at the cloſe of them, cauſeth but a common formal regard of them in us; even ſuch as their Salutations of Grace and Peace (being made but as to thoſe Men they wrote to) uſe to have with us, as if we were not concerned in them.

But we are to conſider that the reaſon we meet with them frequently in moſt of the Epiſtles was, that their Hearts being full of the Glory of God, their Pens and Mouths were enlarged accordingly, and the Virtue and Example of them laſting to all Ages, they thereby do excite all that ſhall read their Epiſtles, afreſh to join with themſelves therein to give Glory to God as they did, it being expreſly ſaid, Eph. 3. 21. Unto him be glory in the Church by Chriſt Jeſus [throughout all Ages,] World without end. Amen. And in almoſt every ſuch a Doxology, [for ever and ever] is added: And in Jude, Now and for ever. This premiſed, I begin to enumerate the ſeveral Inſtances.

1. In the Epiſtle to the Romans, how often, by digreſſion, doth he ſtill vail to God in the midſt of his Diſcourſes, with an [Amen] ſet to his Bleſſing of him, as we alſo ſhould occaſionally in our ſpeeches do the like? In Rom. 1. diſcourſing of the Heathens, changing the Glory of the incorruptible God, verſ. 23. and verſ. 25. changing the Truth, (or the true Divine Nature) into the ſimilitude of the Creature, and worſhipping and ſerving the Creature, more than the Creator; he with an Indignation at the relating of that diſhonour done to the great God comes in with this, Who is bleſſed for ever, Amen. Which is a ſolemn Glory given to God, in tranſitu, by the way paſſant, as we ſay. The Form of Amen, that is in the Cloſe, ſpeaks how his Heart did give, and rejoiced to give all Bleſſedneſs to him, as rejoycing that he is ſo bleſſed a God. You find the like, Chap. 9. ſpeaking of Chriſt aſſerting of his Divine Nature, verſ. 5. Who is over all, God bleſſed for ever, Amen.

In

In like manner, at the end of his Discourse about Election and Reprobation, in Chap. 11. which he had finish'd with the end of that Chapter, he breaks forth from vers. 33. to the end, O the depth of the Riches both of the Wisdom and Knowledg of God! how unsearchable are his Judgments, and his Ways past finding out! For who hath known the mind of the Lord, or who hath been his Counsellor? or who hath first given to him, and it shall be recompensed to him again? For of him, and through him, and to him are all things: to whom be Glory for ever. Amen. And lastly, in the conclusion of the Epistle, Chap. 16.25,27. Now to him that is of Power to establish you according to my Gospel, and the preaching of Jesus Christ, (according to the Revelation of the Mystery which was kept secret since the World began, but now is made manifest, and by the Scriptures of the Prophets, according to the Commandment of the everlasting God, made known to all Nations for the Obedience of Faith.) To God only wise, be glory, through Jesus Christ for ever. Amen. Chap. 5.

2. That to the Galatians hath it at the beginning, Gal. 1. 5. having last spoken of God the Father, he steps to give Glory to him ere he goes any further; To whom be Glory for ever and ever. Amen.

3. In that to the Ephesians, his Heart was full, and he begins with it as soon as he began to speak, Chap. 1. 3. Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, &c. But he takes occasion with more solemnity to intermix it, Chap. 3. 20, 21. Now unto him that is able to do exceedingly abundant above all that we ask or think, according to the Power that worketh in us; unto him be Glory in the Church, by Christ Jesus, throughout all Ages, World without end. Amen.

4. In that to the Philippians, Chap. 4. 20. Now unto God and our Father, be Glory for ever and ever. Amen.

5. In the first Epistle unto Timothy, upon occasion of narrating his own Conversion, Chap. 1. vers. 17. Now unto the King eternal, immortal, invisible, the only wise God, be honour and glory for ever and ever. Amen. Then at the end of Chap. 6. vers. 15, 16. Who is the blessed and only Potentate, the King of Kings, and Lord of Lords: who only hath immortality, dwelling in the Light which no Man can approach unto, whom no Man hath seen, nor can see: to whom be Honour and Power everlasting. Amen.

6. In that to the Hebrews, Chap. 13. 21. The God of Peace, &c. To whom be Glory for ever and ever. Amen.

7. Peter in his first Epistle was so full with it, that he begins with it as Paul had done, Chap. 1. 3. Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, which according to his abundant Mercy, hath begotten us again unto a lively hope, by the Resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead. And Chap. 4. 11. That God in all things may be glorified through Jesus Christ; to whom be praise and dominion for ever and ever. Amen. And then, thirdly, at the close again, Chap. 5. 11. The God of all Grace, &c. To him be glory and dominion for ever and ever. Amen. In the second Epistle, Chap. 3. 19. He doth the same to Christ the Son. Grow in Grace, and in the Knowledg of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ: to whom be Glory both now and for ever. Amen.

8. Jude, Verse last. To the only wise God our Saviour, be Glory and Majesty, Dominion and Power, now and ever. Amen.

9. And John's passing it by in his Epistles, makes amends for it in his Revelations, which abound therewith. First, himself annexeth it to his own Salvation, wishing Grace and Peace from God the Father, the Spirit, and from Jesus Christ, &c. vers. 5,6. And from Jesus Christ, who is the faithful Witness, and the first begotten of the dead, and the Prince of the Kings of the Earth: unto him that loved us, and washed us from our Sins in his own Blood. And hath made us Kings and Priests unto God and his Father: To him be Glory and Dominion for ever and ever. Amen. Then throughout the whole Book his Ears are filled with it, with Voices from all Hands. 1. The Saints and redeemed of Men in their several Congregations, (their Officers being their Leaders and Speakers for them, and in their Names) Chap. 4. 8. And they rest not day and night, saying, Holy, Holy, Holy, Lord God Almighty, which was, and is, and is to come. Again, 2. In Chap. 5. there is the same Laudation performed unto Christ: 1. By the Saints of the Sons of Men, vers. 9, 10. And they sung a new Song, saying, Thou art worthy to take the Book, and to open the Seals thereof, for thou wast slain, and hast redeemed us to God by thy Blood, out of every Kindred, and Tongue, and People, and Nation; And hast made us unto our God, Kings and Prieſts, and we ſhall raign on the Earth. 2. Then by an innumerable Company of Angels, verſ. 11, 12. And I beheld, and I heard the Voice of many Angels round about the Throne, and the Beaſts, and the Elders, and the number of them was ten thouſand times ten thouſand, and thouſands of thouſands; ſaying with a loud Voice, Worthy is the Lamb that was ſlain, to receive Power, and Riches, and Wiſdom, and Strength, and Honour, and Glory, and Bleſſing. 3. By all Creatures unto both God the Father and the Son, verſ. 13. And every Creature which is in Heaven, and on the Earth, and under the Earth, and ſuch as are in the Sea, and all that are in them, heard I, ſaying, Bleſſing, Honour, Glory, and Power, be unto him that ſitteth upon the Throne, and unto the Lamb for ever and ever. 4. Unto which the Saints on Earth do give their Amen. Verſ. 14. And the four Beaſts ſaid, Amen. And the four and twenty Elders fell down and worſhipped him that liveth for ever and ever. And what they do here at firſt, is to ſhew what they did perform upon all occaſions of Praiſe, as they are given throughout this Book: For they are here brought in as the ſetled Chorus, ſuch as in Interludes uſe to be.

And accordingly you find them at it again, Chap. 7. 1. An innumerable Multitude of Saints, cloathed with white Robes, and Palms in their Hands, and they cryed, verſ. 10. with a loud Voice, ſaying, Salvation to our God, which ſitteth upon the Throne, and unto the Lamb. Then, 2. All the Angels, verſ. 11. firſt ſay Amen, unto what the Church of Men had ſpoken: for though they have no Intereſt in that Salvation of us Men; yet for the Glory that thence ariſeth unto God, and out of their love to us it is, they ſay, Amen. And it ſpeaks but their own very Hearts. And then, 3. Themſelves add, de novo, a new Praiſe of their own, verſ. 12. Bleſſing, and Glory, and Wiſdom, and Thanksgiving, and Honour, and Power, and Might, be unto our God for ever and ever, Amen. And again, Chap. 11. 17. and 16. 17. when the Kingdoms of the World ſhall become Chriſt's. And laſtly, Chap. 19. after the ruin of Rome, verſ. 1. And after theſe things I heard a great Voice of much People in Heaven, ſaying, Haleluja, Salvation, and Glory, and Honour, and Power unto the Lord our God. Then of the Beaſts and Elders, ver. 4. And the four and twenty Elders, and the four Beaſts, fell down and worſhipped God that ſate on the Throne, ſaying, Amen, Haleluja. And then you have the Voice of a greater Multitude, verſ. 6. And I heard as it were the voice of a great Multitude, and as the voice of many Waters; and as the voice of many Thundrings; ſaying, Haleluja: for the Lord God Omnipotent reigneth.

That only Point which I advance from all theſe, is;

That as it is a Duty; ſo that the Grace in us may, in this Life, be wound up to a giving Glory to God, in an abſtracted way: From all the Glory which is in himſelf, and which in himſelf he poſſeſſeth, or for what ariſeth to him from his works of Grace or Providence, and Revelations of himſelf, and for the review of Praiſe, which all others in all Ages have, or ſhall give him, even for whatever doth any way accrue to his Praiſe, as well for what he doth in, and to, and for our own Souls, but alſo in, or towards all or any other of his Saints or Creatures.

Unto this ample Extent do many of theſe Paſſages extend, as upon a bare review of the Paſſages themſelves doth evidently appear. For the materials in moſt of theſe Doxologies, (although occaſioned by the remembrance of Benefits beſtowed, and thoſe alſo, as in common to others with our ſelves) are pure Glory, Praiſe, and Honour given unto God, ſimply, and not Thanks only returned, as for Benefits, nor chiefly for them; for that is mentioned but in a few of them: But the Objects for which the Glory is given, riſe unto what is in God himſelf; As Dominion, Majeſty, Power, The King Immortal, Inviſible, only wiſe God, King of Kings, the Bleſſed and only Potentate, Lord of Lords, who only hath Immortality, dwelling in the Light which no Man can ſee, To whom be Honour and Power from everlaſting. Theſe are all abſtracted from Benefits, and on theſe I ſhall in the Application particularly inſiſt, as alſo that in the Revelations, Chap. 1. 4. John to the ſeven Churches which are in Aſia, Grace be unto you, and Peace, from him which is, and which was, and which is to come; and from the ſeven Spirits which are before his Throne; that is, unto Jehovah, as he is Everlaſting, and hath fulneſs of Being in himſelf.

In

In a Word, this comprehends all the Glory due unto his Name. Which Expression you find in two Psalms, Psal. 29. 1, 2. Give unto the Lord, O ye mighty, give unto the Lord glory and strength. Give unto the Lord the glory due unto his Name; worship the Lord in the beauty of holiness. Psal. 96. 7, 8. Give unto the Lord, O ye kindreds of the People, Give unto the Lord glory and strength. Give unto the Lord the glory due unto his Name: bring an Offering and come into his Courts. In the Hebrew, 'tis the Honour of his Name: That Honour which from you his whole Name is worthy of. And unto such a frame of Spirit, I would provoke you all; 1. To aspire to the obtainment of it. 2. To comfort you if you have attained it. And, 3. To exhort you to seek that it may not flag in your Spirits, but be fixed in you. Chap. 5.

This high and holy Frame and Temper, was certainly in the Apostles Hearts when they endited these Doxologies, and thereby excited others to the like.

And my Grounds (besides what hath been said, and which carries its own Evidence with it) are;

2. Hallowed be thy Name, is the top-Petition in that Gospel-Prayer Christ hath taught us, and the heighth and top of desires, and of Aspirements to hallow it, are therefore in some measure, in some of the Souls of them that are taught to pray so: And that Petition is of an higher Key, than Thy Kingdom come, that follows; and yet in that we pray that his manifestative Glory may be set up above all, in all his Works, and over all his Works, and in his giving his Church all Benefits, and in his confounding his Enemies, &c. But, Hallowed be thy Name, is far above all this, and therefore therein the Soul in the highest place desires that it self, and all others may give Glory to God for all that is due to his Name, any way, and principally for what his Name is. His Glory and his Blessedness is in himself, and they are to glorify God on this behalf. Now therefore, some strains of this are attainable in this World: for we are taught to pray it, and so are to have some dispositions of Heart suitable that accompany those Prayers.

2. Certainly Old-Testament-Grace rose not up higher, than now New-Testament-Grace will be found in some Christians to have done, and to do; nor did any of their Spirits aspire higher, in any of their givings of Glory to God, than the Apostles in these of theirs. The Prophecy of Gospel-Times, Zech. 12. 8. is, In that day he that is feeble among you, shall be as David, &c. Therefore David's Grace was at least to the highest acted in them, as it was in the primitive Christians many of them.

Now if you consult David's Psalms, in which we have his Spirit and his Heart expressed, (the Holy Ghost being witness thereof, in that through him and his Grace he penned them.) We find he was raised to this Elevation, in multitudes of Passages in his Psalms. In which he doth abstractly consider God in his Greatness, Power and Wisdom, &c. And then his Works in all the World, and towards his Creatures; then his Revelations to his Church, his gracious dealings with all his Saints, and his Glory that ariseth from all these, and upon these Accounts, gives Glory, Praise, &c. to him: and provokes all others to do so. That his Heart was filled with a suitable frame of Spirit, triumphantly, and from his whole Soul to do this, appears in the very Passages abundantly. There do occur so many Records of this, as I know not well where to begin, or which to insist on most. I shall single forth but one for all the rest, which is the 145*th Psalm*, of which I shall give a brief delineation.

There is this one Psalm of his which beareth this Title, David's Praise, or the Praise of David, so in the Original; and altho there are multitudes of other high strains this way in other Psalms, yet the Holy Ghost stiled this [David's Praise]; namely, of God. Now you will find the whole of that Psalm, to be a praising or giving Glory unto God, either simply abstractly, for what is in his Nature, or what he is in his Works to all Creatures, especially to his Saints: and you shall not find one Word in it about any Benefit proper to himself in that whole Psalm: that in the 1*st* Verse that he stileth this God his God, was from hence, the exercise of so high a strain of Grace, carries so clear an evidence of this with it, that that God whom any one should extol so much (as his Heart was enlarged to in that Psalm) must certainly be his God that so extolled him. But yet besides, that [As he is God] is the principal of the two; you have his Heart elsewhere expressed for that, as in Psal. 43. 4. I will praise thee, O God, my God. 1. [O God] in the chief place,

BOOK I.

place, and [my God] in the ſecond. This is more abundantly ſeen in this Pſalm, and in many other Pſalms.

'Tis obſervable, that David entitling this Pſalm, the Praiſe of David, that in the Original no Pſalm elſe beareth ſuch a Title. It is appropriated to it, becauſe this wholly conſiſts of meer Praiſe: he was elevated therein to a frame of Spirit, meerly made up of pure Praiſe of God, without any touch of what was particular to himſelf: So as it was not Thanks, but altogether Praiſe, and wholly Praiſe. To run over this Pſalm briefly.

Himſelf as Preſenter or Leader of the whole Chore, begins verſ. 1, 2. I will extol thee, my God, O King: and I will bleſs thy Name for ever and ever. Every day will I bleſs thee: and I will praiſe thy Name for ever and ever.

And then in Verſe the 3*d*, declares what it was, which above all he had in his Eye, as provoking him to this Praiſe; —Even the great and infinite Excellency of God in himſelf. Great is the Lord, and greatly to be praiſed: and his Greatneſs is unſearchable. This ſummarily comprehends all that is in God, which David intuitively viewed at his entrance to the whole. After this of his Greatneſs in himſelf, he proceeds upon what God is in his Works, and in that Argument he utters,

1. His own Joy firſt, for this, that they all ſhould with one Mouth praiſe him throughout all Times. Thus, verſ. 4. One Generation ſhall praiſe thy Works to another, and ſhall declare thy mighty Acts. And ſo that God will be ſure to be praiſed to the Worlds end, and had been praiſed afore he was born; this joyed his Soul exceedingly.

2. As that throughout all Times, ſo that in all Times, All and every of his Works do praiſe him. Firſt, Men, verſ. 6, 7. And Men ſhall ſpeak of the might of thy terrible Acts, they ſhall abundantly utter the memory of thy great Goodneſs, and ſhall ſing of thy Righteouſneſs. And Secondly, All of his other Works, beſides verſ. 10. All thy Works ſhall praiſe thee, O Lord. But Thirdly, With a greater Emphaſis and Exultation for this, that THE SAINTS THEY BLESS HIM, ſo in the ſame Verſe.

But that which I would deſire you in a ſpecial manner to obſerve withal, that whilſt he brings in all thoſe (which added unto his Joy) thus praiſing God, he himſelf thought with himſelf, whilſt he was bringing in this general Contribution of their Praiſe, that I will not be left out at ſo glorious an Exerciſe: But I will bear my part; ſo as he abruptly puts in with them, and rudely (as it were) interrupts them, intermingling his own in the midſt ſtill of theirs. Thus in verſ. 4. after he had ſaid, One Generation to another, &c. In verſ. 5. himſelf breaks in, I will ſpeak of the glorious Honour of thy Majeſty, and of thy wondrous Works. Which as if he had ſaid I will croud in mine, and bear my part, and he doth it whilſt theirs was but begun. And then in the next Verſe, verſ. 6. whilſt he brings them in again chanting out the ſame in theſe Words: [And they, namely, (One Generation to another, this referring to verſ. 4.) They ſhall ſpeak of the might of thy terrible Acts.] Himſelf as one that could not hold, (no not till their Praiſe had been half ſpoken out) puts in again, I will declare thy Greatneſs. Then verſ. 7. when he had brought them all in again, They ſhall abundantly utter the memory of thy Goodneſs, and ſhall ſing of thy Righteouſneſs. Himſelf again, (as if ſtriving to out-ſing them) riſeth up to the higheſt and loudeſt Note and matter of Praiſe, verſ. 8, 9. The Lord is Gracious and full of Compaſſion, ſlow to Anger, and of great Mercy. (This was proper to him as a Saint to utter,) and ſo together with them, fall a magnifying that God, which was the Cauſe of all, viz. His Mercy; and, as the Sourſe of that, for which all his Works do praiſe him, The Lord is Good to all, and his tender Mercies are over all his Works.

Which having ſaid, he then commits and leaves this Matter wholly unto them, even to all his Works, eſpecially unto his Saints, to ſpeak what they could, or would, further ſay. 1. To his Saints; for his Mercies to them are above what to all his other Works, verſ. 10. All thy Works ſhall praiſe thee, O Lord; and thy Saints ſhall bleſs thee. And ſo leaves it to them to ſpeak out the reſt; for he alone was not ſufficient, verſ. 11, 12. They ſhall ſpeak of the Glory of thy Kingdom; and talk of thy Power, to make known to the Sons of Men his mighty Acts: and the glorious Majeſty of his Kingdom.

The

The rest unto the 21*st* Verse is a setting forth that Kingdom (in some branches of it) which they so much celebrate; and you may take it either to be his own, or their Celebration of it; or rather of both jointly. It begins, vers. 13. Thy Kingdom is an everlasting Kingdom, and thy Dominion endureth throughout all Generations. The Lord upholdeth all that fall, and raiseth up all those that be bowed down. The Eyes of all wait upon thee, and thou givest them their Meat in due season. Thou openest thy Hand, and satisfiest the desire of every living thing. The Lord is righteous in all his Ways, and holy in all his Works. The Lord is nigh unto all that call upon him, to all that call upon him in Truth. He will fulfil the desire of them that fear him: he will also hear their cry, and will save them. The Lord preserveth all them that love him: but all the Wicked will he destroy. Which containing the principal parts of his Dominion, I divide and consider thus: Chap. 5.

First, The Everlastingness of it; for which 'tis so much celebrated, vers. 13. Thy Kingdom is an everlasting Kingdom, and thy Dominion endureth throughout all Generations.

In which Words, is especially aimed at that glorious Kingdom he shall for ever exercise in Heaven, with all his Saints magnifying him gloriously, of which, as 'tis often said, there is no end. And although in this lies the height of his Dominion. Yet,

Secondly, He takes in the exercise of it as it is in this World, throughout the many Generations thereof, from first to last. And the Parts thereof are,

1. His Dispensations towards his Saints in their Miseries, which is shewn especially in raising and recovering them from falls, and exercised for them, and on their behalf, as they are oppressed, vers. 14. The Lord upholdeth all that fall, and raiseth up all those that be bowed down. A most glorious Work. But withal,

2. Also that which is extended to all Creatures, that having a sensitive Life, are to be maintained by Food, as Fishes, Fowls, Beasts; God takes it upon him to be the Father of this great Family of the World, and to take care of all the several kinds of them that need, and accordingly provides and gives forth Variety of several sorts of Food, proper to each. As 1. To give each their several Meat, and Diet; And 2. Fails them not; 3. In the due season, wherein they need it: and moreover, 4. His own immediate Hand is said to give it them; and they, 5. As expecting it from him, are said to come about him, as Fowls use to do about those that use to feed them. Yea and 6. He not only feeds, but satisfies their Desires. All these you have distinct, vers. 15, 16. The Eyes of all wait upon thee, and thou givest them their Meat in due season. Thou openest thine Hand, and satisfiest the desires of every living Thing.

3. That special part of his Providence and Kingdom, exercised over, and towards the eminent of his Creatures, viz. the Sons of Men in common, wherein he sets forth the manifold Administrations and Dealings with all of them, both good and bad. First, in common to both, vers. 17. The Lord is righteous in all his Ways, and holy in all his Works. That is, in all the Variety of Trials, Chastisements, Judgments, upon both wicked Men, and good Men; and it is not in some, or a few of his Ways, but [in all] that fall out to either: and therefore let us adore him in all.

4. But especially to the Righteous, his choicest ones. And that peculiar care and love to them, he again returns to set forth, vers. 18, 19, 20. The Lord is nigh unto all them that call upon him, to all that call upon him in Truth. He will fulfil the desire of them that fear him: he will also hear their cry, and will save them. The Lord preserveth all them that love him.

These are mighty Sayings, that we should have him to cry unto, and he to be nigh and quick of hearing, and his Eyes to run to and fro over us; that God in the Issue one way or other, should fulfil these Sayings unto all his Saints, even to every one, especially those latter; to hear and consider all their Prayers, fulfil all their Desires, and after, and above all that, he will make sure work of it, infallibly to save them at last, and preserve them to the end effectually. Of all things he will be ſure to bring them to Salvation. What can be more?

All and every of theſe, through want of not ſearching them out, even the Saints themſelves obſerve not, and therefore God loſeth of his Praiſe, yet we ſhould believe them to be exactly true, and at the latter day we ſhall have an account of the fulfilling of them; but it is with us as Job acknowledgeth, Job 9. 10, 11. God doth great Things paſt finding out, yea, and Wonders without number. Lo, he goeth by, and I ſee him not: he paſſeth on alſo, but I perceive him not.

You find at the cloſe of this, that part of his Kingdom added, But all the Wicked will he deſtroy; namely, in Hell: for of other Diſpenſations to them in this Life he had ſpoken, verſ. 17. and this is a matter of as great Praiſe as any other, but only that towards his Saints, and which next thereto does bring in the greateſt and juſteſt Revenues of Glory to him. And yet even in doing this he ſhews himſelf Righteous and Holy, as he had ſaid afore, verſ. 17.

Theſe things done and gone through, look as he had begun with himſelf, ſo he ends, verſ. 21. My Mouth ſhall ſpeak the Praiſes of the Lord; namely, for all theſe things, and yet not a Word in all theſe things that was proper to himſelf, but of common Concernment to others. And then having ſaid, he as a Leader of the Quire, provokes all Fleſh to do the ſame. And let all Fleſh bleſs his holy Name for ever and ever; that is every Creature (as ſometimes Fleſh is uſed) to be ſure, of all the Sons of Men.

Truly he might worthily entitle this Pſalm, David's Praiſe: namely, [of God] whom elſewhere he gives the attribute of the [Praiſed God] unto; as in Pſal. 18. 4. I will call upon the Praiſed God: So in the Original there. Ainſworth obſerveth the ſame Word here, verſ. 3. The meaning in that place is (to make it the higheſt Encouragement to beget Confidence in one that Prays) is this, that God never denied Prayer; and that is the Thing for which he comes to be ſo famed and renowned a God, and that makes him to be the Praiſed God; that is it the Saints do praiſe him for: as that Coherence ſhews. And it is as if David had ſaid, I will call upon him, and I ſhall be ſure to ſpeed: For he is renowned for this, and bears the Title of the [Praiſed God], for that ſtill he continually hears them that call upon him. And we may be ſure that God will not loſe his Praiſe, and therefore will hear every one that calls upon him: according to that in Pſal. 22. 3, 4, 5. But thou art Holy, O thou that inhabiteſt the Praiſes of Iſrael. Our Fathers truſted in thee: they truſted and thou didſt deliver them. They cried unto thee, and were delivered: they truſted in thee, and were not confounded. And this makes it no wonder, that David elſewhere further ſtiles him, The God of my Praiſe; Thus Pſal. 109. verſ. 1. Whereupon give me leave, in order to expound it the better, to expoſtulate a little. What, David, were there no Saints but thy ſelf that gave Praiſe to God? Why doſt thou then ſeem to appropriate and ingroſs God unto thy ſelf, as the God of thy Praiſe, as if none praiſed him elſe but thee? It is becauſe his Soul had devoted all the Praiſe he was able to beſtow on any, unto the Lord alone; as whom he had ſet himſelf to praiſe, and praiſe alone. As of a Beloved Son we uſe to ſay, The Son of my Love: And further, it is as if he had ſaid, if I had all the Ability of the Spirits of Men and Angels wherewith to celebrate him, I would beſtow them all on him, he is the God for my Praiſe. And as he was his, ſo he ſhould be ours.

Yea further, Hence it is, that he is enſtiled, The Praiſe of all Saints, Pſalm 148. laſt. 'Tis one of his Titles, whereby (as God) he is ſet out. Give me leave to underſtand that Paſſage of God himſelf, which others have diverted from him; for the Pſalmiſt afore had ſaid, He alſo exalteth the Horn of his People: And therefore he it is, of whom it follows, The Praiſe of all his Saints.

My

Chap. 5.

My Brethren, you that have Grace, understand, in some measure, what Metal the Grace in your Hearts is made of; and unto what that Divine Metal, or Nature in you, may be sublimated by the (more than Chymical) Operation of the Spirit unto.

There are these Reasons why your Grace may be intended or raised up unto this Strain.

Reason 1. The Divine Nature in us, as in Peter 'tis stiled, is the perfect Imitation, or Image of God's own Nature; and all true Holiness doth consist in its being such. It is, as they observe of a Load-stone, that cut round, is the perfect imitation of the Earth, though in a lesser Volume, a Terrella (as they call it) so as all the Lines, the Poles, the Variation of the Compass, &c. may be exactly drawn upon it, and found out, and discerned, by the Motions of a Needle put upon it, which will shew all these exactly, as I my self have seen. And thus Sympathetical, in the make of it, is Grace, the Divine Nature in us, unto what is in God, or his Divine Nature.

However, this I may truly affirm, That Grace is framed, either to be the resemblance of, or applies it self unto all that is in God.

'Tis true, Divines do rightly make this distinction in the Divine Attributes.

1. Of some that are Communicable in this respect, that the likeness of them may be stamp'd on us, as Goodness, Wisdom, Holiness, &c. And of them the Case is clear, That therein consisteth an Image of God's Divine Nature.

But, 2. Some that are Incommunicable, as Sovereignty, Eternity, absolute Dominion, Majesty, &c. likewise his Glory, which is not to be given to another. Now observe, that those Attributes wherein our Graces are not capable to imitate him, that yet we have Grace to apply our selves to them, some way or other, so as to give the Glory due unto them. As to his Sovereignty, and absolute Dominion, and Majesty, Grace in us can and may be brought down, (shall I say) or wound up rather, to submit to it, to fall down to the Dust afore it; not simply, in a Reverence or Adoration of it, but in an absolute resignation of it self unto it; as in David we see, 2 Sam. 15. 26. But if he thus say, I have no delight in thee. Behold, here am I, let him do to me, as seemeth good unto him. Yea, unto a casting all away unto the Glory of it. And truly, as such Acts of Submission, are a throwing away, (shall I say) or rather, a giving up ones self, and all our own Concernments, both unto, and for, what purely is in God; so there is a giving Glory to him, by way of exalting him, for what is purely in himself.

Reason 2. The tendency of Grace in us, is to have but one common Interest between God and our Souls, to make his Interest wholly Ours, and ours to be altogether His. We are imperfect in it indeed, but so far as we have Grace, we have but one interest common to God and us. 'Tis that which Grace would be at, but Corruption keeps us down. Christ expresseth his being one with his Father, as in his Nature and Essence, so as he and his Father, having both but one Will, and so one Interest; John 6. 38. & 10. 29, 30. & 5. 30. For I came down from Heaven, not to do my own Will, but the Will of him that sent me. My Father which gave them me, is greater than all; and no Man is able to pluck them out of my Father's Hands. I and my Father are one. I can of mine own self do nothing; as I hear, I judg; and my Judgment is just, because I seek not mine own Will, but the Will of the Father which hath sent me.

Now as Christ's Interest and God's are but one, so by our Union with Christ, (and so with God through him) Christ's Interest and ours is but one. Therefore, 1 Cor. 6. 17. He that is joined to the Lord, is [one Spirit]; namely, with Christ, of one and the same Disposition, Ends, and Aims; for in all these respects, and much higher than I can express, it is to be one Spirit with Christ. Man and Wife, that are but one Flesh, yet we all see and know where Love between them is, that there is one common Interest of both; and it is such and so near a conjunction, through God's Ordination, as it is, as if they were one, both as unto what concerns the good of each other, as Epheſ. 5. 28. He that loveth his Wife, loveth himſelf. And alſo in what concerns the common Good of the Family, of the Children, &c. and they mutually rejoice in all thoſe alike. Oh, but Chriſt our Husband, and we, are one Spirit. Even the Saints among themſelves, ſo far as gracious, are ſaid to be of one Heart, and of one Soul, &c. Acts 4. 32. And the multitude of them that believed, were of one Heart, and of one Soul: Neither ſaid any of them, that ought of the Things he poſſeſſed was his own, but they had all Things common. And they were to rejoice and ſuffer in one anothers Happineſs and Miſery; 1 Cor. 12. 26. And whether one Member ſuffer, all the Members ſuffer with it: Or one Member be honoured, all the Members rejoice with it. For, as verſ. 12. The Body is one, and hath many Members; and all the Members of that one Body, being many, are one Body; ſo alſo is Chriſt. Thus is Chriſt in his Body among themſelves; how much more is it thus between Chriſt the Head, and each Member. I may well ſay, Even ſo is Chriſt, of the one part and the other, much more Chriſt and they are but one, and have but one Intereſt in common; for Chriſt is the Foundation of that among Saints. Now what doth the virtue of ſuch an Oneneſs of Intereſt tend unto, but that we ſhould rejoice in all the Good, Happineſs, and Bleſſedneſs that is in God, or that Chriſt enjoys? And that this is the Power of true Love, and of our being one Spirit with Chriſt, that Speech evidently ſhews, John 14. 28. Ye have heard how I ſaid unto you, I go away, and come again unto you: If ye loved me, ye would rejoice, becauſe I ſaid, I go unto my Father; for my Father is greater than I. And who therefore is ſo able to make me happy? And therefore that you are ſo caſt down, and that the joy for my Happineſs and Advancement, ſwallows not up your Sorrow, is, becauſe you love your ſelves inordinately. But ſtill the Power of Grace lies therein you may ſee, and the Foundation of all, is Oneneſs of Intereſt. Look therefore, as Chriſt's Intereſt was one with his Father's, ſo ſeek his Glory, and to delight in it: John 7. 18. He that ſpeaketh of himſelf, ſeeketh his own Glory; but he that ſeeketh his Glory that ſent him, the ſame is true, and no Unrighteouſneſs is in him: So it is of Grace in a Chriſtian, when wound up to what the heighth of it tendeth unto. And therefore, as God delighteth in his own Glory for it ſelf, ſo may a gracious Heart be brought to do. It is in his Grace whereby to do it: and as God's Bleſſedneſs lies in his enjoying himſelf, and his own Glory; ſo the heighth of ours ſhould be to apprehend that he is ſo glorious in himſelf, and accordingly to rejoice in it.

Reaſon 3. You will allow that Grace may be wound up in ſome Spirits, to as high ſtrains for God and his Glory, (take the ſorts or kinds of the one and the other) as Sin and Self-love are in ſome ſort of Sinners, againſt God and his Glory. I do not ſay in the ſame degree, (becauſe ſuch as I ſhall inſtance in, are wholly wicked, and full of all Evil, as the Devils are, and no Man's Grace is full for the meaſure of it) but for the kind; and there is no kind of Wickedneſs, but is in the genius and diſpoſition of it, equalled by the Grace in ſome Saints that love God. Now, Self-love in them that ſin againſt the Holy Ghoſt, and in the Devil doth riſe up directly and immediately ſo high, as to oppoſe and fly in the Face of all the Glory that is in God, or that in any way he enjoys, grudging at it, hating it, blaſpheming it immediately, as it is in it ſelf, as it is in us, and in him; this is the Devil's ſin, and alſo of ſome Men, put into the Devil's ſtate and condition.

Now then, I ſay, and argue from this; That the ſame contrary diſpoſition may be, and is driven forth in Grace, ever to love the Glory of God immediately, as it is his, and becauſe it is his, and to rejoice therein, more than in its own Bleſſedneſs; and to have an amplitude of Heart this way, ſo as to delight in all the Glory God hath, or any ſort of way accrues to him. Yea, and I add this, that there is reaſon it ſhould rather fall out on Grace's part, that Grace in a Saint ſhould, rather of the two, be ſupported, to be elevated unto this high pitch, rather than the Wickedneſs in Men or Devils unto the contrary: In that Grace is a Principle capable of loving God for himſelf, as the chiefeſt Good, but no

Creature

Creature can hate God simply and absolutely for himself, because he is himself the chiefest Good,as the School-men argue it,but yet they are found to do it only because God is an Enemy unto Self-Love in them, and so in revenge they are provoked to oppose God, and to fly in his very Face, they being acted by a Spirit to do despite to the Spirit of Grace, (which is the very Spirit of that Sin against the Holy Ghost);but the Creature having the Image of God's own Holiness stampt upon it, it may love God for himself, and true Love to God is not founded upon Self-Love meerly in the Creature; and if it were, it were not the Image of God: And if it be a Principle of Grace to love God,as God; then it must needs be capable to rise up to this, to glorify him as such. I further add, that as that forementioned desperate frame of Spirit befals some Men in this Life, as well as Devils; so this high and holy frame of Heart (though more imperfectly for degree) is raised up but in some gracious Saints Hearts in this Life; and yet as all evil Mens Wickedness is not wound up to this height of renown in Sinning, but only in a few; so nor is the Grace of all Saints intended or elevated to this other extraordinary pitch. Which stating of it thus, may conduce to clear the thing in Hand, and to the comfort of such Souls as want the Energy or working Sense thereof. Chap. 5.

Reason 4. It is certain, that Grace elevated works thus in the Saints Hearts in Heaven; that is, to glorify God for himself, and their own Happiness they consider not; for it is but a result or consequent of their joying in the amplitude of God's Glory, which they are wholly swallowed up into: For God becomes all in all in them and to them, 1 Cor. 15. 28. Now, as some Communications of the Joys that are in Heaven, are vouchsafed unto some Saints in this Life, some immediate Drops (not to say Dews only) are let fall into their Souls of the same kind that are in Heaven, in a Fulness. Therefore also, by a Parallel Reason, some lesser Participations of the Intenseness of that Grace, that is in those blessed Souls made perfect; for some have the Earnest of the Spirit, and of that Inheritance: and an Earnest consists of the same kind with the whole that is yet behind.

CHAP. VI.

A more punctual Explication what it is to give Glory to God, in Himself or Works; set out by a Comparative with all the other ways of glorifying God, which it far exceeds.

OUR next Enquiry shall be, What this Grace and Duty I so commend unto you, are. I put them together; for the one may be known and discerned by the other: and that where in Scripture we find the Duty spoken of, we may thereby understand what the Grace, that is, the Root thereof in the Heart, is and ought to be; as also what is the Duty when the Grace is spoken of, or the encrease of it specified. To find out the true Elevation of both, I shall proceed by comparative steps, whereby it will appear, how far this exceeds other ways of giving Glory to God.

In General, we may consider, That to give Glory to God, is a Matter of a large extent, comprehending many ways of doing it. As,

1. We are to glorify God in every Thing and Action, 1 Pet. 4. 10, 11. that in every Thing God may be glorified. And this is done by the Holy Ends we have in Communications, either put forth immediately, or though mediately, yet ultimately aiming at God's Glory in them: 1 Cor. 10. 31. Whether therefore ye eat, or drink, or whatsoever ye do, do it all to the Glory of God. And the Apostle Peter adds, over and above such a way of glorifying God, to whom be Praise and Dominion for ever and ever. Amen.

2. We give Glory to God, in such good Works as directly in themselves do tend to the Glory of God; Mat. 5. 16. Let your Light so shine before Men, that they may see your good Works, and glorify your Father which is in Heaven: Which Peter seconds, 1 Pet. 2. 12. Having your Conversation honest among the Gentiles, that whereas they speak against you as evil Doers, they may, by your good Works which they shall behold, glorify God in the Day of Visitation: Which is, as if he had said, Though at present Wicked Men will not acknowledg any Goodness in you Saints; but on the contrary, speak Evil of you; yet little do you think how every Holy Action lays up Matter against the Day of Judgment, in the Consciences of the wickedest Men, by which God will be glorified at that day in their Acknowledgments, when Christ shall have set his gloss upon these Actions, and in the mean time, afore that Day, these Holy Works do give an occasion unto Holy Men to glorify God in your behalf, which these Works do by a redounding to the Glory of God, (as the Phrase is, 2 Cor. 4. 15.) yet so to praise God, as I exhort you to do, is higher. The Angels, although their Character is, that they do God's Commandments, and that they be the highest instance of it; as in the Lord's Prayer, Thy Will be done, as in Heaven, &c. Yet they are called upon, by David, farther to bless God, as a Matter beyond their doing his Will otherwise: Psal. 103. 20. Bless the Lord, ye his Angels that excel in strength, that do his Commandments, hearkning unto the Voice of his Word. Nulla Angelis præstantior est exercitatio in quâ se occupent; Calvin on the words. There is no higher way of glorifying God, than this for them to be exercised in. It is beyond their doing all other Commandments. Likewise in Psal. 50. ult. Although ordering our Conversation aright is so acceptable to God, as he will shew his Salvation to them that do it; yet the height and top of glorifying God, is set upon the Head of praising God, as the Crown; Whoso offereth praise, glorifieth me: and to him that ordereth his Conversation aright, will I shew the Salvation of God.

3. In

3. In performing Duties of Worship, publick or private, and being conversant in Ordinances; This is a further degree of glorifying God, than in Holy Actions, in ordering our Conversations, &c. Psal. 68. 9. All Nations whom thou hast made, shall come and worship before thee, O Lord, and shall glorify thy Name. Yet this way of giving glory to God, excels being conversant in Ordinances; although having Communion with God therein. 1 Pet. 4. 10, 11. As every Man hath received the Gift, even so minister the same one to another, as good Stewards of the manifold Grace of God. If any Man speak, let him speak as the Oracles of God: If any Man minister, let him do it as of the Ability which God giveth, that God in all things may be glorified through Jesus Christ; to whom be Praise and Dominion for ever and ever. Amen. Which is spoken of the ministration of Ordinances. As to speak in the Church, or to contribute to the Saints, is a way of glorifying God in the way of Ordinances and Worship; Yet still this Duty of giving Glory to God, exceeds it, and therefore is over and beyond, (superadded and exhorted to, after the other) as distinct from them; to whom be Praise and Dominion, for ever and ever. Amen.

4. It is more than to praise God for Benefits vouchsafed, and received to our selves; which yet is an high way of glorifying God. We generally say, That Thanksgiving is a nobler and more divinely generous Duty than Prayer; for Self-love puts us upon that, praying for Benefits, but Thanks is a more free, defecate, and pure Act, and yet is out of a sense of God's goodness unto ones self; 'Bless the Lord, O my Soul; and forget not all (that is, not any) of his Benefits. Who forgiveth all thine Iniquities, and healeth all thy Diseases, Psal. 103. 2, 3. And Psal. 86. 12, 13. I will praise thee, O Lord my God, with all my Heart; and I will glorify thy Name for evermore. For great is thy Mercy towards me; and thou hast delivered my Soul from the lowest Hell. Yet we see there is a deep touch of Self-love in this both praise and glorifying of God; for great is thy Mercy to me. Well, but this way of glorifying God, is yet more high and generous, being for what is abstractly considered from all Benefits; that is, simply considering what Glory and Excellencies are in God himself, or in his Glory unto others of his Creatures: It is to give Glory to God, for what he is or doth any way to his Church, or to all others in the World, and not only for what he is to us, &c. Look back upon the places cited, and you'll find the most of them speak this abstractedness. In the Revelation, you find both the Church and Men to give Glory and Honour distinct from Thanks; Rev. 4 9. And when those Beasts gave Glory, and Honour, and Thanks to him that sat on the Throne, who liveth for ever and ever. Upon this account, vers. 11. That thou art worthy, O Lord, to receive Glory, and Honour, and Power; for thou hast created all Things, and for thy Pleasure they are and were created. Likewise the Angels run upon the same strain, Rev. 7. 12. Saying, Amen: Blessing, and Glory, and Wisdom, and Thanksgiving, and Honour, and Power, and Might, be unto our Lord for ever and ever. Amen.

5. It is more than to glorify God for his Love to us; for the Assurance and Hope he will glorify us; Rom. 5. 1. By Faith we have Peace with God; and a standing in Grace, and the favour of God; so, vers. 2. And not only so, but we rejoice in the Hope of the Glory of God: and not only so, but we glory in Tribulations; so strong, real, lively, powerful, are those hopes of Glory in us, as to rise to this; thus Verse the 3*d*. But then, vers. 11. he riseth yet higher; Not only so, but we also joy in God, and make himself the top of our rejoicing, far beyond our being glorified by him, and our hopes thereof. Why? For in our being glorified by him, we are Passives, loved, rather than love; glorified, rather than give glory: But in the exercise of this Grace and Duty, the Soul is Active, and casts Glory upon God's Acts, and upon him, reverberates all the Glory that shines upon them, back again upon him, and that for what is in himself, as a God in himself, so glorious, dwelling in Light inaccessible, Immortal, only Wise, &c. Yet this must be added, that withal the Soul considers, that this God that is thus Great and Excellent, is also his God. He rejoices to put that in all, though still the top of his Praise, and his solace therein, doth rise and reach far higher. Therefore you find praising God, and my God, so often in the Psalm joined, and in the Prophet Isa, Chap. 25. 1, 2. although his Praise is for his glorious Counſels and Judgments in the World, which wholly concern'd the Glory of God, and not himſelf; yet he puts in, I will exalt thee, O my God. That is, he reflected upon this withal, that God, who was ſo great a God, was his God, in that high and near Relation.

Uſe. Let us next view the high Privileges, and Divine Diſpoſitions of ſuch a Soul, when raiſed up unto this bleſſed Frame. I ſo ſtate the Terms of what is now to follow, in calling them his Privileges, as well as the Divine Out-goings or Diſpoſitions of ſuch an Heart: But I ſhall not handle theſe two apart, or accurately ſever them, but as one and the ſame, ſpeak promiſcuouſly of them.

It is the high Privilege of ſuch a Soul, to have all it doth, or can comprehend, to be in God himſelf, to give Glory to him for; and in doing ſo, therewithall themſelves to glory and rejoice alſo therein, as that he is ſuch, and ſo great a God, ſo bleſſed, ſo glorious in Himſelf; and although they cannot ſee his Glory, and live in this Life, yet all thoſe Deſcriptions of him, whereby he hath made himſelf ſo wonderfully known, they have theſe afore them, as far as in this Life they may or do comprehend them: Epheſ. 3. 18, 19. there is a being made able to comprehend, and to be filled with all the fulneſs of God, prayed for by the Apoſtle: And it is evidently ſpoken of what the Saints may attain in this Life; for it is, whilſt Chriſt dwells in their Hearts by Faith. And that place ſhews, that beyond the apprehenſion of the Love of God in Chriſt, and of Chriſt's Love, there is a being filled with the fulneſs of God himſelf, in ſuch a proportion and ſenſe as this Life is capable of; yet ſo, as ſuch a thing there is to be attained, as ſhall juſtly bear the Title of this. And becauſe they he writes to (as generally Chriſtians do) find this to be too high (as indeed it is, if they reflect upon their ordinary walking and common Experiments it is). Therefore he concludes his Prayer with this; Now unto him that is able to do exceeding abundantly above all that we ask, or think, according to the Power that worketh in us, &c. For indeed the experience of ſuch a frame of Spirit, is an heighth above what we are able to ask or think, and yet is attainable by the Power that now worketh in us, as it follows. And becauſe the genuine Product, End, and Tendency of ſuch an elevation of Heart is to wiſh, and to give all Glory to God; therefore it is he ſo ſolemnly adds, verſ. 21. Unto him be Glory in the Church, by Chriſt Jeſus, throughout all Ages, World without end. Amen. For any ones being filled with all the fulneſs of God, doth conſtrain the Spirit in whom it is, to give and wiſh this Glory to him. As likewiſe he that is raiſed up to that frame of Spirit, thus to give Glory for what is in God himſelf, that Soul hath all the fulneſs in God afore him, to give glory to him for.

Now to incite us all to the ſeeking this high diſpoſition of Spirit, I ſhall, for your encouragement, ſpread before you many Inſtances of Saints, who have had Hearts to glorify God for all the fulneſs which is in himſelf. Moſes, you know, deſired to ſee the Glory of God, Exod. 33. 18. and, ſays God, verſ. 19. I will make all my Goodneſs paſs before thee; and I will proclaim the Name of the Lord before thee. And God cauſed his Glory to paſs before him, verſ. 22. And accordingly, chap. 34. 5, 6, 7. God proclaims his Name and Divine Nature, in thoſe Attributes of Merciful, Strong, True, and Juſt: Upon which Moſes being filled with this Glory, adored God; verſ. 8. Moſes made haſte, and bowed his Head towards the Earth. He made a return of Worſhip unto all this Glory he had ſeen and heard; though likewiſe he put up a Prayer with all, verſ. 9. But he adores him purely, for that Glory which God had manifeſted to him, to be in Himſelf, and in his Nature.

We find many Pſalms made to glorify God alone by his Works: But in ſome other Pſalms beſides, over and above, and before they come to celebrate God for his Works, the Pſalmiſts began firſt to celebrate him for what is in his Nature, what is in himſelf: Pſal. 104. 1. Bleſs the Lord, O my Soul; O Lord my God, thou art very great, thou art cloathed with Honour and Majeſty. Who coverеſt thy ſelf with Light, as with a Garment. And then he ſets him out by his Works in the reſt of the Pſalm, in ſo glorious a manner, as in no Scripture more. Likewiſe Pſal. 145. 1, 2, 3. I will extol thee; I will bleſs thy Name for ever and ever:

Every

Every day will bless thee. Great is the Lord, and greatly to be praised; and his Greatness is unsearchable. Vers. 5. I will speak of the glorious Honour of thy Majesty. And vers. 8. He sets out the graciousness of his Nature; The Lord is gracious, and full of Compassion; slow to Anger, and of great Mercy. The rest of the Psalm is taken up with praising him for his Works, and a setting forth the Glory of his Kingdom. Calvin did observe this also, upon Psal. 136. 1, 2, 3. Oh give Thanks unto the Lord, for he is Good; for his Mercy endureth for ever. O give thanks to the God of Gods: O give thanks to the Lord of Lords; for his Mercy endures for ever. He sets out first (saith he) the heighth of his Deity, and Sovereign Kingdom. And then the following part of that Song sets out his Works; To him who alone doth great Wonders, vers. 4. Likewise, Psal. 147. A Psalm of Praise, so it begins, vers. 1. Praise ye the Lord, for it is good to sing Praises to our God. At the 5*th* Verse he sets out what God is in himself, by three things, as the Principles of all his Works. First, By his Greatness and Immensity, Great is our Lord. Secondly, His Power; And of great Power. Thirdly, His Wisdom; His Understanding is Infinite. Elsewhere it is said, In Wisdom hast thou made them all; namely, his Works, Psal. 104. 24. But here his Wisdom is, that which is in himself, for which he celebrates him, though he had never made any Work.

Chap. 6.

Priusquam ad Celebrationem Operum Dei veniat summam ejus Deitatem summumq; Imperium Commendat. Calvin. in loc.

This Soul thus wound up, can sit down in God, and with God, and bless him, and rejoice in all the Blessedness that is in him; and for that it is His; that He is so blessed: And that in such an Infinite God, there is such Infinite blessedness; and can say Amen to it, when he hath gone over it in all his Thoughts of it. As Paul, Rom. 1. 25. upon occasion of a dishonour done to God, by worshipping his unworthy Creatures, more than the Creator, he in indignation of Spirit adds, Who is blessed for ever, and puts Amen to it. He speaks of what he is in his Divine Nature, in himself; which in vers. 20. he calls his Eternal Power and Godhead. In vers. 23. The Glory of the uncorruptible God: And in vers. 25. The Truth of God; that is, the true Being of God. Now God considered as such, it is that for which he pronounces him Blessed, Who is blessed for ever: and I say Amen to it, (says he) that is, I congratulate it to him; for, what is Amen, but, so be it, or, oh let it be so? And if one Amen be not enough, you shall have it doubly set to our blessing of him; Psal. 72. 18, 19. Blessed be the Lord God, and blessed be his glorious Name for ever; and let the whole Earth be filled with his Glory. Amen and Amen.

And whom do you think he speaks of? Of Christ, and God in Christ, vers. 17. Men shall be blessed in him; All Nations shall call him Blessed: Wherein Christ, in the whole Psalm, under the Type of Solomon, is set out. But you find the same Amen set to the Blessedness that is in Christ in the New Testament; Rom. 9. 36, where Paul speaking of Christ, Who is over all, God blessed for ever. Amen. He says Amen to the fulness of the blessedness of the Godhead that is in him; yea, unto the Man Jesus, taken up into the participation of that Blessedness, through his Personal Union with the Son of God; from which it is, that all that Glory which he wears in Heaven, is his, by Inheritance, or Natural Right, as Heb. 1. tells us.

Now in Psal. 45. he sets him out in the Excellency of his Person as such, Thou art fairer than the Children of Men; Grace is poured into thy Lips, therefore God hath blessed thee for ever. And because God had thus blessed him, the Psalmist goes on to bless him too, and to wish well to him with all this his Honour; so far is he from envying of it, though it might have been the Lot of any other Man, or of a Man's self, to have been taken up into that Union, and kept from the Fall. But he wishes it all to him over and over again, and is glad that God hath such a Son, and himself such a Head; and as Christ passes along by him in his Glory, he cries out, Gird thy Sword upon thy Thigh, O most Mighty, with thy Glory, and thy Majesty; and in thy Majesty ride prosperously. These are words of one applauding, and blessing, and wishing all Happiness and Prosperity to him, with all his Honour; Ride prosperously; or, as the Hebrew hath it, prosper Thou, ride Thou. The old Translation had it, good Luck have thou with thy Honour; yea, and as Subjects use to say to the King (though often in flattery) as he passes by, Vivat Rex, Vive le Roy; Let the King live for ever, as in Daniel.

BOOK I.

And as they of Auguſtus, when themſelves were dying, they would Sacrifice for his Life, and ſay, Let Auguſtus live, though I die: So (would you think it) that the very like Phraſe ſhould be in the Pſalms; and the meaning of thoſe words, Pſal. 18. 46. The Lord lives, (as we tranſlate it) and bleſſed be my Rock, ſhould be an Optative, Let the Lord live; as we uſe to ſay to our Kings, VIVAT REX; ſo, Let God live, and be bleſſed, and live for ever.

See Mewis and many other Commentators.

Take we likewiſe the Matter of thoſe two Doxologies of Paul; 1 Tim. 6. 15. Who is the bleſſed and only Potentate; The King of Kings, and Lord of Lords: Who only hath Immortality, dwelling in the Light no Man can approach to; whom no Man hath ſeen, nor can ſee; to him be Honour and Power everlaſting. Amen. The other, 1 Tim. 1. 17. Now unto the King Eternal, Immortal, Inviſible, the only Wiſe God, be Honour and Glory for ever and ever. Amen. This latter he did break out into, upon occaſion of the Story of his own Converſion. But though that ſo great a Mercy to himſelf was the occaſion, yet his Spirit ſoars far higher, beyond all of what God had done for him. To conſider purely, and abſtractly, what a glorious God he was in himſelf, let us but open the Particulars of it.

Firſt, He gives Glory to him, for that Bleſſedneſs which was in him, Who is the bleſſed (ſays he) and only Potentate. What is Bleſſedneſs, but a confluence and fulneſs of all Good, to an Infinite, compleat within himſelf, ſo as God need not go forth of himſelf for any thing; as Act. 17. 25. He needs not any thing, ſeeing he gives Life to all, and all Things: Like as if a great Man ſhould have in his Houſe, and in the compaſs of his Grounds round about it, all kind of Things, of all ſorts, within his own Demeſnes, that he need not go forth for any Thing.

Secondly, He is the only Potentate, Sovereign over all; He hath not only all Happineſs within himſelf, and Fulneſs, but he hath ſovereign and abſolute Power over all Things. Now when theſe two Things ſhall meet all inward Fulneſs, and ſuch an abſolute Power beſide, he is bleſſed indeed that hath it. You ſhall find up and down in the Pſalms, the Pſalmiſt to bleſs him above all, for a Kingdom of his, Pſal. 145. and other Pſalms, where you find it celebrated.

Now that Kingdom is, 1. ſeated in himſelf, and then exerciſed towards his Creatures; you ſhall find the Pſalmiſt praiſe him for both. Firſt, Seated in himſelf; In Pſal. 93. which begins, in the firſt Verſe, with a celebration of his Kingdom; The Lord Reigns; He is cloathed with Majeſty, &c. He aſcends higher there, to the exerciſe of it, in governing the World. At verſ. 2. Thy Throne is eſtabliſhed of Old; thou art King from Everlaſting; and for this they praiſe Him. His Kingdom began from Everlaſting; He reign'd within himſelf, and in his own Purpoſes, and Contrivements, and Orderings of all Things; He diſpoſes of all from [then], as the word of Old tranſlated is in the Hebrew; And then it was, that he did cloath himſelf with Majeſty, and did gird himſelf with Strength, as a Man uſes to do, before he begins to do any great Matter: thus, verſ. 1. for this his Saints do praiſe him.

Then, 2. As it is exerciſed. Firſt, As it is ſeated in Heaven; Pſal. 89. 5,6,7. The Heavens ſhall praiſe thy Wonders, O Lord; thy Faithfulneſs alſo in the Congregation of the Saints. For who in the Heaven can be compared unto the Lord? Who among the Sons of the Mighty can be likened unto the Lord? God is greatly to be feared in the Aſſembly of the Saints; and to be had in reverence of all them that are about him. He ſpeaks this of the Glory which he hath, and ſhews forth in Heaven afore all Angels and Saints whom he hath round about him. He had ſaid, in the 4*th* Verſe, of Chriſt the Spiritual David; Thy Seed will I eſtabliſh for ever; and build up thy Throne to all Generations. And of that Kingdom he treats, from verſ. 21. of that Pſalm, to verſ. 38.

Now for this Kingdom of his, the Heavens are ſaid to praiſe his Wonders, which is ſpoken of the Angels, who are often called the Heavens, from their place: As in Job it is ſaid, The Heavens are not clean in his ſight. And theſe knowing the Wonders of that Covenant of Grace; they, even they, are ſaid to praiſe; The Heavens ſhall praiſe thy Wonders, O Lord: In the Hebrew it is, Thy Wonder, or thy Miracle, in the Singular Number; which in Epheſ. 3. 10. the Angels are ſaid to adore; and in Luke 1. to ſing Glory to the Higheſt; for, his Grace to Man is that Miracle. Now the Material Heavens do not praiſe the the Mercy of God, or the Grace of God, or the Covenant of Grace, or the Throne of Grace that is establish'd in the Heavens. They understand nothing of Christ; no, they do not so much as materially give occasion to Man to praise God for these; and therefore this is meant of the Angels, and most Interpreters understand the next words of them. Thy Faithfulness in the Congregation of the Saints, Angels, and the Holy Ones made perfect, for there the great Congregation is. For even in the Heavens, who can be compared to the Lord, where all his Angels thus do praise him? Who among the Sons of the Mighty, of all the Powers of the Earth, can be likened to the Lord? for he is the King of Kings, and he is the Lord of Lords; a God above all Gods, even Angels themselves; as elsewhere the Psalmist hath it: And he says not only, There is none like thee; But, Who is like unto thee? His excellency so exceeds. And in the 7th Verse, He is there presented with all his Saints and Angels round about him, as one that is greatly to be feared, or that is terrible in himself, by reason of his Greatness, in this his Council, and Assembly of his Saints, and to be had in reverence of all that are about him: For Saints and Angels, they are of his Council in Heaven, (as might be shewn) and incompass the manifestation of his Glory there round about. Chap. 6.

This Kingdom of his, is set out and magnified by those Psalms. First, By his Throne; Justice and Judgment are the Habitation of thy Throne, vers. 14. Then Mercy and Truth, they shall go before thy Face. He compares them to Harbingers that he sends out before him; Psal. 57. 3. He shall send from Heaven, and save me; God shall send forth his Mercy, and Truth, that come down with Commissions from him, as from the great King, when his Saints stand in need thereof, and these make strange work in the World: He need not send down Angels, he need send but Mercy and Truth down, which else-where it is said he prepares in the Heavens, Psal. 61. 7. He prepares Commissions for them, and sends them down with them for Execution. It is likewise said, That Majesty is before him; Psal. 96. 6. Honour and Majesty are before him; Sing unto the Lord therefore, Vers. 2,3,4. Bless his Name; declare his Glory among the Heathen, his Wonders among all People. For the Lord is great, greatly to be praised: He is to be feared above all Gods, Angels, and Kings on Earth; Honour and Majesty are before him. And then his Faithfulness is said to be round about him, encompassing his Throne, Psal. 89. 8. For what-ever he doth, he is mindful of his Faithfulness, and Covenant, Before and Behind, and on each Side; he can look no way, but that is in his Eye. And though he imploy Angels, and send them down into the World, and they stand round about him; Yet he hath better Harbingers than these, Mercy, and Truth, and Faithfulness, that wait round about him. And for this Kingdom of his, as thus set out, do the Saints bless him; Psal. 145. 10. All thy Works praise thee, O Lord; thy Saints shall bless thee. They shall speak the Glory of thy Kingdom, and talk of thy Power. To make known to the Sons of Men his mighty Acts, and the glorious Majesty of his Kingdom. Thy Kingdom is an Everlasting Kingdom; and thy Dominion endures throughout all Generations.

Thirdly; The Apostle celebrates him, and gives Glory to him, that he is Invisible; you have it in both places, 1 Tim. 1. 17. and 1 Tim. 6. 16. and that purely puts it from God's being praised for what he is in Benefits to a Man's self, or from what he is to any Creature; for we praise him for what we do not see, for what we do not nor cannot see, and so cannot enjoy, (for so far as we cannot see, we cannot come to enjoy); and therefore purely for this, For what he is in himself, and to himself, in the knowledg and enjoyment of himself. He blesseth him that he is so great a God, that the Fulness of his Glory can never be known by his Creatures; So Excellent, that still there is an Infiniteness we cannot know in him: Had it been out of Self-love, (this giving Glory to him) it would have blessed him for what is seen and enjoyed. We see in this Life but his Back parts; yet by what we see of them, we glorify him for what we see not; And how little do we know of him! as you have it in Job 26. 14.

Fourthly; That he is only Wise, his Understanding Infinite, (as we heard out of the Psalms) and infinitely shown in all his Works. In Wisdom hast thou made the Heavens, Psal. 136. 5. Yea, in Wisdom hast thou made them all, Psalm. 104. 24.

BOOK I.

104 24. But above all, for his Wiſdom, that hidden Wiſdom, manifeſted in the Goſpel in the Salvation of Men; To God only Wiſe, who hath revealed the Myſtery which was kept ſecret ſince the World began; To God only Wiſe be Glory, through Jeſus Chriſt for ever. Amen. Rom. 16. ult. Of bleſſing him for his Decrees I ſhall ſpeak afterwards. In his ordinary Works, his Thoughts are very deep; Pſal. 92. 5. O Lord, how great are thy Works! and thy Thoughts are very deep: But, O the depth of the Riches, both of the Wiſdom and Knowledg of God! cries the Apoſtle out, when he ſpeaks of his Contrivements of Mercy in the Goſpel, Rom. 11. 33.

Fifthly; He gives Glory to him, for that he is Eternal; That he had all this Bleſſedneſs, Wiſdom, &c. from Everlaſting: Such a Soul can bleſs him then for that he hath been ſo bleſſed a God from Everlaſting, and enjoy'd this Happineſs, and then to be ſure, we enjoy'd nothing from him, for he was alone. You have the ſame in Pſal. 41. 13. Bleſſed be the Lord God of Iſrael, from Everlaſting to Everlaſting; and there is an Amen for either of them, Amen and Amen; An Amen for what he hath been from Everlaſting, and Amen for what he ſhall be to Everlaſting; And it is here, in the Apoſtle's words likewiſe, that he is Eternal, in the 1*ſt* Chapter, as for time paſt. And only having Immortality, in the 6*th* Chapter. You have the ſame, Rev. 4. 8. The four Beaſts reſt not Day nor Night, ſaying, Holy, Holy, Holy, Lord God Almighty, which was, and is, and is to come. They praiſe him for his Holineſs, and for his Power; they praiſe him for all he hath been, for what he was, and hath been for time paſt, is for the preſent, and is to come. One would think, what hath a poor Creature to do to bleſs him, for what he was from Everlaſting, all which is paſt? Yet they herein would ſhew their good Will, I will caſt in my Shot, and Congratulation, ſaith the Soul.

Sixthly; For that he only is, and hath alone all thoſe Bleſſedneſſes and Perfections: This is three times, in thoſe two Doxologies of the Apoſtle, whilſt he calls him the Bleſſed and only Potentate, and that hath only Immortality, and that is only Wiſe; To him be Honour. Pſal. 86. 9, 10. All Nations ſhall come and glorify thy Name; for thou art great, and doſt wondrous Things; Thou art God alone. Pſal. 72. 18. Bleſſed be the Lord God of Iſrael, who only does wondrous Things. Oh, ſays that Soul, let him have it, and he alone, and none ſhare with him.

This large and ample Field hath this Soul afore him to expatiate in. I might extend the amplitude of this Soul; That he hath all in God's Works; All in his Decrees; All in his Word, to give Glory to God for. Firſt, all his Works, paſt, preſent, and to come: We have this oft in the Pſalms; Pſal.66.2. Sing forth the Honour of his Name; make his Praiſe Glorious. Praiſe was too low a word; Make his praiſe glorious. Say unto God, How terrible; or how reverent art thou in thy Works! All the Earth ſhall worſhip Thee, and ſing in thy Name. Come and ſee the Works of God! &c. Pſal. 92. 1, 4. It's a good thing to ſing Praiſe to thy Name, O moſt High; for thou Lord haſt made me glad, thorow thy Works; I will triumph in the Work of thy hands. It rejoiced his Heart to ſee what a Glory ſhined forth in all he had done: Oh Lord, How great are thy Works! and thy Thoughts are very deep. And this he doth with delight; Pſal. 77.12. I will meditate alſo of all thy Work, and talk of thy Doings.

He hath alſo all God's Decrees and Counſels afore him to rejoice in, and to praiſe him for, his Counſels that contrived all about his Works, both of Judgments and Mercies: Iſa. 25. 1. O Lord, thou art my God, I will exalt Thee, I will praiſe thy Name; for thou haſt done wonderful Things; and thy Counſels of old are Faithfulneſs and Truth. As likewiſe that in Pſal. 92. 5. O Lord, How great are thy Works! thy Thoughts (that is, thy Counſels) they are very deep.

For his Decrees of Election eſpecially, yea, and Reprobation alſo. When the Apoſtle had diſcourſed both theſe Doctrines out, and juſtified God therein, Rom. 9. and 11 Chapters; ſhewing how God had once choſen the Jews, but then caſt them off; then, taken the Gentiles whom before he had ſuffered to walk in their own Ways, who in time paſt have not believed; and then at laſt, how he will have Mercy, both upon the one and the other. And the fulneſs of the Gentiles ſhall come in, as well as of the Jews; but God hath concluded them all in Unbelief, that he might have Mercy upon all: For this Counſel of his, he cries out, Oh the depth of the Riches, both of the Wiſdom and Knowledg of God!

God, namely, in these his ways, of chusing the one, and refusing the other: How unsearchable are his Judgments, and his ways past finding out; for of him, and through him, and to him, are all Things; To whom be Glory for ever. Amen. Reprobation it self, and the Issues of it, upon the consideration of the hardness and obstinacy that is in Man's Heart, and the wickedness of Men against God, causeth such a Soul to take part with God, and to rejoice in the Glory that accrues to him hereby; his Spirit will be stirr'd at the thoughts of all the obstinate Sinners in the World, that they should remain such against so great a God. In the 104*th Psalm*, where he sets out God in himself, and in his Works, as much as in any other Psalm, after all his praises of him throughout, and uttering his own frame of Heart thereupon; At vers. 33, 34. I will sing unto the Lord as long as I live; I will sing praise to my God while I have a being; my Meditation of him shall be sweet, I will be glad in the Lord. With indignation he adds, (his Spirit being raised up unto the exalting of God, and singing of his Glory) Let the Sinners be consumed out of the Earth; and let the Wicked be no more, who should thus dare to lift up their Heads, and Horns, and Souls against this God, so Great, so Good, so Gracious; However I have reason to bless the Lord (says he) whom thou hast chosen: Bless thou the Lord, O my Soul, and all ye Saints, praise ye the Lord. In Psal. 145. That Psalm of Praise, where he shews him to be good to all his Works, and his Mercy to be over all his Works, &c. And what a gracious God, and full of Compassion he is. What is the Conclusion of his Spirit from all this? The Lord will preserve all them that love him; but all the Wicked will he destroy. This he was glad of; this Soul can sit down at the Day of Judgment, and think of the Glory that shall then come in to God, from the condemnation of Wicked Men. As that poor Woman, who having a most wicked Son, whom she dearly lov'd, once upon occasion of a high wickedness of his, said, Well, I shall one day rejoice that thou shalt be damn'd, and take part with the Glory of God therein. And the Conviction of so high a strain of Grace to be in her Soul, of Love to God, (while he knew how well she lov'd him) was the Means of breaking that Man's Heart, and converting him to God.

Chap. 6.

He hath also all in God's Word afore him, to glorify God for every word and passage of it; Psal. 56.4. In God will I praise his Word, (says he). And again he hath it, vers. 10. In God will I praise his Word; for all his Promises, for all his Threatnings, and executions of Threatnings, though upon himself, according to his Word. Good is the Word of the Lord, when it was against him and his Family, and the whole Nation, said good Hezekiah, 2 Kings 20. 19. Above all, he loves God's Salvation that is therein; Let all such as love thy Salvation, say continually, The Lord be magnified, Psal. 40. 16. One would think that this should be Self-love alone makes us love Salvation: Ay, but they love it, because it is his, That love thy Salvation; as in Psalm. 21. 1. The King shall joy in thy strength, O Lord; and in thy Salvation how greatly shall he rejoice. It is the Character of a Holy Saint, to love Salvation it self; not as his own only, but as God's, as God's that saves him.

Again, this Soul can rejoice in all that is in God himself, and heartily rejoice; and Oh, what an infinite Priviledg, and how blessed a frame of Heart is it, for the poor Creature to be wound up so high, as not only to rejoice in hope of Glory; But we rejoice in God, Rom. 5. 11. To rejoice therein, more than in its own Happiness; And therefore you have it so often, when praising God is mentioned, that there is rejoicing also; It does accompany it, Psal. 104. 33, 34. I will sing unto the Lord, as long as I live; I will sing Praises to my God while I have my Being: My meditation of him shall be sweet; I will be glad in the Lord. In Psal. 43. 4. I will give unto God my exceeding Joy; Yea, upon the Harp will I praise thee, Oh God, my God; In the Hebrew it is, the Top of my Joy, the Joy of my Joy. You find them also, when they are in this praising frame, to make their boast in God; Psal. 34. 1, 2. I will bless the Lord at all times; his praise shall be continually in my Mouth; my Soul shall make her boast of the Lord. Likewise, in Psal. 68. 3. there they are also joined, Let the Righteous be glad; let him rejoice before God; yea, let him exceedingly rejoice. Then follows, Sing unto God, sing praise to his Name; extol him that rides upon the Heavens, by his Name Jah, and rejoice before him. And, vers. 13. To him who rideth upon the Heaven of Heavens, which were of old.

This

This Soul, as thoſe will rejoice in God, ſo exult in giving thoſe praiſes to God; Pſal. 92. 1. It is a good thing to ſing Praiſes unto thy Name, O moſt High; And he founds it upon this, For thou, Lord, haſt made me glad through thy Works: It is a good Thing; that is, It is a ſweet and pleaſant thing, even Praiſe it ſelf is. Pſal. 135. 3. 'Praiſe ye the Lord, for the Lord is good; ſing praiſe to his Name, for it is pleaſant. Pſal. 147. 1. 'Praiſe ye the Lord, for it is good to ſing Praiſe to God, for it is pleaſant, and Praiſe is comely.

David ſpeaks it as the Joy of his Soul, that he ſhould yet live to praiſe him; and he yet ſhall praiſe him more and more, Pſal. 43. 4, 5. He expreſſeth it as his greateſt Ambition, and delight of Soul, that he ſhould live yet to praiſe him.

He does this with his whole Heart; Pſal. 9. 1, 2. I will praiſe thee, O Lord, with my whole Heart, I will ſhew forth all thy marvellous Works; I will be glad, and rejoice in thee; I will ſing Praiſe to thy Name, O thou moſt High. And therefore in praiſing of him, you find, they ſay, Amen and Amen, as in Pſal. 41. 33. and Pſal. 72. 18. which ſhews all heartineſs.

That Soul can go over all Ages paſt, and be affected with the Praiſes that have been given to God by the Saints and Angels in all Ages. To read the Pſalms, wherein David and the Pſalmiſts praiſe him. To read in the Revelations, how the Angels, the four and twenty Elders, and the four Beaſts, and all Creatures praiſe him. He can begin and ſet down with the Angels, thoſe bright Morning Stars, that began ſo early to praiſe God for the Creation of the World; Job 38. 7. Then the Morning Stars ſang together, and all the Sons of God ſhouted for Joy; And he can ſhout with them, that they then did ſo. He can then ſit down in the Ark with Noah, and glorify God with him, for that the Lord ſat at the Flood, Pſal. 29. 10. So moſt Interpreters render it, and interpret it, That he ſat as a Judg, taking vengeance on the old World, and Ungodly, after ſo much long ſuffering; and ſat on the Throne of Mercy, preſerving Noah, that Righteous one, and thus the Chalde paraphraſe on it. And that which follows, confirms it; Yea, the Lord ſat King for ever; He did that great Act once, and ever ſince he hath held being King, and will do ſo to everlaſting. This Man can join with Miriam and Moſes at the Red Sea, Gen. 50. and ſing the Song of Moſes, and of the Lamb, as they do Rev. 15. He can bear a part with Hannah, and all thoſe 'Pſalmodiſts in their Elogiums, and high Exaltations of God; even as the Pſalmiſt, we find, did join with Moſes in celebrating his Praiſe for his Wonders then done in Egypt, and in the Red Sea. His Heart falls in with thoſe Angels Song, when they proclaim'd the Birth of our Redeemer; Glory to God on High, Peace on Earth, good Will towards Men: Yea, as one well ſays, Aures habet ad audiendam Cælorum prædicationem. He hath Ears to hear the Heavens, declaring the Glory of God, and his Soul can make Muſick on it; for thus we read Rev. 5. when every Creature, verſ. 13. that is in the Heavens, and in the Earth, &c. ſaid, Bleſſing, Honour, Power, and Glory, be unto him that ſits upon the Throne, and unto the Lamb, for ever and ever: That the four Beaſts ſaid, Amen. And the four and twenty Elders fell down and worſhipped him that lives for ever and ever; they fell in with them. And as a further Ground for this latter Branch, we find the Angels hearing the Saints of Mankind giving Praiſe to God, and ſaying, Salvation to our God which ſits upon the Throne, and to the Lamb: We find, that all the Angels that ſtood round about the Throne, That they fell down before the Throne on their Faces, and worſhipped God, ſaying, Amen. They join with the Song that the Saints of Men ſung unto God, though they were not concerned in it; Not in Salvation, for they fell not, yet they ſay, Amen; and then they add of their own, 'Bleſſing, and Glory, and Wiſdom, and Thanksgiving, and Honour, and Power, and Might, be unto our God, for ever and ever. Amen. And where there is ſuch a frame of Spirit raiſed in the Heart of a Man filled with the Glory of God; as the Angels fall in with our Song, we can fall in with theirs, and with that of all the Creatures.

Muſculus on Pſal. 89. 5.

CHAP.

CHAP. VII.

The Glory of God which appears in his Kingdom, and Universal Dominion, whereby he rules over all; as it is described in Psalm 89. from vers. 6. to vers. 15.

HEre begins a Magnifick Description of God as King, and his Kingdom: For so expresly in the conclusion of this Description he is stiled, *v.*18. [Our King]. And the intent of this I have elsewhere shewn to have this end and purpose, of setting out what a King Christ his Son should be, and what a Kingdom and Throne his Father would estate him unto, for the grand Promise of this Psalm, so often solemnly made and repeated, being of a Throne, under the Type and Shadow of David, and of Christ's being his Seed, unto Christ his Son. It begins, Verse 6. For who in Heaven can be compared unto the Lord? Who among the Sons of the Mighty can be likened unto the Lord?

He first sets out the incomparable Glory and Excellency of his Person to be such, as that he is a King above all Kings, Whether in Heaven (for there are Thrones, which notes kingly Dignity, as well as Dominions among the Angels, Col. 1. 16.) or whether on Earth, and that he is worthily, for his Personal Excellencies, the only Potentate, 1 Tim. 6.15. and his exaltation of him as such, is carried so high above them, as he will not deign so much as a comparison with them; but that he surpasseth all or the least comparison to be made with him. 1. So far above the Angels, that who in the Heavens can be compared to him? The Heathen Philosophers and wisest of them admired, worshipped the Angels, (as some Pseudo-Christians, induced by their Doctrines, afterward did the like, as Col. 2. shews.) Then 2*dly*, on Earth he brings in the Sons of the Mighty, by which I understand the great Heroes and Worthies of the Sons of Men, the Potent Mighty Ones, as Kings, and those that descend from them. Whom Men cry up as Benefactors, Luk. 22. 25. Whilst living, and when dead the Heathens did rank them among the Gods, and worship them also.

I rather understand with Piscator and others, by Sons of the Mighty, to be meant the Great Ones of the Earth, than of the Angels, as others would, because of the like correspondent distinction held in the verse afore, of the Heavens, and Saints on Earth, continued also in this: As also, because this Stile, Sons of the Mighty, or of the Gods, is no where given to the Angels, although they are stiled the Sons of God, as in Job, because they are such by Creation (for which respect even Adam is also called the Son of God, Luke 3. last.) Who though because they excel in Strength (as the Psalmist of them) are therefore stiled the Mighty Ones, Psal. 78. 25. Yet no where Sons of the Gods, or Mighty, which is a Phrase peculiar to Men, connotating Propagation from such Men as are Gods, and Mighty Ones in the Earth; thus Psal. 29. 1. Give unto the Lord ye Sons of the Mighty, &c. That is, you Nobles, great Ones, and Potentates of the Earth, descended from them that were such; whereas the Angels Nature knows not Propagation, for which they should be thus stiled.

And then, the Jews themselves had the Persons of their Heroes, as Moses, David, Solomon, &c. in too high an admiration (whose Renown was also spread over the whole Earth,) and did too much boast of them, as the Glory of their Nation, and had relied too much upon David's House, that it would be answerable in future Ages, unto so happy beginnings of David, and Solomon, which the Prophet here (living in Roboboam's time) began to see to fall short. Thereupon says the Prophet, whether among Angels, or Spirits of holy Souls in the Heavens, or the Sons of the Mighty on Earth, the best and greatest that ever were, there is not one, no nor all of them put together, that hath the least Shadow of Worth, to be so much as named, by way of comparison, when God is spoken of: For so the manage of the Words import. He ſays not, there is no God like unto the Lord, (as yet elſewhere we have it) but who can be compared and likened? &c. God is ſo much and ſo infinitely beyond them all. I ſaid, there is not the leaſt Shadow for them to enter into the Liſts of this Compariſon. And the Dutch have tranſlated thoſe Words [Who can be compared?] thus, [Who can be ſhadowed with him?] that is, they are not worthy to be accounted Shadows unto ſuch a compariſon with him.

The intent of which, is to ſet forth how great a King in his own Perſon he is that is our King, as God (as he is in himſelf conſidered) is underſtood to be: As alſo to magnify that infinite Grace and Condeſcenſion of a God ſo great, to be the gracious Founder of ſo wonderful Mercies, and of ſuch a Covenant of Grace to the Sons of Men: For that is the Argument he drives on all along.

This for the firſt, how great a God and King he is in his own Perſon ſimply conſidered.

VERSE 7.

2. From his extolment of him in his Perſon, ſo far above all Kings, &c. He proceeds to his Kingdom. And in the ſeventh Verſe he begins that with a delineation of his Court: And how he hath erected a Palace, and ſo preſents him as ſurrounded with Courtiers, and Attendants round about him. God is greatly to be feared in the Aſſembly of the Saints: and to be had in reverence of all them that are about him. This is exactly done in Similitude to the mode and manner of Kings on Earth, and correſpondent unto the Scheme or Deſcription here. You find, (if you compare it) that of God's Throne ſet forth in the 5*th* and 7*th* Chapters of the Revelation, where the Lamb had his Commiſſion given him, to be God's King, or God's Viceroy, where you ſee how his Angels and Saints ſtand round about him. The like Poſture of this Aſſembly you read in the Old Teſtament, 1 Kings 22. 19. and more fully and expreſly of whom it conſiſts in the New, Heb. 12. 22, 23, 24. But ye are come unto Mount Sion, and unto the City of the living God, the heavenly Jeruſalem, and to an innumerable Company of Angels, to the General Aſſembly, and Church of the Firſt-born, which are written in Heaven, and to God the Judg of all, and to the Spirits of juſt Men made perfect, and to Jeſus the Mediator of the New Covenant, and to the Blood of Sprinkling, that ſpeaketh better things than that of Abel. And that as from thence he adminiſters the grand Affairs of his Kingdom, the Scriptures do abundantly teſtify.

And by ſetting out this Solemnity of his Court in Heaven, he declares how great a King he is, and how greatly dreadful he is unto thoſe glorious Spirits that are neareſt to him; however he is diſregarded by Men on Earth, yet in Heaven he is greatly feared and in reverence of them that know him beſt; that ſtand round about him, beholding his Face, being alſo ready preſt to execute his Will, when it is ſignified by the leaſt Nutus, or Caſt, and Diſcovery of his Countenance.

And yet though he uſeth theſe Angels as miniſtring Spirits, ſent forth to miniſter for them who ſhall be Heirs of Salvation, Heb. 1. laſt. yet the Pſalmiſt further preſents him as Potent of himſelf alone, to execute and do all whatever, which for theſe Heirs of his Covenant he hath a mind to do, and withal a faithfulneſs joined therewith to move him thereunto, as verſ. 8. hath it, But unto the Son he ſaith, Thy Throne, O God, is for ever and ever, a Scepter of Righteouſneſs is the Scepter of thy Kingdom. Who yet is pleaſed to employ that glorious Company of Angels that are round about him, in the outward Adminiſtration and Affairs belonging to this Kingdom, whilſt himſelf by his Spirit works and doth all as to the inward Effects in his Childrens Spirits: But this external Kingdom (viſible to thoſe that are with him in Heaven) he manageth as Kings, at and from their Courts, uſe to do: Which courſe and way, as for other reaſons he choſe to do, becauſe his Son whom he would give it unto, being to be a Son of Man, and a viſible King, he provided for him, to ſhew his Sublimity, the State and Grandure of a viſible King: Who is gone into Heaven, and is on the right Hand of God, Angels, and Authorities, and Powers being made ſubject unto him, 1 Pet. 3. 22. And hath put all things in ſubjection under his Feet, Heb. 2.

From

From hence therefore, the Psalmist descends to set out God's absolute Dominion (as the only Potentate) which he hath over all things that are in these lower parts of his Dominion, which are his Foot-stool. As namely, over these visible Heavens, the Suburbs of those higher, and over the Earth, vers. 9. Thou rulest the raging of the Sea: when the Waves thereof arise, thou stillest them. The Heavens are thine, the Earth also is thine: as for the World and the fulness thereof, thou hast founded them. The North and the South thou hast created them: Tabor and Hermon shall rejoice in thy Name. And in this latter Passage he quarters forth the World, the North and the South; and Tabor, and Hermon (which two stood East and West) to shew that his Power reacheth to every Nook and Corner of the World. And for a manifest invincible Evidence of his Power in these lower parts of Dominion (this World) he gives instance of one sort of Soveraign Acts, (which sufficiently argue his Power over all things else, whatsoever, here below.) And those Acts too such as were done in Performance of, and to make good his Covenant, promised to Abraham (for the Mercies of his Covenant are the thing he prosecutes); they are his Wonders wrought in Egypt, and at the Red Sea, rescuing his People from thence by an out-stretched Arm, vers. 9, 10. Thou rulest the raging of the Sea: when the Waves thereof rise, thou stillest them. Thou hast broken Rahab in pieces, as one that is slain, thou hast scattered thine Enemies with thy strong Arm.

Chap. 7.

The Psalmist still goes on to set forth the Glory of this King and Kingdom by Allusions answerable to what the Pomp and State of Kings doth lye. And indeed the highest Glories of the most High (as he is a King) are yet to follow, which lye in this, that his own Internal Essential Attributes, and Personal Excellencies, are all sufficient to constitute him a King, and then to support his Greatness, and to hold forth, and express a Majesty and Splendour, such as alone doth render him dreadful, and to be revered of all that are about him, so as he needeth not any thing outward, no additional Glory, or Ensign of Majesty, but Himself, and his own Divine Perfections, are instead and beyond all such Forreign Ornaments. That whereas Earthly Kings (their Persons being Mortal, &c. as other Men) do therefore need accessory Circumstances of State and Grandure, Robes of Purple, Crowns of Gold, enriched with most Precious Stones, with which Solomon was clothed in all Royalty, Scepters also and Maces of Honour, and Swords to be carried afore them, also Thrones and Canopies of State, &c. and all to dazzle the Eyes, and beget a Reverence and Dread in them that are about them, or in others of their Subjects. But our great God and King hath no need of any of these things, no outward thing to greaten, or assist him. Now the Attributes he mentions are four, or of four Ranks.

Propheta ad Regni insignia vel Pompas alludens, dicit Judicium & Justitiam esse sulturam solii ejus: Clementiam & Veritatem esse Apparitores: Acsi diceret loco purpuræ, vel diadematis, vel sceptri, his insignibus ornari Deum quod justus sit, & æquus Mundi judex, misericors Pater, fidelis suorum Protector. Nam quia Terrenis Regibus non suppetit intrinseca dignitas, aliunde eam mutuant. Deus autem qui se uno contentus, nullis adminiculis indiget, splendorem imaginis suæ in justitia, bonitate, & veritate sua nobis proponit. Calvin. in loc.

First, In vers. 14. you read that Justice and Judgment (that is, Righteousness, and Righteous Administrations) are the Establishment (as in the Margent) of his Throne. He needs not, as Solomon, an Artificial Throne, Lyons, &c. as Solomon's Throne had, and needeth not his Subjects Hearts, his own Justice is sufficient to found and support his Throne.

The like you have (speaking of his Kingdom.) Psal. 97. 2.

Secondly, Whereas Kings have Mace-bearers, and Nobles to bear the Sword, to go afore them; also Messengers of State that stand ready to go forth to execute any Design: So God as in the same 14*th* Verse, Mercy and Truth are before thy Face, either to carry the Ensigns (which indeed themselves are sufficiently) or as ready to go abroad, (Tanquam Apparitores) to effect whatever he would have done in the behalf of his People. Thus elsewhere, when David was to be delivered, as in Psal. 57. 3. God shall send from Heaven, says he, (as from his Court and Palace) And whom will he send? It follows, God shall send forth his MERCY and his TRUTH. Creatures might fail, but if Mercy it self, and Truth be entrusted to dispatch his decreed Purposes, these will be sure to do it throughly and to purpose, as we say, for the Good of his Chosen, and the making Good of his Covenant.

Thirdly, These came down armed with all the Power that is in God the Lord of Hosts to assist them, and so can never fall short of Ability for the Performance, verſ. 13. Thou haſt a mighty Arm: ſtrong is thy Hand, and high is thy right Hand.

BOOK I.

Fourthly; His Faithfulneſs; that is, a conſtancy to his own Reſolutions, Intentions, Purpoſes, and promiſes of Mercy, that in verſ. 8. is ſaid to be round about him. In alluſion ſtill unto a King on his Throne; in the foregoing verſ. 7. the Angels were ſaid to be round about him; as alſo the Revelations. But here, his own very Faithfulneſs, is further ſaid to be round about him. A tergo, à fronte, à dextra, à ſiniſtra; afore, behind, and every way, Faithfulneſs environs him round; no Decree, no Execution can paſs from him, but it muſt paſs through his Faithfulneſs. And it is for all ſureneſs to us, and our full ſecurity, that he is ſaid to have placed it round about him as his Guard, that ſo his Faithfulneſs might watch and obſerve whatever paſſeth, as in our behalf, that nothing ſhould be done, or fall out, but in very Faithfulneſs to his Promiſes made to his. His Fidelity hath an Eye upon him in every thing, and he hath an Eye unto it continually; for let him turn his Eyes which way he pleaſeth, it is before him. Thus in like manner you find a Rainbow round about his Throne, Rev. 4. 3. The Rainbow was Mercy's Remembrancer, not to deſtroy the World; and was typical therein of the Covenant of Grace, Iſa. 54. 8,9. With everlaſting kindneſs will I have mercy on thee; for this is as the Waters of Noah to me, &c. And this Rainbow being thus continually round about him, he can look no way but he is put in mind of Mercy, in the midſt of the moſt ireful Diſpenſations, as in the ſame place of Iſaiah you have it. And therefore he alſo ſaid, he will ever be mindful of his Covenant, Pſal. 111. 5. and ſo of theſe Mercies of his Covenant.

Calvin.

Now all this which is ſaid of God's Kingdom, is all true of Chriſt; his own Perfections innate in him, (being God's Son) have an alike ſufficiency in him; his own Glory and Power, that flow from that Union, have Ability, Majeſty, &c. ſufficient. The Apoſtles ſay of him, We ſaw his Glory, as of the only begotten Son of God, proper to him, and innate in him, as ſuch. And the Angels they cry aloud, Rev. 5. 12. Worthy is the Lamb that was ſlain, to receive Power, and Riches, and Wiſdom, and Strength, and Honour, and Glory, and Bleſſing.

Uſe 1. We ſhould therefore praiſe and glorify God, That he is the King, the Great King, Bleſſedneſs in himſelf. You have them both joined, why we ſhould praiſe him; Pſal. 95. 3. For the Lord is a great God, and a great King above all Gods. You have them joined in the Lord's Prayer, Hallowed be thy Name, as he is God; and, Thy Kingdom come, as he is King. In Jer. 10. 6, 7. Here, as he is God, O Lord, thou art Great; and thy Name is Great in Might; And here he is as King, (and though there be forty other Reaſons given, why he ſhould be King of all the World), here is one, Who would not fear thee, O King of Nations? for to thee doth it appertain: For as much as among all the wiſe Men of the Nations, and in all their Kingdoms, there is none like unto thee. (Ariſtotle ſays, A ſuperexcellency in a Man was it that made him a King); as if he had ſaid, Lord, if thou lay down thy Place, there is no wiſe Man in the World can order and rule it as thou doſt, to thee it appertains. And, verſ. 10. he tells you plainly, He is both the True God, and the Living God, and an Everlaſting King. You ſee he bleſſes him, for that he is bleſſed in himſelf. Now, What is Bleſſedneſs? A Confluence of all Happineſs and Glory that he hath, and that wholly in himſelf, he needs nothing; for this he gives Glory to him. So Paul doth, Rom. 1. when he had told them how the Gentiles diſhonour God, and abuſe him, changing the Glory of the uncorruptible God into, &c. Verſ. 25. His Spirit breaks out, Who is bleſſed for ever; And what does he add? Amen. What is Amen? So be it; O let him be bleſſed, let him enjoy it. Amen, is a wiſh, ſo it may be. The like you have Rom. 9. 5. ſpeaking of Chriſt, Who is over all, God bleſſed for ever. Amen.

2. As a King, we are to bleſs and praiſe him; truly you will ſay to me, That his being a King, relates to what he is to the Creature, not unto what he is in himſelf. I yield it, it refers unto what Relation he hath to the Creature: yet let me ſay, That to be the King of all, is proper, it is eſſential to him. To me that Scripture argues thus much, Pſal. 93. 1. The Lord reigns, he is clothed with with Majesty, the Lord is clothed with Strength, wherewith he hath girded himself. Vers. 2. Thy Throne is established of old; thou art from Everlasting. Chap. 7.

From then (as the word is) thou art from Everlasting. His Throne was established from Then, from of Old; and it is as old as himself: It is not only when he says, Thou art from Everlasting, that God is Everlasting, but it relates to his Throne. The same you have in 'Prov. 8. 22. The Lord possessed me in the beginning of his Way, before his Works of Old. The Lord was King before the World was. We use to say of a Man of a great and high Spirit, He hath a Kingdom in himself. To be sure God had. Why? He had Frames and Models of Worlds, and could have made Millions of Worlds; and what not? He disposeth of all that he hath made; Isa. 44. 6, 7. Thus saith the Lord the King of Israel, and his Redeemer the Lord of Hosts, I am the First, and I am the Last, and besides me there is no God. And who is like me, that shall call, and shall declare it, and set it in order before me, since I appointed the Ancient 'People? and the things that are coming, and shall come? let them shew unto them. A King is not a King only in Proclamations and Executions, but in Councils, in ordering Things in his Court. He was thus a King from Everlasting. Antiquity of Kings doth enoble; As it is said, Isa. 19. 11. How say ye to Pharaoh, I am the Son of the Wise, the Son of Ancient Kings.

This is a Subject of a World of Praise; As also in the Revelations, That God is a King of Kings, is a Matter of great exaltation to God. Look Psalm. 145. which is a 'Psalm of Praise, the Title is so; it begins thus, I will extol thee, my God, O King; and I will bless thy Name for ever and ever. Vers. 10, 11, 12, 13. All thy Works shall praise thee, O Lord; and thy Saints shall bless thee. They shall speak of the Glory of thy Kingdom; and talk of thy Power. To make known to the Sons of Men his mighty Acts, and the glorious Majesty of his Kingdom. Thy Kingdom is an Everlasting Kingdom; and thy Dominion endureth throughout all Generations. And therefore you find in the Psalms, the Psalmist bids them proclaim it; The Lord is King, and reigns in the World, as the best News they ever heard, or that ever could be told them; as in Psal. 96. 10. Say among the Heathen, The Lord reigneth; Make proclamation of it, That the Lord reigns; The World also shall be established, that it shall not be moved. Vers. 11. Let the Heavens rejoice, that the Lord reigns; and let the Earth be glad: Let the Field be joyful, and all that is therein; Then shall all the Trees of the Wood rejoice. Let the Sea roar; you Fishes that have no Tongues, you are mute, yet speak and roar out now, That God reigns; as Christ says, That the very Stones would speak: Let the Floods clap their Hands; let the Hills be joyful together, Psal. 98. 8. Or as elsewhere, Let them skip and dance, that God is King, that he is the King of Kings, that he reigns; But especially let his Church do it, Psal. 97. The Church especially hath a share in this, Thy Judgments are made manifest, as Rev. 15. Thou art King, and King of Saints; Let the Heavens declare his Righteousness; and all the People see his Glory, vers. 6. Worship him all ye Gods, vers. 7. Gods or Angels; and this because he is so high and great a King. And you poor Souls that are here below, and under Oppression, sowing Tears, before this Kingdom breaks out, (says he) there is Light sown for you; Vers. 11. Light is sown for the Righteous; and Joy for the Upright in Heart. Rejoice in the Lord, ye Righteous; and give thanks to the remembrance of his Holiness, vers. 12. This is, because he is King.

I will now explain to you the Frame of such a Soul, as is wound up to God, to give Glory to God for what was in himself; and will describe the many Dispositions that Soul hath.

First; Such a Soul sees so much of the Glory of God, as it is at a loss what Praise to give him; It knows not how to praise and glorify him enough: As it is said of his Benefits, which is a lower praise given to him; Psal. 116. 12. What shall I render unto the Lord for all his Benefits towards me? Thus also Paul, 1 Thess. 3. 9. What Thanks can we render to God again for you? But if the Glory of God come in, it is above all your Blessing and Praise. Nehem. 9. 5. 'Blessed be thy Glorious Name, which is exalted above all Blessing and Praise. That a Soul is at such a loss you may see it in the 'Psalms.

1. See

BOOK I.

1. See the variety of Expreſſion the Pſalmiſt goes about to utter it by; ſometimes he calls it Praiſe, and then Glorifying; Pſal. 86. 12. I will praiſe thee, O Lord my God, with all my Heart; and I will glorify thy Name for evermore. And ſometimes Singing; But he ſays it over, and over, and over, and over; Pſal. 47. 6, 7, 8. Sing Praiſes to God, ſing Praiſes; Sing Praiſes to our King, ſing Praiſes; for God is the King of all the Earth, ſing you praiſes with Underſtanding; God reigneth over the Heathen: God ſitteth upon the Throne of his Holineſs. He doubles it, and doubles it, to ſhew the vehemency of his Soul; He could not ſing loud enough, Sing, Sing, Sing, Sing, four times in one Verſe. And ſometimes, A New Song, Pſal. 33. 3. Sing unto him a new Song. I have praiſed him formerly, and ſung to him, but all my old Songs are not good enough.

Sometimes he expreſſes it by ſhouting for Joy, Pſal. 32. ult. Be glad in the Lord ye Righteous; and ſhout for joy all ye that are upright in Heart. Pſal. 33. 3. Play skilfully with a loud noiſe. And extol him, Pſal. 30. 1. I will extol thee, O Lord. And magnify him, Pſal. 34. 3. O Magnify the Lord with me, and let us exalt his Name together. Sometimes I will greatly praiſe the Lord; and becauſe Praiſe is too low a word, ſays he, Let us make his Praiſe Glorious. Pſal. 66. 2. Sing forth the Honour of his Name; make his Praiſe glorious: Let us give him no other than glorious Praiſe.

As he uſeth this variety of Expreſſion, which ſhews he knew not what to do or ſay; ſo he doth not know what to ſpeak of God whilſt he praiſes him, what words to uſe; and therefore he carries it off in ſo great a ſuperlative; Pſal. 77. 13. Who is ſo great a God as our God? Who ſhall not fear thee, O Lord, O thou King of Nations, Rev. 15. 4. And he hath it out of Jer. 10. 6. There is none like unto thee, O Lord: Thou art Great, and thy Name is great in Might: Verſ. 7. Who would not fear thee, O King of Nations? In Pſalm. 106. 2. He puts all the Creatures into a ſtand at it; Who can utter the Mighty Acts of the Lord? Who can ſhew forth all his Praiſe? Alas, verſ. 3. Bleſſed be they that keep Judgment; that can be holy. Who can ſhew forth all his Praiſe? praiſe him we cannot.

And ſometimes he uſeth this language, Be exalted above the Heavens; and let thy Glory be above all the Earth, Pſal. 57. 11. And the God that rides on the Heavens, Pſal. 68. 4, 33. Sing unto God, ſing praiſes to his Name; extol him that rideth upon the Heavens, by his Name JAH, and rejoice before him. To him which rideth upon the Heavens of Heavens which were of old. Praiſe him under that Notion. Inſomuch as indeed and in truth we find theſe ſtrains in the Pſalmiſt, that he knew not how to ſet him out with words enough; He leaves it to his own ſelf, for himſelf to do it, for the Creatures cannot do it. Pſal. 71. 13. Glorify thy ſelf in thy own Strength, in thine own Excellency, for the Creature cannot do it. Such a Soul as David was, is enlarged to talk high of God; Pſal. 86. 12. I will praiſe thee, O Lord my God, with all my Heart; I will glorify thy Name for evermore. Alas, poor Creature, How canſt thou praiſe him for evermore? A Soul fired with deſires to praiſe God, it burns after both more perfect things, and more laſting than it is able to perform. To will is preſent with it, &c. See but the reachings and roamings of ſuch a Soul, how it ſwells in deſires to glorify God.

Firſt; That Soul in ſuch a frame, does extend it ſelf to praiſe God in all Times.

1. In all Seaſons, that is, when any occaſion ſhall be given; Pſal. 34. 1. I will bleſs the Lord at all Times; that is (as I take it) at all Seaſons.

2. His Heart goes further; His Praiſe ſhall be continually in my Mouth; he would be doing it continually; Pſal. 84. 4. They will be ſtill praiſing thee; at all Seaſons of the day, Morning, Evening, and Night; Pſal. 92. 2. To ſhew forth thy loving Kindneſs in the Morning, and thy Faithfulneſs every Night. Pſal. 145. 1, 2. I will extol thee, my God, O King, and I will bleſs thy Name for ever and ever: Every Day will I bleſs thee, and I will praiſe thy Name for ever and ever. In other Pſalms, I will bleſs thee while I live, Pſal. 63. 4. Pſal. 104. 33. I will ſing unto the Lord as long as I live; I will ſing praiſe to my God while I have my being. But this is but for this Life: But I will praiſe the Lord for ever and ever, ſays David, Pſal. 104. 2. I will make thy Name to be remembred in all Generations;

therefore shall the People praise thee for ever and ever, Psal. 45. 17. Such a Soul is so enlarged, as if it were possible for him to do it, he would contract all the Praises due to God in all Ages into an Instant, and give him all at once, such are the enlarged Rooms and Desires of his Spirit. O that I could contract (thinks that Soul) all the Glory that is due to God, and that I can give to God to Eternity, that I could give it him in one Moment! Psal. 106.48. Blessed be the Lord God of Israel, from everlasting to everlasting, and let all the People (in the World) say, Amen. Praise ye the Lord. Thus this poor Soul doth reach; and the reason is, because he is so great a God for ever, and therefore he would praise him as for ever. Thus in Eph. 3. 21. where Paul gives Glory to God, To him be Glory in the Church, through Christ Jesus, throughout all Ages, World without end. So Jude also, To him be Glory now and ever. Amen. vers. 25. Chap. 7.

3. This Soul will rejoice that God hath been celebrated by others, in all Ages, Psal. 102.12. But thou, O Lord, shalt endure for ever, and thy Remembrance unto all Generations. That he hath lived in their Praises, Psal. 22. 3. O thou that inhabitest the Praises of Israel! More expressly, Psal. 135. 13. Thy Name, O Lord, endureth for ever, and thy Memorial, O Lord, throughout all Generations. This Soul could sit down with Angels, and take in all their Praises, and rejoice that God hath been so celebrated and praised in all times.

4. This Soul would extend it self, not only to all Times, but to all Persons, and Things, and Works of God, to praise him; oft in the Psalms he rejoices in God, and calls upon all Nations to do it. Psal. 96. 1. Sing unto the Lord all the Earth, vers. 7. Give Glory to the Lord, O ye Kindreds of the Earth, give unto the Lord Glory and Strength, vers. 11, 12. Let the Heavens rejoice, and let the Earth be glad, let the Sea roar, &c. Alas! I cannot do it, my Heart is too narrow! Psal. 72. 18, 19. Blessed be the Lord God, the God of Israel, who only doth wondrous things, and blessed be his glorious Name for ever, and let the whole World be filled with his Glory, Amen and Amen. Nothing will content him else: if he could, he would fire all Creatures to do it; Let the People praise thee, O God, let all the People praise thee. So in Psal. 100. Make a joyful noise unto the Lord all ye Lands, serve the Lord with gladness, and come before his Presence with singing. Psal. 118. 1. O give thanks unto the Lord, for he is good, because his Mercy endureth for ever. He is King every where; O that they would praise him in all his Dominions! Psal. 103.22. Bless the Lord all his Works, in all Places of his Dominion, in every Nook and Corner of the World. vers. 20. Bless the Lord all ye his Angels, that excel in Strength, and do his Commandments. Begin you to bless God! what had he to do to call upon Angels? It is as if he had said, Alas! poor Creature, I have not Strength; you Angels that excel in Strength, do you bless the Lord; it is better than to do his Will, it is your greatest Excellency. And vers. 21. Bless the Lord, all ye his Hosts, ye Ministers that do his Pleasure. And at last, Bless the Lord all his Works, in all Places of his Dominion: And bless the Lord, O my Soul! and what a poor little thing am I to bless him, so he concludes. And again, Psal. 113. 1, 2, 3. Praise ye the Lord, Praise, O ye Servants of the Lord, Praise the Name of the Lord. Blessed be the Name of the Lord, from this time forth and for evermore. From the rising of the Sun, unto the going down of the same, the Lord's Name is to be praised. He is so full, that himself would (if he knew how) wish himself in the midst of a whole Congregation of the Upright, Psal. 111. 1. Praise ye the Lord, I will praise the Lord with my whole Heart, in the Assembly of the Upright, and in the Congregation; would I had a Voice to reach the Multitude of all Nations! Psal. 108. 3. I will praise thee, O Lord, among the People, and I will sing Praises unto thee among the Nations. Nay, before all the Kings of the Earth, and all Angels, all Gods, he witheth such an Auditory. Psal. 138. 1. I will praise thee with my whole Heart, before the Gods will I sing praise unto thee. Our Saviour Christ praised him thus in the midst of the Church Universal. Psal. 22. 22, 23. Bow down thine Ear, O Lord, hear me, for I am poor and needy; preserve my Soul, for I am holy; the Word is, I am thy Servant, or Saint, or Accepted. How does he praise God? O most mightily! vers. 8. Among the Gods there is none like Thee, neither are there any Works like to thy Works. Here is a poor Man in his Need talks thus: and thou that art so great a God, help me in a little Case. In Psal. 89. is an eminent Instance, vers. last. Blessed be the Lord for evermore, Amen and Amen. Says Calvin, there are those that say ſay this Verſe is foiſted in; why? becauſe the Man was in a great deal of Miſery in the Verſes before, Remember, Lord, the reproach of thy Servant, how I do bear in my Boſom the reproach of all the mighty People, wherewith thine Enemies have reproached me, O Lord, wherewith they have reproached the foot-ſteps of thine Annointed. How doth he praiſe God in this Pſalm! and it is there made the Fruit of his Death: I will declare thy Name unto my Brethren, in the midſt of the Congregation will I praiſe thee. You that fear the Lord, praiſe him, all ye the Seed of Jacob, glorify him; and fear him, all ye the Seed of Iſrael. You know who ſaid it, O what Glory does Chriſt bring to God, verſ. 25. My Praiſe ſhall be of thee in the great Congregation. The matter of his Praiſe is fetch'd out of God, he fully knew him. And Paul wiſhes, Eph. 3. laſt. Unto him be Glory in the Church by Chriſt Jeſus, throughout all Ages, World without end. Amen. In the whole Church Univerſal.

5. Again, This Soul, let it be in the loweſt frame that can be, in the greateſt Miſery, worſt Condition, if this frame comes upon it, he will ſtill praiſe God. I have known ſuch as have been in the bottom of Hell, and there praiſed God. In Pſal. 86. David praiſed God when he had been in a very pitiful Condition, verſ. 1, 2, 3. No where ſuch Praiſes, as from the 5*th* to the 15*th* Verſe of this Pſalm. And, as Calvin well ſaid, might not this Man as well bleſs God at laſt, as he did at firſt? I will ſing of the Mercies of the Lord for ever, with my Mouth will I make known thy Faithfulneſs to all Generations, &c. When a Soul is at the loweſt, if the Spirit of Praiſe come in upon that Soul, he will cry out to God aloud in praiſing him. There is another eminent Inſtance in Pſal. 22. Our Lord and Saviour Jeſus Chriſt hung upon the Croſs, there he hung, and all the Phariſees, the Bulls came about him, and ſays he, I cryed to thee. What doth he comfort himſelf with? Verſ. 3. But thou art holy, O thou that inhabiteſt the Praiſes of Iſrael. The Praiſes given to God are ſo delightful to God the Father, that they are call'd an Habitation to him; and the Breath of them, ſays Chriſt, this is that which ſupports me, Thou art holy, and inhabiteſt the Praiſes of Iſrael. verſ. 6. I am a Worm and no Man, a reproach of Men, and deſpiſed of the People; But no matter, ſo thou art praiſed. Iſa. 24. 15. When the World was overwhelm'd with a Deluge of Miſery, yet ſays the Prophet, Wherefore glorify you the Lord in the Fires: in the midſt of all the Fires round about their Ears, they glorified God; ſome read it, In the Valley, in the loweſt Condition they could be in: This Soul yet rejoices that it ſhall live to Praiſe him. My Brethren, Let us pray for ſuch a Heart as this, that the Saints of the Old Teſtament may not ſhame us that are Chriſtians of the New.

BOOK. II.

Of the Son of God, the Second Perſon in the Trinity. What his Perſon is, conſidered in himſelf. He is the Eternal Son of the Father, one God in Eſſence with him. The Son, The Second Perſon took the Man Jeſus into perſonal Union with himſelf; and ſo Chriſt is God-Man joined into one Perſon.

1 Cor. 8. 6.-----And ONE LORD JESUS CHRIST, by whom are all Things, and we by Him.

CHAP. I.

How greatly it imports us to have a true Knowledg of the Perſon of Chriſt. What his Perſon is. That he exiſted from all Eternity with God as a Perſon; and was not meerly a Manifeſtation of the Deity in Time, and then only Exiſtent when he firſt appeared in the World.

THere are two Things imported to us in thoſe words of 1 Cor. 8. 6. And one Lord Jeſus Chriſt;

I. His Perſon, [Jeſus Chriſt].
II. His Office and Relation to us, and unto all the Creation, One Lord, by whom are all Things.

I begin firſt with the ſetting forth the Subſtance of his Perſon; What it is, and of what made up is he, this Chriſt, the Lord, of whom all Things are.

BOOK II. And this is the more neceſſary (though it be largely handled by others) in relation unto thoſe ſtrange and monſtrous Opinions, which, as touching the Perſon of Chriſt, this Age hath produced. Satan being let looſe, hath preach'd over his old Sermons and Notions, read over a-new, and refined his old Lectures, which he had read to thoſe great Hereſiarchs in the Primitive Times: Who joining Philoſophical Notions about λόγ☉, the Word, (as Philoſophers had ſpoken of him) with what the Jewiſh Cabala had alſo ſaid concerning him, made up another Chriſt than whom the Apoſtles preach'd. And truly, the Bottom-Cauſe of Mens embracing Errors about this; hath been the ſeducement of that ſpecious and alluring Principle unto Man's Nature, of being one with God himſelf in the higheſt manner that Man's vain Heart could find ambition within it ſelf to aſpire unto. Miſtakes of Union have cauſed Men to ſhape out ſuch a Chriſt, as might ſerve to their attaining that high and incommunicable Union with God, which they have fancied to themſelves the Creature ſhall attain: and hence look, as we formerly obſerved; that to the End, they might make way for this, the moſt helliſh Blaſphemy that ever was uttered, That the Creatures were, and ſhould become all one with God himſelf, partakers of the Divine Nature. They therefore throw down the three Perſons in the Nature of God, as alone poſſeſſing that Priviledg, as thoſe that ſtood in their way to this Preferment: Which done, they think each of their Perſons may be God, as well as they have been voic'd to be. So, out of the ſame Principle, they in like manner ſerve our Lord Jeſus Chriſt's Perſon; for there muſt be no Preferment in Heaven left, which they muſt not be capable of, and raiſed up unto. They muſt be Chriſt too, and aſcend to the heighth of his Throne.

Yet, 2. There being three Perſons in that Divine Nature; the Man Chriſt Jeſus was capable of being one Perſon with one of theſe: the Perſonality, or to be one in Perſon, might be communicated unto a Creature, although to be one with God in Nature could not; and that is the higheſt Union with God, the Creature is capable of. And had there not been three Perſons in the Nature of God, this high Union with God had not been neither. And then this Union with one of theſe Perſons, is the Foundation of all our Unions; and by virtue of it it is that God deſcends to communicate himſelf to other Creatures, (the We in the Text) even by uniting himſelf perſonally to one Creature, the Man Chriſt Jeſus; and ſo ſetting him up the Lord and Chriſt, and chuſing us in him; and he in that his Perſon, undertaking for, and bearing, and repreſenting our Perſons, thereby we become one with him, and through him with God, in our meaſure, and in a ſubordination to him; according to that John 14. 20. At that Day ye ſhall know that I am in my Father, and you in me, and I in you.

Now in order to clear this Diſtinction of Union with God on Chriſt's part, from that of ours through Chriſt: As I have ſhewed, God was an infinite pure Being, diſtinct from the Creature, and ſtanding out from thoſe Dregs of the Creatures, into which the Fancies of Men would drench him and mingle him with their Mud: So we muſt now extricate the Perſon of Chriſt alſo from the like Entanglements, and vindicate the tranſcendency of his Union with God, and diſtance of his Perſon from ours. And then all Unions left below him, are left free for us to attain, and ſhall be obtained by us. And for the diſcovery hereof, I am firſt in purſuit of this, What the Perſon of Chriſt is; what he conſiſts of.

The great weight and moment of the true and right Knowledg of the Perſon of Chriſt, will be evident by a conſideration of theſe two Texts of Scripture compared together; Mat. 22. 42. Jeſus ſaid unto them, What think ye of Chriſt? Whoſe Son is he? compared with Matth. 16. 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18. When Jeſus came into the Coaſts of Ceſarea Philippi, he asked his Diſciples, ſaying, Whom do Men ſay, that I, the Son of Man, am? And they ſaid, Some ſay that thou art John the Baptiſt, ſome Elias, and others Jeremias, or one of the Prophets. He ſaith unto them, But whom ſay ye that I am? And Simon Peter anſwered and ſaid, Thou art Chriſt the Son of the Living God. And Jeſus anſwered, and ſaid unto him, Bleſſed art thou Simon Bar-Jona; for Fleſh and Blood hath not revealed it unto thee, but my Father which is in Heaven. And I say also unto thee, that thou art Peter, and upon this Rock will I build my Church; and the Gates of Hell shall not prevail against it. Chap. 1.

It is acknowledged by all that profess Christian Religion, That Christ is the Foundation; yea, and that other Foundation can no Man lay, than that which is laid, which is Jesus Christ, 1 Cor. 3. 11. But let all know, that it is as much a Foundation, and as absolutely necessary, To know and believe him that is true, (as John's word is, 1 John 5. 20.) the true Christ; that is, the True Person; who and what he is, and not another Jesus; that is, not to mistake his Person. Which Mistake, or Error Personæ, is either, 1. when Men know not, or do not acknowledg the Individual Person, who He is. Or, 2. understand not, but mistake what that Person is, and what his Person consists of: both which are alike necessary to be understood aright by us. The Necessity first you may see by Christ's Speech to the Pharisees, John 8. 24. If you believe not that [I] am HE, [that is, this my Individual Person to be the He, that is, the Messiah] ye shall die in your Sins.

And the necessity of the latter; those two his Questions, one put to the Pharisees, Matth. 22. and the other to his Disciples, Matth. 16. do also argue,

1. To the Pharisees; What think you of Christ? Whose Son is He? Mat. 22. Here he doth not ask them, Whether they would acknowledg himself to be the Christ, but what manner of Person the True Christ should be? And the dint and aim of his Question is, concerning his Person, Whose Son is He? Which is the true Substance of the Person of the Messiah: Thereby to discover to them, and convince them that they erred as well in this, what the Christ they look'd for should be, as in their not taking himself that was afore them to be that Person; and fatally in both.

2. He catechiseth his Disciples, Mat. 16. 13. Whom do Men say I am? Whom do ye say I am? Vers. 15. Which, vers. 16. Peter, in the Name of the rest, gives answer to; And withal resolves that Question which he put unto the Pharisees, Thou art Christ, the Son of the Living God. In which he speaks home to both Particulars.

1. That He, individually present with them, was the Christ, [thou art, &c.]

And, 2. What that Christ was for the Substance of his Person, Son of the Living God.

And Christ in his return to this, definitively pronounceth, That the Faith of both these was the Rock which he meant to build his Church of the New Testament upon. So then, What the Person of Christ is, is of the Foundation (being the Rock); as well as that, that Jesus was the Christ.

And let me add, That this being the Rock, the whole Church of the New Testament hath been built upon; you therefore may safely joyn issues in your Faith, with what hath been the Faith and Doctrine of the whole Church in all Ages; as touching this particular, what his Person for the Substance of it is. In this, I say, of all Points else, that Promise issues which is made to the whole Church, answering to this Declaration of Christ, Ephes. 4. 13. That they should all come into the Unity of the Faith and Knowledg of the Son of God. They should all, that were in all Ages saved, agree in the Knowledg of this, in what ever other things they might be found to differ. This is the Rock of Ages.

And therefore in this Point, be wary what you entertain anew, or how you vary from the Catholick Faith of former Ages, or in what shall any way make his Person differ, from that Person which all the Saints have understood him to be.

I shall not go about setly to confute the Errors that are abroad; only positively set forth that Person which the Glass of the Gospel holds forth. And I hope, in the end and conclusion, to give forth that Challenge, which Paul in the like Case doth, in that 2 Cor. 11. 4. If he that cometh, can shew you a better, or greater, or more spiritual Christ, (I do not say, shall set out our Christ better, but shew you a better Christ) then you shall do well to bear with that Man, yea, and receive him and his Christ also.

BOOK II.

Again, in the ſetting forth his Perſon; my ſcope is not herein to ſet forth the Excellency and Glory of his Perſon, but the Subſtance of his Perſon. And in doing this, I ſhall proceed, by degrees, as our Apoſtle John alſo did, when he did ſet himſelf to deſcribe him; he doth it by piece-meal, John 1. 1. In the beginning was the Word, that's his firſt ſtep; and that Word was with God, that's a ſecond; And the Word in the beginning was with God, that's a third; And the Word was God, that's a fourth. He might have ſhut them all up in this Sentence, The Word was God, with God in the beginning. But he puts it into ſo many ſeveral poſitive Aſſertions; yea, and begins at the loweſt, namely, his having exiſted, The Word was, and that in the beginning. And then after that, tells us what he is, A Perſon diſtinct from God; He was with God, and yet was God.

I ſhall proceed in the like Method, and ſet him forth in ſo many ſeveral Aſſertions: Whereof each, or moſt of them, are directed as oppoſite to ſome Error or other about his Perſon, which are now abroad in the World. And I will begin as John did, at his Exiſtence; that is, his having been, when, and how long. And John's firſt Affirmation about him, is terminated merely upon his Exiſtence, he was, ſays he. Adding withal the circumſtance of the Time of his Exiſtence, In the Beginning.

1. Of his Exiſtence. When? And How long? Then of his Perſon; Who, &c. And of his Exiſtence; firſt, Becauſe the true underſtanding thereof will conduce to the Knowledg of his Perſon, who he is.

1. He is a Perſon who did actually exiſt before he came into the World, and was made Fleſh; and that had continued to exiſt all along the time of this World, both in the beginning of it, and before the World was, yea, from Eternity.

'Tis ſtrange that the Socinians ſhould ſo impudently, in the Light of this Goſpel, and the Scriptures, ſay, that Chriſt began but then to exiſt actually, when he was firſt conceived by the Holy Ghoſt in the Virgins Womb; and that before he had exiſted but in Promiſe, as the Day of Judgment doth now. As alſo ſuch who hold Chriſt to be but the Manifeſtation of God in Man's Fleſh: God indeed, ſay they, was afore; but Chriſt, as Chriſt, beeing but the Manifeſtation of the Godhead in Man's Nature, exiſted not until Chriſt the Manifeſtation of Him: whereby they not only deny him to be a Perſon who did manifeſt God; but alſo neceſſarily declare that Chriſt, as Chriſt, exiſted not until that Manifeſtation of God in Man's Fleſh. For the exiſtence of that which is only and barely a Manifeſtation, lies only in being the Manifeſtation of ſome thing that exiſted afore, but it ſelf not till then. And this is, even as if a Man ſhould ſay, and affirm, that what all other Men call the Sun, is all one with what we term Day, and nothing elſe; which you know begins but in the Morning, and ceaſeth at Night, and is but the Shine and Manifeſtation of the Sun, when it riſeth and appears above our Hemiſphere, or this part of the World. But look as the Sun is a Body of Light, that exiſts afore it is Day with us; and the appearances of it is that which maketh Day, yea, is Day: So Chriſt the Son of Righteouſneſs, is not the bare Manifeſtation of God, but a Perſon that exiſted with God, yea, and was God afore that Manifeſtation of God made by him in this World. And he is not only the bringing in, or manifeſtation of Life and Immortality which was in God; but himſelf was that eternal Life which was with the Father, as diſtinct from him; and was manifeſted to us 1 John 1. 2. ſo as Life and Immortality is made manifeſt by his appearing, as of a Perſon that brings it, and manifeſts it, with the manifeſtation of himſelf, 2 Tim. 1. 10. And who alſo is ſaid to manifeſt himſelf unto us, as well as the Father, John 14. 21.

To confirm this our main Aſſertion, Let us trace his Exiſtence punctually through all Times. The Pſalmiſt ſays of him, Pſalm. 102. 24. Thy Years are throughout all Generations. Which Pſalm the Apoſtle quoteth of him, Heb. 1. 10. Let us go from Point to Point, and ſee how in Particulars the Scriptures accord with it. The firſt Joint of Time we will begin that Chronology of his Exiſtence withal, is, that Inſtant afore he was to come into the World.

Firſt;

First, We find him to have existed, just afore he came into the World, the Instance of his Conception, Heb. 10. 5. in these Words, Wherefore when he comes into the World, says he, A Body hast thou prepared me. Vers. 7. Lo, I come to do thy Will, O God. Here is a Person distinct from God the Father, a [Me], an [I], distinct also from that Human Nature he was to assume; which he terms a Body prepared. A Person he is that speaks to God, as one knowing and understanding what he was about to do; yea, and how it was written of him, that he should do, In the Volumn of thy Book it is written of me, vers. 7. Therefore besides and afore that Human Nature, there was a Divine Person that existed, that was not of this World, but that came into it [when he cometh into the World, he says, &c.] to become a part of it, and be manifested in it.

Secondly, We find him, to have existed afore John the Baptist, though John was conceived and born some Months afore him. I note these several Joints of Time, because the Scripture notes them, and hath set a special Mark upon them, Joh. 1. 15. John bare Witness of him, and cryed, saying, This was he of whom I spake, He that cometh after me, is preferred before me, for he was before me. This Priority of Existence is that which John doth specially give witness unto. And it is Priority in Existence, for he alledgeth it as a Reason why he was preferred afore him; For he was before me. And therefore, these latter Words do not note out a Priority in Dignity, for that were to prove Idem per idem. And this Reason holds strong; for he is such a Person as existed afore he was made Man or Flesh, afore as Man he was born; and so must be more than a Man or Creature. And then again, he doth not say, He is before me; but speaks in the Time past, He was before me: And yet vers. 30. he expresseth it thus, There cometh a Man (the same John speaking of Christ) which is preferred before me: for he was before me. Still he runs upon this Priority: And yet as a Man he was not afore John; for John was the elder as Man. Therefore as some other Person, namely, the Son of God, (as he had entitled him, vers. 14.) or as the Word, (as he had stiled him vers. 1. and so on.)

Thirdly, we find him existing when all the Prophets wrote and spake. 1 Pet. 1. 11. The Spirit of Christ is said to have been in all the Prophets; even as Paul, who came after Christ, also speaks, You seek a proof of Christ speaking in me, 2 Cor. 13. 3. And therefore, he himself whose Spirit it was, or whom he sent, must needs exist as a Person sending him. And particularly of the Prophet Isaiah, it is said, when he saw his Glory, Isa. 6. 1. Which Joh. 12. 41. is applyed to Christ, and vers. 5. says Isaiah, I am undone, for mine Eyes have seen the King, the Lord of Hosts, which was Christ.

Fourthly, We find him existing in Moses's time, both because it was he that was tempted in the Wilderness; 1 Cor. 10. 9. Neither let us tempt Christ, as some of them also tempted, and were destroyed of Serpents. And it was Christ that was the Person said to be tempted by them, as well as now by us, as the Word καὶ [as they also] evidently shews. And it points to that Angel that was sent with them, Exod. 23. 20, 21. in whom the Name of God was; and who as God, had the Power of pardoning Sins, vers. 21. Beware of him, provoke him not, for he will not pardon your Transgressions: for my Name is in him. And him that Moses calls Jehovah or God, Stephen calls an Angel. And there is none to whom are given the Name of an Angel, and of God, but to Christ. And Stephen says, Acts 7. 35. That Moses was a Ruler and Deliverer in the Land of the Angel which appeared to him in the Bush. And in Heb. 12. 26. there is a comparison made between Moses and Christ: and Christ is there said to be he whose Voice then shook the Earth, vers. 26. and vers. 25. He is termed the Speaker from Heaven, alluding to that place, Exod. 20. 22. God said, You have seen I have talk'd with you from Heaven. So then, Christ then existed, and also is God. Yea further, it is he of whom it is there also said, that his Voice then shook the Earth. Even as he who now under the Gospel speaks from Heaven, and whose Voice shakes both Earth and Heaven under the Gospel. The same Jesus therefore then existed in his Power, that now.

Fifthly, We find him existing in and afore Abraham's time: Joh. 8. 58. Verily, verily I say unto you, before Abraham was, I am. The Jews had undervalued him unto Abraham, vers. 53. Art thou greater than our Father Abraham? And whereas he had said thereupon, vers. 56. That Abraham rejoiced to see his day; which Abraham braham had done by Faith: They will needs cavil, and put this upon him, that he had meant he had ſeen Abraham, and had lived in his Time, verſ. 57. Thou art not fifty years old, and haſt thou ſeen Abraham? Chriſt doth not anſwer as he might, that this was a meer Cavil, as to what his former Words did intend or hold forth; but inſtead thereof, with a deep Aſſeveration affirms, what they thought he had abſurdly ſaid of himſelf, namely, that he had not only lived in Abraham's Time, but long afore. And ſo their Cavil and Miſtake drew forth from Chriſt this great Truth; as Errors uſe to bring forth Truth; and he utters it with the greateſt Solemnity, and Aſſeveration, Verily, verily, (as being a Wonder to utter) yea, and ſpeaks not in ordinary Language, as that afore Abraham was [I was] but [I am] in a correſpondency to what God ſpeaks of himſelf, Before the Day was, I am, Iſa. 43. 13. We tranſlate it, I am he, but Word for Word it is I am: ſignifying thereby that permanent, uninterrupted Being of his, which is proper to God, as Pſal. 90. 2. Before the Mountains were brought forth, thou art. And Chriſt's Anſwer in this Place was oppoſite to their Demand; they ſpeak of real Exiſtence, and in the ſame Senſe and Reſpect doth Chriſt anſwer them.

Sixthly, We find him exiſting in the days of Noah, that Preacher of Righteouſneſs, 1 Pet. 3. 19. He ſays of Chriſt, that he was put to Death in the Fleſh, but quickned in the Spirit. He evidently diſtinguiſheth of two Natures, his Divine, and Human; even as Rom. 1. 3, 4. and elſewhere, (as I ſhall ſhew) and then declares, how by that Divine Nature which he terms Spirit, in which he was exiſtent in Noah's Times, he went and Preach'd to thoſe of the old World, whoſe Souls are now in Priſon in Hell. Thoſe Words [in Spirit] is not put to ſignify the Subject of Vivification; for ſuch neither his Soul nor God-head could be ſaid to be; for that is not quickned which was not dead: But for the Principal and Cauſe of his Vivification, which his Soul was not but his God-head was. And beſides, by his Spirit is not meant his Soul, for that then muſt be ſuppoſed to have preached to Souls in Hell (where theſe are affirmed to be). Now there is no Preaching where there is no Capacity of Faith: But his meaning is, that thoſe Perſons that lived in Noah's Time, and were preach'd unto, their Souls, or Spirits, were now, when this was written, Spirits in Priſon; that is, in Hell. And therefore he alſo adds this Word [ſometimes] who were ſometimes diſobedient in Noah's Days. Theſe Words give us to underſtand, that this Preaching was performed by Noah miniſterially; yet by Chriſt in Noah: who according to his Divine Perſon was extant, and went with him, as with Moſes, and the Church in the Wilderneſs, and preach'd unto them.

Seventhly, He was extant at the beginning of the World; In the beginning was the Word. In which Words, there being no Predicate or Attribute affirmed of this Word, the Sentence or Affirmation is terminated or ended meerly with his Exiſtance, He was, and he was then, In the beginning. He mentions not his Parents, or time of his Birth, but ſimply that He was: He mentions not any King's Raign, or ſuch Note of Worldly Time, but ſimply, In the beginning: And he ſays not that he was made in the Beginning, but that He [was] in the beginning: And it is in the Beginning abſolutely without any Limitation. And therefore Moſes's beginning, Gen. 1. 1. is meant, as alſo the Words after ſhew, All was made by him that was made; and verſ. 10. The World he came into was made by him. And as from the Beginning, is uſually taken from the firſt Times or Infancy of the World, Mat. 19. 4. And he anſwered and ſaid unto them, Have ye not read, that he which made them at the Beginning, made them Male and Female? So Mark 13.19. Chriſt expounds it the beginning of the Creation, which God created; For in thoſe Days ſhall be Affliction, ſuch as was not from the Beginning of the Creation which God created, unto this Time, neither ſhall be. So then, when God began to create, then was our Chriſt. And this here is ſet in Oppoſition (Joh. 1. 14.) unto the time of his being made Fleſh, leſt that ſhould have been thought his Beginning. And unto this accords that of Heb. 1. 10. where ſpeaking of Chriſt, out of Pſal. 102. Thou, Lord, in the beginning haſt laid the Foundations of the Earth; ſo as to be ſure he exiſted then. But further, in Pſal. 102. 24. it runs thus, Thy Years are throughout all Generations (we have run, you ſee, through all Generations, ſince the Creation, and have found his Years throughout them all.) And yet leſt that should be taken only of the Generations of this World, he adds, (as Rivet expounds it) Before thou laidst the Foundation of the Earth.

Eightly; So then we are come to this, That he hath been before the Creation; yea, from Everlasting. Which,

1. Is made forth, in that it is said, He was in the beginning, (meaning of the Creation) and therefore from Everlasting. The Consequence of which appears;

Both, 1. because there was but that one beginning of producing Things by God; and so what was then, must needs be before, yea, from Everlasting, as having had no beginning. The Angels were not afore that beginning mentioned by Moses. For 'tis said, Exod. 20. 11. God made Heaven and Earth, and all that in them is; whereof the Angels are part. And Mark 13. 19. 'tis termed, the beginning of the Creation which God created; and so of the Creation of any thing what-ever that God made. So then Christ must needs have had no beginning afore, as well as that he existed then.

And, 2. In Scripture phrase, in or from the Beginning, is used to express Eternity. Isa. 43. 13. From the Beginning, when the Day was, I am. So they read it; that is, from Eternity.

But, 3. if that will not carry it, you have it more express, Prov. 8. 22. The Lord possessed me afore his Works of Old; 'tis spoken of Christ. Now to be sure, by that phrase of being afore his Works, even God's Eternity is expressed thereby; Psal. 90. 2. Before the Mountains were brought forth, or ever thou hadst formed the Earth, and the World, even from Everlasting to Everlasting, thou art God.

But, Ninthly, If you would have his Eternity yet more express; see Heb. 7. 3. where, mentioning Melchisedeck, Christ's Type, he renders him to have been his Type in this,—without Father, without Mother, without descent, having neither Beginning of Days, nor End of Life: but made like unto the Son of God, abideth a Priest continually. Where his meaning is to declare, that look what Melchisedeck was Typicè, or Umbraliter, in a Shadow, that our Christ was really and substantially. It is the manner and custom of all Historians, yea, and of Moses, in that Sacred Story of his; if they bring in any Person more eminent, and as performing any more excellent Exploit, to relate his Parents, his descent, whom he came of, and what became of him. And this Moses had been careful and diligent to relate of all the Patriarchs, telling us whose Sons they were, rehearsing their Genealogy, how many Years they lived, and how then they died. Which is especially observable in that short Catalogue, Gen. 5. In the close it is added, of every one, and he died, when he relates little else. But this Melchisedeck was a Man greater in Dignity, in Office, than any of the Patriarchs, (for whom would your selves pitch on, as the greatest of all that Moses wrote of, but Abraham the Father of all the Faithful). Now (says the Apostle, vers. 4.) consider how great this Man was, unto whom even the Patriarch Abraham gave the tenth of the Spoils, yea (as vers. 5.) greater than all the Tribes; and so the whole Nation of the Jews, and People of God that followed. For whereas all the other Tribes paid Tithes to Levi; (says the Apostle here) Levi, and all the Tribes paid Tithes to him in Abraham's Loins. Yea, and Vers. 6. This Man blessed him, (namely Abraham) who had the Promises for himself and all his Seed. And without all contradiction, the lesser is blessed of the greater, vers. 7. Now when Moses had in his Story brought upon the Stage a Man thus heightned and sublimated, which would for ever set all curious Thoughts on longing to know who and what this Man was, what his Original was, what his End, who his Parents, &c. he causeth him, as it were, on a sudden, to vanish, contrary to his wont, concerning other Persons, as if he had been a Man drop'd out of the Clouds: telling (as we say) neither whence he came, nor whither he would go. Paul, that observ'd this, tells us plainly, that it was consultò, or on purpose done.

There was a Mystery in it, which was to signify the Eternity of Christ's Priesthood and Person; and whereas neither Melchisedeck, nor any Creature was or could exist from Everlasting, and so in the reality, could not have wherewith to shadow out Christ's Existence from Everlasting; therefore fore it is ſignified by ſilence, or omiſſion, there being nothing in the Story that hints his Original or Beginning; and ſo it was, as if he had had no beginning: And it being ſetly and on purpoſe done, it had intentionally this ſecret Myſtery in it. There was nothing in Chriſt, but ſome Type or other was ordained ſome way or other to ſhadow it. And when the Matter was ſuch as could not in the kind or reality be perſonated, it was done by that which might moſt nearly ſhadow it. As the Sacrifice of his Body was by the Burnt-Offerings of Beaſts; but for the Sacrifice of his reaſonable Soul under the Wrath of God, there was not any thing in the Sacrificing of a Beaſt, of like kind, which could ſhadow it out, yet God appointed that which was as near in reſemblance as might be; And that was the pouring forth of the Blood, in which was the Soul or Life, ſignifying the pouring forth of his Soul as an Offering for Sin, as Iſaiah ſpeaks, Iſa. 53. 10, 12. Now ſo here there being nothing in reſpect of any real Exiſtence from Eternity that any Man was capable of; therefore an Hiſtorical Eternity is given him, by way of Silence, concerning his Birth, &c. So as he was (as the Text there hath it) made like to the Son of God; that is, rendred in reſpect of what uſeth to be the Courſe and Manner of Story like to him in this reſpect. As in Law, Things that appear not, are in value as if they were not; ſo here. Now in that it is ſaid, He was made like to the Son of God; It imports him to have herein been the Shadow, the Picture of Chriſt, who is the Body and Subſtance. God having his Son, and all he was and ſhould be in his Eye, did all along the Old Teſtament draw his Picture in the Examples of all Eminencies in any Perſon that was extraordinary and tranſcendent; Chriſt being really the Abſtract of them all. Some pieces, or Limbs, one Patriarch affording, others another; and this of Eternity was Melchiſedeck's lot to hold forth, and that in the manner ſpecified. Now that he ſhadowed out the Eternity of Chriſt's Perſon and Prieſthood, for Time to come, all acknowledg, Socinus himſelf. Therefore alſo in the Eternity of his Perſon for Time paſt, for that is as well put in, without Beginning of Days, as without End of Life. And ſo theſe other Attributes, without Father, as a Man, without Mother as God. And who can tell his Generation? ſaith Iſaiah, Iſa. 53. 8. All which not only import, what he was in reſpect of his Prieſthood, but of his Perſon; for the things he takes for him, are ſuch as are common to all Men's Perſons, as they are Men. As when he ſays, he was without Father or Mother; Inſomuch that whereas Adam was without Father or Mother, yet we read of the beginning of his Days; it is recorded, and his end of Life; but not ſo of Melchiſedeck; and ſo repreſented in all things differing from all the Men that ever were or ſhall be. And further, If that had been his only Type, it had not been material to ſhew the Eternity of his Prieſthood, to ſay he was without Father: For if Moſes had ſet down his Father's Name, and withal had ſhewn that his Father was not a Prieſt, it had been all one as to that Point: So as theſe are ſpoken chiefly in reſpect of his Perſon, the Subject of this Prieſthood; yea, and if his Prieſthood were from Everlaſting, his Perſon muſt exiſt from Everlaſting; for theſe two are joined, Heb. 5. 6. Thou art my Son, this Day have I begotten thee; and thou art a Prieſt for ever after the Order of Melchiſedeck. If therefore it ſignifies the Everlaſtingneſs of the Prieſthood, à parte antè, or from Time paſt, that that hath been for ever, (and it muſt ſo ſignify, if that other oppoſite, without end of Days, ſignifies the Eternity of his Prieſthood for Time to come) then withal it muſt import the Eternity of his Perſon, and himſelf to have been without beginning of Days.

Non entia & nonpaparentia æquiparantur in Jure.

Laſtly, add to this, that in Mich. 5. 2. But thou Bethlehem Ephratah, though thou be little among the Thouſands of Judah, yet out of thee ſhall He come forth unto me, that is to be Ruler in Iſrael: whoſe goings forth have been from of Old, from Everlaſting. Where he evidently ſpeaks of two Births Chriſt had, under the Metaphor of going forth; one as Man at Bethlehem in the fulneſs of Time, the other as Son of God from Everlaſting. Which latter is added on purpoſe, upon occaſion of the propheſy of that other, to prevent that thought, that he had not exiſted afore he was Born or Conceived at Bethlehem; and his Birth is expreſſed by that Phraſe, of going or coming forth, in both reſpects. His Birth, as Man, Mat. 2. 6. is so expressed, Out of thee shall come forth; which, vers. 4. is interpreted to be born.

And, 2. As Son of God, his goings forth (that is, his Birth) are from Everlasting. And it is termed goings forth, in the plural; because it is Actus continuus, and hath been every moment continued from Everlasting. As the Sun begets Light and Beams every moment; so God doth his Son.

So then we have two Everlastings attributed to Christ's Person; One to come, Heb. 1. 10. and another past, here in Mich. 5. 2. And so as of God himself it is said, Psal. 90. 2. From Everlasting to Everlasting thou art God; so also of Christ.

And to confirm this Existence of his yet more; If you ask where he was all that while? John resolves you, together with this his Assertion, that he was; and tells you with whom he was. At the Creation, or in the Beginning, he was with God; when none but God and he were alone, and no Creature with them; In the Bosom of the Father, John 1. 18. And in Prov. 8. 30. Then I was by him as one brought up with him. And accordingly, John 17. 8. Christ says, I came forth from thee, speaking to his Father: and vers. 18. Thou didst send me into the World: and John 16. 28. I am come forth from the Father, and am come into the World.

Now ask the Manifestarians; that is, those that say, Christ, as Christ, is only a Manifestation of God. How was it when it is said, that he was with God in the beginning of the Creation, when there was no Creature? when, according to them, his sole Being (as Christ) is barely a Manifestation: I ask them, to whom he was then a Manifestation? Not to God: for, according to them, he is the Manifestation of God in us; and to him, he needed not be the Manifestation of himself in their sense, but to us only: Now then we were not, nor any Creature to whom he should be manifested.

Use 1. Let Believers comfort themselves with this Existence of their Head and Redeemer Christ, 1 John 2.14. he reckons it up a priviledg to raise up their Hearts withal: Ye have known him that is from the beginning; namely, Christ, of whom, 1 John 1. 1, 2. he says, That which was from the beginning, which we have heard, which we have seen with our Eyes, which we have looked upon, and our hands have handled of the Word of Life, (for the Life was manifested, and we have seen it, and bear Witness, and shew unto you that Eternal Life which was with the Father, and was manifested unto us). This was the great Priviledg John and the Apostles boasted of; as it follows vers. 3. That which we have seen and heard, declare we unto you, that ye also may have fellowship with us. When therefore he saith, We have known him that is from the beginning; it carries a great Privilege, and Confirmation, and Establishment of them in their Faith; and also an Exhortation with it.

1. A Confirmation of them in their Faith, and to see and rejoice in their Privilege; and is, as if he had said, there cannot be any Christ proposed to them, that is more ancient; and therefore he is the best, the sole or only Christ. As the Gospel coming after, could not make void the Law: So no Manifestation can put down, or excel that which is made of God himself in Christ, for it is he that was from the beginning.

And, 2. it hath an Exhortation in it: That therefore they should always, and to the end, that is, for ever, cleave to him. It is he that was from the beginning. There can be no other Jesus; The same to Day, Yesterday, and for ever, as Heb. 13.

Use 2. Embrace him as thy chiefest Treasure; for he is Being and Existence it self; The World passeth away, and the Glory of it: But the Word of God endures for ever. If the Truth of this written Word, then much more this substantial Word, the Person of Christ, in whom all other Truths are, Yea and Amen. He is, I say, Existence it self, By whom all Things consist, Col. 1. 17. and exist, Heb. 1. 13. And in the Text, Through whom are all Things, and we by him. And it is Faith in us, that gives a Subſiſtence to him in our Souls, we thereby cloſe with him, Prov. 8. 21. Wiſdom, that is, Chriſt, exhorting us to embrace him, holds forth this Promiſe, I cauſe thoſe that love me, to inherit Subſtance. All other things are ſhadows. And how doth he confirm this to them, that he is able to give them Subſtance? but by this, that he exiſted before this World was; Which is the Subject of his Diſcourſe for ten whole Verſes together next following, beginning thus, v. 22. The Lord poſſeſſed me in the beginning of his Way, before his Works of Old: I was ſet up from Everlaſting, e're ever the Earth was, &c. Then only I was; but God himſelf accounted me as a Treaſure to himſelf: The Lord poſſeſſed me, verſ. 22. And therefore I may well be yours: If God eſteemed me ſuch to himſelf, you may well do ſo to your ſelves. When the Apoſtle ſays, He that was Rich, for our ſakes became Poor, 2 Cor. 8. 9. it implies him to have been infinitely Rich afore he came into the World, where it was he was made Poor, and from his Birth born to nothing. And to conclude, As he only is Exiſtence, ſo that Being you have in him is alone true Being. Of him ye are in Chriſt Jeſus.

Uſe 3. You ſee how it came to paſs, that we who exiſted not afore the World, had yet then the Promiſe given, 1 Tim. 2. Grace given us in Chriſt afore the World, 1 Tim. 1. 9. And choſen in him afore the World was, Eph. 1. 4. Even becauſe that Chriſt was a Perſon who then exiſted; and took all the Deeds of Gift ordained us from God for us. Iſa. 6. 9. He is ſtiled, The Everlaſting Father; which he had not been if he had not exiſted: For of all elſe, to be a Father, implies Exiſtence at the Time when he is ſaid to be a Father. For it notes Antiquity and Priority; as Adam is ſaid to be a Father in Time, ſo Chriſt from Everlaſting. And as Adam muſt be ſuppoſed to exiſt, when he was a Father, ſo muſt Chriſt be ſuppoſed alſo: And therefore if an Everlaſting Father, then he exiſted in that Everlaſting.

CHAP. II.

Who this Person was that Existed from Eternity. The two Titles which are given to him, as Existing before the World was. 1. That he is the Word. 2. The Son of God. His first Title, the Word, imports two Things; His being Eternally begotten of the Father, as the Image of his Essential Glory: And that he is given to us by God as his Word, whereby he manifests himself.

YOu have seen that Christ was a Person who existed throughout all Generations, and from Everlasting, before he took Flesh. The next Enquiry is, who he was that had always so existed; thus, as yet, I, proceeding by degrees, do limit it: for, as concerning what he is upon the assuming Human Nature, that is to follow afterward.

There are two eminent Titles given to Christ, Existing before the World, and both of them in the first Chapter of John, ὁ λόγος, the Word, Joh. 1. 1. In the beginning was the Word, &c. 2. The Son of God, vers. 14. Of whom as such John Baptist thrice affirmeth he was afore him, vers. 15, 18, 30, 34. And parallel to this in the Book of Proverbs he is stiled; 1. Wisdom, Prov. 8. from vers. 22. to 33. Then, 2. The Son of God. What is his Name, and his Sons Name, canst thou tell? Prov. 30. 4. I will not here much dispute as concerning the first, whether that Title of λόγος, the Word, be the Title of his Person simply considered in himself; or whether withal in respect unto his being ordained the Manifestation and Revelation of God to us: yet something must be said. There are two Opinions about it.

First, Some say, it imports the Divine Substance of his Person, simply considered; and so meerly notes out that Relation he hath to his Father, as begotten of him: In respect of which he should be termed the Word. That look, what the inward Thought, Conceptus, Conceit or Apprehension of the Mind, is to the Mind, being the first-born thereof; and remains within the Mind it self, and is the Image of the Mind to it self, though never uttered to any other: Such, say they, and in such a respect, is the Person of Christ termed the Word, unto God his Father. Now it is clear, that both in the Jewish and Greek Language, that which we in English call Word, and which we apply only unto Speech, doth with them betoken the inward Thought of the Mind. Aristotle distinguisheth between λόγος ἔξω and λόγος ἔνθω, the External of the Mouth, and the Internal of the Mind. Thus also, Job 32. 18. I am full of Matter; so we translate it. And he speaks of his Mind or Spirit; so it follows, My Spirit within me is full of Matter. Now in the Hebrew 'tis, full of Words. Thus, Dixit in Corde, The Fool hath said in his Heart, is put to express the inward Thoughts of bad Men, Psal. 14. 1. As also, of good Men, Psal. 36. 1. For Words spoken, are but Thoughts appearing. So that according to this, the whole Object of God's inward Thoughts and Wisdom is here termed the Word, which comprehensively is Christ. And this Notion or Ground, why he is termed λόγος, the Fathers and Schoolmen have more generally and greedily entertained, as that which was most lively and really expressive of the Eternal Generation of the Person of the Son of God. That as the Mind, when it would understand it self, begets within it self an Idea or Likeness of it self, in which it views and understands it self; Like as the Eye, when it would ſee and view a thing without it ſelf, takes in an Image of the thing: So the Mind doth, when it knows it ſelf or any other thing. And that thus God in the knowing of himſelf, doth beget within himſelf the Image of himſelf, as Heb. 1. 2. Chriſt is alſo called. And it is obſervable, that his Eternal Generation, as the Son, ſhould be expreſſed by the ſame Phraſe (and ſo they ſhould ſo fitly agree) that the Production of the Thoughts, or Image in the Mind is expreſſed by. The Phraſe uſed to expreſs the Generation of him as God's Son, is, that he came forth from the Father, Joh. 8. 42. Joh. 16. 28. Joh. 17. 8. And the ſame Word is uſed, to expreſs the begetting of the Thoughts and Purpoſes, by the Mind, and in the Mind, Matth. 15. 18.

Zanchy, Profeſſores Leidenſes, and others.

But this import of it, many of our Reformed Divines have been and are ſhy of, as too curious. And yet, as I have obſerved, the ſame Authors are in other following Paſſages glad to make uſe of the Similitude thereof again and again, to expreſs the Generation of the Son of God thereby, as moſt appoſite and ſubſervient thereunto: And ſo might have been glad that the Scriptures ſpeak ſo near thereto.

There have been two things among many others, that have made them ſhy to own this, as the Scriptures intention in this Phraſe.

1. That the Conceptus, or Images in the Mind, are Accidents, and leſs than the Mind it ſelf, as alſo vaniſhing and tranſient, and not of the ſame Subſtance with it, and equal to it; which is dangerous to hold forth of Chriſt.

But that is eaſily anſwered. 1. That a full Similitude, from things Earthly holding in all things like, could not be found of this Myſtery. And, 2. Themſelves ſay of the Perſons in the Divine Nature, that they being but various Modes or Manner of Subſiſtings of that one Divine Nature, the God-head; That though thoſe ſeveral Modes in a Creature would be but Accidents, yet in the God-head they are Perſons: So why not in the Caſe in Hand? That Image which in the Mind of Man is but an Accident, this in God, and of God himſelf, is a Perſon equal to God: Eſpecially, ſeeing otherwiſe he ſhould not know himſelf perfectly as he is in himſelf.

The ſecond is, That to ſay Chriſt is the Word of the Father, as the Thoughts, or Reaſon, or Counſel is the Word of the Mind, vergeth and inclines too much unto the Notion of Plato, and other Heathen Philoſophers; who acknowledging God the Maker of this World, conceived of this Word of God in God, to no other thing in God, than the Idea or Plat-form of all that which God meant to make. And ſo, as an Artificer having the Model of a Ship or Frame of Building in his Head, that Model, or Frame, or Pattern of what he means to make is one Thing, and his own Being or Nature as a Man is another; and indeed, thus did theſe wiſe Folks, philoſophiſing of God's making the World, diſtinguiſh between God, and this Word in God thus; that by God they conceived one Perſon only, that enjoyed that Divine Nature to himſelf: Only he having all the Creation in him, the Pattern of all theſe, or Idea of them, according unto which he made them; they termed this the Word, or λόγος, in God's Mind, ſo making the whole of the Being or Subſiſtence of that Word in God, to be wholly diſtinct from the Nature of God as God; and to be only that in God which was the Original and Sampler of his Creation; and ſo to be but the Head of the Creation: that is, the Top and Chief and Original of it, and a meer Reſpect thereto. This was Plato's λόγος, or Word; and I fear is all that others, bringing but up old Philoſophy for new Divinity, do intend, by that which they ſo uſually cry up, and term the Eternal Word.

But that the Philoſophers meant by the Notion of λόγος, or the Word, no more but the Model of the Creation, needed not have deterred Chriſtians from the owning of this Phraſe [the Word] to intend the Image of what was, and is, in God, and that as a diſtinct Perſon that had the true Nature of the God-head, and as that which was not in God meerly, or only the Pattern of his Creation.

1. If indeed the whole of the Image of God's Mind, or Object of God's Thoughts and Knowledg, had been but the Image of the Creatures, in which God only foreſaw what he would or could create: then indeed, John's ὁ λόγος, or the Word, had been, nor could have been no other than this Sampler of God's Creation; but the chief Object of God's Knowledg is himſelf in the firſt Place, and thereby it is he knows all things elſe he can produce, and that at ſecond hand, by first knowing of himself. And indeed, if the Idea or Sampler of his Creation alone, were all the Image or Object of his Knowledg he had in himself, of himself; then he should only have but an imperfect Knowledg of himself, and such as we have at the lowest of him. For to know God but in the Creatures, is but that which was in Adam by the Law of Creation: and we profess to look for an higher, to see God Face to Face, and in himself; which is our Perfection. And therefore, surely God's Perfection, is to see himself in himself much more. Neither indeed can God know himself perfectly, but by such an Image of himself, as is as perfect as himself. We Creatures indeed know nothing perfectly, because our Understandings penetrate not into the Things themselves, and so we know them only by such Images as fall short of the Substance of the Things themselves: But God's Knowledg is perfect, especially that which he hath of himself must be equal to himself. So then, if the import of this Phrase the Word, relates at all unto God's inward Thoughts or Apprehensions, and the Object of them; it must more especially carry in it Christ, his being the immediate Image of God himself.

by

3. 'Tis certain, that Christ himself (who himself knew best what himself was) doth speak of himself, as of a Person unto whom his Father doth shew, or make known the Pattern and Model of all his Works he means to do: and therefore, the Substance or Being of his Person consisteth not in his being the Idea or Model of the Creation, that is in God's Mind; but he is the Person to whom God makes known those Platforms of all. Thus, Joh. 5. 19, 20. Then answered Jesus, and said unto them, Verily, verily I say unto you, The Son can do nothing of himself, but what he seeth the Father do: for what things soever he doth, these also doth the Son likewise. For the Father loveth the Son, and sheweth him all things that himself doth: and he will shew him greater Works than these, that ye may marvel.

1. These Words suppose the Idea of what he means to work, to be in common between the Father and the Son, and in the Father first; as in him the Being or Essence of God is first, and so communicated or shewn unto the Son (as indeed all the Platform or Form of God's Works is common to all three Persons in that they are alike God.) And therefore it were absurd to say, That the Son himself is nothing else but that Platform it self of what God means to work.

2. These Words suppose a Person whom God loves, and a Person of Understanding and Knowledg, such as to whom the Idea of all God means to effect is shewn. Now as it were absurd for a Carpenter to say to that Form in his Mind, I will shew thee all I am about to do: So here there would be the same absurdity.

And, 3. In vers. 17. Christ says he is one that works, and hath a powerful Hand to effect all that is done as well as the Father: And therefore, is himself a Person distinct from this Idea of all Things, and not the bare Image of them. And lest it should be understood of him as Son of Man only, he puts in that Word hitherto. My Father works [hitherto] and I work. That Word takes in all God hath ever done since the Creation. For that hitherto must relate to some time afore, either Eternity, or a Beginning: and we know that that beginning of God's working, was the beginning of the Creation; and (from that time hitherto saith Christ) I work. And be it what it will that the Father hath done at any time, the Son hath done the same. For vers. 19. Whatever things the Father doth, these also doth the Son likewise.

4. These two Expressions. 1. That he is one begotten of the Father, elsewhere used: And, 2. This here, That he is one to whom the Father sheweth all he doth; do imply two differing things, even as for a Father first to beget his Son, his substantial Image, and then to teach and instruct him in his Trade, and shew him what he is to do.

Yet I may add this, That God the Father communicating the Form of all things to his Son, so vieweth his own Thoughts and Purposes thereabout, as they shine forth in his Son: as a Man doth his own Thoughts in his Friends Mind or Judgment. Hence Christ the Word, may in a more eminent manner be stiled the Idea of all Things, in comparison with the other Persons: Yet so as this is, because he is the Image of God himſelf: And ſo, becauſe he of all Perſons in the Trinity bears the Title or Character of being the Image of God. Hence he doth in like manner, together with the Image of God's Being, bear the Platform of all things elſe that are in God; as in whoſe Breaſt God the Father views over his own Thoughts and Deſigns, and in whom they are preſented to him.

Laſtly, Whereas it may be ſaid, That the Philoſophers having uſed that Phraſe afore John, in this or the like Senſe: That therefore John taking up out of choice the ſame Title, and giving it to Chriſt, that therefore he ſhould uſe it in their Senſe and Intention. Anſwer is,

1. That John originally uſed this Word from the Old Teſtament it ſelf. For the Jews expreſſed their Meſſiah, or Chriſt to come, under this Notion, the Word, and the Word of God, as appears by the Caldee Paraphraſts (who are at leaſt as ancient as Chriſt) often, when God the Son is mentioned and ſpoken of, they tranſlate it [the Word]. So Hoſ. 1. 7. I will ſave thee by the Lord their God, they render it, I will redeem them by the Word of the Lord their God. So Pſal. 110. 1. [The Lord ſaid to my Lord] the Paraphraſts expound it, The Lord ſaid to the Word. And ſo, Iſa. 45. 17. Iſrael ſhall be ſaved in the Lord with an everlaſting Salvation; they read it, by the Word of the Lord, namely Chriſt. And this Phraſe not the Jews only, but the Scriptures themſelves do uſe, as 2 Sam. 7. 21. For thy Word's Sake, ſays David, that is, for thy Chriſt's Sake. For 1 Chron. 17. 19. it is rendred, For thy Servant's Sake: And is all one with that Dan. 9. For the Lord's Sake. 'Philo (a Jew never turned Chriſtian, and not long after Chriſt's Time) in his Writings, calls him ὁ λόγος, as before did Plato, and thoſe Heathens, who ſtole their Knowledg from the Jews, and vended it as their own.

Yet, 2. That the occaſion why John, when he wrote his Goſpel, uſed that Title of the Word, which no other Evangeliſt did, was that which was mentioned; namely, that the Gnoſticks of thoſe Times he wrote in, profeſſing Chriſtianity, formed up ſuch a Chriſt, according to what the Heathen Philoſophers had ſet him forth by: He therefore gives him the ſame Title (the Old Teſtament having given it him) but in full and direct oppoſition to them, and what they ſaid of him, he at firſt daſh affirms, both that his λόγος, or Chriſt, was God, and alſo equal with God; and a Perſon diſtinct from God, in thoſe other Words, He was with God: The contrary to which was their Doctrine of him.

The ſecond Opinion, why Chriſt ſhould be termed λόγος, the Word, is, That it imports what God had afore all Worlds ordained Chriſt to be, and Chriſt himſelf undertook to be even his Word, whereby to utter or manifeſt himſelf to us. 'And indeed, although the Perſon whom John calls λόγος, did actually then exiſt; yet it cannot be denied but that this Title of λόγος, the Word, doth withal connotate or import what Chriſt undertook to be, and God deſigned him to be; namely, the Revelation of God unto us. Which is made forth, 1. Becauſe the inward Thoughts themſelves are uſually termed the Word but in relation to their being uttered: And therefore, in ſuch a Reſpect, may alſo this be ſuppoſed given to him, ſeeing he is the Manifeſter of God unto us, Et Interpres Voluntatis Divinæ, The Interpreter of God's Mind unto us, Heb. 1. 1. And, 2. In that Chriſt is ſaid to be the Wiſdom of God, namely Manifeſtative, and as he is made Wiſdom unto us; by whom we know God in the form of Jeſus Chriſt. Thus, 1 Cor. 1. 24. 'But unto them which are called, both Jews and Greeks, Chriſt, the Power of God, and the Wiſdom of God; compared with verſ. 30. 'But of him are ye in Chriſt Jeſus, who of God is made unto us Wiſdom, and Righteouſneſs, and Sanctification, and Redemption. And in this Senſe it is that Solomon calls him Wiſdom, which is all one with this of John, λόγος, the Word, which the Engliſh or Latine reach not. And it were eaſy to Parallel John here, and Solomon there, in Prov. 8. which I have elſewhere done.

So

Chap. 2.

So then, Christ as he is the Power of God in the Creation; God said, and it was created, Gen. 1. And as he is the Power and the Wisdom of God to us in Redemption, in whom and by whom we know God, in this respect it is, he is termed the Word: and so although John and Solomon affirm the Person that was thus ordained to be thus to us, was then existing, yet the Title given him, imports what he was to be when the World began, and after the World began, unto the World and to the Saints. And thus John himself. in his first Epistle, Chap. 1. vers. 1,2. explains himself, That which was from the Beginning, says he, and which our (the Apostles) Hands have handled of the Word of Life, namely Christ. This Life was manifested, and we shew to you that Eternal Life, which was with the Father, and was manifested to us.

So then Christ the Word, in order to manifestation to us, is termed the Word of Life. And as he is termed the Word in both these respects mentioned: So also, that other Title John gives him of Eternal Life, is in like manner given in respect unto what he was ordained from the Beginning, to be to us, 1 Joh. 5. 11. And this is the Record, that God hath given unto us Eternal Life: and this Life is in his Son. As well as what he is in his Person, even the Fountain of, or Life it self, in himself. So vers. 20. of that Chapter, he speaks of him, This is the true God, and Eternal Life.

To conclude this, When God exhibited him first unto the World by a Voice from Heaven, This is my beloved Son, he adds, hear him. And it is as if he had said, As he is my Son, so he is my Word and Interpreter, unto you, the Speaker from Heaven; as Heb. 12. 25. he is call'd. And see these two Titles of his Son, and of The Word, met in that one Proclamation made of him by his Father.

Which of these two accounts given, why he is termed λόγος, or the Word, is most to be received, I will not dispute; because indeed I take in both. In doing which there is no more inconveniency to be found, than in interpreting other Stiles and Attributes of his in a double Sense, and taking in both; As in that of being stiled, The Image of the Invisible God, Col. 1. Which Pareus and other Divines (whom he to that purpose cites) in his Opuscula, upon Col. 1. 15.

I now come to that other Title more frequent in the Scriptures.

CHAP.

CHAP. III.

That he was the Son of God, who existed throughout all Ages, and from Eternity. This prov'd by all those Instances of Scriptures, wherein his Eternal Existence is asserted, and wherein the title of Son of God is also ascribed to Him.

THis most eminent Title of Son of God, doth simply express, What and who the Second Person is in himself, and in relation to his Father, and so singly speaks the substance of his Person. And it is certain, was that more general and renowned Title the first Primitive Times knew him by. Under which Christ himself, and all the Apostles unanimously represented him unto the Church, which all Believers then professed to believe in, and concerning which that Promise is made and uttered unto all the Saints in succeeding Ages; Ephes. 4. 13. That all should come to the Unity of the Faith, and knowledg of the Son of God. The other of λόγος, the Word was (if used by any other Apostle than John, yet but covertly) by John sparingly mentioned after all the Apostles were dead, and but thrice by him; And though it was a known Title to Heathens and Jews, yet received but upon occasion of Heresies, which took the advantage of the use of that Title among Philosophers, to deform the Person of our Jesus.

And further, he was acknowledged and declared to be that Son of God by all sorts of Witnesses, either in Heaven, or Earth, or Hell.

1. By those Witnesses in Heaven.

1. The Father, Mat. 3. 17. And lo, a Voice from Heaven, saying, This is my Beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased; and Chap. 17. 5.

2. The Son himself in every Chapter of John, and Luke 10. 22.

3. By the Holy Ghost, who (besides that his Testimony is included in all the Scriptures that speak him the Son of God, because he wrote them all) personally appears in the likeness of a Dove, to join with the Father's Witness of him. This is my Beloved Son, Mat. 3. 16, 17. And lo, the Heavens were opened unto him, and he saw the Spirit of God descending like a Dove, and lighting upon him. And lo, a Voice from Heaven, saying, This is my Beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased. And so the Baptist doth interpret that signal place, John 1. 32, 33, 34. And John bare Record, saying, I saw the Spirit descending from Heaven, like a Dove, and it abode upon him. And I knew him not: but he that sent me to baptize with Water, the same said unto me, Upon whom thou shalt see the Spirit descending, and remaining on him, the same is he which baptizeth with the Holy Ghost. And I saw, and bare Record, that this is the Son of God.

4. The same was witnessed by the Angels.

1. The Good, Luke 1. 35. And the Angel answered and said unto her, The Holy Ghost shall come upon thee, and the Power of the Highest shall overshadow thee. Therefore also that Holy Thing which shall be born of thee, shall be called the Son of God.

2. The Bad, Mat. 4. 3, 6. and Chap. 8. 29. And behold they cried out, saying, What have we to do with thee, Jesus thou Son of God? Art thou come hither to torment us before the Time? Mark 3. 11. and Chap. 5. 7. Luke 4. 3. and Chap 4. 31.

On Earth. 1. Wicked Men, as the Centurion, Mat. 27. 54. Of a truth, this was the Son of God.

2. The

2. The Apostles all jointly by Peter, John 6. 69. And we believed, and are sure, that thou art that Christ, the Son of the Living God.

Lastly, The whole Church, Ephes. 4. 13. So that we may boldly assert;

Assertion 2. That our Christ, for the Substance of his Person, is the Son of God; so stiled, not in respect only of God's taking Man's Nature, but as existing as such afore he took Man's Nature. And this is one of the great Foundations of the Gospel, and universally acknowledged by Believers in the first Times. This general Assertion will require many Particulars to explain it.

1. That he that thus existed, (as hath been proved) through all Ages, and from Eternity, was this Son of God, and so stiled afore ever he assumed Man's Nature.

2. How and in what manner this Title is given to him.

For the First;

That he that thus existed through all Ages, was the Son of God, and so stiled afore ever he assumed Man's Nature.

For the Evidence of this, I shall run the same Race I did in the former Assertion; when I proved his Existence, I went through all Ages, even up to Everlasting. And so I shall do in this, step by step, demonstrating, that it was the Son of God, that as such is said in all Ages to have existed.

1. He of whom John the Baptist affirmed, that he existed afore him, (as was shewn) his Person by him is stiled, The only Begotten Son of God; John 1. 15, 18. John bare Witness of him, and cried, saying, This was he of whom I spake, He that cometh after me, is preferred before me, for he was before me. No Man hath seen God at any time, the only begotten Son, which is in the Bosom of the Father, he hath declared him. Compared with vers. 30, 34. This is he of whom I said, After me cometh a Man, which is preferred before me; for he was before me. And I saw, and bare record, that this is the Son of God.

2. He, as the Son, was over the Church, as his own House, in Moses's Time. To him, as the Son, was Moses a Servant in his House; so then he must exist as the Son. Thus you read expressly, Heb. 3. 5, 6. Moses verily was faithful in all his House as a Servant, but Christ as a Son over his own House, even then. Even he that then said, in Numb. 12. 7. Moses is faithful in all my House; he was this Son, says Paul, and therefore existed as such, for it was he spake those words in Numb. 12. 7.

3. Again, 'twas proved in the first Assertion, That our Christ was a Person that existed at the Creation. Now he that then existed, and so afore Man's Nature was made, and four thousand Years afore this Man was made, is then called the Son. Of him, as the Son, it is said, Heb. 1. 1. His Son, by whom he made the Worlds.

4. It was shewn, that he was a Person existing, throughout all Generations from the Creation. And this was the Son: Joh. 5. 17. My Father worketh hitherto, and I work; that is, Hitherto my Father hath wrought from the Creation, both on Sabbath-Days and every other Day. It was spoken to justify the Healing on the Sabbath. And it was not his own working only virtually or instrumentally, For his word is ὁμοίως, in like manner, vers. 19. And he that then is said to work, must be acknowledged in the highest manner to exist: And it is the Son that did this, vers. 19. Then answered Jesus, and said unto them, Verily, verily I say unto you, The Son can do nothing of himself, but what he seeth the Father do: For what things soever he doth, these also doth the Son likewise. And as in the words, vers. 17. it is manifest, My Father works, and I that am his Son.

5. He who was without beginning of Days, and end of Life, of whom Melchisedeck was the Type and Shadow, (as was shewn out of Heb. 7. 3.) he is expressly termed the Son of God in that place. For thus the words concerning Melchisedeck run; Having neither beginning of Days, nor end of Life, but was made like unto the Son of God. Who therefore as Son of God, hath this in a real and substantial manner true of him. And therefore the Son is not only, in respect of this Man Jesus his being united unto God. But,

6. In Rom. 1. vers. 2, 3, 4. Paul says, That the Gospel was promised by God before by the Prophets concerning his Son, whose Person he thus describes,

BOOK II. Who was made of the Seed of Abraham according to the Fleſh, or Humane Nature, and declared to be the Son of God according to the Spirit of Holineſs, or a Divine Nature, (as ſhall after be ſhewn). Now that Spirit, or Divine Nature, in which, as Son of God, he exiſted, and was now declared, is called the Eternal Spirit, Heb. 9. 14. by whom alſo he offered up himſelf, as there.

7. Seeing this place hath mentioned how the Prophets ſpeak of him as God's Son; Let us ſee how they ſpake thus afore of him as the Son; whereby will be decided, whether or no they ſtiled him not ſuch, over and above the conſideration of that Humane Nature; in regard to which only, ſay ſome, it and its being united to God, and God manifeſted therein, it is, ſay they, that he is called the Son of God. And not as a diſtinct Perſon from the Father, who in himſelf is the Son of God, and who took the Humane Nature into the ſame Sonſhip of his Perſon which he had without it.

1. Pſal. 2. 7. Thou art my Son, this Day have I begotten thee. God's (Hodie or) to Day, is the ſtile of Eternity. Verbs and Adverbs of the preſent Time, do beſt expreſs Eternity. Before Abraham was, I am, John 8. 58. And I AM hath ſent thee, Exod. 3. 14. So, to Day have I begotten thee. To Day, with God, is no to Morrow, nor Yeſterday. As God was always God, ſo always a Father; and ſo he is a Son always unto God. Neither had he been God's Son by Generation, by begetting, if only he had been his Son, as Man, by Union. So he had been the Son of the Holy Ghoſt, and he his Father, rather than God, (whom the Scriptures only term his Father) becauſe this Man was by the Holy Ghoſt conceived, formed, and united unto God. And the Spirit was not the Cauſe of his being a Son; for this very Spirit, is termed the Spirit of this Son, Rom. 8. 9. But ye are not in the Fleſh, but in the Spirit, if ſo be that the Spirit of God dwell in you. Now if any Man have not the Spirit of Chriſt, he is none of his. Gal. 4. 6. And becauſe ye are Sons, God hath ſent forth the Spirit of his Son into your Hearts, crying, Abba, Father. And ſent by him, John 16. 15. All Things that the Father hath, are mine; therefore ſaid I, that he ſhall take of mine, and ſhall ſhew it unto you. And although this Scripture of Pſal. 2. is applied to the Reſurrection of Chriſt, Acts 13. 32, 33. yet 'tis evident, by Paul's quotation of it, Heb. 1. 5. and his denying, unto all the Angels, that ſo tranſcendent a Generation intended in that ſecond Pſalm by the Pſalmiſt.

Neither by the Reſurrection was he firſt made the Son of God, (as Man) for he is termed ſo all along in the Evangeliſts before: But it was then declared, as Paul's Phraſe is, Rom. 1. 3. Declared the Son of God with Power, by the Reſurrection from the Dead. For thereby it was ſhewn, that he had Life in himſelf, and was that Eternal Life that had been from the beginning, 1 John 1. 1. Whom therefore it was impoſſible Death ſhould hold, Acts 4. 24. And unto this ſenſe it is, that thoſe words of the Pſalmiſt are applied by Peter to the Reſurrection, Acts 13. 32, 33. God by Chriſt's being raiſed up, had confirmed the Truth of that Promiſe made, to give his Son for us, whom he had from Eternity begotten, and did by his Reſurrection declare him to be ſuch. We declare unto you glad Tidings, how that the Promiſe which was made unto the Fathers, God hath fulfilled the ſame unto us their Children, in that he hath raiſed up Jeſus again. As it is alſo written in the ſecond Pſalm, Thou art my Son, this Day have I begotten thee. Thus, or thereby proving him to be the Son of God, whom God had from Everlaſting begotten; who was promiſed to be given to us. Yea, his Incarnation and Conception, as Man, (which was the firſt Foundation of his being Man) was but the beginning of the Manifeſtation of the Son of God, John 1. 14. The Word was made Fleſh, and dwelt among us, and we beheld his Glory, as of the only begotten of the Father. And therefore this was not the conſtituting him a Son. So likewiſe it is termed, 1 Tim. 3. 16. God was manifeſt in the Fleſh. Likewiſe 1 John 3. 8. The Son of God was manifeſted. Now Manifeſtation is of what was extant afore; but Production is the bringing forth of a Thing, from a Not-being to a Being.

2. Agur ſpeaks of a Perſon diſtinct from God, then exiſting, whom he calls God's Son; Prov. 30. 4. What is his Name, and what is his Son's Name, if thou canſt tell? He demands of the one, as well as of the other, known to the Jews; whoſe Name or Being was ineffable.

3. Iſaiah,

3. Isaiah, in Chap. 9. 6. To us a Child is born, a Son is given, which is applied to Christ, Matth. 4. 15. A Child, That Title only is given to one that is of Mankind, and in that respect he is said to be born. But that Title of a Son is in a further relation given him. For else that first Title of Child had been enough. And in that he adds thereto, as a further thing, and distinct from Child; that is, A Son is given; This argues his existence as a Son afore, for that is given which first is. And then, the Angel coming to Mary, a Virgin, points her to the Prophecy of Isaiah; Behold, thou (a Virgin) shalt conceive in thy Womb, and bring forth a Son; which you have *Isa.*7.14. Behold a Virgin, &c. Now Isaiah had propheſied two things: Chap. 3.

1. That a Virgin ſhould bring forth, Isa. 7. 14. Therefore the Lord himself ſhall give you a Sign: Behold, a Virgin ſhall conceive and bear a Son, and ſhall call his Name Immanuel.

2. That he that was ſo brought forth, ſhould be the Son of God, Isa. 9. 6. For unto us a Child is Born, unto us a Son is given, and the Government ſhall be upon his Shoulder: And his Name ſhall be called, Wonderful, Counſeller, the Mighty God, the Everlaſting Father, the Prince of Peace.

1. Mary doubts of the firſt; and the Angel reſolves her in that, in the firſt part of his Speech, verſ. 35. Then the Angel anſwered and ſaid, The Holy Ghoſt ſhall come upon thee.

And then, 2. from this wonderful Conception of hers, the Angel doth infer, That he that ſhould be thus conceived and brought forth by a Virgin, ſhould undoubtedly be the Son of God, which the ſame Iſaiah had ſpoken of in his 9*th* Chapter, To us a Son is given. And ſo it follows in the latter part of the Verſe, in Luke, Therefore alſo that Holy Thing which ſhall be born of thee, ſhall be called the Son of God. This Particle Therefore, refers not to his Conception as a Cauſe of this Effect, as if that therefore, becauſe conceived of by the Holy Ghoſt, he ſhould be thereby conſtituted the Son of God. But it is an Inference or Demonſtration, that therefore ſhe might be aſſured he was that Son of God that Iſaiah had ſpoken of, that ſhould be ſo born of her. Yea, and that Child ſhould be called, the Son of God; that is, owned, reckoned, and acknowledged, to be the Son of God by perſonal Union with him, as he is and hath been by the believing World to this day; and called, that is, really made the Son of God by that Union. Or, it was he that was to be declared the Son of God, who was afore Deus abſconditus, God that was hidden, as Iſa. 45. 15. And ſo Matthew alſo interprets the Prophecy, Mat. 1. 22, 23. Now all this was done, that it might be fulfilled which was ſpoken of the Lord by the Prophet, ſaying, Behold, a Virgin ſhall be with Child, and ſhall bring forth a Son, and they ſhall call his Name Emmanuel, which being interpreted, is, God with us. So then, this Son in Iſaiah, is the Son of God, by the Angel's interpretation. God united to Man's Nature, and ſo dwelling amongſt us. And the Angels they had known him, and converſt with him all along afore during the Old Teſtament, and appeared together with him unto Abraham, and others, and ſo were meet Witneſſes of him, what and who he was when he came into the World.

4. And to this Head may be referred that in the Story of the Fiery Furnace, The form of the fourth, appearing with the three Children, ſays Nebuchadnezzar, is like the Son of God, Dan. 3. 25. Thus far we may more then probably conclude, that this Appearance was of the Perſon of Chriſt himſelf, the Son of God, who had formerly appeared to the Fathers in the ſhape of Man; and ſo with theſe three Children, to comfort them, and ſtrike dread into the Tyrant. And ſo he was then extant as the Son of God; yea, and poſſibly this Prince, though an Heathen, might have received ſome glimering Notion of God's Son. And he now ſeeing one appearing, in ſo great and ſo ſuperlatively differing a Glory from the reſt; and ſuch a Glory as ſtruck him, though ſo great a King, as outſhone his, and had overcome him; he concluded, that it muſt repreſent God's Son, who by Inheritance was Lord of all, of God, I ſay, whoſe Kingdom (as after he confeſſeth) is an Everlaſting Kingdom, and his Dominion from Generation to Generation, Chap. 4. 3. And the ſcope of that Prophecy, is to diſcover that there was a Kingdom to come after the four Monarchies ended, which appertained to the Son of God. And God having been pleaſed to vouchſafe to this King the knowledg of that Kingdom it ſelf, as in the former Chapter, *Chap.*2. *verſ.*34,44,45. So here, in this which was the next occurrence, he gives him the Knowledg of his Son, (in this appearance) to whom this Kingdom appertained. Expreſly calling himſelf the Son of God; Whom Daniel in his Viſion, Chap. 7. terms the Son of Man: Who as then exiſting as Son of God, appeared in a differing Glory with theſe three Children comforting of them, countenancing, owning them, and being then preſent with them in their Afflictions, as Iſa. 63. It is alſo ſaid, he was with the Church in the Wilderneſs.

To conclude this: If he exiſted afore the World was, when he was not Man, and during all the Times of theſe Prophets, afore he took Man's Nature; It muſt be ſuppoſed, that ſuch a Perſon ſo exiſting, muſt have ſome eminent known Title given him, between God and him; the import of which ſhould be to ſpeak his Relation unto God. And if ſo, then ſurely it muſt be this, which is thus afore given him by thoſe Prophets, and as uttered by God, Thou art my Son, this day have I begotten thee, Pſal. 2. 7. And what is his Name? ſpeaking of the Father; and what is his Son's Name? So then he was called the Son, Prov. 30. 4.

He is not termed a Son, as if only made ſuch when he was conceived, or made Man; but on the contrary, being and exiſting the Son, he is ſaid to be ſent and made of a Woman, Gal. 4. 4. But when the Fulneſs of the Time was come, God ſent forth his Son, made of a Woman, made under the Law.

And unto this purpoſe it is further obſervable, That Chriſt, in his Diſcourſes to his Diſciples, affirms himſelf not only to be one ſent into the World by his Father, (which ſufficiently imports his Exiſtence afore); but further, to notify to us his Eternal Generation, and proceeding from him as a Son, and as ſuch exiſtent afore; He therefore diſtinguiſheth, and ſevereth theſe two things, (as appears in ſeveral Speeches of his) I came from the Father, ſo firſt; and then, And I came into the World: Or thus, And he hath ſent me. This is not only oft repeated, but this very Order obſerved, as oft as repeated, John 7. 29. I know him, for I am from him, and he hath ſent me.

CHAP.

CHAP. IV.

What kind of Son he is to God, or in what Sense he is the Son of God. He is the proper Son of God in a special peculiar manner, such as no other Person can be said to be. He is stiled the only begotten Son of God, which can be affirmed of no Creature. This imports that his Eternal Generation is the Foundation of his Sonship. He is called the Son of the Living God; that he is begotten of him in his own Likeness: and is of the same Nature and Substance with him. That he is God by an Identity of one, and the same Essence of the God-head, and not by Union only, or Office.

TO demonstrate in what Sense Christ has this Title of Son of God, I shall herein also proceed by degrees.

1. It is given him by way of Singularity, in comparison of all others that have the Title of Sons; this all acknowledg.

As God the first Person by way of Singularity, ordinarily is called the Father, One God the Father: So frequently, in the same way of Singularity, is Christ termed the Son, in Relation unto this God as the Father. And it hath been observed by some, That whereas υἱὸς θεοῦ, that is to say, A Son of God, is common to others, i. e. to us with him; yet ὁ υἱὸς τοῦ θεοῦ, The Son of God, is never given to any but to him.

2. God the Father himself by way of a special Appropriation sets him forth, and exhibits him as his Son, with difference from all others. He said it himself from Heaven, This is my beloved Son, Luk.9.35. This Person, this is the very He, He of all others individually, and alone He, and none other; and then he adds, let all else hear him. Thus when he presents him to the World, hear him, acknowledg, and receive him, as he who hath Power to make you Sons to me; Joh. 1. 12. But as many as received him, to them gave he Power to become the Sons of God, even to them that believe on his Name.

But this General is far short of what the Scriptures speak concerning what, or wherein his Sonship consists. Even the Jews seem to conceive and apprehend, that he who should be the Christ, should have the Title of the Son of God given him by way of eminency above all others, yet all that while conceiving of him, as to the Substance of his Person, that it was but only a Man, that should transcendently have God's presence with him: and that God should appear in him, in a more glorious manner, than in all Men else. And not the Jews only, but the Gentiles were struck with a sense of some one special Person's being the Son of God, as in this Sence understood.

Thus far, and in such respect Pilate had Apprehensions that Christ possibly might be the Son of God. For when the Jews had told him, that one Jesus made himself (or took upon him to be) The Son of God, Joh. 19. 7. When Pilate heard that Saying, saith the Text, He was the more afraid. It cannot be imagined, that Pilate's Divinity reach'd to convince him to be the substantial Son of God, but he thought, he might (for all that he knew) be some eminently Divine vine Man from God, such as their Poets spake of, and attributed to Augustus Cæsar, Majestum Jovis incrementum, which struck fear into him.

I am doubtful, I confess, whether to refer Nebuchadnezzar's Speech, in Dan. 3. 25. who when he saw one to appear in a differing manner, with those three Children in the Fiery Furnace, he crys out, The form of the fourth is like the Son of God; and surely it was an Appearance in such a Glory, as was far beyond what Creatures, even Angels appear in, that made him speak thus. But that which makes me doubtful, is that he had not any Notion of this Son of God to come, unless, as I afore challenged it, for Christ's Existence as God's Son, under the Old Testament, he perceiving his Glory such, and so superlatively different, acknowledgeth him to be the Son of that God, whose Kingdom was to be an everlasting Kingdom, Dan. 4. 3.

But it is yet more observable to prove the present Assertion, that whenever Christ spake of the Father afore his Disciples, or others, He never said Our Father, which yet he taught us to say, even when we pray in private, to the end that we should come to God as such a Father to us, as he is also to all others of his Elect. And so the Jews were taught and instructed to say, We have one Father, even God, Joh. 8. 41. But his own usual Stile was My Father, and therefore so a Father to him as to no other, nor to all or any of the Sons of God. And this Appropriation was so much his wont, that the Jews observ'd it, and took him at it, and were offended, Joh. 5. 17. Whereas he had said, My Father worketh hitherto, and I work; The Jews sought the more to kill him, because he had said, God was his Father, which is but slenderly so translated: For in the Original, 'tis because he had called God his own Father, that is, so and in such a manner his, as not others: And so the Jews themselves understood him, whilst the Words were yet fresh in his Mouth. Yea, and he speaks not this amongst a wicked Company of Jews, who were the Children of the Devil, vers. 44. As any other ordinary Son or Child of God alone, among a Company of wicked ones, might by way of Separation so use it; But further, Christ doth the very same, when he had an occasion to speak to, and of, his Disciples, and of himself (who were the chiefest Saints then alive of the Sons of Men, and representing the rest for ever to come) how God was Father both to him and them, yet he carefully makes this Separation; My Father, and your Father, Joh. 20. 27. You see he mentions their Relation apart, yea, as separate and aloof off from his own, He putteth the Sonship or Relation of all them into one common Relation, Your Father, and sets against it, and severs from it, as at a distance, his own; My Father. And that to shew their Relation of Sons to God, is not of the same Rank or Descent that his is.

2. There is moreover, [an Us all,] Rom. 8. 32. He that spared not his own Son, but delivered him up for us all, how shall he not also with him freely give us all things? namely us, the Saints; [God gave him up for us all] says he, and these All, we find had been afore termed the Sons of God, in the 16*th* verse of that Chapter, The Spirit it self beareth witness with our Spirit, that we are the Children of God. And so declared Heirs of all Things because Joint-Heirs with Christ, ver. 17. And Again, vers. 29. he had call'd them, the Brethren of Christ, and him the First-born among many Brethren.

And yet, 3. After all this, by way of difference, from these he entitles Christ, God's own Son; If God spared not his own Son, vers. 32. To have said His Son, by way of Singularity, when mention is made of many other Brethren, had been enough to have signified his Eminency unto them, especially to say the First-born, as vers. 29. he hath done. But he adds hereto over and above all, his own Son. As thereby signifying the different kind or sort of Sonship and Fatherhood, that was betwixt God and him. This is therefore an eminent distinction of two sorts of Sons which God had; his own Son, proper, genuine, true Son, and others that were not his own, but either by Marriage, or Adoption. As Strangers and Alians in their Original Descent use to be to a Father that afterwards takes them for his adopted Sons: and 'tis evident that this is his meaning. For ver. 15. the Apostle had given this other part of distinction of Sonship of this his [Us All.] We have received (says he) the Spirit of Adoption, by which we (that are Jews) cry, Abba, and we (that are Gentiles) Father, And if Children then Heirs, vers. 16.

Now

Now God in this speaks as plainly to Men in their own Language, as is possible to express it. Come to a Man that hath both Sons by Marriage, and also a Son out of his own Loins, and you hear him call them all Sons: But particularly ask him what Son is this? My own Son, says he. And are these so? No, they are my Daughter's Husbands, and so my Sons in Law, or my Wives Sons, or whom I have taken to be my Sons by Will. Well, and what doth a Man mean when he says, This is my own Son; especially when with a distinction from others that are adopted? All Men understand a Son that is of his Substance naturally begotten of him, of his Flesh and Blood. Then in its infinite proportion, it ought so to be understood here. Chap. 3.

A second Expression to be added to this, is, that of his being stiled, The only begotten Son of God, so often, John 1. 14, 18. Chap. 3. 16. 1 John 4. 9. And therefore so begotten, as not others. Quasi præter cum nullus; As if besides him no other were begotten. And if any would quarrel, that others are said to be begotten of God, 1 John 5. 18. yet to be sure, when God says this of him, Thou art my begotten Son, he means it of such a begetting as hath not been communicated to any Creature of the Old Creation, which that place is express for. To which of all the Angels hath he said, Thou art my Son, this day have I begotten thee? Heb. 1. 5. So instancing in his highest Sons of the sort of meer Creatures, that are neerest to him; in excluding them, he excludes all the rest.

In which Speech we may observe two Things.

1. That a Generation, or begetting him, is the Foundation of his Sonship; as it is of all true and natural Sons else among Men. For so he joins them, Thou art my Son, I have begotten thee; as the Ground of that his Sonship. If it were but a metaphorical or similitudinary Generation; as when he says of the Ice and the Snow, Job 38. 28, 29. Hath the Rain a Father? or who hath begotten the Drops of the Dew? Out of whose Womb came the Ice, and the hoary Frosts of Heaven, who hath gendred it? Then his Sonship were no other. But doth God speak Poetically here, (as there he doth) when of the Generation of his Son? Then indeed he were but metaphorically a Son, and God a metaphorical Father to him: Whereas he is the true Son of God, as John calls him, 1 John 5. ult. and therefore as truly begotten.

2. Then that his Generation is such a begetting, and he such a Son in that respect as is denied of the Angels, or of Men, is evident. Thou, and thou alone art my Son; I have begotten thee, and thee alone. So that otherwise, let the Scripture speak what it will of Men's being born of God, begotten of God, it is with an infinite distance of sense from this. Their's is but by his Operation, not Generation, by Renascentia, a new Birth of God's Image on them, which are but Divine Qualities in the Soul, not by a Generation, that is proper to a substantial Person.

Then, thirdly, add to these two Expressions of one Son, and of only begotten, that other Mat. 16. 16. As also John 6. 67. Where both by Peter's, and all the Apostles their Confession, he is professed to be the Son of the Living God: And in both those Confessions, the Conglomeration, or gathering together so many Articles in the Greek set afore every word, are as so many Stars that call us to behold this Eminency of his Sonship and Generation. For they putting an Emphasis on every word in that small Sentence, Thou art that Christ; That Son of that God, that Living God. The like Indignation is never used but for some special Intent, according to the Nature of the Matter spoken of. And that which makes it the more observable, is, that John (who wrote long after the other Evangelists, and avoideth to mention what other Evangelists had recorded, and so mentions this Confession of theirs, as uttered at another Time, and upon a differing occasion from that which Matthew relates) should yet, in his rehearsal of this Confession, not only punctually keep to the same words, but hath as carefully added the same Articles afore every word, as Matthew had done.

Yea, further, whereas 'tis observed by some, (as was said) that the Article ὁ υἱὸς, the Son, is given to none but to this Son; Lo, here it is also put to every every Word beſides, when his Sonſhip is ſolemnly proclaimed. And ſo the meaning will be this, That Son of the only True God, that Living God. Which Emphaſis, the God; and which Attribute, the Living God, are purpoſely annexed, to ſet out the Greatneſs of this ſo great a Son. And to ſhew, that if we do ſuppoſe the Great and True God to have a Son, and but one Son, and him begotten by him, as he is the Living God, (as put this and thoſe former Things mentioned of him together, and it appears) then what manner of a Son muſt this be? and what manner of Generation, but ſuch as Living Fathers have proportionably of their Sons? A Generation, ſuch as is proper to Things living when they beget their kind. Generation, properly taken, ſays Aquinas, and Experience ſhews it, is of Things that are living, out of a living Principle, and is improperly applied to Production. And further it is then ſaid to be Generation properly in them, when they beget in their own Likeneſs, and that Likeneſs conſiſting in their own Kind, Nature, and Subſtance.

Pars 1ª. Quæſt. 27. Art. 2. Generatio ſumitur.

1. Communiter ad omnia generabilia & corruptibilia. Et ſic Generatio nihil aliud eſt quàm mutatio à non eſſe ad eſſe. 2. Propriè in Viventibus; Sic generatio eſt origo alicujus viventis à principio vivente conjuncto. Nec tamen omne hujuſmodi dicitur generatio, ſed quod habet rationem ſimilitudinis. Unde Capillus non habet rationem geniti. Nec ſufficit quæcunque ſimilitudo. Vermes qui generantur in Animalibus non habent rationem Geniti. Sed requiritur ut procedat ſecundùm rationem ſimilitudinis in Natura ejuſdem ſpeciei, ſicut homo procedit ab homine.

And thus living Things properly are ſaid to beget; as in Nature you all ſee, A Lion begets a Lion, a Man a Man. Proprium eſt viventium generare ſimile in ſubſtantia. And thoſe two Attributes are given to Chriſt holding forth his Generation, viz. The Word, and the Son. The Word ſhews he is begotten by God, who is an Intellectual Being; the Son ſhews that he is begotten as a living Eſſence or Being.

Now then putting all theſe three together; 1. God's own Son; 2. Only begotten; 3. That one only begotten Son of the True and Living God. Theſe twiſted and interwoven mutually, are a three-fold Cord that cannot be broken. Let us therefore ſee what Arguments and Evidences theſe will afford to convince us what manner of a Son this is.

By a further adding all theſe ſucceeding Conſiderations together to them, and ſetting theſe by them.

Aſſertion 3. That this only Begotten, and Natural Son of God, is God; and not God only by Union, after he was put forth by God out of himſelf, but by an Indentity, or Oneneſs of one and the ſame Eſſence of the Godhead.

This third is naturally connected with the foregoing Aſſertion, viz. That he is the Natural Son of the Living God: Thus,

I. The Scriptures connect and join theſe two together; in that often, when and where they mention his Sonſhip to God, they annex withal, (becauſe the one neceſſarily importeth the other) his being God alſo; as may be obſerved, both out of the Old Teſtament and the New.

1. The Old Teſtament, Iſa. 9. 6. Unto us a Child is born; which ſpeaks him to be Man: And unto us a Son is given; that ſpeaks him to have been God, and as ſuch, extant afore he as Man was born: for what is given, hath a Being when he is given; and afore he is given, who took Man's Nature to himſelf as Son: And here, by Son, he means this Son of God, our Chriſt, Luke 1. 31, 35. The Angel there hath manifeſtly an Eye upon this Prophecy of Iſaiah here; v. 32. Thou ſhalt conceive a Son, and he ſhall be called the Son of the Moſt High; and God ſhall give unto him the Throne of his Father David; and he ſhall reign over the Houſe of Jacob for ever; and of his Kingdom there ſhall be no end; thus the Angel there. And how ſpeaks Iſaiah? To us a Son is given, and the Government ſhall be upon his Shoulders: of the Encreaſe of his Government, and Peace, there ſhall be no End: Upon the Throne of David, and upon his Kingdom, from hence-forth, even for ever. The Angel citeth not the Place, but evidently reciteth the very words of that Propheey, the very ſame, thus. So then, Chriſt being meant by the Son; that which I alledg Iſaiah for, is this, That his being Son, Son, and his being God, are joined: And so it follows in *Isa.*9.6. To us a Son is given, and his Name shall be called the Mighty God. Chap. 4.

2. In Heb. 1. 8. you have the same by Paul's Interpretation out of the Psalms: To the Son he says, Thy Throne, O God, is for ever and ever. Compare we now the words of Isaiah, with that of the Angel; and this of Paul out of the Psalms, together: They are one and the same, to shew he is God's Son. Thus for the Old Testament and New both.

Again, in the New, Heb. 3. 3. This Man says the Translation; you may as well say, This Person (Man is not in the Original) was counted worthy of more Honour than Moses: Inasmuch as he that built the House, hath more honour than the House. And vers. 4. it follows, Every House is builded by some Man; but he that built all these Things, (that is, The Church in all Ages, and Things about it, under both Old and New Testament) is God. He that had instructed Moses, and the Church, under the Old Testament; and now that of the New, is God, speaking it of Christ, as God: So then, Christ is God, who is the Builder of this House. Now read on, and you will find his being [Son] not far off: For in vers. 6. Christ as a Son over his own House. Now compare Matth. 16. 16. Thou art the Son of the Living God, says Peter. And what says Christ upon it? *v.*18. Upon this Rock I will build my Church, as being the Son of the Living God: And he that was able to build it, was God, says our Apostle in that Heb. 3. 4. Therefore he is such a Son, as is also God; and both are joined together.

Again, those two parallel Places, in the Epistle to the Romans; The one Chap. 1. vers. 3, 4. Concerning his Son Jesus Christ, which was made of the Seed of David according to the Flesh; and declared to be the Son of God with Power: Compare this with *Chap.*9.5. Of whom concerning the Flesh Christ came, who is over all, God blessed for ever. Amen. Son of God in the one, is God blessed for ever in the other.

Further; These two run as Terms equivalent in other places of Scripture; where in like manner they be compared, 1 Tim. 3. 18. it is said of Christ, God was manifest in the Flesh: And in 1 John 3. 18. you have it thus, The Son of God was manifested.

Likewise, Acts 20. 28. it is said, God purchased the Church with his own Blood: Now compare Rev. 1. 5. speaking of our Christ, He hath wash'd us with his own Blood, and made us Priests unto God his Father. So then 'twas the Son, whose Blood was personally his own; who was distinct from his Father, and yet God, that purchased this Church.

Again, 1 John 5. 28. And we know that the Son of God is come; and we are in him that is true, even in his Son Jesus Christ: This is the True God, and Eternal Life; the True Son of God, and the True God. The very Devil himself doth in effect acknowledg it, Matth. 4. 3. If thou be that Son of God, command these Stones to be made Bread: Which was in effect as to have said, If thou beest that great Son of God, that is to come into the World, then thou art God, and hast Sovereign Power to create, or change the Being of the Creatures: Let us therefore see it by the Effects; Command these Stones to be made Bread.

Last of all; That known place, John 10. 30. alledged to prove Christ's Godhead, joins these two together; Son of God, and God; and the one is inferred from the other; when at the 30*th* Verse, Christ had said, I and my Father are One; that is, I who profess my self to be that One, and only Son of God, who is my Father; as in such a special Relation, I am such a Son to him, as am withal One with him.

So then, 1. Christ intended that his being God's Son, was all one, and to be One with God.

Again, 2. so the Jews understood him, to intend thereby that he was God: Their Quarrel with him is that, vers. 33. Thou makest thy self God; and yet, lo, he had only affirmed, I the Son and my Father are One: So then, to be his Son in the sense the Jews understood him, to take on him that Title, was all one as to be God.

And, 3. in that very sense, he so defended himself to be the Son of God; that is, such a Son as was God; for having, vers. 34, 35, 36. made his defence, alledging this Proof, That if the eminent Men, and Magiſtrates of the Old Teſtament, were termed Gods by Office, and Sons of God by Adoption; who were but ſhadows of him in both thoſe Titles; Then he, who was promiſed to be ſent into the World, as the Subſtance, muſt be God by Nature, and not Office; and the Son of God, not by Adoption only, but naturally, and therefore equal, and one with God, I ſay, He having defended himſelf by this Argument, his Concluſion is, verſ. 36. Say ye then of him whom the Father hath ſealed, and ſent into the World, Thou blaſphemeſt; becauſe I ſaid, I am the Son of God? Now what was it that they had ſaid? Or, what Blaſphemy was it which they had laid to his Charge? It was this, verſ. 33. for thy Blaſphemy; becauſe thou, being a Man, as to our apparent ſight and view, makeſt thy ſelf God: And Chriſt, you ſee, in his making his Concluſion point-blank to their Accuſation, inſtead of ſaying, Why ſay you I blaſpheme, in ſaying, I am God, (which yet was the thing which they had ſaid of him) he ſpeaks thus, Becauſe, I ſaid, I was the Son of God; believe not me, believe the Works, that you may know and believe, that the Father is in me, and I in him; that is, that he and I are one in Nature, as he had affirmed verſ. 30. For indeed, in his having affirmed he was ſuch a Son to God as was one with his Father; which was his ſaying, verſ. 30. He had affirmed he was ſuch a Son to God, as was God; one that did the ſame Works the Father did, verſ. 35. Which if I do, ſays he, then believe it; for it is the natural Inference from it.

BOOK II.

Thus you ſee the Scriptures join his being, both Son and God, together.

II. The ſame is in Reaſon; That if he be the natural Son of God, and only begotten of the Living God, the true and perfect Son of God, as the Scriptures, when they ſpeak of his being Son, do declare him, (as hath been clearly teſtified); that then neceſſarily, in point of rational Inference, he muſt be God eſſentially: If God hath a true Son, that Son can be no other than true God; it holds no proportion elſe to the phraſe it pretends to: It holds true in all things elſe. It is not to be thought, ſays Bernard, that God ſhould have a Son of another kind from himſelf; but it is neceſſary to acknowledg him to be of equal height, and dignity, ſince even the Sons of Princes, are themſelves Princes too, Deus non niſi Deum gignit: If God begets a Son, He muſt be God, the living true God: God cannot beget leſs than himſelf; which is clearly the conceſſion of thoſe laſt words in John, ſpeaking of Chriſt; 1 John 5. 20. God hath given us an Underſtanding to know him that is True; and we are in him that is True, even in his Son Jeſus Chriſt. This is the true God, and Eternal Life. The Scope of which is this; That he being the True Son of the True God, the Living God; Himſelf is in himſelf, the True God alſo, and Eternal Life, having the Fountain of all Life in himſelf.

Non eſt fas Dei Filium degenerem ſapere: ſed æqualem fatere neceſſe eſt altitudine, & dignitate: nam & erbi Principum Principes, &c. Bern. de ador. Serm. 1.

I ſhall but open and purſue one Vein, or Current, or Courſe of Scriptures, which carry on this great Point, That our Chriſt is God; not as appearing only in the Form of God, as ſome of late, or by Office only; but God by Nature; the Right God, the True God, the Great God, the Only God, the Living God: Which Attributes of God, when found to be given to him, argue him ſo to be God by Eſſence; the ſame God the Father is; as put us paſt diſtinguiſhing upon it.

1. He is God by Nature: It is the diſtinction which Paul uſeth, and whereby he ſets out the True God in diſtinction from all other, that are called Gods, truly, or falſly; When you knew not God, ye did Service unto them which by Nature are no Gods: Why doth he not in plain terms ſay, When ye worſhip'd Idols? The Apoſtle ſuppoſeth the beſt of it; for ſome of thoſe whom they worſhipped, had been God's by Office, that is, Kings, and Rulers, as Jupiter and others were; or of uſe (as Gods) Benefactors to Mankind, for which they worſhipped them: He needed not elſe have put in that diſtinction, that they were not Gods by Nature. From which is gathered to our purpoſe in hand,

1. That none are to be worſhipped, but he that is God by Nature: for he ſhews their ſin to have been, that they worſhip'd ſuch as God, that were not Gods by Nature: So then, if Chriſt were not God by Nature, he were no more more to be worshipp'd by us, though never so great a Benefactor to us: which yet is his due. And to strengthen this Argument, the command of worshipping so falls out, that those who are Gods by Office of the highest Rank, the Angels, are commanded to give Worship to him: That Saying, Heb. 1. Let all the Angels of God worship him. In the Psalmist's Words (whom the Apostle quotes;) it is, Worship him all ye Gods, Psal. 97. 7. So then, he is manifestly God by Nature, and thereby distinguished from all of them; and Worship is exacted from all of them, as his due upon that account. Chap. 4.

And this is the true, and genuine Drift, and Result of that Passage of Christ's, John 10. 30. to 39. I and my Father are one. Then the Jews took up Stones again to stone him. Jesus answered them, Many good Works have I shewed you from my Father; for which of those Works do ye stone me? The Jews answered him, saying, For a good Work we stone thee not; but for Blasphemy, and because that thou, being a Man, makest thy self God. Jesus answered them, Is it not written in your Law, I said, ye are Gods? If he called them Gods, unto whom the Word of God came, and the Scripture cannot be broken: Say ye of him, whom the Father hath sanctified, and sent into the World, Thou blasphemest; because I said, I am the Son of God? If I do not the Works of my Father, believe me not. But if I do, though ye believe not me, believe the Works: that ye may know and believe that the Father is in me, and I in him. Therefore they sought again to take him; but he escaped out of their hands: That Scripture of all others hath seemed to have the greatest Objection in it, but one, (which I shall anon also again more touch) That Christ is called God only by Office, and Union with God; as the great, and eminent Men in the Old Testament were called. And the Objection lies thus, That the Jews having challenged him to have made himself God, he defends his Speech by this Saying out of the Old Testament, I have said, ye are Gods: as if himself were but such a God as they, only more eminent.

But Christ's Scope is manifestly the clean contrary. For,

1. The Jews did plainly understand him to intend that he was God, and truly God, vers. 33. So the Jews, saith Augustine, understood his Speech thus to be meant: But the Arrians will not. And the Blasphemy which the Jews challenged him of, was not that he made himself as one of those Gods, but that he made himself God, one with the Father; and so by Nature to be God as well as he: And his answer, if it had been intended in that other Speech, had no way come home to their Objection: for that was not the thing they quarrel'd him for, that he said he was a God by Office, and Deputation; as those whom the Psalmist did speak of only were.

Ecce Judæi intelligebant quod non intelligunt Ariani, Augustin. Tract. 48. in Joan.

2. Christ here quoteth that Saying, I have said, ye are Gods, as a Prophecy, (so I term it, for Types were Prophecies of Christ, and what he should be, as much as any other) of Himself: Which those Words, vers. 35. And the Scripture cannot be broken, manifestly import. Now, how was this Prophecy, but in this respect, that God his terming Magistrates, and those eminent Men under the Old Testament, in Jewry, or elsewhere, Gods, was to fore-signify thereby his own Son, who was the Substance of those Shadows, what his Person was, that he had promised to send into the World: for in saying, The Scripture cannot be broken, his Intent is to say, the Scripture is, and must be found true, and fulfilled, or made good.

Now then, in this lies the Force and Edg of Christ's Argument, to prove himself God in that Sense they had understood him: The Jews looked at, and acknowledged all those great and eminent Men, whom the Scripture termeth Gods, to be but fore-running Shadows, and Types of him that is the Messiah: So that look what Titles, and Excellencies are given, and attributed unto them, must in an eminent, and distinct, and substantial way be found true in his Person: Or the Scripture will be broken, and not be found consistent. If therefore they were called Gods by Commission, and Deputation, as having the Word of God come to them; which put that Title and Office upon them; and it was said of them, Ye are Gods; as Pſal. 82.6. Your Meſſiah muſt be God of another ſort and rank than they were of: and not only meerly by Commiſſion, or, as to whom the Word of God came, to make him God: but he muſt be truly, and by Nature and Eſſence ſuch. Were he to be God no otherwiſe than they were, the Scripture had not been fulfilled.

And this Argument is ſo ſtrong, as nothing can be ſuppoſed ſtronger to us Chriſtians: who know that all Types of Chriſt, were indeed but Shadows in all their Excellencies, attributed to them, of Chriſt as the Subſtance: What is ſaid of Ceremonies, is true of Perſons that were Types of him; Col. 2. 18. which are a Shadow of things to come; but the Body, or Subſtance ſignified by that Shadow, is Chriſt. Now then, if they were termed Gods, and Sons of the moſt High, it muſt be underſtood that therein they were but Shadows, and he muſt have in his Perſon that which holds true of the Subſtance, the Eſſence, or real Being thereof. And ſo, according to Chriſt's way of Arguing, if they are Gods by Office, and Union; he muſt be God by Eſſence, and Nature: as that diſtinction of the Apoſtle, Gal. 4. 8. holds forth. And otherwiſe, he had himſelf been but a dark Shadow, an Officiary God, as they: no otherwiſe Son of the moſt High, than as they alſo were, Heb. 10. 1. The Apoſtle ſpeaks thus of all Types, and Shadows, under the Old Teſtament: The Law had but a Shadow of good Things to come, and not ſo much as the Image of the Things themſelves. From all which I gather, that as in Nature, ſo here, the Shadow is lower than an Image, and both alterius generis, from the Subſtance or Reality; as in the caſe of Melchiſedec is apparent; who in a meer Shadow is ſaid to have had no beginning, nor end of days; not that really he had not, but becauſe in a Shadowy Intent it is not mentioned in the Book of Scripture, he being as a Shadow conformed to the Son of God. Now in compariſon of Chriſt, all other Eminencies in any Perſon, though more real, are yet eſteemed to be but Shadows, in as true a manner as he (Melchiſedec) was. And ſo, this greateſt Excellency of all Creatures, to be ſtiled Gods, muſt in compariſon of him, be content with a Shadowy Title; whereof he bore the Subſtance. He in the concluſion of this Argument, inſtead of ſaying he was God, which yet his Argument, and their Accuſation did drive to, concludes, he was the Son of God, verſ. 36. Say ye of him, thou blaſphemeſt, becauſe I ſaid I am the Son of God? The Blaſphemy in their Senſe was, verſ. 33. that he made himſelf God, as an Inference out of that Saying, I and my Father are one. He defends it, and takes it on him by this, that he had ſaid indeed, that he was the Son of God: (of whom all thoſe Gods, and Sons of the moſt High, the Pſalmiſt ſpeaks of, were but Shadows) and therefore truly God, as they intended it: 'Tis not comparatio ſimilium, ut volunt adverſarii; that is, that I am God in the ſame, and like manner that they are: but 'tis Comparatio minoris, & majoris, if they that are but Shadows are called Gods; then, if that Scripture be not broken, I muſt be God ſubſtantially. So then, by Chriſt's manner of concluding, it was all one for him to ſay he was God, and the Son of God; both in his Senſe, in theirs, and in the Pſalmiſt's foreſignifying of him. He again paraphraſeth, and explains all theſe by this Phraſe, The Father is in me, and I in him. So then, the Concluſion, the Sum I draw out of all, is; That for Chriſt to be the Son of God, it is all one (as for him) to be God ſubſtantially: and in that reſpect one with God. And that being thus God, and one with God the Father, is (in its difference from God) beſt thus expreſſed; that his Father is in him, and he in his Father: Neither could Chriſt himſelf that experimented it, expreſs his being God, and Son of God, more clearly unto us; than to ſay, I am in my Father, who is God, and he as God, is in me, and ſo both are One; that is, one God ſubſtantially, or by Nature, in diſtinction from Gods by Office; though we are two in Perſon that ſubſiſt in this Nature. Nor did John know better how to expreſs it, in Chap. 1. verſ. 1. both his Oneneſs with God, and his Diſtinction from God, than in ſaying, that he was God, and was with God. God, not as thoſe in the Pſalmiſt, to whom the Word of the Lord came, and were God's meerly by Gods ſaying ſo of them them; but He the Word, ὁ λόγος, it self, (as John calls him) of whom they that declared the Word, were the Types, and Shadows; and the only begotten of the Father, vers. 18. who was not made a God, and a Son, because sent into the World, and sanctified, but was therefore sent, and sanctified to that Office of Messiah, because he was by Nature, and substantially the Son of God, and God equal with the Father both in Power, and Nature; vers. 29, 30. And in Works, vers. 37, 38. If I do not the Works of my Father, believe me not: But if I do, though ye believe not me, believe the Works: that ye may know, and believe that the Father is in me, and I in him. Chap. 4.

2. He is stiled the Living God: Those Words, Heb. 3. 12. Take heed there be not an evil Heart in departing from the Living God, are manifestly meant of Christ: for his begun Exhortation, vers. 7. was to hear his Voice; and he it was that was tempted in the Wilderness, 1 Cor. 18. 7. And how that whole 95*th Psalm* was meant of Christ, I have elsewhere shewn: Yea it was he that gave the Law, and pronounced those Words, I am the Lord thy God, who brought thee out of the Land of Egypt, thou shalt have no other Gods before my Face: For Heb. 12. 26. it is expresly said of him, Whose Voice then shook the Earth; namely, when the Law was given, and those Words uttered by him.

3. He is stiled the true God: So 1 Joh. 5. 20. And we know that the Son of God is come, and hath given us an Understanding, that we may know him that is true; and we are in him that is true, even in his Son Jesus Christ: this is the true God, and Eternal Life. And to testify this, he is stiled by that incommunicable Name of God, Jehovah; Jer. 23. 6. Jehovah Justitia nostra, The Lord our Righteousness: In his Days Judah shall be saved, and Israel shall dwell safely; and this is his Name wherewith he shall be called, The Lord our Righteousness. So also, Isa. 40. vers. 3, 10, 12. Prepare the Way for Jehovah: These all the Evangelists apply to John, and Christ, Matth. 3. 4. Mark 3. 4. John 1. 23. And if John be the Vox clamantis, Christ must be acknowledged the Jehovah, whose Way was prepared afore him: And when he comes in the Flesh, Isa. 40. vers. 9. he says unto the Cities of Judah, Behold your God: And vers. 10. Behold the Lord God will come with strong Hand, and his Arm shall rule for him; behold, his Reward is with him, and his work before him: Which is expresly applyed to Christ, Rev. 22. 12. speaking of his second coming, vers. 11. He that is Unjust, let him be Unjust still: and he that is Filthy, let him be Filthy still: and he that is Righteous, let him be Righteous still: and he that is Holy, let him be Holy still. And behold, I come quickly, and my Reward is with me, to give to every Man according as his Work shall be. Which is expresly true of Christ. Read Matth. 16. 27. It is God of whom 'tis said, Isa. 40. 13. as the Septuagint hath it, Τὶς ἔγνω νῦν κυρίου, Who hath known the Mind of the Lord? Which 1 Cor. 2. last, The Apostle applies to Christ, by adding, But we have the Mind of Christ. So then, Christ is that Jehovah, Jer. 23. 6.

Now Men may vainly dispute it, that this Name of Jehovah is given unto meer Creatures: But God himself hath decided it, and expresly declared, that it is given unto none but the true God: Psal. 83. 18. That Men may know that thou whose Name alone is Jehovah, art the most High over all the Earth. And Isa. 42. 8. I am the Lord, that is my Name; and my Glory will I not give to another, neither my Praise to graven Images. Now this Honour is given to Christ; and therefore he must be God, and the true God.

4. He is also the great God: Not only, Isa. 9. 6. The Mighty God: but Tit. 2. 12, 13. τοῦ μεγάλου θεοῦ καὶ σωτῆρος ἡμῶν; that great God, and Saviour of us: speaking both of one, and the same Person, Christ. And 'tis here, the putting the Article before great God, and none before Saviour, imports: and so distinguisheth him from God, by the like Phrase generally, Eph. 1. 3. ὁ θεὸς καὶ πατὴρ, God, and the Father of Christ: but more simular yet. This here, Gal. 1. 4. τοῦ θεοῦ καὶ πατρὸς ἡμῶν, according to the Will of God, and our Father: So Christ, God and our Saviour in Peter, is Christ the great God, and Saviour in Titus

Titus. And this is at once proclaimed as the general Faith of all Believers, and Apoſtles: 2 Pet. 1. 1. Like Faith with us: And what is the Object of it? ἐν δικαιοσύνη, on the Righteouſneſs. I have wondred they ſhould tranſlate it, through the Righteouſneſs: When Chriſt's Righteouſneſs is every where made the Object of Faith, as juſtifying, on which we believe. Yea, as that which out of Neneceſſity to Salvation, Faith relies on; and that Righteouſneſs, as of a Saviour that is God, which were of no value to us Sinners elſe: Let them elſe take Saviour and Righteouſneſs that will, for he nor it would do no Man any good: This was the general Expectation, as Paul to Titus, the general fundamental Faith of all Chriſtians then, as in Peter: And ſo the Prophet's ſtile, and the Apoſtle's ſtile, agrees: Iſaiah, in his 40, 43, & 45 Chapters, ſtiles him, The God and Saviour, and there is none beſides him: And the Apoſtles in like manner, The great God and Saviour.

5. If you yet doubt: Lo! to put all out of Queſtion, he is ſtiled, the only True God: The other, and the greateſt Objection that ever was, or can be made againſt this Godhead of Chriſt, is, That it is ſaid there is but one God only: Yea, and the Father is ſo ſtiled, and called, John 17. 3. And this is Life Eternal, that they might know Thee the only True God, and Jeſus Chriſt whom thou haſt ſent. And I find in ſome Men's late Writings here at home, them diſtinguiſhing thus: That take the Godhead ſimply in its Unity, and ſo conſidered, it is only the Father, quoting all thoſe places, there is none beſides: And the Son they make to be, either God, as united to Man, and ſo in that reſpect becoming the Son, or the Manifeſtation of God in Fleſh; or, at beſt, but that in God which contained the Maſs, and Spirit of the whole Creation as it was in God from Everlaſting; and ſo diſtinct from the Nature of God, as purely in himſelf. But the Objection hath been the occaſion to me of the greateſt ſatisfaction in this Point, that the ſame ſtile is given as compleatly unto Jeſus Chriſt, as to the Father, in thoſe other Places: And ſo the words are not to be underſtood excluſively to Chriſt in this ſenſe, to know thee as Father to be the only True God; the Father, that only is the True God; the words are not ſo, but incluſively rather thus; And him whom thou haſt to be the only True God alſo: Only Chriſt having an Office, in reſpect of which he is called Chriſt; he is therefore named apart from the Father; yet ſo, as both are that only True God, in diſtinction from all Gods ſo called, that are not Gods by Nature: And the ground of my ſatisfaction is this, That in a multitude of places where God is called the only God, and none beſides him; yet thoſe places are expreſly meant of, and applied to our Chriſt; Iſa. 44. 6. Thus ſaith the Lord the King of Iſrael, and his Redeemer the Lord of Hoſts; I am the Firſt, and I am the Laſt, and beſides me there is no God. Here you ſee is the Attribute we ſeek for, the only God, &c. And this is as evidently ſpoken of Chriſt. For,

Firſt, Here are two Titles given him, which are proper to Chriſt.

1. King of Iſrael; ſee John 1. 49. Thou art the Son of God, thou art the King of Iſrael. And for that of his Redeemer, I need not trouble you with any Quotations, that it is proper to him: And yet he to whom this Title is given, is God, and the only God, Yea, beſides me there is no God. And if you yet doubt, and ask me, But are you ſure that it is ſpoken of him? Lo, Rev. 1. twice, verſ. 8. I am Alpha and Omega, the Beginning and the End. And again, verſ. 17. I am the Firſt and the Laſt. And then you have them all three, Rev. 22. 13. I am Alpha and Omega, the Beginning and the End, the Firſt and the Laſt. The next in Iſaiah, is Chap. 45. 5. I am the Lord, and there is none elſe; there is no God beſides me: And verſ. 21, 22. He bids us look on him; and ſure, without any more adoe, we that live under the New Teſtament, ſhould know him upon firſt ſight: For to whom is it to whom all the Ends of the Earth do look, but he who was proclaimed the Deſire of all Nations? who were not converted to God until Chriſt came: But he that is, of whom Iſaiah ſays, Rom. 15. 12. There ſhall be a Root of Jeſſe, and he that ſhall riſe to reign over the Gentiles, in him ſhall the Gentiles truſt: Look, and truſt on him, and be ſaved, who is a Saviour, and there is none beſides, ſays the Old Teſtament. Believe on the Lord Jeſus, and thou shalt be saved, is the general stile of the Apostle's preaching; A Saviour, and besides him there is no other. And thus they set him forth also, Acts 4. 11. There is no God, no Saviour besides him; and Justification in him, discovers him none other; Acts 13. 39. By him all that believe are justified from all Things, from which ye could not be justified by the Law of Moses. And in this Lord, shall all the Seed of Israel be justified, (says Isaiah) Surely shall one say, in the Lord I have Righteousness and Strength. And if you were all put to speak, in whom would you say you had Righteousness and Strength? Hear Paul for all the rest, in one Epistle; To be found in him, not having my own Righteousness, Phil. 3. 9. And for the other, hear him again in the same Epistle, Phil. 4. 13. I can do all Things through Christ that strengtheneth me. Do not all the Jury of Saints, with one Mouth, say the same? And what is he in whom we have this Righteousness? Doth not Isaiah's fellow-Prophet tell us, Jer. 23. 6. And his Name, for Essence, is Jehovah; for Office, our Righteousness. Thus, I say, Saviour and God still are joined: The Righteousness of this Saviour as God, is that by which through looking on him by Faith, all, both Jew and Gentiles, are saved. And bring all this to that of Peter even now quoted, describing true Believers, All that have obtained like Faith with us, Apostles; On the Righteousness of God, and our Saviour Jesus Christ: And yet he of whom all this is said, takes this stile upon himself, to be the only God, and none besides him. And if any have the Heart, or Face, to deny these Characters loosly scattered up and down, enough to convert a Jew to own him for the Messiah prophesied of; much more a Christian to acknowledg him the only True God, whom Isaiah spoke of: If any, I say, can deny it, as meant personally of Christ; let them then consult Paul, who expressly applies this very Scripture unto our Jesus: Rom. 15. 10, 11. Rejoice ye Gentiles with his People. Praise the Lord, all ye Gentiles, and laud him all ye People. Where is that written but in this place of Isaiah, vers. 23. I have sworn by my self, the Word is gone out of my Mouth in Righteousness, and shall not return; that unto me every Knee shall bow, every Tongue shall swear. And again it is quoted, Phil. 2. That to him every Knee shall bow.

Isa. 45. 23, 25.

Isa. 45. 23.

And let me yet bring the Current and Stream of other Arguments usually alledged, to prove that Christ is God, into the Channel of the last-cited Scriptures: You have heard it argued, that Christ is therefore God, because he creates and is worshipp'd, and forgives Sins. And the Scriptures are express, that God alone creates, is worshipped, and forgives Sins.

1. For Creation; these places are express, Isa. 44. 24. Thus saith the Lord thy Redeemer, and he that formed thee from the Womb; I am the Lord that maketh all Things, that stretcheth forth the Heavens alone, that spreadeth abroad the Earth by my self. And Jer. 10. 10, 11, 12. But the Lord is the True God, he is the Living God, and an Everlasting King: at his Wrath the Earth shall tremble, and the Nations shall not be able to abide his Indignation: Thus shall ye say unto them, The Gods that have not made the Heavens, and the Earth, even they shall perish from the Earth, and from under these Heavens. He hath made the Earth by his Power, he hath established the World by his Wisdom, and hath stretched out the Heavens by his Discretion. Now it is not only elsewhere said, That Christ created All, John 1. 1, 2. Heb. 1. and therefore is God; But further, in these very places where he is called that only God; even in these Places quoted, He is said to be that God who alone created; thus Isa. 43. 7, 11, 23. Isa. 44. 6, 24. Isa. 45. 5, 22, 23, 24.

2. Again, so of God alone it is made the Prerogative to be worshipped, Rev. 22. 9. Mat. 4. 10. out of Deut. 6. 5, 6. where also he is called one God: And of Christ it is also else-where said, he is to be worshipped. But further, you have both these in these very places also; wherein, as he is stiled, that God that is one, and none besides him; He is brought in swearing by himself, that every Knee shall bow to him; which is applied to him.

3. So

Titus. And this is at once proclaimed as the general Faith of all Believers, and Apoſtles: 2 Pet. 1. 1. Like Faith with us: And what is the Object of it? ἐν δικαιοσύνῃ, on the Righteouſneſs. I have wondred they ſhould tranſlate it, through the Righteouſneſs: When Chriſt's Righteouſneſs is every where made the Object of Faith, as juſtifying, on which we believe. Yea, as that which out of Neneceſſity to Salvation, Faith relies on; and that Righteouſneſs, as of a Saviour that is God, which were of no value to us Sinners elſe: Let them elſe take Saviour and Righteouſneſs that will, for he nor it would do no Man any good: This was the general Expectation, as Paul to Titus, the general fundamental Faith of all Chriſtians then, as in Peter: And ſo the Prophet's ſtile, and the Apoſtle's ſtile, agrees: Iſaiah, in his 40, 43, & 45 Chapters, ſtiles him, The God and Saviour, and there is none beſides him: And the Apoſtles in like manner, The great God and Saviour.

5. If you yet doubt: Lo! to put all out of Queſtion, he is ſtiled, the only True God: The other, and the greateſt Objection that ever was, or can be made againſt this Godhead of Chriſt, is, That it is ſaid there is but one God only: Yea, and the Father is ſo ſtiled, and called, John 17. 3. And this is Life Eternal, that they might know Thee the only True God, and Jeſus Chriſt whom thou haſt ſent. And I find in ſome Men's late Writings here at home, them diſtinguiſhing thus: That take the Godhead ſimply in its Unity, and ſo conſidered, it is only the Father, quoting all thoſe places, there is none beſides: And the Son they make to be, either God, as united to Man, and ſo in that reſpect becoming the Son, or the Manifeſtation of God in Fleſh; or, at beſt, but that in God which contained the Maſs, and Spirit of the whole Creation as it was in God from Everlaſting; and ſo diſtinct from the Nature of God, as purely in himſelf. 3. So

BOOK II.

3. So to forgive Sins, is proper to God alone, Mark 2. 7. And we find Chriſt to forgive Sins; and therefore he is argued to be God: But further, you have both in theſe very places quoted; as he is called that only True God, ſo he is ſaid to be that God that blots out Tranſgreſſions for,and by himſelf; Thus *Iſa.*43. 25. I, even I am he that blotteth out thy Tranſgreſſions for mine own ſake, and will not remember thy Sins. So then the Argument is every way ſtrong; and indeed all Arguments center in one; and we find all in this one and the ſame compaſs of Scripture.

1. That God is but one God.
2. That God alone creates; is to be worſhipped; and forgives Sins.
3. That his Glory he will not give unto another.
4. That Chriſt is that one God, who is God alone. And,
5. Theſe places are interpreted of him, and applied to him, by the Apoſtles: So as indeed this one Argument, from theſe places of Iſaiah thus framed, hath all in it, which are ſcatteredly uſed by others out of ſeveral places. To conclude, to hear God ſpeak, and ſaying, as Deut. 32. 39. He doth, See now that I, even I am he, and there is no God with me: I kill, and I make alive; I wound, and I heal; neither is there any that can deliver out of my Hand. And to hear John from God to ſay, The Word was God, and the Word was with God. And to hear the Prophets ſay, That Chriſt is that God who is God alone, and none elſe beſides him: And to hear throughout the Scriptures, one that is God, talking to, of, and with another that is God, and yet all but one God; to hear the Father to be called the only True God, the Son likewiſe, and ſo the Spirit: Let all the Wits of Men, and Angels, reconcile it otherwiſe than thus if they can; That God's Nature or Eſſence is One, but affords Three Perſons, who are each that One God: Three that are One.

CHAP.

CHAP. V.

That the Second Person of the Trinity assumed Humane Nature into Personal Union with Himself, and so is God-Man in one Person for ever.

I Come to the great Mystery of our Religion, which so loud a Voice proclaims to be such, by the Apostle, 1 Tim. 3. 16. And without controversy, great is the Mystery of Godliness, God was manifest in the Flesh. God had manifested himself in the Old Testament in his Works; as in Rom. 1. 19. That which may be known of God, is manifest in them: And vers. 20. For the Invisible Things of him from the Creation of the World are clearly seen, being understood by the Things that are made, even his Eternal Power and Godhead. But God manifest in the flesh, is an higher kind of Manifestation, for there he is present: We may say of it, Here God is, a visible God in his Person. In the Old Testament this was prophesied of, among other famous Oracles foregoing, Isa. 7. 14. A Virgin shall conceive, and bear a Son, and shall call his Name Immanuel; that is, God with us. And again, Chap. 9. 6. For unto us a Child is born, unto us a Son is given, which notes his Being God, the Son; who had been begotten long before by God the Father, and now given, unto us a Child is born, and born of a Virgin, there is his Humane Nature; And his Name shall be called WONDERFUL; for his Person is a wonderful Person: The Mighty God, the Everlasting Father, the Prince of Peace, compounded of God and Man in one Person; which set all the World agast at the knowledg of it. He did wonderously; that is, he shewed himself to be God, for he ascended into Heaven in a Flame, and therein shewed himself more than a Man or Angel. As his Person was Wonderful, so his Actions; Wonderful in his Person, as God united to Man; and wonderful as Man, in his making immediately by the Holy Ghost; such a Man as never was. Says David, of his own Body, Psal. 139. 14.——Thou tellest all my Members; I am fearfully and wonderfully made.——Curiously wrought in the lowest parts of the Earth: The Phrases do speak some curious piece of Workmanship to be undertaken in hand, by some special Artist: And to hide his Workmanship from the Vulgar, (which argues the nobleness of it) he goes into a dark Place, and there he works it unbeheld of any, and then he brings it forth to open view. It was an Instance Doctor Preston used to give, That in the Generation of a Child, between Father and Mother, the Father knows not what is a doing, nor the Mother knows not what is doing; but God stands by, like a secret Limner, and actuates the formation of every Member, according to the Idea thereof written in his Book. But in the Formation of Christ's Body and Soul, the Holy Ghost discovered his Workmanship in the dark place of the Virgin's Womb, called, the lower parts of the Earth. And to stop the flowings of Sin and Corruption, which by the Parents is done, himself performed the part of the Formative Virtue which is in the Seed of Men: whence it was, that the Divine Nature, when he came into the World, said, A Body hast thou prepared me; the word in the Original is, Kartartizein, that is, articulated, made and set in their due Place and Order.

I shall only add one place further, to set forth the wonder of the Mystery; Jer. 31. 22. The Lord hath created a New Thing in the Earth, a Woman shall compass a Man. It is a Prophecy of the Conception of Christ at Nazareth, one of the Cities of Galilee, the place where the Angel brought news first to the Virgin, and where she conceived him: Of which, if I have time, more afterwards. This was a New Thing indeed, a New Thing created in the World; the like unto which, as also the crucifying of his Son, he never did afore, nor never will

As Dr. Jackson hath learnedly proved in his Sermon, called, Bethlehem and Nazareth.

Book II. will do again. And the Bleſſed Virgin hath a touch upon it, The Lord hath done GREAT THINGS for me, and Holy is his Name. The word in the Original is μεγαλεῖα, and is the ſame word the Apoſtles uſed in Acts 2. 11. The wonderful Works of God.

And thus Heaven and Earth met and kiſſed one another, namely, God and Man. And this Union is the middle Union, (as I call it) as in reſpect to the two other, the Union of the Three Perſons in one Godhead, and our Union with God; ſo in reſpect to the thing it ſelf: For his Perſon being a middle Perſon between the two Perſons, the Father and the Holy Ghoſt: He, the Son, as a middle Perſon, by his Union with the Eſſence of God, takes hold of God on the one part; and further, by his Union with the Nature of Man, takes hold of Man on the other part, and ſo takes hold of both at once; all which was ſuitable to his Office, as being Mediator, which the Apoſtle ſays, is of two that are at enmity: and this you have 1 Tim. 2. 5. For there is one God, and one Mediator between God and Man, the Man Chriſt Jeſus. Gal. 3.

And as the Perſon was thus wonderful, God manifeſted in the Fleſh; ſo the Signs and Wonders that accompanied and followed his Perſon, after his being gone to Heaven, and the coming of the Holy Ghoſt, as Paul an Eye-witneſs teſtifies, Heb. 2. 4. God alſo bearing them witneſs, both with Signs and Wonders, and with divers Miracles and Gifts of the Holy Ghoſt, according to his own Will: As alſo the Apoſtle Peter, 1 Pet. 1. 11.—The Spirit of Chriſt teſtified before-hand the Sufferings of Chriſt, and the Glory that ſhould follow. The Times the Apoſtles lived in, were a glorious Seaſon. The Apoſtle Paul hath in brief ſummed up the Characters of them, and annexed them to his [God manifeſted in the Fleſh] as the wonderful Effects thereof; as they follow in 1 Tim. 3. 16. where it follows, Juſtified in the Spirit, by reaſon of the frailty and meanneſs of his Fleſh wherein he appeared; He was ſet at nought by Herod and his Men of War, Luke 23. 11. Mocked and ſcourged by Pilate and the Jews, and for his pretenſion to be the Son of God, caſt out of the World under the publick infamy of being the greateſt Impoſtor, the moſt deteſtable Villain and Deceiver that ever was in the World; The Rulers not ſparing him, when he hung miſerably upon the Croſs. He was eſteemed of God, Iſa. 53. when he was crucified, overwhelmed with all theſe Prejudices. But preſently, as he comes to Heaven, his Father owned him, ſet him at his right Hand, and made his Enemies his Foot-ſtool; and he was juſtified from that great Reproach caſt upon him, for making himſelf God. In reſpect unto theſe things, it is ſaid, He was juſtified in the Spirit; that is, in his Godhead, being owned as God. Was not this a Wonder, a mighty Wonder! [Seen of Angels]. And by their ſeeing him to be the Son, (which none of them were) as ſoon as he comes to Heaven, they all fall down and worſhip him: When he bringeth his firſt begotten into the World, he ſaith, Let all the Angels of God worſhip him, when he came firſt to Heaven: (And the bad Angels, they believed and trembled, though Men did not; and they beſought him, not to torment them before the time, the Day of Judgment.) It follows, [Preached unto the Gentiles, and believed on in the World]. The Gentiles that had continued Idolaters two thouſand Years, worſhipping Devils, by whom they were led; and the Apoſtles but by preaching the Goſpel, (which was but whiſpered, and yet runs through all the World; it ran like Wild-fire upon dried Trees); They turned the World up-ſide down, Act. 17. 6. [Taken up into Glory] and owned there in the higheſt manner by God. Whereas, John 16. 10. the contrary Speech there uſed inſinuates, that he died, as caſt out by God for the moſt unrighteous Perſon that ever lived in the World: Chriſt foretells, that by the Spirit's coming with the Word, he ſhould convince the World, that he was a Righteous Man, and had ſatisfied for Sin; Of Righteouſneſs, becauſe I go to my Father, and ye ſee me no more. And what is the Reaſon of all this? But becauſe this Man being taken up into Glory, there is no Eye of Men or Angels that ſhall ſee him in this Glory, but muſt fall down and acknowledg, That Man there is God, the Son of God; and ſo John tells us himſelf: And the other Apoſtles that ſaw a glymps of his Glory, do confeſs, We ſaw his Glory, as of the only begotten Son of God, John 1. 14. And if the Clothes he wore, which were but the outward Appendixes of his Perſon, did yet shine so bright, as no Fuller on Earth could white them: How much more his Humane Nature it self, in which the fulness of the Godhead personally dwells, shall transcendently shine much more, as being a part of himself, as he is able to make us to do; Phil. 3. 21. Who shall change our vile Body, that it may be fashioned like unto his glorious Body; much more shall he change Soul and Body into the Image of himself. Chap.

But I shall comprize, all that I intend to discourse of this Subject, in this one Assertion.

That this Person, the Eternal Son of God, who was, and is God, took unto himself, into an unity of Person with himself, the Man Jesus; or that the Person of Christ is God and Man, joined into one Person.

To demonstrate the Assertion; the Punctum of which lies in this, That in our Christ, God and Man are become one Person.

1. What is said of his Conception, or Incarnation, in that fore-cited place, Luke 1. 39. That Holy Thing that shall be born of thee, shall be called the Son of God; which is explained by that in Gal. 4. 4. God sent forth his Son, (his Son that was sent, and God, existed afore); and 'twas He, the Son, that so existed; that is, the Person; and he now said to be made of a Woman, the Virgin. Observe, 'tis spoken of, and attributed to, this Son, that he was now made of a Woman, made Man; who was begotten of God afore, and now sent into, yea made, Flesh: And that this Son, and that Man made of a Woman, are yet but one Son still, not two Sons: And therefore also one Person; for if they had been two Persons, they had been two Sons; the Son of God the one, and that Holy Thing born of the Woman, another: Whereas being now joined unto one Person, there is but one Son to God, as he is there denominated.

2. Evidence: Go we from his Conception, to the constant course and tenour of his Speech about himself; That this Man (when grown up) should continually talk of himself, and attribute such Things to himself, that were proper, and belonged only to that Person, the Word, the only begotten Son of God; as we have proved, and described him, existed before the World; that was the Son of God in Heaven, and very God; That this Man, this sorry Man to see to, should talk at that rate as he doth, and still say [I] not [We], whilst he so speaks of himself; all the Wits in the World cannot salve this Riddle, (if the several Speeches be collected, and narrowly observed, in the Gospel of John, and elsewhere) but by this, which I use to say salves all, He was taken into one Person with him that was the Son of God.

For Instance, besides many others; John 5. 17. My Father hitherto worketh, and I work: Which the Jews understood, that he made himself equal with God, vers. 18. But how a Man should be God, this they understood not. And he goes on to justify it, and assume it; extending that Speech of his (namely, that My Father worketh hitherto, and I work) unto all things past, as well as present, or to come: even unto all that ever God did, vers. 19. What things soever the Father doth, these also doth the Son likewise: If he created the World, so did I: If he hath governed all the Affairs of it, so have I; My Hands have wielded the Scepter with him: And God did never any thing without my Advice, and Counsel: Shewing me whatever he doth, vers. 20. Thus for time past. And so for time to come; As the Father raiseth up the dead, and quickneth them; so the Son quickneth whom he will, vers. 21. God's Will and Intention being, that all Men shall one Day honour the Son, as they honour the Father, vers. 23. And yet he that talk'd all this, was a Man; that came into the World (as a Man) but thirty Years afore: Yea, and he professeth of himself, Chap. 8. 57, 58. That he was afore Abraham; Before Abraham was, I am: that is, my Person. And yet they judg'd him not above Fifty. All which I alledg not as formerly, to prove that Christ was God, or Son of God: But now, That the Man Jesus, (who it is that uttered all this;) that he was one Person with that Son of God, who is God. For when he speaks it, he still maketh but one [I;] of the Son of God, and himself. And speaks the same things that are proper and peculiar to that Son of God, who had afore exiſted: The Man (I ſay) ſpeaks them of himſelf, utters them in his own Name, without any Limitation, or Caution, for being miſtaken: He, this Man, doth thereby diſtinguiſh himſelf from all his Fellow-Creatures. Theſe things were ſo ſtupendouſly ſtrange, that they made the carnal Jew wild, and mad, and in a rage, and to cry out upon him, that he blaſphemed; and ever and anon to take up Stones to ſtone him withal: and although they had believed that he was the Meſſiah, whom they expected; yet ſuch things as theſe they never could have imagined ſhould have agreed to the Perſon of Chriſt, whom they expected: They judg'd he took upon him infinitely, beyond the Elevation, and Proportion of the Meſſiah himſelf. And therefore, John 10. 24. They having only at firſt ask'd him ſomewhat ſeriouſly, Tell us plainly if thou be the Chriſt: And he as plainly tells them ſo, that he was: yet frames his Anſwer up in ſuch deſcription of himſelf, as the Chriſt, that he was one with God; as that thereupon, the next Word he hears from them, is, Thou blaſphemeſt, verſ. 33.

Yea, and in the 6th Chapter, thoſe that were his Diſciples; that is, ſuch as were a coming on to believe on him, were for ſuch ſtrange Riddles as theſe, utterly put of: as John 6. 61. And yet there, or unto them, ſuch was his Zeal, to aſſert this his Perſonal Union between the Son of God, and that Man Jeſus, whoſe Mouth was the utterer of it; that he ſpeaks yet more ſtrangely, Doth this offend you? What if you ſee the Son of Man aſcend where he was before? And there is no other Foundation, or Ground for ſuch a Speech as that; no other reſpect could bear it, but this his Perſonal Union, as the reaſon of it; Why we know his Mother, and Brethren, ſay they: And where then could this Man be before? Nay, to encreaſe the Wonder yet more, he had ſaid to Nicodemus, John 3. 13. And no Man hath aſcended up to Heaven, but he that came down from Heaven, even the Son of Man which is in Heaven: that is, who is now in Heaven at this preſent. When as yet they ſaw him as a Man, circumſcribed with local Bounds on Earth, even as any other Man is, within the Verge of a poor ſeamleſs Coat. And theſe things he ſo ſpeaks of himſelf, in diſtinction from the whole Creation of God, as proper, and peculiar to him; laying them therein in a rank infinitely below himſelf: yea alſo as one equal to God his Father; and, as ſuch, diſtinct from him; and yet is a Son of Man that utters it. Although conſider him as meer Man, it could not be he ſhould have ſo ſpoken; the Things ſaid, will not bear ſuch Words. And it is among other Demonſtrations of this Truth, and alſo was one of the main Ends of God's ordaining this Perſonal Union, to declare; to the End, that Men might hear with their Ears, and ſee with their Eyes, (as John,) the Original diſtinction of the Father, and his Son, as diſtinct Perſons in the Deity: which was that which was, and had been, among the Perſons from Eternity, afore Chriſt took our Nature, in that it was confidently held forth by a Man, who being become one Perſon with the Son, could, and durſt ſay, and appeal to his Works, to juſtify it; which were ſo ſtupendouſly miraculous, that his Father (afore whom, and to his Face he ſpeaks it all) muſt be acknowledged to have concurred with him in; and ſo thereby teſtified that he ſpake Truth in this: whilſt yet this Man utters it in the Name of a Perſon that was not meer Man, but alſo God, Son of God. For this Man doth before, and after, upon this Doctrine of his, work his Miracles; ſuch, as no meer Man ever did: and God ſuffered him ſo to talk, did bear it, and let him go on, and aſſiſt him therein, or elſe he could not have done them. As John 10. 37, 38. If I do not the Works of my Father, believe me not; But if I do, though ye believe not me, believe the Works; that ye may know, and believe that the Father is in me, and I in him. And when he had done all theſe things, to aſcend up to Heaven, and ſit down at God's right Hand; this, I ſay, is at once a Confirmation of theſe two, the greateſt Truths:

1. The diſtinction of the Perſons of the Father, and the Son, though one God. As alſo,

2. That this ſorry Man that ſpeaks it, was one in Perſon with the Son of God: And if there had been no other End of this Incarnation of Perſonal Union, than to declare and manifeſt the firſt of theſe, it had been worth it; which by ſo great an Evidence could never have been manifeſted.

And

And then, if this Man were not one in Person with the Son of God, who was God; let us all call him in Question, and arraign him at the latter day, instead of his arraigning us; for laying low to himself all the Saints, and the whole Creation of God; when as himself as Man was but a part of it: yea for usurping upon the Prerogatives of God himself, and let his own Words judg him. I say, let us cry out upon him as a Deceiver, if this Man had not that Divine Person, God's Son in him, and therewith a Divine Nature, besides that of a bare Man, which Divinity lay hid and concealed in him, as a Prince under a disguise; And that Person, and Divinity so united to him, as to make one Person with him, this Man that spake thus.

Thirdly, We find these two Natures of God, and Man, spoken of in him, as making up one [I] or one [He;] when himself speaks of himself, or his Apostles of him.

I begin with Matthew 16. where he catechiseth his Disciples in this Fundamental of Religion; for vers. 17, 18. he professeth to found his Church upon the Profession of it. 1. The Question ask'd, is evidently what his Person was, and of what made up? This, his second Question, vers. 15. Whom do ye say that I am? doth directly point to, for their punctual Answer: What, or who is my Person? And, 2. concerning that, you may observe, that he bounds it not, he terminates it not, upon his being a Man: The main Question is not, whether he was a Man or no? or the Christ, the Son of Man? as if that were all: But my Question reacheth farther, Whom do ye say that I, who am the Son of Man, Am? over and beyond my being a Son of Man, I am something besides. And yet, Son of Man imported the Messiah: as Cameron upon Joh. 5. 27. And hath given him Authority to execute Judgment also, because he is the Son of Man. Out of Dan. 7.13. I beheld one like the Son of Man. Which is the Pariphrasis of the Christ.

3. Peter, in his Answer for them all, affirms not barely that he, the Son of Man, was the Christ; which was but a Name of Office: (As if you should say of a Man, he is the King, or he is the Chancellour; noting out an Official Person, or to denominate his Office only.) But he further adds, Thou art the Son of the Living God.

4. Observe, that he in his Answer joins these two together, to make up the [I,] the Person of this Christ, The Son of Man, and the Son of the Living God: and as substantially the Son of the Living God, as he was substantially the Son of Man. Yea, and manifestly shewing that the main of his Person, (for the Subsistence or Personality of it,) to consist in this, his being the Son of the Living God, more than in his being the Son of Man. The like you have joined in Christ's Question to the Pharisees; What think you of the Christ? David's Son, say they; David's Lord, says he: and both making up one Messiah, or the Christ. So then, the Person of Christ was Son of Man, and Son of God, *Mat.*16. And Son of David, and Son of one greater than David: for which he calls him Lord, and both in one Person, Mat. 22. Let us now bring other Scriptures to these. 1. You have the same propheseid of him, at his Conception, by the Angel, Luk. 1. The Son of David his Father, vers. 32. The Son of God, vers. 35. And both the same He. Let us still pursue this Notion, through the Scriptures, and from hence, go unto Rom. 1. 2, 3, 4. Paul a Servant of Jesus Christ, called to be an Apostle, separated unto the Gospel of God, (Which he had promised afore by his Prophets, in the Holy Scriptures) Concerning his Son Jesus Christ our Lord, who was made of the Seed of David, according to the Flesh: And declared to be the Son of God with Power, according to the Spirit of Holiness, by the Resurrection from the dead. In which Words you have,

1. As in the former, the Person of Christ: that is, who, and what he was in his Person, made the eminent, and primary Subject of the Gospel: The Gospel, (says he) concerning his Son Jesus Christ. And that set forth as the Prophets in the Holy Scriptures, or Writings of the Old Testament had set him forth to us: so as we shall have occasion from hence to call in the Testimony of some Prophets, unto the confirmation of this also. I say, the Person of Christ is the primary subject of it: for the next following Words, insist on the Description thereof. And so whereas Paul was to set forth in his ensuing ſuing Diſcourſe, how that Chriſt's Righteouſneſs is that Righteouſneſs which God hath ordained for Sinners, verſ. 16, 17. I am not aſhamed of the Goſpel of Chriſt, for therein is revealed the Righteouſneſs of God, from Faith to Faith: As it is written, The Juſt ſhall live by Faith. It was ſuitable for him in this ſo methodical, and ſyſtematical an Epiſtle; in the firſt place to ſet out who, and what the Perſon of Chriſt is. Which,

2. He performs in the next Words, and that under the ſame Terms, or equivalent, as in the two former Chriſt himſelf had done. 1. To be the Son of David, made of the Seed of David, verſ. 3. And, 2. To be the Son of God, verſ. 3. [His Son] in the ſame Verſe. And ſo in verſ. 4. both making up this one Perſon, Jeſus Chriſt our Lord.

Yea, and 3. He further, and more clearly proceeds to ſhew, how there were two diſtinct Natures met in that one Perſon; the Nature of a Man, according unto which he was the Son of David: the Nature of God, or the God-head, according unto which, or in reſpect of which, he was the Son of God: Who was made of the Seed of David, according to the Fleſh, verſ. 3. And declared to be (alſo) the Son of God with Power, according to the Spirit of Holineſs. And as the Oppoſition proves this, ſo it is very obſervable, how exactly the Apoſtle ſpeaks in ſo great a Myſtery. 1. The Oppoſition clears it; for κατὰ σάρκα, According to the Fleſh, is oppoſed to κατὰ πνεῦμα, according to the Spirit of Holineſs. Now when he ſays, He was of the Seed of David, according to the Fleſh; he (as all acknowledg) means that according to, or in reſpect of his Human Nature, termed the Fleſh, or as Man: So here, was made of the Seed of David, oppoſitely, according to his God-head, termed the Spirit of Holineſs; as he was in reſpect thereof, the natural Son of God: ſo he was manifeſted with Power ſo to be, by the Reſurrection from the Dead. Now that Spirit, as in Chriſt, is taken for the God-head, or Divine Nature dwelling in him; is evident by multitude of Scriptures: The Fleſh profits nothing, the Spirit quickneth: And by the Eternal Spirit he offered up himſelf, Heb. 7. And this God-head in him, is called the Spirit of Holineſs; by way of the ordinary Title given the third Perſon, who is called the Holy Spirit: This here, the Spirit of Holineſs it ſelf, which ſanctified that Human Nature, as the Altar and Temple did the Sacrifice.

See Extra.

Again, Obſerve the Apoſtle's exactneſs of Speech; as Son of David he is ſaid to have been made, for begotten of Man he was not, yet made of a Woman, David's Daughter, of the ſame Matter that all Men are formed of: But as Son of God, he ſays not of him that he was made; but he here ſuppoſeth him already, before he was made Man, to have been the Son of God, verſ. 3. And therefore, ſays only he was declared; namely to us, or manifeſtly evidenced to have been the Son of God, according to a Divine Nature in him, in which he exiſted before. And for proof of it, he holds forth the greateſt Evidence, the Power ſhewn by him, in his Reſurrection from the Dead: In that Chriſt did aforehand profeſs, and declare that he would raiſe himſelf up, by his own Power, Joh. 10. 18.

The fourth thing I obſerve, is; That theſe two Natures remain in themſelves diſtinct in him, and yet both make up one Perſon. 1. Two Natures diſtinct. The Apoſtle doth profeſſedly diſtinguiſh, as any Schoolman uſeth to do; According to the Fleſh, ſays he, and according to the Spirit: Yea, he denies concerning him, that he is Son of God according to the Fleſh; according to which Nature he is conſidered only as the Son of David: but Son of God only in reſpect of his Divine Nature. And, 2. He ſpeaks of him as one Perſon, that hath both theſe, and conſiſted of both; or elſe this diſtinction needed not have been uſed: If he had been either nothing but a Man, or if the ſame Perſon had not been both God and Man. As when you diſtinguiſh of a Man, that quoad Animam, according to his Soul he is the Off-ſpring of God; for God is the Father of Spirits: but quoad Corpus, according to his Body he is begotten by Man, who are the Fathers of our Bodies: To ſay a Man is Mortal quoad Corpus, but Immortal quoad Animam: Such a diſtinction were needleſs, if a Man had not both a Body, and a Soul: Or if that Body, and Soul, made not up one manner of Perſon: Or if the Soul were one Perſon, as an Angel is, and the Body another.

Acts 17. Heb. 12.

Now

Chap. 5.

Now the Person of Christ is still every-where spoken of, but as One: One Lord, 1 Cor. 6. And yet of this the Apostle Paul is found to distingiush, that he is Son of God, according to the Spirit; Son of David, according to the Flesh: And you have it again used by Peter, Acts 2. 30. David knowing that of the Fruit of his Loins, according to the Flesh, God would raise up Christ: That Addition [According to the Flesh] needed not, if Christ had not consisted of another Nature besides. Which being distinct, the Oneness, the Unity of this Christ, to whom both are alike attributed, must be found in the Personality: That he that hath both these, is one Person.

Now from hence, go unto Rom. 9. 5. Where you have the same distinction again used, as in manifest Opposition to his Divine Nature; Whose are the Fathers, and of whom as concerning the Flesh, Christ came; who is over all, God blessed for ever. Amen. According to the Flesh, he was of David, and the rest of the Fathers; but besides, he had another Nature, which made him Lord over all, God blessed for ever. Which clearly interprets, Rom. 1. 3. Son of God, according to the Spirit of Holiness: That as he was God's Son, so he was God. Or as Rom. 1. Son of God, according to his God-head; even as Son of David according to the Flesh: Yet both making but one Atho, or Person, one Christ.

Now, 4. Because Paul, in that Rom. 1. 2. averred the Prophets for this composition of his Person, Son of David, according to the Flesh; Son of God, according to, or in respect of his God-head. Let us see if we find like, and similar places to these in the Prophets; not to name all that prove him to be God, and Man: but such as are punctually correspondent to these. Jer. 23. 5, 6. 1. Son of David, vers. 5. Behold, the Days come that I will raise unto David a righteous Branch: that is, out of his Loins, a Branch out of that Stock, or Root. Who, 2. Shall be God, and Son of God: (as Rom. 9. 5. Rom. 1. 3.) vers. 6. And this is his Name, whereby he shall be called; Jehovah our Righteousness. Jehovah, from the Name of his Essence, for it is the incommunicable Name of God; and our Righteousness, as being Mediator, and noting forth his Office. And yet Jehovah our Righteousness, rather than the Man our Righteousness; for his being our Righteousness, depends more upon his being Jehovah, than his being a Branch of David; although upon both, as they are conjoined in one Person.

From thence, let us go to Micah 5. 2. Where we shall find, that as Christ hath two Natures met in him, Son of David, Son of God; so two Nativities spoken of, and yet the Person but one. 1. The Ruler shall come forth of Bethlehem: He was born there as Man; and you know it was the City of David, whither Mary, as being of the Seed of David, came to be taxed. So then, still Son of David, according to the Flesh, and born as such in the four thousand Year of the World: But then, as Son of God, His goings forth have been from of old, the Days of Eternity.

Unto this Head I alledg, as the concluding Proof to them foregone, that strange Riddle in Heb. 7. 3. applyed unto Christ, set forth from his Type Melchisedec, Without Father, without Mother, without Descent, having neither beginning of Days, nor end of Life, but made like unto the Son of God, abideth a Priest continually. Which being spoken of one and the same Person, Christ, can no otherwise be unfolded than by a differing respect had to the two Natures God and Man, and accordingly of two Nativities. That he was God, and in that respect had a Father, the Evangelist John doth in a special manner inculcate; that he had a Mother, the Story of his Birth, by the other three, doth enform us: That he was born of a Virgin, without a Father, those three Evangelists do tell us. And yet that Paul here should tell us, he was without a Mother, doth necessarily import another kind of Generation of his, wherein there was no Mother concurred, and so another Divine Nature met in this one Person; in respect of which he was as substantially begotten of him without a Mother, as that as Man he had been conceived of the Substance of his Mother, even Son of the Living God.

There are other sorts of Proofs of this great Truth.

As First, The Communication, and Attribution of the same Rights, Priviledges, Attributes, Actions, Passions, Infirmities.

1. All

BOOK II.

1. All the Rights of the Son of God by Inheritance, given to the Man Jesus; as that, called, Son of God; not as the Angels, Heb. 1. Luke 1. 32. He shall be great, and shall be called the Son of the Highest: And the Lord God shall give unto him the Throne of his Father David, to rule the Nations; raise whom he will; have possession of all Power in Heaven and Earth; to forgive Sins as Man, Mat. 9. 6.

2. The Attributes proper to God, are given to this Man: As, to have been in Heaven before the World was; John 3. 13. & John 17. Glorify me with that Glory I had with thee, afore the World was. Before Abraham was, I am. Whereby what is not true of that Nature alone in it self considered, is yet attributed to that Nature of a Man now: The natural Properties of Man's Nature in him, were never altered: for Finite could never become Infinite; therefore it must necessarily be spoken in a personal respect, as being made one Person with him that is God; Qui, not Qua, that is, spoken of him who is Man, not of him as Man: As when what is proper only to the Soul, is attributed to the whole Man; as if when Paul's Soul was wrapt up into the third Heaven, and his Body remaining on Earth; that of his Body it should have been said, it is now in Heaven, because the Soul it was united to, was there: Like to which is, that Christ should call his Body in the Grave, God's Holy One; His Holy One saw no Corruption; which is spoken of the whole Person, though it was his Body only was capable of Corruption: Or that of John, We saw and handled the Word of Life, 1 John 1. 1. And the Word which was from the beginning: And yet speaks there of their handling his very Body, Feel, if a Spirit have Flesh and Bones, and putting their Fingers into it, so to verify his having been come in the Flesh. On the other hand, è contra, That all the Infirmities of the Humane Nature should be attributed to God, that God should be said to be pierced and crucified; 2 Cor. 12. 10. Therefore I take pleasure in Infirmities, in Reproaches, in Necessities, in Persecutions, in Distresses for Christ's sake: for when I am weak, then am I strong: compared with vers. 8. I besought the Lord; which is applied to Christ, John 19. 37. And again, another Scripture saith, They shall look on him whom they have pierced. And God to lay down his Life, 1 John 3. 16. Hereby perceive we the Love of God, because he laid down his Life for us; and we ought to lay down our Lives for the Brethren. These Contradictions, all the Wits in the World cannot reconcile, but by acknowledging two Natures in one Person.

3. That the Obedience, yea, Blood-shed of the Man, should be called, the Blood of God, the Life of God, 1 John 3. 16. There it is called the Life of God: And Acts 20. 26. The Blood of God; yea, God's own Blood; and his active Obedience the Righteousness of God, and our Saviour Jesus Christ, 2 Pet. 1. 1. And these things were spoken, not because God was the Efficient of these in him; for so the Spirit is of our Prayers, Rom. 8. yet they are never termed the Spirit's Prayers, or Requests; though made by him in us, and for us, but our Prayers. But all that Obedience of Christ, is called God's: Which difference can never be salved, but that the Man Jesus was one Person with God; not so we: Yea, if that Man had sin'd, (if you could suppose it, as to bring an Argument from it to illustrate this); you may, by the same Law, or Reason, that his Righteousness is now called the Obedience of God, or, the Life of God, infer that it must have been termed the Sin of God: For what the Man did in weakness, is attributed to God: But we are not in this personal manner united to the Spirit, that our Weaknesses should be attributed to him. We sin, yet 'twere Blasphemy to say that our Sins are his; and all because he is not one Person with us, though his Person is united to our Persons.

Neither, 2. when that Bloodshed is called the Blood of God, yea, his own Blood; this is not spoken in respect to his being Possessor and Owner of it, as God is of all the Creatures, The Beasts on a thousand Hills are mine. John 1. He came, εἰς τὰ ἴδια, to his Own. And so the Blood of Bulls, and Goats, were God's, when sacrificed. But this is not only said to be his Blood, but his own Blood, and his own Life: These are Phrases never spoken of Possession, or of an Owner by Dominion or External Right: We call indeed other things, as Goods, a Man's own, but never call it a Man's own Blood, unless it be naturally ly or personally his own: We say not of a Slave's Body, this is the Body of his Masters, his own Body, because the Phrase, a Man's own Body, in propriety of Speech, is used another way for the Body of a Man's self as of a Person. Or if he give a Slave's Life, or Body, for a Ransom, we never say, nor can say in propriety of Speech, that the Master gave his own Body, his own Blood, as a Ransom: The Phrase so properly notes out personal propriety; that is, of a Person, unto what is a part of ones Person, and that the Blood is that Person's whose own it is called. Yea, though a Father gave a Child to Death, who yet is his Flesh and Blood, yet we hardly say he gave his own Blood; and yet if that might be said, because the same blood is naturally the Fathers: Yet of God, the Father, it could not be said, because Christ's Blood, as a Man, did not flow out of his Father's Blood; for God begets not him as a Man, nor hath he Flesh and Blood to communicate: So that it necessarily notes out, that one that was God, a Person taking up that Man into one Person with himself; that Man's Blood is therefore called God's own Blood, because the Man's, who is one Person with him. Chap. 5.

Neither, 3. is it said to be God's own Blood, because shed by God's Will and Appointment; for so the Blood of every Man, that is killed by God's Will, should be so called; and so the Blood of Bulls was God's own Blood in that respect.

Use. We must labour to have our Minds and Faith well establish'd in the true knowledg of the Person of Christ, since it is a Truth of so great moment unto us, and the Mischiefs of erring about it, will be destructive to our Souls.

And the weight or importance, that our Faith be set and kept right in this Point, appears, in that Errors and Mistakes herein, as they have been frequent, so fatal in all Ages, and to all sorts of Men that have had the knowledg or hearsay of our Christ.

1. To the Jews, Christ was a Stumbling-block, 1 Cor. 1. 23. both in what his Person should be, as appears John 10. 33. and in other places; as also that his Righteousness alone, through Faith, should be the Righteousness of a Sinner, is in like manner said to be a stumbling-block, Rom. 9. ult. Their Heads were mightily then taken up, and busied, who that Man Jesus should be; and how many various Opinions did the Devils buz into their Minds, to divert them from that which was the Truth, and alone was to save them. Some said he was John the Baptist, some Elias, others Jeremias, or one of the Prophets. And thus it is now at this Day. The Jews, according to the Principles and Phancies of that Age, had those forementioned several Opinions of him, and perhaps many more. And in this Age, according to other Principles which Satan possesseth Men's Brains withal, several Opinions are raised up, what this Christ should be, whilst all are zealous to profess him.

Then again Christ himself foretold it, as a fore-running Sign of the destruction of Jerusalem; That the Jews having rejected him the True Christ, they should be given up to many, φαινομενὰ, false Christs. Now those Days, and the Occurrences thereof, afore Jerusalem's destruction, are made Types of the like to fall out (even in this particular Point) in the Days preceding the end of the World, (whereof Jerusalem's destruction was it self a Type in Christ's Intention in that Chapter): And accordingly these days now. Although Jesus at Jerusalem is more generally acknowledged by almost all that profess Christianity, yet in assigning what and wherein his being Christ consists; herein Men have, and shall run into as many several sorts of Christs, as the Jews had done; One saying, Here is Christ; another, There is Christ; one, that this is Christ; another, this.

And such buddings and sproutings forth of such Errors, began in those first Times, whilst Paul and other Apostles were on Earth, amongst those that pretended to Christian Profession: Witness those more than Hints in several Epistles, which Paul plainly stileth, the preaching of another Christ, than what himself and the other Apostles had preached: What else meaneth that passage, 2 Cor. 11. 2, 3, 4. For I am jealous over you with a godly jealousie; for I have espoused you to one Husband, that I may present you as a chaste Virgin unto Christ. But I fear lest by any means, as the Serpent beguiled Eve through his ſubtilty, ſo your Minds ſhould be corrupted from the ſimplicity that is in Chriſt. For if he that cometh, preacheth another Jeſus, whom we have not preached, or if ye receive another Spirit, which ye have not received, or another Goſpel, which ye have not accepted, ye might well bear with him. That in theſe Paſſages he glanceth at ſome falſe Teachers that had come in among them, as thoſe words, verſ. 4. If he that cometh to you preach, &c. evidently imply, That at leaſt ſuch were then abroad in the World, and have been in other Churches, and were ready to come to theirs, which Paul was afraid of. But more plain and directly, verſ. 13, 14, 15. For ſuch are falſe Apoſtles, deceitful Workers, transforming themſelves into the Apoſtles of Chriſt. And no marvel, for Satan himſelf is transformed into an Angel of Light. Therefore it is no great Thing, if his Miniſters alſo be transformed as the Miniſters of Righteouſneſs, whoſe end ſhall be according to their Works. And theſe Expreſſions do import, that the Doctrines which theſe had vented concerning Chriſt, were framed and raiſed up to ſo high an appearance of Spiritualneſs, as were not only apt to take with Believers, and deceive them, as verſ. 3. which made Paul ſo jealous over them, verſ. 2. but further, they ſeemed ſo Angelical and Seraphick, that in theſe, if ever in any (his Depths, as they are called) Satan had ſhewed his Depths, and had play'd the Counterfeit of an Angel of Light, and transformed himſelf thereinto in his Inventions of them. And when yet, as Paul plainly tells them, that it was but a Counterfeit Chriſt, another Jeſus than he had preached, another Spirit, and another Goſpel. So as the Chriſt which theſe falſe Apoſtles had dreſt up, had ſo high an appearance of Chriſt's Spirit and Goſpel, as ſeemed to vie with that true Jeſus, &c. which the Apoſtles taught for Glory and Spiritual Excellencies. And this alſo, that new form of an Oath, which the Apoſtle uſeth upon that coherence, verſ. 10. a new one framed to this occaſion, as the Truth of Chriſt is in me, ſays he, &c. which he ſpeaks to import, that in thoſe other Teachers there was a falſe Chriſt, and not the True. And to affect the Corinthians the more, and arm them with warineſs againſt, and ſhew them the danger of entertaining any new Doctrines about Chriſt's Perſon, he preſenteth and enforceth the moment hereof, under the ſimilitude of Marriage, I am jealous over you with godly Jealouſie, (the ſubject which Jealouſie is encreaſed about, is fear of what may riſe to the breach of the Marriage-Knot) leſt you ſhould entertain the embraces of another; and ſo it follows, For I have eſpouſed you to one Husband, and I would preſent you a chaſte Virgin to him; that is, to Chriſt, to whom as yet you are but eſpouſed. And it is as if he had ſaid, There is but one Spiritual Husband, and there can be but one, your only Husband Chriſt. It is not as in the Caſe of other Marriages, if you have not ſuch a Man, you may have another as good, yea perhaps a better. But if you miſtake here in obtaining this one only-one for your Husband, you are undone. There can be no greater Errors committed in Marriage, than Error Perſonæ, a miſtake of the Perſon you are to marry; and when thinking you marry ſuch a Man, you marry another. Yea, and if after Marriage to one Husband, you ſhould be deceived, as many Women (as Stories and Experience ſhew) have been, when their Huſbands have been long abſent and out of ſight; others that have had ſome reſemblance of their true Huſband, or ſome privy Mark of him, have put themſelves upon their Wives, and they entertained their Embraces; How fatal a thing is this? But I fear, ſays he, verſ. 3. leſt by any means, as the Serpent beguiled Eve through his ſubtilty; ſo your Minds ſhould be corrupted from the ſimplicity that is in Chriſt. The Devil hath a ſpecial malice at the Perſon of Chriſt, of all other Truths concerning him; and to put this high abuſe upon him, ſpecially goes about to deceive his Spouſe in his Perſon, to miſrepreſent him and deform him; yea, and if poſſibly he can effect it, put this trick upon him, and great impoſture on her, that ſhe ſhould take another Jeſus for him; the Devil's Jeſus inſtead of God's. And to effect this of all other, he will uſe his utmoſt ſubtilty. And having been himſelf an Angel of Light, he will transform himſelf in pretended Manifeſtations, and Incomes, and Raviſhments of Spirit, that ſhall accompany the Entertainment and Embraces of his Chriſt. He will uſe all means (if by any means, ſays Paul) to ſecond, credit, and help forward this new Match.

And

Chap. 5.

And one great occasion of their aptness to be deceived, is the simplicity that is in the Person of our Christ; not only in his humane Nature, a Carpenter's Son, a crucified Man, a Christ in Flesh, but that when besides for his Divine Nature, they think they have heard and known already well enough what God's Nature is, by what is said of him in the Old Testament, and so in the Father, and to know but the same over again in Christ; this is no great addition to their knowledg. And that no other thing can be affirmed of him, but that he is God, and that to think that he should have but the same simple incompounded Nature that God hath, and not be distinct from God therein. They think they are but as wise as they were in this, and so are apt to listen after such Representations of a Christ, as shew him to be some Divine Spirit that comes out of God differing from God, which they fancy will afford matter of some new and manifold Wisdom, besides that knowledg they have of God by other means. And thus the simplicity of his Person (as they esteem this) is apt to cause them to listen after some other Story of him. Whereas the Glories and Wisdom which ariseth from that Union of God and Man in one Person, is such, as transcends all other Imaginations, though never so raised with either Angels, Men, or Devils, have or could for ever invent concerning him.

And the Deceits and Trains that Satan lays herein, he compares to those wherewith the Serpent deceived Eve, Lest as the Serpent beguiled Eve, &c. He put it into their Heads, that there was an higher Knowledg they might attain, than in that keeping to God's Law, they had already, or could attain thereby: And further, that themselves should be Gods; so seducing them from God. And thus here, there is not only a Promise of an higher and more spiritual Knowledg, than that simple Story of Christ God-Man affords. But that themselves should be Christs. And they frame such a Story of Christ, as should serve to perswade this, and their Capacity of this advance. For a Christ in Flesh, which this Man Jesus is, say they, you shall have a Christ in Spirit. For a Christ without you, that is, God substantially, you shall have, every one of you, a Christ within you: yea, and if need be, they will not stick to affirm, your selves shall be God substantially; and not be united only to God and Christ, but so united, as to exist in the form of God, and to be one and the same with God. Such or the like Workings of this Mystery of Iniquity, deforming and perverting of the true Christ into another, you find in Paul's Time amongst the Corinthians, or of which from false Teachers then gone abroad, they were in danger of.

Some thing answerable, or like to this, the Church at Colossus also were in danger of. Those Philosophical Teachers, which, Chap. 2. 8. he gives them warning of; Beware lest any Man spoil you through Philosophy, and vain Deceit, after the Tradition of Men, after the Rudiments of the World, and not after Christ. Their Doctrines perverted not only the purity of the Worship of the Gospel, but were intended to the misrepresenting the Person of Christ, as appears by many Characters; Both, 1. in that in the very next words, For in him dwelleth all the fulness of the Godhead bodily. He gives them a perfect definition or description of the Person of Christ, as in himself considered, and in his fulness to us, vers. 10. And ye are compleat in him, which is the Head of all Principality and Power. And this in a direct opposition, (as the coherence shews) unto their Philosophical Christ, which they for Wisdom and Excellency would needs compare with the Apostle's Christ. And, 2. in opposition to their Counterfeit Christ, it is, that he also sets out his Christ in all his Personal Excellencies and Fulness, the like no where in all his Epistles, Chap. 1. vers. 15, 16, 17, 18. And then also of his Gospel, which is the Revelation of him, vers. 23, 26, 27, to the end. And as it is the Mystery of God the Father, and of Christ, Chap. 2. 2. In whom are hid all Treasures of Wisdom and Knowledg. Exhorting, that as they had received Christ, so they would walk in him, vers. 6. as in Matter of Order, so for Faith. For unto both those that Exhortation is directed, as appears by the coherence with vers. 5. but especially in their Faith about the Person of Christ, with which he therefore begins, vers. 7. Stablished in the Faith, as ye have been taught, abounding therein with thanksgiving, being thankful to God, he had revealed such a Christ, his Christ to them; For they could not have a better, or another. And then follow those words, Beware lest any Man spoil you through

BOOK II.

Philoſophy, after the Tradition of Men, Rudiments of the World, and not after Chriſt. Some of the Teachers of thoſe Times, finding in Philoſophers (then in credit) in Plato, Orpheus, Heſiod, Pythagoras, and in the Jewiſh Traditions, many Divine Things about λόγος, the Word, and of Emanations, and Genealogies, and Deſcents from God, as Ireneus ſhews, of him from God, and of the the Creatures from him, they dreſt up a Chriſt, and a Divinity, with thoſe Philoſophical Clothes, and Colours, and Paint, which the Apoſtle ſays, was not after Chriſt; as you ſay a falſe Picture of a Man, is not after the Man, being not taken from, nor reſembling his Perſon, but another clean. They were deſcriptions of him, not taken from the Life or Truth that was in him. Whom therefore Paul ſets out in the ſubſtance of him; In him dwells all the fulneſs of the God-head bodily, or (you ſhall give me leave to tranſlate it) perſonally. And ſo it was another Chriſt. And therefore, chap. 3. verſ. 19. theſe are ſaid not to hold the Head, that is, Him, verſ. 10. he had ſtiled the Head of all Principalities and Powers; and chap. 1. 18. the Head of the Body of his Church, they having clean perverted him to another Chriſt. And as it was then, ſo it is now. Men have gone about to bring Paul's, the Scripture-Chriſt, to Plato's; and as ſuch, would obtrude him on the Saints.

Thus it was in Paul's Time: But John lived longer, after all the Apoſtles, and ſaw theſe Seeds and Buddings then ſown, come to a greater ripeneſs, and open and more groſs diſcovery, from Blade to Ear; and writing that firſt Epiſtle to the Chriſtian Jews in a more ſpecial manner, he ſeeing what Chriſt had foretold ſhould fall out, about the Time of Jeruſalem's Deſtruction, both afore and after it to be fulfilled; doth therefore, chap. 2. verſ. 18. give this warning; My Brethren, it is the laſt hour, (becauſe the laſt period of Time afore that fatal overthrow of that Nation) for even now there are many Antichriſts, (as our Lord had foretold) whereby we know that it is the laſt hour; we ſeeing it thus fulfilled. And, verſ. 22. Who is a Lyar, but he that denieth that Jeſus is, ὁ ἀληθὴς, The Chriſt, the ſole and only Chriſt. And he is an Antichriſt that denies the Father and the Son, the Diſtinction of theſe Two, and the Perſonalities. And whoſoever denieth the Son, the ſame hath not the Father. And, 1 John 4. 1. Many falſe Prophets are gone out into the World. And what was the great falſe point of odds, which they endeavoured to ſow and diffuſe, verſ. 3. They confeſſed not that Jeſus Chriſt was come in the Fleſh; and that Chriſt was God: and therefore the Catholick Faith of all true Believers, in oppoſition to thoſe Errors about his Perſon, he gives us, chap. 5. 20. And we know that the Son of God is come, and hath given us an Underſtanding, that we may know him that is True: and we are in him that is True, even in his Son Jeſus Chriſt. This is the true God, and Eternal Life. They had other Doctrines about their Chriſts whom they held forth, which were a full denial of all this. You have the like in his ſecond Epiſtle, verſ. 7. 9. And to obviate thoſe Errors about the Perſon of Chriſt, was it that he wrote thoſe Epiſtles, and his Goſpel of John, after all the other Evangeliſts and Epiſtles written; exhorting them to hold faſt to that Chriſt whom they had heard and known from the beginning, as himſelf and the Holy Apoſtles had ſet him forth, chap. 1. verſ. 1, 2, 3. That which was from the beginning, which we have heard, which we have ſeen with our Eyes, which we have looked upon, and our Hands have handled of the Word of Life; (For the Life was manifeſted, and we have ſeen it, and bear witneſs, and ſhew unto you that eternal Life which was with the Father, and was manifeſted unto us). That which we have ſeen and heard, declare we unto you. And verſ. 24. of chap. 2. Let that therefore abide in you, which ye have heard from the beginning: If that which ye have heard from the beginning ſhall remain in you, ye ſhall alſo continue in the Son, and in the Father. The like, Epiſt. 2. verſ. 9. declaring thoſe that fell into ſuch Errors, and continued in them, to be ſuch Apoſtates as never had Truth of Grace; Chap. 2. verſ. 19. They went out from us, but they were not of us: for if they had been of us, they would, no doubt, have continued with us: but they went out, that they might be made manifeſt, that they were not all of us. And hints how ſome of them ſo ſinned therein, as that withal they ſinned the Sin unto Death, never to be recovered; Chap. 5. verſ. 16, 17. (though not all thoſe words, verſ. 16. do imply); If any Man ſee his Brother ſin a Sin which is not unto Death, he ſhall ask, and he ſhall give him Life

Life for them that ſin not unto Death. There is a Sin unto Death; I do not ſay that he ſhall pray for it. All Unrighteouſneſs is Sin, and there is a Sin not unto Death. And of all he judgeth them ſuch, as, without Repentance, the Saints ſhould have no communion with, Epiſt. 2. verſ. 9, 10, 11. Whoſoever tranſgreſſeth, and abideth not in the Doctrine of Chriſt, hath not God: he that abideth in the Doctrine of Chriſt, he hath both the Father and the Son. If there come any unto you, and bring not this Doctrine, receive him not into your Houſe, neither bid him God-ſpeed: for he that biddeth him God-ſpeed, is partaker of his evil Deeds. Of this Conſequence is true Faith in this Doctrine. Chap. 5.

Now, as it was then, ſo it is now. Thoſe Times, and the Occurrences which then fell out (foretold by Chriſt) among Jews and Chriſtians afore Jeruſalem's Deſtruction, being Types of what ſhould now fall out in the laſt Days afore the end of the World: and we have yet but the buddings of what perhaps will grow up to greater Ripeneſs and Spreadings, as then they alſo did.

Multitudes of thoſe that are Orthodox in their Opinions, or ſpeculative Judgments about the Perſon of Chriſt, yet periſh, becauſe they know not, apprehend not this true Chriſt, as he is in himſelf really and ſpiritually; They know not the Truth as it is in Jeſus, as Epheſ. 4. 20, 21. the Apoſtle ſpeaks. And this hath and doth fall out amongſt all that live in the Church. But others begin to err about the very Notion of his Perſon, coining other Chriſts by diminiſhing from, or adding unto the Perſon of him, as they would repreſent him to us. And this is as eaſy as 'tis dangerous, even as it was an eaſie thing to make another Goſpel, and to entertain it, as in the Galatian's Example appears, Gal. 1. 6. I marvel that ye are ſo ſoon removed from him that called you into the Grace of Chriſt, unto another Goſpel. And in that forementioned, 2 Cor. 11. 13. the Apoſtle ſpeaks the like of preaching another Chriſt, conſidering Men's aptneſs to err herein; It is no great thing (ſays he) though great in reſpect of the moment of it, yet eaſy and ſoon done. And that is the Apoſtle's ſcope in that Speech. And again, as ſome Churches then embraced another Goſpel, (as the Galatians) ſo upon other Churches the Devil endeavoured to obtrude another Chriſt.

And he is ſoon (in the Doctrine about him) made another Chriſt, either by taking away from him, or adding to him.

1. By taking away from him, as if you take away his Godhead, this alters the Perſon quite, as taking away the reaſonable Soul from the Body of a Man, takes inſtantly away the Man, and leaves a brute Beaſt in his room. It turns him into the Carcaſs of a Chriſt, let him be ſet forth in words, never ſo gorgeouſly or glorioufly, the ſubſtance of his Perſon is ſtoln away. Or elſe,

2. By adding to him: For if the joyning Works to Chriſt's Righteouſneſs, in matter of Juſtification, made another Goſpel, as the Epiſtle to the Galatians ſhews; Then ſurely adding the Perſons of all the Saints to the individual one Lord, one Husband, Chriſt, and that they all ſhould be Chriſt as well as he, equal with him, their Union with God the ſame that he is, this is to un-Chriſt him.

The

The Knowledg of GOD the Father, And his Son JESUS CHRIST.

BOOK. III.

Of the Glories, and Royalties, that belong unto Jesus Christ, considered as God-Man in one Person; (besides what accrued to him from his Performance of the Work of our Redemption:) and which were appointed for him, by his Father, from all Eternity. The apparent Manifestation of the Divine Attributes in the Person of Jesus Christ God-Man. The Designation of him in God's first Decrees, as the End for whom all the Creatures were made. The part that he bore as God-Man in the Creation, as by him all Things were Created. The Appointment of him by God, to be one Lord over all, under him one God: and to be in a more special respect the Head of the Elect, on whom they were to hold the Tenure of all the Blessings bestowed on them, above the Dues of Creation.

1 Cor. 8. 6. One Lord Jesus Christ, by whom are all things, and we by him.

CHAP. I.

A Preface giving a short Scheme, or Draught of the ensuing Discourse. An Exposition of Col. 1. from vers. 15. to 19. all that is spoken there of Christ, must be ascribed to him, as God-Man.

WE have had the Person of our Lord set out unto us, What, and who he is.

This Text in more general Words, leads us next unto the Consideration of the Glory, and Royalties of this great Person; who as God-Man in one Person, is Sovereign Lord over all: And also, who hath 1. An Universal Influence and Efficacy into all Things; Through whom are all Things. 2. Specially cially into the Salvation of the Elect, And we by him. Neither doth the Text attribute theſe to him, as he is ſingly that ſecond Perſon, the Son of God: But as he is conſtituted Lord by his Father. And therefore neceſſarily as conſidered the Son of God, perſonally united to that Man Jeſus; as hath been ſet out. And of him thus conſidered, I deſire, may be underſtood all that follows, as that which is the proper Subject thereof.

It hath been no ſmall Diminution of Jeſus Chriſt (as he is God-Man); That Men's Minds having been intent upon him as a Redeemer from Sin, and Wrath; (they being Sinners, the Conſideration and Burthen of that hath lain neareſt them, and preſt upon their Spirits,) and that having once given them Eaſe, they have in a manner only given him the Glory thereof. Whereas there is in other reſpects as great a Revenue of Glory, from many other Contributions, due to him; even from whatever God himſelf can be ſuppoſed to challenge Glory from.

The Subject of theſe following Sections, is, the Glory of his Perſon, and the Relation thereof, ſimply conſidered and abſtracted from the work of redeeming us Men from Sins and Wrath.

Ere I come to the Particulars, I ſhall in this firſt Chapter, which is an Introduction to the reſt, do two Things.

Firſt, Give the Sum, and Scheme of the Particulars, that thus ſhew forth the Glory of his Perſon.

Secondly, Single out one eminent and comprehenſive Scripture, *viz. Col.*1.15. which gives a general Bottom unto all the Heads of that Scheme or Draught.

Firſt, The Series of the Heads themſelves.

The Firſt Head is,

The Native Perſonal Glories, which attend, and are due to that Human Nature united Perſonally to the Son of God; beſides thoſe that ariſe to him as a Redeemer.

Which are of two ſorts.

Firſt, Inherent in him, conſiſting of ſuch Attributes, as accompany the Union of that Human Nature to God's Son, and do make up an Image of the God-head in him; beſides his being the Eſſential Image of God as ſecond Perſon: Such, as is to be found in no meer Creature.

The Second are incommunicable Royalties, Adherent, or appertaining to him; and yet no leſs due to him than the other. As,

1. That he as Man, or rather as God-man, ſhould have in the Decrees, and Purpoſes of the moſt High, the juſt Honour to be the eldeſt, or Firſt-born therein, in Priority of Order, before all other Men, or Angels, that were to be meer Creatures.

2. In thoſe Decrees to be made, the End, or final Cauſe of all other things, and this alſo as his due; That all other things that were to be created, ſhould be ſo diſpoſed of, and contrived in God's Eternal Counſel, as might tend to his Glory, even as well as to the Fathers.

Unto theſe two, I add that which is the Reſult of both, eſpecially of the firſt.

3. That by this deſigned Union of the Son of God to our Nature, and in the Perſon of the Son ſo united, and that ſimply and abſtractly conſidered; God hath, and doth make the higheſt Manifeſtation, and Communication of himſelf, ſuch as by no created Ways or Means could ever have been attained; (which is the Reſult of his being the Image of the Inviſible God.) And this Manifeſtation (we now ſpeak of) is, both that which is made unto the Elect, in him, and by him, and for his Sake; as alſo that one which is tranſcendently made in, and unto that Human Nature himſelf, who is one of us, Fleſh of our Fleſh, &c. So as by this Perſonal Union with the Man Jeſus, God hath attained his chiefeſt, higheſt, and moſt ſubſtantial Ends, which by all or any means elſe could not have been ſo attained.

The

Chap. 1.

The second Head proceeds on such Glories, as are Relative unto the Works, and Counsels of God, touching the Things that were to be made, and brought forth into being by him; and the dependence they all have upon his being God-Man. Wherein is shewn, how that his Son's being made, and undertaking to be made Man, he withal became; 1, The beginning of the Creation of God: the Upholder of the whole Creation in his Father's Purposes: Yea, and virtually was the Creator, and Maker thereof, as so considered. 2. The Upholder, and Governour of them, when thus created. And, 3. All other of his Works (besides Redemption) are committed to him.

A third Head (which I shall treat of in another Discourse, viz. of Christ the Mediator;) is more special, namely, his glorious Efficaciousness, to the accomplishment of the Blessedness, and Salvation of God's Elect, both Men and Angels, out of the common Lump, and Mass of the whole Creation. Which contains in it,

1. His being an Head of Union to Angels and Men, but more especially of us, Elect-Men unto God, to raise them up as Creatures unto a Supernatural Union with God, above their Law of Creation.

2. Unto us Men, yet more especially in his being a Redeemer, over and above his being an Head unto us, to deliver us from Sin, and the Curse, by his (himself) being made both for us.

The Coronis, or top-Stone set upon this Pillar and Column of Glory, which is thus erected, and is a building unto our Lord Christ, is comprehensively contained in, Eph. 1. 10. That in the Dispensation of the fulness of Time, he might gather together all things in Christ, both which are in Heaven, and which are on Earth, even in him. And it is the whole and full Birth, the All of God's everlasting Purposes and Decrees, and so the whole of whatsoever shall be accomplished, touching the Person of Christ, the Salvation of the Elect both Angels, and Men; and the Restitution of all the whole Creation by Christ. As,

1. That God's utmost Design, was to unite a select Company of his Creatures to him, to be one with himself.

2. That to that end, he in his Decrees contrived it so, that the Person of Christ should consist, and be made up of all things, all sorts of things in Heaven, and Earth: and so made a meet Medium of such an Union.

3. That he hath made up that Body, or Company of his Elect that were to be thus united to himself by Christ, in a correspondent Anti-posture to that of his Person, made up out of all things in Heaven and Earth; and consisting (take the whole lump of them amongst them) of all sorts of things, that are to be found in either, both among Angels, or Men: even A Special all things, out of all the General all things.

4. That he hath made his Son an Head of Union, which is common both to Angels, and Men; and over and above a Redeemer, or Mediator of Redemption of us Men: So gathering them all into one a second Time in him.

5. That the whole Creation (but those in Hell, which are exempted out of that Catalogue,) have by an overflow, a Participation (take them in their Capacity) of this great Union, and are restored to a glorious Liberty therewith. Even so be it; O blessed, and thrice glorious Lord Jesus, to whom be Glory for ever. Amen.

I now at length must quit the Conduct of this Scripture, which I have hitherto, all along, taken for my Guide, and bottom: namely, 1 Cor. 8.6. And it having thus happily led me to that General, which hath these particulars in the Womb thereof; I shall take my leave of it, and betake my self unto another Scripture, as adequate to this, and which is its next Design and Model; setting forth the Heads fore-mentioned, almost in the same Order and Method I have proposed them in. This Scripture, I shall in this Section first suit in the whole of it, to the Particulars of this Draught.

BOOK III.

Col. 1. verſ. 15, 16, 17, 18, 19. Who is the Image of the Inviſible God, the Firſt-born of every Creature. For by him were all things created, that are in Heaven, and that are in Earth, viſible and inviſible; whether they be Thrones, or Dominions, or Principalities, or Powers; all things were created by him, and for him. And he is before all things, and by him all things conſiſt. And he is the Head of the Body, the Church; who is the beginning, the Firſt-born from the dead: that in all Things he might have the prehemirence. For it pleaſed the Father that in him ſhould all Fulneſs dwell.

The Apoſtle from the 15*th verſe* to the 23*d*, ſets forth Jeſus Chriſt, in all thoſe rich and glorious Excellencies revealed in the Goſpel; and his Scope, and Intention, deſigned therein (as likewiſe in the whole Epiſtle) is, (as appears by the ſecond Chapter) to divert, and take off the Coloſſians Minds, from going after Jewiſh Rites; which he calls Rudiments of the World, &c. Col. 2. 8. and which ſome would have introduced into their Worſhip: and likewiſe, from vain and fruitleſs Speculations, brought into their Faith and Doctrine, but grounded on Philoſophy, Carnal Reaſon, Traditions of Men, &c. verſ. 8. which having a ſhew of Wiſdom in them, did ſo carry away their Minds, as, (to uſe his own words in the 18*th* Verſe) They were well nigh ſpoiled or robbed, (as were our fore-Fathers, by the like Subtilties of the School-men, and the oſtentation of pompous Rites and Ceremonies) of theſe rich and never to be exhauſted Treaſures, of all Wiſdom and Knowledg, which lay hid in Chriſt (verſ. 3.) but unregarded by them, by reaſon of the other.

The Apoſtle therefore, knowing that the ſuper-eminent Excellencies of Chriſt (if once diſcovered) would withdraw their Toughts from gazing after ſuch vain (though gawdy) Speculations of Science, falſly ſo called, and how in him they were compleat, (as himſelf ſpeaks, Col. 2. 10.) and therefore needed not to go out of him, nor to be beholden to any other Knowledg for Direction in matters of Faith, and Order: ſeeing that in him were hid all Treaſures of Knowledg and Wiſdom. He therefore brings in this King of Glory among them, clothed in all his Royalties; That look, as when the King comes in State into the Preſence Chamber, though the Eyes of the By-ſtanders were before never ſo intent in beholding the curious Pictures, and rich Hangings about the Room; yet when the King comes in, they all turn their Eyes on him, diverting them from other Objects: So likewiſe would it be with theſe Coloſſians, when they ſhould once ſee Chriſt appear in his Glory, in which the Apoſtle purpoſely ſets him forth in theſe Verſes, (the like whereof he no where doth in all his Epiſtles.)

So then, you ſee already this Scripture in the Scope of it, to be pertinent to what we are about to demonſtrate: It agrees with my Deſign in this, That it ſets forth Chriſt's Excellencies in all their Fulneſs. Let us next ſee how it will correſpond with the Particulars.

The Words (adding the 19*th* and 20*th* Verſes to them) do methodically ſet out thoſe eminent particular Heads, which I have propoſed.

Firſt, The perſonal Excellencies, (which as was ſaid in that Draught) are of two ſorts.

1. Native and Inherent in his Perſon, conſidered as God-Man in theſe Words; [That he is the Image of the inviſible God.] Which, as he mentions firſt, ſo it is the Chief. The meaning is, That whereas the Attributes and Excellencies that are in the God-head, are incomprehenſible, or (to uſe the Apoſtle's Word) inviſible, by any Creature. That of all thoſe Perfections in the God-head, Chriſt is the compleat Image, in a tranſcendent way above what Angels and Men are; and ſo, as they are in him, they are incommunicable unto any meer Creature; He is the Image of the inviſible God, to that end to make them viſible to us. So verſ. 15. Who is the Image of the inviſible God, the Firſt-born of every Creature.

2. There

2. There are made extrinsecal Royalties, incommunicable to any meer Creature, and infinitely transcending all their Priviledges: Whereof the Text instanceth in two. 1. That He is the first begotten of every Creature, vers. 13. And vers. 17. That He is before all Things. 2. The End or final Cause for whom, and whose Glory they were all made; for this, vers. 16. All things were created for him. That as he is the first-begotten of every Creature, that is, the eldest, before all the rest, and by Inheritance their Lord and King, and the sole Heir of Heaven and Earth; and so a King over them, with such a preeminency of Title and Prerogative, as all other Kings do want: for they are neither the Makers of their Subjects, nor are their Subjects made for them. But he is such a King, as is the Maker of all these his Subjects, yea their Upholder, by whom all consist: And therefore by a just Right their final Cause and End, All things were created by him, and for him.

2. Head. The Universal Influence he hath into all God's Works. 1. As Creator of them. 2. As Upholder, vers. 16, 17. For by him were all things created that are in Heaven, and that are in Earth, visible, and invisible, whether they be Thrones, or Dominions, or Principalities, or Powers: all things were created by him, and for him. And he is before all things, and by him all things consist.

And these Glories or Excellencies of his, That all were created by him and for him, are amplified and illustrated by the Apostle's particular specifying, the Prime, the Chief, the upper Rank, of both Worlds, Heaven and Earth; in Heaven are [Thrones and Dominions] that is, Angels, and Arch-Angels, the Nobles of that higher House; then in Earth, Principalities and Powers, Kings and Rulers, whom you so much adore. All these were made in him, by him, and for him: and in him they all consist.

The third Head. That he is the Head of his Church, that precious Body, of an elect and chosen Generation, by God, out of all the rest; 1 Pet. 2. 5. Ye also as lively Stones, are built up a spiritual House, an holy Priesthood, to offer up spiritual Sacrifices, acceptable to God by Jesus Christ. Vers. 9. But ye are a chosen Generation, a Royal Priesthood, an holy Nation, a peculiar People; that ye should shew forth the Praises of him, who hath called you out of Darkness into his marvellous Light. And the First-Fruits of the Creation, Jam. 1. 18. And thus vers. 18. of Col. 1. He is the Head of the Body, the Church: And that in two respects, 1. Of their Union to God, which was God's Primitive Design towards them, intended in those Words [who is the Beginning.] That is, the first Foundation of their Union with God: and hereon the first Corner-Stone of their Happiness was laid. And 2. Of their Restauration from out of Sin and Death, to bring them into that first designed Happiness, which is the great intendment of that Union, and this in those Words; [The First-born from the Dead.] Which is added, because at, and upon the Resurrection of him, and of his Members, of the Sons of Men, who were dead, and fallen into Sin, &c. Then begins the Demonstration of what as an Head he was ordained to be to all his Church, in the Glory that shall follow. Then appears and raigns for ever, that relation of his being an Head of Union, in its full and originally intended Splendor, and that Glory (by virtue thereof) which was originally and primarily ordained by God, then takes place, and the full Efficacy thereof not till then. When Christ arose, then said God of him, This Day have I begotten thee. Acts 13. 33. God hath fulfilled the same unto us their Children, in that he hath raised up Jesus again; as it is also written in the second Psalm, Thou art my Son, this Day have I begotten thee. Now, and not till now, thou appearest and lookest like that Son of mine, whom I rejoyced in from everlasting; and now first thou hast recovered that primitive Glory thou hadst in Decree and Repute with me, as God-Man, afore the World was; and which as the First-born of every Creature, thou wert arrayed with: A Glory only due to him, that was the only, and substantially begotten Son of God. The like to this holds good of his Elect Members of Mankind, when fully recovered, and restored from Death and the Grave, by him first as a Redeemer, now risen again, which Death is the last part of their Humiliation and Debasement for Sin.

BOOK III.

And yet, as if the Apoſtle having enumerated theſe (though the chief) of Jeſus Chriſt's Prerogatives; yet becauſe not all Particulars, but had given theſe few of all the reſt for Inſtance ſake: therefore he ſums up all whatever in theſe two Totals, or Generals.

1. That in all he might have the Preheminence, or the Primacy: The meaning thereof is, That God ordered him to be ſuch an one, as might not only have [all] manner of Priviledges, that any in this or the other World, do or may be ſuppoſed to excel in; but alſo with a Preheminence, a Primacy in all, above what any one hath in any thing whereof he may boaſt.

And, 2. That it pleaſed the Father, That in him ſhould all Fulneſs dwell, verſ. 19. Here is again another [All,] and a [Fulneſs] added to that [All]; an [All] for Parts, [a Fulneſs] for Degrees; a tranſcendency in all, above all.

All theſe mentioned, are over and beſides that great and eminent work and Service, of reconciling us Men, as Sinners, to God: Which is,

The Fourth Head. That over and beſides theſe Preheminencies, he is the Reconciler and Redeemer, by the Blood of his Croſs, verſ. 20. And (having made Peace through the Blood of his Croſs) by him to reconcile all things unto himſelf, by him, I ſay, whether they be things in Earth, or things in Heaven. So as that preheminence of things which is in the cloſe of the 18*th* Verſe, as alſo that Fulneſs, verſ. 19. is diſtinct from the work of Redemption and Reconciliation, which appears not only becauſe in all this glorious deſcription of him, from verſ. 15. the Apoſtle mentions not the work of Redemption or Reconciliation, as making up any of this Fulneſs, which in the 19*th* Verſe he intends: But further, he makes that a Surpluſage, or rather another Fulneſs over and above this of Reconciliation, here rehearſed: So the Coherence carries it. For it pleaſed the Father, that all Fulneſs ſhould dwell in him, and by him to reconcile, &c. verſ. 20. As being a work beſides and ſuperadded unto all his other Fulneſs ordained to be in him.

As a Premiſe to all that follows, I have one thing to clear, which is neceſſary to found my way for the handling the foreſaid Particulars; Namely,

That all this Fulneſs, and the Particulars thereof mentioned in this Text, are attributed to Chriſt, as God-Man; either as actually united, or to be united in one Perſon, and not only, or ſimply conſidered as God, or Second Perſon.

For the better entertaining of this Aſſertion, and the taking off Prejudices, it is meet that the Reader ſhould know, how that holy and greateſt Light of the Reformed Churches, Calvin, in his Comment upon this Scripture, interpreting the very firſt Paſſage, which leads on all the reſt; namely, That he is the Image of the Inviſible God, ſpeaks thus in his Comment thereon. He ſhews hereby, ſays he, that it is he alone by whom God, that is otherwiſe inviſible, is manifeſted to us, according to that, No Man hath ſeen God at any time: The only Begotten that is in the Boſom of the Father, he hath manifeſted him to us. I know (ſays he) how the Ancients are wont to expound this; who becauſe they had a Controverſy with the Arrians (who held Chriſt a meer Creature) do urge this place for Chriſt's being of the ſame Eſſence or Nature with the Father; (namely, ſimply as Second Perſon and God.) But in the mean time, they omitted what was the chief things in the Words; namely, how the Father hath exhibited, or expoſed himſelf, as in Chriſt, to be known by us. And again, ſays he, The Name (or Title) of Image, is not ſpoken of the Eſſence, but hath a Relation unto us. So as therefore, Chriſt is the Image of God, becauſe he makes, as it were, God viſible unto us. And yet withal, (ſo he adds) For this is it alſo inferred, That Chriſt is of the ſame Eſſence with the Father; (namely, as Second Perſon.) For he could not truly (or to the Life) repreſent God to us, (namely, as God-Man); unleſs he were the eſſential Word of God: it being not compatible to any Creature, to repreſent God as here is intended.

A wretched Papiſt, to caſt odium upon Calvin, wrote a Treatiſe againſt him, to prove him, out of his own Writings, unſound, in that great Article of our Faith, the Trinity, and about the God-head of the Perſon of Chriſt, entituling his Book, Calvin Judaizing, or turned Jew, and heaping up about 38 Scriptures; which, as he ſays, Calvin perverted to ſuch a meaning. He alledgeth his Comment on this, in the laſt place, againſt him. Whereof Pareus in his Opuſcula, printed 1595, undertook undertook the Defence, and saith, both Interpretations, according to Calvin's own Expressions, will stand together: Which I refer the Reader to. Now observe Calvin's Sense, how they may stand together; namely, That Christ (here) as God-Man, is chiefly or directly stiled the Image of the invisible God, in the Apostle's Scope: Yet so, as withal it argues, and from this inferred, must strongly, yea it must necessarily be supposed as the Foundation of the other, That he is so the Image of God transcendently above all Creatures (as here) must necessarily also be the essential Image of God: And this I would in this place preadvise the Reader once for all (though perhaps I shall be enforced necessarily to inculcate it) to be the genuine drift of all those other Interpretations, of the like, attributed to Christ; which in the ensuing Discourses, in opening of this Place, and of Joh. 1. 1, 2, &c. I shall pursue. And I desire the candid Reader so to understand me. Chap. 1.

In the mean time, for the rest of the Particulars here said of Christ, that in what Sense this of Christ's being the Image of God, is interpreted by Calvin; I shall with like freeness assert of them all, That they are spōken of him as God Man. This being but the first of this Jury, and the rest enumerated, therefore answers to, and are of the same sort and suit. And if this be so interpreted, then let us see, if all the rest will not give up themselves thereto. How this will be made good of all the Particulars that follow, I shall shew when I come to insist on each apart. I shall now collect general Reasons, for the carrying on this Analogy, and Proportion of Interpretation through the whole, out of those two Totals, or Summary Propositions, wherewith he shuts up all the Particulars enumerated (namely); That in all things he might have the Preheminence. For it pleased the Father, that in him should all Fulness dwell. This General Demonstration I give, by laying these two things together, out of them two.

1. That all, and every one of these Particulars, before rehearsed, are those, or some of those Glories, which as so many several peices do make up this his Preheminence in all things, and which put together with the rest, are parts of that Fulness, which is said to dwell in him.

And, 2. That the Apostle makes all this Fulness (whereof these are the parts) to reside in Christ, by an act of God's good Pleasure. And so by a Design, Decree or Purpose of God, by an Act of his Will: For he says, It pleased the Father that all this Fulness, spoken of, should dwell in him [εὐδόκησε;] it was ex beneplacito, from the good Pleasure of God. Thus Eph. 1.9. (where the same Word is used) the Apostle calls it the Mystery of his Will, μετὰ τὴν εὐδοκίαν, after, or according to his good Pleasure, which he had purposed in himself.

Now therefore, hence I infer of all these parts and pieces, that they must be understood of him as God-Man. However that other Sense of theirs, attributed to him as Second Person, must also come in, as that which is necessarily the subjstratum, and Foundation thereof, and so originally and primarily true of him as such, at least the most of them. Yet so, as directly and primaria intentione, they are intended of the Son of God made Man. For if they had been spoken of him singly, as Second Person, this would not have been said of them, that they are part of that Fulness, which it pleased the Father, by an Act of his Will, and according to the Purpose of his good Pleasure should dwell in him, for so they are natural to Christ, and not at all subjected to God's Will.

For Example, If these two Speeches in vers. 15. He is the Image of the Invisible God, and the First-born of every Creature, should have been meant, the first of those his Essential Attributes of his God-head; whereby Christ is God of God, and so the Image of his Father: This is not a Fulness that dwells in him according to God's good Pleasure, or from God's Will; for then Christ should not be God. And that other Speech, if it should be taken as meant of that Eternal Generation of him, as Second Person, from everlasting; then this General that follows, That it pleased the Father, that all this Fulness, and these Preheminencies (whereof these Prerogatives here mentioned, and this Particular is a part) should dwell in him; would not have been so expressed. For Christ's eternal Generation was an Act of God's Nature, not of God's Will, or by a Decree of his Pleasure. He indeed begets us of his own Will, (as James speaks, Jam. 1. 18.) but not so his Son, as Second Person; for him he begets naturally.

So

So alſo that Speech, verſ.17. He is before all things, if meant of his Subſiſtence, as Second Perſon, by that Eternal Generation of his, it could not then be made an Act of God's good Will, being it was natural, and due unto him. But now, take all theſe ſpoken of Chriſt, as ordained to be God-Man, to have all theſe Fulneſſes meet in a Human Nature, ordained to be aſſumed into Union with the Second Perſon: So indeed, all this might indeed be the Object of God's Decree, and an Act of his good Pleaſure, in this reſpect, that it was in God's good Pleaſure, whether to have decreed him or any thing elſe, or no: And in Truth, it was the higheſt Act of Grace and God's good Pleaſure, that ever was beſtowed on any Creature, to ordain that Man at all unto that Union.

Yet ſtill, let all this be ſo underſtood, that though theſe things be meant directly of Chriſt, as God-Man, as the Son of God dwelling in an Human Nature; yet ſo, as they are by Inference as great and ſtrong Convictions as any other, That this Perſon, that is united to our Nature, is in his Perſon originally the eſſential Image: And therefore, ſo the Image of God (as Calvin obſerves this Place holds him forth) as no Creature is. That ſo, he is the Creator, End of all Things, or elſe he never had raiſed up that Human Nature he aſſumed, unto thoſe Royalties.

Thus much, to ſhew how this Scripture is a ground for all thoſe Heads and Particulars, whereof I gave you the Draught.

I next, make entrance upon the Heads themſelves, to enlarge upon them.

CHAP.

CHAP. II.

The personal native Glories and Royalties which belong to the Son of God, as dwelling in our Nature. How the Divine Attributes are Inherent, and shine forth in that Man Jesus so united to the Son of God. In what sense He is the Image of the Invisible God. How he is the Wisdom, and the Power of God. His Humane Nature does not possess those Perfections in that high degree, as they are Attributes in the Divine Nature, and so Infinite; but he hath them in a nearer resemblance, than any mere Creature is capable of In what respects he also has Independency and Sovereignty. It is upon the Union of the Humane Nature with the Son of God, that it is invested with his high Priviledg.

THE words of the Text explained in the former Chapter, which sets out the personal native Glories, and Excellencies, and Royalties, appertaining to the Son of God, as dwelling in our Nature; and which especially shew, how the Divine Attributes shine forth in the Man Jesus Christ, so united to the Son of God, and which I shall in particular apply to that purpose, are in the 15*th*, 16, 17*th* Verses of Col. 2. Who is the Image of the Invisible God, the first-born of every Creature. All Things were created by him, and for him. And he is before all Things.

The first Particular is founded on those words, The Image of the Invisible God. Which the Apostle sets, first, as the greatest Excellency, and the Foundation, and the Key of Interpretation to all the rest that follow.

The resolution of which words, is into this Assertion, That in that Man Jesus Christ, by virtue of his Union with the Godhead, there is inherent a fulness of all Divine Perfections, which make up an Image of the Attributes of the Godhead, in so transcendent a way of Excellency and Eminency, as is incompatible and incommunicable to any meer Creature remaining such.

I. For the interpretation of the Apostle's Intent in those words; There is a double Image of God in Christ; The one essential, as he is second Person; the other Manifestative, as the Glory of God shines in the Face or Person of Jesus Christ, as Man; thus Grotius on the words, and Pareus in his Vindication of Calvin, who reckons up many Witnesses, as Ambrose, Martyr, Melanthon, Ursin, &c. for it (of which by and by); And the same distinction, to the same purpose, is acknowledged to be comprehended in his being called ὁ λόγος, the Word, (as in the first Chapter of John's Gospel) connotating both the essential Word of God, or Image to God himself, and also the manifestative Word, as representing him to us as made Man.

If the Queſtion be, Which of theſe two is principally and more directly intended in theſe words? I anſwer, the latter, and that for two Reaſons.

1. Becauſe he is not ſimply termed the Image of God, but with this addition, of the Inviſible God; which does neceſſarily imply, his being ſuch an Image, as relates unto us; that is, that he is ſuch an Image as makes the Godhead, which is in it ſelf inviſible or incomprehenſible, to be manifeſt and viſible: For that is the end of an Image, namely, to hold forth a thing to make it apparent to the view, which otherwiſe is not ſeen.

Then, 2. The Godhead and Perſon of Chriſt, conſidered ſimply as Second Perſon, is in himſelf as inviſible as the Godhead, or Perſon of the Father. The meaning thereof is this, That in Chriſt, as Man, united to the Second Perſon, there is a Reſultance, an edition of the Godhead, in all the Perfections of it; which I may call ſo many Divine Attributes of Chriſt, as God-man, (even as we uſually call the other the Divine Attributes of God) which do make up an Image of the Godhead; which in Heb. 1. 3. is called, not only the Image of God, but (with a difference from all Creatures) the expreſs Image, or engraven Image, that is ſuch as no Creatures are. The Image of God's Attributes in Angels and Men, are but ſuch as the Light of Tapers in reſpect of the Sun, of which that is but a dull and faint Reſemblance. But Chriſt is the Shine, the brightneſs of his Father's Glory. Even as the Beams of the Sun are to the Body of the Sun; as, Lumen eſt Imago lucis, ſo is Chriſt God's Image. And this ſimilitude the Apoſtle there uſeth, and applies it to him as he was Man, namely, as he was appointed Heir of all. Which Phraſe, as he is meerly Second Perſon, might not be uſed of him, for ſo he is Hæres Natus, not Conſtitutus, not appointed Heir, but begotten. Now as the Rays or Beams of the Sun, are but the Emiſſions and Effects of the Sun it ſelf; and ſo far inferior to the ſubſtantial glorious Body of it: So this Image, or Shine of the Godhead's Glory in the Manhood of Chriſt, is but the Reluctance, the Effect, and ſo inferior to that Eſſential Glory, which as Second Perſon he partakes of in common with his Father. Thus Beza, Cameron, and others, have underſtood it.

II. For the Thing it ſelf, and to explain what this Image of the Divine Attributes in Chriſt as God-Man is. It is not that bare Communication of Properties, ſo as only that which is ſaid of the Godhead, is predicated of the Manhood: Or that the Manhood inſtrumentally uſeth the Attributes of the Godhead, and ſo is omniſcient with the Omniſciency of the Divine Nature, and omnipotent with his Omnipotency, (as the Lutherans fondly do dream). But it is ſuch a Syſtem, or Fulneſs of Perfections really inherent and appertaining unto the Manhood, by virtue of that its Union with the Divine Nature; as although infinitely coming ſhort of the Attributes that are eſſential to the Godhead, yet is the compleateſt Image of them, and ſuch as no meer Creature is capable of; and ſo is as truly incommunicable unto a creature, (whether it be Man or Angel) as thoſe Attributes of the Godhead are to this Humanity of Chriſt it ſelf, though ſo united. This in general may be made out of that Parentheſis, in John 1. 14. (And we beheld his Glory, the Glory as the only begotten Son of God). By Glory, the Evangeliſt means eſpecially thoſe glorious Perfections that dwell in his Perſon, as Holineſs, Wiſdom, &c. for it follows, full of Grace and Truth; though withal including thoſe Signs of his Power, as Sparkles of his Divinity, that dwelt in that Fleſh, and alſo referring to that Glory they ſaw in him at his transfiguration. The Eſſential Glory of his Godhead, it could not be, for they openly ſaw it, (as the word ſignifies) and therefore it is not meant of the Glory of the Godhead it ſelf, which is here ſaid to be inviſible; and there it is alſo ſaid of it too, that that is ſuch which no Man hath ſeen, verſ. 18. Now the Glory of theſe his Perfections ſhining in that Humane Nature, was ſuch as was peculiar to him, and tranſcendently above what could be in any meer Creature, and ſuch as carried its own Evidence and Teſtimonial with it, that they were ſuch Perfections as were proper and peculiar to the only begotten of God; therefore it is added, the Glory, as of the only begotten of God; that is, ſuch as could be in none but him that was God, and the natural Son of God. That as the Shine of the Sun carries its own Evidence with it, and it is the Glory, as of the Sun when it appears; appears; so transcendently, that the likeness of it cannot be made by all the Fire and Lights in the World, if put together; such was this Glory here spoken of. Chap. 2.

To give two or three Instances of some of these Perfections peculiarly, and incommunicably dwelling in the Humane Nature of Christ; As,

1. Wisdom. 2. Power. 3. Independency and Sovereignty.

The reason why I instance in these, is, because I find them all put together by Christ himself.

1. There is a Wisdom in Christ's Humane Nature, which is so high an imitation of the Attribute of Wisdom in God, as no Creature, nor all Creatures could reach to, or have attained; and therefore they, though they be called Wise, yet not Wisdom, as Christ, God-Man is called, 1 Cor. 1. 24. But unto them which are called, both Jews and Greeks, Christ the Power of God, and the [Wisdom] of God. And the reason why so transcendent a Wisdom is in him as Man, which is proper to him, and of which all Creatures must fall short, is given Col. 2. 3. For in Christ are hid all the Treasures of Wisdom and Knowledg: not objectively only, as in the knowledg of whom (if we could attain to it) we might find all Treasures; but subjectively also, as whose Knowledg in himself inherent contains in it all Treasures of Wisdom: For Christ could not be objectively all Wisdom unto us, if he had not first all Wisdom subjectively in himself. And therefore it is, v. 9. For in him dwelleth all the fulness of the Godhead bodily. Now the reason of all this fulness of Wisdom in Christ, is there given, That the fulness of the Godhead dwells bodily (or personally) in him, which is alone proper to him. And therefore also surely these Treasures of Wisdom are also meant of Inherent Knowledg residing in his Humane Nature as the Godhead doth.

Now the Treasures of Wisdom in Christ's Humane Nature, are not of that extent and richness, that the Wisdom that dwells in God himself is of; for to make Christ Omniscient as God is, were to make his Humane Nature God. Nor is it as the Lutherans express it, that his Humane Nature is Omniscient with the Omniscience of the Divine Nature; but yet, in such a transcendent fulness, as is Omniscientia similitudinaria, a similitudinary Omniscience comparatively to what is in the Creatures, (as Zanchy from the Schoolmen calls it) and so is an Image (and that in a transcendent way) of God's Omniscience. Not that his Humane Nature knows all that God knows; for God, per simplicem intelligentiam, by the Ideas of all he can make, knows all that his Power can do: And so his Knowledg extends it self, not only to all that is made or to be done, but to all that he can make or do, which is an Infinity. But yet there is a similitudinary Omniscience in Christ's Humane Nature, in that, it now glorified, knows all that God hath done, or means to do: and so it is of as large extent, for the Objects of it, as that knowledg in God himself is in that respect. Which Knowledg in God, the Schoolmen call Scientia Visionis; and the Scripture, God's Foreknowledg. All that God's Will hath decreed to be done (even all his Counsels) Christ's Humane Nature knows, and had, by virtue of its Union with the Divine, a right to know, both things past, present, and to come. And so it is in a sense a kind of Omniscience; and is a glory as of the only begotten Son of God, incommunicable unto any other.

2. The same holds in his Power. The Power of the Humane Nature is not equal with God's, as that he can do all that God can do; for God can make infinite many things, which yet he never made, nor will ever make; yet there is a similitudinary Omnipotency in Christ's Humane Nature, both in that he can do whatsoever he will, (his Will pitching on the same Design with God's in every Thing) and in that all that God will ever pitch upon to be done, he is an Instrument of. All was done, either in the virtue of him before he took our Nature, or hath been since his being glorified. His Fiat, his [I will] (as himself speaks John 17. 24.) must be set to every thing e're it be done. For all Power is committed to him, both in Heaven and Earth, Matth. 28. 18. All the Businesses of the World run through his Hands and Head. And therefore he is called the Power of God (in the fore-cited place, 1 Cor. 1. 24.) and the Arm of the Lord, Iſa. 53. 1. And this is a kind of Omnipotency, that all that God means to do, he ſhould be the Inſtrument of. Both theſe Inſtances we find together in one Scripture delivered, and unto the very ſame ſenſe and purpoſe I have driven concerning them, John 5. 18. The Jews had quarrelled with Chriſt (he having ſaid verſ. 17. My Father worketh hitherto, and I work) both for calling God his Father, in ſo peculiar a manner from other Men, and alſo for that in that Speech, he ſhould join himſelf ſo in Commiſſion with God in all his Works of Providence, to ſay, Ego & Pater meus, I and my Father; ſo making himſelf equal with God, when-as he was a Man; that is, to have an equal and joint hand in all together with God. Hereupon Chriſt juſtifies this Speech of his, and ſhews how, although he were a Man, yet ſuch a Man, as being one in Perſon with the Son of God, this was true of him, without any diſhonour at all unto God. Firſt, He acknowledgeth indeed, that this prehe-minence his Father hath, that he is the firſt Mover in all; The Son can do nothing of himſelf, but what he ſeeth the Father do; yet ſo, as what-ever the Father doth, the Son doth alſo. For the Father loves the Son, and ſheweth him all things that himſelf doth. Here we have,

1. That what-ever God doth, or means to do, the Son hath a hand in it.

2. That the Son knows all that is done by his Father. Therefore it is both ſaid, What he ſees the Father do, and that the Father ſheweth him all things that himſelf doth, John 5. 19, 20. Here is both the Omniſciency we ſpeak of, and the Omnipotency, in the terms we ſtated it, as reſpecting all God's Works, ad extra, even all that ever is to be done.

And this, 3. in an incommunicable way to any mere Creature; for ſo the Jews that made the Objection, underſtood it. That he (as they thought) being but a mere Man, as others, ſhould join himſelf with God in all his Works, and ſo make himſelf in a ſort equal to God. And this alſo is inferr'd from that which follows; That all this is given the Son of Man, That he might be honoured, even as the Father is honoured, John 3. 23. And ſo with ſuch an honour as no mere Creature is capable of.

And this, 4. in a ſimilitudinary way, as the word (ὁμοίως) likewiſe, or in like manner (verſ. 19.) alſo imports.

And, 5. All this Chriſt ſpeaks of himſelf as Son of Man, though it be true of him too (and that in a more tranſcendent ſenſe) as he is God, a Second Perſon. And it is one of the greateſt Keys to John's Goſpel, that multitudes of ſuch Speeches are ſpoken of him; both, firſt, and originally, as he is God, and Second Perſon, and then as God-Man, or as he is Chriſt, that is, the Son of God dwelling in Man; for Chriſt ſpeaks pertinently to the thing that ſtumbled them. They thought much, that he being (in view) but a Man, ſhould arrogate this to himſelf, to have a hand in all God's Works. Now this he anſwers and juſtifies himſelf in.

And further, that he ſpeaks theſe things of himſelf as Man, as well as ſimply as Second Perſon, appears in the other Inſtance which he gives to confirm this, That the Father hath committed all Judgment unto the Son, verſ. 22. And if in Judgment he hath this joint or equal hand, (as they call it) thence he argues it, He might alſo have it in other Works. Now this being ſpoken in a way of difference from his Father, that his Father judgeth no Man, but hath committed all Judgment to the Son. This muſt needs be meant of him as God-Man, for the meaning hereof is, That the Father judgeth not audibly, viſibly, and in view, as Judges uſe to do: He takes not on him the Perſon of a Judg, to act that part; but thus, or ſo hath committed all unto his Son, and therefore as a Man. And this alſo the very committing or reſigning the Judgment unto him, implies, it is a making of it over to him, and a giving him Commiſſion to do it; which muſt not be ſaid of Chriſt, as God. And verſ. 23. it is added, He that honoureth not the Son, honoureth not the Father that ſent him. Now Chriſt only as God-Man was ſent.

But

Chap. 2.

But to put all out of doubt, that he speaks of himself in this Discourse, as he is Son of Man united to God, he himself, in the closure of all, doth expressly so explain it, that so he might be understood to speak fully contradictory to their Exception. Thus, vers. 27. The Father hath given the Son Authority to execute Judgment also [because he is the Son of Man]. First, He sets out this Prerogative with an Emphasis, as the Particle (also) doth imply, as being the highest Dignity and Power of all other, to have Judgment solely committed to him, to execute it so visibly, as God, and in God's stead, and in that respect more than what he had said, in that Speech they so excepted against; I and my Father work hitherto. I (namely) virtually and hiddenly, do co-operate and work together with him. And then, secondly, to explain how it is committed to him, he adds, because he is the Son of Man, (so it follows) the Particle [ὅτι] because being, (as some Interpreters carry it) put for [καθότι] prout, as such (namely, as he is Son of Man) that even as such, all Judgment was committed unto him, and all these former Things true of him. And so, that word [ὅτι] not only renders the Cause of it, but explains how, and under what nature, all Judgment was to him committed. But how-ever, if it imports the Reason of it, it much more includes, that as he was the Son of Man, this Judgment was committed to him, (which to prove, is the Thing I aim at).

I shall now give another Instance of a third Attribute in Christ, which is also such an Image of what is God, as is incommunicable unto any mere Creature; and that is Independency and Sovereignty; which I therefore add, because I find it mentioned by Christ with these in this place. This Sovereign Independency, is one of the chiefest Flowers in that Crown of his Glory, (as in Kings also it is, whereby they differ from Subjects) that none have, Potestatem Vitæ & Necis, Power of Life and Death over them. The Creatures have a Life wholly dependent, as subsisting by the Power of God; Heb. 1. 3. Who being the brightness of his Glory, and the express Image of his Person, and upholding all Things by the Word of his Power, when he had by himself purged our Sins, sat down on the right Hand of the Majesty on High. And that so as at pleasure, God might annihilate them; and yet in so doing, rob them of nothing, which they can lay a just claim unto as their own: So that the tenure of their being is, Ad Voluntatem Domini, At the Will of the Lord of Heaven and Earth. But it is not thus with Christ's Humane Nature; now it is assumed into Union with the Second Person: but, it being together with that Union invested with the Royal Prerogatives of the Person, with whom it is one; it hath, Independentiam Similitudinariam, an Independency like unto God's; such as is communicable to no Creature: therefore, says Christ, vers. 26. As the Father hath Life in himself, so he hath given the Son to have Life in himself. I have learn'd, from divers Interpreters of the Gospel of John, and from much comparing the Speeches of Christ together, to interpret that, and multitudes of other the like, as well of him as God-Man, as of him also as Second Person; and this, and other, could not be true of him as God-Man, unless first as he is Second Person. And that which evidenceth more particularly this Speech to be understood of him as God-Man, is, that it is said to be given him. For this we are sure of, That the Man-hood obtained this Prerogative by a free Act of Grace, and Gift, God had a freedom to ordain, or never to ordain that Nature, or any other, unto so high a Dignity. Therefore, 1 Pet. 1. 20. Who verily was fore-ordained before the Foundation of the World, but was manifest in these last Times for you. Christ is said to be fore-ordained, as well as the Elect; and the Grace shewn in his Election was greater, than in all ours; by how much the Priviledges he was ordained unto, were greater. But when once this Nature is united to the Second Person, and become the Man God's fellow; then he is instantly invested with this indeposable Prerogative, to have Life in himself, and not to hold it by Gift, though so at first obtained: And so he hath an Independency, similitudinary to that of his Father's, as these words in John 5.26. ([As] the Father hath Life in himself; [So] hath he given to the Son to have Life in himself) do ſhew. He can now ſay that which no Creature can ſay; and that which were blaſphemy in their Mouths, is now not ſo in his: for he holds not his Life, ad voluntatem Domini; but as the Second Perſon hath a natural Right to his ſubſiſtence, ſo now hath this Man, being made one Perſon with him: and ſo by virtue of that Union, hath the Perſonal Prerogatives of the Son of God made his; yet ſo, as ſtill this Independency of the Humane Nature riſeth not to that abſoluteneſs, and infiniteneſs, that is in God himſelf (as was in the like manner ſaid of the former); for this Manhood ſubſiſts not by the Power of it ſelf, but by the Power of the God-head dwelling therein. But God ſubſiſts meerly, ſimply, and abſolutely, of himſelf. Yet there is this ſimilitude in it, unto that which is in God; that this Man can ſay, This Power which I ſubſiſt by, is my own, by virtue of his Relation unto the Second Perſon; I being the Son of God, and one in Perſon with him, what is his, is mine, not Originally, or Eſſentially, but by Gift; yet ſo, as there I have now an Independent Right to be and to ſubſiſt in that Second Perſon for ever, and can never be depoſed. Indeed it was a free Act of Grace in God at firſt: But in doing of it, God did a Wonder in the World, of all, the greateſt. For he ſets up an Independent Creature, a Creature back'd with ſuch a Right to his Being, that now himſelf cannot pull him down, nor diſſolve that Union again. And what a glorious Image of God's Independency is this?

I might ſhew the like alſo in Holineſs; That there is that tranſcendency of Holineſs alſo in him the Man, that is not in all the Creatures put together; and ſo in that reſpect alſo, he is the Image of the Inviſible God. If it could be ſuppoſed that any meer Creature could have as much habitual Holineſs as the Humane Nature hath, (which were too bold a ſuppoſition) yet notwithſtanding there is a Holineſs over and above that habitual Grace in him, there is a Relative Holineſs, that caſts the Shine, the Superlative Glory on that Habitual. And the Stamp thereof that is upon this Holineſs, is better than all the Coin. It is the Holineſs of a Man united to God, and who is God, and this makes it acceptable. There is a Relative Holineſs that follows from the Hypoſtatical Union, that gives all the worth to what he did, and to all the Grace that is in himſelf; and this no Creature is capable of. And this was that that made him able to ſatisfy. And this is the Holineſs that God takes the great Contentment in, and could never have been ſatisfied out of it; and by reaſon of this, his Righteouſneſs may be imputed to Sinners, which the Righteouſneſs of a meer Creature could not be; it is the Holineſs of God, as his Blood is ſaid to be the Blood of God.

I might ſhew the like in all other Attributes, and it is a noble Subject to ſpend pains upon, to ſet forth, and cut out every Limb of this vaſt Image of all God's Attributes that are in Chriſt, meerly upon his Perſonal Union. I have limb'd out only theſe two or three parts of it, ut ex pede; that by the like proportion we might infer the vaſtneſs of all the reſt.

CHAP. III.

The Honour, and Royalties, that appertain unto Christ God-Man, as ordained such in God's first Decrees, to be the final Cause, or End of the whole Creation, and Works of God. In what Sense he is the First-born of every Creature. The Reasons why it is not to be understood in respect of his Eternal Generation, as Son of God. It is spoken of him in Consideration of a Dignity, or Birth-right, which the Man Jesus Christ, united with the Second Person in the Trinity, has above all other Creatures. He is also the First-born, in that he was first in order intended in the Eternal Purposes of God. He is the final Cause, or End, for which all things were created. And upon the presupposition of his being decreed to be God-Man, it belonged to him, as his due, to be the universal End for whom all Things should be made: This was an high Prerogative of which no meer Creature could be capable.

I Am now in the next Place, to describe, in a second Branch of this Head, certain other Royalties or Prerogatives, incommunicable also to any Creature, which belong to Christ God-Man, whereof some are mentioned in the Text; as that, He is the First-born of every Creature, vers. 15. and that he is before all things, vers. 17. And that All things are for him, vers. 16. Which eminently imply two things. 1. That he was the first and prime Birth in God's Decree: And, 2. Also holds the Honour of being the End or final Cause of all. These I put together, because they more properly belong to this Head; and the latter serves to explain and illustrate the former: and still let it be taken along, that they are meant of him, not simply considered as Second Person, but as God-Man.

To begin with the first. The First-born of every Creature.

For the Explanation of the Import of it, I will,

1. Shew, Negatively, what is not only to be understood.

And, 2. Then, Positively, open the full extent of it, and shew, that what I have declared, is intended thereby.

I. It is not spoken of him simply as Second Person only, as some Interpreters have understood: So, as that his Eternal Generation, as Son of God, should be only intended. Concerning which Assertion, let me first make this Apology; That whereas this, and the like Scriptures, are alledged by our Divines, to prove that Christ

Chriſt is God, as Second Perſon; this Interpretation that I am about to give, doth not overthrow it, but eſtabliſh it: For theſe Things could not have been ſaid of him, had he not been God. And there are other Scriptures, that do more plainly and directly eſtabliſh that, fully enough: but yet ſo, here I take it, that Eternal Generation, is not meant directly, or immediately, though by Conſequence it is argued, and moſt ſtrongly. And there are theſe two Reaſons for this.

1. Becauſe in Scripture Phraſe, he is not in reſpect to that his Eternal Generation, called Primogenitus, the Firſt-begotten, but Unigenitus, the Only-begotten. But this here is another Phraſe; it is the Firſt-begotten.

2. If that had been directly intended, he would not have called him the Firſt-begotten, in Compariſon unto Creatures; but here he ſaith the Firſt-born of every Creature: Every Creature having had a Birth in the Apoſtle's Intention, as well as he. He is ſaid in Job, to be the Father of the Snow, and of the Ice, Job 38. 28, 29. But here, firſt, to make Chriſt, ſimply as Second Perſon conſidered, and his Eternal Generation, as the Only-begotten Son, to be meant here; and then to compare and range him, in reſpect of that Generation, with the Birth of all Creatures elſe, and that he is the firſt-begotten of every Creature in that Senſe; this had not been ſuitable. For as between him, as ſo conſidered, and them, there is no Compariſon can be made: ſo nor between his Generation, and theirs. His Title, and Heraldry, would have been emblazoned, from the order he bears with thoſe of his own Rank, the other Perſons, Father, and Holy-Ghoſt; among whom to have been called the Second of thoſe glorious Perſons, is worthy of him, as ſuch: But to ſay, The Firſt-born of every Creature, and mean his Eternal Generation; of which the Prophet ſays, Who hath known it? Prov. 30. 4. The very Compariſon of this high Birth of his, with the metaphorical Generation (ſo I muſt call it, when attributed to the moſt of Creatures inanimate, &c.) of every ordinary Creature, this had diſhonoured him too much. I muſt ſay of this, what the Apoſtle of Melchiſedec's Generation, Heb. 7. 6. His Deſcent (or Pedigree) is not counted among them, nor theirs to be named with his.

That that Name, which Agur in the Proverbs, *Ch.*30.4. ſo adores, as not to be known by us, and equals it, and compares it with God's only; What is his Name? (ſpeaking of God) and what his Sons Name? If thou canſt tell. Should be ſet in the Alpha, the firſt Name in the Alphabet, and Catalogue of Creatures; no, it is altioris ordinis, of another, and an higher Rank and Kind than ſo. This hath cauſed me to think, that the Firſt-begotten of every Creature, it is ſpoken of him, as he is admitted into the Catalogue, or Society of the Creatures, as his Fellows, (as I may ſo ſpeak) into their Number, or, as he is become one of them. Or, take him as he is the Son of God, ordained to Human Nature, and then to have his Name ſtand higheſt in the Tables, amongſt all the reſt of the Creatures; and to be called the Firſt-begotten of them, it is no way a diſparagement to him; for he is become as one of them, even a Creature among them, a Man, and ſo of the ſame kind or rank with other Creatures. Again, that which yet heightens, and further preſents the Incongruity of it, is, that it is not ſaid here, that he was the Firſt-born of many Brethren, but of every Creature. To have ſaid it in reſpect of thoſe his many Brethren, they being only Sons though adopted, and he the Natural, had held a better Equipage; but 'tis far lower, even of every Creature. And when he is ſaid to be the Firſt-born of many Brethren; as in Rom. 8. 29. For whom he did foreknow, he alſo did predeſtinate to be conformed to the Image of his Son, that he might be the Firſt-born among many Brethren. 'Tis ſpoken of him in reſpect of Predeſtination, not of his Eternal Generation, as you may ſee there. And ſo much for the Negative, in what Senſe it is not directly to be underſtood.

Therefore, II. To ſhew Poſitively, in what reſpect this Primacy and Primogeniture, and this in Compariſon with every Creature, is attributed to him.

1. It is ſpoken of him in reſpect of a Dignity, and a Birth-right, that this God-Man hath at that Inſtant; he is admitted amongſt the Creatures (as by being ordained to Human Nature he was admitted): That though he thereby became of their Rank, yet he muſt be the chief, and have the Birth-right. In *Pſal.*89.27. You ſhall find the Birth-right (and that as ſpoken of Chriſt) is put for Dignity and and Excellency. Also I will make him my First-born, (and what is meant by First-born, is explained in the next Words,) higher than the Kings of the Earth. It noteth out therefore an Excellency and a Dignity, a heighth, and a being Prince of the Kings of the Earth, as Rev. 1. 5. So a Prince of all the Creatures. Chap. 3.

2. But still there must needs be more in it, for in the Scripture, the Dignity, the Birth-right, was directly founded upon being the First-born. So Christ is not only said to be the First-born, because he was made higher than they all, but because he was born first, and therefore higher and greater than all. 2 Chron. 21. 3. He gave the Kingdom to Jehoram, because he was First-born, the first brought forth, the opening of the Womb. So that now the Dignity that Christ hath, it is because he is the First-born, some way or other of every Creature. Therefore, as it was said, it cannot be meant of his Eternal Generation, as Second Person. And if there were no more, I might add this against it, That it were infinitely incongruous, (to speak after the manner of Men) to say that the Creatures lay in the same Womb, or came out of the same Loins, that the Son of God, as Second Person, lay in, and came out of. Therefore, there must be some other Womb in which Christ and the Creatures all lay, and in respect thereunto he is the First-begotten: and that Womb is the Eternal Decrees and Purposes of God; which is the common Womb, both of Jesus Christ, as he is God-Man, and of all Creatures else. For that he was God-Man by Predestination is clear, 1 Pet. 1. 20. Who verily was fore-ordained before the Foundation of the World: and being so, he was in this, as in all other respects, to have a Primacy and Preheminence, and so to be in a true, and just Sense, the First-begotten in that Womb. And thus Rom. 8. 29. a Primogeniture, or a being the First-born, is attributed to him in respect of Predestination. For the Apostle in comparing the Rank or Order, wherein we were placed in respect of him, says, That we were predestinated to be conformed to his Image, therefore he was in some respect predestinated. That (as it follows) he might be the First-born among many Brethren; and so he, as the Eldest, came forth first: That as in all Births, according to the Order of Nature, the Head comes forth before the Body: so did Christ, the Head of the Body, the Church, (as vers. 18. he is called.) And therefore, Eph. 1. 4. We are said to be elected in Christ. Now then, there is this further addition, which heightens the reason of it, That if he be the First-born of the First-born of the Creatures, (for so the Saints are called, Heb. 12. 23. To the general Assembly and Church of the First-born, which are written in Heaven, and to God the Judg of all, and to the Spirits of just Men, made perfect:) then he must necessarily be the First-born of all other Creatures, who were all ordained both for them and him.

And this may be one true sense of that which follows, vers. 17. That he is, πρὸ πάντων, before all Things, namely, in respect of the Order of God's Intention. God, though viewing and ordaining all his Works, ad extra, at once, yet therein chiefly aimed at Christ, as under himself, the End and Perfection of all. Which also hath been understood by many to be the true meaning of that uttered by Christ himself (in the Proverbs) under the Name of Wisdom, Prov. 8. 22. The Lord possessed me in the beginning of his Way, before his Works of Old. It is a place much and often cited, as also this Text by them that have been of this Opinion, (which have not been a few in several Ages).

And, 1. God's Ways, are his Works, ad extra, wherein he purposed to go forth and manifest himself towards Creatures. Now in the beginning of these Ways, and the first thoughts of them, did God possess Christ God-Man in his Fore-knowledg, as the richest Treasure of all his Glory to be manifested in his Creation, without which he would not have proceeded to any other Work, or have walk'd forth in any Creature-way, but rested in that blessed Society of the Three without them. And it is not said, In the beginning of his Way, but it is also further added, that he possessed him before his Works of Old. Which is the same that is here said, He is before all Things; as also in saying, The first-begotten of every Creature. And for further illustration's-sake, it is added, vers. 23. I was set up from Everlasting, e're ever the Earth was. The Phrase (I was set up) will less permit us to understand it of that eternal Generation of his, as he is Second Person, than in those other Expressions that have been here insisted on;

on; for that was an Act of God's Will: but that other, by a natural Act of a myſterious Generation.

I am now approaching to that ſecond Royalty mentioned in this Branch, Chriſt's being alſo the final Cauſe or End for whom all Things were made. And this is ſuch a Reſpect, as the Creatures were not capable of one towards another. Which Point is conjunct with this of his Priority in God's Decrees, and indeed is the greateſt Confirmation and Proof of it.

All acknowledge a Priority, though not of one Act of God's Decrees before another in a ſucceſſive order as in reſpect of the Decrees themſelves, (ſuch as in our Purpoſes and Thoughts there is through our Imperfection) yet in reſpect of the Objects of God's Decrees compared together among themſelves. So one thing decreed by God, is ordered by his Will to have a reference unto, or dependence upon another thing, though at the ſame time decreed. And ſo in that reſpect there comes to be attributed, even to the Acts of God's Will, as terminated upon ſuch Objects. That he intended one thing firſt and chiefly, and another ſubordinately unto it. And accordingly the Scripture ſpeaks of God's Decrees condeſcending therein to the Conceptions of Men. And though in Men there are ſucceſſive Acts in their Purpoſes and Reſolutions, becauſe Men are not wiſe enough, in the ſame inſtant in which they ſet up an End, to ſee and take in all the Means that ſhall conduce to the attaining of it; or if they were, yet they are not able, by the ſame Act, to judg which is the beſt and moſt convenient: yet God, through the perfection of his Knowledg, can do this, and ſo make but one Act of all, both one and the other. Yet ſtill, what is in Man imperfectly, is to be look'd at as an Image of God's proceedings herein, in a tranſcendent way of Perfection. And ſo we may truly attribute the ſame Thing unto God's Will in his Decrees, as to the ſubſtance of them in that perfect way of his, that we do unto Man in his that is imperfect. And hence God is ſaid to work by Counſel, Epheſ. 1. 11. In whom alſo we have obtained an Inheritance, being predeſtinated according to the Purpoſes of him who worketh all Things after the Counſel of his own Will. It is in Aſſimilation or Likeneſs unto what is in Man: Becauſe as an Act of Knowledg and Deliberation is ſaid to be firſt in us, e're an Act of Will or Determination what to do: ſo in God himſelf, an Act of Knowledg, or of the full Cognizance of what is to be done, is (after the manner of Men) ſuppoſed to be before an Act of his Will. And anſwerably in his Will, the Intention of the End is ſaid to be before the Intention of the Means. And this Priority of the End afore the Means, is taken for granted to have been in God's Decrees: for if God had not thus proceeded, by ordaining the Means unto the End, he could not by us have been conceived to work with that perfection of Wiſdom which muſt be in him. For Wiſdom always conſiders, firſt, an End, then fit Means tending to that End.

Yet ſtill this is but what is common to all other Things that are ordained to be as Ends by God, unto which other Things are ſubordinated; and in this Scale there is a kind of Priority allowed one Creature to have had in God's Decrees, in reſpect of others its fellow-Creatures. As the Sun was intended for the enlightning of the World, and the Generation and Conſervation of all things therein, by its heat and influence; and yet both it and the World were intended for Man, and Man and all the World for the Elect, as the Apoſtle ſays, 1 Cor. 3. ult. All Things are yours, and you are Chriſt's, and Chriſt is God's.

Now all the Creatures fall infinitely ſhort of that Royalty which I hence attribute to Chriſt, God-Man, when I affirm him to have been the final Cauſe or End of all Things. And look how far his Prerogative herein is found to exceed that which may be ſuppoſed might have been any of theirs; by ſo much is thereby confirmed (according to the ground even now laid) a priority as tranſcendent that he verily holdeth in God's Decrees.

Now he holdeth a preheminence in this infinitely above all Creatures, and therefore even in this his being the End of all alſo.

And

And this Preheminence is held forth in these Particulars.

1. In that he was set up as an Universal End of the whole Creation of God, For whom all Things (says the Text) were created, vers. 16. And this is not to be predicated, either of Angels or Men. God vouchsafed neither of them that Honour, as to be the general and universal End of all Things. This Priority, is a similitudinary Prerogative of what God alone is, as one God, so that his Christ should be one Lord, 1 Cor. 8. 6. over all Things, and but one. And herein is Christ so the Image of God, as no Creature is; as in respect of Dominion over this visible World, Man is said to be the Image of God, (Gen. 1. 27, 28.) as his Type.

2. And further this Universality of Endship, (as I may call it) he holds with a peculiar Transcendency, which no Creature is capable of: for it ariseth from his Distance, and absolute Soveraignty (which if he be ordained to subsist in an Human Nature, that Nature must be raised unto) which he hath over all the Creatures. His Person decreed to subsist in Man's Nature, was considered by God, in his Decrees, to be of that worth and distance above the Creatures, that their very Being and Existing, was to become absolutely and simply his Propriety. He was to be absolute Lord of their Being, even as God is. But thus were not Man, or any of the Sons of Men, to the Being of Angels, nor Angels of Men; though as Superior in Rank the one may serve the other: But yet thus Men, and Angels are subordinated to Christ as their End. This we have in Heb. 2. Where, by this Argument, the Apostle proveth that that Man, spoken of by David, Psal. 8. could be none but the Man, Christ Jesus, nor any meer Creature; because he was (as set forth by David) advanced to an higher Prerogative than the Angels, in that God hath put all things in subjection under him, yea, under his Feet, (as the Phrase there is): So, as he hath left nothing that is not put under him, vers. 8. He therefore is not only the Universal End of all Things (if such, we could suppose any one meer Creature might have been constituted by God,) but he is the absolute Sovereign End; so as they are under his Feet, as Vassals, whose whole Being is for him, and at his dispose: Of which Prerogative no meer Creature is capable. And even in this Prerogative Sense, he is the Universal End of all: For God hath exempted nothing from Subjection to him, (as the Apostle there saith); Elect Angels are not thus the End of Elect Men; nor Elect Men of Elect Angels. He hath not put into subjection to the Angels the World to come, (says the same Apostle in the same Place, vers. 5.) Christ has an absolute and entire Lordship. And therefore he must needs be first in Intention, and so before all Things: as of no other Thing or Creature it can be said.

3. Add to this, That suppose him at all decreed to be God-Man, and united to a Creature, it was with all his due, to be ordained by God the End of all Things decreed together with him. And this is and was an incommunicable Royalty to any meer Creature, nor must be said, nor could have been true of any of them, but proper to him alone. And this makes a third Priority or Precedency in Endship, as also in God's Decrees.

As touching this third and last Head, I shall do two things further.

1. I must explain and declare the Ground of it. And,
2. Shew the Glory of this Priority, above what any Creature hath been capable of.

For the Explanation of it.

1. It is true, That the Second Person his subsisting in an Human Nature, or his being God-Man, dependeth wholly upon the Ordination of God, and that in respect of his being Second Person singly considered, or in respect of that Human Nature that was united to him. 1. It cannot be said to have been a natural due to the Second Person to be made Man: And, 2. Much less was it a due to that Nature of Man assumed, to be made one Person with the Son of God.

2. It is also as true, That though God would have thus decreed his Son to be God-Man; yet it was not necessary that God should make any Creatures at all, and so not necessary that he should have ordained to make any other Fellow-Creatures with him besides himself. And so it was not necessary in this Sense, that they should have been for him as their End: But God might for ever have rested in the communicating himſelf unto that Man, God's Fellow only; (and it had been a ſufficient Motive to him, and a fulneſs of Satisfaction had thereby ariſen unto him alone therein, to ſee and behold and enjoy the Image of his own Perfections in a Creature united to his Son.) And therein he had ſhewn his own Greatneſs, and Superiority above this his Chriſt, in this; that himſelf was the Supream End of him, but he actually the End of nothing elſe, that was ordained to be made for him.

But, 3. That which I further affirm is this, That ſuppoſing God would decree him to be God-Man, and to ſubſiſt in an Human Nature; and likewiſe, withal would ordain Multitudes of other Things, Angels and Men together (as de facto God did); that then it becomes the neceſſary due of this Chriſt, and that as God-Man, ſo decreed, to be ſet up by God in thoſe his Decrees, as the End of all thoſe Things. Yea, and further, that God ſhould ſo Mould, and Caſt the whole Frame of his Deſigns, concerning his Creation, intended as that all ſhould tend to him as their End, as well as to God's own Glory. So, that whereas God, in that which is called his ſimple Fore-Knowledg, or Counſel, (whereby he had the view of Chriſt, and of all Things elſe he did decree afore him, before that his Will did determine them to be) muſt needs foreſee, that if he predeſtinated this Second Perſon to be a Man, and one Perſon with him at all, and other Things together with him (and it is hard to think that he ſhould ſcape his firſt view, of all Things elſe); That then this did become that Man's Due, and the neceſſary Conſequent of that Union with God's Son, that he ſhould be ſo far reſpected and preferred by God, in his Decrees, as to have the Place of a Supream End of all and every Thing; and accordingly, that God ſhould caſt his Decrees for Chriſt's Glory as well as for his own: Which indeed is his own, even to honour the Son as the Father is honoured, John 5. 23. Hence as we read Heb. 1. 2. that Chriſt is ſaid to be appointed the Heir of all Things. So at the 4*th* Verſe, we alſo read, That he was made ſo much better than the Angels, as he hath by Inheritance obtained a more excellent Name than they. In the firſt Speech the Apoſtle calls him the appointed Heir, becauſe that Man ſhould be aſſumed to that Perſonal Union, and Sonſhip; upon which this Inheritance befel him: this was by a free Decree and Ordination of God. But yet withal, the 4*th* Verſe tells us, that yet, He obtained it by Inheritance. And if he were appointed Heir, this was due to the very Appointment. And by ſuch a Right as no Creature, no not the Angels are capable of; and yet ſtill it is founded, take him as God-Man, that he is made Lord and Chriſt, as Peter in the Acts ſpeaks, Acts 2. 36. Therefore let all the Houſe of Iſrael know aſſuredly, that God hath made that ſame Jeſus, whom ye have crucified, both Lord and Chriſt. Yet ſo, as if he be appointed God's Son, as Man, at all, this is his due and his natural Inheritance: and this other alſo follows hereupon in God's Appointments and Ordinations; that all Things ſhould be ſo Caſt and Moulded as to be for him. For the Heir is the End of the Inheritance, as well as he is the Lord of it. And ſo muſt Chriſt be of all the Creatures appointed and co-ordained with him, and for him, to be thus, both the appointed Heir, and yet the natural Heir (as God-Man) is no more Contradiction, than to ſay of him, as Man, that he was both God's natural Son, as being one Perſon with the natural Son of God, and yet to have been predeſtinated unto that Sonſhip; becauſe he was predeſtinated to that Union, upon which this followed. So that he was to be the End of all, this was a free Act of God's Appointment, becauſe his being united to his Son was by a free Act of his Will alſo. And yet, for him to be made the End of all Things, was a natural neceſſary Conſequent of God's decreeing him unto that Union. And God fore-ſaw that this would, and muſt be the neceſſary Conſequent of it, and yet freely ordained him to it. And therefore, this, and all ſuch natural and neceſſary Prerogatives that follow upon it, and which could not have been withheld or cut off, are yet all of them ſaid to be by Appointment.

And indeed, others ſay the ſame Thing: For when it is affirmed, that Chriſt needed not have merited any Glory to himſelf, they ground it upon this: Becauſe, by Virtue of the Hypoſtatical Union, all Glory is his natural Due, and a neceſſary Conſequent of it. Which ſurely is a Truth, though it may not be made uſe of, to exclude another Title unto this his own Glory, namely that of Purchaſe: For it is no Diſhonour to him to have two Claims.

And

And if it be said, That you must suppose him first, to be ordained God-Man, by a Decree, ere this the Consequent of it could become his Due: And therefore, in the Act of God's decreeing him, and all Things with him: (which decreeing him, and them, was done by one single and entire Act.) This was not look'd at by God as a natural Due to him. Chap. 3.

The Answer is, That by that simple fore-Knowledg, which is antecedent to his Decrees, whereby he knows all Things that his Will determines, afore he doth determine them; he must needs know this would, and must be the Consequent of his decreeing Christ to be God-Man, if ever he did it; and so he predestinating upon such a Knowledg, he intended him so to be, even in that Act of decreeing him and all Things, and shaped these his Decrees accordingly.

Now for the second Thing propounded; namely, the Eminency of this his Priority, as thus stated, that it is such a Prerogative, as no meer Creature could be capable of; Besides what hath been said and observed out of Heb. 1. 4. and Chap. 2. 8. it is certain, it cannot be said to be the natural Due of the best Angels or Men, that God should make them the End of any Thing else decreed, or to be created together with them. It is true that God makes one Creature subordinate to another, as its End, intending it for the use of another. Thus 1 Cor. 11. 9. The Man was not created for the Woman, but the Woman for the Man; and so the World for both: Yet so, as it was not a Due, that if both Man and Woman should be created, the Woman should be for the Man: For in Heaven, though the Sexes remain distinct, yet there the Woman is no more for the Man, than the Man for the Woman. And this Co-ordination one with another, God might have made in all Things, and none in Subordination to another, especially Angels, and Elect-Men: But that the Angels should serve the Elect, this is meerly from an Ordination of his Will. And he might have made this World and Man in it, and yet not have subjected this World unto Man; and many more Worlds he might have made, which should not at all have subserved Man; but might some other way have been for his Glory: As it will be, if this World should stand and continue after the Day of Judgment, as some have thought. So, that for one Creature to be decreed the End of another, was a matter of meer Arbitrarineſs, and pure Liberty unto God. As there is a Decree that all these Things should Exist and have a Being; so there must be a further distinct Decree appointing the one to serve the other: upon which alone this Subordination doth wholly depend. So that not the Existence of the Things only arise from his Will, but also the Order of them, that this should be for this, and this for that; the one hath no other Claim or Due, but God's meer and arbitrary Decree. But in God's decreeing Christ, and all other things for him, the Matter standeth in far different Terms. For although (as was said) that he should subsist in Man's Nature, that depended meerly upon a Decree, and was in no respect his Due; but that he should be the Heir, the Lord, the End of all Things, is so the Object of God's Will and Decree, as withal he may claim it (supposing an Intention in God, that he shall be God-Man at all) as a Due, and Royalty, and Prerogative entailed to his being decreed God's Son, by the Supreamest Law that can come between God and his Son, which cannot be made void, or he be bereaved of that Prerogative. Even as if God himself purposes to make any Creature, this Law naturally falls, upon his decreeing of it, that it be ordained for his own Glory; Now say I, for Christ's also: For, by the Union, that Man becomes the natural Son of God, and so this Right is natural unto him. I will give Instance to illustrate this difference between Christ and the Creatures: Take any meer Creature, the Angels, and Souls of Men, and as its having a Being depended simply upon an Arbitrary Decree of God's; so its having an everlasting Being does also. God might freely have ordered the contrary, and they could no way have claimed it as a Due, or a Deprivement of their Right; it was no natural Due that was the Consequent of its Being. But if God decree his Son to subsist in an Human Nature once, then his being ever as a Man, and God for ever to dwell in him, is the natural Consequent of the former; for the Union is indissoluble, he being thereby invested into the Prerogatives of God's Son, whereof this is one, Thy Years fail not; whereas the Creatures may change and wax old. So Heb. 1. 11, 12.

BOOK III

They ſhall periſh, but thou remaineſt; and they ſhall wax old as doth a Garment: And as a Veſture ſhalt thou fold them up, and they ſhall be changed; but thou art the ſame, and thy Years ſhall not fail.

I do not, nor muſt not affirm, that this is not at all the Object of a Decree of God's: For it is certain that all his Works, ad extra (whereof this is one) are ſuch. Yea, this is one part and piece of that Fulneſs in the Text, of which, as of the reſt, it is ſaid in the due of all, Col. 1. 19. It pleaſed the Father that all Fulneſs ſhould dwell in him. And again, Pſal. 2. 6, 7. I will publiſh the Decree, I have ſet my King on my holy Hill. His being King was the Object of a Decree. Yet ſtill I add withal, that it was withal his Due and Inheritance.

Neither do I intend that it was a Decree only, and meerly in this reſpect, to this firſt Grace, That this Man ſhould be united to God's Son, being the Object of a pure and meer Arbitrarineſs in God, to have, or not to have decreed it. That therefore, this other Dignity (that is, the natural Conſequent of it) is ſaid alſo to be ſo decreed: Virtually, (or as we ſay, Volitum in cauſa) becauſe that that which this wholly depended upon, was the Object of a Decree meerly free, but I acknowledg it truly the Object of a free Decree of God's Will, as well as the former. For he was willing and well pleaſed in it, and from ſuch a Will appointed him the Heir, and made him Lord, and Chriſt. Yet ſtill, ſay I not in that ſenſe Arbitrary, that ſuppoſing withal (as hath been ſo often ſaid) him to be united to the Son of God, that by a contrary Decree this Royalty might for ever have been denied him, and the contrary determined by God.

And there is no Incongruity in this, or Derogation from God; that this and other the like Priviledges ſhould be both his natural Due, and yet the Object of a Decree. We ſay againſt the Papiſts in a matter of a leſs alloy, That if God could make Man at firſt with an Underſtanding, and a Will; it was by the Law of Creation, a neceſſary and natural Due to that Man to be created Holy, and in the Image of God, and not in pure Naturals, as the Papiſts Dream; and yet to give Man that Holineſs at firſt, was the Object of a Decree over and above his being made Man. But this Dueneſs of Chriſt's being the End of all, (if at all the Chriſt) is of an higher Nature; though I illuſtrate it by that of a leſſer, between the Creator and the Creature.

Alſo we know, that in Chriſt himſelf, the Perſonal Glory he hath in Heaven, he holds by a double Tenure; the one as God's natural Son; the other by Merit: and yet over and above it is ſaid to be given him by his Father, as an Act of his Will and Decrees. It is true, that for the manner or way of Contrivance, how all ſhould tend and ſerve to his Glory, this muſt be granted to be meerly Arbitrary, and dependent on the Counſels of God's Will: Even as the ordering how they ſhall ſerve to his own Glory is. Yet that all ſhould be caſt for Chriſt's Glory, as for God's (though in a Subordination unto God's) is a neceſſary natural Law between the Father and the Son: And ſo he holds it, and not ſimply by Arbitriment.

Thus much for the ſecond Particular, That his Royalty, in being the firſt of God's Decrees, and therein to be the End of all Things, is held forth in theſe Words, Firſt-begotten, &c. He is before all Things.

But concerning his Priority in God's Decrees, there will be occaſion to ſpeak more hereafter, in other places of this Diſcourſe.

CHAP.

CHAP. IV.

That by this designed Union of the Son of God to this Individual Creature the Man Jesus, and in the Person of this his Son so considered, God hath and doth make the highest manifestation of his Glory, and communication of Himself, such as by no created Ways or Means else could have been attained.

AND this third Branch, is the natural Result of both, especially the first, which was, That he was the Image of the Invisible God: Which is spoken in respect of the manifestation of the God-head to us, in his Humane Nature.

Herein then, thirdly, lies the Divine Glory of Christ, That God's highest Ends, of making and ordaining any Creature, being the Manifestation of himself, and the Communication of himself to us. If it be manifest that by this Personal Union he attaineth these Ends more fully than any other way, then this Design must needs be acknowledged the Sovereign and Eldest Birth, and first Born of God's Thoughts, and the Glory of Christ as God-Man, answerable hereunto.

It is true, the Work of Redemption addeth hereunto some pieces, as the Manifestation of Mercy, Justice; and the Story thereof giveth us a new and compleat Edition of God's Attributes, (which I have shewn at large in that Treatise, The Glory of the Gospel); Yet if the Ends for which this Union of God-Man in the Person of Christ alone serves for, be considered, it will be seen, that the ground-work, or the substance of that Glory on which those other Colours of Redemption are laid, and do but super-add unto, are found in the Person it self, simply considered as God-Man. Yea, and the most glorious of those Ends God had in the whole compass of this Design of Christ's Incarnation, are the immediate Result of his personal Union to our Nature, and of us unto him. However, this much is granted on all Hands, That the Glory God hath by this Work, and the Issue of it alone, exceeds infinitely what could have arisen from any, or all of his goings forth in making meer Creatures; and this, say I, moved him above all else in his purposes, to make any Creature.

The eminent Ends God had to move him to make all, or any Creature, were two.

1. The Manifestation of Himself, and his glorious Perfections to Creatures reasonable, that they might glorify him.

2. To shew his Love, and communicate his Goodness unto those Creatures reasonable, which he would set Himself to love.

The first respecteth Himself, who made all Things for Himself and his Glory; and therefore he resolved to manifest the Glory of all his Attributes unto the full.

The second respecteth the Creatures; to some of which it became Him, who was Goodness it self, to communicate also that Goodness to the highest and utmost.

Now take this great and most glorious Design of assuming some one Creature reasonable, (which by his Decree was Man, and that Man Jesus in special) into Person with one of the three Persons; which Lot, by his Decree, fell on that Son of Man: And take this singly and alone, without the super-added Project of Redemption, and we shall find, that both these great Ends are thereby more fully accomplish'd (though this Work of Redemption added, makes them more more full) than could poſſibly have been attained by the Creation of Millions of Worlds of meer Creatures (if this ſhould have been ſuppoſed wanting) made to manifeſt God's Glory and his Goodneſs in; although they had all been made in never ſo ſeveral Variety, which the Wiſdom of God could have contrived the Models of; or never ſo glorious in their ſeveral Varieties.

For Demonſtration whereof;

Firſt; Would God manifeſt himſelf as God, and make known thoſe Glories lock'd up in himſelf; which was the chief End of Creating, as Rom. 1. 20. The Inviſible Things of him (that is his Attributes, which cannot otherwiſe be ſeen or known by us, to which the words of this Text agree) from the Creation of the World, are clearly ſeen,—even his Eternal Power and Godhead. Here is a way, this is a way, namely, to aſſume Man's Nature into perſonal Union with his Son, puts down all ways of meer and ſimple Creation that can be ſuppoſed. More of God's Glory ſhall inſtantly ſhine forth in that ſmall Model, the Man Chriſt Jeſus, having the God-head dwelling in him perſonally, than by God's making Millions of Worlds never ſo various, or ſo richly furniſhed with Glories. For ſtill in them, at beſt, would have appeared but τὰ θεῖα, the Things of God, as Rom. 1. 12. And the more diverſified they had been, the more ſcatteredly and brokenly would thoſe Things of God have appeared in them, even but as Foot-ſteps, Veſtigia Dietatis, and at beſt but as the dark ſhadow of a Man in broken and ſcattered pieces to be pick'd up here and there, and ſet together, ſome reſemblance or ſhadow of the God-head would appear. But in the Man Chriſt Jeſus, God himſelf appears Perſonally, God manifeſted in the Fleſh, 1 Tim. 3. 16. ſeen of Angels, and that with ſo great and ſupereminent a Glory, that they cover their Faces, and fall down at it. For when the Type of his Perſonal Glory, as he was to come in the Manhood, was preſented, filling his Temple: The Seraphims are ſaid to cover their Faces; Iſa. 6. 1, 2, 3. In the Year that King Uzziah died, I ſaw alſo the Lord ſitting upon a Throne, high and lifted up, and his Train filled the Temple. About it ſtood the Seraphims; each one had ſix Wings; with twain he covered his Face, and with twain he covered his Feet, and with twain he did fly. And one cried unto another, and ſaid, Holy, holy, holy is the Lord of Hoſts, the whole Earth is full of his Glory. And that that Prophecy and Viſion was ſpoken of him, as God manifeſted in the Humane Nature, is evident by Chriſt's own applying it to himſelf, as propheticalⁱy ſpoken of him as to come, John 12. 41. Theſe things ſaid Iſaiah, (Chriſt having, in the 40*th* verſe, cited the very words of his Prophecy in the 10*th* Verſe of that 6*th* Chapter) when he ſaw his Glory, and ſpake of him, and ſo of thoſe Times when he was in the Fleſh, and that Glory that followed. And therefore alſo, in Heb. 1. 3. when he had ſet him out in that Glory the Humane Nature now wears in Heaven, being the Brightneſs (or Shine) of his Father's Glory, his Favour being as the Sun, the Glory of Chriſt, God-Man; but the ἀπαύγασμα, the Shine, the Luſtre of it; yet ſuch as it there follows, verſ. 6. Let all the Angels of God worſhip him. Thus was he ſeen of Angels, (who worſhipped him) the moſt curious Spectators that ever God made: and he was ſeen too of Men, John 1. 14. We ſaw his Glory, as of the only begotten Son of God; which appeared ſo tranſcendent a Glory, as who-ever ſaw it, muſt needs acknowledg, This Man is God, This is He. Therefore John putteth this peculiar Character upon it, That it was as the Glory of the only begotten Son of God. By other Works you may know there is a God; but there is that peculiar Impreſs of Majeſty upon his Glory, and that brightneſs accompanies it, that you muſt ſay, when you ſee it, this is no other than God himſelf dwelling in Man. 'Tis ſuch a Glory as could not have reſulted out of Millions of Worlds, of meer Creatures made on purpoſe to ſhew forth God's Glory. And whereas the God-head, and the Glory of it, was inviſible, as the Text hath it, and lock'd up from the Eyes of all Creatures, dwelling in Light inacceſſable, 1 Tim. 6. 6. God dwelling perſonally in this Man, puts forth a peculiar Image of the God-head, and makes the Glory of the God-head viſible, (as to the utmoſt it could be) God hath on purpoſe ſtamped his utmoſt manifeſtative Glory on the Face of Chriſt, that we might ſee it in him; 2 Cor. 4. 6. God gives the Light of the Knowledg of God in the Face, (or as others read it) the Person of Jesus Christ. That as the Soul looks out in the Face, and you see more of a Man's Disposition in a Look, a Cast of his Eye, a Wink, a Blush there, than in all his Body; so of the God-head in Christ Jesus, which is his Face. He is the brightness of his Father's Glory, shining in and through a Vail of Flesh (whereof the shining of Moses's Face was but a Type and Shadow) through the Lanthorn of his Humanity, (if I may so compare it) so to relieve our Eyes in beholding the God-head, which no Eye could otherwise have done. There is a Sun behind that Vail, the Glory of which immediately shining, would have put out our Eyes. Chap. 5.

Knowledg

Now observe, how in this Design God exceedingly condescended to our Frailty. We are reasonable Creatures, clothed with Senses, desirous to prie and see what we know and hear of, to have something visible, as the disposition of the People of Israel shewed; and also appears in that Speech of Moses, Exod. 33. 18. Let me see thy Glory. Now hereby God hath satisfied this innate Curiosity that is in us; Here we may, and shall see the God that goes afore us, (as they desired, Exod. 32. 1.); here we may say, as the Apostle did, 1 John 1. 1, 2, 3. That which was from the beginning, which we have heard, which we have seen with our Eyes, which we have looked upon, and our Hands have handled of the Word of Life; (For the Life was manifested, and we have seen it, and bear witness, and shew unto you that Eternal Life which was with the Father, and was manifested unto us) That which we have seen and heard, declare we unto you, that ye also may have fellowship with us; and truly our fellowship is with the Father, and with his Son Jesus Christ.

I will instance but in the manifestation of one Attribute, and that is that which is mentioned in Rom. 1. 20. as that which is more especially instanced in, as seen in the Creation, his Eternal Power and God-head. The very knitting Man's Nature into one Person with the Son of God, was a greater Work of Power than God ever did besides. That God is made Flesh, is a greater wonder, than to have made Worlds; therefore in this Conception, and work of uniting that Nature, it is said, The Power of God shall overshadow thee, Luke 1. 35. It argues great Power, to join divers Elements in one Body, and then unto that Body to unite a Soul, and breath a Breath of Life; as when God made Man, his choicest Piece and Workmanship, a Living Soul. But he did not only all this in framing Christ's Humane Nature, the same that ours is, immediately himself, by the Holy Ghost, but further united the Son of God; and this Nature infinitely more disjoined and disproportioned each to other, than the reasonable Soul and our Bodies: Which he did, when he made him a quickning Spirit. All the Works in Nature are so far short of this, that they afford not a full similitude of it. Yea, all God's Works of Nature and Grace, are altogether bound up in it, (as the Schoolmen well shew) and exceeded by it. Of all other Works, we may say, That, Deus potuit facere melius & majus; If we take but this Work out of the Order and Chain of Things, out of the System of this World. But we may safely say, that a greater Work than this could not have been done by God himself: Which therefore is the amazement of Angels. This one Instance is but for a taste of the rest.

God's second End respects the Creatures; which was to shew his Love unto, and communicate Himself unto his Creatures. Now by this Union alone (if no other Design had been in it) he should have done it more than any other way.

Besides, that by this happy Marriage, and Union of both Natures, God hath given the utmost Pledg of his Love to his whole Creation; a kindness and respect is done unto them all; not only in that he shews he loves his Creatures, so that he will assume one of that Rank and Sort so near him; but further in this, That that Creature so assumed, was the Epitome the Compendium of them all. Man a little World, call'd, Every Creature, Mark 16. 15. To the making of whom, the Poets feigned a piece of every Creature to have been taken.

And

BOOK III.

And ſo, by the advancement of this Nature, he preferreth and advanceth at once the whole Creation, and every kind or part thereof, for ſomething common to every one is in him. There is an ἀνακεφαλαίωσις, (as I have elſe-where ſhewn) a gathering together of all Things in Earth and Heaven; and not of Creatures reaſonable, only Angels, and Men, under his Dominion as an Head; but even of all Creatures alſo in his Perſon. He is the Corner Stone of the whole Creation. Yea, and God, and all comes in to make one, and is gathered together in one, with all things elſe in him: So as God hath thereby knit all Creatures to himſelf. And therefore Hugo brings in God, ſpeaking of his making his Son a Man, thus, Do not think that in this I aim only at the Reconciliation of Men; but in him by this means the whole Creation is become amiable and lovely unto me; looking upon it in this Model or Epitome.

But more eſpecially his Love is ſhewn hereby to Man, the Darling of his Creation. Suppoſe Chriſt, God-Man, had only been given to Men as an Head and Huſband, (and they had not needed Reconciliation by him) this had been infinite Love; yea, this Gift had excelled, and doth excel all the Benefits of Redemption, if abſtractly conſidered from this other. What would Adam have given for ſuch an Huſband? Now, verſ. 18. of this Coloſſ. 1. he is called, The Head of this Body, his Church, an Head more worth than all the Body. But of this, more by and by.

I come to the ſecond Head, the Communication of the Goodneſs of the God-head unto Creatures reaſonable: And for this, the Union of the Son of God, with the Man Chriſt Jeſus, ſerves in the higheſt way. Good we know is communicable of it ſelf. Now God is Good, and ſo doth Good, (as the Pſalmiſt ſpeaks); He only is Good, as Chriſt ſays, the chiefeſt Good: Now by this ſame Law, That Bonum eſt ſui Communicativum; that is, that Goodneſs is Communicative: By the ſame alſo, Summum Bonum eſt ſummè Communicativum ſui; that is, the higheſt Good is Communicative of himſelf the higheſt way. And as to communicate himſelf to Creatures, moved him to create; ſo he was reſolved to communicate himſelf to the utmoſt, or he would never create at all; he would never have put his Hand to this Work elſe. Now he could not have made a Communication of Himſelf the higheſt way; but by a perſonal Union of ſome Perſon with a Creature reaſonable; for all Communication depends upon an Union. The Creature muſt be one with God, e're it communicate of his Goodneſs in a way of Bleſſedneſs. Now therefore by this Rule, ſtill, The nearer Union, the nearer Communication. And by the ſame proportion, the higheſt Communication cannot be without the higheſt Union. Now that higheſt Union alone, is perſonal Union of a Creature with one who was God. So then to attain this End, this was neceſſary, for the higheſt Communication would not have been attained without it.

Now by this Union, you ſhall ſee is effected the higheſt Communication; and that,

Firſt, To that Creature, or Individual Man Jeſus, that was aſſumed.

And, ſecondly, in that Nature to us that are united to him.

Firſt, To that Creature, or Nature it ſelf: For in him thereby the Fulneſs of the God-head dwells Perſonally, as ſome well tranſlate that word [Bodily]; and ſo it is the higheſt Union that may be, or might have been. He was united to God, or one that is God; not as to an Object only, or as to a Perficient only, as we all ſhall be in Heaven unto God, made perfect in One, John 17. 23. but to the Son of God, who is God, as Terminus Eſſentiæ, to terminate, and give bounds of ſubſiſtence and perſonality to that Humane Nature: So as the Humane Nature, and the Son of God, are not only one Fleſh, as Man and Wife, which is the neareſt Union with us; nor one Spirit only, as we with Chriſt, but one Perſon, (of which I have ſpoken elſe-where); And hence this Humane Nature is made God's Fellow, as Zechariah calls him, Zech. 13. 7. The Man, God's Fellow, is advanced to a Fellowſhip in this Society of Trinity; and therefore to him God communicates himſelf proportionably, without meaſure, as Chriſt in the Goſpel of John ſpeaks. Which was not due to any meer Creature, but it was his due when firſt aſſumed; No Man hath ſeen God at any time but the Son, Joh. 1. 18.

1. 18. None should have done it without him; none can see God as he doth, nor is capable of it. Chap. 4.

And, secondly, by means of this Union with, and communication unto this one reasonable Creature, there is way made for God in, and for his sake, to communicate himself unto other Creatures, who are made his Fellows, as he is God's Fellow; and this in an higher way, than by the meer Law of Creation any Creature could have attained. Others of the Sons of Men united to Christ, come to be united to God thereby, more nearly than otherwise, or any other way they should have been. For this, let me put in by the way, It was not fit, or meet, some say not possible, to have united and assumed all, or many Men, to his Union; however, not meet. It was a Dignity too great to be made common; It became not the great God, who is one in Nature, to communicate this Dignity, but unto one. And this being supposed, as for us, the Vulgus of those Creatures, whom God meant to communicate himself unto, there was no way for their behoof like unto this, That God should take one of them up to himself, and by their Union with him, and for his sake, to give forth himself to the rest. First, To marry Man's Nature in some one individual Man in this incommunicable way, and then to marry us of the same Nature unto him; and so thereby making him first partaker of the God-head in a transcendent way, as his natural due; And then when once he was so united, for his sake, and in respect of our Relation to him, to admit us to the neareſt Union, in a supernatural, or super-creation way, which meer Creatures are capable of, and which but for him, he never should have vouchsafed unto us as meer Creatures by any Law, or Covenant of our Creation. And thus through this Humanity, as through a Sacred Brest, we do, Lactare Dietatem, (as one of the Fathers speaks). And although our Redemption by Christ, as we are Sinners, is an infinite Benefit; yet his Person thus given us, is more worth than all those his Benefits, Est aliquid in Christo formosius Salvatore. And then by our Interest in his Person, we come to inherit God with him, to be Heirs, and Coheirs with Christ of God, in such a way communicated, as but for this his Union with God first, we should never have attained.

I will give but one Instance to illustrate this, as I did bring but one for the setting forth the former: Power was the Attribute I pitch'd on, as manifested in this Assumption, in the foregoing Head; and Wisdom shall be the Attribute I single out, to illustrate this other of God's communicating himself the highest way. And these two I instance in, because Christ is both the Power of God, and the Wisdom of God. Would God communicate and make known unto his Creatures reasonable, the Depths, the Riches of his Knowledg and Wisdom, as the Apostle stiles them; and communicate the Treasures of them to the utmost they are communicable. Now by means of taking up one Creature reasonable, a Man, into this highest Union, shall this be effected the highest way that could be supposed.

First, To that Creature so united; for it is his due to know more at the first instant of that his Union than all the Angels, blow up their Understandings, and fill them to the utmost wideness. For by virtue of that Union, he is presently in his Father's Bosom; as it is peculiarly said of him, John 1. 18. No Man hath seen God at any time; the only begotten Son, which is in the Bosom of the Father, he hath declared him. He is made there, by his Place, God's Privy Counsellor; The Mighty Counsellor, Isa. 9. 6. 'Tis his place by Inheritance; He hath right to know all God's Secrets; He is God's Eldest Son, his Fellow. And therefore it is said, that God lays up all the Treasures of Knowledg in him, Col. 2. 3. Because (as it follows) the Godhead dwells bodily in him; and thereby he comes to have the Spirit above measure, and that Spirit searcheth the deep Things of God. If God said of Abraham, How shall I hide from Abraham what I mean to do? Gen. 18. 17. Much less can he keep it secret from Christ; God can hide nothing from him which he means to do; and indeed, to know, it is his due. He draws nearer to God infinitely than Moses did, or Angels ever did, or shall. Moses (his Type) was taken up into the Mount, where God appeared, and Angels up into Heaven; but Moses was not taken up into this Mount, the highest place of Honour, of personal Union, standing upon which, this Man hath a full proſpect into all God's Counſels and Ways. See how Moſes is ſlighted to him, even in this. The Law came by Moſes, ſays John, Chap. 1. verſ. 17. Who, when he received it, was ſpoken to by God as never Man was. God profeſſeth he revealed himſelf to no Prophet, as to Moſes, Face to Face, Numb. 12. 8. But what follows in John 1. 17. Grace and Truth came by Jeſus Chriſt. And John gives the Reaſon of the difference, No Man hath ſeen God at any time, the only begotten Son, who is in the Boſom of the Father, he hath revealed him, verſ. 18. Moſes ſaw God, as never no Man ſaw him. But Moſes ſight was no ſight in compariſon of Chriſt's. For notwithſtanding he had ſpoken of Moſes, verſ. 17. Yet in the next Verſe he dares to ſay, No Man hath ſeen God at any time, but only this Son, his eldeſt Son, no Servant. No adopted Son ever ſaw God ſo, or ſhall do, or could do, but the Eldeſt, who is in God's Boſom.

Secondly, This way of communicating himſelf to one thus aſſumed into this Union, was the beſt means to communicate his Depths of Wiſdom to other Creatures made one with him, (for ſtill remember it was not fit that any more than one ſhould be partaker of this high Priviledg of Perſonal Union:) for this Man being himſelf thus in God's Boſom (as hath been declared) is able to declare more of God to the reſt of his Brethren, than they otherwiſe ſhould have ever known. He was firſt to ſee God, and then reveal him to others, as Joh. 1. 18. He hath revealed him, ſays the Evangeliſt. And he is able to ſpeak experimentally out of ſight, the deep Things of God; John 3. 11. We ſpeak (ſays he) the Things we have heard and ſeen, not at ſecond hand, but upon perſonal Eye-ſight. And whereas others, if they would ſpeak of the Heavenly Things to us, muſt do it under Earthly Similitudes; he is able (if we were capable of it) to ſpeak Heavenly Things in their own Idiom. So, verſ. 12. to ſet forth his Knowledg of the Things he ſpeaks, If I have told you Earthly Things, and ye believe not, (and yet Chriſt had ſpoken afore of nothing but Things Heavenly, and they only are the Object of Faith) How ſhall ye believe if I tell you of Heavenly Things? It is as if he had ſaid, I have told you but Earthly Things in compariſon of what I could tell you, if you were capable of them, I could ſpeak Heavenly in their own Dialect. And the Reaſon follows, verſ. 13. For no Man hath aſcended into Heaven, but he who came down from Heaven, even the Son of Man which is in Heaven. Yea further, He hath the Power and Skill, not by the means of words only that are Heavenly, (ſuiting Heavenly Things to Heavenly) but to create ſuch inward real Images and Rays of Heavenly Things, as ſhall manifeſt the very Things themſelves to us, in their Heavenly Splendor, and as the Beams of the Sun do let in the ſight of the Sun it ſelf into our Eyes.

2. Yea, and further, by means of this perſonal Union of our Nature with the Son of God, revealing and communicating the Knowledg of God unto us, it comes to paſs, that the greateſt Riches of Aſſurance is added unto that Knowledg; without which our Knowledg of God, and his Mind, would not be ſo fully ſatisfactory, though we could have come to know never ſo much any other way. No way could ever have been thought of, ſo to aſcertain our Belief as this. No way conduces to ſuch an Infallibility of Revelation, as this doth. If a meer Creature revealed God unto us, (as Moſes did) it might be (at leaſt) ſuppoſed not to be ſo certain, as when God-Man ſhall ſpeak. For though the words of the Prophets had a certainty in them, as Peter comparing the certainty of the Scripture, with that Voice he had heard from Heaven; 2 Pet. 1. 19. he calls it, A more ſure Word of Prophecy: So may I ſay of what God-Man ſhall ſpeak. It is infinitely a more certain ſure Word; for it is as impoſſible that he ſhould lye, as that God himſelf ſhould. Every Man may be ſuppoſed a Lyar, but we are ſure he cannot. And the Son of God being one in Perſon with him, if you hear him ſpeak, there is an impoſſibility of being deceived, for himſelf is God. Therefore, Heb. 1. 1. In theſe laſt Days he ſpake by his Son: Which is alſo again indigitated, Chap. 2. verſ. 2, 3. For if the Word ſpoken by Angels was ſtedfaſt, and every Tranſgreſſion and Diſobedience received a juſt Recompence of Reward: How ſhall we eſcape, if we neglect ſo great Salvation, which at the firſt began to be ſpoken by the Lord, and was confirmed unto us by them that heard him. And it is there brought in as a more infallible and unparallel'd Evidence of the Truth of the Gospel, above the Law, That that was given but by Angels, but this Gospel was first spoken by the Lord himself, who first broke up the Treasures of it. And hence, one of his Titles is, The Faithful Witness, Rev. 3. 14. Yea the Amen. God's [Amen.] Or, So it is; as that which Seals up all, and puts all out of Question. Chap. 5.

CHAP. V.

The Glory which Christ, as God-Man, had assigned him, before the World was, in his Election by the Father; manifested in an Explication of John 17. 5. Whether that Expression, Glorify me now, with the Glory which I had with thee before the World was, be spoken of Christ, as Second Person in the Trinity, as God, or as God-Man, appointed in God's Eternal Decree. In what proper Sense this might be said by the Man Jesus, Glorify now me, &c. How as God-Man, he can be said to have had this Glory with the Father, before the World was; when as such, he did not then Exist. What Glory it is, that is here intended, it is a Glory due to his Person. God-Man distinct from, and Superior to what followed, upon his performance of the Work of our Redemption.

JOHN 17. 5.

And now, O Father, Glorify thou me with thine own self, with the Glory which I had with thee before the World was.

TO clear and prove what is the Scope of these Words, I shall propose several Queries, and the Answers made thereunto will lay open the genuine Mind, and Sense of the Text.

1. Query is, Under what Notion, or Consideration Christ should be the Subject of that Speech, The Glory which I had with thee before the World was? Whether it be spoken of the Second Person, simply considered, as God, (which is a great Truth in it self, and which most do understand meant in this Place); or whether it be spoken of Christ, considered as God-Man, in God's Predestination; and so to involve the Man, or Human Nature. There are you see, two parts of the whole Speech: 1. And now Glorify me. And touching that, there need be no stick to apply it to the Human Nature; for he was a Subject capable of being glorified now, as upon his Ascension he was. But then how may we withal apply the other part; [With the Glory I had with thee before the World was] and take him in, as the Subject of that Glory? Yea, and if we do, it must be some way the same kind of Glory, which the Subject of the first part of that Speech prays to be now glorified withal, with the same Glory mentioned in the second part, which was before the World, and not with another: So as take which you will, whether the Divine Nature, as Second Person, or the Humane, still the same Nature must be the individual Subject of the same Glory, in either of those Speeches. We must not think to apply the one part of the Speech to the Man, or the Human Nature only; and then the other to the Divine Nature only: this will breed a Distraction, or a Division in the Sense.

My Answer to this Enquiry, and my Assertion is; That Christ, considered as God-Man, is the Subject of both: and that as the Man speaks it, so the Man is involv'd, as spoken of, and the whole Person as God-Man, Glorify me now, O Father. Now presently, upon my Ascension (says the Man) in respect of entring into an open actual Possession of that Glory, which I the Man had with thee, in the Idea of this Glory, in thy Predestination of me, ordain'd unto me before the World. But of the manner, how he the Man had it before the World, of this at large, and apart in my Answers to the other following Queries. In the mean time,

That it is the Glory that belongeth to the Man, that he prayeth for in these Words, [And now, Father, Glorify me]; and not simply as he is Second Person. This Assertion I prove both Negatively and Affirmatively.

I. Negatively. 'Tis not the Glory of the Second Person, simply, or alone considered; and therefore, it is the Glory of him as God-Man. For,

1. That he might be glorified with that Glory due to him, as Second Person simply, was not a thing to be prayed for; for it is Naturally and Essentially his Due.

2. As to that Glory, he might as well have formed his Prayer thus, Glorify thou me, with the Glory I now have with Thee; and not in this manner, And now, O Father, glorify me with the Glory which I had with thee from everlasting: For that Divine Glory of him, which is essential to him as Second Person, he had it as much now at the time he prayed, as he had it from everlasting, and all one.

3. That Word [Now] Glorify me, necessarily implies a Suspension of a Glory due before, and that could not be of his Glory, simply as Second Person: Also, that [Now] argues a Glory to be given in Time, in such a manner as not afore; and what is done in Time, concerns the Human Nature, not the Divine.

II. Positively. The Subject of the Glory pray'd for, is the Man. Austin was so far convinced of this, that though he were engaged against the Arrians, as much as any in his Time, and all the Fathers afore him, had urged this Place, to prove the Divine Nature of Christ as Second Person, his Existence from Eternity; yet betook himself to this, That it was spoken of him, as Man, and so interpreted, [The Glory which I had] to be meant, which I had by Predestination; and in that Sense [with Thee.] Now, that it is the Man, or rather the Person of God-Man, in Union together, is the Subject prayed for, is evident. Because,

1. It is the Petition of the Person who had been, and as he had been humbled, who had glorified God on Earth, and had finished his Work, and waited for this Glory until Now: As therefore, the Apostle says, the same that ascended, first descended; so I may say here: The same Person who was now presently to dye, and was Crucified the same Day, was the same, who was the Subject, the Person prayeth to be thus glorified, when he shall have done his Work. For,

2. It is a Glory suspended until this his Work were done: And therefore, [Now] Father (says he) Glorify me, &c. Answers unto that which is in Luke 24.26. Ought not Christ to have suffered these Things, and to enter into his Glory? Of which afterwards.

3. He

3. He prays for that Glory, wherein in Heaven, (when glorified) he ſhould appear viſibly, in his Human Nature, and which in the 24*th* Verſe he prays his Saints might ſee and behold; and which in the ſame Verſe, had been given him out of love before the World was; which cannot be meant of that of the Divine Nature, as Second Perſon ſimply, for that is as inviſible as God the Father is; and was not by Gift, but by Generation, communicated to him. Chap. 5.

All theſe Things cannot be the Voice of him, ſimply as Second Perſon. Fix upon it therefore, That it is the Glory of the Man, or rather God-Man, prayed for.

2. Query is, In what fair and genine Senſe can it be ſaid by the Man Jeſus; Glorify me with the Glory I had with thee before the World was?

My Anſwer, and ſecond Aſſertion is, That it was the Glory which the Second Perſon, being in God's ſingular Predeſtination of him conſtituted God-Man, had in and by the ſame Predeſtination, given him as the Glory of the only begotten Son of God, as his Due in the perfect and exquiſite Idea thereof, then given him, and pre-ordained unto him.

Unto me this hath appeared as the plaineſt and fulleſt Interpretation, and that which anſwers all Difficulties, and carries the Interpretation through, is, That the Word [I Had] relates to the Glory which he had in his ſingular and ſupereminent Predeſtination, which was the Senſe Auſtin gave long ſince. And there is that which favours this Interpretation, in the Aſpect and Correſpondency which the 22*d* and 24*th* Verſes, that follow in this Prayer, hold, and do mutually caſt upon theſe Words of verſ. 5. and theſe Words upon them ſerving to expound each other of them. The Glory thou gaveſt me, I have given them: So in verſ. 22. and then put to them verſ. 24. Father I will that they alſo whom thou haſt given me, be with me where I am, that they may behold my Glory which thou haſt given me; for thou lovedſt me before the Foundation of the World. Where, God's loving him afore the Foundation of the World, is a Phraſe all one with his having predeſtinated him out of Love, (as I ſhewed afore.) And by the Glory which thou gaveſt me, v. 22, is above all other meant, that Perſonal Glory of, and flowing from the Perſonal Union which was by Predeſtination given him as God-Man; by virtue of which firſt given him, it is, and was that he gives us a derived or Secondary Participation of Glory out of it. A Portion of Glory, and Priviledg like to this of his, wholly flowing from it, and conformed to it; yet not the ſame Hypoſtatical Union, or Perſonal Glory, which Chriſt himſelf hath, which the 24*th* Verſe ſhews: For our Glory (as there) ariſeth to us, but through our beholding that his ſo ſupereminent Glory; by which he manifeſtly declares, how it is, that the Glory given him, he gave to them: and that their Glory was to be differenced from what was perſonally his own, and proper to himſelf. His Scope being to ſhew the dependency that their Glory hath on his; and withal, how that his was firſt given him, in Predeſtination, by the Father; and that then he gave a Glory unto them, as concurring with his Father in that Gift. And it is not to ſhew at all, That our Glory is, for the Rank of it, the ſame with his: No, for our Glory he gives us, is to ariſe from our beholding his Perſonal Glory, and ſo is but a ſecond-hand derived Glory. God having firſt, and with a primary and chief intendment eſtated Chriſt abſolutely, ſingly, independently, in his perſonal Glory, and in his Predeſtination of him, God-Man, gave him that Original, as the grand Leaſe of all Creature-Glory: Therefore he is called the Lord of Glory, 1 Cor. 2. 8. And Chriſt being endowed therewith, did as freely give forth to thoſe whom God had given him (as their ſeveral Portions) under-Leaſes. Which Glory of ours, may yet in this general reſpect, be ſaid to be the ſame, in that it is ſupernatural, wholly above what by the Law of Creation, or the Covenant of Works, which from Adam we had derived; and which, though never ſo much advanced; ſhould have attained unto: For this is a Glory the ſecond Adam bequeathed us, like unto what himſelf had; which was wholly Supernatural. So then, bring all theſe together, firſt the 5*th* Verſe, The Glory I had afore the World, down to the 22*d*. The Glory thou gaveſt me, I have given them; thoſe whom thou gaveſt me, ſays verſ. 24. And I will, that they behold that my Glory: and then, the cloſe of all, in that 24*th* Verſe, For thou lovedſt me afore afore the World was, as the Spring of all; and this Connexion of all these will amount to this, That, first, in God's predestinating of him afore the World, it was that he gave him this Glory, spoken of, vers. 5. And, secondly, that that Glory was first and absolutely given him by the Father, and then ours by himself concurring with the Father, who loved us as he loved Christ, vers. 22. which Two are the Sum and Substance of what I am to prove.

This thus proved, as meant of Predestination, my Interpretation of vers. 5. [Glorify me with the Glory I had with thee afore the World was] proceeds:

1. With the Glory]; Thou hadst the Idea, the Portraiture of Me, when I was among all those other Models and Schemes of Worlds, and varieties of Creatures thou hadst in thy view, and which thou couldst have ordained to make, when as yet thou didst not. I in the Hue and Array of God-Man, simply as such considered, came up afore thee, and out-shined each and all of those creatable Glories of meer Creatures thy Power was able to make; and I took thy Heart above all those curious Pictures or Images, in the Power of thy Art, what-ever, and out-shined them all, as not worthy to be thought of, or look'd at with me or my Glory; that is, above all and afore all, thy Will and good Pleasure, did here set the Fiat of thy Desire, and of thy first Desire; for being satisfied, in the Morning, with the Image of thy self in me, thou saidst, This I purpose to be my Fellow, and my sole Delight, which no other of meer Creatures, or all, could ever have been.

2. Glorify me now with the Glory] which in decreeing of me to be God-Man, Thou hadst in thy Heart, in thy Designs and Purposes, to bestow; and didst then, and by this Decree, actually endow me with, as the natural Inheritance, Propriety, and proper Due and Concernment to that Person, thou should ordain God-Man, and one Person with thy Son; This I now beg of thee, to be now possessed of.

3. With the very same Glory, according to the exact Draught of it, that was in thy Divine Understanding, and Will, and Purposes about me; and he therefore says, with the Glory now, which I then had; that is, in the Model, the Idea, exactly answering one the other. There are two Parts of the Petition, (as was said) Glorify me now, the first; With the Glory I had, that's the second. And these two must prove to be, in a true respect, one and the same Glory.

And if any (as many do) will urge, That this latter [The Glory which I had] can be understood of no other, but of Christ's Divine Nature, or of the Second Person simply considered; then, that other part [Glorify me now] will recoil and check them, as to that Opinion: For, it must be truly, some way, the same Glory. And though it be true, that the Divine Nature, or the Second Person, he might alone say, I had a Glory with thee afore the World was; namely, the Essential Glory of the God-head; yet he might not say, glorify me now with that Glory; for that Essential Glory, was neither to be prayed for, nor was it ever laid aside, or interrupted, as it was enjoyed by him with God; No. And again, on the other Hand; For the Man to say, Glorify me now with the Glory I had with Thee; and mean, the Essential Glory of the God-head, that is as incongruous as the other. So as, take both parts of the Petition, in conjunction together, and as to belong to but one Subject, either the Man alone, or the Second Person alone; and they will never suit either, in an uniform way, or sameness of Glory. You can no more apply them both to the Divine Nature, than you can to the Humane. And yet it is plainly insinuated, to be one and the same Glory. This will never be unridled (at least, not so fairly) any other way, than by this of Predestination, viz. That look what Glory in God's ultimate Purposes and Transactions with his Son, was fore-ordained and designed him as God-Man, (and as such, He was the Subject of God's Decrees as well as We; as many Scriptures declare): And so it is exactly one and the same Glory; which is the gloss that Austin long since gave of the words; Clarifica me sicut tunc, ita & nunc: sicut tunc prædestinatione, ita & nunc perfectione: Fac in Mundo, Quod apud te jam fuerat ante mundum; Fac in suo tempore quod ante omnia tempora statuisti, &c. Glorify Me, as then, so now; as then in Predestination, so now in the perfect performance of it; Do that in this its due Time, which which thou hadst appointed and decreed afore all Times. Now what-ever God predestinates Persons, or Things concerning Persons, he hath the Idea thereof, and of all that appertains thereto, in his Divine Mind: For, known unto God are all his Works from the beginning; and therefore had, yea, much more had, of this very Glory of God-Man, the full and lively Portraiture of his Understanding and Purpose: yea, we may say, That even that Glory, this Divine Person, God-Man, hath now in Heaven, (when it was that this his Prayer had its Accomplishment) is no other Glory, either for Kind or Degree, than was in the Heart and Mind of God, laid up with God, for him; as in Job the Phrase is, Many such Things are with him; Job 23. 14. For he performeth the Thing that is appointed for me; and many such Things are with him. Yea, of all the Saints, it may be said, when they are glorified in Heaven, it is but with that same Glory and no other, for measure, and the like, than was in the Heart of God decreed towards them from Everlasting: And so they differ, as the Pattern which was so long afore formed, and the Piece that is framed to it: As when King Ahasuerus said, Let it be done, so and so, to the Man whom the King will honour, Esther 6. 9. Which when Haman had once performed, might be said, That he had been honoured with the same Honour in all the Circumstances of it; which the King in his Heart had contrived to be given him. And so it is here; for Predestination is but Preparatio Beneficiorum; a shaping, a forming of all those Benefits of Grace and Glory that shall be bestowed, in Time, upon every one that is Elect; and so 'twas in Christ. Chap. 5.

3. Query. How is the Man, or he as God-Man, said to have had this Glory with the Father before the World was, when as such he existed not?

Answer. By Reason that the Second Person then existed, and all along from Everlasting upon his Election thereunto, took on him that Personage of God-Man, and bore the Title of it with God his Father; thereby it comes to pass, that it may be said by the Man Jesus, The Glory which I had with Thee; which no Saint or Angel else can say of the Glory given them by Predestination.

For that a meer Act of God's ordaining him God-Man in his own Breast and Intention, singly and alone considered, should be an adequate full Ground for Christ to say, That I as Man, or as God-Man, had a Glory with Thee afore the World was, when I, this Man, was not extant, as now I am who challenge it; cannot be alone sufficient: For, the Elect Saints (who were predestinated as well as Christ) might then also say, We had a Glory with Thee afore the World was: But this they must not, nor can say; for the very sound of it is such, as signifies, That the Person that had that Glory, and that says it, should have been then with God, and to have been glorified by God with that Glory he speaks of.

Nec enim haberet gloriam nisi ipse prius fuisset qui gloriam posset tenere. Nemo enim habere aliquid poterit nisi ipse ante fuerit qui aliquid teneret. Tertul. de Trin. c. 24.

Now the Elect of Men, neither of themselves existed then with God, nor no part of them, no not their Souls. They may say indeed, that by virtue of their Predestination, Grace and Glory was given them afore the World was, as 2 Tim. 1. 9. Who hath saved us, and called us with an Holy Calling, not according to our Works, but according to his own Purpose and Grace, which was given us in Christ Jesus, before the World began. But for them to say, The Glory which I had with Thee afore the World was: This their Predestination, or God's single meer Act of Predestinating them, will not warrant them to say; Nor doth the Scripture any where so speak of the Saints their Predestination; no such Language is any where used of them. Besides, that it were to derogate from Christ, who alone is capacitated (for the Grounds that shall be added) thus to speak.

Moreover, their Election, and the Grace given them thereby, hath this difference from Christ's Election, That they are said to be chosen in Christ, Ephes. 1. 4. and that Grace given them from Everlasting, is said to be given in Christ, in 2 Tim. 1. 9. But Christ himself was chosen immediately in and for himself, which enabled him to say, The Glory which I had with thee afore the World. Which none of them could say; yea, and for him to say it, and to have intended no more more than what he had of Glory in, and by God's meer Act of Purpoſe and Predeterminating him unto it, had been to ſay no more than the World it ſelf might ſay, or might be ſaid of it, That it had a Being (namely, in God's purpoſe) afore its Creation, and actual Exiſtence. For, whatſoever the World now is, it was in God's naked Decree and Purpoſe, afore it ſelf was, as well as Chriſt himſelf.

Hence then there muſt be ſome extraordinary ſpecial Thing found in Chriſt's Predeſtination, which muſt give ground to this Speech, and fill up the whole Intendment of it.

And therefore I added, to this ſecond Aſſertion, a ſecond part of it, That the Second Perſon, the Son did, at and together, and upon God's Act of predeſtinating him to be God-Man, (and upon him did God's Predeſtination fall as well as on the Man Jeſus) take on him the real Title and Repute of God-Man; and ſuſteined and bore the Perſonage of God-Man afore his Father. And his Father actually gave him the Glory of it, as a ſuper-added Glory to that of his being Second Perſon, and his Son ſimply conſidered. And this having been afore-hand done, upon the account of, and reſpect unto, his being to be that Man one Day: Hence, the Man Jeſus being now exiſting and united into one Perſon with that Son of God, was juſtly and rightly enabled and capacitated to claim and pray, Glorify Me with the Glory I had with Thee afore the World was.

The Perſon he was now become, having been glorified in that very account, as God-Man, by his Father from Everlaſting.

This Condition of the Perſon God-Man, upon whom this Election fell, hath not enough been conſidered; That whilſt ſuch a bare Act of Election lighting upon us, would not have been ſuch an Expreſſion, but been deficient; yet in the Caſe of Chriſt, as hath been now ſtated, it would; And with theſe Additionals it is abundantly verified, and holds good. But we muſt conſider, that there was not only a Predeſtination-Act on the Father's Part, that paſſed upon Chriſt to be God-Man in common with God's predeſtinating us: But that there accompanied it, at the inſtant, on the ſecond Perſon's part, an acceptance of what God had predeſtinated him unto, a ſuſtaining of that Perſon afore God ever after; and a Glory given him all along by his Father in their Converſes, anſwering that Dignity; which utterly varies the Caſe from that of our Predeſtination, by a ſingle Act of God's. And becauſe God's predeſtinating him to be God-Man, hath ſingly been conſidered by many, when that interpretation hath been given of the words, That they are to be underſtood of what was in God's firſt predeſtinating of Chriſt; and that as it is a bare Act on God's part falling ſhort, they therefore have wholly rejected that Interpretation; whereas ſupply to it, what was alſo done at and upon God's predeſtinating, on Chriſt's part, and God's glorifying him as ſuch for ever after; and ſo the Solution riſeth (in my poor conception) to a ſatisfaction of the Difficulties that are otherwiſe incumbent on the words.

This new Supplement of ſo grand a moment in this Argument, I ſhall draw forth into ſundry Particulars; which the Reader may pleaſe to add unto thoſe of Predeſtination already foregon. For that muſt ſtill ſtand, though theſe be alſo taken in unto it, to make the Interpretation more full.

1. The Son of God, ſecond Perſon, was extant and with God, at the inſtant when he was choſen to this Glory of being God-Man; there he was, the Perſon, which we were not at our Election. This I need not inſiſt upon. And hence,

2. The Glory of it was immediately given to himſelf, at the very inſtant of that Act of predeſtinating him to it. It needed not be given him in another, or to another for him; he was there to accept it, and receive it: whereas the Glory we were to have, was given us in Chriſt, when nothing of us exiſted, and ſo long afore we exiſted; and was therefore given us in Chriſt, becauſe he was preſent by, and could receive it for us (as he did); and therefore might much more receive any Glory or Honour which the Father, by ſuch an Act of Election, ſhould ordain him unto, as, de facto, he did him to this of God-Man.

But

Chap. 5.

But you will urge, That still the Man that was ordained to this Glory, existed not but in a bare Decree.

Consider therefore, 3. That the Second Person that existed, and was now chosen to be God-Man, had the Title of being God-Man; and so the Glory due to it, upon that Election of him to it, really conferred upon him: and so as from thence he was no longer to be considered, meerly and abstractly, as Second Person alone; but was thereupon afore God and with God, and in his repute and esteem accounted of as God-Man. Take a Man that is elected to an Office, whom thereupon you call Now Elect, besides what he is, and hath, as a Man singly considered, he hath now the Honour of his Office, though he be not installed. Thus a Man chosen and designed a General, hath the Honour and Title of his Designment, long afore he goes into the Field. Now this much more really was the Second Person's Case, as to this new additional Glory.

4. He not only knew what he was ordained to, but solemnly accepted it afore his Father; and concurred in assent and consent thereto, and undertook to be so as his Father had appointed; Heb. 10. 5. A Body hast thou prepared me. The Second Person deferred not, stayed not accepting it upon the first Act of God's chusing him, until the Time should come that he was to become God-Man, by being made Flesh; but he accepted it instantly without any more ado: And so he was absolutely and solemnly espoused by his own consent afore his Father, unto that individual Nature of Man, whom his Father had by that Act of Predestination, designed and proposed to him to be. And hence the Title of it must needs come on him; He took on him the Title, the Honour, and Glory, from that very instant of Eternity; He was thence-forward God-Man contracted, although the Marriage was to be after consummated, when the Word took Flesh: He had the Title of God-Man Elect, though not of God-Man united, or made Flesh: He bore the Personage of God-Man (mark that word) Personam gerebat, The Garb, the Port of it; although as yet the Son of God had not took up into his Person that Man he was contracted unto. I say, he bore the Title and Repute of it, and went under that Name with God, the Name of God-Man, even as he did, of Everlasting Father, or a Father of us from Everlasting, Isa. 9. 6. There is the like reason for either; for he had that title of Everlasting Father, but because from Everlasting He afore God took upon him that Relation to us as his Children, and so to be of the same Nature with us; as the Apostle argues in Heb. 2. 10, 11, 14. For it became him, for whom are all Things, and by whom are all Things, in bringing many Sons unto Glory, to make the Captain of their Salvation perfect through Sufferings. For both he that sanctifieth, and they who are sanctified, are all of one; for which cause he is not ashamed to call them Brethren. Forasmuch then as the Children are partakers of Flesh and Blood, he also himself likewise took part of the same, that through Death he might destroy him that had the Power of Death, that is, the Devil. The second Person singly considered, hath not the stile of Father, for that is the first Person's Propriety, only considered simply as a Person.

Again, if all the Promises God hath made in his Word, were from Everlasting made, and then extant afore God, as you read, Tit. 1. 2. they were, in hope of Eternal Life, which God, that cannot lye, promised before the World began. Then Christ, considered as God-Man, to whom, as such, all the Promises were made, and in whom as such supposed, they have their Truth, Foundation, and Existence, their Yea and Amen. He then (I say) must much more have born (being then present with God) that title of God-Man. And without his being considered as such, and his having accepted to be such, those Promises had had no Existence or Reality, nor would it have been so, that all our Grace and Glory was given us in Christ afore the World was, as it is said 2 Tim. 1. 9. Was not then that Title of being Christ, and God-Man, then given them? Without the consideration of which, we had not, nor could be considered as Legatees, to whom that Grace was bequeathed: Yes, it was a Title familiarly used of him amongst the Three, from thence-forward for ever.

This Title was in it self truly a Glory, though but an additional, given the Second Person then existing; and though the Man, or the Humane Nature, was not existent, yet the Glory of his being one day Man, was then existent; and the Perſon was exiſtent, that was capable of receiving even that Glory at that preſent.

1. It was a Glory; for the thing in it ſelf, was truly a Matter of Glory, though but an additament to him, and being given by a Perſon of Glory, his Father, the Fountain of Glory, it muſt be truly ſuch.

2. Though but an Additional Glory; for his native Eſſential Glory, as God, needed it not, as to his own Bleſſedneſs or Glory: As we ſee God doth not need that Glory we Creatures give him, and yet 'tis a real Glory to him, and a glorifying of him, that which Creatures give him.

3. Though the Man exiſted not, yet the Glory exiſted; for the Second Perſon exiſted to receive it from his Father, who exiſted together with him; and might, and did, afore-hand give it to him, upon his own ordination of him, to be Man, and the Second Perſon, his undertaking to become Man; and ſo, was given through that Relation contracted for afore-hand unto that Man. So as who-ever conſiders it, will find himſelf to be utterly in a miſtake, if he ſhould thus conceive of it, that Chriſt only had the Glory of his being God, and Second Perſon, afore and with his Father; and that God began firſt actually to honour his Son as God-Man, only from the time he actually took Fleſh, and became Man. For if there be a real Glory ariſeth to him, now he hath aſſumed Man's Nature; for which, and by reaſon whereof, he is by us deſervedly to be glorified and adored as God-Man; Or if that be a Glory to him now he is in Heaven, that he is God Man, which he viſibly wears there afore his Father, and all the Saints: Then it muſt be acknowledged, (having been given him by his Father, in his Decree, and undertaken by himſelf) that it was a Glory alſo, as then really extant between himſelf and his Father. At the time after he had aſſumed our Nature, and was actually become Man, then his Father ſhould and did openly declare and congratulate him as his Son, in ſaying from Heaven, Matth. 3. 17. And lo, a Voice from Heaven, ſaying, This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleaſed. It is added, that he gave him Glory and Honour, as is expreſt in 2 Pet. 1. 17. For he received from God the Father, Honour, and Glory, when there came ſuch a Voice to him from the excellent Glory, This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleaſed. Then why may it not alſo be ſaid, that when in God's Everlaſting Decree, God had ſaid the ſame to him as expreſly, Pſal. 2. 7. I will declare the Decree, Thou art my Son, this day have I begotten thee. Why ſhould not this be as well a giving Glory to him from Everlaſting, though but upon, and in his Decrees which was from Everlaſting? Upon the making of his Decree for that Glory, this was ſaid, Thou art my Son, &c. And the Pſalmiſt profeſſeth but to publiſh the Matter of that Decree, and to produce the Record, and ſet it down by way of propheſy. If then the declaring the ſame by God himſelf afterward, when he was made Fleſh, and become Man, were an Honour given him by his Father: Then ſurely, at the making of that Decree it was the like; and therefore he had that Glory with the Father before the World was.

That there might be a Glory given the Son from Everlaſting, is clear from this, That there was the higheſt and freeſt mutual Converſe held between the Three Perſons amongſt themſelves from Everlaſting, when no Creature was; and in that Converſe they drove and carried on Deſigns of what was to come, and gave the Glory to one another, of what each of them was, or ſhould be, or do, in their ſeveral Activities, to all Eternity. They ſpake one to the other, and one of another, as Heb. 10. The Son ſaid to the Father, A Body haſt thou prepared me. And the Father to the Son, Thou art my Son, this Day have I begotten thee. And this latter was from Everlaſting in the decreeing of it, ſpoken to him; for the words afore are, I will declare the Decree, whereof that Speech therefore was the Matter. Likewiſe there were mutual Engagements and Promiſes paſt between them, 1. Tit. 2. Eternal Life was promiſed afore the World began. And there muſt be an entercourſe of Perſons promiſing, and that received and accepted the Promiſe. And in like manner in their Converſes they glorified one another; John 15. 16. The Spirit ſhall glorify me, ſays Chriſt: He ſays it indeed of his glorifying Chriſt to us; but if he doth it to us, much more among themſelves.

And

Chap. 5.

And truly, the Phrase here, which I had [with thee] (which now only remains to be expounded) in the fulness of the extent of the meaning it will reach unto, is very compliant with this Notion: For, which I had with Thee, imports not only a presence, or being with God in Existence.

As, first, John 1. 1. The Word is said to be God, and with God.

Or, 2. the intimacy of an alike Glory to that of the Father's, enjoyed by the Son, together with the Father.

But, 3. it denotes the Repute or Esteem which Christ had with him; so that the Glory I had with thee, is the Honour and Valuation I then held in thy Heart of me.

We use the same Phrase in our Language, (and it is current in all Languages) A Person who is honoured by another, we use to say of him, He is in Esteem, Repute, or Favour with him. And so it is not necessarily here to be wholly confined to signify his Essential Glory, which he had together with his Father, and enjoyed, as if that were only meant; but will well comport with this reputative Glory cast on him by Election, of his being God-Man.

And the Scripture speaks parallel unto this in point of Grace, that is now born to us by God, or to any Elect of God; and it is all one to say, such an one hath Grace with God; and to say, they have Glory and Honour with God. Now of the Blessed Virgin, the Angel accosts her with this, Luke 1. 30. Thou hast found favour with God; or, art in great Grace with God; that is, in God's Estimation and Repute: Grace in his Heart born to thee, which might have been said of Her, even from Everlasting; when it was, that God did single her forth to be the Mother of the Lord; it may be said, she had that Grace with God then, which otherwise is commonly express'd, by a finding favour in his Eyes. Maldonate takes hold of the Word, as often importing Esteem and Renown, (though he diverts it to another purpose); I may say of Christ, God-Man, that he was of Renown with God, and that he was as God-Man in Repute and Esteem, such upon his Election of him. This may justly be termed a Glory, when thus it was in God, and with God: For God's Repute and Esteem is Glory; for God is the God of Glory, the Father of Glory, and Glory comes only of God; John 5. 44. How can ye believe, which receive Honour one of another, and seek not the Honour that cometh from God only? His Esteem is the valuation of Glory, which is in the sight of God of great price, is really so, 1 Pet. 3. 5. And thus understood, Christ prayes to have that Glory which in the Person of the Second he had then with God in his repute and valuation. And if you put [Had] unto it, yet still the Phrase, Had with Thee, will not rise up to denote, that he had it in real possession then with God. A Man is said to have a thing in a right unto it given him, though not yet enjoyed, as Heb. 10. 35. we are said, To have Treasure in Heaven, when yet we enjoy it not. Glorify me with thine own self, (there is an actual possession prayed for) with the Glory I had with Thee in thy Esteem, Account, and Design. A Title of Glory and Excellency given by a Person that is the true Fountain of Glory; what is this, but really and truly a Glory to the Person to whom it is given.

4. Query. Our next Query is, What kind of Glory is it that is properly intended in this 5*th* Verse?

This is a Matter of great moment to be enquired into, (as will in the Sequel appear). For the discovery whereof;

First; Divines have observed, though not upon the occasion of these words, that there is a double Glory of Christ, and that considered as God-Man. See Gomarus, Tom. 3. p. 74, 75.

1. Personæ simpliciter; Of his Person simply considered as God-Man, (abstracting from his being a Mediator for us).

2. Officii; Of his Office of Mediatorship; which latter was superadded, over and above, unto the Glory of his Person, as God-Man; and consists purely in what he is in Relation unto God his Father; whereas that Glory of Mediator, ariseth from his Relation unto us, and for us; and from what he did or wrought for us as Sinners, influenceth us with, in the virtue of that other perſonal Glory, in being an Head to us. And indeed Chriſt hath a three-fold Glory.

The firſt Eſſential, the ſame with God his Father, He the Son being coequal to him, God of God, and very God.

The ſecond, belonging to his Perſon, as now conſtituted God-Man, to break forth in and upon the Man aſſumed, as being one Perſon with the Son, who is God eſſentially.

Thirdly, The Glory of his Mediatorſhip acquired by himſelf. The two latter are thoſe afore us.

The firſt of the latter, the Glory of his Perſon, ſimply conſidered, is expreſſed in that Speech, *Joh.*1.14. We beheld his Glory, as the Glory of the only begotten of the Father; which was meerly the Glory which brake forth in his Perſon: For otherwiſe, the Glory of his Office, as being Mediator, as dying and riſing again, &c. was the Glory of his Perſon: And they ſaw not, nor conſidered not then the Glory of him, as dying, &c. for they underſtood it not till after he was riſen; as in Luke 24. 45, 46. Then opened he their Underſtanding, that they might underſtand the Scriptures; and ſaid unto them, Thus it is written, and thus it behoved Chriſt to ſuffer, and to riſe from the Dead the third Day. This double Glory you may ſee, Heb. 1. 3. Who being the Brightneſs of his Glory, and the expreſs Image of his Perſon, &c.

1. The Glory of his Perſon ſimply, as God-Man is in theſe words, Who being the Brightneſs of his Father's Glory, and the expreſs Image of his Perſon.

2. The Glory of his Office as Mediator, in theſe words, When he had by himſelf (or by the Sacrifice of himſelf) purged away our Sins, he ſat down on the right Hand of the Majeſty on high.

Which latter Clauſe declareth, how he being originally in his Perſon as God-Man, the Brightneſs of his Father's Perſon, &c. after his Work performed on Earth, to purge Sins away, he went to Heaven, and took poſſeſſion of a Glory anſwerable to that dignity of his Perſon; which was, to ſit down on the right Hand of the Majeſty on high: And therein to perform what was to be executed by him in Heaven, in interceſſion, &c. Which if it be not juſt the ſame in Subſtance and Order with what is here in theſe four Verſes prayed for, I leave to be conſidered, he here praying, that now he had finiſhed his Work on Earth, that now God would glorify him in Heaven, with that Glory which was due to his Perſon, who was the Brightneſs of his Father's Glory; and ſat down at the right hand of the Majeſty on High: So taking his place, according to the dignity of his Perſon ſpecified; which Glory, as he was predeſtinated unto in his Perſon before the World, ſo he was appointed by Election, as the Heir, Lord, and End of all Things. And although his Mediatory Glory in Heaven, is involved in his ſitting at God's right Hand; which he doth, as a Prieſt, to intercede, yet it is the poſſeſſion of that perſonal Glory, which he was appointed unto, that is, the ſubſtantial Glory there ſpoken of, and intended, and which the weight is put upon.

Now Chriſt himſelf, within the compaſs of theſe five Verſes, doth, according to this difference of Glories, frame his Prayer about himſelf. For, you may obſerve how he prays twice for his own being glorified; firſt, in verſ. 1, 2. Glorify thy Son, that thy Son alſo may glorify Thee; As thou haſt given him Power over all Fleſh, that he might give Eternal Life to as many as thou haſt given him. And here a ſecond time, verſ. 5. And now, O Father, glorify thou me with thine own ſelf, with the Glory which I had with thee before the World was. Now beſides, that he would not have uſed ſuch a repetition of the ſame thing, in ſo punctual and conciſe a Prayer, within the compaſs of ſo few Verſes, and which is all he prays for, as for himſelf.

Beſides this, the diſtinction of a two-fold glorifying, is evident from hence; that that glorifying him in verſ. 1. relates to the performance of his Office of Mediatorſhip, which he ſays lay in this, To give Eternal Life to as many as God had given him; and the meaning of his firſt, Glorify Me, that I may glorify Thee, in verſ. 1. is, that in that work of Suffering, which now he was entring into, God would glorioufly aſſiſt him, and enable him to go through with it, according to the Commiſſion, Authority, and Power God had given him, (for in that that Sense, Power, in *vers.*2. must necessarily be understood) Glorify thy Son, that thy Son may glorify Thee: As thou hast given him Power over all Flesh, to this End, That he might give Eternal Life, &c. All this properly relates unto this Work and Office of Mediatorship: And that Particle [As] Thou hast given him Power, imports, that in a Proportion requisite unto that Work and Office, which he was empowered and authorised withal; he would give him a measure of glorious Strength answerable, or worthy of that Office, and fully enabling him to perform it, and throughly to execute it: and then to glorify him, as a Reward for that Work, when he should have finish'd it, vers. 4. I have glorified Thee on the Earth: I have finished the Work which thou gavest me to do. But the measure of this second Glorify me, in *vers.*5. is the Glory of God Himself; and what it became God to glorify such an One with, as was his Son; and to be taken up into the Glory of God. It was not upon the account of what he had done in this World, as in Relation unto us, and our Eternal Life; but what simply arose from the Union and Communion, which he had, and was to have entirely with his Father, singly and alone; Glorify thou me with thine own self: And so, which was to arise from that Oneness with his Father, and which he had had with him afore this World; or, the consideration of any such thing. Any thing done in it, or Persons belonging to it, and which he and his Father had alone; and such as would have been, if there were no World nor had been extant; and so it was without relation unto his Work done; or Persons in this World, whom Eternal Life should be given unto. Chap. 5.

If it be objected, that the Coherence of vers. 4, 5. I have glorified Thee on the Earth, &c. vers.4. And now, O Father, Glorify thou me, vers.5. would seem to carry it, that he should ask this second Glory; for this, as the Ground or Cause, that he had done such a work of Mediation on Earth?

I Answer, No, that is a Mistake: But that Coherence with this vers. 5. notes out that [Now] for the Time of it, that full Time was come he should be glorified. That whereas he now had, according to his own or his Fathers compact, performed all, and [finished] the Work which God gave him to do; and which also, that Word [finished] respects; namely, the Time, the due Time to be now come, That therefore, Now glorify me, with a Glory upon a far higher account due, It was to shew, That until this Now of finishing this Work of Redemption, that Glory otherwise due was suspended. And it is as if he had said, Now give me my Native Original Due upon thy meer Decree, and constituting me God-Man, and not at all depending upon my Merit or Work; but give me my Personal Due, which had been suspended till now, but which now is due: When I shall have performed that Work thou didst command and impose upon me, which finish'd, Now bestow that other upon me. Here was Ingenuity to the heighth, not to ask his native Due, nor speak a Word of it, till he had performed his imposed Service God had set him. And with this, doth that of Christ himself, *Luk.*24.26. most fully accord; Ought not Christ to have suffered, and enter into [His] Glory? His Glory, not upon account of Sufferings only due to him; but [His] before ever he suffered, which was absolutely and personally his upon another account, but which he was not (by God's Ordination and his own Consent) to enter into, but after Sufferings first, to enter upon it, and possess it.

And the Parallel of these two Places is observable. 1. That, as there he says, He ought (first) to suffer; So here, Now I have finished that Work. 2. To enter into Glory there; Glorify me with that Glory here. 3. Into His Glory, there; the Glory which I had afore, and without the consideration of this Work, here. And that Word, Enter into His Glory, imports, he then took Possession, and not afore, as Man; and yet in right it was his; and Sufferings were but the way to it; it was not purchased by Sufferings: This his Glory was an intrinsecal Glory, not additional.

Divers Interpreters have perceived, That the Glory of his Person, of God-Man; or, as they term it, His Intrinsecal Glory, is the Subject of this, Glorify me, in vers. 5. But they have not withal observed it with difference from that other Glory prayed for, vers. 2. Only Brugensis had a glimmering of it in his Exposition, See Poller. on vers. 5.

BOOK III.

on, on verſ. 1. though he ſeems to have loſt it again afterwards: his Words are theſe. 'He deduces two things, (ſays he) why he ſhould be glorified: One, 'that he is the Redeemer of Mankind, and Saviour of Men, *verſ.*2,3. The other, 'That He is the Eternal Son of God, verſ. 5. Thus diſtinguiſheth he, and but in a light touch.

Quamobrem glorificari meretur & quod in eo ſit gloria dignum. Duo exprimit, unum quod ſit Redemptor humani Generis, & hominum Salvator, verſ. 2, 3. Alterum quod ſit æternus Dei Filius.

3. the Differences between theſe two Glories, Perſonal and Mediatory, are many and great Ones. I take notice of the grand One of all, and 'tis in the Text, There is a Phraſe which doth in the higheſt manner deſcribe, wherein this perſonal Glory, the very Eſſence of it doth conſiſt, Glorify me [with thine own ſelf.] This ſo momentous a Clauſe, is diverted, to note only the Place wherein he would be glorified, [Glorify me, with thy ſelf in Heaven, where Thou art] as ſpoken in oppoſition unto [I have glorified thee on Earth.] Others thus, I ſeek not worldly Glory, but Glory with thy ſelf: All which do dilate the Spirit and Life of this Phraſe. But our Cartwright and Gerard do interpret it of God's 'glorifying him, in, and with, and by the Glory God Himſelf had, and with that Glory alone, abſtracted from all other Things whatſoever.' Chriſt praying for that wherein the Spirit, the Eſſential Subſtance of his Glory and Bleſſedneſs lyeth, even in thine own Self; O Father, Glorify me with thine own Self. Not only ſignifying his deſire to be glorified conjunctly, both together, He as well as the Father; that is, That as God the Father had hitherto been glorified: So, that now Himſelf, that had been hitherto debaſed, might now be glorified alſo, according as in Joh. 5. 23. That all Men might honour the Son, as they honour the Father. But theſe are ſhort of Chriſt's Deſires, and Aims here; who ſeeks the utmoſt of Glory.

Notat gloriam quam petit ſummam & ſingularem nempe eam quæ eſt Dei. Cartwright, in Verba.

But it further notes, 1. That Glory which the Human Nature hath in God, and from God, and him alone. This both that Parallel place confirms, Joh. 13.32. If God be glorified in him, God ſhall alſo glorify him in himſelf, and ſhall ſtraightway glorify him. It is one and the ſame Glory he prayed for there and here; and expreſſed by the ſame Phraſe: Only then, the Time when he prayed that, of his being glorified, was further off, though [ſtraightway], perhaps within a few Months, or Days: So it was when that Sermon was made. But here, becauſe the Time was approached, and the [ſtraightways] run out; He therefore here ſays [Now] Glorify me: But 'tis one and the ſame glorifying. And in the 13*th* Chapter, 'tis God's Glory, Glorify him in Himſelf: but here 'tis, Glorify me with thine one ſelf; the former Phraſe explaining this other. In Rom. 15. 7. 'tis ſaid, That Chriſt received us to the Glory of God, that is, to the Participation of that Glory which is to be had in the bleſſed God alone, whereof himſelf was perſonally and originally the Proprietor and Inheritor, and we Co-Heirs with Chriſt, Heirs of God, *Rom.*8.17. He communicating it unto us by his Right; according as he ſays after in his Prayer, Joh. 17. 22. And the Glory which thou gaveſt me, I have given them; that they may be One, even as we are One. Who was it firſt brought up ſeeing and enjoying God immediately? Chriſt the Son of God, he was the Founder of that way of Bleſſedneſs. There are two Pſalms made of Chriſt, the 16*th*, and the 22*d*. The firſt Peter cites, Acts 2. And ſo applies it unto him, as not meant of David, but of Chriſt. The other, which is the Story of his being Crucified, beginning, My God, my God, why haſt thou forſaken me? &c. This latter, after the ſad rehearſal of his Crucifixion, tells us of the Fruit and Conſequence of that his Mediation, when performed as to himſelf: So to his whole Seed, from verſ. 22. to the end. And this was the Glory that followed (as Peter ſpeaks, 1 Pet. 1. 11.) the Glory of his Mediation. But that other 16*th Pſalm* runs in another ſtrain, and comforts himſelf with another manner of Glory, which ſhould accrue to himſelf, as verſ. 5. The Lord is my Portion and Inheritance. And it is the Enjoyment of this God alone, after his Aſcenſion, he predicates as his higheſt Happineſs, verſ.11. Thou wilt ſhew me the Path of Life: In thy Preſence is fullneſs of Joy; at thy right Hand there are Pleaſures for evermore. And this high Enjoyment of God, he brought up: None had, or ſhould have ſeen God at any Time, had not he firſt done it. And this is the ſingle Glory of his Perſon, as God-Man, which he prays for here in theſe Words.

And

And look, as in the former Verses, he had set out wherein our Eternal Life lies; namely, to know God, and him whom he hath sent: So in this Verse, he describes wherein his own Eternal Life lies, (I call it so, for of him now in Heaven, it is said, in that he lives, he lives to God); And it lies in God; Glorify me with thine own self. But his Mediatorial Glory, arising from his Works of Mediation, as Redemption and Intercession, is a Glory he hath afore God, and in his view, and which God gives him; but it ariseth from his Mediatory Action, as the Salvation of his Saints, as 2 Thess. 1. 10. But this of his Person, is a Glory he hath in God, and with God alone, in the Enjoyment of all that God is. As if he should have said, Father, let the Glory which is thine, be mine. Make me Glorious with the Glory thy self hast; with a Glory from Thee, and with a Glory in Thee. Nor is it the Manifestation of his Glory only unto others (as some would have it) he prays for, and in that Sense, to be glorified as his Father was: It is a thing beyond it, a Glory severed from that of Manifestation; for that is but outward, but this is an inward intrinsecal Glory of his Person, enjoyed in God, and with God, and such as God had, and which he should to Himself enjoy, and within Himself, a Glory in and between God and Him, consisting in that intimate entire Converse with God, and a free enjoyment of all the Sweetnesses, Perfections of the God-head, upon an account of personal Right to them, and Interest in them as his own, by virtue of his Union: And he is therefore said to come in his own Glory, and his Father's Glory, Luke 9. 26. That though it should shine in him and throughout him, yet inwardly much more. Chap. 5.

2. You may observe, he specifies it to be that Glory he had with his Father when there was no World; that if you could suppose there were no World, no Creature extant, Saint nor Angel, yet let me be glorified (says he) with thine own self personally, and then I shall be glorious indeed. For that Glory I had with Thee afore the World was, was without any Work of Mediation done, or Creature made: And let me have but that Glory, and I have enough. And so, this is not that which his Mediation brought him in, or that which consisted therein.

'Tis true, (says he,) I have a Glory from all these Saints that are about me, and I am glorified in them, as 2 Thess. 1. 10. you have it, and they in me; and 'tis my Blood and Intercession hath brought them hither. Yea, and they are glorified by beholding my Glory: But what is all this in comparison of this alone, for me to be glorified with Thee and in Thee alone? This is the heighth of my Desires and Prayers: And this Glory is my personal Due, and hath been suspended to purchase an additional Glory by my Mediation. Yea, but this is the Glory I aspire after, and have in mine Eye above all other; and let us retire into each other, and enjoy it alone together; and therefore, Glorify me with thine own self: Draw the Curtains, as it were, upon all Glories else, whether of mine, or from all others I am glorified in, That Thou and I may singly and separately enjoy each other.

Other lesser Differences there are between this Personal and Mediatorial Glory, which might be added. As,

1. The Glory of his Person is his Birth-right, as Son of God: Heb. 1. 4. Being made so much better than the Angels, as he hath by Inheritance obtained a more excellent Name than they. The Glory that rises from his Mediation, and the Works thereof, is but acquired Accessory and Additional, won, and won by Conquest. He got by his Bow, as Jacob speaks, Gen. 48. 22.

If you would ask, Which of these two Glories, belonging to God-Man, are the greatest? Your own Thoughts, I believe, have by this Time, cast and determined, that this of his Personal Glory doth infinitely exceed that of his Mediatory Glory, or of his Office: Whether as Head to us, or Redeemer? although there was none in Heaven, or in Earth, that could have sustained these but He. For,

1. That is the Glory of the very Godhead, dwelling personally in him, breaking forth in, and shining through his Human Nature; as if the Sun being encompassed with a Case of Chrystal, how glorious would that Chrystal be! A Glory, such as is only worthy to appear in him that is one Person with God. This is the greatest and highest Glory, as well as Mystery, God manifested in the Flesh;

Fleſh; ſeen of Angels, taken up into Glory. For this, Let all the Angels worſhip him, (as Heb. 1. 6. when he brings his firſt-begotten into the World the Second Time); meerly for the excellency of his Perſon and Name, which by Inheritance he hath obtained above them; and not for Redemption of them, which is not there ſpoken of as of them.

2. It was the Excellency and Intrinſick Glory of his Perſon, from whence thoſe Divinely-humane Acts of his Mediation did flow, and receive their value and virtue therefrom: His Blood becauſe it is the Blood of God-Man, and ſo of the reſt.

3. It is the Glory of his Perſon as God-Man united; that is, That Glory which after the Work of Redemption for us, and the Application of it to us finiſhed, (as after the Day of Judgment it will be) when he ſhall have given up his Diſpenſatory Kingdom to his Father; Then it is he eminently appears in his own perſonal ſingle Glory (as I may call it) for ever: I term it his ſingle perſonal Glory which he will ſit in Heaven with. You muſt know, if you have not known it, That his Type, the High Prieſt, went into the Holy of Holies, ſtrip'd of all his gawdy Robes: you ſee him pictured meerly in ſingle plain Prieſt's Garments of Linnen: and it typified this out, That Chriſt's perſonal Glory is that with which in the Holy of Holies he ſhall moſt eminently, and above all others, appear for ever in, and ſit down in it. And there he ſits, ſhall the Saints ſay, appearing in the form of God; and ſo he is the utmoſt viſible Image of God, to us: And was he, that furthermore did that great Office and Service to God, and Love to us, to bring us all who are here about him, out of the depth of Sin and Miſery, hither to this Place with him, and purchaſed all the Glory we ſhall ever have: And this perſonal Glory, is that Glory, the beholding of which, the Bleſſedneſs of the Saints doth lie in, it is to behold his Perſon. For, as he prays for it here for himſelf, Joh. 17. 5. Glorify me, in, and with thine own ſelf: So he prays for them, whom God had given him, that they may be where he is, (perſonally Reſident); That they might behold my Glory, verſ. 24. Father, I will, that they alſo whom thou haſt given me, may be with me where I am, that they may behold my Glory which thou haſt given me. And it is the Glory of his Perſon is above all there meant; for as elſewhere, it is ſeeing him as he is, that is the heighth of our Happineſs, 1 Joh. 3.1,2. [As he is] (Mark it) that is, what his very Perſon is; beyond, and beſides all that he hath done, or by his Perſon hath acted or procured: This is the Glory the Apoſtles ſo adored, as the higheſt Evidence and Efflux of his being the Son of God. All the Evangeliſts record the Story of his appearance on the Mount: The Apoſtle John he crys out in a Parentheſis of Wonderment; John 1. 14. And we beheld his Glory, the Glory of the only begotten of the Father, though ſhining in him but in the Days of his Fleſh. And Peter he magnifies and exalts it above all things elſe he had to ſay of him, or could alledg in teſtimony for his being the Chriſt, and Son of God; We ſaw his Perſon in Glory, 2 Pet. 1. 16, 17, 18. We were Eye-Witneſſes of his Majeſty. For we have not followed cunningly deviſed Fables, when we made known unto you the Power and Coming of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt; but were Eye-Witneſſes of his Majeſty. For he received from God the Father Honour and Glory, when there came ſuch a Voice to him from the excellent Glory, This is my beloved Son in whom I am well pleaſed. And this Voice which came from Heaven we heard, when we were with him in the Holy Mount. And this Glory his Father then gave him from forth of the ſuper-excelling Glory of his own, now breaking forth in him, and upon him, as an aforehand Demonſtration and Specimen of what he was to wear in Heaven; where it is the excelling Excellency of his Glory there ſpoken of, doth appear. And 'tis plain, it was his perſonal Glory that Peter hath reference unto; and he interprets what is meant by the Glory Perſonal, which Chriſt in this Prayer ſays, John 17. 22. that God gave him: And the Glory which thou gaveſt me, I have given them: that he might give us the like; namely, by meerly beholding him, and that His Glory, verſ. 24. And to conclude it from the Text, It is this Glory, by the courſe of his Prayer, he aſpires at, as the top and higheſt of his Glory. For you may obſerve, that he aſcends in thoſe his firſt Requeſts made for Himſelf: He begins to ask a being glorified in reſpect of his Office;

fice; both for to perform his Work, and that after, and for the Performance of it, to have the Reward promised him for it, peculiar and proper to it, which was, To be known and acknowledged the Mediator, and that had the Power to give Eternal Life to them that believe: And so, that Glory was for us, and our Salvation ordained Him, as the Words shew. Chap. 5.

Well, but he soars up unto a Glory that is purely his Own, and for Himself alone; He flys up to the very top-Pinacle, the Supream Sublimity of the Divinest Glory, the utmost he could ask, and that for Himself; and enforces it from the highest Argument, The Glory which I had with Thee, afore the World was. And so ends his Prayer for Himself; for he had said the utmost. And therefore this is the Crown of All.

CHAP. VI.

The Exposition of some other Passages in Joh. 17. That God having first predestinated Christ to be God-Man, this moved him to Elect us, to compleat his Glory. The first Motive was, That as he was to be an Head, there might not be wanting to him a perfect Body to participate with him in the enjoyment of his Blessedness. How the Marriage of Adam in Paradise, was a Type of the Relation between Christ and the Elect his Spouse, designed before the consideration of the Fall. The second Motive was, That a Glory additional to Christ's personal Glory, might accrue to him as God Man, from their being Elected. The third Motive was drawn from the Interest and Part which Christ predestinated God-Man had, together with his Father, in electing them, John 17. 1. And the Glory which thou gavest me, I have given them, that they may be One, even as we are One. The meaning of the words explained, by Answers to some Queries. What that Glory is which the Father had given to Christ. What that Glory is, which Christ thereupon assigns as his own Gift to us. When was the Time of giving this Glory to him, and to us. The fourth Motive is, What Christ represents to his Father, viz. the Glory which the accomplishment of this Design will bring to himself, and to his Father, when the Union and Glory of the Saints, shall thereby be perfected at the last Day of the World.

HAving thus opened the fifth Verse, which sets out the Glory of Christ, as God-Man, given him in his Election by the Father; which was, and is, the proper Interest of his Person, as he was chosen to be God-Man, simply considered.

I come next unto those special Motives built thereon, made on our behalf, and as those which moved God, or, which God had an Eye unto, in his Choice or Election of us; with a respect unto Christ, as first ordained for himself.

Calvin

Chap. 6.

Calvin well obſerves concerning Chriſt's praying in this Chapter; That he being entred into the very Inwards of Heaven, had afore his Eyes the ſecret and hidden Counſels of God, and prays at the rate thereof, and urgeth his Father therewith: And as I underſtand it (ſubmitting it) he utters in the Paſſages I have ſelected; the very order of God's Counſels about us, and the Motives drawn from his own and his Son's Intereſt, as it ſtood in God's Electing; firſt, of Chriſt, then of us.

The Paſſages are in verſ. 6. I have manifeſted thy Name to the Men thou gaveſt me out of the World, [THINE THEY WERE, AND THOU GAVEST THEM ME].

Verſ. 10. And I am glorified in them.

Verſ. 22. And the Glory which thou gaveſt Me, I have given them.

Verſ. 24. Father, I will, that they alſo whom thou haſt given me, may be where I am, that they may behold my Glory which thou haſt given me.

And my general Method in opening each of theſe, as to this my purpoſe, ſhall be this.

Firſt, To explain the words of each of theſe Verſes in their order.

Secondly, To ſhew wherein the force of the Motives drawn from Chriſt's Intereſt in our Election, contained in thoſe ſeveral Paſſages, doth lie; whereby he moved his Father, that according to his own Eternal Purpoſes made in Chriſt concerning us, in his choice of us, he would grant that Union (which is the end of our Election) ordained for US.

Unto the firſt, I premiſe and deſire, this ſtill to be remembred and carried along, That all thoſe Paſſages, and the Motives therein contained, do, in a more eſpecial manner, refer unto, and depend on, that perſonal Glory of Chriſt, ſpoken of upon that fifth Verſe, (which hath been opened) firſt laid and ſuppoſed as the Head and Foundation of them all; as the top-link whereon theſe ſucceeding Paſſages I have ſingled out, do, as ſo many Links of a Golden Chain, hang, and in an orderly way depend; namely, that upon the Glory of the perſonal Union of Chriſt, God-Man, firſt ordained by God, (which therefore in the 5*th* Verſe, Chriſt in praying for himſelf had forelaid); and from which (as firſt ſuppoſed) theſe principal Motives, made on our behalf for our Union and Glory, receive their Strength and Enforcement, as ordained us in the Election of us, with a relation to, and for the Intereſt of Chriſt.

And perhaps, that in the very opening and explanation of the words of each of theſe Paſſages, there will appear, couched, this very Point of Chriſt's having been firſt ordained as God-Man: And I ſhall, for the preſent, content my ſelf with thoſe; or at leaſt 'twill be ſeen, how fairly they comply with the Notion thereof, (and herein I profeſs a modeſty); However the opening the words, each in that plain ſenſe and genuine meaning of them, (as it preſents it ſelf in that Dim Light I have about them) will ſerve unto the diſcovery, wherein the force of them, as they are Motives, ſhould lie.

1. Paſſage or Motive in the Words.

Verſ. 6. Thine they were, and thou gaveſt them me.

Here in order, next unto the Perſonal Glory ordained to Chriſt in God's Decrees, is his mention of an Election of other Perſons of Mankind (Chriſt inſtancing in the Apoſtles for the reſt) to be Followers, Companions, Conſorts of his; That Chriſt might not be alone, nor partaker of his Glory wholly and only to himſelf; when the Father gave unto the Second Perſon, as he was conſidered God-Man, and as he ſuſtained the Perſonage of God-Man; and whom he commended unto him to be his, and this from Everlaſting. When one hath a Son that is marriageable, he thinks of a Wife, a Companion for him; And thus the Father did for his Son, and choſe the Perſons whom, and gave them him.

1. [Thine]; Thine by thy Election of them for me, out of the reſt of the World: With which, that in 2 Tim. 2. 19. correſponds, The Foundation of the

BOOK III.

Lord (that is laid in Election) remains ſure ; The Lord knows who are HIS: They were His by his fore-knowledg of them, Rom. 11. 2. HIS People whom he FOREKNEW. Thine firſt, without Me when conſidered as God-Man ; though as Second Perſon he concurred in the choice of them, as alſo the Holy Spirit : Only the Father, being the firſt Perſon propoſed them to the other two, as Perſons with him ſimply conſidered ; and therefore, the Father here, in Chriſt's Addreſs, bears the Honour of it ; [Thine], and thou gaveſt them me.

2. They were] ; which is ſpoken in diſtinction from what is again repeated in verſ. 9. Them whom thou haſt given me ; for they [are] thine: He urgeth there, That at preſent they are thine ; Here, in the time paſt, they were thine. This time paſt, notes out from Everlaſting ; for then firſt it was, that he choſe them for his : And in this Prayer, verſ. 23. Thou lovedſt them, as thou lovedſt me. And among other, [As] or likeneſſes, the Point of Time when God thus loved them, As he did him, is one, (though him in order firſt) ; which he ſpecifies, verſ. 24. Thou lovedſt me from the Foundation of the World ; and ſo, as me, from everlaſting, ſo them.

3. And thou gaveſt them me]. This, ſome would limit unto their having been called ; and ſo, this Act to have been that in Time, when the Father gives thoſe to Chriſt to apprehend and own ; and whom he draws to Chriſt by Calling. But the great and firſt giving of them to Chriſt, is an everlaſting Act, as well as chuſing of them ; and indeed, a diſtinct Act from Election it ſelf, (conſidered as barely Election) though at Election and Concurrent with it: Thus in John 6. 36. All that the Father giveth me, ſhall come to me. Coming to Chriſt there, is Vocation ; and that Speech ſhews, that there is a foregoing Act of giving to Chriſt by God the Father, which is the cauſe of their coming ; and their coming, poſterior to it,—ſhall come to me. And if afore calling, I ask, When that Act of giving them ſhould firſt commence ? Sure, God that loved both them, to make them his own, and him ſo from Everlaſting, would not defer giving of them to him, until after ſo long a ſpace, as from Eternity unto their Vocation is : But, having his Son then extant and preſent with him, and privy to all his Intentions ; and the commending and beſtowing them upon him, being ſo great a Gift, next to that of his own perſonal Glory ; he ſurely did it from the firſt, and as ſoon as the Thing was capable to be done, and this was from Everlaſting, in thoſe Tranſactions between the Father and the Son ; there being nothing to hinder it then, no more than afterwards.

And indeed, this their being given to him being twice repeated in this verſ. 6. Firſt, I have manifeſted thy Name unto the Men which thou gaveſt me out of the World. Then, ſecondly, again, Thine they were, and thou gaveſt them me. If we allow the firſt to import vocation in Time, we may well put the ſecond unto Election afore all Time : And this latter, to be the account given by Chriſt, and an aſcenſion unto the Original Cauſe, why they were given him at and by vocation ; verſ. 12. Thine they were, (long afore, in thy everlaſting Love and Election of them) and thou gaveſt them me, and from everlaſting alſo ; which he after expreſſeth, verſ. 23. Thou haſt loved them, as thou haſt loved me: and me thou lovedſt afore the foundation of the World, verſ. 24. Where alſo their being given to Chriſt, is joined with Chriſt's Election. Gaveſt them me] ; For what end and purpoſe ? To be his, in his Relation to them, as they were the Father's in his : They are thine ; and mine are thine, and thine are mine : And his Relation to them, and theirs to him, we find in Scripture to be as Members to an Head, Fellow-Members, of Spouſe unto an Huſband, and Brethren to an Elder-Brother, of the ſame Nature with them ; of Father, and they his Children ; in and by all thoſe Relations they are his.

Gaveſt them ME.] If this giving them to be his, was from Everlaſting : The Queſtion then will come under what conſideration the [Me] comes under, Given them Me : Whether when they were given to him, and as Second Perſon, ſimply conſidered, or as conſtituted God-Man alſo. I ſaid, at firſt, a Father ſeeks and gives a Spouſe to his Son when Marriageable ; The Second Perſon ſimply conſidered, is not in potentiâ maximâ, of Marriage with us, but in a remote capacity ; unleſs you ſuppoſe him ſet up God-Man, he bears no Relation to us: The Wife is Bone of his Bone, who is the Husband, which signified Christ, and his Church.

And if it be said, That we were given unto him but with this as an after-proposal; that he might become Man for us, and then to marry us for our sakes only; That, I say, is not signified at all by being given to him; but the contrary rather: For, in that sense it would rather have been said, That he was given to them, as both in the Old Testament, and when incarnate; To us a Son is born, to us a Son is given, (which we all acknowledg); And in the New, God gave his Son for us. But when a Thing is said to be given as a Gift to another, (as here we to Christ) it imports the Favour shewn to him to whom it is given; and therefore this giving these Persons, (which was the first Giving that passed) signifies, They were given to him for his sake, as a singular Gift and Favour to him. It remains therefore, that they were given as meet Companions, Children, Spouses unto him already ordained, and set up as God-Man, to be an Everlasting Father, and by like reason, an Everlasting Husband to them, (they are both of the same Nature in God's Decree, and his own Undertaking). And being thus qualified and fitted to own them as such, it was therefore that he took them to be his, under these Relations, as being now, and by this Ordination of God's become a meet Husband, Father, Head, unto them. And to what end were they then given him, but that they should be owned by him, and received by him, to be his under those Relations, as well as they were the Father's in his Relation.

And truly, this is no other than what was prefigured and fore-signified, at and by the very first Creation of Man, when the execution of God's Purposes did first begin; and therein his Everlasting Purposes about Christ and his Church, were to be veiled under the Type and Shadow of the first Man Adam, both in his Formation and Marriage, which was, as soon as there was any such Subject capable to bear the Type of Christ and of his Church. His first formation, God himself declared to have been according to his own Image, which, as I anciently understood it, was according to the Original Pattern of Humane Nature, first set up in Christ's Ordination to be Man, as, in the Idea of God's Eternal Decrees, he was the first-Born of every Creature. And then, as for his Marriage with Eve his Wife, formed out of him; those Divines that stand for Christ's having been primarily ordained, use to alledge it for one proof thereof; that that Speech of his, Bone of my Bone, &c. And for this cause a Man shall cleave to his Wife, Gen. 2. 23, 24. was intended by God, (though Adam understood it not, as Caiphas did not his Prophecy) of our Christ and his Church; and so of that intended Union of Christ and his Church; though in execution brought about after the Fall, yet in Intention, first decreed without the consideration had of the Fall; it being uttered by him in his pure and innocent condition afore he fell. But this now I insist not on largely to explain, having done it elsewhere; that which I here alledge it for, is, That look as Adam (his Type herein) was first, that thus Christ was first, in God's Intention, absolutely ordained to be God-Man. And that therefore, because he should not be alone, God had given and predestinated his Church to be a Spouse to him; and from Everlasting brought Her, and presented Her (as who was to be made out of him) as a Gift, infinitely more valuable valuable than all the World beſides, which God had made for him: And God put her into Chriſt's Heart and Boſom, and then Chriſt took her as given him by his Father to be his; and to cleave to her alone for ever, and to communicate his own Glory unto her, in her deſigned proportion: And that Adam and his Marriage, was in this very thing thus the Type of Chriſt and his Church, in their Union and Conjunction; the Application of the Apoſtle of Adam's Speech thereunto, manifeſtly ſhews, in Epheſ. 5. 30, 31. For we are Members of his Body, of his Fleſh, and of his Bones. For this Cauſe ſhall a Man leave his Father and Mother, and ſhall be joined unto his Wife, and they two ſhall be one Fleſh. And how Adam was alone and firſt made, the Story in Geneſis teils you; and the Apoſtle elſewhere, 1 Cor. 11. 8. For, the Man is not of the Woman, but the Woman of the Man.

2. Paſſage or particular Motive in the Words.

Verſ. 10. And I am gloriſied in them.

It is from his own Intereſt in Us, as he is God-Man, he pleads; and his Plea is, That beſides his ſingle perſonal Glory ordained him, verſ. 5. And his Intereſt in us then, by the Father's having given us to him, verſ. 6. there was deſigned therewith a Glory that ſhould accrue out of them to him, beſides that which was perſonally his due: God's End in giving them to him being, that Chriſt might be glorified in them, and their Union with God effected by him; which Union is, that he centers in, in the concluſion of the 11*th* Verſe, That they may be One, as we are One: which in plain words is, That in giving them Me, O Father, thou aimedſt at, and didſt ordain withal, A Glory to me in them, and them for my Glory: And thoſe words [And I am glorified in them] have in their coherence, this import in them; That not thou only, O Father, art glorified in them, but I alſo; I as well as Thou. I have a joint-ſtock of Glory by thy Decree running along with thine, in them, and to be had out of them, even as thou haſt. He had ſaid, juſt afore, All mine are thine, and thine are mine; All things (as I opened it) as well as all Perſons: All Things are in common, His as well as his Father's; and ſo the Perſons of theſe were his, in that higheſt proportion of Intereſt and Propriety, as well as his Father's; and a Glory to accrue therefore from theſe, according to that proportion, is my due alſo, as well as the Father's; and is as if he had ſaid, I (Father) have, according to thine own Decree, accepted them for mine: Now therefore perform that Deſign of thine, which, together with thy Gift of them, thou ordainedſt them unto, and them to Me, which was and is my Glory: yea, and therein lay the greatneſs and excellency of the Gift of them, (as to me) that my Glory was to be a Sovereign End of them, together with Thine. And this, the parallel of the former Type will alſo warrant; Of the Woman 'tis ſaid, ſhe is the Glory of the Man, 1 Cor. 11. 7. And to be his Glory in this reſpect among other, That he had ſo noble a Creature as the Woman on purpoſe made for him: Even as of us 'tis ſaid, We are the Glory of Chriſt, 2 Cor. 8. 23. But more expreſly in verſ. 9. of Chap. 11. Neither was the Man created for the Woman, but the Woman for the Man; there is the Type. Now that Chriſt is the Man, the Husband and Head of his Church, and ſhe the Spouſe, Epheſ. 5. 23. informs us, For the Husband is the Head of the Wife, even as Chriſt is the Head of the Church; and he is the Saviour of the Body.

'Tis undeniable, but that Chriſt's Speech, Joh. 5. 23. (That all Men ſhould honour the Son, even as they honour the Father; He that honoureth not the Son, honoureth not the Father which hath ſent him) carries this with it, That by God's Ordinance, the Son hath a joint Stock with his Father, in the diſpenſation of all Things; and ſo of the Glory that ſhall ariſe from thence: And that it was ſpoken of him conſidered as God-Man, or of the Son of God perſonally united unto that Man Jeſus, the coherence of that Speech in verſ. 22. afore, and verſ. 27. after, do manifeſtly ſhew: For in verſ. 22. He declaring what ſovereign Honour it was which he ſhared in, he ſays, The Father hath committed all Judgment to the Son: And then, in verſ. 27. he further explains himſelf, how it is to be underſtood of him; The Father hath given him Authority to execute Judgment alſo, [becauſe he is the Son of Man]; and therefore as ſuch conſidered, is that ſpoken of of him, vers. 23. And accordingly the Lamb (which is Christ God-Man) hath a joint Tribute and Revenue of Glory given him with the Father, Rev. 5. 12, 13. Worthy is the Lamb that was slain, to receive Power, and Riches, and Wisdom, and Strength, and Honour, and Glory, and Blessing. And every Creature which is in Heaven, and on the Earth, and under the Earth, and such as are in the Sea, and all that are in them, heard I, saying, Blessing, Honour, Glory, and Power be unto him that sitteth upon the Throne, and unto the Lamb for ever and ever. Chap. 6.

Yea, I say further, That this Glory of his, being a Soveraign Paramount End (though under his Father) becomes a right and just due to him as God-Man, when constituted so to be; and that the Saints and all Creatures, should in their several Ways and Proportions, serve unto his Glory as well as to the Father's. For, by the same Ground, that other Royalties which are so Divine and God-like, become an undeniable Due to him (as that, because his Person is the only begotten Son of God; that therefore, he should have a Divine personal Glory, answerable to the Fulness of the God-head, dwelling bodily or personally in him, as 1 Joh. 18. shews.) So this of a Supream Endship, in like manner with the Father; this latter must be no more denied him than the other.

They Object, The Glory of Christ, as God-Man, is but a Creature. I Reply,

1. The very Glory of God which is given him by us Creatures, and ariseth out of all Creatures, (which we term his Manifestative, (not Essential) Glory) is but a Creature in it self: And yet, because the Terminus, or Person it belongs or redounds unto, is God; therefore, we say of it, that it is The Glory of God; in that respect it is so Supream, as it may not be given unto another, that is, not to Creatures.

2. Christ's Glory, as God-Man, is but a Creature, yet it redounds to the Glory of him; that is, God, who is One Person with a Creature, and thereupon shineing in that Creature: And it is a Divine Glory, and you are to esteem and adore it as the Glory of the only begotten Son of God. You may see this in a Parallel Case to it; Take Christ's Obedience and Sufferings, and they are but Creatures materially considered; yet in relation to the Person that is the Subject of them, whose they are (though performed but in the Human Nature) and they are said to be the Blood of God, and Righteousness of God. So here, the Glory that appertains and belongs to this Person, is a Glory belonging unto God; and is not to be levelled with the Glory of Endship, belonging unto any the most glorious Creatures, or all Creatures.

You will again say, This Glory of Christ as God-Man, was given him, (as in this Prayer he acknowledgeth) by an Act of voluntary Predestination, as well as ours, and what is to us voluntarily given, might in the first rearing of it up and Ordination, be disposed of as Arbitrarily, and so for other Ends; as namely, for us and our Salvation.

I Answer, 1*st*. It was a meer arbitrary Act in God to ordain his Son to be God-Man; and he might have chosen whether he would predestinate him, or not, to such a Glory. 'Tis true also, It was purely voluntary in God, whether he would have ordained any others with him, or any other Thing besides him; and if any other Persons with him, whether to have made him their Head only preserving them from sinning, or withal, a Redeemer from Sin, upon the Fall. But still, if he would so ordain him, it must be an Ordination worthy of him that is his Son; and let that be whatsoever God pleaseth: yet still, that whatever must be ordained unto his Glory as well as to the Fathers, he must be the Soveraign End of all, as well as his Father; this falls to him as his Right. Heb. 1. 2. It is said, he was The appointed Heir of all Things, (which must be meant of him as God-Man); and for him to be God-Man, depended upon Appointment, yet being appointed, he is said to have it by Inheritance, vers. 4. Being made so much better than the Angels, as he hath by Inheritance obtained a more excellent Name than they: And so by a natural Right, because he is a Son; for so it follows, vers. 5. For unto which of the Angels said he at any Time, Thou art my Son, this Day have I begotten Thee. So as indeed, in the appointing him to be God-Man, he necessarily constituted him the Heir of all Things, which he should otherwise, or besides him him predeſtinate. For, it was the natural Right of the Perſon ſo ordained, and could not be denied him; nor the Glory of it in the Execution be ſuſpended, but with his own Conſent: and that Suſpenſion but for a Time.

And, 2*dly*, Furthermore, God knew what he did, whilſt he was predeſtinating of him, and foreſaw that this Right muſt be the natural Concomitant of his being God-Man: And God in his ſingle knowledg of Viſion (as we call it) had the Draught and Model of all, in his Divine Underſtanding and View, ere ever his Will did ſet his Fiat, or Purpoſe, to any thing that was decreed. And among others of his infinitely vaſt Deſigns, he had the intuition of Chriſt as God-Man, as one great One: Yea, and of all other ſo eminent, as that, if his Will would decree him at all, this high Endſhip (I have ſpoken of) of all Things was to be his Right, and a neceſſary Concurrent and Conſequent of ſuch his being predeſtinated. And therefore, certainly, the Divine Counſel of his Will, did from the firſt, caſt and contrive all Things elſe he did or ſhould decree, in ſuch a manner as to be for his Chriſt, and his Glory; as well as God did contrive all ſhould be for his own Glory, as he is God; and both with one and the ſame Act from the firſt. So that, let Men ſay, what they in their Vanity imagine of Chriſt, as God-Man, his being decreed afore the Decree of the Fall, or after; they muſt all yet acknowledg this for a fix'd Center and Concluſion, That God afore-hand foreſeeing him and all Things in the Idea's of his ſimple Intelligence, did form all for him as their Supream End, then whenever his Will decreed him. If indeed we could ſuppoſe, That the Idea of Chriſt, God-Man, had been out of his Eye, and the view of his Fore-knowledg, or ſimple Intelligence; we might then have only ſuppoſed, many things or all things might have been ordained, and Chriſt not as yet ordained; and Chriſt himſelf to have been decreed for them, and not them for him at firſt: But it could not be ſo here in Chriſt's caſe. For, ſeeing God foreſaw that whenever he was decreed, it is He muſt be decreed the End of them all, and Heir of them all. Therefore he was firſt thought of and decreed; for ſo the End neceſſarily is to be: If therefore, when he is to be predeſtinated, he is to be predeſtinated this End of all Things, then it muſt be that he is firſt predeſtinated.

Yea, we ſay further, That when our All-wiſe, Great, and Soveraign God, did ſet himſelf to ordain any Thing at all, he did contrive and frame his Ordination about them, ſuch as might tend to Chriſt's Glory, and his Own; and had the like Reſpect and Eye unto the Concernments of his Chriſt, as God-Man, in his, as he had to his own Concernments, as God.

3. Paſſage or Motive in the Words.

The third Particular Motive, is drawn from Chriſt's Intereſt, having been firſt ſet up as God-Man in God's Election. Joh. 17. 22. And the Glory which thou gaveſt me, I have given them: that they may be One, even as we are One.

Firſt, For the Expoſition, then, wherein the force of the Plea lies.

Here he further pleads, that they were not only ordained for the Glory of him, as in verſ. 10. but that he himſelf being ordained God-Man in Predeſtination, he had as God-Man joined with the Father as the free Doner, and Ordainer of them unto that Glory, and perfect Union, as well as his Father: Or, if you will, in our Familiar Language, our Glory was a Deed of Gift, and his Hand was to that Deed of Gift, which was to make over Glory unto us, as well as his Father's: Our Glory was his free Deed of Gift, as was the Father's. And therefore, he muſt needs be deeply intereſted to claim it for us of his Father; and hath from thence an undeniable Plea to move him to grant it: and ſo the Story and Series of Election-Deſigns of Chriſt and us, begun at the 5*th* Verſe, runs fairly into the 22*d* Verſe: In this Order, 1. God the Father, in Predeſtination, gave him that perſonal Glory of being God-Man; which the Second Perſon condeſcending to take on him, he bore it afore his Father as God-Man, afore the World was, this verſ. 5. Then, 2. His Father did withal give him his Elect to be His, verſ. 6. &c. And, 3. Did alſo Ordain and Subordinate them for Chriſt's Glory, as the End of them, as well as his Own, verſ. 10. And now, 4. In this 22*d* Verſe, God having given him that high and Soveraign Glory, ſingly for himſelf alone; and given it abſolutely without Terms and Conditions, to him; (as the Nature Nature of a Gift, especially of that Gift, to such a Person, required): He thus set up, and constituted, in this Glory of God-Man, he was not only the requisite Means, or Medium to convey a Glory to us, but he was by the Priviledg and Prerogative hereof empowered to convey it by way of Gift, and to make a Deed of Gift of the like Glory and Union to us: And so, as unless in that manner, he did make it over to us, and set his Hand to it, and Signed it, as a concurrent Giver of it with his Father, we had never had it. And I (says he) gave unto those my Father had given me, out of Love to my Father, who had loved both them and me, Portions forth, to each of them, out of that Glory he had given me: And I did give it as freely to them, as my Father had freely given mine unto me, to the end that I and they may be one, and live for ever together, vers. 24. That so their Glory and Union with me and my Father, may be perfected by their beholding that personal Glory so peculiarly proper to me, given me by my Father. Every tittle of this may be evinced from the Aspect and Correspondency this 22*d* Verse holds with vers. 5. together with the immediate Connexion of the following 23*d*, and 24*th* Verses. And indeed, these 22*d*, 23*d* and 24*th* Verses, do continue the sum of all the former put together, as the Conclusion of his Prayer for the whole Church; the rest being for the Apostles. Chap. 6.

This being the Sum, I shall open and prove the Particulars therein contained, either by Answers to certain Queries, or several plain and simple Assertions, and both founded upon the Words.

I. Query. First, What is meant here by that Glory which the Father had given to Christ?

Answer. First, Negatively.

1. It is not that Essential Glory abstractly considered as his Second Person, without the supposed Union of the Man-hood: (In that manner as hath been explained.) I will not only urge for this, that it's said to be a Gift given him; for his Essential Glory of the Second Person abstractly considered, was by natural Generation communicated to him: But a Gift is what is meerly out of Will, and Good-Will, bestowed. But this Argument for it would be alone sufficient, that he plainly speaks this Speech of himself as a Mediator, or Head of Union to us; as vers. 22, 23. shew. And the Glory which thou gavest me, I have given them: that they may be one, even as we are one. I in them, and thou in me, that they may be made perfect in one, and that the World may know that thou hast sent me, and hast loved them, as thou hast loved me. Now he, as the Second Person simply considered, is not the Means of Union of us with the Father, but it is the Divine Nature united to the Human Nature (as the Loadstone set in the Steel) which has the virtue of drawing us into Union with himself, and his Father; which he therefore prayeth for upon it, for us: Having said first, The Glory which thou hast given me, as that Glory which he gave unto us, upon the Glory given to him. And so he is considered here in this Speech, as Medium Unionis; Thou in me, and I in them, that they may be made perfect in One.

2. It is not meant here of the Glory of his Mediation, his Mediatory Glory, as we call it; that also is proper to himself, and incommunicable to us: And of it cannot be said, That the Glory God gave him, he hath given us. We are not constituted by him Redeemers of, or Mediators for, or Heads of Union to other Saints, as he is to us: then we should be givers of Glory one to another. And then, all Saints (and of all Saints he speaks here) should all be Heads, and Mediators; and so there should be no Body.

Secondly, Affirmatively. It is eminently, and singularly meant of the Glory we have been speaking of: namely, of his being God-Man, in One Person, and the Glory that flows from thence, as it is, and was designed to shine forth in him in Heaven, as the immediate Consequent of that Union. And this was a Gift indeed, a Gift to purpose, greater than all Gifts; as all Divines acknowledg the Grace and Glory in his personal Union to have been.

I know that many Interpreters extend it unto all whatever; that is, any where, or in other respects said to be the Glory of Christ: as that his working Miracles, which is called his Glory, Joh. 2. 11. This beginning of Miracles did Jesus in Cana of Galilee, and manifested forth his Glory; and his Disciples believed on him. His giving to him his Spirit, which was to him without measure: So in giving Grace and Holiness, which is called Glory, 2 Cor. 3. last. But we all with open Face, beholding as in a Glass the Glory of the Lord, are changed into the same Image, from Glory to Glory, even as by the Spirit of the Lord. And many such like; by which they go about to shew the Scope of Christ's Petition to be, That he would give them the like Glory, in these Particulars, which his Father had given him: And so indeed, that all the Glory the Father had given him, in all the Particulars of it, he doth give sprinklings thereof to us. But this extended Interpretation, (though in respect of the Things themselves it be a Truth;) yet as applied to this Place, produceth from this Suggestion, that he should speak of that Glory, which in this Life is possessed by us; and given us in order unto Eternal Life: (Of which more anon.) And doting upon this to be Christ's main and sole Scope, that to make the Saints one among themselves is the intendment of the next Words, That they may be one in us. Whereas it is the high and ultimate Union which is perfected betwixt us, and Christ, and God, as I have shewn: And whereas in the Words after 'tis the ultimate Glory in Heaven, and the perfection of us by that Union that is intended. And therefore answerably, the Glory given Christ here, is his prime and ultimate Glory; which was his personal Union with the Son of God: that is, the Gift that is intended. Gerard after he had enumerated all such particular Glories forementioned, given to Christ, whereof some he admits; yet at last, when he had considered all, and attentively viewed the Scope of the Words, pitcheth upon this, That the Glory of the Son of God, who is God united to Man in one Person, and the Glory that flows therefrom, is the Glory here intended: And that as the Fountain of our Union, and so of our utmost Glory. And so Brugensis also doth interpret it; and he tells the Genealogy of it thus: The Son of God, the Second Person, being one by Essence with the Father, to him he united the Man Jesus by personal Union: And of him as such, I interpret that of the 5*th* of John, vers. 26. For as the Father hath Life in Himself; so hath he given to the Son to have Life in Himself. And that Person, as now become God-Man, when united to us, we thereby become Partakers of his Divine Nature; and so to have the Divine Nature to dwell in us first: As he by his Union, hath the Divine Nature of the God-head to dwell in him.

Hæc beatissima Unio inter Patrem & Filium, itemque inter divinam & humanam naturam in Christo, origo est & fons spiritualis illius unitatis quam Christus [hoc loco] credentibus precatur: (And we must consider that our Union is the Thing prayed for) quia per Christum, propter Christum, in Christo fiunt filii Dei & divinæ naturæ participes, 2 Pet. 1. 4. And again more largely upon the same Place he sets it forth thus: Quia Christus secundum humanam naturam est unum nobiscum, secundum divinam naturam unum cum Patre, & quia assumptæ naturæ humanæ per unionem personalem datum est esse unum hypostaticum cum Filio Dei, qui cum Patre est unum per essentiæ unitatem; inde nobis hæc felicitas contingit, ut per Christum Deo uniti etiam Deo uniri possumus: atque eò respicit Christus quando dicit gloriam illam unitatis quam credentibus dedit se a Patre prius accepisse: ut enim Pater dedit Filio per æternam generationem ut haberet in seipso, Johan. 5. 26. Ita quoque per æternam illam generationem dedit Filio esse unum per essentiæ unitatem cum Patre: Juxta humanam naturam dedit esse unum personale cum divina natura, quam λόγ☉ communem habuit cum Patre.

And others do in effect run upon the same interpreting, That the Glory given him, was to be his Son; and the Glory given us by him, is to be Sons unto God with him: and we believing on his Name, he gives us Power by Charter, or Grant, to be the Sons of God, Joh. 1. 12. Also our Sonship is derived by our Union, or Marriage with him, as being the natural Son of God; and his Marriage of us, is his taking us to be His: And so the Glory of Sonship which we have is by free-Gift; for 'twas free for him to marry, and 'twas to be done by his Consent. And it was by the personal Union that God bestowed on the Man Jesus the Glory of being his Son; That holy Thing (saith he) shall be called the Son of God, Luk. 1. 35. And his being the Son of God is the highest Glory of Christ; and more than all, even the Foundation of all. Thus, if we consider him as Second Person simply, he is the Son of God by natural Generation: if we consider him as Man, he is the Son of God by personal Union, unto the Second Person. If we consider our selves, it is by Adoption, tion, by Marriage with Him, who is the natural Son; that we become Sons unto God. Chap. 6.

And besides, what the weight of these Things, re-ipsâ, or in the Thing it self have in them; let us but look about us, what Glory it is he speaks of before, and after in this his Prayer. We find it thrice spoken of, First, in vers. 5. Secondly, in this 22*d vers.* Thirdly, in vers. 24. And let us view the aspect and correspondency which these three Verses have, and hold one with another; and let us commensurately expound each of them.

1. Let any one attentively reade the 5*th* Verse, And now, O Father, glorify thou me with thine own self, with the Glory which I had with thee before the World was. Then this 22*d* Verse, And the Glory which thou gavest me, I have given them: that they may be One, even as we are One. Surely the Glory which he said, I had with thee before the World was, there, is the same of which, and upon occasion of which, he utters, the Glory which thou gavest me, here; and refers to it. Now I have shewn, that the Glory of his Person, as he is God-Man, is meant, the Glory of which the Second Person then existing took upon him: God having predestinated him thereunto, and wore it afore his Father: He took on him that Person, and correspondently the Connexion of vers. 22. and vers. 5. is filled up thus. Thou having given me that Glory of the Personal Union, and predestinated me to it as proper and peculiar to my Person; I being constituted such by Thee, do freely concur with Thee to give the like Union and Glory pro suo modulo (as Brugensis's word is) to be imparted to them.

2. Let us then look backward, and compare this 22*d* Verse with vers. 24. that follows: There saith he, That they may behold the Glory which thou hast given me. This certainly is the same Glory that is meant here, vers. 22. For he goeth on to prosecute the same Argument, speaks ad idem: And there shews the way how that Glory should be actually communicated to them, and they have it in Possession; which Glory here in the 22*d* Verse, he saith, he had given them by way of Right and Donation: And the way to possess it, according to the intent of his giving, is set out to be by their beholding his Glory, in vers. 24. Now what Glory of his is that? It is the Glory of his Person, that of God dwelling in the Human Nature, the Beams whereof break forth there; and that is his substantial or personal Glory, as he is God-Man: And that's it which his Disciples saw, John 1. 18. As of the Person of him who was the only begotten Son of God; it was the immediate breaking forth, and emanation of the Hypostatical Union. And so when he wrought Miracles, which is called his Glory, Joh. 2. 11. This beginning of Miracles did Jesus in Cana of Galilee, and manifested forth his Glory, and his Disciples believed on him. His Miracles were the immediate Demonstration that he was the Son of God, dwelling in the Human Nature personally; as himself argues throughout that Gospel against the Jews.

3. Again, the same Glory in the 5*th* Verse, and in the 24*th* Verse, is meant: For of that in the 5*th* Verse, He saith, It was the Glory he had before the World was: And in this 24*th* Verse correspondently, The Glory which thou hast given me: for thou lovedst me before the Foundation of the World. Which again he adds, as the Foundation of the Gift of that Glory which he means; even his Love before the World was. So then, it is the same Glory in all three places, which is his personal Glory, as he is God-Man, and his Union unto that One Person, and the immediate consequence thereof; and to be manifested in his very Person.

II. Query. What that Glory is which is given us thereupon?

Answer. It is the Participation of our Sonship-Union with him, in our Degree and Proportion, which we have from him, and the Glory that flows from him by reason of this, as it shall in the perfection of it break forth in Heaven, in us: This is the Glory which Christ hath given us. We know that our Sonship and Adoption is called Glory, Rom. 9. 4. and Rom. 8. 23. Christ's Glory being the Glory of the only begotten Son of God, gave us Power to be Sons. John 1. 12. But as many as received him, to them gave he Power to become the Sons of God, even to them that believe on his Name. Compared with vers. 18. No Man hath seen God at any time; the only begotten Son, which is in the Bosom of the Father, he hath declared him. And if Sons, then Heirs, Co-Heirs of Glory with Chriſt. And it is the utmoſt Glory which breaks forth in Heaven, in Chriſt, from his Perſonal Union, and in us, from our Sonſhip and Union with Chriſt, that is here meant; and the Reaſon is, becauſe it is that Glory wherein, and whereby our Union is ſaid to be made perfect; John 17.23. I in them, and thou in me, that they may be made perfect in one, and that the World may know that thou haſt ſent me, and haſt loved them, as thou haſt loved me: Which explains this verſ. 22. And the Glory which thou gaveſt me, I have given them; that they may be one, even as we are one. And therefore, as Gerard obſerves the words, that they may be perfect in one, is not taken, τελικῶς, as noting the End, or the Effect of that Glory given us, as whereby, as the Means, we come to be perfect in One; but it is taken, εἰδικῶς, as explaining wherein that Glory lay; namely, in a perfection of Union; but we may take it in both. Now our Relative Union with Chriſt, is in this Life as perfect as ever, and we are Sons as much as ever; and the Man Jeſus was as perfectly united to the Son of God, while he was on Earth, as he ever ſhall be; but the perfection of it, he ſaith, is in the other World. And therefore the Glory which he intends, is, as it breaks forth in the full enjoyment and manifeſtation of it in the other World, founded upon his Perſonal Union with the Son of God on his part, and our Glory, upon our Union with him, on our part: And therefore it is, that our Saviour Chriſt calls it Glory, both on his part, and ours, rather than Sonſhip. The ſame may be urged out of John 17.24. Father, I will that they alſo whom thou haſt given me, be with me where I am, that they may behold my Glory which thou haſt given me: for thou lovedſt me before the Foundation of the World. And our Cartwright thus pitcheth the connexion and order of verſ. 22. with what follows; that whereas he had in the former part of the Chapter, prayed for Sanctification and Preſervation afore for us, as the Means to bring us to Glory: Now, ſaith he, he frames his Prayer for our Glorification; which Chriſt founded upon this ground, The Glory thou haſt given me, I have given them. And therefore they pitch ſhort, who interpret this Glory of Grace, as the Means to Glory hereafter, or the beholding of the Glory of Chriſt in this Life; 2 Cor. 3. ult. for here it is the very Glory it ſelf which Grace is to bring us to; which God's, and Chriſt's Heart, in their ſeveral Decrees, were ſo intent upon in the primary Intention thereof; even the Glory of that Sonſhip, both of Chriſt and us, that ſhould be in the other World; and was firſt given, both to him and us, as being Intentio Finis, the Intendment of what ſhould be the ultimate End of us and Chriſt: and with that view of it, it is, that Chriſt prays here. And let any Man give a more ſuitable, harmonious, congruous, genuine Interpretation than this: For what is more ſuitable, or indeed can be, than that our Glory, both of Sonſhip and Poſſeſſion, ſhould be founded upon our Union with Chriſt; and that Chriſt ſhould found both our Union and Glory on his Perſonal Union with the Son of God; and the Glory that thence follows, and is due to him. What more genuine, what more conſonant, what more ſuitable can be thought of, to fill up the meaning of theſe words?

Nunc prò glorificatione petitionem inſtituit.

Object. This Interpretation will ſtrengthen the Hands of thoſe that hold the Saints have the ſame perſonal Union with the Son of God, the Second Perſon that the Man Jeſus hath; for he ſaith, The Glory thou haſt given me, I have given them.

Anſw. 1. Our Saviour on purpoſe hath interwoven a difference between our Union and his, our Glory and his; whereby to prevent this very Objection: for our Union and Oneneſs with God and Chriſt, is declared to be but ſecondary and derivative; and his nor of the ſame order or rank with ours, I in them, and thou in me, as it immediately follows. Ours is a collateral Line, far off removed, of an inferior Houſe; but Chriſt's Union with the Father is in a direct Line: for his Divine Nature is the ſame with the Father's, by which they are one God; and his Humane Nature is one by an immediate perſonal Union, whereas ours is a far off removed: Our Union with God is but by our Union with Chriſt; it's a Coppy-hold of this Lord of Glory. It is a certain Rule, that what is derivative of an Original, never riſeth to be the Original: 'tis Chriſt's Glory here, ſo that 'tis he who gives us our Glory. And this is the Glory, and top of his Glory, that he hath Glory ſo in himſelf, as he is the Lord of it, to beſtow it. This is far otherwise in our Case; and Christ notes it out in that Speech of his, the Father hath given the Son to have Life in himself: That's his Prerogative, he hath it independently, he hath it in himself; whereas of us, (he saith) Ye live in me, and that he is our Life, we have it not in our selves. Chap. 6.

2. Of their Glory, he saith, It is but by a beholding his, and in that manner it is conveyed to them; Vers. 24. Father, I will that they also whom thou hast given me, be with me where I am, that they may behold my Glory which thou hast given me; for thou lovedst me before the Foundation of the World. And how infinitely distant then must it be accounted, from what is the Glory of his Person: Ours is but by beholding his; it is but as the shine of the Sun upon the Stars; which though it be called a Glory by the Apostles, The Stars differ in Glory, 1 Cor. 15. 41. Yet it is not that Glory as it is subjective in the Sun, but susceptive in them; that they are such Bodies, as that the Light of the Sun can be reflected from them, and thereby leave, and cause a Glory to appear in them.

3. This agrees with the main scope here; which is not to shew it is identically the same Glory, but that it is derived from his, and he is the bestower of it, and he is the Lord of it: I have given it them, saith Brugensis, that is pro illorum modo & modulo, according to their capacity and measure.

3. Query. Unto what Time, or Date, the giving of this Glory should be referred; either concerning that of Christ's, When it was that the Father gave this Glory to him his Son? as also the Time which Christ means, when he saith, I have given it them: this in general we are sure of, that both are spoken of in the Time past.

Answ. 1. For the Father's giving this Glory to his Son, it was from Everlasting given, as Christ intends it, even that in Predestination: For this first corresponds with vers. 5. as I have opened: and, secondly, with vers. 24. The Glory which thou gavest me, for thou lovedst me from the Foundation of the World.

2. If the Question be of the Time of Christ's giving us this Glory; we must take this along, That giving it here, is not his giving it, only as he is the Second Person, simply considered, that Act of his, as such, is included in his Father's; but we must interpret it of him, considered as God-Man also, as hath been opened; for it is a Gift to us, that flows from that Personal Union of his to us, and is founded upon it, and so supposed it first: So the Query will proceed anew; Whether it is to be understood of him, taken as Man, after his actual Union with the Son of God, made at his Conception; or of him as God-Man, the Second Person considered, as bearing that Personage, and undertaking it afore God, as hath been explained.

For the first; If it be meant of him as God-Man, after he was united actually, &c. Then,

1. 'Tis certain his Consent, as such, was to the Glory of every Name or Person of us whom God means to bring to Glory: The Man Christ knew his Sheep by Name, for he calls them by Name; John 10. 2, 3. But he that entreth in by the Door, is the Shepherd of the Sheep. To him the Porter openeth, and the Sheep hear his Voice, and he calleth his own Sheep by Name, and leadeth them out. And 'tis the Man that speaks it, vers. 16. He means not only the Jews that were godly, and then converted; whereof many he saw, as Man, with his bodily Eyes, but the Sheep that were among the Gentiles, scattered in all Places, and in all Ages; these in like manner he then calls by Name, and saith, that He must gather them, as being not yet called, nor many of them extant in being: And therefore that Book, or Copy of this Deed of Gift, which his Father presented him, for him to put their Names into, it's called, The Lamb's Book of Life. And we see, that even here, before he is crucified, he saith, I have given it them, even all whom his Father had given him, for he prays for the whole Flock. And yet speaks it now as in Time past, I have given it him; 'twas fit that God should shew him, both whom he was to die for, and whose Sins he did bear: And so, his Deed of Gift was concurrent with his Father's, as to the Persons and Things given.

2. Under-

BOOK III.

Jam. 2. 1. 1 Cor. 2. 8.

2. Underſtand it of him, as now he is actually Man, 'tis ſaid to be a Gift of his, and a Gift of his, ſuch as his Father's Gift to him had been, ſo that he was free in it, as his Father alſo was in his Gift: And why? Becauſe that Jeſus Chriſt was the Lord of Glory, as he is ſometimes called: and this is ſpoken of him, even when he was crucified, in that 1 Cor. 2. 8. Which none of the Princes of this World knew: for had they known it, they would not have crucified the Lord of Glory. And therefore had Power to diſpoſe of it as freely, as any Lord hath of what he owns: And his Father, in ſetting him up as God-Man, as he gave him to have Life in himſelf, John 5. 26. So a free Power in himſelf to quicken whom he would, as freely as his Father: As it is in verſ. 21. of the ſame Chapter: for as the Father raiſeth up the Dead, and quickeneth them, even ſo the Son quickeneth whom he will. And perhaps therefore it is he ſpeaks here in the next words in the manner, as no where elſe, and in no point elſe but of this; Father, I will that thoſe which thou haſt given me, be with me, where I am, to behold my Glory; for he out of the freedom and dominion of his Will, did give it them, as well as his Father.

Vide Leſſium de Prædeſtinatione Chriſti.

There is a Queſtion ſtarted by the Jeſuits, Whether Chriſt, as Man, was a meer Executor of his Father's Will? That Slur they would put upon our Doctrine of God's abſolute limited Decrees, as in the Caſe of Chriſt, Whether he were not an Arbitrary Deſigner of what-ever he doth himſelf alſo? Which they hold to maintain the Dominion of Free-Will, according to their Tenent. But though they think they have us in a Nooſe in this Point, we eaſily ſalve it, by ſaying, That though he as Man, and as God-Man, doth not any Thing, or Act, nor to whom, but thoſe whom his Father's Will is to have him to do: yet that therein he concurs with his Father, as freely as the Father himſelf; and therefore 'tis his free Gift, as well as his Father's. To go no further to confirm this Anſwer, than that of John 5. 21. For as the Father raiſeth up the Dead, and quickeneth them; even ſo the Son quickneth whom he will. And this he ſpeaks of himſelf, as he is the Son of Man, as 'tis expreſſed, verſ. 27. —And hath given him Authority to execute Judgment alſo, becauſe he is the Son of Man. And yet he profeſſeth to do nothing of himſelf without the Father, verſ. 19. Then anſwered Jeſus, and ſaid unto them, Verily, verily I ſay unto you, The Son can do nothing of himſelf, but what he ſeeth the Father do: For whatſoever things he doth, theſe alſo doth the Son likewiſe. He indeed did not firſt Name the Perſons, but his Father named them to him, and gave them to him; yet whom his Father did give to him, he gives this Glory to; and 'tis a free concurrent Act with his Father, both to conſent to the Name, and the Gift, as free as his Father's was out of a ſpecial Love: Let us therefore honour Chriſt ſo far, as to ſay, that his Hand, his Vote, his Suffrage went unto, and was requiſite to all theſe Things as well as his Father's: Yea, and therefore, thoſe Apoſtles of whom, in verſ. 6. of this 17*th* Chapter, he ſaith, Thou gaveſt them me out of the World, are yet ſaid to be choſen by him, as well as by his Father. (The Apoſtles were, by the Choice and Will of God, and Chriſt, Gal. 1. 1. Paul an Apoſtle, not of Men, neither by Man, but by Jeſus Chriſt, and God the Father, who raiſed him from the Dead). And though ſome may ſay, that, as Apoſtles indeed, in reſpect of their Office, they were choſen by Chriſt, as Man, as well as by the Father; and ſo indeed that Speech of his, in the 16*th* of John, is to be underſtood: Yea, but in Joh. 15. 19. Chriſt is ſaid to have choſen them in reſpect of Salvation: If you were of the World, the World would love his own; but becauſe ye are not of the World, but I have choſen you out of the World, therefore the World hateth you. You muſt know, that Judas was gone out when Chriſt ſpake theſe words, and his Eleven Elect Diſciples were left alone with him. Chriſt had given him his Doom and Sentence, John 15. 6. If a Man abide not in me, he is caſt forth as a Branch, and is withered, and Men gather them, and caſt them into the Fire, and they are burned. But I have you now only alone with me, whom I ſpeak theſe Things to; who are to be, and ſhall be eternally ſaved, verſ. 3. Now you are clean, &c. You are not of this World; verſ. 19. And I have choſe you out of the World: And yet ſome of theſe were called ſavingly, before he ſaw them by Face; for ſome of them were John's Diſciples, converted firſt by him: But however, Jeſus Chriſt had choſen them firſt; that is, The Man Jeſus had done it; and then the End and

Issue of Election, you know, is Glory; and so giving them Glory, is here to be understood; as to the Time that I have given is referred to, after the Man Jesus was united. Chap. 6.

But, secondly, What if we put the Query, upon the Person of him as God-Man, whilst he bore that Personage before his Father, in the sense that formerly we have spoken of? What should hinder us to ascend to Everlasting, as the Time whereof this intended [You have I chosen.] here was given by him; as he being Second Person, did bear and sustain the Glory of that Gift of being God-Man, all along from his predestination thereunto? And so, as his Father's Gift was from Everlasting to him, Why not Christ's Concurrence from thence also? What should stay his Hand from doing it under that Consideration? What, should he stay till he was of Age and Capacity to give, and so arrive at the Time when he, as Man, was actually united? This we may be certain of, that what the Man did, when actually united, concur to, That the Second Person did afore from Everlasting; and did it then in the Man's Name: Yea, and undertook he should concur to it when he was united; the Man's actual Concurrence was but a Confirmation of that Act which the Second Person in his Name afore had done: I shewed you, in opening the 6th Verse, upon these words, Those which thou hast given me; That the Gift of his Father to him, as it was first from Everlasting, so it was not only to him as Second Person, singly considered, but as Marriageable, and constituted their Husband: which can be understood no other way, than that the Second Person bore the Personage of God-Man before his Father, as in opening the 5th Verse I have shewed.

Object. But you will say, There is this that hindered, still the Man existed not actu; How then can it be said, that he, as God-Man, did this Act?

Answ. Yet he was before God-Man really, and de jure, God-Man contracted; as I have shewn in the Instance of a new Elect to an Office, before he enters actually upon it, he hath the Title and Honour accordingly: And if he had the Glory of it afore his Father, Then why might he not as then do such Acts in the Name of his being God-Man, as a General doth before he goeth into the Field. I would ask this Question, Before he came into the Flesh, he appeared to the Fathers, and was with the People of God in the Wilderness, and appeared as Captain of the Hosts of Israel; Were these Acts done then meerly as Second Person, and in the Name of the Second Person simply as such? You would say, that these Acts were done, as bearing the Personage of God-Man, in the Name of the Person that was to come: And therefore Christ saith, Abraham saw my Day; for he appeared to him, as also to Jacob; and as some think, in the likeness too that he was to take; these were Acts meet for that Season, and virtually the Acts of him as God-Man. And so at the Creation, when all Things were made by him, as the WORD, as John interprets it, Chap. 1. 1. I would only add this, If he took that Personage in his Acting and Appearances to the Fathers, and the Church; Then why might he not, bearing that Personage afore God his Father, Act with his Father as such, and concur in all Acts with his Father, that were proper in that Season, if I may call it so, from Everlasting, and therefore concur in chusing of us as such, in giving Glory to us, when his Father had predestinated him to that of his, and he undertook it: I would say, that all along from Everlasting, he acted as such in that capacity, together with his Father. I would urge but this, in Isa. 9. 6. One of his Names is, the Everlasting Father; that is, a Father from Everlasting; and to whom it is of being so to us, that it is spoken; and therefore he must be said to have born that Relation of a Father to us from that Time; 'tis not his concurring as Second Person meerly with his Father; for that's included in his Father's Act, with whom he did concur as such, and then the Second Person should be called Father in his personal Propriety, as he is the Son, as well as the first Person of the Trinity, to whom yet the stile of Father among the Persons is only proper. No, in the Trinity, take them as meer Persons considered, there is but one Father; therefore that Title muſt be given him in God's Decrees upon, and come under ſome other Conſideration annexed to him, over and above his being Second Perſon: And what other can that be than this, of his being conſidered as God-Man in his Undertaking, and ſuſtaining it, and as acting accordingly. Father relates to Children, and this we find in Heb. 2. 13. where Chriſt is brought in as a Proof, that he is Man of the ſame Nature with us; that as a Father he ſaith, Lo, I and the Children that thou haſt given me. God the Father's Relation to us, as a Father, is not ſo founded, nor is the Relation in the Second Perſon, ſimply conſidered, ſo to be confounded with that of the Father's. Paul tells us, in that ſecond of the Hebrews, That Chriſt is a Father, as he is conſidered Man; and he argueth it from that Relation. And Iſaiah tells us, Iſa. 9. 6. He was this from Everlaſting; which could not be by his having actually aſſumed the ſame Nature; and yet Chriſt's Father-hood to us is, becauſe he is ſuppoſed of the ſame Nature, as Heb. 2. 14. hath it, Foraſmuch then as the Children are partakers of Fleſh and Blood, he alſo himſelf likewiſe took part of the ſame, that through Death he might deſtroy him that had the Power of Death, that is, the Devil. Why then he muſt be the Everlaſting Father repreſentatively, and by bearing that Perſonage of God-Man, and undertaking, afore his Father, that Relation; and ſo as conſidered by his Father as God-Man from Everlaſting; and for him to give us Glory as ſuch, and act accordingly with his Father, was but to act according to what a Perſonage he was afore-hand: and among other things he muſt act as ſuch, in concurring with his Father to give us Glory, as hath been ſaid.

And ſo the Iſſue of all comes to this, which explains the Text, That God having in his Decree, firſt ſetled an Eſtate in him, in the Glory of that Perſonal Union proper to him alone; then his Father gave us to him as ſo conſtituted, and he agreed, and concurred in his Decree, and Suffrage, as ſuch; and ſo is ſaid to have given us, in and at the ſame Inſtant, that Glory that was ordained by the Father, and by him as God-Man.

IV. MOTIVE.

He repreſents to his Father the Glory (which had been fore-ordained by him in his Decrees) that would accrue to himſelf and his Father in the accompliſhment of this Deſign, when the Union, and Glory of the Saints, ſhould thereby be perfected, as at the latter Day it will; and then appear before all the World; and this to have been the great Contrivement of God in our Election we all know: And it is not only the Glory he will have in the Saints themſelves at that Day, when they ſhall appear with him in Glory, (of which the 2 Theſſ. 1. 10. ſpeaks, When he ſhall come to be glorified in his Saints, and to be admired in all them that believe (becauſe our Teſtimony among you was believed) in that Day): But what a Glory this is, will appear before the reſt of the World of Mankind, who ſhall all be preſent at that Day; and ſee the Iſſue of God's Decrees, unto the amazing aſtoniſhment of Unbelievers: And this I take to be the meaning of the latter part of verſ. 23. That the World may know that thou haſt ſent me, and haſt loved them as thou haſt loved me. The World there I take to be the reſt of Mankind, who ſhall have no part in that Union: And the Time intended wherein they ſhall know this, is that at the latter Day; for it is, when the Saints Union is made perfect in One, as in the words before.

Then it is that they ſhall know, by the Saints Union with me, and by them thus perfected, which ſhall be made conſpicuous to all the World; That thou haſt ſent me, and haſt loved me; and haſt loved them indeed, as thou haſt loved me; when they ſhall ſee that I appear in thy Glory, (as at that Day I ſhall). And that therefore I am One with thee, whereas before they who would not believe, nor embrace me for their Chriſt, and come in for a ſhare of this Union with me, but refuſed me, or unworthily fell ſhort in ſeeking me, and would never never apprehend that I was such a Glorious Messiah as then I shall appear to be, but undervalued and despised me. But when they shall see that I also was able to bring about such an Union of my Church and Body together with me and thee, and not lose one of them thou hast given me; and therewith to have filled them with such a Glory as they shall appear in, by which it will be as conspicuous and Visible, that they are One with us; they will then know, with wonderment, that thou indeed hast sent me; of whom they had, the most of them, by hear-say, at least heard; for the sound thereof went forth to All the World; and that those whom they hated, and despised, together with me, whom they persecuted, and would have driven out of the World; that those are thus so nearly united to me, and thee, as it will appear, Thou hast loved them, as thou hast loved me: Lovedst me as their Head of Union to them; and for that nearer Union which I have with thee; hast loved them as my Body, and for my sake: All which when the World hath once seen, and known; then I shall further fulfil what I pray for, in the 24*th* Verse, even take them into thy Kingdom, where they shall ever be with me the Lord; and behold my Glory, and adore thy Love, both to me and them: Father, I will that they also whom thou hast given me, may be with me, where I am; that they may behold my Glory which thou hast given me; for thou lovedst me before the Foundation of the World. And the appearing and apprehension of this, to and by the Wicked World, will be a new, and great, though a more secondary Glory, which will arise unto his Father by that Union then perfected, which he prays for to be his own.

Chap. 6.

CHAP. VII.

That God constituted from Eternity, Jesus Christ God-Man, to be one universal Lord, under Himself, over all the Creatures he intended to make.

1 Cor. 8. 6.

And One Lord Jesus Christ.

I Desire this to be noticed afore-hand, as touching this part of the Text I am now entring upon; That though All Things are said to be of God: Both His Creation, &c. of them, and our Union with him, to have been first designed by God; that yet our Apostle doth evidently withal here declare, That all Things, both the Creation and Government of the World; as also our Union: yea, even all that ever God did, was ordained by him, to depend upon Jesus Christ, as Lord; as well as upon God the Father, as God.

Hence, at this our beginning to treat of what belongs to Christ's part, we must again climb up to the Supreamest Top, or Pinacle of Eternity, and place our Thoughts in the first Instant thereof: And as yet, suppose that our God being but about to Purpose, and Decree All Things, or any thing which his Will should pitch upon: that none of these Things concerning us and the Creatures, had their determination, without a supposition of our Christ his having been first constituted the Lord, and a dependance of all Things upon him as Lord, to have been first ordained also. Or thus,

That God, in his Decrees and Purposes, for the effecting of all these, did presuppose and take in his Christ to be the Lord of us and of all Things: Of whom all did and should depend, as well as upon Himself, though under Himself.

So as for an Entrance to this Discourse about Christ's Interest in all these, we will make a stand, or rather go backward again, and make a Recognition, and set our Thoughts down in this Supposition, That we consider all these Concernments of us, and of the whole Creation, in the first instant of Eternity, but as yet lying in the Mind of God in a simple or pure Idea of them, or in a bare Contemplation, and Chart, or Model, in God's meer and simple Knowledg, and Intelligence; they lay as a Mass of Gold, or Silver in the Oar, without their having a Decree of his Will as yet passed upon them, that they should be minted: They had not the conclusive Decree, or Fiat of his Will, what they should be; although he stood ready and propitious to set that his Seal, or Imprimatur for their coming forth, and publishing into Actual Existence: But having them, and All in view, or Model ready afore him; he was pleased in one and the same Instant, or Moment of Eternity, wherein he brought forth these, or any other Purposes of his to a Determination conclusive; He was pleased (I say) to set up as the first-born of his Purpose, chiefly, or afore All, and to lay for a Foundation, and Corner-Stone a midst, or middle Person, between his Creatures, and Himself; but especially between Him, and those First-Fruits, or choice of his Creatures, he would draw up into a high Union with Himself, to set up his Christ. A Person who in the Language of the Text, should be an [One Lord,] who should be a joint Compeer with Him; or rather God's Commissioner and Plenepotentiary, in all his Works of Wonder; and that is, Our Christ: Not considered barely, and singly as he is Second Person, One God with the Father blessed for ever; but as God-Man, having the Office of Lord and Christ put upon him by the Father, as one that should be an [One Lord,] under this one God considered as he is God, and in that relation and respect lower than God Himself: And yet constituted in that Supream Soveraignty of Lordship over them, his Creatures, that both all his Creatures which he should with him decree to make, they all, and their very Creation, and Government after their Creation, should depend on that One Lord. As also, that all of us whom he should decree to be taken up into that special Union and Communion, should owe all thereof to, and have the same dependance on, this one Lord, as upon God the Father Himself: Than which, nothing could be found more to honour and greaten this One God, as God, before the whole Creation. Thereby being shewed and manifested the infinite distance of God from the whole Creation, in having so Supream a Lord over them, as this same Lord of his designing, should be; who yet should be under God himself, and so between him and them. Chap. 7.

And there is this General Corolary, from this founded on the Text; That if All Things, and our Union with God depended upon this Person, as he is Lord, and Christ; and that these Titles import his Office, and not simply his being Second Person, as Son of God, (though that be the Substratum, and Foundation of All.) That then, he must have been first set up and constituted God-Man, and in God's Decrees invested with these Offices, and constituted and made both Lord and Christ, as by whom all Things should be, and we by Him, as well as by the Father: Which is one great Notion I drive at, and I carry with me in mine Eye all along, to make forth; and do therefore, upon any just Occasion, every where draw it out, unto Notice and Observation, as a great Gospel-Truth.

My present Task is, To begin with this his Title; He is (as hath been said) first decreed unto, His Title of LORD.

The following Explanation of which will make way for the clearing of that great Truth last noticed; as also of many other Things concerning Christ, previous to what are to follow. Now as to that,

1. It is an ancient Title of His, and one of his first Titles, given him in the Old Testament, and continued to him by them in the New, and of a larger extent than that of Saviour. And though distinct from that of One God, yet necessarily denoting and supposing (as the Foundation of it) that withal He is God.

In the Old Testament, Psal. 110. 1. The Lord said unto my Lord: and though our Translation observes no distinction, yet 'tis in the Original, Jehovah said to my Lord Jehovah, unto Adonai: that is, God the Father unto Christ, or the Messias, as Christ himself interprets it, Matth. 22. 42, and 43. To whom that Name Adon, or Adonai, is made specially peculiar, and had been traditionally let down to the Jews: For Enoch had propheſied of him, under that Title, afore the Flood; which, as a Tradition the Apostle Jude quotes, vers. 14. The Lord (namely the Christ) cometh with ten thousand of his Saints. To name but one more out of the Old, Dan. 9. 17. Hear O God Jehovah, for the Lord's Sake: Where Christ, in distinction from God the Father, is called Adonai, the Lord.

Which Title of the Messiah, because thereby he was more eminently known by them, than by any other, the Angels, when they bring the News of his Birth to the Jews, Luke 2. 11. do proclaim him by, and under the Stile of it: To you is born a Saviour, which is Christ the Lord. They describe his Person under the Notion which he had been more vulgarly known by, under the Old Testament, than that of Saviour [Christ the Lord.] And afterwards, the same began to be, by the unanimous Vote of all the Apostles given him, Acts 2.14. publishing it in the Ears of all Israel, and applying it with an Appropriation to our Jesus, as that Title which answered to the general Expectation of the Jews, concerning their long-look'd-for Messiah. Acts 2. 36. Therefore, let all the House of Israel know assuredly, That God hath made this same Jesus whom ye crucified, both

BOOK III.

Lord and Chriſt. And is, as if he had ſaid, Lo, he is that very Perſon whom you expect. Who hath been generally and indeterminately known to you, under thoſe Names given him by your Fathers, all along in the Old Teſtament; whom God hath now made, and ſet up, and declared ſo to be, by exalting him in Heaven, and putting all into his Hands. And know (ſaith he) aſſuredly, that that Man Jeſus is He. 'Tis ſtrange, that the Jews ſhould ſo conſpire, to forbear every where throughout the World, to reade or pronounce the Name Jehovah, the Name of God's Eſſence: And that inſtead thereof they ſhould ſubſtitute, and ſtill uſe the Word Adonai, or Lord; which, as you have heard, is ſometimes in the Old Teſtament appropriated to the Son. Yea, and that their own Cabaliſts ſhould confeſs, the Myſtery of it to be, That that Name Adonai, or Title of Lord (and ſo the Perſon of him, the Son, that more particularly bears it) is to be the Key to Jehovah, which latter is the Name of his Eſſence, which is hidden to us, (as they ſpeak) to be as a Treaſury, in which God Jehovah hath hid all the Riches he means to communicate to us. And further, this Adonai, or Lord, to be the great Ruler and Governour, under God Jehovah, nouriſhing and ſuſtaining all Things. And that without Adonai, or this Lord, there is no Way or Means for any Man to come to this God Jehovah. Thus Maſini hath out of their own Records obſerved: Which is a clear, if not a full Explication of the Office of our Chriſt, as he is Adonai, or Lord.

Adſentiuntur nobis verbis ſaltem Diviniores Hebræorum Philoſophi, quos Cabaliſtas vocant, cum tradunt illud verbum Adonai eſſe tanquam clavem quâ pateſit aditus ad Deum Jehovam, hoc eſt, ad Deum veluti in ſuâ eſſentiâ latentem. Eſſe theſaurum in quo ea, quæ à Jehovâ nobis impartiuntur, omnia ſunt recondita. Eſſe inſuper œconomum illum magnum qui res omnes diſpenſat, nutrit, vegetat per Jehovam. Denique neminem ad Jehovam penetrare poſſe, niſi per Adonai: Neque enim ullam aut viam aut rationem ad illum prevenendi aliam eſſe prorſus. Hæc & his ſimila ſcripta extant in eo libro cui titulum illi fecere Portam lucis, & in libro quem vocant Nomen explicatum. Maſius in Joſuam. See alſo Ainſworth on Exod. 6. 3.

The New Teſtament ſpeaketh the very ſame in terminis; God not being known to any, but to whom Chriſt reveals him: In whom are hid all the Treaſures of Wiſdom, he ruling and ſupporting all by the Word of his Power: As to whom God hath communicated the Execution of all Judgment; Himſelf viſibly judging none. Neither is there any Name under Heaven but this, whereby Men can be ſaved, and approach to God; there being one God, and one Lord, as here, 1 Cor. 8. 6.

And this Title of Lord, in diſtinction from Jehovah, or God, as thus underſtood and uſed by the Jews, conduceth ſomewhat towards an Anſwer to that Objection of the Socinians; That Chriſt being uſually thus ſtiled the Lord, but the Father God; that therefore Chriſt is not God. For not only according to the Jews Senſe Adonai, or Lord, is all one with Jehovah, in this reſpect, that it is one of the Names of him that is God; for they ordinarily, in naming God, put it inſtead of God, or Jehovah; yea, and it is attributed to none other, but him that is God; as they acknowledg. But yet ſo, as withal it is evident alſo, That in their Senſe it likewiſe ſignifies, an Office of Lord, and Mediator for us put upon him: And in that reſpect diſtinguiſhed from Jehovah; yet ſo, as ſtill withal, Chriſt Himſelf is alſo the true Jehovah. And therefore the Old Teſtament in a very uſual way joins both together, the Lord God; and when it ſpeaks in that manner, doth uſually mean Chriſt, who was then the great Diſpenſer of all Things under the Old Teſtament, as well as now under the New. 'Twas he that appeared to the Fathers, who is, and was to them both Lord and God alſo, as well as Lord and Chriſt to us.

And thus the Apoſtle Thomas, John 20. when once convinced of his being the Meſſiah, crys out, verſ. 28. My Lord, and my God! He ſpake it of Chriſt. For whereas other Diſciples had called him the Lord, (as in that Chapter again and again, and frequently elſewhere, as his uſual Title) and had ſaid to Thomas, ver. 25. We have ſeen the Lord, that is, him whom we have and do own for the Meſſiah. And then the Old Teſtament having ſtill put both Titles together of Lord and God, as you heard. Hereupon, Thomas his Faith being on the ſudden ſtruck, and enlightned with a freſh and new Conviction, he crys out, My Lord, and my God, thereby acknowledging Chriſt to be both, and he doth it with Application to himſelf, [My Lord, and my God.] And whereas in Eph. 4. 5, 6. when it is ſaid, There is one Lord and one God the Father of all; And in this Text, 1 Cor. 8. 6. To us there is but one God the Father, and one Lord Jeſus Chriſt. It is not to be underunderstood, nor doth it follow, That his Father's being said to be One God, in distinction from Christ, should exclude Christ from being that One God; no more than Christ's being termed that One Lord, in the same Places, would import, that therefore God the Father is not Lord. Yea, of Christ, as well as of the Father, it is said, That he is the only Lord; and that with his being God also is inserted, to second it and put this Matter out of all doubt. Thus Jude 4. the last Words of the Verse, Denying the only Lord God, ἀρνούμενοι τὸν μόνον δεσπότην θεὸν καὶ κύριον ἡμῶν Ἰησοῦν Χριστὸν, and Lord of us, Jesus Christ; affixing but one Article at the first unto all these three Titles that follow [Lord God,] the only Lord God, and our Lord: As meaning but one and the same Person known by all these Titles; not two Persons, as of God the Father, and of Christ, both: but one Person only; namely, our Christ, who is the Subject of all these Titles. Whom he there names our Lord Jesus Christ, all three spoken of one and the same Christ; which that of Peter added to it also clears, (and all know Jude's Epistle to be a Counterpart of that second of Peter; And he writing as Jude also, against the very same Hereticks in those Times,) he there says of them, Denying the Lord that bought them: And it is our Christ is the Person he speaks of too; as the proper Character he signifies him by; The Lord that bought them, and paid the Price of buying them as a Lord. And as he names no other Person but Christ only; so both Peter and Jude do name the very Heresies, the Hereticks of those Apostles Times run into; naming the very Things themselves wherein their Heresy consisted: namely, in their denying him to be God, the only true God, which together with that additional Character of The Lord that bought them, was the very Point they denied.

Chap. 7.

That the Syriack Translation, and the Complutensis Edition read it, & Græcanica apud Oecumenium. See Beza. De Quiros. A Lapide in loc. m. Of the like to which, Eph. 4. 3. The God and Father of Christ, is understood of one and the same Person.

Add to this, It is well known, that those first Hereticks of the Primitive Times (who pretended to Christianity, and against such they only wrote,) did not deny One God the Father, or His being the only true God; but that Jesus Christ was the only true God, this they denied; and therefore it is, that Jude speaks this of Christ alone.

And last of all, an Angel from Heaven, in the close of the whole New Testament, speaks the very same, thereby confirming and sealing what all the Apostles and Scriptures had spoken of Christ; thus in Revelations the very last Chapter, vers. 6. And the Lord God of the Holy Prophets (who inspired them) sent his Angel to shew unto his Servants, &c. Now who is it, to whom the sending of this Angel is attributed, read vers. 16. I Jesus have sent my Angel to testify unto you these Things in the Churches; even the same Person (Christ.) The same (He) it is, that is the Lord God of the Holy Prophets, vers. 6. And this is for certain our Jesus. For vers. 16. I Jesus have sent my Angel. And who in like manner concludes his Speech, vers. 20. He which testifies these Things, saith, Surely I come quickly. Amen. Even so, come [Lord] Jesus, says the Church. And this is our Lord and our God; as Jude and Peter said in their Epistles.

And by all this, the Socinian Objection is sufficiently obviated, and gone beyond.

CHAP.

CHAP. VIII.

That the Title of Lord, though it imports him that is God, and connotates with it, his being God; yet in this Corinthian Text, (and elsewhere) doth primarily note, a Relation to an Office or a Dignity put on him by the Father, as considered to be God-Man; and not simply, his being Second Person, God with God only. The Apostle's Intent here is, to set him forth in the dependance, that all Things, &c. have of him as such, and not upon him as Second Person, simply considered, it is a Title of Office which he bears afore God, considered as God-Man. The Fitness, Fulness, and Sufficiency of this Person, Christ, God-Man, to discharge this Office of one Lord. For what Reasons it was necessary, that he should be God-Man in one Person, to qualify him for the Employment.

WE do, or may know, that there is a two-fold Lordship of the Second Person; one, natural, absolute, and underived, belonging to him, as he is considered, singly, Second Person, God with God, and Lord with the Lord; to whom therefore all the Royalties of the Divine Nature, do equally and alike in common belong, even as to the Father, and Holy Ghost; which Lordship is in them all founded on this which is common to all three Persons; namely, That they had a joint concurrence in the making of all things, and also in governing of them. But then there is another Lordship, that is, a derived Oeconomical Dispensatory, which is set up by Commission from God, for effecting all his Works of Wonder for him, and under him; and this is a Lordship proper and peculiar unto Christ, considered as God-Man, to whom, as such, the Father hath committed all Judgment, as the Son of Man; John 5. 22, 27. For the Father judgeth no Man; but hath committed all Judgment unto the Son. And hath given him Authority to execute Judgment also, because he is the Son of Man. And of this Lordship it is that Peter speaks, Acts 2. 36. Let all the House of Israel know assuredly, that God hath made him both Lord and Christ. So then, there is a made-Lordship of his, who yet, by virtue thereof, makes all things. And this is the very same in other equivalent Terms, that are else-where spoken of him by the other Apostles; as by Paul himself, Heb. 1. 2. Whom he hath appointed Heir of all Things. [Heir] there, is equivalent to [Lord] in that Acts 2.36. and [Appointed] there, unto [Made] in Peter's Speech, Acts 2. 36. and [of all Things] there, unto one Lord [of whom are all Things] here in the Text.

Hence therefore, his being Lord, evidently imports an Office or Oeconomy committed to him, and undertaken by him; even as his being Christ also doth. And indeed, we find both those Titles, of Lord and Christ, joined often together, and attributed to him, as being, in this respect, of like Kind or Constitution, that is, as being both made Titles of Office. And to this sense, as we meet meet them joined, Acts 2.36. so also we find him to have been publickly proclaimed, with and under these Titles, by the Angels, as the Militia sent from Heaven at his Birth, Luke 2.11. to proclaim their own new Lord, as well as of Men; To you is born a Saviour, which is Christ the Lord: Where they add a third [Saviour]; All which three Titles, are also here in the Text, Our Lord Jesus Christ. All, and each of these three, do alike import Matter of Office given to him, and undertaken by him. And in respect to this Investment with an Official Lordship, it is, he is stiled Lord, in distinction from God, else-where as well as here; in those words, Psal. 110.81. The Lord said to my Lord, sit, &c. though our Translation took no notice of a Distinction in the Titles given setly to each; yet in the Original it is, Jehovah said unto Ladonai, the Lord, that is, God the Father, said to the Lord, or Christ, as Christ himself interprets it, Matth. 22.42,43. And that his being Lord there, importeth this his Office of made Lordship, and not that as Second Person, Peter evidently shews, in the place fore-cited, Acts 2. where he quotes these very words of the Psalmist, vers. 34. to prove, That God had made him Lord and Christ; for, that is his Inference from David's words, The Lord said unto my Lord. And Christ himself, in Mat. 22. 43, 44, 45. He saith unto them, How doth David in Spirit call him Lord, saying, The Lord said unto my Lord, Sit thou on my right Hand, &c. If David then call him Lord, how is he his Son? In like manner, Dan. 9. 17. Hear, O God (Jehovah) for the Lord's sake: where Christ, in distinction from God the Father, is called Adonai, and Lord. Yea, and this distinguishing Title is made appropriate to him, [the Lord] by the Angels at his Birth, who is Christ the Lord. And before his Death, by the Evangelists, in their mention of him, Luke 12. 42. And the Lord said, Who then is that faithful and wise Steward, whom his Lord shall make Ruler over his Houshold, to give them their portion of Meat in due season? Chap. 24. 34. Saying, The Lord is risen indeed, and hath appeared to Simon. And John 4. 1. When therefore the the Lord knew how the Pharisees had heard, that Jesus made and baptized more Disciples than John. And Chap. 6. 23. Howbeit there came other Boats from Tiberias, nigh unto the place where they did eat Bread, after that the Lord had given Thanks. By Mary Magdalene, John 20. 18. Mary Magdalene came and told the Disciples that she had seen the Lord, and that he had spoken these Things unto her. By the Angels, Mat. 28. 6. He is not here, for he is risen, as he said: Come, see the place where the Lord lay: And in the Acts ordinarily. In the same sense is this my Corinthian Text to be understood. Chap. 8.

2. This Title of Lord, thus distinguished, doth fitly serve as an introductory Proof from parallel Scriptures; That the Lordship of Office is also intended in this Title in the Text, and not as Second Person, simply considered. For these Reasons.

Reason 1. Christ is thereby here distinguished from God; not only as he is the Father, but as he is one God. Now, if Christ were stiled the Lord, only as Second Person, then he is not so to be distinguished from the Father, as the Father is one God; but as such he is included therein, with the Father; for he is one God with him, and not to be excluded from that Title; God forbid! But it is evident, that this Title, one Lord, is to shew a distinction from the one God; and therefore it must import, as something more in his Person. So his Office of Lordship; by which, as in relation to the dependance of all things upon him, he is termed Lord. And otherwise, if his meaning were to expres, that he is God, as he is Second Person, singly considered, he should say but one and the same thing by two several words, viz. That God the Father is God, and that Christ the Second Person is one God also, whilst he thus saith of him, That he is the One Lord. And indeed, then there were no difference at all; for God the Father is One Lord, in that sense of being Lord. And it is common to the Persons, and so it belongs to the Father as well as to the Son; and the Son is one God as well as the Father. Neither could the Socinian Objection be answered, unless we interpret this One Lord to be spoken of Christ (respectu Officii) in respect of his Office, and not of what he is as Second Person simply. For, there is no distinction between one God and one Lord, if his being God were simply ſimply meant in both; but there is a manifeſt diſtinction between God the Father, and Chriſt, in theſe two Titles intended to them.

Reaſon 2. He is here ſet out ſuch an One Lord, though holding an oppoſition unto, yet withal as beareth ſome ſemblance, in an oppoſite way, with what the Heathens did conceive of their Lords many in their ſubſerviency unto their many Gods; and we muſt ſuppoſe ſome Analogy or Semblance here to hold. Only they affirmed that there were many Gods, and that there were many Lords; but to us there is but one God, and one Lord. And yet the parallel between both thus far holds, that as theſe Heathens ſuppoſed, that theſe Lords they fancied were ſuch, as were appointed by their Gods to govern the World under their ſuppoſed Deitiés, ſo we muſt think of Chriſt, this one Lord, as under the Great God, in an Inſtrumentality and Subſerviency unto this One God. And as a midſt betwixt God and us, and in a perfect oppoſition to their many falſe Gods and Lords, he makes this the Glory of the Chriſtian Religion, that they held but one Great and Sovereign true GOD, high above all Gods, as the Pſalmiſt often expreſſes it, whereas they made many, falſly ſo called. And that that Jeſus Chriſt, whom we worſhip, is but One Lord, in defiance of their many Lords, whom they fancied to be Mediators and Agents between God and them, and as placed in the middle betwixt God and Men; that was their Religion. And the Apoſtle outvies them; We profeſs ſuch an One Lord, who is an Univerſal Lord over all, and a Mediator betwixt Men and God alſo.

And for the verifying of this Notion, as thus ſtated, I refer the Reader unto what a more Learned Hand hath writ, alledging this very Scripture to the ſame purpoſe I now do, for the confirmation of my Aſſertion.

'This diſtinction (ſays he) alſo, of Sovereign Gods and Demons, I ſup-
'poſe our Apoſtle alludes to, in 1 Cor. 8. 5. where he ſaith, Though there be
'many that be called Gods, whether in Heaven, or in Earth, as there be
'θεοὶ πολλοὶ, Gods many; that is, Dii Cæleſtes, Sovereign Deities, ἢ κύριοι πολλοὶ,
'Lords many, i.e. δαίμονες ἐπιχθόνιοι, Demons, Preſidents of Earthly Things;
'yet to us Chriſtians, there is but One Sovereign God, the Father, of whom 'are all Things, and we to him; that is, to whom, as Supream, we direct all
'our Services; and but εἷς κύριος, one Lord Jeſus Chriſt, inſtead of their ma'ny Mediators and Demons, δι' οὗ τὰ πάντα ἢ ἡμεῖς δι' αὐτοῦ, by whom are all 'Things which come from the Father to us; and through whom alone we find
'acceſs to him: The Alluſion, me-thinks, is paſſing elegant; and ſuch as I 'think, cannot be well underſtood, without this diſtinction of Superior and In'ferior Deities, in the Theology of the Gentiles, they having a plurality in both
'ſorts, and we Chriſtians but one in each, as our Apoſtle affirmeth: There
'wants but only the Name of Demons, inſtead of which the Apoſtle puts Lords,
'and that for the Honour of Chriſt, of whom he was to infer, εἷς κύριος, the 'Name of Chriſt, not to be polluted with the Appellation of an Idol; for his 'Apodoſis muſt have been otherwiſe, εἷς δαίμων. Or may be, he alludes unto the 'Hebrew Name Baalim, which ſignifies Lords: And thoſe Lords, I told you,
'were nothing elſe but Demons: for thus would Paul ſpeak in the Hebrew
'Tongue; There are בעלים רבים and אלהים רבים, many Gods, and many 'Lords. Mr. Mede's Apoſtacy of the latter Times, pag. 13, and part of 14.

They had heard of one God, of whom are all Things, from the wiſeſt of their own Philoſophers, but never of one Mediator between that God and them; they had ſtumbled at this, in the Chriſtian Religion; That they worſhipped a Man Jeſus raiſed from the Dead, as Acts 17. 18, 31. when yet themſelves held, that the ſouls of Men dead (though not riſen) were Mediators for them to their Gods, and thus imprecated them to interpoſe for them. The Apoſtle therefore, moſt wiſely, and aptly, and moſt elegantly, ſets both theſe Religions together in a parallel Compariſon, and yet in oppoſition of the one to the other; and ſo maketh the falſe Notion of their Lords, thus far ſerviceable, as to let in to theſe Heathens Minds by a Similitudinary Glympſe, that, whereby theſe Heathens, at leaſt confuſedly, might underſtand and apprehend (if they would but reflect) what manner a Lord or Chriſt it was we Chriſtians believed and adored; adored; and for what use or end. Their Fancies indeed ran upon many Lords, and Mediators many; and those dead Mens Souls: but the Apostle presents them instead of theirs, with one great Mediator, according to the Christian Profession; and Him, though a Man raised from the Dead, yet such a Lord, as being more than a Man, was not a Mediator only betwixt that one God and them (and we by him) but was a Lord over, yea, a Founder of all Things else, together with God, One Lord by whom are all Things. And thus he out-shoots them infinitely in the maineſt Principles of their Religion they doted on, and accounted their Glory and higheſt Wisdom. Chap. 8.

In the next place I come to manifeſt the Fitneſs, Fulneſs, and Sufficiency of this Person, Christ, God-Man, or of the Son of God united into one Person with a Man, to bear and sustain this Office of one Lord; both in relation unto all Things to be by him; and especially to us the Elect.

Let it be remembred, that this discourse of Christ's fitneſs in this place, is wholly confined unto that Notion in general of his Lordship, as in the universal extent thereof over all Things; but what is proper to set forth his Fitneſs to be the Head of Angels; and more particularly as an Head and Redeemer for Men. The discovery of that fitness is to succeed in its proper place, when Redemption comes to be handled, as that fitneſs of his Person is suited to that Work of Redemption. See the Sermons on Eph. 1. 10. and Christ's fitneſs for the Work of Redemption, on Heb. 2.

If we (the Chosen of God) and all Things, were able to speak, as they are brought in speaking at last, Rev. 5. 11. and were permitted to give their Voices to design forth and chuse One, (and but one Person, as the Text speaks) to be the Universal Lord, they nor we could desire no other; none but this Person of God-Man, thus constituted and made up as he is, and is now to be set forth.

The All-sufficiency that is in this Person for this Office, the Narrative thereof proceeds on thus.

1. Though in respect of the Office it self, he that is to have it, is said to be made, that is, appointed, as coming under God's Will appointing; yet in his Person, as the Foundation of it, it was absolutely necessary, he be one that is not made, that is, not a meer Creature: One that had been but a meer Subject of God's, according to that Tenure of the Law of Creation only, had not had an intrinsecal Worth and Dignity in his Person, to fill up and carry forth this his Office of Lordship with port and comely Honour enough, nor suitably to that place. For, he must be so over the Creature, as that himself might challenge Worship and Honour from the Creature as their Lord, as truly and justly, as God the Father, in that he was to be One whom all things should depend upon, as well as upon the Father: In whose Person also a Demonstration might be given, how great a God, God the Father was in his distance from the Creature, in that he that was his appointed Lord, should yet naturally hold so great a Sovereignty over all his Creatures. Who ever had been but a made Person, and a made Lord too, and wholly both, he were too mean stuff to make God's Lord of; that is, such a one Lord, as this Text sets out, and which became God to set up: His Person must be able to bear and to fill up his Lordship and Dominion, for else he would but fall into the same Rank with those many Lords the former Verse speaks of; yea, if you would suppose one so sublimated, as to be the Spirit of the whole Creation; and in whom the several Species of the whole were, by way of Eminency, contained and comprehended; and out of whom, as an Elixir, they all might be extracted, (as some philosophize concerning our Christ); yet still, in that he were but only made, his distance from meer Nothing, were but the very same that his Inferior Fellow-Creatures have, he could never have been a midst between God and them, because in his Person he held not a proportionable distance between God and them; and thereby he had been as subject by his Original Make and Constitution, to the same mutability and weakness that any other of the Creatures were; and so would have proved but a meer Quick-sand, to the upholding and bearing up the weight of all Things that were to be founded on him, and depend upon him. Look then, as in the Case of Man's Redemption, like as Men that had Infirmity, were laid aside for The Phrase, Heb. 1. 2.

Book III. the Office of the Eternal Prieſthood; and God ſought out one that was perfect for evermore: So, of all meer Creatures, it muſt be ſaid, as to this his Office of Lordſhip, they all had infirmity.

If it be ſaid yet, If God would, could he not have made one great enough for this? The Anſwer is, Even for this very Reaſon, that ſtill all would have been but meerly a made Greatneſs; Even therefore, ſuppoſe what you can or will, it proves too little, and falls ſhort: For alas, it were all but wholly borrowed; yea, and of which Greatneſs, theſe very Stones were as immediately capable without him, by God's ſole raiſing them to ſuch an Eſtate, as himſelf once was thereof. God could have made as good ſuch Chriſts, and Lords of them, as the Baptiſt ſays, Mat. 3. 9. Sons of Abraham out of Stones; He that is capable of ſo high an Office, muſt be One that is God, which we have even now proved.

This for the firſt, That this One Lord, here in the Text, is and muſt be God.

And yet again, 2*dly*, If he be to be made a Lord, and Chriſt, (as the Scripture ſpeaks alſo of him); He muſt, together herewith, be ſomething that is made, as well as God, who cannot be made: He is to be, (in reſpect of this Office) under God, lower than God, between God and all things made by God; otherwiſe, this Great End, which was to greaten God as God, by ſhewing viſibly and demonſtratively, that infinite diſtance between God and all his Creatures, had not been attained: for ſuch a Perſon as was God only, as well as himſelf, had been equal unto him: But God, to ſhew his Greatneſs, deſigned ſuch a One as ſhould be alſo under him, and yet God; and withal, a Sovereign Lord of all his Creatures. And we find Chriſt accordingly ſpeaks of himſelf, My Father is greater than I. So then, ſome one of the Creatures muſt be taken in, to make up this Lord, to be made one Perſon with him that is God; and ſo this Lord will take his Place in the midſt, between God and all things.

For, 3*dly*. This Creature (whom ever this Honour is to fall upon) in God's Eternal Purpoſes (for we are ſtill in the ſame Sphere of meer poſſibility) muſt be made into one Perſon, with a Perſon that is God; for elſe, ſtill he is not [One] Lord. God, you ſee, would have but One Lord, as God Himſelf is but One. The Text ſpeaks it both Negatively, Not many Lords; and alſo Affirmatively, One Lord: two compleat Perſons of them can never make one, and theſe two muſt be made one Perſon. A King and Queen, though one in Marriage, (the neareſt Conjunction) never did, nor never can, make one King, or one Prince, (as Philip and Mary with us did not). And again, if we would ſuppoſe, that many Creatures, and not one only, had been taken up into Union with ſome Perſon that was God; yet ſtill there would have been Lords many. But God will have ſuch a Lord as is perfectly One, who therein ſhall be the perfect Image of his Sovereignty and Monarchy over all Things; and therefore will have but One, to whom all Things elſe, without exception, are to be ſubject.

4*thly*. Which of the Three Perſons in the God-head, and what ſort of the Creatures, was fitteſt to make up, in a way of Perſonal Union, this One Lord?

1. As to the Perſon of the Trinity, it muſt not be the Father; it was no way proper for him, that was the Fountain of the Perſons, and of the whole Creation, to undertake any Office what-ever, and ſo not to become this Lord, which is an Office under God, as the Text expreſly affirmeth. Who then? God the Son is next, who in that he is the Son, is, by a proper natural Right, Lord of all Things; for he is the Heir unto this his Father, in that he is the Son; and it is the common Law, even from God to Creatures downwards, That the Heir is Lord of all, Gal. 4. 1. 'Tis fitteſt then that he, the Son, ſhould have this Office and Title of Lord transferred on him; and none ſo fit to be the appointed Heir of all Things, Heb. 1. 2. who, in his Perſon, is naturally next God the Father, the begotten Heir of all Things, who is not made, but begotten, and the only Begotten, namely, of this One God the Father; John 1. 3, 14, 18. compared, All Things were made by him, and without him was not any Thing made that was made. And the Word was made Fleſh, and dwelt among us, (and we beheld his Glory, the Glory as of the only begotten of the Father) full of Grace and Truth. No Man hath seen God at any time, the only begotten Son, which is in the Bosom of the Father, he hath declared him. And so truly, a Person to whom of special right this Honour, as conferred, doth belong: This Title of Lord was not to be severed from the Natural Heir; not so, as that one Person should be the Natural Lord by Inheritance, and another made Lord, and Christ, by Decree and Appointment, upon this account also, that still there must be but one Lord. And therefore he who had a natural Right to be Lord, as Heir of all Things, and he who was made so by Decree, and Appointment, must meet in one and the same Person. Chap. 8.

And as for the Pretension of the Third Person, the Holy Ghost; so it was in God's Design, that he that was to be this Lord, was to have such a multitude of Elect to be united to him, as he must be a Person, who was able to give and send the Spirit himself to make that Union, and to effect all for him, and compleat all from him; John 16. 15. All things the Father hath, are mine; therefore I said, that he (the Spirit) shall take of mine, and shew it to you.

And again, the Intendment of erecting this Office of Lordship, being, that God might have an outward Representative of himself, or a visible Administration of all Things, and to whom the whole Creation should owe their Subsistence, and their All; and accordingly he was to be owned and honoured by them, and at the same rate that God is: Hence therefore, for this Honour, God comelily singled forth, and constitutes, this Son to be that Person that was next himself, as Fathers use to do their Sons. God the Father so loveth the Son, that he sheweth and revealeth all of himself to him, John 5. 20. and hath committed all Judgment to him, visibly to be administred by him; and that with this professed Purpose and Intent, That all Men (yea, and Angels, and the whole Creation) might Honour the Son, as they Honour the Father, John 5. 20, 23. So then, the Son is he that is made this Lord under our one God the Father.

We have seen, which of the three Persons was fittest for this Lordship. Now,

2. As to what sort of the Creatures, (we are still, as was prefaced, in the supposition of all Things as yet to be decreed, and so considered by God in the foresight of his simple Intelligence) should be meetest to be taken up in this high Priviledg of one Lordship.

It so pleased our Great and Wise God, as to single forth the Nature of Man; Not in order only to the Work of Redemption of us Men, (that is, but one Branch of this his Work and Office) but in order to his being Lord of all Things, he took that Nature of Man to chuse; yea, it is said, That so it became him, (namely God) for whom are all Things, and by whom are all Things; so to do: in Heb. 2. 10, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18 Verses, For it became him, for whom are all Things, and by whom are all Things, in bringing many Sons unto Glory, to make the Captain of their Salvation perfect through Sufferings. Forasmuch then as the Children are Partakers of Flesh and Blood, he also himself likewise took part of the same: that through Death, he might destroy him that had the Power of Death, that is, the Devil; And deliver them, who through fear of Death, were all their life-time subject to Bondage. For verily he took not on him the Nature of Angels; but he took on him the Seed of Abraham. Wherefore in all things it behoved him to be made like unto his Brethren; that he might be a merciful and faithful High Priest, in things pertaining to God, to make reconciliation for the sins of the People: For in that he himself hath suffered, being tempted, he is able to succour them that are tempted. And although God did thus design and determine, in a more eminent respect to Man's Salvation, (which was the occasion of what he there speaks of this, That he took on him, Not the Nature of Angels, but the Seed of Abraham); yet it is withal said, That that great God, of whom, and for whom are all things, (which is the Preface to that more eminent part for which Christ was ordained, namely, Man's Redemption) had together in his Eye at once all Things, and all Ends and Designs of his what-ever, as that Phrase [for whom are all Things] imports; whiles he speaks of his ordaining him to be a Redeemer for Man; and accordingly it became him to extend to, or rather grasp in, a respect unto all Things in his great Deſign; which this my Text collated and brought unto that, confirms and diſcovers, in ſaying, One God, of whom are all Things; and one Lord Jeſus Chriſt, by whom are all Things. And over and above that [We] (thoſe Elected and Redeemed Men) ſhould be by [Him] alſo.

And how fit it was, That the Perſon of the Redeemer of us Men, ſhould himſelf be Man; this you all acknowledg. But I further add, If a Lord be to ſet up over all Things, that is, the whole Creation, What Sort or Species amongſt the whole Creation, ſo fit as the Nature of Man? True indeed, that Nature, for its Rank is a little lower than the Angels; but that mattered not in this Buſineſs; For this dignity of Lordſhip, depended not on the dignity of the Creature, that was to be aſſumed: But the Dignity, or the ſubſtantial Worthineſs and Grandeur of the Perſon, was to ariſe from the dignity of the Son of God who ſhould aſſume it. The Nature aſſumed, contributed nothing of Worth, but had that wholly communicated to it; only it brought a Fitneſs, and a Meetneſs with it into this Union, for this Office, above all other Natures whatſoever. And that was it, which God had a regard unto herein (beſides his good pleaſure) to chuſe that Nature above all other, as is plain by that in Heb. 2. And certainly, this comely Capacity doth every way fall fuller upon the Nature of Man, than upon any other: for who of Creatures ſo fit to be made Lord of all Things, by that God for whom are all Things; but he that is the Sum and Contract of all ſorts of Creatures that ever God ſhould make. Yea, and perhaps of all ſorts of Creatures poſſibly to be made, even from the Angelical Nature upwards; than which (they being meerly Spirits) nothing could be higher of Kind upwards, between God and them; and then downwards to the meaneſt Atom, or duſt of the Earth; or if you will, to the Chaos, out of which all was made, you cannot thruſt in a new Species or Kind, between any two of the whole Order and Deſcent of them: No new middle Link, between any two Links of that Chain of Creatures from top to bottom; and what we ſee are made, Man is the Abſtract and Epitome, and contains all in him. If therefore we could ſuppoſe that all the Creatures had had a Tongue, and ſo a Voice in the Election of their one Lord, they certainly would have pitch'd upon that Nature to be their Lord, in which they all had ſuch an Intereſt, and have caſt it, That all Things epitomized, ſhould be this conſtituted Lord: And God, who is wiſe in Working, and excellent in Counſel, conſidered this, and fitted them all with ſuch a Lord, as themſelves, if to chuſe, would (for this reſpect) have choſen.

This was ſo happy a Match, and ſo well thought of, as being that which perfectly ſuited this general Adminiſtration, as it was no ſooner thought of, but inſtantly it was concluded and agreed on by the Three in Heaven, and particularly conſented to by the Son himſelf; Who (as Peter's Phraſe is) was preordained before the Foundation of the World was laid. All Things elſe depending on this, God's firſt Reſolve about him. No ſooner was it agreed, but inſtantly God the Father, and the God-head in the other two, embraced and poſſeſſed him, (as the Expreſſion is, Prov. 8. 22. The Lord poſſeſſed me in the beginning of his Way, before his Works of old) poſſeſſed him as a rich and compleat Treaſury and Magazine of all his Counſels, laid up with him; and alſo a moſt able Miniſter and Agent, for the execution of all his Works. Chriſt, who is both the Wiſdom of God, and the Power of God executively; his Univerſal Inſtrument, by whom; a compleat Subject, in whom to manifeſt all his Glory: And verſ. 30. of the ſame Chapter, I was as one brought up with him, as 'tis tranſlated; it is a word ſo full of Significancies to our Purpoſe, as nothing could be more comprehenſive. The word [אמן] in the Hebrew ſignifies, any one that was Nutritius, the Nurſe, or Nouriſher; as unto whom God had committed all his Works, as Men do their Children unto a Nurſe; to cheriſh, bring up, and govern, to all his Ends he had deſigned them for: Yea, as the word alſo ſignifies, to be his Artiſt, Architect, or Maſter-builder of them in their firſt Creation; who took the Fabrick of the whole Univerſe upon him, to contrive and frame the rearing of it, with the moſt exquiſite Skill, to the moſt beautiful Faſhion that might be. For theſe things, and many more, doth that word ſignify: So as God preſently ſaid with himſelf, I have found a Servant that ſhall perform all my Pleaſure, a choſen chosen Shaft, a meetful universal Engine, Adequate to all my Purposes and Thoughts, a sufficient Ground-work and Foundation for any manifestation of himself he should desire to make. So as I need not to go out of him, or leave him out in any thing I have a mind to do. And all this, over and above, or besides, his being my Delight in his Person unto my self, whom alone and simply I delighted in for himself alone, which there follows, I was his Delight, &c. Thus was he appointed Lord of all, as fitted and suited, both to God and his whole Creation, and the Designs thereof; which to be meant of him, as God-Man, I have (I hope) elsewhere made evident. Chap. 9.

And this is no other than that which I afore observed, to be generally the Sense of the Jewish Cabalists, who speak on this wise of the Messias; That he is a Treasure, in which God, or Jehovah, hath hid all the Riches he means to communicate unto us. And further, to be the great Steward, and Governour under God Jehovah, Nourishing, Cherishing, and Dispensing all: With which this Scripture in the Proverbs agreeth.

CHAP. IX.

That all Things do depend upon Christ as One Lord, as God-Man, as well as upon the Father, as One God. God's Eternal Purposes concerning the whole Creation were made in Christ, as God-Man. By him God made the World. The more peculiar Dependance, which the Elect have on Christ, God-Man, as their Head. They hold of him the Tenure of a Spiritual Being, above what they had by Creation, and of all Supernatural Blessings and Benefits.

1 Cor. 8. 6.

——By whom are all things, and we by him.

WE have seen what the import of this high Title, One Lord, is; and that in this Place it denotes an Office put upon him as God-Man, and the fitness of that Person alone, for this Universal Office, or Dignity.

I am as yet but upon Generals, which lead on to many Particulars that are to follow, and at large to be discoursed, and beaten out: I intending, God assisting, to dilate upon all, or the most Particulars; wherein Christ, considered as God-Man, is found subservient unto God his Father, in and for the giving being to, and effecting of, all his Works ad extra; or which are out of Himself. But the present Purpose on this Text is to touch rather upon two Generals, according as Christ's Lordship is divided.

First,

BOOK III.

First, His Relation unto all Things what ever they be that are distinct from the We. All Things in Nature or Providential.

The second is, What concerns the Elect either in their Supernatural Being and new Constitution of them; in a Word, what they are, they are by Him, the whole of them, and what Belongs to them Supernaturally.

I come to the First. For we must remember that this Mediation-Work between God and Man, is but one part of his Lordship, although the greatest for moment and Glory: but it further contains a Commission from God, to be a Lord over all Things: as Peter speaks, Acts 10. 36. as that which is another part of it. And again, a Lord not only over all things to rule, and govern, and order them for God, and under God, when they shall be once made; but with a Commission from God, for the making of them, by virtue of that his Office which was given him, long afore the Creation it self; that although the Second Person did only personally then subsist, yet he bore, or sustained the Personage of God-Man, in the very Creation it self: All these you have full in the Text, in that Title One Lord. And then his Lorship is parted into two Administrations, and Commissions; one towards All Things, the other towards Us: And that towards All Things, extending to their very Beings; by whom are All Things: Even by whom all Things are, what they are, or any way shall ever be, from the first Foundation-Stone of Being, unto the full perfection of them.

And these being wrapt up here but in Generals; I shall therefore do no more, but for the confirmation of this first Head, give one General Proof, comprehensive of All Things: And which ascends far higher, than to prove Christ's being only instrumental to the execution of All; but further, that God's Eternal Purposes concerning all Things, were made in Christ as the Forge, or Machine, in which they were all formed. And this, if proved, we must needs acknowledg the dependance of all Things upon this One Lord, to be great indeed; when God's very Purposes of them shall be found to be in Him. And therefore still, that Himself was purposed first; and this Dependance is Superior, and Metaphysical (as I may so speak) unto his being the Executor, or Administrator of them all; for his Purposes are the Supream Cause, and Original of all Things. And therefore in that sole Instance, I shall over and above make good, that all Things are through him indeed.

I shall now in this general Part of my Discourse, alledg but one Scripture for this Head: And add, for the proof of the Creation of all Things to have been through him, a neighbouring Text thereunto, bordering upon it: Which will be sufficient in this Metaphysical Part to have performed, as touching this Head.

1. God's Eternal Purposes concerning all Things, were made in Christ, as God-Man.

God's Eternal Purposes concerning the Creatures, or his Works that are out of, or without Himself, are immanent Acts of God's, remaining in Himself. And yet God so honoured this our One Lord, as not to purpose any Thing which was to be out of Himself, ad extra, without the contemplation of his being God-Man, on whom (as such) all Things should depend. In Ephes. 1. 9. it is expressly said, Which he purposed in himself: involving therein his very Purposes of working all Things whatsoever, as well as his Purposes of Grace to his Elect; as appeareth by comparing vers. 11. In whom also we have obtained an Inheritance, being predestinated according to the Purpose of him who worketh all Things after the Counsel of his own Will. And in like manner, Chap. 3. 11. of the same Epistle, it is said, According to the Eternal Purpose which he had [made] (so in the Original) in Jesus Christ our Lord: Which Purposes there, as to the Object Matter of them, do in like manner involve, and take in all the various goings forth of God, of what kind kind soever, even the whole System of God's Works, wherein and whereby the manifold Wisdom of God had, before-hand, contrived to manifest God by; for that is the Matter immediately afore treated of, in the Verse fore-going, vers. 10. To the intent that now, unto the Principalities and Powers in Heavenly Places, might be known by the Church, the manifold Wisdom of God. And unto this it is, that those words cited out of vers. 11. do relate; that is, the whole Oeconomy and Dispensation of God in the Works of Creation, Providence, Government of this World, and of his Church hitherto under the Old Testament; being now set together, with the Work of Redemption performed by Jesus Christ, and under the Times of the Gospel begun to be discovered; and thereby being all viewed, in one prospect, by the Angels, who before had but by peace-meal been the curious Observers of all; and each all along, observing, and laying still, each in their Hearts, as they had passed, and been acted; but then it came to pass, by the discovery of the Gospel, that the infinite, various, or manifold Wisdom of God in the whole, broke forth in the Person of Christ, to their admiration and astonishment, that all had been purposed in him, even all these Purposes what-ever, of one as well as of the other. It is there said, That they were made in Jesus Christ, as he is our Lord, vers. 10, 11. To the intent that now unto the Principalities and Powers in Heavenly Places, might be known by the Church, the manifold Wisdom of God; according to the Eternal Purpose which he purposed in Christ Jesus our Lord. So as this was it which became the Matter of the wonderment to them, to see and behold how both theirs, and our Lord Christ, was made the Centre of them all; and that the Works, yea, the Purposes of them in God's Heart, about Creation, Providence, and all sorts of works, wherein the manifold Wisdom of God had so appeared; all Dispensations to the Jews, (the Church of Old) and now the Calling of the New Church, the Gentiles, were founded all in this one God-Man Jesus Christ.

Chap. 9.

See Zanchy & Grotius in loc.

For the concluding of this, there are three Things particularly and eminently observable to my purpose, out of those words, and their coherence.

The first; That all those several sorts of Purposes, are termed but one single Purpose; for so in the Original it is in the singular Number, all being but one Act in God, and all made in one and the same Jesus Christ; and as one single Purpose; though comprehending a whole Systeme and Lump of Purposes.

2. The Phrase [made] is used concerning this one big Purpose; [Made] (which is the Phrase) in Jesus Christ.

Observe, I say, concerning it, that whereas in the former Chapter, vers. 9. you read, that God purposed all in himself; yet here, that he made the same purpose in Christ, even as when it should, and did come to the execution; it is said, That all things are by and through this one Lord, as well as of one God: As they are coupled jointly in execution, so in Purposes: Only as the Apostle, in another Case, says of him, The purpose of making and ordaining Christ himself, in whom all else are, must necessarily be excepted. And this notes out, that they were made in him, as he was made Lord and Christ; as Peter, Acts 2. 36. Therefore let all the House of Israel know assuredly, that God hath made that same Jesus whom ye have crucified, both Lord and Christ. They were verified all in Christ, as the French phrase is, of the Sanction to their Laws: So all God's Purposes taken up in God's own Heart and Bosom, are said to be made in Christ, they had their ratification in Christ, God brought them to a firm subsistence and ultimate resolvedness, in and through his Christ as a Lord. For, seeing all things purposed, were to be brought into Existence by him; therefore the Honour God gave him in his very Decrees, was, that the very Purposes of them, are said to be made in him; without whom, they would, as to the effect and issue of them, have been in vain: He being present, and by, and undertaking to effect them all; therefore they are from the very first purposed in him. So as all God's Eternal Purposes depended on this Lord.

The third Thing I observe is, That to shew this Universal Dependence of all God's Purposes on his one Christ, he answerably mentions all his Titles.

1. Of

BOOK III.

1. Of Saviour, in that his Name of [Jeſus]. 2. Of [Chriſt]. 3. Of [Lord].

Which three do comprehend a Reſpect and Foundation unto all his Purpoſes, of what ſort ſoever. The words afore mention all three; In Jeſus Chriſt our Lord, which iſſues fully to the Point in Hand, and falls in with the words here to the Corinthians, my Text.

Thus of God's Purpoſes, which were the Matrix, the Womb of all Things.

II. Chriſt is the Medium of God's Creation, &c.

But more particularly, let me here add one Inſtance, which yet may ſerve for all other; and I add it here, becauſe it neighboureth ſo near this form, as I could not well leave it out here: And it concerns the Execution of all Things begun by the ſame Chriſt, as the former did, the purpoſes of all Things in Jeſus Chriſt. And ſo we have Proof, and Inſtance in both Kinds, both in God's Purpoſes, and in the execution of them out of the ſame Chapter.

When God ſhould after (as he did) come to effect or put in execution all, or any of theſe the purpoſes of his Heart, ſtill this Lord preſents himſelf as fit and able to ſubſerve him in the execution thereof, as an Univerſal Agent or Inſtrument; In the virtue of whom he effected them all, and brought them forth to act.

For Inſtance;

The firſt Purpoſe of God that was put into execution, and which was indeed the Ground-work, the Materia Subſtrata, or Subject Matter of all other Works that were to follow, in execution, was that of Creation; the putting of all Things into Being, (as the ultimate or bottom-Subject, the Matter which his Decrees were to have to work upon); of this it is expreſly ſaid, in Epheſ. 3. 9. and indeed is added by the Apoſtle, as the eminent Inſtance of all the reſt; Who created all Things by Jeſus Chriſt, not one thing excepted, but was created by him.

And again, If when God, ſetting his Hand to create, would make more Worlds than one, (as he hath made two, viz. Heaven and Earth) in the virtual Influence of this Lord, God-Man, it was, that theſe Worlds were made; Heb. 1. 2. Whom he hath appointed Heir of all Things; by whom alſo he made the Worlds. And herein, likewiſe again, this Lord is the Maker of all, and every thing in each and both theſe Worlds; ſo, Col. 1. 16. Viſible or Inviſible, whether Things in Earth or in Heaven. All which is to be underſtood of him as God-Man. But of theſe Things afterwards, upon that Col. 1. 16, &c. more particularly.

III. The Church of the Elect have a more ſpecial dependance upon one Lord Chriſt, as God-Man, 1 Cor. 8. 6. And we by him.

I ſhall lay down only ſome Generals, that ſhew the Tenure that the Church of the Elect hold on the one Lord Chriſt, as God-Man.

Two Things are imported in theſe words, And we by him.

1. A Super-creation Being, and Exiſtence given us in Him.
2. Super-creation Bleſſings, and Benefits by Him, which appertain to that Being in Him. Which Bleſſings are of two ſorts.

1. Of Redemption, as Sinners, through this one Lord; as he is Jeſus, that we hold of his Merits.

2. Of Bleſſings abſtractly conſidered, from thoſe of Redemption; that we hold of him as he is Chriſt the Lord; through our Relation to, and Union with his Perſon.

We

We have had a general view presented to us, how all things, that is, the whole Creation do, and did depend upon our Lord Christ, even in God's very purposing of them. Chap. 9.

It is therefore meet I should next speak the like generally to this other Part, the Tenure that the Saints, the Elect of God have, and do hold of Christ: To the end, that this part of this Structure, may correspond with that which is foregone; which had but in general treated the dependance that all things have upon him.

And it is this latter is infinitely the more eminent of the two; and yet both necessary to shew the Compleatness of Christ, as God-Man; as in his Person, so in his subserviency to God, in all his Works whatsoever.

——And We by Him.

1. The We here, are God's Church of Man-kind, selected out of all Things which he created, and here separated from them, as a Company standing out apart by themselves, and who were separated and appointed by his Father to be a Body unto him as an Head. Now if we consider them in their first Creation-state, so they are to be counted among the all Things; and as such efficiently depending on him as one Lord; the Creator, &c. of them: But when here he adds, and We by Him; this imports their being a Chosen Generation, a peculiar People to God, the Chosen of God out of all Things else: And his being a peculiar special Founder unto them of a Supercreation-State, and a dependancy upon him for the whole of it, as he is Jesus Christ the Lord; which they have from him, de novo, and by a newer kind of Title, than that of Creation. A State, and all Things belonging to it, wholly supernatural unto that which was by Creation.

And here again, like as was said in way of Premise, to that former first Head, of the dependancy of all Things upon Christ; Our Thoughts and Contemplations must mount up again to that supream Age, or highest Point of Eternity: The top of that vast Sphere and Circle that comprehended us, and all Things; considered as yet decreeable by God, and but in decreeing: And considered, that there lay afore our Great God in his Divine Understanding, a Platform of far higher, and momentous Designs than those, and beyond those of the first Creation and Providence towards all Things, together with Man, after his Kind, in common with them; namely, of calling in, and bringing a certain first Fruits, (as the Apostle James's word is, James 1. 18. Of his own Will begat he us, with the Word of Truth, that we should be a kind of First-Fruits of his Creatures); of that his intended first Creation, to consecrate them to himself, through a Supercreation-Union, and Communion with himself: A state which was to be utterly superlative in all the Things belonging to it, comparatively unto that State of, and by their first Creation; and all, and every thing whatsoever that appertains thereto: A State, in the ultimate End and Perfection of it, such as in Heaven, after the Work of Redemption is finish'd, the Saints and Angels shall enjoy to all Eternity: And in bringing us to which, he carries us through variety of Means preparatory, or conducing thereunto; and all, and each of them supernatural also. He, in his Infinite Grace and Wisdom, found his only begotten Son, Christ, God-Man, to be the Person: Yea, and in his Person as such, every way accomplished, adapted, and furnished, to accomplish this Design so fully and compleatly, as that whatever be designed by such a gracious Decree, proceeding out of Soveraignty, and such a Love that should so far transcend that Love, which by Creation he bore to us; (a pure Supercreation-Grace I stile it) whatever (I say) should enter into the Thoughts of such an exceeding Riches of Grace, to bestow on them he would so love; This great Lord, his Christ, was adequately fitted, and enabled to be the Founder of. This God-Man was a Person after God's own Heart, to the very utmost extent of his gracious Purposes, and Counsels; and in his Person empowred to accomplish, at the first instant of his undertaking it, of whatever God could think of for them, or had a Mind to give them.

BOOK III. Now all, and the whole of this Supercreation-State we have by Him, are reducible unto two principal Heads.

First, What we are, or rather, That we are, or are endowed with a new Supercreation-Being.

Secondly, The Endowments which that Being is inveſted withal, or the Supercreation-Benefits that appertain, and belong to it.

And both theſe, and all of theſe, we are by Him, he is the Foundation of All we are, or have.

1. He is the Founder of a new Supercreation-Being, which is the ſubject of all Benefits beſtowed: As God's giving Adam a Natural Being after his Image, that was the ſubject, and recipient of all the Bleſſings he enjoyed; and a Thing diſtinctly to be conſidered of.

We commonly ſay when a Subject hath been raiſed up unto a great Eſtate, Honours, Offices, whereunto he hath a legal Right, given him by his Prince, in whoſe Power it alone was to inveſt him therewith, we uſe in like manner of Speech unto this here, to expreſs it; That what he is, he is by him: And therefore call him, His Creature. Which is but Tranſlatitious; when yet he had not his very Being from his Prince, but from his Parents it was he came to have that Exiſtence, which is the Subject, or the Perſon, unto whom all theſe Priviledges do belong. But this our Chriſt, is not only the Founder of our Right to all thoſe Supernatural, Supercreation-Benefits; but God hath alſo founded for us in him, a Supercreation-Being, and Exiſtence; (and not only that actual Exiſtence we have from him) when we are made new Creatures: A Workmanſhip created in Chriſt Jeſus, more truly than the Child may be ſaid to be formed, and faſhion'd in the Mother; and the Foundation of his Being, lay in her Womb: And it is this new Creature, ſuperinduced o're the Natural Perſon, which is the Subjectum of the firſt Creation: which in Scripture is termed the Man. Col. 3. 10. Put on the new Man, after the Image of him that created him: namely Chriſt, the Creator of it; That's the Man, and the Him in the Apoſtle's Account. And obſerve the Language the Apoſtle uſeth, when he ſpeaks of himſelf, 2 Cor. 12. I knew a Man in Chriſt, &c. verſ. 2. Of ſuch a Man I will Glory, but of my ſelf I will not Glory, verſ. 5. And yet it was himſelf he ſpake of; but he reckoned not himſelf by the Creation-Roll, but what he was in the King's Book; no nor of the new Creature neither would he Glory, but as it was in Chriſt: and ſo it had a Being. But further, we had a Supercreation-Exiſtence given us in Chriſt, afore the World was; which was the Foundation of the new Creature, and which makes us thus capable of all thoſe Benefits, which were then alſo, and therewith given. And Supercreation-Benefits, muſt have a Supercreation-Being, or State of Being given them, ſuperior to our firſt Creation-Being, and the Benefits thereof; which in God's Decrees we were appointed unto, as well as naturally to exiſt: by virtue of which we come to have a Title unto thoſe Bleſſings. For if our firſt Creation-Members were all written in God's Book of his Purpoſes, ſo all the Members, which are the various Graces, the new Man or Creature conſiſts of, they were all written in God's everlaſting Purpoſes: Yea, and all the Bleſſings that belong to this new Creature, are altogether therewith given us in Chriſt; as is expreſs in 2 Tim. 1. 9. Who hath ſaved us, and called us with an holy Calling; not according to our Works, but according to his own Purpoſe and Grace, which was given us in Chriſt Jeſus before the World begun. The Work in God's calling us, is the forming the new Creature in our Hearts; ſtiled therefore there, an Holy Calling, as working Holineſs: And this Foundation-Bleſſing is ſaid to have been given us in Chriſt, according to his Purpoſe of Grace in Chriſt, that was afore the World began; and they could not be ſaid to have been given us in Chriſt, unleſs we were conſidered ſome way or other in Chriſt then. God did not take up naked Purpoſes of Grace, and Good-Will to us, with a firm Intent and Reſolution to beſtow thoſe Bleſſings on us: Though his Purpoſes are as Mountains of Braſs, as the Prophet ſpeaks, Zech. 6. 1. But he was pleaſed to fix, and ratify them in his Chriſt; and in like manner [Us], and our Perſons he founded then in Chriſt, and considered in Christ. God had as then his Christ present with him, and by him; and reckoned of us as Members of him, and elected us as such. And God thought not his bare Purpose of Election of our Persons, enough to satisfy Christ, who at that present undertook for us; nor to comfort us, when we should come actually to exist in this World, and to lay hold of his Grace; nor was he contented, if I may so speak, with Christ's bare Concurrence, as Second Person, in choosing us as well as the Father himself did; but further to strengthen his own Heart in those his Purposes towards us: as in the 8*th* of Proverbs it is said, our Christ was with him, strengthening, and supporting his intended Creation to him: He thereby engaged himself unto Christ, then present, for us: Yea, and constituted, and set up Christ, as a Representative of us, and common Person for us; and Christ accepted us, took us in to Himself, and owned us as his; and pieces of himself. And in these respects the Elect had a Being afore God; such as was far more than what was simply given them in God's Decrees, or Purposes of Grace, or Good-Will, or bare Choice on God's part; but his Choise did find a Foundation of their Existing: For this his Christ was there present with him, actually existent, and at his Request to bear the Person of God-Man; and therein to estate us all, at the instant of his Choice, as far as he should name them to him, to be his Body, Spouse, Members; and he from that instant also to bear, and represent their Persons afore his Father: and so to give them a representative Being in himself, which other Crertures then had not, but were left singly to their own Fortunes, Stations. And in these respects it is that Christ as God-Man is stiled the Everlasting Father, Isa. 8. Father of us; namely from Everlasting: bearing us then in his Heart, as a Mother doth her Children in her Womb. So as by means hereof it came to pass, that the Elect were not as Branches hanging in the Sun-beams of God's single Purpose of Grace only, to produce, and bring them forth into actual Existence by its single Influence; but such as have withal a Soil, a Root they were planted in, the Person of Christ: He and we being σύμφυτοι, as Twin-Plants, planted together in God's Heart from the first. Hence that high Foundation of Election, which is called the Election of Grace, is said to be in Christ: He hath chosen us in Christ afore the World began. And though God chose the Persons, yet compleated he his Choice of them in Christ, and gave us a Being in Him, as in an Head, and then gave them this Being in Christ; but chose them in Christ, from the first cast of his Thoughts to choose them. God never considered us as single Persons out of Christ, (though in this respect that he determinately, and distinctly foreknew, and pitch'd upon each of our Persons;) but chose us one in and with his Son, as an Head, or common Person, taking our Persons, and undertaking for them; He never abstractedly considered, or viewed us apart from, or without Christ, but as one in Him, and with Him; constituted and made one Head and Body at once: And this afore-hand gave them a Subsistence of another kind, than what by Creation they were to receive. Insomuch, as their State in Him is termed a Being, a new Being, and Existence; as the Subject upon which Being first constituted, the Benefits do fall. Of Him ye are in Jesus Christ, says the Apostle, 1 Cor. 1. 30. Lay that as our Foundation of Christ his being made Wisdom, Righteousness, Sanctification, and Redemption to us; which are the Benefits that belong to that Being: In him ye are, or have a Being, says the Apostle. And before God Christ had it, from that time wherein we were given to God by him. And we began so far to be, as we were considered in Him, and that was at our Everlasting Election; and he to be sure had an actual Being, and bore an actual representation of us: And this laid a Corner-stone of a higher Being supernatural, even from Eternity, than what our first Creation came unto.

This Supercreation-Being having been thus setled, I come to the second Head proposed, viz.

II. A General Consideration of the Benefits wholly Supercreational.

These Supercreation-Blessings we hold of Christ, are of two sorts, and distinct.

1. Such as are Supernatural, even in respect of our first-Creation Estate, unto which for that cause I give the stile of Supercreation-Benefits; which do far exceed in value the first stock of Creation-Blessings: Such as that of Adoption of Sons, Heirs of Glory; an unchangeable Love of God to us, and of an immutability of our Love, and of perfect Holiness in us unto God again.

2. The second sort of Benefits are those that are Supernatural in respect unto our sinful, corrupt, miserable Estate we are fallen into, and delivered out of: Such as are Pardon of Sin, Justification, and a Restauration of that Original Holiness we lost, and had once in Adam; together with that high superinduction of the Image of Christ in his dying, and rising; which involves in it the Original Holiness we had once in Adam, conformable to the Holy Law. These I call purely Redemption-Blessings, and may wholly be called Supernatural, as aforesaid.

And these two sorts of Benefits, as they are apparently distinct in themselves; so answerably they have a distinct Foundation in Christ. For

The first sort have their Foundation in his very Person, through a given Relation of us to him, and him to us; and these are abstractly considered from Redemption, or the Benefits belonging thereunto, and purchased thereby: So as God giving us unto him, and he accepting us for his Body, and to be one with us for ever; even by virtue of this Relation there is a wonderful Sphere, and round of Blessings, which have a Foundation thereby, and might have had, if God had so pleased, if Men should never have fallen: And although Man falling, God decreed that other sort of Redemption-Mercies; yet so, as these first sort were originally decreed, as being more glorious; without the consideration of the Fall. And though (as I acknowledg) they were upon Man's Fall, purchased all anew, upon the account of Redemption; yet the Interest of his Person, and our very Relation to his Person, (as aforesaid) was in the Original Decree of God about us, and continues to be the main Foundation, with a distinct consideration from those of Redemption, of our right unto those Blessings, although also purchased by Redemption, so as for us to have a double Title to them.

The second sort of Benefits are wholly by virtue of Redemption, and flow from the Merits, and Influence of the Acts thereof; and wholly so arise from an acquired Interest of his Obedience, Death, Resurrection, &c. And again, although the Merit that purchased these Benefits, do wholly arise from the Worth and Dignity of his Person; as namely his Death, and Blood, that it was the Blood of God; and the Obedience of him that was offered up by the Eternal Spirit, the Godhead in Him, and is therefore called the Righteousness of God; yet these Benefits are not founded, and conveyed meerly from our Relation to his Person, abstractedly considered from his Redemption; as if that Relation to, and Union with his Person, could have produced, or procured these Redemption-Blessings, as I stile them, without a Superadditional Merit acquired, over and above, and beside that of the Interest of his Person.

CHAP.

CHAP. X.

How all Things depend on Christ, God-Man; and what Influence he hath into them; further proved and illustrated, by that Text in Col. 1. 16. Some Cautions premised for the understanding it aright. What is meant by those Expressions, In Him and by Him are all Things.

Col. 1. 16.

For by him were all Things created that are in Heaven, and that are in Earth. visible and invisible, whether they be Thrones, or Dominions, or Principalities, or Powers: All Things were created by him, and for him.

NOW is to succeed that other Title of Glories, due to our Lord Christ, considered as God-Man, namely, in his Relation unto the Works and Counsels of God, and the influence he hath into them, the dependance they all have, either actually or virtually, upon that personal Union of the Son of God with our Nature; and this is the second Thing in order in the Text, or a second Crown of Glory, which our Apostle here setteth upon our Lord's Head, (who is yet moreover, above, and besides all this) an Head unto his Church, &c. as vers. 18.

That these Things here are spoken of him as God-Man, and not as Second Person only, I shewed in the first Chapter of this Book, in the latter part of it, wherein I opened and sorted the Particulars of this Text, into their due method.

The only difficulty that here occurs, (e're we proceed any further) is, That seeing the Son of God did not assume that Man Jesus into one Person with himself, until 4000 Years after the Creation; how can the Work of the Creation be attributed to him, considered as God-Man, that by him all Things were created? And so, why should it not still rest upon this Account, that by him, simply considered as God's Son, and Second Person, all Things were made.

Towards the clearing of this, I cast in these ensuing Particulars.

I. That there is a double Influence which Causes have into Effects; one Virtual, the other Actual. Not to instance in other Causes, (if any such like to this might be found); it will be enough to give a parallel-Instance in Christ himself, whose Actions performed by him, when come in the Flesh, had yet a virtual influence into many Things that were done long before, either the Actual Existence of him in the Flesh, or the performance of those Actions; yea, the virtue whereof reach'd to the beginning of the World: Thus by virtue of his death, Adam, and Eve, and Abraham, and all the Fathers were saved. Not to prove this by Induction, but by the Lump; Peter having spoken of all the Fathers under the Old Testament, Acts 15. in the last words of vers. 10. immediately diately ſubjoins and pronounceth this as common to the Jews, and themſelves now in the Times of the New Teſtament; We believe, that through the Grace of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, we ſhall be ſaved even as they, verſ. 11. that is, they and we both alike are ſaved, by the Grace of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt. Yea, and further, this their Salvation is attributed to his Death; which though once, as a Sacrifice, offered up in the End of the World, Heb. 9. 26. yet was offered up for Sins paſt; Rom. 3. 25. Whom God hath ſet forth to be a Propitiation, through Faith in his Blood, to declare his Righteouſneſs for the Remiſſion of Sins that are paſt, through the forbearance of God. And that under the Old Teſtament, ſaith, Heb. 9. 15. And for this cauſe he is the Mediator of the New Teſtament, that by means of Death, for the redemption of the Tranſgreſſions that were under the firſt Teſtament, they which are called might receive the Promiſe of the Eternal Inheritance.

And as there is this double Influence, ſo anſwerably, a double Exiſtence may be conceived of him.

A Virtual Exiſtence, which is affirmed of him in that Speech, when he is ſaid to have been the ſame Chriſt Yeſterday as well as to Day, to all Believers; Heb. 13. 8. Jeſus Chriſt, the ſame Yeſterday, to Day, and for ever. Yea, and his Death, in reſpect of the virtue of it, hath exiſted from the beginning of the World; as that Speech, Rev. 15. 8. evidently imports, The Lamb ſlain from the beginning of the World.

Let us firſt ſee what the Text will ſpeak in favour of this Interpretation; yea, let us but compare Phraſe with Phraſe, as things are ſpoken of him in this Text, he is ſaid to be the Firſt-Born from the Dead; and 1 Cor. 15. 20. The Firſt-Fruits of them that ſlept; in ſo much as, verſ. 23. of that Chapter, the priority of Order in riſing again, is given to Chriſt, But every Man in his own order, Chriſt the Firſt-Fruits, afterwards they that are Chriſt's. But is it ſo, that Chriſt, in reſpect of an actual Priority, was the firſt of all the Elect that riſe again; ſo, as none of them afore him, though you know Lazarus, and divers others at his Death, roſe out of their Graves? and yet, ſtill he is the Firſt-Born, the Eldeſt Son, whom that Womb of the Earth gave up, the Firſt Fruits that Soil brought forth, which therefore muſt neceſſarily be underſtood of a Virtual Exiſtence and Priority; and ſo, as becauſe by virtue of him, all others do and have riſen again. Then you may, by theſe and the like Parallels, eaſily conceive how this Aſſertion is to be underſtood, that all Things were created by him, as God-Man, and as that one Lord, or Chriſt; as alſo, that there is not a neceſſity to aſcribe all ſuch Things ſpoken of him, or to put the account of his being Second Perſon alone, as abſtracted from the conſideration of his being Lord, and Chriſt, becauſe ſaid to be done by him afore the Humane Nature exiſted.

And ſo the plain ſenſe of this Aſſertion is this, That the Son of God, perſonally and actually exiſting as the Son of God, with God, afore the World or any Creature was made; he undertaking, and covenanting with God, to become a Man, (yea, that Man which he hath now taken up into one Perſon with himſelf) as well for this End, as for other Ends more glorious, God did in the virtue and fore-knowledg thereof, and in the aſſurance of that Covenant of his, proceed unto the creating all Things which he hath made; and without the intuition, or having this in his Eye, he would not have made any Thing which he hath made.

II. The ſecond Particular is, the adding ſome Cautions touching the underſtanding of this Aſſertion.

1. It is not to be underſtood, as if I meant, that God had not ſufficient Power, or abſolute Sovereignty, to have created, unleſs the Son of God had become Man, God was God, bleſſed for ever, and all-ſufficient in himſelf, without this Deſign about Chriſt: ſo as it adds no new Power to him, which he had not in himſelf afore. Thus take that Power which is in God to ſanctify us now, when fallen into Sin, and which is in the Holy Ghoſt to effect it in us, is one and the ſame eſſential Power, which is in God as God, out of which he made Man at firſt, and created him in Holineſs, and no other; and Chriſt's Redemption, Redemption, or dying for us, adds no new degree of essential Power to God, or the Holy Ghost, whereby to enable him to sanctify us, as if else he wanted Power to do it. No; And yet we say, as to the exetring or putting forth that Power, that it depends morally on Christ's having died, as without which it would not have been put forth; as also for that his Death purchased the Power, and also the Mercy that was in God, to have it demonstrated, in raising up Men dead in Sins and Trespasses; and so we say it is to be attributed to his Death and Resurrection virtually, which also the Scripture affirms, Phil. 3. 10. That I may know him, and the Power of his Resurrection, and the Fellowship of his Sufferings, being made conformable unto his Death.

2. As to the Point in hand: I assert not neither, so high and so great a dependance of this Creating-Power upon the Personal Union, as is of sanctifying us upon Christ's Redemption, for by his Death he purchased that Power. But so it is not here, as if that his undertaking to assume Man's Nature, had purchased this putting forth God's Power to create; but the dependance thereon refers to God's Will: and so is ex Hypothesi, that he would otherwise never have gone about to create, he would never have been pleased with any Creature, or all Creatures, he could have made without this; and so in him, and from him, as so considered it was, that God condescended thereunto, as the Reasons of this Point annexed to the proof of it, will give the account of.

3. When this is attributed to Christ, as God-Man, it is not exclusively to be understood, as if as Second Person, he did not concur to create as well as the Father, and the Holy Ghost, because he virtually concurred as God-Man. No; for look as in Redemption, the Son, as Second Person, concurs as well as the Father and the Spirit, as it is one Act in common of the three Persons, yet so as over and above Christ, as God-Man in one Person, doth in especial effect it: So here in Creation, he hath, over and above his common Concurrence as Second Person, in this, and all Works else, a special Honour attributed to him, as God-Man, from his virtual Hand in it.

III. It will much conduce to the right stating of this Point, as I assert it, to take notice of the Aberrations from, and yet dark Gropings after this Truth.

1. Arrius, he would have Christ to have been a great Creature in the Form of God, and as a God by Office, and like unto him in all Things, existing afore the World was, as the Medium or Means by whom God made all Things, and that without the intervention of such an Immense and Divine Creature, he would not immediately himself have created any thing. But then Arrius withal denied that this Christ was also God essentially, and of the Substance of his Father, and so asserted him to be but a meer Creature. See Rivet in Gen.

2. Others of late have in like manner thus endeavoured to set out the Person of Christ to us; that he was put forth by God out of himself a meer Creature, and under the Covenant of Works; yet so, as in his Person he was the Spirit, the seminal or prolifique Virtue of all the Creatures that could, or should be made, being the whole Mass of what God had in him to afford to make Creatures out of, distinct from himself; as Man hath to afford, what, if let out of himself, is the Foundation or Matter of a Son, or Children from him: and that this great Son of his, thus put forth, finding himself distinct from God now put forth, and so as a meer Creature mutable, as under the Covenant of Works, as all are by the Law of Creation, and that so he would die and perish, if he remained alone and thus out of God; he therefore, by the supernatural Guidance, and impulse of God, willingly died to that Creatureship, and the State and Condition thereof, and giving that up to an Oneness with God in Spirit, he rose and ascended up to a Being in the Form of God, and one with God in Spirit; and in this respect was termed, the Lamb slain from the beginning of the World; and then did create, as God, and as being in the Form of God, and put forth Angels, and this World, and all Things out of himself, and thereby is become the Head of the First Creation: and by his appearing in Flesh, in that that Man at Jeruſalem, did, by the like Example acted by him, teach us Men to die unto our being Creatures, which hath been commonly termed by them, deſtroying of Fleſh, &c. and then to riſe up in Spirit unto that Being in the form of God, and one in Spirit with God, even as Chriſt himſelf afore the World had done, and thereby preſerved himſelf from Ruin: and this is the Covenant of Grace, ſay they; thus Chriſt became the Head of the New Creation, as he was Author of the firſt.

3. That great and excellently Learned Man, Sir Francis Bacon, in a confeſſion of Faith, which I had in Manuſcript, under his Hand, about forty ſix Years ago, and ſince printed 1641, but without his Name, his words are theſe.

'I believe that God is ſo Holy, Pure, and Jealous, as it is impoſſible for him 'to be pleaſed in any Creature, though the Work of his own Hands; ſo that 'neither Angel, nor Man, could ſtand, or can ſtand one moment in his Eyes, 'without the beholding of the ſame in the Face of a Mediator: and therefore 'before him, with whom all Things are preſent, the Lamb of God was ſlain 'afore all the World; without which Eternal Purpoſe of his, it was impoſſible 'for him to have deſcended to any Work of Creation, but he ſhould have en-'joyed the bleſſed and individual Society of three Perſons, in the God-head only 'for ever. But that out of his Eternal and Infinite Goodneſs, and Love, pur-'poſing to become a Creature, and communicate with his Creatures, He or-'dained, in his Eternal Counſel, that one Perſon of the God-head, ſhould be 'united to one Nature, and to one particular of his Creatures, that ſo in the 'Perſon of the Mediator, the true Ladder might be fixed, whereby God might 'deſcend to his Creatures, and his Creatures aſcend unto him.

And in his fifth Paragraph it follows;

'That by virtue of this his Eternal Counſel, touching a Mediator, he de-'ſcended, at his own good pleaſure, and according to the Times and Seaſons to 'himſelf known, to become a Creature; who by his Eternal Word created all 'Things, and by his Eternal Spirit doth comfort and preſerve them.

There are two Things in his ſtating this, which I do not readily aſſent unto.

1. That Chriſt was conſidered by God as the Lamb ſlain, and from the foreſight of his Death; and the Second Perſon undertaking to become the Lamb ſlain, it was, that God deſigned to create, even as through and for his Death, as afore conſidered, he ordained to redeem Man, conſidered then as fallen: But this needed not as to Creation, there being no ſuppoſition of Guilt in that which was nothing, which all Things afore their Creation were; and beſides, though his taking our Nature, was deſigned and proved to our Redemption from Sin, yet ſufficient alone to move him ſimply to make and create meer Creatures, was that other Reaſon which he gives, that one Perſon of the God-head ſhould be united to one of his own Creatures; in whoſe Perſon, ſo united, God's Holineſs and Purity would fully be pleaſed to deſcend to create other fellow Creatures for him and his Glory. Let Chriſt's Blood then ſtand to reconcile Sinners, or thoſe that were in danger to ſin; and let his bare undertaking to be united to a Creature, be a ſufficient relief againſt the meanneſs of meer Creatures, and by their Defects to ſet forth his Glory. The Creature alone conſidered, had not been worth the making, without this Deſign; Chriſt's Perſon alone was an abundantly well-pleaſing Medium, or Mediator of Union to the Elect, and of ſtability unto the frailty and unworthineſs in Creatures.

2. The ſecond thing (which may ſtumble ſome) in this Aſſertion is, that he ſays, It was impoſſible for God, without this Counſel or Decree (namely, of Chriſt's Incarnation) to have deſcended to any Work of Creation, &c. Which Expreſſion, unleſs underſtood of an Impoſſibility, ex Hypotheſi, by way of Suppoſition, (that God would not have been pleaſed with any, or all Works his Power could make, unleſs this Perſonal Union of ſome Creature with God, had been added and undertaken) would have a Danger in it, and a great Abſurdity. Only as of a Wiſe Man it is ſaid, He cannot do that which his Wiſdom and Will, guided by Counsel, thinks not meet for him to do; so the same may be affirmed of God; which also seems, by the tenure of his Speech, to have been his Scope. Chap. 10.

But the State I would put this Assertion into, in distinction from this, and in perfect opposition to those fore-mentioned Errors of others, is,

That indeed, according to the Scriptures, and the very Foundations of our Religion, God needed not any meer Creature to help him to create, but it is his own immediate Power that doth it, as the Book of Job and Genesis tells us: Therefore (to obviate that Objection) our Christ is truly and by Nature very God, of the same substance with his Father, begotten by him, and equal to him; and that afore the World was; as also at the Creation, he existed as God, with God his Father, afore any Creature was, or any way assumed by him.

His subserviency to God, in the Creation, is set forth in this Colos. 1. 16. in three Particles.

I. Ἐν αὐτῷ, * In him.
II. Δι' αὐτοῦ, By him.
III. Εἰς αὐτὸν, For him.

* So in the Original; Ὅτι ἐν αὐτῷ ἐκτίσθη τὰ πάντα τὰ ἐν τοῖς οὐρανοῖς καὶ τὰ ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς, τὰ ὁρατὰ καὶ τὰ ἀόρατα εἴτε θρόνοι, εἴτε κυριότητες, εἴτε ἀρχαὶ, εἴτε ἐξουσίαι· τὰ πάντα δι' αὐτοῦ καὶ εἰς αὐτὸν ἔκτισται Col. 1. 16.

I. In him, As the Exemplary Cause; so some Schoolmen of old interpreted it: for it is not in him all the Creatures can be said to be as in a Head, for that is the peculiar and proper Priviledg of Elect Men and Angels that are Homogeneal to him: He is a Lord to every Creature, but not an Head, therefore the exemplary cause is intended. And this was one Reason, among many others, why God in his Decree, about what Creature the Second Person should assume, pitch'd upon Man's Nature, rather than that of Angels, because Man's Nature is the compendium of all, and so fitted to be (as in Christ it was) exalted the Exemplar, the πρωτότυπον, the Pattern of the whole Creation. The Poets feigned a piece out of every Creature to have been taken, to make up Man, the perfection of them all, in his Reasonable Soul, which is a Spirit that can subsist of it self; he agrees with Angels, in his Body, and the Lives thereof, Sensitive and Vegetative, with Beasts and Plants, &c. Now therefore God set up Christ as the Pattern of all Perfection, (for so that Humane Nature, united and quickned by the God-head, must needs be even above the Angels themselves, though having a Body, and more excellent than they) and drew in scattered Pieces, the several Perfections met in that Humane Nature in the rest of the Creation from this Pattern; And in Man's Creation (whose Nature it was he was to assume) this seems to have been considered by God, in that Speech then uttered, Let us make Man according to our Image, which in Christ as decreed to be God-Man, and in which, as such, he is stiled, The Image of the Invisible God, as hath been shewn, (which some, both Antient and Modern, Divines have interpreted of Christ, as to be made Man, notwithstanding Austin's Objection). Even as that Speech used when Man was created, [Man was made a Living Soul] is interpreted by the Apostle, 1 Cor. 15. 45, &c. to have an Eye to Christ, as the Type or Shadow hath to the Body, so likewise that Speech uttered before concerning his Creation, Let us make Man after our Image, that Man refers to whom God was to be united to, and is, as if God had said, Whom we in our Decrees have set up as the Pattern, and expressest Image of the Invisible God-head, common to all Three Persons, to the utmost livelines ordained to be set out, in him who was set out. Therefore the first in Intention, and Decree, and therein before this Man Adam, and all Things, and of whom this Man Adam is but a shadow.

II. The second Phrase is, δι' αὐτοῦ, By him all Things were created; so Ephes. 3. 9. where speaking of the Mystery of the Gospel it self, (whereof Christ was the great Founder, and apparent Author in all Mens Eyes) he adds, how the same Christ had also created all Things, he having been some way the Instrument, as he is [Christ] God-Man, anointed, of the Creation, as well as actually of Redemption. And the coming of it in there, so by a meer occasional Addition,

Book III. imports, as if this Chriſt indeed had been concealed, and came not into the World, but then when the Goſpel was to be revealed and manifeſted, (of which he there ſpeaks as a Myſtery hid); yet unto him, as thus to come into the World, was the World beholden for their Creation; and this Glory of Chriſt, God concealed, until the full revelation of him, in the great Work of Redemption; that ſo all his Revenues of Glory might come in together. Yea, if he were at all to be made a Creature, it was his due Perſonal Priviledg, to have been firſt himſelf made, and himſelf to have been God's Inſtrument in it, and to have uttered thoſe words ſtill which were ſpoken by God, (yet as on purpoſe relating to him, as Cameron well obſerves) Let there be Light; Let there be Sun, Moon, &c. Even as it was his due, when he aſſumed our Nature, to have been filled with all that perſonal Glory which he hath now in Heaven; but that for accompliſhment of other Ends alſo it was ſuſpended; namely, that he might firſt become Sin and a Curſe for us: So, I ſay, it was his due to have exiſted in his Humane Nature firſt, (ſuppoſing ſuch a Decree that he ſhould aſſume); and then he, as God's Word and Inſtrument, to have created all Things, as he wrought Miracles when he was on the Earth; but God having a further and more glorious End, ſuſpended that (as he did his Perſonal Glory due to him when he came) and contrived his coming after the Fall, in order to Redemption. He yet gives him that Glory of Creation virtually, and that he created all Things by him, and by virtue of his Incarnation; and in createing (to ſhew he ſhould have done it as his λόγος, a Word to be made Fleſh) he accordingly acts his Part, as in Gen. 1. God ſaid, Let there be Light, and the like; which but for this very Myſtery needed not have been. Yea, ſuch ſeems to have been his ſubſerviency to God herein, that John contents not himſelf only to have ſaid, that all Things were made by him; but further adds, and without him nothing was made that was made: Unto the interpretation of which place hereto annexed, I refer the Reader for a further Explication and Confirmation of this Truth.

And the Reaſon of this is, partly to honour his Son, to make that his Act of undertaking to aſſume our Nature, (whereby the Son ſhould be made leſs than his Father, even in the greateſt height of Glory that could be put upon him; and yet he did this to manifeſt the God-head to the utmoſt) the Foundation of the Creation, as he did his Incarnation in frail Fleſh, together with his Sufferings, the Foundation of our Salvation, (for upon the Decrees of God's Will, we will ſuppoſe the connexion of theſe to depend); but yet partly withal, becauſe it was not meet, nor did it become the Great God to make any meer Creatures, though never ſo glorious, but upon Chriſt's undertaking firſt himſelf to be a Creature; and that for two Reaſons.

Firſt, For if God glorify himſelf by Creation at all, he will glorify himſelf as God, the utmoſt way that may be, or elſe he doth not like himſelf: God is curious in the Works which his Hands mean to make, and will manifeſt his God-head unto the utmoſt. Now all that could have been held forth and manifeſted of the God-head, in and to meer Creatures, had fallen ſhort, had not been to the utmoſt; therefore if God ſatisfie himſelf, it muſt be by that which is the utmoſt, or he would have torn all Projects of Models of Worlds in pieces, and never have put them in execution; for ſtill he ſays with himſelf, I ſhall not do my beſt and utmoſt, if there be not an Union of ſome Creature into one Perſon with us, nothing elſe would have ſatisfied his vaſt deſires of being glorified.

And, ſecondly, The Holineſs of meer Creatures would not have come up to a contentment of his; as the manifeſtation of the God-head in the Creation of meer Creatures, would not have given full contentment to his Power and Wiſdom, ſo no meer created Holineſs to his Holineſs. He finds folly in the Angels poſſibility of Mutability, an Imperfection, but there is none in God incarnate. Now therefore if his Son will undertake to be a Creature, he is ſo pleaſed herewith, as he can be content to condeſcend (as the Pſalmiſt's word is) to look down upon the making Works of a lower Nature. Which all ſerve alſo to illuſtrate illustrate this highest Work of all by their several Subordination thereunto, in their several Ranks and Orders. Chap. 10.

It is strange, that in the Text there should be three Phrases used concerning the Creation, in relation unto Christ: The Creatures are said to be created in him, and created by him, and created for him.

In him, as a Head, they are not; the Creatures cannot be said to be created, as the Elect are said to be chosen in him, that's proper to those Creatures that are homogeneal to him. In him, therefore may well be understood virtually, as in Ephes. 2. 10. we are said to be his Workmanship, created in him to good Works; so the old Creation is also in him in a virtual respect. That place in Prov. 8. 30. I was brought up with him (speaking of Wisdom); I remember Junius translates it actively, Educat; I was he that did foster the Creatures, he did foster the Purposes of God in the Creation of the World; he was Educans, nursing up, and fostering of the old Creation in his purpose. In Ephes. 3. 9. the Apostle saith, that it was given to him to preach the unsearchable Riches of Christ, and to make all Men see what is the Fellowship of the Mystery, which from the beginning of the World hath been hid in God, who (saith he) created all Things by Jesus Christ. He speaks of the Mystery of the Gospel. Now that Jesus Christ was the Founder of the Gospel, that was apparently known, it was in all Mens Eyes; but he addeth, by the same Jesus Christ he created all Things, that is, by Jesus Christ, as anointed God-Man; and to me the words come in thus, (for it is an addition by the way) that though the Gospel only began to reveal this Christ, and he did not assume Man's Nature till the Times of the Gospel, and for Evangelical Ends and Purposes, for the Redemption of Man took frail Flesh; yet, saith he, know this, the World was beholden to him for its Creation; and this is one Glory of his that is not to be laid aside; and the Revelation of it saith, He is by the Gospel. He brings it in here with the other, that Christ might have all his Revenues of Glory (which in the 8*th* Verse had been stiled His Riches) come in together.

CHAP. XI.

That Christ as God-Man is the Creator of all Things, proved by Scriptures. The first Proof out of the former Text reassumed. 1 Cor. 8. 6. By whom are all Things. Some further Explanation how this is attributed to him as God-Man, in Answers to some Queries concerning it.

I Alledge in the first Place, that preliminary Text, I took of 1 Cor. 8. 6. Shewing thereout, That the One God, had set up Christ as the One Lord under Himself, a Lord unto all his Creatures. I then proved that Title of Lordship there given him, was not meant of his natural Lordship, as he is God, or singly as Second Person, but as God-Man. For evidence of which, I must refer the Reader thither.

That particular Improvement which I now make of that Passage in that Scripture, By him are all Things, is to set it in the Front to the rest of Scriptures that follow, to lead on to the proof of the Point in Hand, founded upon this.

That if this Title of [One Lord] be given him as God-Man, and in respect of an Office he sustains afore God, as was there proved, the Inference is strong, That then he was as such, first and chiefly forelaid in God's Designs and everlasting Purposes, as a Midst or Foundation unto ALL, as upon whom All Things in common for Creation, and we in special for our Supernatural Estate, had a dependance, and not meerly as Second Person. And it is of All Things as well as of the State of the Elect. For,

1. If All Things be by Him, as the Lord; then he, under God, is a Founder of them, as the Lord of them. For that which is by another, must needs be acknowledged as such, to be before that other. Nor is it said only, That all are for Him, as if in that respect only, he were their Lord, (which yet is true) as Adam, his Type, was Lord of all the visible World, and yet the World was not by him: But here, he is such a Lord, as by whom, or through whom all Things are. And not only of them when they once are, but through whom they are, and have their Being: And so he is their Founder as well as their End. Nor is he said simply to be Lord of All, as Acts 10. 36. and Lord over All, Rom. 10. 12. But here it is further, One Lord by whom All.

2. It is as indifferently spoken of Him, That All Things are by him as One Lord, as that We (the Church) are by him. Now all will, and do acknowledg, that We, and all that belongs unto our Salvation, do and doth depend on him as God-Man, and as our Lord; and that that is the intent of that Speech, in that same 1 Cor. 8. 6. And we by him: In that respect therefore, in their kind and proportion, all Things else; for both are there set together and yoaked in one and like Parallel Expression.

3. And indeed, 3*dly*, The Dependance of all Things on him, meerly as God, and Second Person, is afore included in that preceding Speech: There is One God, the Father, of whom are all Things. And Christ, considered as Second Person, is one God with the Father; as our Divines upon this Place do affirm, against the Socinian Objection. And the Father is set for the other two Persons, both the Son and Spirit; as in Joh. 17. 3. And this is Life Eternal, that they might know thee the only true God, and Jesus Christ whom thou hast sent. And here the Son

Son is evidently implyed, in saying, One God the Father, spoken in relation to Christ as the Son; and because they are both thus included, therefore it is that the Spirit is not mentioned at all: when yet upon him is the same dependance that is upon the Father; yea, and of the Son and Spirit it is that all things are, as well as of the Father. Chap. 11.

To conclude: What is that great Truth the Apostle sets the primitive Churches a work to pray about, and that the generality of the then Heathen World might come to the knowledg of, but this very thing thus stated? God would have all Men to be saved, and come to the knowledge of the Truth: [for there is One God, and one Mediator] between God and Men, the Man Christ Jesus. 2 Tim. 2. 4, 5. And doth not this Corinthian Text speak just in the same parallel Language, One God, and One Lord? So then it is not Christ, simply considered as Second Person, the Apostle here intends, as the One Lord here; that sence would be too narrow in comparison of this other that comprehends the whole of our Christ, both as God, the subsstratum of his Person, and also Man, and the whole of his Office in the relation he stands thereby unto God, to us, and all the whole Creation.

There is a Query or two may be made.

Query 1. Is not Christ's Lordship rather thus to be understood, That as God indeed, he hath a natural right over all things; because as God he made them? (And the Title of God's Dominion over All, is founded on this, That he is the Maker of them) and so, that Christ's Official or Commissionated Lordship over all as Man, is but only for him to be the End or Ruler of them, which Psal. 8. 4. compared with Heb. 2. 6. gives him; But one in a certain place testified, saying, What is Man that thou art mindful of him? or the Son of Man, that thou visitest him? What is Man? Thou madest him to have dominion over the Work of thy Hands, &c. i. e. when they are once made by him, considered as he is God; and therefore in that respect of his being Man, is not to be extended to their Creation, or to his being Author of their very Beings themselves.

I answer; That if Lord here in the Text, be meant of that Commissionated Lordship he hath as God-Man, as hath been proved; that then, as truly as that all things are said to be of one God, as God, in respect of their Creation; so truly are all things said to be by this one Lord, though in a distinction from God. All Things is a reaching word, and comprehends the very Beings of Things; and we see, that in as full an extent and latitude, it is spoken of Christ, that All are by Him, as the former is of God, that all are of Him; only with this note of difference [of Him] so of God, but [by Him] so of that one Lord, shewing that God hath that Dominion originally, but Christ derivatively, as a Commissionated Lord, as He by whom God doth all things, that yet are of God himself. Now, when it is here said of God, All things are of him; all readily understand it, that all things have their Beings of Him, and their very Creation from Him: Therefore also, when it is said of Christ, All things are by Him; it is in like manner imported, that they all depend on this Commissionated Lord for their Beings and Creation also. And the Scriptures fall in with this phrase and manner of expression, whilst they frequently say of Christ, All things were made by Him, and that God by Him did make the Worlds; whilst they particularly express Christ's share of Efficiency in their Making and Creation. This is the common language with what is here.

Answ. 2. The Assertion is not, That as Man, singly considered, this is attributed unto him, but as God-Man. Singly and alone as Man he hath no such Lordship at all, either over all the Creatures to rule them, much less to create: for a meer Man was not capable of it, (as was said): Nor, on the contrary, is it true, That as he is God, singly considered, he only can create; but that as God-Man he can create also, (especially having been therewith commissioned thereto as such, by God) even as well as forgive Sins: which he takes on him as God-Man to do. The Jews in a like manner objected, Mark 2. 7. This Man speaks Blasphemies: Who can forgive Sins but God? 'Tis true, None could but He that is God: But it was not true, that it was not so a Property of God, considered singly as God, only that a Man that was one Person with God, or God-Man, could could not be partaker of it, as his Perſonal Priviledge by virtue of that Union, or have a virtual influence thereunto, as well as God. And to put an end to that Controverſy; Chriſt gives this real Demonſtration of it, v. 9, & 11. Whether is it eaſier to ſay, Thy Sins are forgiven thee; or to ſay, Ariſe, take up thy Bed, and walk? But that ye may know, [THE SON OF MAN] hath power on Earth to forgive Sins. Yea, Chriſt, as God-Man, doth greater Works every day than create Worlds: He creates new Creatures, and thereby cauſeth all old things to paſs away, and all things to become new. And he will create new Heavens, and a new Earth; and change our vile Bodies, that they may be faſhioned like unto his glorious Body, according to the working of his mighty Power, whereby he is able even to ſubdue all things unto himſelf. Phil. 3. ult. Which are all ſpoken of Chriſt as God-Man, even Him whom viſibly we look for from Heaven, as it is there in the verſe afore.

Anſw. 3. Nor are theſe things attributed to Him meerly by way of communication of Properties; whereby what is proper only to the Divine Nature ſingly as God, is attributed to the Manhood; but theſe all by way of influence and virtual efficacy are attributed to him as God-Man, as truly as the Works of Redemption, Mediation, and Forgiveneſs of Sins, all which are ſecundum utramque Naturam attributed to Chriſt, in reſpect of both his Humane and Divine Natures, as we affirm againſt the Papiſts.

Anſw. 4. To affirm this, is (as not any of thoſe other afore-mentioned) no way derogatory unto God. It is proper indeed to God to create by his own ſole Power originally, all the eſſential Power is ſolely his, and the Man Jeſus can add nothing of Power thereunto; yet derivatively the Perſon of the Son as God-Man, may be and was impowered thereto, over and above what ſimply as God and ſecond Perſon, his Power was for: As by way of difference it is ſaid, All things are by Him as Lord: But of God, That All is [of Him.]

Anſw. 5. Nor is it true, that the ſole foundation or riſe of God's being Lord over all, is, That he is Maker of all things; and that therefore this is peculiar to God as God: For he was Lord over all before they were made, in that he could make them, &c. His Lordſhip as God, is founded on a Sovereignty in himſelf; And accordingly doth learned Cameron ſpeak upon this occaſion of Chriſt himſelf; Dominium illud eſſentiale, &c. This eſſential Dominion (namely as God) belongs not only to Chriſt, for the cauſe or ground that he is the Creator of all things, but upon that height and Sovereignty of the Divine Nature; which is ſuch, and ſo high and lofty in kind above that of all the Creatures, That although the World had not been made by him, (which yet we cannot ſo much as feign the ſuppoſition of) He had yet been the Lord of all things, namely as God.

Query 2. That ſeeing he exiſted not as Man at the Creation, nor until four thouſand years thence after; as alſo by Peter, the firſt date of his being made Lord, as God-Man, is made upon his Aſcenſion into Heaven, Acts 2. v. 34, 36. How then can his having created All, be aſcribed unto him as God-Man, the Lord?

Anſw. 1. This hinders not his virtual Influence (as God-Man) into the Work of Creation, no more than his not having exiſted as Man, did hinder his virtual Influence (and that as God-Man) into the Work of Redemption all along under the Old Teſtament, in which Chriſt is ſo often ſtiled the Redeemer. And further; By the ſame Reaſon (if this Allegation ſhould avail) he ſhould not have been made [the Chriſt] no more than the Lord neither, until he had aſcended; for both are there equally joined, Him hath God made [both Lord and Chriſt]: But as Chriſt, and Jeſus alſo, he is the ſame Yeſterday, in the Old Teſtament; and to Day, in the New, as well afore his Aſcenſion as after, and for ever, Heb. 13. 8. and therefore as Lord alſo.

Anſw. 2. The actual execution by the Man Jeſus, (He now actually exiſting as ſuch) was indeed firſt more openly and publickly entred upon, and manifeſtly declared before Angels and Men, upon his Aſcenſion; but was afore ſecretly executed and performed (in all the Works and Parts belonging to it) by the Son of God, who was the Perſon then exiſting; and yet not as then by him him, as singly considered, as meerly Second Person, but as having been appointed and commissionated thereto by the Three Persons in God's Decrees, and himself having also undertaken to be Man, and therewith he sustaining that Personage, he performed and issued forth all Acts afore his Father, sub eo nomine: observe how the second of the Acts speaks, Let all the House of Israel know assuredly, (by this open and visible Demonstration given) that God hath made that same Jesus whom ye have crucified, both Lord and Christ. Chap. 11.

Answ. 3. Nor doth he say, that when he ascended, (the visible Effects of which, ye now see and hear, says he, vers. 23. were the Evidence for this, that God had made him Christ, and Lord; which Effects the Apostle refers them there unto) that then first, God made him the Lord, and Christ, or that then first he had entred upon that Office; but he produceth it as an undeniable Testimony, that God hath made him so, &c. and that he was the Person, whom God had made; but when first made, is not there said.

Answ. 4. Those words [hath made] do as well, and as effectually speak, and involve, his having been appointed to it, as now to note out the actual execution of it, by the Man as actually ascended. Appointed is put to express being made, and è contra: So *Heb.*3. 2. treats of Christ; He was faithful to him that [appointed him; the Greek is, that made him]: And his being appointed Lord, will allow us, and send us to an higher Date, even to afore the Creation, yea, even to Eternity; Heb. 1. 2. God hath in these last Days spoken unto us by his Son, whom he hath appointed Heir of all Things, by whom also he made the Worlds.

The Subject of these Elogies, is not singly the Second Person, but the whole of Christ as now made Man, and by whom he had now in the last Days spoken to us as such. And yet, because he had said, That in the last Days this was done, and not till then; to preoccupate the very same Objection we have been answering, he goes on, Whom he hath appointed Heir of all Things, &c. As if he had said, Although our Christ, as Man, actually existed not untill 4000 Years after the Creation, (at which Period it was the last Days began, or perhaps rather at his Ascension); yet he was long afore that appointed the Heir, that is, Lord of all Things that were so long actually extant afore him as Man; yea, he was so appointed long before the very Creation of them; and therefore he sets this his being appointed first, and afore that of their Creation, [by whom also he made the Worlds]; yea, and because as God-Man he was appointed the Lord of them, therefore it was also, that God commissionated him to make them, as being considered God-Man, to make his Title of Lordship, even as Son of Man, proper and direct, and adequately full to him. So then, God appointing him to all this, and the Son of God then existing, and consenting to, and taking this Office of Lord on him, and Person of God-Man, and Christ acting accordingly in all that was done, as the Lord and Heir of all, there needeth no more to verify this we are upon, namely, That as God-Man he made the Worlds, and virtually as Man, as well as efficiently both as God and Man, in the sense it hath been explained in.

CHAP. XII.

That Chriſt, as God-Man, is the Creator of all Things, proved from John 1. 1, 2, 3. Whether, ὁ λόγος, the WORD, import not as the Second Perſon, exiſting as God with God, in the Beginning, ſo withal connotating that Perſon, as ſuſtaining, before God, the Perſonage of God-Man, by whom as ſuch all Things were created. An Interpretation of Prov. 8. from Verſ. 22, to 32. with a Parallel between that Scripture, and this of John 1. 1, 2, 3. a brief Expoſition of the firſt Chapter of John, continued unto the 14*th Verſe.*

John 1. Verſ. 1, 2, 3.

In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God. The ſame was in the beginning with God. All Things were made by him, and without him was not any Thing made that was made.

IN the proſecution of this Aſſertion of Chriſt (as God-Man) his being inſtrumental to all God's Purpoſes, and Decrees, and Works; as namely, the Creation, Providence, &c. I ſhall further add what the fore-part of this Chapter, which ſpeaks of the Creation by him, under the Title of the Word, may contribute hereunto: Wherein it will be meet to enquire, Whether that Title, the Word, be to be underſtood of him, meerly as Second Perſon, or alſo as bearing the Perſonage of God-Man.

In diſcourſing of the Perſon of our Lord Chriſt, I fell upon that Title of his, whereby John here ſtiles him the Word: and then diſcourſed, how it imported, both his being,

1. The Image of God the Father, which he is as Second Perſon.
2. The Image, the Manifeſtation of God unto us in an Humane Nature.

Which two are ſuitably conſiſtent; the Word in both thoſe Tongues the Scripture was written in, ſignifying the inward Image, or Conceptus of the Mind framed within it ſelf, and alſo that which is uttered in Speech, which is the trueſt Interpretation or Index of the Mind, and the moſt immediate lively Image and Manifeſt of what the Mind conceives within it ſelf, to others.

Many of our Modern Proteſtant Divines, have (as I then obſerved) altogether declined the firſt ſenſe, and betaken themſelves to the latter, namely, That Chriſt is called the Word, as in relation to his being manifeſted in an Humane Nature, and therein to manifeſt the whole of God unto us; for as manifeſted in our Nature, it was only, that he was to manifeſt God to us. In the Old Teſtament, beſides thoſe other Titles of Shiloh, Meſſiah, Son of God, The Seed of the Woman, Adonai, The Lord, &c. this, of his being the Word, was known known and used among the Jews; Nor otherwise, had the Greek Septuagint so often used it, when Christ was spoken of, naming him ὁ λόγος, the Word, as it is found they have done. That it is not appropriated to him only as Son of God, and Second Person, is manifest, as in the Discourse of the Person of Christ I have shewn. That in the New Testament he is stiled so, as Son of God, united to that Humane Nature; and as such, is evident from Rev. 19. 13. And he was clothed with a Vesture dipt in Blood, and his Name is called, The Word of God. For 'tis spoken, when he came to do Execution as God's Deputy. Chap. 12.

Now John gives him that Title here, long afore he had assumed it, even in the beginning, and at the Creation, which was the first Appearance, or Manifestation, that can be supposed of him, seeing Creation was the first of Works God himself ever did act of himself. What I have commented from those other former Scriptures, hath put me upon a further Enquiry, viz. Whether the Title be not given him then, in respect of God's having set him up, and himself undertaken, and as then acting the Person of God-Man, (in the sense hitherto driven) one day actually to take Flesh; but in the mean time, under the Name of the Word performing this part; I proceed to it by degrees.

1. It seems fair to me, that if he be thus termed the Word, after the assumption of our Nature, and as acting in it; why should not his being termed the Word before his Incarnation by John, have relation to his undertaking that Office or Person afore? Now 'tis evident, that he is termed the Word of God in this sense, as subsisting in an Humane Nature, and therein executing the Decrees and Counsels of God, as King of his Church and Nations; thus expresly, Rev. 19. 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16. And I saw Heaven opened, and behold, a white Horse, and he that sate upon him, was called Faithful and True, and in Righteousness he doth judg and make War. His Eyes were as a flame of Fire, and on his Head were many Crowns, and he had a Name written, that no Man knew but he himself. And he was clothed with a Vesture dipt in Blood, and his Name is called, The Word of God. And the Armies which were in Heaven, followed him upon white Horses, clothed in fine Linnen, white and clean. And out of his Mouth goeth a sharp Sword, that with it he should smite the Nations; and he shall rule them with a Rod of Iron; and he treadeth the Wine-press of the fierceness and wrath of Almighty God. And he hath on his Vesture, and on his Thigh, a Name written, King of Kings, and Lord of Lords. And we know also, that he acted virtually as Man, afore he came into the World as Mediator, and so as God-Man, and appeared as a Man; for in such an appearance, he the Angel of the Covenant conversed with the Fathers; for the Angels that came into Sodom, the Inhabitants took for Men. Among the Jews also that Stile of the Word, as that of Wisdom, Prov. 8. (which is all one) was the usual Title taken up among them, to express the Mediator by; It was the Name he was called and known by as such. One eminent Evidence of this, is that of the Chaldee Paraphrast, who hath enstiled him the Word, as Mediator; and thereof as God-Man in the Paraphrase and Translation of that Promise made to Abraham, Gen. 22. 15, 16. By my self have I sworn, in blessing I will bless thee; and in thy Seed shall all the Nations of the Earth be blessed. The Chaldee turns it, By my Word have I sworn. Now compare with it, Heb. 6. 17. the Apostle's paraphrase on that Oath, is this; his words in the Original import, That God did intermediate by Oath; the Margin it self varies it, [interposed]: So then, put both together, the Effect is this, That God, in making the Promise to Abraham, swore by that Word of his, his Son, that was to be the Mediator and Interposer, &c. to make that Oath good through his interposition; who being one in Essence with God, God is therefore also said to swear by himself. Or perhaps, rather thus, That the Son of God being that Person that appeared to the Fathers, did swear by himself, as to become the Word, and by Oath undertook to mediate; and to that end to become, as Heb. 2. 16. the Seed of Abraham, and to bless that Nation. But still, out of either sense, is collected this, That Christ as Mediator is the Word.

Secondly; At other times he is spoken of as Mediator, (and so God-Man) under that Title: So in that great Promise to Abraham, God interposed by his Word: So to David, for his Words sake (as Daniel, Chap. 9. 17. for the Lord's sake); ſake); And theſe were the two great Perſons in the Old Teſtament, to whom, and in whoſe Name the Promiſes were made. And,

Thirdly, I found, that here this Title is given him in reſpect of his being ὁ λόγος, and ſo that to be eſteemed the firſt Title of all other, in relation unto God's Works ad extra; and that by him as Second Perſon, all was created: and comparing it with thoſe other Scriptures, I conſidered, Whether it might not be given him, in relation to his having undertaken to be Man, as well as meerly the Son of God.

Fourthly, I found that Title of Wiſdom (which is near a-kin, if not all one with this of the Word) to be underſtood of him as God-Man, as ſet up in God's Decree, with his own undertaking that Perſonage: So in Prov. 8. and that under that Title, He is there ſpoken of as ſet up with God long before the Creation. I compared that Scripture with this, and found them parallel in many reſpects.

I then, fifthly, found Chriſt applying that Title unto himſelf as Son of Man, as ſending out Prophets, which Wiſdom is ſaid to do; and in the Proverbs, Wiſdom's calling upon her Diſciples under the Name of Children, Prov. 8. 32. Now therefore hearken unto me, O ye Children: for bleſſed are they that keep my Ways. And Chriſt referring to it, ſays, Wiſdom is juſtified of her Children, Mat. 11. 19. and that Speech doth verily ſuppoſe him God-Man. Alſo he is found delighting in the Sons of Men on Earth, which Pſal. 16. 23. is ſpoken of Chriſt, as Man. My Righteouſneſs extends to the Saints on Earth, with whom is all my delight; which are almoſt the very words in Prov. 8. 31. Rejoice in the habitable part of his Earth, and my Delights were with the Sons of Men.

Sixthly, When I came to the Creation, as in Gen. 1. from whence this Title is given him, as by comparing John and Moſes appears, I conſidered, whether God by a Word within himſelf, did ſpeak it as in Corde. Now ſo he had ſaid, Let there be Light, and that from Everlaſting; and therefore why may we not ſuppoſe it to have been uttered at the beginning of every days Work? and that Voice being a Creature, Whether that cloathing with words at creation, ſhewed not, That Chriſt was to be clothed on with a Creature, to ſpeak God's Mind unto us Creatures, and that he had ſo undertaken, as being that Wiſdom who had ſuſtained it in God's Purpoſe, and now appeared to execute it.

The Interpretation of the words, John 1. verſ. 1. In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God.

Theſe words do willingly, and without conſtraint, offer up this one import of them, That he that was known as the expected Meſſiah, by the uſual Name of the Word of God, both as the Image of God to himſelf, and as who was ordained to be the Wiſdom of God, the Manifeſtation of God to us, the great Interpoſer and Mediator in an Humane Nature, to come one day into the World; his Perſon was exiſting in the beginning, and was God, and with God. Thus for his Perſonal Exiſtence; which having affirmed, as to this exiſtence of his Perſon,

Then, verſ. 2. he adds, The ſame was in the beginning with God.

This being in view but a repetition of the former, and indeed meant of the Exiſtence of his Perſon, is no other in the ſenſe of it: I enquire therefore, Whether this Expreſſion, The ſame was in the beginning with God, be not diſtinct from the former in this, That qua λόγος, or as the Word, as ſuſtaining that Perſonage, (as I have often diſtinguiſhed it) That eo Nomine, & Perſona, He was then with God? He was this ſame Word in the beginning with God; and not only, That he that was the Word, was from the beginning with God. He had ſaid afore, verſ. 1. That he was in the beginning, and that he was with God. To what end repeats he this? Say I, to this eminent meaning, which as yet John before had not ſpoke out, namely, That as the Word, he had exiſted in the beginning, and was with God as ſuch; and ſo read it thus, This ſame Word ſpoken of, was with God in the beginning; or, he was this ſame Word from the the Beginning, the Existence of his Person, and his being God, and with God, the first Verse holds forth; but his Existence also with God tanquam, as the Word, or Mediator, this the second holds forth; and that as a Preface unto that which follows, concerning the Creation. Chap. 12.

Vers. 2. The same was in the Beginning with God.

1. It imports, that the Second Person, besides his personal Existence, spoken of vers. 1. and Relation of a Son which he stood in towards God; did then between Him and His Father, sustain, and took on him another Relation, or Person of the Mediator: and not only undertaking it, but further, even then entring upon the Office of it, and acting the part of it, sustaining the Place and Reputation of it.

2. He was so in God's repute or esteem, as we use to say, one is so or so, with another one; or, he is All in All with him. Such Speeches import not only a real Existence, but also a being such or such in real Repute and Esteem with another. Thus, that Second Person (who also personally then existed, and was with God, and in God, and one with him) was in God's real repute and esteem the Word, and sustained that Name, and Relation, The Word was with God; that is, He was with God, the Word. God had that account or honour for him; and in their actual Converses, God own'd him as such, and himself took it on him to be such, afore God, and with God: in which Sense the Man Jesus praying for the Possession of that Glory he hath now in Heaven, urgeth that he had it with God afore the World was, when yet the Man actually existed not, John 17.5. It is the same Phrase there and here. And there it is necessarily to be understood of the Glory of God-Man, which he had in God's Decree and Designment; and the Second Person then existing and taking the Name and Thing upon him, God convers'd with him under that Title, &c. For it was that Glory which during the Term of his Humiliation, after the Man had been actually united to the Person of the Son, was suspended until now the time of his Praying. And therefore he prays to have it as then bestowed in the real Possession of it, according to the Model which was in God's Heart and Design about it before the World was; That so he might be existently and really possessed of it in and with God, as he had been ordained to it, and bore the repute of it with God. This to be the meaning of that his Petition, and of that Phrase with God, I have at large elsewhere handled upon that Text. And when I say in repute with God, I understand it thus, it was among the three Persons, and their Converses afore the World was made; as if three Men, who purpose to erect a Company, or to found a Colledg, should in their Contrivements, long before they set upon the Work, take several Relations on them, and Offices aforehand, which they mean executively to bear, when that Corporation is erected, or the Adventure begun; one of them being reckoned Treasurer or Purser to lay out all; another Master, or Governour, &c. and according they before-hand esteem and call each other such, in their Speech of, and to each other; and in the very first founding that Colledg, the Treasurer lays out the Money out of his Purse as Treasurer, and so manageth it afterwards.

3. The Words are to be understood that he did then Virtually exist as such, as being considered the Foundation of those Works that follow Creation, and the like. Thus in the like Phrase of Speech he is said to be, The Lamb slain from the beginning of the World, *Rev.*13.8. that is, from the Fall, for so the Phrase [from the beginning] there is taken; the meaning of which is, that Christ's Death was considered from that time, as virtually existing as if it had been past; in that upon the consideration of that his Death, God saved Eve, yea in that respect Christ did exist as Mediator, during all the Days of the Old Testament; Jesus Christ the same to Day, Yesterday, and for ever: In like manner may Christ be said then in the beginning to be the Word, as virtually under that consideration, being the Foundation of the World, and all God's Works therein. So then, it was not only an Existence in God's Decree, as in like manner that Glory he is said to have had with the Father afore the World was, is not spoken simply in Decree, for the like Speech is no where said of any Elect-Man or Angel, nor is Joh. 17.

compatible to them, as if they had a Glory with God afore the World was; no it was peculiar to Christ: and the reason of the Difference is evident, because the Person then existing actually (as Men and Angels did not) might well undertake and bear this Person apart, as in the Old Testament, de facto, he did before he was incarnate. So besides, the essential Glory as second Person (which he there speaks not of) he had the Honour, Repute, Renown and Glory with God, as the Mediator and Saviour of his Church, which now in his Prayer the Human Nature challengeth to be bestowed upon him as his antient Investment and Endowment, the second Person having before the World was, by an Agreement and Complot with his Father, undertaken to assume Human Nature, and all that while bearing, and sustaining, and acting that Person his Father did, as between themselves, repute and converse with him, as such; and gave him reputatively a Glory, a Name between themselves, correspondent to that Glory, which now (when God-Man glorified in Heaven) he actually hath bestowed upon him; which is thus expressed by him [the Glory which I had with thee] which yet had been his due, actually to have received, from the first Moment of his assuming Human Nature, but he had laid it down both before God and Men; taking the form of a Servant, and becoming of no Reputation, (as it is *Phil.*2.7.) neither with God, so far as God's outward Dispensation held forth; nor with Men, during the Time of his Humiliation; during which, he had given up even that Glory, in the respect he had had with God before the World was. Hence therefore, he having finished that Work of Humiliation for Man's Sin, (which was but part of the Work, which as God-Man he was to do by the way, whilst in the World) he now desires God to give him actually and visibly, before Saints and Angels, that Glory, and cause it to break forth in that Human Nature he had assumed, which reputatively between themselves he had given him before the World was, when he had undertaken it, and bare that Person of God-Man, which Glory was but his due Inheritance, whenever he should take our Nature. And this I truly take to be the genuine Sense, and fairest meaning that can be given of these Words of Christ, Joh. 17. 5. Now, O Father, do thou glorify me with thine own self, with the Glory which I had with thee before the World was. Namely, that which then he had in real repute, in Relation upon his bearing that Person, before God, which now he had assumed, and now seeks to have actually and visibly bestowed upon that Nature, which he had according to his ancient undertaking assumed.

It is well known unto those who have met with that Question, Whether Christ, as a Redeemer, was the first intended in God's Decrees, or whether considered as Man simply, in order to other glorious Ends, were not the Primitive great Decree, which hath been agitated both by Papist and Protestant Writers; it is well known, I say, that those which are for the latter, do insist, and urge much, that of Proverbs 8. Where Wisdom, that is Christ, for so Christ expressly takes it on himself, in those Words spoken of himself, by himself, Wisdom is justified by her Children, Prov. 8. 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31. The Lord possessed me in the beginning of his Way, before his Works of old. I was set up from everlasting, from the beginning, or ever the Earth was. When there was no Depths, I was brought forth: when there were no Fountains abounding with Water. Before the Mountains were setled; before the Hills was I brought forth: While as yet he had not made the Earth, nor the Fields, nor the higheſt part of the Dust of the World. When he prepared the Heavens, I was there; when he set a Compass upon the Face of the Depth: When he established the Clouds above; when he strengthned the Fountains of the Deep: When he gave to the Sea his Decree, that the Waters should not pass his Commandment: when he appointed the Foundations of the Earth: Then I was by him, as one brought up with him: and I was daily his delight, rejoicing always before him: Rejoicing in the habitable part of his Earth, and my Delights were with the Sons of Men.

These things (say they) cannot be understood of Christ simply, as Second Person, or as a Redeemer.

1. Not as Redeemer, which supposed this World first to be decreed to be Made, and Man to be Created, yea and Fallen; but as God-Man, and considered as such, as subservient to other Ends of God, as well as Redemption, in the utmost utmost Latitude of God's vast Purposes, which he made in Christ, besides those of Man's Redemption, and the beginning of all his Ways, ad extra.

2. Not as Second Person singly considered, for he is there made the Object of God's Decrees; which as God's Son simply considered, he did no way come under: But only as God-Man, 1 Pet. 1. 19, 20, 21. But with the precious Blood of Christ, as of a Lamb without Blemish and without Spot: Who verily was fore-ordained before the Foundation of the World, but was manifest in these last Times for you; Who by him do believe in God that raised him up from the Dead, and gave him Glory, that your Faith and Hope might be in God. And yet Wisdom, or Christ as here spoken, is made the Object of a Decree of God's, I was set up from everlasting, and the Lord possessed me in the beginning of his Way: that is, he so designed and decreed me afore all his other Ways, and as the Foundation of them: Or as the Revelation hath it, The beginning of the Creation of God, Rev. 3. 14. And unto the Angel of the Church of the Laodiceans, write, These Things saith the Amen, the faithful and true Witness, the beginning of the Creation of God.

Now compare but this Prov. 8. with this of John 1. from the second Verse; besides, that the Titles are in Effect and Significancy the same in the Original Languages, the Word, and Wisdom, you will find, that Solomon speaks but the same Things of him there, that John doth here; he calls him by the same Name, (that is, the same in Sense and Meaning) for Wisdom and ὁ λόγος the Word, are all one, and both respect us; that which is there in John, said of the Word, That He was in the Beginning, is vers. 22. of the 8*th* of Proverbs said, The Lord possessed me in the Beginning of his Way: And so it may explain what is meant by [In the Beginning] here; namely, of the Creation, alluded to there: For the Ways of God are his goings forth towards the Creatures, which are called Opera ad extra; and therefore is not meant of his Eternal Generation: for so, Christ is not the beginning of God's Ways. That Speech is all one with Col. 1. 15. Where he is called, The First-Born of every Creature, being in God's Decree of Creation, the First, the Corner-Stone, and Beginning of the rest: So as it must be meant of Christ, as God-Man, and not simply as Second Person. Again, That which is here said, [was with God,] is there said [the Lord possessed me;] they dwelt together: He was with God as possessed of him. And vers. 30. Then was I by him; and from vers. 23. to vers. 30. He rehearseth the particular Works of Creation, by Parcels; as here they are in this one Sum, All Things were made by him. And vers. 30. that which is translated [I was brought up with him,] as a Nourishing, or one nourished Passively taken, is rendred by Junius Actively, [educans] as one Nourishing; that is, by my Power supporting the Creatures, and God's Decrees about them, and his Purpose to Create. And that which is here said, that he was [The Life of Man,] is there said, vers. 31. [Lætificans,] that is, Blessing; or with Blessing, making joyful the Sons of Men: So Junius out of the Hebrew reads it; and Cartwright also, with others: So as the one Place may interpret the other.

Nor doth this Interpretation, weaken or derogate any thing, from alledging these Texts as strong Proofs, for the actual Existing of the Second Person, as Son of God, begotten by him from Everlasting. For, look as the Greatness of a Personage, doth argue the Greatness of the Person in his Birth, (when such or such an Office or Dignity goes by Birth.) So here, all this said hitherto, doth necessarily suppose and argue our Christ to have been God; (as John affirms) and Natural Son of God: And that he did then also actually exist, as bearing and sustaining this Dignity and Office afore God, of being his Word and Wisdom. Insomuch, as if this Natural Greatness of his Person, were not as the Substratum, first supposed, and laid down, all these Assertions we have insisted on, would fall at once to the Ground, as having no Basis or Foundation to stand upon: If there were not a Person of Original Worth for such a Place and Employments. And accordingly, the Apostle, Heb. 1. argues and infers from the one to the other; and also this 1*st* of John, That He is God.

To come then to that which is eminently and summarily intended in his being called the Word, in respect of his then sustaining and assuming the Person of God-Man, in relation to all God's Works, Ways, and Counsels, whereof John gives gives inſtance in the Creation; and the like, John 1. 3, 4. All Things were made by him, and without him was not any Thing made that was made. In him was Life, and the Life was the Light of Men.

We find, 1 Cor. 1. 24. that Chriſt is ſaid to be, The Power of God, and the Wiſdom of God: Both which are ſpoken of him, not as they are eſſential Attributes in God's Nature; for the Perſon of Chriſt, is as a Perſon diſtinct from the Attributes, which are common to all Three; and ſo, he is not ſtiled the Attribute of Wiſdom, but they are thus ſpoken of Chriſt manifeſtatively, and inſtrumentally, and executively, and as he is from God, and made uſe of by God towards us, and in things that concern us, to be the whole Scene and Manifeſtation of God's Wiſdom and Subſtratum of his Counſels concerning us, and ſo alſo the executive Power by whom God effects all he doth. And that this is the meaning, is evidently interpreted by that which follows verſ. ult. God hath made him to us Wiſdom, &c. And although it be a Maxim applyed to that particular of preaching the Goſpel unto us Men, which is the Wiſdom and Power of God to our Salvation; yet it is a general Maxim brought in to confirm that Particular. Such Generals the Apoſtle often uſeth to alledg upon particular Occaſions, as in Rom. 8. 29. our Predeſtination to be conformed to Chriſt's Image, is brought upon occaſion of Afflictions; ſo then Chriſt, in relation to what he is as a Medium between God and us, who are Creatures, is both the Wiſdom of God, and the Power of God. Neither is it ſaid of him ſimply as Second Perſon, but as Chriſt, God-Man, for ſo only he is made theſe to us.

Now theſe two, which as there ſpoken of Chriſt, in what he is to us as Saints, (which is the ſtrict ſcope of the Apoſtle there) ſerves yet ſummarily and particularly to expreſs, what he is as he is termed ὁ λόγος, or the Word, by John, (as that Title relates to the manifeſtation of God by him, and inſtrumentality of him to us) both that he is the Wiſdom of God, and the Power of God.

1. That it expreſſeth him to be the Wiſdom of God, and is congenial with the proper import of the Word ὁ λόγος, Ratio, Conceptus, the Mind or Counſel of God about the Creatures, or to be manifeſted to the Creatures; thoſe that are verſed in the Languages the Old and New Teſtament were written in, will univerſally acknowledg, and the correſpondency that Title of Wiſdom, Prov. 8. with this of John, is an abundant confirmation of it.

2. And that the executive Power of God, as erected and put forth in the Creatures, is therein fitly comprehended alſo; and thereby intended, that Obſervation evidently demonſtrates, which Cameron, and many others, have made, by comparing Moſes, Gen. 1. and this firſt of John together, which many things parallel lead to: That whereas Moſes in the Creation mentions God the Father, and the Spirit, two of the Perſons. That he vails the Son under that ſo often repeated Speech uſed of the Creation, that, God ſaid, Let there be Light; God ſaid, Let there be a Firmament, which could not be without Myſtery; and what other than that Chriſt was that Word by whom God created all Things; whom therefore when John ſpeaks, referring to Moſes's in the beginning; and of the creation of all Things he terms ὁ λόγος, the Word; God's Power was erected and put forth by his Word, Pſalm. 18. 4, 5. He commanded, and they were created: As, where the Word of a King is, there is Power, Eccleſ. 8. 4. So God's Word, and his executive Power, are all one. When therefore Chriſt is termed the Word of God; the meaning is, he is the Power of God, in being his Inſtrument and Agent in all he doth, or means to do.

I ſhall therefore diſtinctly inſiſt on theſe two;

1. How Chriſt, as thus God-Man, the Word, is the Wiſdom of God.
2. How he is the Power of God.

And then proceed to add an Interpretation of the fore-part of this Chapter, unto verſ. 14. which is all of Chriſt.

I. He is the Wiſdom of God; and that in a double reſpect.

1. In reſpect to the Manifeſtation of God unto us; for Chriſt conſidered as God-Man, and through his aſſuming Humane Nature, was to be the ſum of that Wiſdom or Revelation, by which the God-head would make it ſelf known, that whereas whereas the Persons and Nature of the God-head were invisible, they should be uttered or revealed in him, as the λόγος, or the Word of God; and so he, by taking on him this Person of God-Man, became God's Wisdom, or best Image to express his Mind by, λόγος est mentis Imago, the Image of God's Mind and Thoughts. Now as that Christ should be God-Man, was the first great and most comprehensive thought of God to express himself by; so he assuming, or taking upon himself so to be, did accordingly become λόγος, or the Image of God who was invisible, but in him made visible, as hath been explained Col. 1. 15. This I take to be John's meaning, as appears by vers. 18. of this first Chapter, No Man hath seen God at any time, the only begotten Son, who is in the Bosom of the Father, he hath declared him.

And, secondly, His being thus constituted the Wisdom of God, as God-Man then with God, imports how all God's Counsels, Thoughts, and Purposes which God took up, and from all Eternity was contriving of towards his Elect, they all depended and hung upon this as their Foundation, that he would become λόγος, the Word, or God-Man, to manifest God. Thus in Ephes. 3. as to that part of his Counsel, the Gospel; the whole Model of it, from first to last, vers. 10. is called, the manifold Wisdom of God; vers. 11. is said to be purposed from Eternity in Jesus Christ; because he from Eternity took on him that Person of being the Christ; and so in him considered as such, did God proceed to frame all his other Counsels, the whole frame of them depending upon that one Engine; thus God elected us, and bestowed all Things upon us before the World was, even in Jesus Christ, (Ephes. 1. 4.) as then bearing this Person of God-Man. And thus all the Promises which the written Word of God contains, were made for us unto Christ, as really bearing that Person; and 2 Tim. 1. 9. They were given us in Christ before the World began: So that Christ then, as sustaining the Person of God-man, (with promise one day to become Man) between him and his Father, was the Original Word or Wisdom to be revealed to us, and so more truly called λόγος, than the Word written, by how much the Original in God's Breast deserves the Name, better than the Extract or Copy. Notable to this purpose is that place, Tit. 1. 2, 3. where the Apostle first says, That God promised Eternal Life before the World began. A Promise is a Word given forth, and is more than a Purpose with ones self, for it is to another; there was a Promise made to Christ as then with him: Now as meerly Second Person, he is capable of no Promises, but only as he is God-Man. It is the Son of God as he is Jesus Christ, in whom all Promises are, Yea, and Amen. 2 Cor. 1. 19, 20. For the Son of God, Jesus Christ, who was preached among you by us, even by me, and Silvanus, and Timotheus, was not Yea and Nay, but in him, was Yea. For all the Promises of God in him, are Yea, and in him, Amen, unto the Glory of God by us. Secondly, The Apostle in that place to Titus, adds, That God hath in his due time manifested [his Word] through preaching. By Word is meant, that Original Word then given before the World began, which was founded on Christ, and his Undertakings for us: and further, as he did then sustain a Person, to whom the Promises for us were made, as a publick Person bearing our Persons, so was he likewise the Thing promised, and in both these respects called λόγος, the Word; and so is termed by John, 1 Epist. Chap. 1. vers. 1. the Word of Life; in Titus, it is termed, the Promise of Eternal Life; (for all Promises and Counsels of God were rooted in him, Ephes. 1. 4.) and so most properly called ὁ λόγος, then but still as God-Man considered, thus he was the Word, in respect of the Elect; even as he was the Wisdom of God.

II. But, secondly, He was the Word also, as he was the Power of God, in a general relation to all the Creation. This follows here, John 1. 3. All Things were made by him, and without him was not any Thing made that was made. And therefore, 1 Cor. 1. 24. as he is called the Wisdom of God to be revealed to us, so the Power; which though there specially brought in to the preaching of him in the Gospel, and the efficacy thereof, yet is a general Maxim applied, and specified to that Particular. The Power of God, that is, as undertaking to execute, and actually executing all that God ever meant to do, and in this respect as undertaking to be God-Man, and as bearing that part, he is termed God's Arm, Isa. 53. 1.

and Iſa. 27. 5. Without him God could, or at leaſt, would do nothing, no not firſt begin to Create, and he was then the Word, as taken for the Power of God, in a double reſpect.

1. As his bearing this Perſon, was in God's Mind, that which did uphold God's Purpoſe to Create, and this before the World was; ſo Prov. 8. 30, 31. I was by him, then before the World was, educans, foſtering, and lætificans Terram ſuam, (as Tremelius reads it) gladding his Earth, his bearing the Perſon of God-Man, one Day to be by him aſſumed, was it that made the Creatures exiſt in God's Purpoſe; God elſe would never have thought of them, but for his Sake, as God-Man: therefore he is ſaid to be the Firſt-born of every Creature, for whom, and by whom all things were made.

Yea ſecondly, when God came to make the Creatures, he did it by him as ſuſtaining this Perſon: the Scripture ſays, God created all Things by Jeſus Chriſt, Eph. 3. 9.

John having thus enſtiled him the Word, verſ. 1,2. Then goes on to ſhew how from him, as ſuch it is, that all Things are, All Things were created by him: Yea it is added, Nothing was made without him, that was made; meerly to ſhew the inſtrumental general Dependance God had of him in this Work: He was his All in All, as we ſay of one that is a right Hand to another, [He does nothing without him.] Such was Chriſt to God; not that God had not Power Eſſential to have Created without him: For it is by that Power that Chriſt did it, but that this Power God's Will would never have put forth, but for his aſſuming to be God-Man; even as although God hath Eſſential Power to ſanctify a Sinner: And Chriſt adds no ſuch Power to God, or his Spirit, which they had not before, but becauſe God without Chriſt would never have put forth that Power: therefore he is ſaid to be the Power of God therein. Now therefore, he is ſaid to create as God-Man, not only becauſe he undertook or promiſed to become a Man, and ſo in virtue of that, God put his Power forth. But further, God created by him, as ſuſtaining that Relation, and bearing that Title with God, (as in the Similitude afore-mentioned) one of a Society choſen Treaſurer, lays the Corner-Stone of a Colledg, out of his own Purſe. And many Interpreters, and others, do obſerve, that the Evangeliſt calls him ὁ λόγος, in reference to that of Moſes, Gen. 1. That whereas Moſes in the Creation, had made mention not only of God Creating, but as by a Word, God ſaid, Let there be Light. God the Father he had been mentioned as the Creator, in thoſe firſt Words, In the beginning God Created; and the Spirit, as moving upon the Waters: But the Second Perſon [the Word], is couched, perſonated, and ſignified, in Dixit, that [God SAID.]

The greateſt Objection againſt this is from verſ. 14. For if his being conſidered ὁ λόγος, the Word, had imported his being God-Man, how comes it after to be ſaid, That he was made Fleſh; for that argues he had been ſpoken of as Second Perſon only afore, the Man-hood not included?

Anſw. 1. That Word [Made] imports evidently, His having now actually aſſumed Man's Nature; and ſo in diſtinction from his having hitherto but ſuſtained that Perſon afore God, in Contract with God; which now in the fulneſs of Time, He, according to his Contract, did perform: and until this Performance de facto, he had born the Title of the Word, which he ſuſtained at the Creation, and from thence on ſtill until this Aſſumption. But now, though he bears it ſtill, yet ever after, John ſpeaks of him as Jeſus and Chriſt, &c. For now he was actually made Man in frail Fleſh.

The 2*d Anſw.* lies in that other Word, Made Fleſh, that is, a frail Man, taking a Tabernacle of Fleſh; not a glorious Body as was his due, as he was λόγος, the Word: and ſo it carries this with it, That whereas his due, according to that firſt deſigned Glory and Repute, which he had had with God before the World was, was to have had a glorified Nature, ſuch as now he hath in Heaven; inſtead of this the Evangeliſt expreſſeth it, That he took frail Fleſh, he took that Nature in Frailties at the firſt, and dwelt with us in a Tabernacle, (as the Word is) which was to be taken down. And though he had had a Glory with God anſwerable swerable to his Place of God-Man, as his Due; yet he never shewed it (says the Evangelist) to us, but once, and that was when he was transfigured; at which Time we saw his Glory, (saith the Apostle) in that Nature such as could be in none, but the only begotten Son of God: Which Peter also brings as an Evidence of his being the Son of God; as John likewise here doth, who was also an Eye-Witness of it. The Glory of Elias and Moses was not such, for they saw theirs at the same Time; but this was so transcendent as they could easily discern with Difference, this to be the Glory of God's only begotten, and so to differ from that of theirs; as the Glorious Lustre of the Sun, in comparison of lesser Stars. And though Christ always manifested not such a Glory (and indeed but once); yet he always shewed himself full of Grace and Truth, says he, in all his Converse with us. Full of Truth, namely, in those glorious Revelations of his Father made by him, vers. 18. And full of Grace, that is Holiness, even a Holiness transcending Adam's, or any Creature's. Neither was this Fulness a plenitudo Vasis sed Fontis, and a Fulness to be communicated to Men; For lo, we all have received of his Fulness, and Grace for Grace. He presents all the Apostles as coming from a Dole, with their Laps filled with Grace, so to encourage others to go to Christ. Afterwards in the 17*th* Verse, comparing him with Moses, he opposeth Grace and Truth, to the Law of Moses: And then by [Truth] there, he means, that Christ was not a Figure, as the Law was, but the Substance of all Types. So Heb. 10. 1. Where Verum non opponitur falso, sed figuræ: And he is there called Truth, because he made good the Covenant and Promises, which the Law did not. Thus Rom. 15. 8. He was a Minister of the Truth of God to confirm the Promises. And then he is full of Grace too, which the Law was not, That had neither Justifying nor Sanctifying Grace annexed, but Christ had both. Chap. 12.

And 3. When the Days of his Flesh are over, (as now in Heaven they are) then the same John seeing him in the Vision of a Glorious Conqueror, and coming and appearing at last to destroy all the Enemies of the Church: and bringing in the thousand Years. Then he appears as ὁ λόγος. Again, Rev. 19. and according to the Glory he had from everlasting in God's Designment and Repute. Rev. 19. 11, 12, 13. And I saw Heaven opened, and behold, a white Horse; and he that sate upon him was called Faithful and True, and in Righteousness he doth judg and make War. His Eyes were as a Flame of Fire, and on his Head were many Crowns; and he had a Name written that no Man knew but he himself: And he was clothed with a Vesture dipt in Blood: and his Name is called, The Word of God.

I shall now proceed in a brief Exposition of the following Verses of this first Chapter of John, unto vers. 14. as they relate unto the WORD; what follows in vers. 4. is to be understood in the same Coherence and Dependance with the other of Christ as God-Man.

Vers. 4. In him was Life, and the Life was the Light of Men.

The Evangelist descends from the Creation in General, unto the giving of Life, both of Reason and Holiness, unto Men, at their first Creation, whiles they were in Innocency.

First, [In him was Life.] He speaks not of that Essential Life in himself: For that which follows in the next Words, where he calls him the Life, is so to be understood. But when here he says [in him was Life,] the meaning is, he was a Fountain of Life to us, being first Life in himself. It is one Attribute of Christ's as he is God-Man, yea as he is Man taken up into that Union, to have Life independently in himself, even as God the Father hath; Joh. 5. 26. For as the Father hath Life in Himself; so hath he given to the Son to have Life in Himself; and therefore he is called the Life; namely, to himself first: and so in Him is Life, for us.

Secondly, [The Life was the Light of Men.

1. [The Light,] That is of Holineſs, or God's Image, which is called Light, in oppoſition to Darkneſs, which is Sin, (as verſ. 5.) The Life of Grace is ſo called; and in Scripture, Light is often put for Life, and Darkneſs for Death.

2. [Of Men,] That is of Men in their Primitive Eſtate of Innocency. For 1. He joins it with the Creation of all Things. 2. He uſeth the Word [Was,] as noting a State paſt. Now Adam's Holineſs was from Him; for he was made after God's Image. When Man was Created, all the Perſons of the Trinity acted their ſeveral Parts; and the Son acted the part of God-Man: and ſo the Father eying him as ſuch, and as him who was in that reſpect the Image of the God-head: He thereupon ſays, Let us make Man after our Image: Chriſt's Human Nature being the πρωτοτυπον, and Exampler. And ſo he breathed in that Breath of Life, and Holineſs, which he had at his firſt Creation.

Verſ. 5. And the Light ſhineth in Darkneſs, and the Darkneſs comprehended it not.

When that Light of Holineſs in Man was extinct, and Man by the Fall became Darkneſs, that is, full of Sin; then all that Light Moral, or the Light of Conſcience in Heathens, (which is that Truth ſpoken of, Rom. 1. 18.) and the Light of the Law, (which the Jews had) to convince them of their Darkneſs, all this Light that ſhined in this Darkneſs, was from Chriſt: It ariſeth not from any Sparks of the Old Light which was before the Fall, and now left in Man's Nature, but all Light being extinct, this is put in by Chriſt as the Word and Mediator. And therefore, becauſe he ſpeaks of Man's preſent Condition, he ſaith in the preſent [Shineth,] and in that reſpect Chriſt is ſaid, verſ. 9. to be That Light, which enlightneth every Man coming into the World. That Phraſe [coming into the World,] argues that he ſpeaks of what is infuſed by Chriſt from the Birth: For the Jews call Man as born into this World, Veniens in Mundum. And he ſays, [every one,] to ſhew that he excepts no Man. So Chriſt Mat. 18.37. uſeth the Phraſe; [For this Cauſe was I born, and came into the World.] So that it is all one as to be born; and therefore he ſpeaks of a Natural Light from our Birth, which is all from Chriſt: he pityed Man's Nature ſo corrupted, and put into it all the Light and Comfort which Men now have. So as, not only all the Light of Holineſs, which Adam in Innocency at firſt had, was from him conſidered as God-Man: but all the Light ſince the Fall, which the wiſe Heathens or Jews had, was from him, conſidered as the Lamb ſlain. They all did light their Torches at this Sun, and Fountain of Light. Yea, not only all Natural Light in Men fallen, but all the Light of Grace, and Holineſs, that hath ſhone in the Hearts, Lives, and Gifts, of the beſt of Men ſanctified, it was all borrowed from hence. To this purpoſe he inſtanceth in John the Baptiſt, for all the reſt.

Verſ. 6, 7. There was a Man ſent from God, whoſe Name was John; The ſame came for a Witneſs, to bear Witneſs of the Light, that all Men through him might believe.

He was the moſt known and univerſally acknowledged holy Man in thoſe Days and Times, whom all the Jews eſteemed as a burning and ſhining Light, Joh. 5.35. Yet it is ſaid of him, that He was not that Light, but was ſent only to bear witneſs of that Light, verſ. 8. John was but a particular Light ſhining in Judea, and in that Age only; as a Lanthorn hung out in ſome Street: He was but as the Morning-Star to this Sun. But Chriſt was, and is an Univerſal Light (as is the Sun) in all Ages, and in all Places, and to all Saints. Yea, as John was not that Light; ſo if all that Grace, and Light, that ever was in all Saints, were gathered into one, yet all would not make that Light; who enlightned John and all Mankind univerſally, as the Sun doth the Stars above, and Terreſtrial Bodies below.

Verſ.

Verſ. 9. That was the true Light, which lighteth every Man that cometh into the World. Chap. 12.

And ſo he is called the true Light, that is, which is naturally, and of Himſelf ſuch, (ἀυτὸ φῶς, as Plato called him,) not ſhining with a borrowed Light, as John, and all elſe do, and who in that reſpect are not true Lights; for Truth is oppoſed to what is obtained aliunde, and which is not natural. As you call that falſe Hair which is not, and that true Hair which is ones own. So Chriſt is called the true Son, 1 Joh. 5. 22. that is, the Natural, we being but Adopted. And all this is what Chriſt did, and 'twas before his Incarnation.

Now having proceeded thus far in this Chapter, as proper to the Subject I have in Hand; I will briefly go over the reſt of the Verſes, from verſ. 10. to verſ. 15. Wherein he ſhews his coming into the World himſelf, as before he had ſhewn, how he had done all in the World before he came into it. And therein, Firſt, He deſcribes the manner of his coming: As,

1. How he was in the World as one unknown. Verſ. 10. He was in the World, and the World was made by him, and the World knew him not. Like Ulyſſes, who came as a Beggar diſguiſed to his own Houſe: So obſcure was Chriſt's coming into the World.

2. He [was,] implying that he is now gone out of the World again; as having (as it were) ſecretly paſt through it.

Secondly, He ſets out the Entertainment of him in this World. And herein,

1. He tells what bad Entertainment the moſt afforded him, with the Aggravation of this their Sin.

2. The good Entertainment that ſome gave him: To illuſtrate all which, he covertly compares the World unto a Houſe wherein Men are the In-dwellers, but Chriſt the Owner of it, and all Things in it (as v. 11.) and that by a double Title.

1. Of Creation, Verſ. 10. The World was made by him.

2. Of Purchaſe, inſinuated Verſ. 11. He came unto his own, and his own received him not.

Now when he came into this his Houſe, and was in it, or converſed in it (as verſ. 10.) His Entertainment was,

1. That ſome did not ſo much as know him, v. 10.

2. Others, tho they knew him, yet received him not, as v. 11. They ſhut him out of Doors, not receiving him into their Hearts, which the Evangeliſt ſets down as an Aggravation of the Sin of Unbelief; his Scope being to perſuade to, and work Faith, or receiving of Chriſt into Mens Hearts, by ſhewing from what an one Chriſt is and was to us, what an inhumane Sin Unbelief is, both againſt the Law of Creation, and Bonds of Nature, and alſo of Grace. It is to refuſe him whoſe own we are, as having made the World and us at firſt, and when we were fallen, bought us, and upheld us. So as the very Benefit of Creation, and the Propriety that Chriſt hath in us, as a Lord of us, and of all we have, doth oblige us to believe in him, and to own him at leaſt, (even the Ox knows his Owner) otherwiſe it becomes an Aggravation of our Sin, as ſhutting Chriſt out of his own; for the Word [receiving] verſ. 11. (being put for believing) is all one with owning him as a Lord and Saviour; as a King is ſaid to be received in his own Dominions, when he is ſubmitted to, and acknowledged, and owned for their King. I know ſome interpret the World, to be all Mankind; and his own, (mentioned, verſ. 11.) to be the Jews; and his being in the World, to be in reſpect of the Light he gave of himſelf to the Gentiles. But for this latter, ſure by his making the World, the Gentiles could not know him, tho the Godhead they might; and that natural Light which He gave, was only of the Godhead, not of his Perſon, as God-Man, nor yet of the Myſtery of the Trinity, there being no Footſteps of it in the Creation. And I take it, his own is meant alſo and as well of the World, as made and purchaſed by him, as of the Jews, his own Country-Men: Therefore he ſays, [τὰ ἴδια,] as ſpeaking of proper Goods, not Kinſmen, his own, that is, his Houſhold-Goods and Servants.

Secondly; Then follows the Entertainment of him by the Good, and the Privilege which he gave them. Even as great Perſons, entertained well, uſe to beſtow Rewards; and as a King uſually dubbs thoſe Knights, or creates them Earls or Barons, who have given him Royal Entertainment: So did Chriſt to thoſe who received him. By which the Evangeliſt does further ſet out Chriſt, ſhewing what he is to his Elect; as before, he ſhewed what Chriſt is, and was to all the World. The Benefit given is Adoption to be Sons of God, verſ. 12. But as many as received him, to them gave he Power to become the Sons of God, even to them that believe on his Name: which he endeareth as the higheſt Favour that could be: So 1 Joh. 3. 1. Behold, what manner of Love the Father hath beſtowed on us, that we ſhould be called the Sons of God. Chriſt he was born the Son, verſ. 14. but to Us it is given [to them he gave, &c.] And in being Sons, we become Heirs, and Co-heirs with himſelf of the World which he made, and of all that is called his: So Rom. 8. 17. And if Children, then Heirs; Heirs of God, and Joint-Heirs with Chriſt: if ſo be that we ſuffer with him, that we may be alſo glorified together. He gave them [ἐξουσίαν] that is, both the Dignity and the Power to become the Sons of God. So it is taken for Power, *Col.*1.16. Principalities and Powers: And it is alſo put for Dignity. Thus Rom. 13. 1. becauſe a Magiſtrates Place of Power hath Honour likewiſe annexed to it, therefore the Word is put for Honour. And ſo, becauſe this Honour of being Sons of God, hath Power annexed to it, even over all Creatures; (as they are Heirs, and Co-heirs with Chriſt, and ſo Kings of the World) therefore he rightly calls it ἐξουσία, to import both, Power and Dignity: and both contained in that Priviledg of Son-ſhip. Only he ſhews by what means Chriſt doth convey this to them; which is by their [being Born not of Blood.] Verſ. 13. Which were born, not of Blood, nor of the Will of the Fleſh, nor of the Will of Man, but of God. (Say not you have Abraham to your Father); this Dignity goes not by Greatneſs of Birth: [Nor of the Will of the Fleſh.] Not of a Man's own Will, It is not to him that willeth, [Nor of the Will of Man;] that is, of other Men: Holy Men cannot beget their Children Good, or make them ſuch; the meaning is, that no Friend, no Means could confer this Priviledg, but only Chriſt.

CHAP. XIII.

How Christ God-Man is subservient to God in all the Works of his Providence. He upholds, and supports all Things. He governs the World, and rules all Affairs in it. After his Government is expir'd, at the end of the World he will judge all Creatures, both Angels, and Men.

Col. 1. 17.

He is before all Things, and by him all Things consist.

THus we have seen the subserviency of Christ as God-Man, to the Work of Creation, and the highest Ends thereof, the Manifestation, and the Communication of the God-head the highest way. The next thing to be considered by us, is his serving God in the Works of his Providence, the upholding, governing this World, whilst it stands, and his Judging it at the last; unto all these Ends also doth Christ God-Man subserve.

First, For the upholding all Things that is evident in this Text of Col. 1. 17. By him do all Things consist; He is the Corner-Stone that keeps the Building and all the parts of it together, Heb. 1. 2,3. it is said, He upholds all Things by the Word of his Power, and it is spoken of him not simply considered as Second Person, but as God-Man, for so he is Heir appointed, not as Second Person, but so Heir naturally without a Decree, and that as such he should uphold all Things by the Word of his Power, is proper to him; and therefore it refers to it, for to the Heir it belongs to have a care of, and to see to his Inheritance, that it fall not into Ruine, and Decay. God, as it were, leaves it to him, seeing he hath given it him for his Inheritance, to keep it up in repair at his own proper Costs and Charges. And thus he upheld it virtually in the State of Innocency, for Joh. 1. 4. he is called That Light that then was the Life of Man, even afore Man fell into Sin and Darkness, as well as after, as vers. 5. (as God made and created the World then upon the virtual Supposition of his coming into the World, though to a further End also) for the World was then upheld by virtue thereof, it was the Hoop held all together, God should not have cared else for any Creature; for to me those imperfect pieces of his Workmanship are alone not worthy enough of his Power and Wisdom, if this had not been to come, which he had purposed and decreed, as well as the making of the World. And since Man fell it is granted by all, that it is by virtue of his Redemption to come, that the World stood and was kept from falling about Adam's Ears: Christ took the shattered Condition of the World, as David did, and upheld the Pillars of it, and, as a Lord, promised to buy it, and did so, 2 Pet. 2. 1. because he had Elect to be brought forth in their Successions out of it; and therefore vouchsafed all those Mercies which wicked Men enjoy, and payed God a Price for his Patience towards them; he had this into the Bargain of his Redemption of his Church, God else in justice would have destroyed all.

Secondly,

BOOK III

Seconly, Whilſt the World ſtands, he governs it, eaſeth God of that Burthen, and is his Prorex for him: All Judgment is committed to the Son, Joh. 5. 22. For the Father judgeth no Man; but hath committed all Judgment unto the Son: And the Government is upon his Shoulders, Iſa. 9. 6. For unto us a Child is born, unto us a Son is given, and the Government ſhall be upon his Shoulders: and his Name ſhall be called, Wonderful, Counſellor, The Mighty God, the Everlaſting Father, the Prince of Peace. He entred upon the Kingdom when Man fell, for by virtue of the Covenant of Works given by the Father, at the Creation, it muſt have been deſtroyed; but he undertook it, to order things ſo, that a greater Revenew of Glory ſhould in the end ariſe to God, out of the Confuſions and Sins of Men in the World, and in executions of Puniſhments, and by Providences meeting with Men according to their own Ways, then ſhould have riſen to God out of the State of Innocency in a direct way; and what infinite Wiſdom, Power, Providence, Juſtice, Patience, &c. even all ſorts of glorious Perfections doth he ſhew forth in this Adminiſtration, and Ordering Things, and the Affairs of this ſinful World. This Lord raigneth, though the Earth be never ſo unquiet, as the Pſalmiſt ſpeaks, Pſal. 99. 1. Rev. 5. 2. there is a Proclamation made, who would take that Book out of the Hand of him that ſate upon the Throne, and that Book is a Commiſſion to execute the Things decreed and written therein, and the taking of it was an undertaking ſo to do; and Chriſt the Lamb having ſeven Horns of Power, and ſeven Eyes of Providence, ſent out into all the Earth, by which he both views and governs all, he undertook it, and is God's King and the Executioner of all God's Decrees.

And then, Thirdly, When he hath thus governed the World with a greater Advantage unto God, then this Man Chriſt Jeſus will judg it alſo at the laſt, and give all Men their Accounts, Acts 17. 31. He hath appointed a Day in the which he will judg the World, by that Man whom he hath ordained. The Decree or Ordaining Chriſt God-Man ſerves for this alſo; the Father, Joh. 5. 22. is ſaid to judg no Man, that is, viſibly, ſub perſona judicis, but hath committed all to this Man Chriſt Jeſus, who at preſent is ready, ſays the Apoſtle Peter, to judg the quick and the dead, having all the Accounts of the World afore him, 1 Pet. 4. 5. God would not employ a meer Creature in this Work, it was too great an Honour; and yet it was meet it ſhould be done viſibly and audibly, and to the Satisfaction of all Men's Conſciences, both concerning themſelves, and others. God would have a Perſon in the Trinity, manifeſt in a Creature like unto us, to do it, armed with Power and Authority, becauſe he is God, that every Knee ſhall bow afore him, both of Things in Heaven and Earth, and under the Earth (which to a meer Creature had been too much;) and yet a Man, that ſhould deal with Creatures in judging them in their own way, in a rational and audible way convince them, and viſibly ſentence them, ſo as they ſhould be able to ſee and hear their Judg as Man, and yet fear and dread him as being God. And this is an high and great Service, which Chriſt as Man ſhall do for God, for a Man in a vocal manner to be able to clear the Accounts of the World, which, how entangled are they! and punctually to give every Man his due in Righteouſneſs. A Man that ſhall be able to convince all God's Enemies of all their hard Speeches they have ſpoken againſt him, as Enoch the ſeventh from Adam propheſied, able to give a full and ſatisfactory account of all God's Ways and Proceedings, which Men cavel at, to juſtify God's Decrees, which Men quarrel with, and think much at, and his Children whom Men deſpiſe and bear down: One able to bring to Light the Secrets of all Hearts, ſo as all Men ſhall judg of every Man, 1 Cor. 4. 5. Therefore judg nothing before the Time, until the Lord come, who both will bring to Light the hidden Things of Darkneſs, and will make manifeſt the Counſels of the Hearts: and then ſhall every Man have Praiſe of God. One able to ſearch the deep Things of God, and bring forth his Counſels, (for the Books are then opened, Rev. 20. 12.) and lay open the Depths of his Wiſdom, in ſuffering this and that to fall out; this Man to be puniſh'd, and another, a greater Sinner than he, to eſcape; this Kingdom to be ruin'd, and another, as ſinful, to flouriſh; and to make that glorious Comment upon the obſcure Text of this World's Providence, which which we understand not; and to do this out of the Original Draught and Counsel held in Heaven, why this or that was done or not done so or so, or not so, and to do this openly and vocally as a Man; and when he hath sent all Men convinced, non-pluss't, speechless, (as the Word is in the Parable) confounded to Hell, to give up his Kingdom, and himself visibly be subject to God his Father: 'Tis a Mighty Service this. Chap. 13.

But yet, Lastly, After all this, He is the Founder of that other World into which he brings his Children, given him by God, which is his Inheritance for himself and them, and their Happiness is expresst by this, To be ever with the Lord. And Joh. 17. 24. Christ in his last Prayer, says, Father, I will they be where I am, and see my Glory; and till then that Personal Fulness (of which I spake at first) that is in God-Man, Christ Jesus, is reserved by God, as a subject of that Depth and Glory, to take up, together with his own Perfections, the Thoughts of Men and Angels for ever. Our Happiness will lye in seeing God and Christ as he is; (for unto both doth that Speech refer, 1 Joh. 3. 2. Beloved, now are we the Sons of God, and it doth not yet appear what we shall be: but we know, that when he shall appear, we shall be like him; for we shall see him as he is.) And if the sight of Christ, God-Man, be not the highest means of the Happiness of the Saints, (because the Scripture mentions also God his being All in All;) Yet I am sure it is a main part of it: Rev. 21. 23. And the City had no need of the Sun, neither of the Moon to shine in it: for the Glory of God did lighten it, and the Lamb is the Light thereof. The Glory of God and the Lamb are the Light of it. And so Stephen saw the Glory of God, and Christ at God's right Hand, Acts 7. 56. So that when these two great Volumns, this of his Word, and that of his World, which now in this Life are put into our Hands, to read the Characters of his Glory in by Faith, when both these shall be folded up and clean laid aside, then will the Person of Christ, God-Man, as the Glory of the God-head, shining in, and communicating it self to us, through that Human Nature the God-head dwells in, be set forth to us, to entertain us for ever with the sight of the Glory of God in the Face of Christ; and all our present Thoughts and Knowledg we have by Faith, will become vain and be made unprofitable and vanish, 1 Cor. 13. 8, 9. Charity never faileth: but whether there be Prophecies, they shall fail; whether there be Tongues, they shall cease; whether there be Knowledg, it shall vanish away. For we know in part, and we prophesy in part. And that Face will make an Heaven to us, when Redemption shall be forgotten through the present Glory viewed and possessed, and Sins remembred no more, but the Glory of God, and the Personal Glory of the Lamb, shall be our Light and Happiness for ever.

Use. 1. Let us admire Christ that thus serves to all, not our Ends only, to save us, but which is more, to all God's Ends and Purposes, and to accomplish all the Desires of his own Heart; what an infinite Perfection must this needs be? Nature and Art (says the Philosopher) makes but one Instrument to serve in a proper and direct way, but for one purpose; but this is a Person whom God hath set forth for all Ends and Purposes whatsoever. If you should see an Instrument in Musick serve at once to supply the Use, and afford the Musick of all Instruments; or a Mathematical Instrument so made, as all Conclusions in all Arts and Sciences might be demonstrated on it, and it to serve for all uses, in Arithmetick to cast exact Accounts, in Geometry to measure all Quantities, in Geography, Astronomy to give you the exact Proportion of all the Earth, and Stars in Heaven, how would you wonder and admire at it! Oh wonder then at the Person of Jesus Christ; Great is the Mystery of Godliness, God manifest in the Flesh, 1 Tim. 3. 16.

Use. 2. If Christ, that is our Mediator, is so useful unto God in all his other Businesses, and serves all his other Ends as well as this: This may then help our Faith, by persuading us, that God cannot but be infinitely well pleased with the saving of Sinners by him, and that believe on him (he being as good, if not better at that, than all those Purposes forementioned): for the Person (in whom we are graciously accepted) being pleasing to God so many ways besides this, must must needs move him the rather to accept his Work in this, and us for it. As for Inſtance, If a King willing and inclined to pardon a Traitor, if beſides a Work of Mercy done, it could be demonſtrated that the Means whereby that is to be done, would bring in a Mighty profit to the King, ten thouſand Talents of Silver; as in another caſe Haman ſaid to Ahaſuerus, Eſter 3. 8. Or as if when David's Heart was of it ſelf ſet to pardon Abſolom, only he would do it with Honour; if Joab (the Projector of his Reconciliation) could have propounded a Project, not only to have fetc'd Abſolom in again, and reconciled him to David upon the King's own Terms; but ſo as withal, he ſhould have all his other State-Ends compaſſed whatever he could deſire, as to ſhew forth his Majeſty, Power, Greatneſs, gratify all his Subjects, overcome his Enemies, hereby have his Kingdom governed in Peace and Righteouſneſs, and have his Enemies ſubdued, overcome, and all his Revenues encreaſed; would not all the World ſay, that ſurely, the propounding this would mightily help forward the obtaining Abſolom's Pardon and Reconciliation? And ſurely ſo 'tis here, the Work of Reconciliation in Chriſt's Hands (who ſerves God in all theſe and many Ways more) muſt needs proſper (as Iſaiah ſays) and ſpeed: And therefore, in the firſt of John, and in the firſt of the Hebrews, and in this Chapter, Coloſſ. 1. all his uſefulneſs to other Ends, all his fulneſs to other Purpoſes, is prefaced and mentioned firſt, and then purging our Sins away by his Blood, and making Peace by the Blood of his Croſs are ſpoken of all thoſe other conducing unto this. And therefore, ſome Schoolmen, upon the conſideration of theſe Things, give this Cenſure of it, Tanto aliquis modus aptior eſt ad conſequendum aliquem finem quanto per ipſum plura comparantur.

Uſe. 3. It may invite us to come to him, as beſides the work of Reconciliation, God had the Accompliſhment of many other Ends in him, ſo may we: Beſides pardon of Sin, and Peace with God, we may have all other overplus Ends acquired and accompliſhed. The Angels who are in Favour with God already, and ſtand not in any need that way, what would they give to have that near Relation to him which we have? You may come to him for Pardon firſt, but when you are come his Perſon will further take you. Fulneſs much invites, it is the aim of all our Deſires to have a fulneſs of Riches, of Honours, of Pleaſures, a πλεονεξία, as the Apoſtle calls it, Eph. 4. 19. that is, a having ones Fill, ſo the Word which is tranſlated Greedineſs ſignifies. Now in Chriſt, and in Chriſt only it is to be had, in whom is Fulneſs, and all Fulneſs, Fulneſs for parts, of all ſorts, and All Fulneſs for Degrees; which is never ſpent, for it dwells in him; Fulneſs for evermore, as the Pſalmiſt ſpeaks: Open thy Mouth wide, ſtretch thy Deſires to the utmoſt compaſs, as Pſal. 81. 10. may Chriſt ſay, and I will fill it. The Mind of Man is nothing but emptineſs of it ſelf, it is as the Stomack is, a Vacuity and Want, ſharpened with Deſire and Hunger; (Empty Man, as Job calls him, Job 11.12.) unto which God hath fitted all Things, as ſuitable to its Deſires one way or other, there is no Creature but it may take ſome pleaſure in: But alas! the Creatures are Empty too, Vanity, that is, Emptineſs, as Solomon calls them, Huſks (as in the Parable) without a Kernel, and Adam made them more vain and empty, Rom. 8.20. Subjected them to Vanity: and at beſt they ſerve but for ſome one particular Want and End, and not all Ends and Purpoſes; Riches ſerve againſt Poverty, Honour againſt Shame, but Chriſt he ſerves to all End and Purpoſes. God would have nothing full but Chriſt, that our Souls might reſt in nothing elſe, and have him our Center. It pleaſed him that all Fulneſs ſhould dwell in him, and he hath fitted him to our Wants; all we want he hath, and all he hath we want. And his Fulneſs is not ordained ſimply to dwell in him, but to be communicated, as the Sun's Fulneſs of Light, which though it reſides in the Body of the Sun, and it carries it with it whither it goes, and leaves nothing but Darkneſs behind it, yet where it comes it is communicative, it diffuſeth all its Light, and Heat, and Influence, and ſo doth Chriſt. Therefore where, all Fulneſs is ſaid to dwell in his Perſon, ſo elſewhere it is ſaid, He filleth all in all, as Eph. 1. ult. as Adam emptied all, ſo He fills all, and is never diminiſhed; His Fulneſs it is not plenitudo vaſis but fontis, which is always full: Not as the Fulneſs of the Sea, which might be emptied, but as the Fulneſs of the Sun, or of Fire, which multiplies it ſelf, and loſeth nothing it ſelf neither.

Use. 4. If Christ be thus full, then let those that love him fully, delight in him, and to that end contemplate all his Fulness. How will one that is in love with another, think over and over again all the Perfections in them they love, to confirm their Choice? So should we: And not only so, but take our full Delight and Contentment in him. And that Christ serves to all Ends else, besides those of our own, of being saved by him, will, if meditated upon, exceedingly encrease our Joys and Delights in him. A Wife that had a Husband eminent in all Perfections, which Perfections yet she had no great skill in, yet the thought of them would make her love him when once he is hers; when he is not only a good Husband unto her, but also a good Commonwealths Man, of eminent place in his Country, an excellent Souldier, Horseman, &c. Skill'd in all Learning, &c. these because they commend and endear her Husband unto others (though she hath not the Benefit of them directly) do yet endear him unto her the more, that all these are in her Husband: So this should do Christ to us.

Use. 5. See the love of Christ to us, that having all Fulness in him, was willing to empty himself for us. We were not only empty but bankrupt to God, and to redeem us and fill us again, he was fain to empty himself; it is the Apostle's Phrase, Phil. 2. 7. the Word we translate Of no Reputation, is in the Original, He emptied himself, that is, left himself nothing of all his Fulness: So Dan. 9. 26. Messiah shall be cut off, and shall have nothing, so it is in the Hebrew, as well as that which is translated Not for himself, and so varied in the Margent of your Bibles. He that had all that Fulness, and fills all in all, had nothing left, no Comfort in God or any Creature. If you should see the Sea ebb into some other World, and see not a drop of Water left, how would you stand astonish'd at it? How much more at Christ? He might say as Naomi said, Ruth. 1. 20, 21. The Lord hath dealt bitterly with me: I came from Heaven full, but he brought me to Earth empty, emptied of all. For us to leave and abate any thing of our Fulness, how loth are we! To leave a full Land, a full Diet, a full Table, a full House, fully furnish'd, a full Condition, and lower our Sail, though for Christ: Oh but Christ did, he left Heaven and all the Fulness of it, and removed to Earth, where is nothing but Vanity; and he who was Lord of Heaven and Earth, for our Sakes became poor, and left himself not worth a Foot of Land, not a House to hide his Head in. By what a small abatement is to our Spirits, let us think what so infinite a Debasement, an emptying was to him.

Use. 6. See his Love yet further, that though he be in himself thus full, yet that his Love is such as he thinks himself not full or perfect without us, but reckons himself defective till he have us knit to him, and about him. As Christ said to him that had kept all from his Youth, One Thing is wanting: so I may say of Christ, that still one Thing is wanting. Why, what can he want that hath all Fulness? Even any one of his Members, and he would not think himself compleatly happy without them, for Eph. 1. ult. though he be he that filleth all in all, yet the Church is his Fulness; Which is his Body, the Fulness of him which filleth all in all. His Glory would not content him in Heaven, if he should want any of our Company there. Joh. 17. 24. He prays therefore, that they may be with him where he is, to behold his Glory; Father, I will that they also whom thou hast given me, be with me where I am; that they may behold my Glory which thou hast given me: for thou lovedst me before the Foundation of the World. As Haman said, when he reckoned up all his Riches, and Honours, and Glory, his Places and Favour at Court; what good will all these do me, says he, so long as Mordecai contemns me? So Christ in his Heart says, If I have not all mine Enemies down, my Children about me, his whole Tale and Number, if but a Benjamin or a Joseph were wanting, Heaven would be less to him. The first Adam when he had all Creatures about him, needed a Companion of all his Delights; and so Kings that have full Pleasures, yet love to have Consortes Imperii: So doth Christ, and till then reckons himself imperfect; and therefore, Heb. 10. 13. he is said to Expect, From henceforth expecting till his Enemies be made his Footstool: Expectation argues Defect. Now he had been alone in Heaven, if he had not died, John 12. 24. the Corn abides alone if it dye not; Verily, Verily, I ſay unto you, Except a Corn of Wheat fall into the Ground, and die, it abideth alone; but if it die, it bringeth forth much Fruit.

Uſe. 7. Let us applaud our own Happineſs in ſuch an Huſband, and keep to him alone, and not dote upon any Vanity. Why? Becauſe, as the Apoſtle argues againſt vain Learning, Philoſophy, &c. Col. 2. 8, 9, 10. Beware leſt any Man ſpoil you through Philoſophy and vain Deceit, after the Tradition of Men, after the Rudiments of the World, and not after Chriſt: For in him dwelleth all the Fulneſs of the Godhead bodily. And ye are compleat in him, which is the Head of all Principality and Power. That all Fulneſs being in him, in him ye are compleat, you need no other Learning, no other Wiſdom; for verſ. 3. In him are hid all the Treaſures of Wiſdom and Knowledg, in compariſon of which all the Wiſdom of the World comes to naught. Like a Kingdom that hath all Commodities (as China:) Or a great Man that hath all about him of his own: So have you in Chriſt, you need go out to nothing for any thing. You go to ſeek for Light with a Candle, when you have the Sun in your Hand; whilſt having Chriſt you ſeek to be happy in any thing elſe: You need borrow nothing, nor be beholden to any Creature, your Huſband hath all Fulneſs. We needed not the Law to direct us, if we knew his Story, and could ſpell out all the Paſſages of his Life, by whom the Law was tranſcendently fulfilled in Inſtances of a higher kind; if the Lives of all the Saints, of Paul, Abraham, &c. and all the Law and Bible were burnt, all might be renewed in his Story, if that were enough known; they only ſerve to us to help us to underſtand him; we needed no other Motives than what may be drawn from him, and his Love, if our Hearts were holy enough and conformed to him. In a Word, if Chriſt ſerve fully to all God's Ends, (who hath vaſter Plots than we) and is adequate to them, then much more to all ours, who have but low Contrivements. Let us therefore love him, and ſerve him, and make him our End, and think our ſelves compleat in him.

THat the Creatures are not God, but the Works of his Power: They were not Coeternal with God. The infinite distance between him and them. pag. 1

Chap. 1. The Creatures are not God. The Absurdities of those ranting Opinions which assert it, expos'd. ib.

Chap. 2. The Creatures were not from Eternity existing in God. 5

Chap. 3. The infinite distance between God and the Creatures, in respect that he is the Maker and Preserver of them: In that also he is Eternal, & so before they had being he dwelt alone in himself, and possessed all things in himself. He is the high and lofty One, and is so supreamly excellent, as it transcends all other: His Name is Holy, and so is above the Creatures, and separated from them. The true name of Being is proper only to God; the Creatures are but the Shadows and Appearances of Being. 8

BOOK II.

OF the first estate of Men and Angels by their Creation. What were the Laws and Rights of Creation; and what was equitably due between the Creator and his Creature. Of the state of the first Man Adam in Innocence, and what were his Circumstances in that his Primitive Condition. 19

Chap. 1. What was the Law of Creation on God's part: It was but what became and was worthy of the great Creator to do all for his Creatures that such a Religion required. This consisted in two things: 1. To endow them with the Image of Holiness to qualifie them to attain their designed end, which was to know, love and enjoy him. 2. To continue his goodness and favour to them, as long as they continued in their duty and obedience. The Condition of both Angels and Men, by the Law of their Creation, common and equal, for substance. ibid.

Chap. 2. The mutability of that first estate. By its constitution, and their own weakness, both Angels and Men were liable to fall from it. God was not at all obliged as Creator, to preserve his Creatures in that first condition effectually by his Grace. The causes of their mutability. To be changeable is the nature of a Creature, with difference from God, who only is Immutable. That the Creature being made out of Nothing, tends to a Deficiency. 15

Chap. 3. Of the first state men run through, viz. that of Innocency. A brief draught of all those several States or Conditions, through which God leadeth the Elect of Mankind. Together with a comparison of those States together. 31

Chap. 4. Containing a short view of the happiness of Adam's Condition, 37

Ch. 5. The Image of God in Adam, how it was natural, how explain'd, & how faith is supernatural. That knowledg of God natural, which is due and fit for a reasonable Creature to have, and which he acquires by the exercise of his Rational Faculties. That knowledg supernatural which goes beyond what Man, by the right of his Creation was to have. Adam's knowledge of God was in a natural way, though it ſanctified him, and was joyned with Holineſs. 40

Chap.6. That the Covenant of Works, the Juſtification of Adam by that Covenant, and the Reward of his Obedience, were all Natural. And that by Covenant he ſhould not have gone to Heaven. 45

Chap. 7. Whether Adam knew God by the Light of Faith and Supernatural Revelation, ſuperadded to the Light of Reaſon. His Faith was natural, both in its motives and grounds, being an aſſent to God's Teſtimony as true, whoſe veracity he knew by the Light of Nature. Nor did his Faith diſcover to him things that were above his then preſent natural ſtate. This proved by ſeveral Arguments. Our way of knowing God by Faith is ſupernatural, and in what reſpect it is ſo. 50

Chap. 8. How Adam, and his ſtate, according to the Law of the firſt Creation, was intended by God as a Type of one, who was to be a ſecond Adam, Jeſus Chriſt, and the Founder of a Supernatural Condition. Some things premis'd of the nature, and various diviſion of a Type. Wherein Adam was a Type of Chriſt: As he was in his ſtate of Innocency a publick Perſon and the Head of Mankind, and ſo derived to his Poſterity the Imputation of his Diſobedience; ſo he was a Type of Chriſt, as preordained before the World was, and without conſideration of the Fall, to be the Root and Head of the Elect, and to convey to them the Supernatural benefits of Grace. 65

Chap. 9. The Explication of the words of the Text: In what Particulars they make a Compariſon of Chriſt the Type, and Adam the Antitype. In their Perſons, as Adam had in him a Principle of natural Life, ſo Chriſt has of ſpiritual. As publick Perſons, and Heads of Mankind, as Adam conveys his natural Life, ſo Chriſt his ſpiritual. 'Tis proved out of the ſame Text, That Adam before his Fall, was thus intended as a Prophetick Type of Chriſt to come, as the Head of the Elect, who as a publick Perſon, ſhould advance them to the like glorious Condition as himſelf had in Heaven. The Glory of this Accompliſhment was apponted for him, without conſideration of the Fall. That interpoſing, he came and ſuffered, and died, to remove the Obſtacles that the Fall had laid in the way of the Execution of the Work firſt deſigned. 71

Chap.10. A more particular compariſon between Adam and Jeſus Chriſt in their Perſons: The Formation of Adam's Body by God's immediate Hand, typifies the Aſſumption of the Human Nature by the Son of God, whoſe Body was formed immediately by the Holy Ghoſt. The Union of Soul and Body in Adam, typifies the Hypoſtatical Union. In what there is an Agreement in the Compariſon between them; wherein a Diſparity. What was the ſtate of Adam's Body: It comprized the Perfections of all Creatures: It was ſuited to take in all the Pleaſures and Comforts which they could afford: It had a natural beauty in it: It was guarded from Injuries, and was immortal; yet in its Original 'twas but earth. It depended on the Creatures for its Subſiſtence, and was ſubject to many Alterations. To what a higher degree of Glory, the Divine Nature of Chriſt, united to the Humane, rais'd the Body of Chriſt, as he is One with God, and the Lord from Heaven. It was neceſſary that the Glory of his Humane Nature ſhould excel all Creatures, even the Angels themſelves. The glory of his Body was illuſtrated by his Transfiguration on the Mount; and yet that fell ſhort of the Glory it has now in Heaven. 86

Chap. 11. What a more glorious Condition then was Adam's in Innocence, Chriſt will raiſe us up unto, proved in the loweſt Inſtance of it, viz. the glory our Bodies ſhall have at the Reſurrection. Wherein that glory ſhall conſiſt. A Compariſon between that glory our Bodies ſhall then poſſeſs, and what Adam's had in Paradiſe: And in what reſpect ours ſhall far excel his. 103

——One God, of whom are all things.

CHAP. I.

The Creatures are not God. The Absurdities of those Ranting Opinions which assert it, Expos'd.

THERE hath risen up from out of the bottomless Pit, in this Age, a prodigious Opinion, which hath been vented and maintained with more daring Impudence than Men of themselves could have assumed, had not the Devil inspired and blown up their Fancies thereunto; viz. That all things (which God hath made) are indeed but pieces and parcels of God himself: And that, that which is called by the Creation, is but a Turquoiſing of God, or God Tranſlated, as you do a great and large whole Cloth, when you cut it forth into Garments of ſeveral faſhions, as ſome of them have ſpoken; whereas it is the Creatures, that are the Garment that waxeth old, Heb. 1. But God is without ſo much as a Shadow of turning: if in his love to us, (whereof that place ſpeaks) much more in his Eſſence, which is the ground of the Unchangableneſs of his love. They ſay, the viſible appearance is indeed, as of Creatures, but really, materially, and ſubſtantially, they are all but God; ſo as I may rightly expreſs this Opinion of theirs; They would make a Tranſubſtantiation of the Great God, ſuch as the Papiſts, (though they in a contrary way to this) make a Tranſubſtantiated Chriſt. For, what ſay they, but that the Creatures, or Elements of Bread, and Wine, are changed into the ſubſtance of the Body and Blood of Chriſt ſubſtantially, yea, into Chriſt himſel, Soul, and Body preſent, and lying vailed under the appearance of Bread, and Wine. But theſe men would have the Divine Eſſence of God Tranſubſtantiated into the outward appearance of ſeveral ſhapes of Creatures, the ſubſtance of which is God; lying as they would have it, hidden under that outward viſibility. Thus they curſedly crumble the indiviſible ſimple Nature of God, into little fragments, and parcels; whereas that infinite vaſt diſtance between him and us, is, That we are the Clay, and he the Potter. They would have God to turn part of himſelf into Clay, and become that Clay; and then the reſt of himſelf, to become the Potter over himſelf, and to Metamorphoſe himſelf into ſhapes, as the Heathens did their Gods: And to pleaſe himſelf in making himſelf (as Children do their clay) into clay Pies, or the ſhapes of Dogs, or Lambs, and the like, as their fancies lead them: And yet forſooth, they would ſeem to allow him the main Bulk of his God-head, to live abſtracted from the Creatures, and ſeparate from their Creature-exiſtence, and appearance. For I do not find, that they affirm the whole of God, to be no other than what is ſhrowded under the appearance of the Creature, and adequate to it: Yet they do make up ſome part of him, diſperſed into Creature appearance, (as hath been ſaid) and ſo as both make up together but one God, partly viſible, and partly inviſible; even like as Peter ſays of the Earth that now is, That it partly ſtands out of the Water, and partly in the Water, 2 Pet. 3. 5. and both making but one Globe, ſo here they frame One GOD: Whereas the Scriptures ſet him forth, as a Being Eternal, Immortal, Inviſible, the only Wiſe God, 1 Tim. 1. 17: Who dwelleth in light inacceſſible, whom no man hath ſeen, or can ſee, 1 Tim. 6. 16. And again, Iſaiah 42. 8. I am Jehovah, and my Glory I will not give to another. Now, that other is not, nor can be any other but the Creature; for it is only God, and the Creature that have any Being, or pretence thereto; when therefore God ſays, He will not give his Glory to another; the meaning is, He will not, in any ſort allow, or endure the Glory that is proper unto him as God, to be given unto his Creatures, any of them, in any reſpect; much leſs hath he himſelf given that glory to them, that they ſhould be God with himſelf, who are a different, yea, infinitely different ſort of Being from him: And again, in Iſaiah 40. 15. Having ſaid, That all the Nations before him, are as nothing, and are counted to him, leſs than nothing, and vanity; the Prophets Inference from thence is this; To whom then will ye liken me? His next and immediate Scope is, to confound their imaginations and outward lineaments made of him in Graven Images: But then, his Argument for this runs higher, and reacheth deeper; My Being is ſuch, and ſo Tranſcendent, that you cannot match me with all Nations, or the Souls of men; much leſs therefore, draw any outward ſhape in Graven Images; for, Who hath ſeen his ſhape at any time? Therefore alſo His Being, Wiſdom, Power, Holineſs, is of another kind than ours: The Souls of Men made Wiſe, and Holy, cannot match him. As therefore, God is called the only Good, and only Wiſe, and only Immortal; ſo by the ſame reaſon, [only Is] or hath [a Being]. And therefore the Glory of his Nature is, That 'tis Incommunicable; take his Eſſence, we cannot attain to dwell in it, as he dwells in himſelf, that Inhabiteth Eternity. 1 Tim. 1. 16.

Who

Who only hath immortality, dwelling in the light, which no man can approach unto, whom no man hath seen, nor can see: Much less therefore can reach to the participation of Him in his Being, and Glory, so as to be Himself. His Being is proper to Himself, and intire with Himself.

Chap. 2.

The Devil of this Opinion, that the Creature is God, or at least a piece of him, hath haunted the World in former Ages, as well as it walks now. The Philosophers had it up; the Poets amongst the Heathen, and Hereticks among the Christians, downwards in all Ages. My Brethren, consider what Paul hath uttered, Rom. 1. 25. speaking of the Heathen, he saith, They changed the Truth of God into a Lie (that is, the essence and being of God) and worshipped and served the Creature more than the Creator, who is blessed for ever, Amen. In which Speech at once, he puts a bar and Wall of separation between God's being, and that of the Creatures; and also Adores the infinite blessedness of that his being intire within it self, as is not communicable to the Creature; and also speaks in opposition to the worshipping of Creatures as God, upon any account, much less; as if they were essentially God. The Jews indeed, they would narrow God, by confining him to their Temple; and therefore God vindicates himself against that restraint, by this, Isa. 66. I made all things: And where will ye find me an house? But the Heathen, they fancied God was like the Creatures, and under that notion, worshipped him in the Creatures, And in opposition thereunto said Isaiah also, To whom will ye liken me? speaking of Heathenish Idolatry. And Paul had an eye to both, Acts 17. 24. 29. God that made the World, and all things therein, dwelleth not in Temples made with hands: And again Vers. 29. We ought not to think, that the Godhead is like unto Gold, or Silver, or Stone, graven by art and Man's devise. The Idolary of the Heathen did rise no higher (whatever the Opinion of some of them was) than this, that they changed the Truth (or essence) of God, into this Lie, by worshipping the Creature as like unto God; and yet thereby (whilst they know it not) they worshipped the Creature more than God: If God found fault with these, how must his jealousie rise up in fury against those, that not only make the Creature like to God, but make every Creature to be God himself? To these he might not only say (as to them) to whom will ye liken me, But who, more impiously do make Creature the same that I am? This is an Idolatry which the generality of the Heathen practised not.

Hermes Trismegistus l. 5. ad filiam Tatium. Nihil est in universo mundo quod non sit ipse. Deus est totum quod vides, totum quod non vides. Seneca. August. l. contra Secundinum Manichæum, speaking against the opinion of the Manichees, argues thus. Si Dominus ejusdem substantiæ Creator & Creatura essent, non reprehederentur qui servi erant Creaturæ potius quam Creatoris, quoniam cuique servi issent ab eadem Naturâ & substantia non recessissent; Cum vero reprehenduntur ab Apostolo, & detestabiles habentur qui & servierunt Creaturæ potius quam Creatori, satis ostenditur, illius & hujus diversas esse substantias. Again in Gerson's time, Gerhard. Quidam se imaginati sunt per contemplationem ita uniri Deo, ut reipsa ipsorum natura in abyssali profundo submergantur, puta humanitas annihiletur, & toto transeat in Divinitatem. Which also the Anabaptists which are called Mennists in Holland, have held of the humanity of Christ. Also Servetus, as Calvin hath it, held Deitatem in omnibus Creaturis esse substantialiter: So Calv. Tract. Theolog. pag. 609. and 657. Also Sebastianus Franck, In trunco, Deum esse Truncum, in Porco Porcum, in Diabolo Diabolum: Libertin: Calv. cap. 13. speaking of Lucretinus (one of them) sum Deus (saith he) And since then, Wigelius: And of old, Dionysius, Esse omnium est ipsa Divinitas, Omne quod vides, & quod non vides: Lucan. l. 3. Jupiter is est quodcunque vides, quocunque moveris.

Are not we (as was said,) the Clay, and He the Potter? And are not those two distant enough, if we take but the distance between a Man that is the Potter and his Clay, when yet the Man himself, who is that Potter, is made as well as his pots are by him? (You find the comparison Jer. 18. 6. and Rom. 9. 20.) But, to make God the Potter, to turn himself to Clay, and then to make Vessels out of himself; and then, for him to say again unto his pots, as made out of himself, Return ye Sons of Men into God again, (as their fancies are) Is not this a goodly Religion? A goodly Religion indeed! Oh ye Potsheards of the Earth, know your distance from your Creator; you are of a differing Metal: Let the potsheards of the Earth Rant it against their fellow potsheards of the Earth, as Isaiah hath it, Ch. 45. 9. and not think to vye with your Creator, as if you were pieces of him, yea, fellow-mates with him, when as you are less than nothing, Isa. 40. 17. They are Nothing; yea, less than Nothing. He hath much a do to keep himself from denying them a Name of being; and even that vanisheth whilst compared with him. And if they had bin a drop of him taken altogether, they could not have added to this Ocean; but if they be nothing, and less than nothing, then surely, they are no parts of him; of which afterwards.

BOOK I.

Again, to argue this from invincible Reaſon: If all things were God, all difference of Good and Evil would be taken away, and God ſhould ſin in all that is acted in and by the Creature, (which is that, theſe Men do aim at, to have their Conſciences diſcharged of all Obligations:) If they can once perſwade their Souls, that they are God; then as God ſins not, ſo nor do they.

Again, if ſo, then there would be no Obligation between the Creator and the Creature; nor any law which they are obliged unto: which alſo, they would obliterate out of their own and other Mens Conſciences, in ſaying, That it proceeds from the degenerate ignorance of the Creature, and their unbelief of what they truly are, that they think themſelves Subject to a Law.

Again, there could be no Redemption, the Creature needed it not; for it could never be loſt from God, it being ſubſtantially a piece of himſelf: Nor God could make no Election nor Reprobation among his Creatures; for himſelf were both that which is choſen, and what is condemned; and he would then be condemning himſelf, or ſelf-condemned: And God ſhould hate part of himſelf; whereas no Man ever yet hated his own fleſh, Eph. 5. 29. but the Scripture ſays in the Name of God, Eſau have I hated &c. Rom. 9. 13.

Juven.

Again, all the idolatry of the Nations would be juſtified by this; yea, even ſuch idolatry as the light of the wiſeſt of them condemned. Oh ſanctas Gentes quibus hæc naſcuntur in hortis, Numina! Condemning the Egyptians worſhipping Herbs for Gods: Yea, not only Herbs, but Serpents, forefooted Beaſts and creeping things; which the Apoſtle Rom. 1. 23. And changed the glory of the uncorruptible God, into an image made like to corruptible Man, and to birds, and fourfooted Beaſts, and creeping things; toucheth upon. Oh! theſe are the Gods, Oh Iſrael; and not only theſe, but the Devil himſelf, that old Serpent, for he is a Creature too. Yea, Men might worſhip their own draught, and ſo make a God of that, which God himſelf, in ſo much ſcorn, ſpeaks of the Heathens Gods, by the Prophet, A Dunghil-God, Dij ſtercorarij. It might further be ſaid that God Creates himſelf, and Creates nothing but himſelf, that Opus eſt Artifex: Himſelf the work of his own hand, and yet the Maker too.

'Tis true indeed, the Scripture ſays, that all things are of him, and all things are thine; as David in his panegyrick made to God: 'Tis alſo ſaid of him, That he is above all, and in you all, and through all, Eph. 4. 6. 'Tis alſo ſaid, that God is all in all; but it is no where ſaid, that God is all things; or, that all things are God himſelf.

CHAP.

CHAP. II.

The Creatures were not from Eternity existing in GOD.

SOme Platonic Divines, have fancied the Creatures to have been existent in God, and with God, from Eternity: And their Creation to have been but God's putting them forth of Himself into a visibility, who yet when they thus lay hid, were then in as true a way of Being, as now they are.

I will not enter into that Controversie, which the Schoolmen have stir'd; whether a Creature might have been from Eternity, or no.

Only first we say, that it is an Incommunicable Attribute of God, that He inhabits Eternity, as it imports, that he both dwelt Himself alone from Eternity, when there were none of these Made-things, to dwell in, or with him; no Heavens or Earth to fill: As also, that He is Eternity alone to Himself, and dwelt in Himself.

We do thus far acknowledge, that all things were in God's Foreknowledge and Decree; in Esse volito, as Aquinas speaks. So also in Acts 15. 18. Known unto God are all his works from the beginning. And to say, That all things were in God virtually, (as they would mince it; and distinguish upon it; is but to say, they have a Being in the Power of God, as worms have in the Sun (which it will bring forth to Morrow) and so all things that never were, and that never shall be, but were and remain meer possibilia, things only possible may be said to be in God. But to the Point it self.

Eternity in God, and the Creatures being in time, is made a Vast and broad distinction between God and them. Psal. 90. 2. Before the Mountains were brought forth, or ever thou hadst formed the Earth: Even from Everlasting, to Everlasting, thou art God: His Arms spanned both Eternities; (they are called, The Everlasting Arms, Deut. 33. 27.) whereas the best of Creatures have but half an Eternity, they are to Everlasting, but not from Everlasting; this is proper to God only, in opposition to the Creatures, for 'twas before they were brought forth. And their being to Everlasting, is derived from God, for of him it is said, 1 Tim. 6. 17. Who only hath immortality, that is, of Himself.

2. Upon the same account, it's made the difference between Christ and the Creatures, That he is from Eternity, not they; and this, because he is God. Psal. 102. 24, 25. (Which in the First of the Hebrews, is applied by Paul unto Christ) I said, O my God, take me not away in the midst of my days, thy years are throughout all Generations: Of old hast thou laid the Foundations of the Earth: Others Read it, [Before thou laidst the Foundations of the Earth.] The word Lepanim, or of Old, refers to the words afore, thus, Thy years are throughout all Generations, afore thou laidst the Foundations of the Earth. And here also is found, a general opposition to all Creatures; for as he had mentioned the Earth, so he mentions the Heavens, (as it follows) and the Heavens are the work of thy hands; now, the Heavens, and the Earth, comprehend all.

Again, 3ly This very same difference and distinction of the Creatures and Christ, is held forth in John 1. 1. compared with Hebrews 1. where these words of the Psalmist are cited. In John 1. Vers. 1. shewing Christ's peculiar dignity, and his being God, he says, He was in the beginning: The same Beginning which Moses meant, when he said, In the beginning God Created; which notes out Existence afore; and it is spoken in opposition to the World as made. So Vers. 10. the World was made by him: Which that in that first of the Hebrews fully clears and explains, answering both to John and the BOOK I. Pſalmiſt: Heb. 1. 10. And thou Lord in the beginning haſt laid the Foundations of the Earth, and the Heavens are the works of thy hands; that is, he was ſo in the beginning of the making of all things whatſoever, ſo as to be the Founder of them, and therefore exiſting afore them. In which place of John, two things are ſaid of him in difference from Creatures; 1. That he was with God before, which the Creatures were not, nor exiſtent in him as he was. And further, Secondly, much leſs were they God beſore, as he was, but they all were made by him. Add to this, (to ſhew it was his peculiar Priviledge above the Creation, that he thus was with God;) that in Prov. 8. Verſ. 24. When there was no depths, I was brought forth, when there was no Fountains abounding with water; before the Mountains were ſetled, before the Hills was I brought forth, while as yet he had not made the Earth &c. So on to the 30th Verſe, Then was I with him as One brought up with him. This, Wiſdom makes her boaſt of, as a Prerogative no Creature had; and Wiſdom, in the Proverbs, is put for the perſon of Chriſt himſelf; So Luke 11. 49. compared with Luke 7. 34, 35. wherein Chriſt ſpeaking of himſelf, ſays in, that 11 Chap. 49. Therefore alſo ſaid the Wiſdom of God, I will ſend them Prophets and Apoſtles, &c. And in Luke 7. 35. he expreſly ſays, This Wiſdom is he who was the Son of Man: Verſ. 34. The Son of Man is come eating and drinking, and ye ſay, behold a gluttonous Man, &c. But Wiſdom is juſtified of her Children: So plainly affirming of himſelf, I my ſelf am that Wiſdom ſpoken of, which is juſtified of my Children: And in Matth. 11. 19. he ſays the ſame: And that ſpeech, The Wiſdom of God ſaid, I will ſend Prophets and Apoſtles, &c. as it muſt refer in general, to ſome ſpeech or other, ſomewhere in the Old Teſtament uttered by one that takes on him to be a Perſon, as the [I] imports, and that perſon ſtiled [The Wiſdom of God] ſo particularly, it refers unto what Wiſdom had ſaid of her ſelf in the Book of the Proverbs, Chap. 1. from Verſ. 29. to the end, of ſending forth Preachers, by whom ſhe utters her voice in the Streets, and cries in the chief places of Concourſe. And when our Saviour Chriſt ſpeaks of that Union which he had with the Father, in that his prayer, John 17. he ſays, that he had a glory with the Father before the World was: And this he makes a peculiar priviledge of himſelf, as being then a perſon, who was then exiſting, and ſo were that Glory afore God the Father: Whereas if all the Elect had exiſted in God actually then, as well as Chriſt, this had not been peculiar unto him; And yet there alſo he ſpeaks of their exiſtence in God's Decree and Election, Thine they were, John 17. 6. And therefore, what he ſays of himſelf, of the glory that he had before the World was, muſt be ſpoken by reaſon of an Exiſtence beſides that which he had in Decree, which exiſtence the elect had not.

Thirdly, by this, God doth ſet forth his own Greatneſs to humble Job, and in him, the whole Creation; and how poor a Job doth he make of him! And if that God himſelf ſhould ſpeak unto theſe Blaſphemers of our days, as he did to Job there, how would they inſtantly ſhake and tremble; and fall to nothing, unleſs he ſupported them? You have (Job 38. 2, 3.) God ſteps in from behind the hangings, as one that had, undiſcerned, overheard Jobs rantings and ſtandings upon his points; Who is this, ſays God, that darkens Counſel by words without knowledge? Gird up now thy loins like a Man, if thou haſt any Metal, or the Spirit of a Man in thee; And to confound thee, I will ask thee but one Queſtion; For I will demand of thee, and anſwer thou me but this one thing; Where waſt thou when I laid the Foundations of the Earth? Declare, if thou haſt underſtanding. Nay, Canſt thou tell who hath laid the meaſures thereof? Or who hath ſtretched the line upon it? Whereupon are the Foundations thereof faſtned? Or who hath laid the Corner ſtone thereof? God hereby ſhook up Job ſo, and gave him ſuch a Ratling, and yet appeared not as he is in himſelf; but ſpeaks all this out of a Whirlwind, which he took to cover him: And the iſſue with Job, of all this, was, as in Chap. 42. 2. I abhor my ſelf in duſt and aſhes. You ſee this once, and firſt Query, which is home to the point in hand, and point-blank (as we ſay) againſt that wicked opinion, which aſſerts all things to be Coeternal with God. Theſe God choſe out of all other weapons, to overthrow Job with: Where wert thou?

Alas!

Alas! thou hadſt no being then, much leſs knowledge of theſe things. But according to this wretched Opinion, riſen up in theſe days, if true, Job might have anſwered boldly, I was with thee, and I was in thee, and in a happier ſtate of Union with thee, than I am in Now: Not in a ſtate of Union with fleſh and blood, but one in Spirit with thee. Ay, indeed ſays God, (ſpeaking ironically to him) Knoweſt thou it, becauſe thou waſt then born? Verſ. 21. Thou art very old Job, and of great ſtanding, and the Number of thy days is great, as it follows there. Chap. 2.

Now, if the Creatures, or the Souls of Men had really been exiſtent in God, and as truly as Chriſt himſelf, as to his Exiſtence, no otherwiſe than they affirm themſelves to have been; Then God might aſwell have ſaid to Chriſt, Where waſt thou when I laid the Foundations of the Earth? But, ſuch a Queſtion, Chriſt hath prevented, and put out of Queſtion, ſaying, Prov. 8. 29. Then I was by him; yea, and was his Counſellour, as Iſa. 40. 13. Both which are ſpoken there of Chriſt.

And whereas it is objected by thoſe Men, That in that 8 Prov. it is alſo affirmed, That the Sons of Men who were his Elect, did then exiſt in God, in a ſportful life in God, together with Chriſt, becauſe it is ſaid Verſ. 31. That he was rejoycing in the habitable part of his Earth; and (it follows) my delights were with the Sons of Men: And that therefore, though Men did not exiſt under the appearance of fleſh and blood, as now; yet they were exiſting in Spirit in him, and with him. And that they being put out of God, into the vail of fleſh and blood; Therefore it was, that Chriſt came forth from God after them, and took fleſh and blood alſo: For ſo they apply that of the Hebrews 2. 13, 14.

The Anſwer is clear, that it proves the clear contrary, out of the very Text: For Chriſt's Rejoycing then, is ſaid to have been in the habitable parts of his Earth: Therefore it muſt be meant of Men as inhabiting the Earth, and not as exiſting with him from Eternity. Verſ. 26. of Prov. 8. tells us, that they were not then made: Hence therefore, his rejoycing in them, muſt neceſſarily be ſpoken in reſpect of the foreſight of what they ſhould be, and ſo as exiſting afore the World but in God's Decree, in reſpect of what he would after make them to be, and thereby preſented to him beforehand, as foreviewing what thoſe Children ſhould be, whom God hath given to him, when once they ſhould come to inhabite this Earth: And ſuch, to be ſure, they were not actually then; for he expreſly ſaith, Verſ. 23. Theſe his delights were afore the Earth it ſelf was.

And had there been, as then, any other Exiſtence of them, but in foreſight and Decree, as the cauſe of that he delighted in them, he would much rather have mentioned that as the Object of his preſent delight, than this other which was ſo long after to come, when they ſhould inhabit and dwell here on Earth below. And if all had been in God before in being, why then all might pray as well as Chriſt, glorifie us with that glory we had with thee before the World was And then they might ſay of themſelves, even as Chriſt ſaith of himſelf; you ſhall ſee the Son of Man aſcend up where he was before.

And then likewiſe, that had not been true which the Apoſtle ſays, 1 Cor. 15. 46. where ſpeaking of David's Creation, he ſays, that was not firſt which is Spiritual, but that which is Natural, and afterwards, that which is Spiritual: Whereas, had they had an Exiſtence in God in Spirit, before the World was; then he had firſt been that which is Spiritual, and afterwards, that which is Natural.

And then again, that benefit of Creation, which yet we are taught to praiſe God ſo much for, had been a worſting of the Condition of theſe Elect Ones; a ſhooting them out of a Spiritual Condition, into a Natural, without any ſin of theirs.

CHAP. III.

The Infinite Diſtance between God and the Creatures, in reſpect that he is the Maker and Preſerver of them: In that alſo he is Eternal, and ſo before they had being he dwelt alone in himſelf, and poſſeſſed all things in himſelf. He is the high and lofty One, and is ſo Supreamly Excellent, as it tranſcends all other: His Name is Holy, and ſo is above the Creatures, and ſeparated from them. The true Name of Being is proper only to God; the Creatures are but the Shadows and Appearances of Being.

ISAI. LVII. 15. and LXVI. 1, 2.

For thus ſaith the high and lofty One that inhabiteth Eternity, whoſe Name is holy: I dwell in the high and holy place, with him alſo that is of a contrite and humble ſpirit, to revive the ſpirit of the humble, and to revive the heart of the contrite ones.

Thus ſaith the Lord, the Heaven is my Throne, and the Earth is my Footſtool, where is the Houſe that ye build unto me? And where is the place of my reſt? For all thoſe things hath mine hand made, and all thoſe things have been, ſaith the Lord: But to this man will I look, even to him that is poor and of a contrite ſpirit, and trembleth at my word.

HERE is the higheſt and the loweſt met dwelling together; the higheſt God, and the loweſt and pooreſt of his Creatures.

The Prophet had juſt in the Chapter afore, the 56*th*, verſe ult. foretold a like wonder to this, the Wolf and the Lamb ſhall feed together; which in Chapt. 11. 6. is varied thus; The Wolf ſhall dwell with the Lamb, and the Calf and the young Lion, &c. which, if litterally underſtood, were a wonder in Nature: But, behold! a greater is here: The high and lofty One that inhabits Eternity, whoſe Name is Holy, dwells with the ſinner, who is contrite and broken in heart for it. This is a wonder in Grace; or rather, The wonder of Grace.

The Language, the words are pen'd in, is God's, and could be no others for him: The thoughts of the Creature could not have invented ſuch a ſtile to ſpeak to him in; and God's ſcope therein is by lifting up and exalting his own greatneſs above all Creatures, withal to diſcover the height and depth of his Grace in ſo condeſcending to the meaneſt of Creatures, than which, himſelf accounts nothing more his glory.

Chap. 3.

As to my preſently Scope, it is not to inlarge upon the deſcription of a broken heart, or of Gods affecting, and delighting therein to dwell; or his Grace ſhewn thereby: But my preſent deſign is to inlarge upon the height and diſtance which God bears above us, and his whole Creation, conſidered as we are Creatures: Nor is my Scope ſimply to ſet forth, what God is in himſelf, but as here he is ſet out Comparatively with his Creatures; limiting my Diſcourſe herein alſo only unto what deſcription he makes of himſelf here in the Text: And the Uſe I ſhall put it to, will be to humble us as Creatures, even in our beſt Eſtate, and not as ſinners only.

This comparative diſtance of this height above us, is ſet forth in theſe PARTICULARS.

I. I the maker and Preſerver: And theſe things were made and do exiſt by me.

Firſt, THE MAKER] So in both places: In Iſai. 66. All theſe have my hands made; The very tenour of this ſpeech is a ſlighting them as Creatures, and being they are but made things, and will ye compare them to me? It is, as if an Artificer ſhould ſpeak of his works made by him, that are different from himſelf. Theſe are the Clay, and My Pots, and I am the Potter. He ſpeaks of them as a Potter would do of his Pot-ſheards ſo diſtant from himſelf, The Maker: Or he ſpeaks thus of them, with difference from his own internal acts of his mind within himſelf, whereas theſe are utterly External, and out of himſelf. Theſe have my hands made; as an artificer would ſpeak of his manifactures and works without him. And then in Iſai. 57. the other Scripture, Verſ. 16. The Souls (the Subjects of this my Grace) which I have made: In both, he ſpeaks of them as made by him; and the Souls made altogether, i. e. the whole of their Being; as Pſal. 33. 15. for Creation is productio totius entis: Acts 17, 25. He giveth to all life, and all things: And Verſ. 28. Being it ſelf, in him we live, and have our being: And Rom. 11. ult. Of him are all things; and therefore not ſo much as a firſt Matter was exiſting to his hands: But all theſe have my hands made.

Secondly; THE PRESERVER,] as giving and continuing. To give them exiſtence; as thoſe words in Chap. 66. 2. And all theſe things have been; ſaith the Lord, Piſcator renders, per eum exiſtunt omnia; to which, that of Acts 17. 28. correſponds; In him we live, and move, and have our being: i. e. as the Original, ſo the Continuance of them: He gives life, Verſ. 25. and then Preſerves it: In him we continue to have it; thus both Paul and Iſaiah.

II. INHABITING ETERNITY;] which he ſpeaks, Firſt, with excluſion of all things made, as things that have not, de facto, been from Eternity; and notes out, an eminent diſtinction put thereby between them and him. Pſal. 90. 2. Before the Mountains were brought forth, or ever thou hadſt formed the Earth and the World, from everlaſting to everlaſting thou art God. And whereas ſome Creatures, as Angels and Mens Souls, have an Eternity of Exiſtence to come, yet that is but derived: 'Tis he is ſaid only to have Immortality; 1 Tim. 6. and therefore he is called the laſt as well as the firſt: That though they be Eternal for time to come, yet he is after them all: Which could not have been ſaid, but in reſpect that Creatures their Eternity doth depend on him; and ſo he is the laſt, though they continue with him for ever. God hath Eternity both paſt and to come; and this is proper to him.

Secondly, the Phraſe here [INHABITING] eternity, is unuſual, and ſignificant of far more, than ſimply that God is Eternal in both reſpects aforeſaid. It imports over and beſides, 1. That he hath dwelt alone, and ſhall dwell alone for ever apart, by and in himſelf; whether afore any Creature were or ſince, it is all one as to this; For himſelf is that Eternity which he dwelt in, and ſhall dwell in, 1 Sam. 15. 29. The Eternity of Iſrael will not lie, ſo 'tis varied in the margent: And ſince the Creatures was, he is his own proper Manſion-houſe, even as he was before:

BOOK I.

1. That afore any Creature was, he dwelt alone, that is evident; For they not being or exiſting, he muſt needs have had an Eternity paſt, alone to himſelf, which he ſays he dwelt in, and no Creature with him: Not only, there was no other God with him (as Moſes) but no Creature with him (as Solomon) Prov. 8. from Verſ. 23. to 32. So that what was ſaid of Iſrael, that they were a people that dwelt alone, Deut. 33. 28. the ſame may be ſaid of the God of Iſrael; he was utterly without all Society of any Creature.

And ſecondly, it is all one after he hath made the Creatures; he ſtill dwels in his own Eternity, apart by himſelf. It is one of the Attributes which Paul gives him, 1 Tim. 6. 16. Who only hath immortality, dwelling in the light which no Man can approach unto; And therefore you ſee in Iſai. 66. that ſince he hath made Heaven and Earth, how yet he ſpeaks of the whole Creation; Where will ye find me a place for my reſt? which imports, that ſince he made the World he dwels by himſelf apart in the ſame Eternity he did: His making of Creatures, was not to add or to enlarge his dwelling, that he might inhabit more commodiouſly, (as it is with Man, whoſe Perſon is one thing, and whoſe Houſe is another;) No; Their Building is not a new piece of an Houſe to him, who alone inhabits Eternity, that is, himſelf.

The Jews call him Makom, Place, becauſe he is Place to himſelf. His own Centre and his own Circumference

'Tis true, that now he hath made all theſe things, if he ſhould not be every where, where any of them are, and through them all, as Paul's phraſe is, Epheſ. 4. he ſhould not be God, the immenſe God; I fill Heaven and Earth, ſaith he, Jerem. 23, 24. ſeeing they are made, he fills them alſo: Yet ſo, as ſtill he is not beholding to them for room or place: As the Son filleth the Air, but is not beholding to it for the place it affords it, but the Air to the Sun that fills it.

Thirdly, that he inhabiteth Eternity, ſhews that he poſſeſſeth all things in himſelf; for himſelf is his own Eternity to himſelf; and that Eternity being an houſe to himſelf, is furniſhed with all things within himſelf: He went not then out of himſelf for any thing; nor needs he yet to do ſo, as Acts 17. 25. He needs not any thing: But was abundantly ſupplied with all things within himſelf, as a great Man in his own Houſe; whoſe glory it is to have all things ſufficiently about him therein and therewith.

Fourthly, that he inhabiteth Eternity imports that his being is ſo infinite, as he fills the immenſe expanſe of all or both Eternities in one Moment. He comprehends and compaſſeth the whole, and all within himſelf, and extends himſelf thorough it all; he is the King of Ages, that is of the courſes of Times, 1 Tim. 1. 17. and ſo as a King hath all Ages as ſubjects always extant afore him. In the 40th of Iſai. it is ſaid he ſpanneth the Heavens; and it is a good graſp that you will ſay; but that is ſpoken only of a thing that is now at preſent exiſting; but in Deuter. 33. 27. ye read, he hath everlaſting Arms; a right arm to inviron Eternity, à parte ante, Eternity paſt; and another that to come: And ſo incircles both Eternities, paſt and to come, without ſucceſſion of time to him: Eternity is but a moment to him: a parte æternitatis, as the Schoolmen ſpeak: For he comprehends it within the Arms of his infinitely extenſive being: As he ſubſiſts not in place, per partes, ſo nor in Time by parts. He runs not through a Time Paſt, Preſent, and to come. His duration, is not meaſured by the differences of Time: For then it might be ſaid, as to Time to come, he as yet is not. By the ſame Reaſon that a thouſand years are but as one day to him; by the ſame you may ſay, that Eternity is but one inſtant. [He inhabites] that is poſſeſſeth even the whole Continually; he builds not one part of his Eternity in one Age, and another part in another, ſo as that he ſhould dwell in it by piece-meal and ſucceſſively: Nor yet removes he his habitation, as men that have great Houſes do, from one part of their Houſe, as in Winter (ſuppoſe) and to another in Summer, and the other part ſtanding empty the while: No, but from Eternity to eternity, is but one intire individual, and compleat Houſe for the whole of him at once to fill; who is fulneſs of being in the intenſeneſs of Perfection. And hence he enjoyeth all bleſſedneſs in an inſtant; not as we, one part this moment, and another piece in another, which when put together, do make a compleat happineſs, but in a ſucceſſion,

The Philoſopher ſaid of him, that God doth ἀιεὶ ἀπλῆν χαίρειν ἡδονήν.

Fifthly

Fifthly; His Houſe is always one and the ſame, and never hath any decay, or needs the leaſt Reparation in any part of it: His Eternity is an immutability and unchangeableneſs: He is ſemper idem; his ſtile is always [I am:] And [I will be] Ehieh, that is, always the ſame, and the Cauſe of my own being. And by this alſo his Eternity is differenced from the Creatures: All of them wax old as a garment; and of themſelves they would do ſo, did not God renew their being every moment. The Angels would wax old, as the Children of Iſraels garments in the Wilderneſs did not; but it was becauſe God perpetually kept them as new. But of God it ſollows, Thou art the ſame, Pſal. 102. 27. and therefore us and our years he compareth to a Flood, Pſal. 90. 5. that is always running and in ſucceſſion; but him to a Rock of Ages that ſtands (as the Phraſe in the Original is, Pſal. 102. 26.) immoveable. Chap. 3.

III. The high and lofty One.

The high One] For the tranſcendency and ſupream excellency of his Being: The lofty One] for the ſoveraignty and dominion of it.

The high] It is a common Title given him in the Old and New Teſtament; the high God; and the Lord on high; God moſt high. Pſal. 83. ult. The moſt High over all the Earth. And in the New [the Higheſt] three times in one Chapter, Luke 1.

And to take the height of him, let us firſt take into conſideration the courſe and way the Scripture (as condeſcending to our ſenſe) uſeth, to ſet this forth by; which is by a Comparative, and riſing up from one degree to another; and it begins thus.

1. In reſpect of place, which yet is the loweſt kind of height: And for this take Eliphaz his ſtaff in Job 22. 12. Behold the height of the Stars, how high they are: (How high is God then? ſo riſeth he,) Is not God in the height of the Heavens? as it immediately follows thereupon.

2. In dignity and dominion; he is ſaid to be higher than all Nations on Earth, (which are in dignity exceeding, and more high than the Stars) higher than all the people, Pſal. 99. 2. whom (as elſewhere 'tis ſaid) he rules and ſtills at his pleaſure: And Pſal. 113, 4, 5. The Lord is high above all Nations.

But yet you will ſay, So are Kings that are ſet over the Nations: And if you do ſuppoſe but one man to be King of all the World (as the Roman Emperors once) it may be ſaid that he is higher than all the Nations.

But thirdly, He is over all the Kings of the Earth; that's another aſcent: He is higher than the higheſt, and there are higher than they; i. e. who are between him and them, Eccleſ. 5. 8. For he is higher than the higheſt, and there be higher than they. The [they] are the Rulers of this Earth, (whom he there ſpeaks of;) and thoſe that are higher than they are the Angels: But he is the higheſt abſolutely, ſingularly, higher than the higheſt, above the Angels themſelves: All Principalities and Powers, both in Heaven and Earth, they are under his feet. He is the bleſſed and only Potentate, 1 Tim. 6. 15. and ſo in Pſal. 97. 9. Thou Lord art high above all the Earth; it follows, Thou art exalted above all the Gods; i.e. Angels, whether good or bad, which the Heathens worſhipped.

4. To ſhew the height and ſuper-excellency of his Dignity and Dominion, he was pleaſed to give this demonſtration; he did on purpoſe build a place for himſelf, ſeparate from, and far above all things elſe which he had made; and calls it here, The high and holy place, in this 57th Chapter; and Heaven is my Throne, in the 66th Chapter, and that is the higheſt of Heavens, as a place ſeparate, and an apartment for himſelf to dwell in after he had made Creatures, until Chriſt, that was made higher than the Heavens, pierced (as the Phraſe in Hebr. 4. is) and broke up that ſeparate place, prepared from the foundation of the world; which is to the reſt of Heaven as the holy of holies was to the other parts of the Temple, which the High Prieſt only went into; which the Angels by the Law of their Creation, and right of their Creatureſhip, did not enjoy as the firſt place of their Habitation; and in which, had the Angels that fell, been Inhabitants, they had never faln: For as it is the high, ſo the holy place wherein the immutable glory of God ſo ſhineth, as would immutably have fixed them in holineſs unto God, that they ſhould never have departed from him. God's height, even as in reſpect to this high place, is often ſet out thereby; as, that he is higher than the higheſt Heaven: Pſal. 113. 5. His glory is above the Heavens; who is like unto the Lord who dwelleth on high?

5. Let us riſe one aſcent yet higher, which the Goſpel affords us, of the Man Jeſus united perſonally to the Son of God, who is gone into Heaven, and is on the right hand of God: Angels, and Authorities, and Powers being made ſubject to him, as they are ſaid to be under his feet, Epheſ. 1. 21, 22. and who therefore is ſaid by that perſonal Union to be made higher than the Heavens, Hebr. 7. 26. and all this is ſpoken of the Man Jeſus; for 'tis ſaid he was made thus high: And yet lo! how afore this high and lofty one, he humbleth himſelf, I am a worm, which is lower than the footſtool man treads on: Pſal. 22. 3, 6. Thou art holy, but I am a worm and no man. Thus he ſpeaks of himſelf before he aſcended, and did thus humble himſelf at God's command: And now when he is aſcended far above all heavens, as Epheſ. 4. 10. He that deſcended, is the ſame alſo that aſcended up far above all Heavens, that he might fill all things; He is yet but at God's right hand; the Throne is God's, who is higher than this higheſt, my Father is greater than I.

But all this hath been but a Comparative way of ſhewing his Highneſs.

2. His being the high and lofty One, notes forth the tranſcendency and ſuper-excellency of his Divine being it ſelf in it ſelf; and that it is utterly of another kind from Creatures, and indeed that it only is being. In Pſal. 83. ult. That men may know that thou, whoſe name alone is JEHOVAH, art the MOST HIGH OVER all the earth: He thereby argues his height from his Name, that his Name is alone Jehovah, and therefore he is moſt high, and in that very reſpect. Now Jehovah, we know, is the Name of his Eſſence [I am;] and here it is that men may know that thou, whoſe Name alone is Jehovah, art the moſt high; and therefore moſt high, in reſpect of ſuch a glorious being as is proper alone unto him. In Epheſ. 4. 6. he is ſaid to be above all, and yet to be through all; i. e. his Creatures: His being above all, ſhews the tranſcendency of his being, ſpoken of ſeparate from all ours; not intercommuning with ours, nor intermingled, although it is ſaid he is through all too; but as the Sun beams intermingle not with the Air, though they ſhine through the Air, ſo nor doth God with Creatures.

Here I might amplifie upon the glory of this his Title, that he is the moſt High in reſpect of his being, that he alone hath the Name Jehovah, as the Pſalmiſt ſaith, and alſo of being; that all the Creatures are but the ſhadow of being, but he only is: But I ſhall defer it unto the Uſe.

IV. Whoſe Name is Holy.

Firſt; 'Tis a Name that is proper to God; as Chriſt ſaith, Matth. 19. 17. There is none good but God, ſo nor holy. He is ſeparate and alone in his holineſs, as he is alone in his being: And if he only be good, then much more is he only holy; for holineſs is the height and perfection of goodneſs; ſo in man, and ſo in God. And Rev. 15. 4. you have it expreſs, Who only is holy; and the holy One, as elſewhere: Now of all that could have been ſaid, or attributed to him, this ſets up God the higheſt, and as moſt Soveraign: And this, of all others, layeth us low, both as we are Creatures, and as we are Sinners. Holineſs is ſaid to be his dreadful Name. Pſal. 99. 2, 3. The Lord is high above all people; it follows, Let them praiſe thy great and terrible Name, for it is holy; and that makes him high. And again, at the 5th Verſe, Exalt ye the Lord our God, and worſhip at his footſtool, for he is holy; nay, the Margin varieth it, his footſtool is holy; i. e. the ground he ſets his feet on. The like you have in the 9th Verſe.

Secondly; This ſeparates him from the Creatures; for holineſs imports a ſeparation, as 'tis in common applied to any thing, perſon, place, or time. Chriſt was ſeparate from Sinners, made higher than the Heavens; but God from Creatures.

Thirdly;

Thirdly; Holineſs is that whereby God aims at his own Glory, as the Angels cry ſhews in that 6th of Iſaiah, verſe 3. Holy, holy, holy, the whole Earth is filled with thy Glory; as being that which the Attribute of Holineſs in him aims at from his Creatures: And that being the only Attribute mentioned when his Glory doth there appear, Verſe 1. and is beheld by Iſaiah and the Angels; this, and the ſingle conjunction to Holineſs and Glory argues it. Now he being ſo great a God, his deſires of Glory from the Creature are ſo vaſt, and ſo intenſive, as the Creatures cannot come up unto, nor ſatisfie: for as Rom. 1. 21. hath it, He would be glorified as God; which the Creatures cannot reach to the height of. Two Scriptures put together do ſhew this, Job 15. 15. Behold! he putteth no truſt in his Saints; yea, the Heavens are not clean in his ſight, and he means the Angels, who are called Heavens: And they are the good Angels he means, is manifeſt, thoſe who have kept their ſtation in Heaven; and yet all their holineſs, you ſee, makes them not clean in his pure eyes: Thus Job 4. 17, 18. Shall mortal man be more juſt than God? ſhall a man be more pure than his Maker? Behold, he put no truſt in his ſervants, and his Angels he charged with folly. We ſinners are unclean privatively, wanting that holineſs we were created in, and poſitively defiled; but the beſt of his Creatures are negatively not clean, becauſe they anſwer not, nor come up unto his immenſe deſires of glory from them. He would have more, though it cannot be had: But of this deficiency, and falling ſhort of Creature Holineſs as to God, I ſhall ſpeak in the Uſe. Chap. 3.

USE.

To humble you, as you are Creatures, afore this Majeſty on high: I would humble ye, I ſay, as you are Creatures, as well as that you are ſinners; which latter, I know, you do every day: I do not ſay, that you are to humble your ſelves as much ſimply, as you are Creatures, as that you are ſinners, yet you are to do it as truly: It is to be an humbling of our ſelves, this, though in another way. We humble our ſelves as ſinners by way of mourning and godly ſorrow; but this as Creatures, by way of ſelf-emptineſs and ſenſe of our own nothingneſs and vanity. They are both in the Text; he ſpeaks of the humble, conſidering themſelves as Creatures; and the contrite ones, as ſinners: And God is therefore repreſented firſt as The high and lofty One inhabiting Eternity, to humble us as Creatures; and ſecondly as holy, to humble us as ſinners, (though that will humble us as Creatures too:) I enforce this Uſe from this, that to teach you to humble your ſelves as Creatures, is a piece of the Goſpel; and where you have the Goſpel ſpoken of, there you have this alſo. As in Iſai. 40. 3. the beginning of the preaching of the Goſpel is prophecied of; The voice of him that crieth in the wilderneſs, &c. which was John Baptiſts Miniſtry; and then follows the Prophecy of all the Apoſtles preaching, which ſucceeded John, O Sion, that bringeth good tidings, verſe 9. Now among other things, what was it John was to cry, and the Apoſtles to preach? Even this, All fleſh is graſs, &c. Verſ. 6, 7, 8. The voice ſaid cry: and he ſaid what ſhall I cry? All fleſh is graſs, and all the godlineſs thereof is as the flower of the field: The graſs withereth, the flower fadeth, becauſe the Spirit of the Lord bloweth upon it; ſurely the People is graſs: The graſs withereth, the flower fadeth; but the word of our God ſhall ſtand for ever. Which the Apoſtle Peter applyeth unto that very Word and Goſpel which was ſpoken by himſelf, and the other Apoſtles, 1 Pet. 1. ult. But the word of the Lord endureth for ever: and this is the word which by the Goſpel is preached unto you. And and this was done by the revealing of the glory of the Lord Chriſt, namely, diſcovered in the Goſpel. Iſai. 40. 5. And the glory of the Lord ſhall be revealed: and all fleſh ſhall ſee it together: for the mouth of the Lord hath ſpoken it. Now obſerve, that there is in that Chapter a ſetting forth of God in his greatneſs, to the end thus to humble the Creature, ſuch as you have not in all the Scriptures.

So

BOOK I.

So as indeed we ſhould loſe a piece of our Religion, if we do not attend to this, and I will here ſuppoſe my ſelf to have a Congregation of Adams and Eves, Men and Women in that pure and firſt eſtate; yea, and I will take the Angels in alſo before they fell; and ſome Angels are here at preſent this day; but if all were here in their original eſtate, or thoſe that are now in their confirmed eſtate, I might preach this Sermon to them, reminding them of their eſtate by Creation, to humble them as they are Creatures in that eſtate.

And to inforce this the more, I take in that additional to my Text, Pſal. 113. 5, 6. Who is like unto the Lord our God who dwelleth on high? [WHO HUMBLETH HIMSELF TO BEHOLD] the things that are in Heaven, and in the Earth? He repreſents him as ſo great a God, as it is an humbling to him, ſo much as to caſt an eye upon any Creature now he hath made it; and yet he were not God, if he did not behold the leaſt motion of every Creature, to the falling of a Sparrow to the ground without his cogniſance. Further obſerve it, It is not only ſpoken of things on earth, but of things in heaven; his beſt Saints, and Angels, or whatever that high and holy place is furniſht with. Now my Inference is, That if it be an humbling to God to behold the beſt of theſe, it may much more be an humbling to us when we appear before this God. And that we may do ſo, let us take theſe Conſiderations.

1. Whereas God had the Idea's of infinite Worlds, he could have made, and ſo of Creatures reaſonable, which lay before his eternal Counſels, as Candidates, and as fair to have been made Exiſtent, as we that are made: (For not only all things were once nothing, (that will afford a ſecond Conſideration) but there was yet an higher remoteneſs from nothing, and that is, of things poſſible to be, which in reſpect of God's not willing to create them, never did, nor ever ſhall come into being, although, when they ſhould have done ſo, it would have been out of nothing) yet God ſaid of us, Stand you forth, I decree and will you to exiſt afore me, whenas an infinite number of like Creatures ſlept ſtill, and to Eternity ſhall ſleep in darkneſs, and Non-exiſtence.

2. After God had decreed to make thee, and to give thee an exiſtence and actual being, yet thou wert in reality ſtill nothing, pure nothing in entity. Thy Pedigree is from nothing; thy Anceſtry, and that not far removed, is nothing. Job in the view of his own rottenneſs and corruption, humbles himſelf, Chap. 17. 14. I have ſaid to Corruption, thou art my Father; to the Worm, thou art my Mother and my Siſter: But in rehearſing thy Original from whence thou cameſt, I may ſay that nothing, pure nothing, was thy great Grand-mother: Thy body was immediately made of duſt; that was thy next Mother by that Line; but that Duſt was made of the firſt rude Earth, without form, and that was thy Grandmother; but that Earth was made purely of nothing; ſo then nothing was thy great Grand-mother. Thus of thy Body: Then for thy Soul, that was immediately created by God out of nothing, and ſo by that line thy next Mother was nothing: And what was thy Soul twenty, thirty, or forty years ago, and ſo many years upwards? Plain nothing: It is obſervable how in the Scriptures, when God's confounding the Creatures is expreſſed, the Threatning runs in theſe terms, a bringing them to nothing. So in 1 Cor. 1. 28. he takes μὴ ὄντα, Things that are not, (that is, are as if they were not, as to ſuch an effect as God uſeth them for) even to bring to naught things that are, that is, to nothing, as the oppoſition ſhews: In theſe terms the Sentence of Confuſion, and the deſtruction of things that are, is penned; as thereby reminding them, how that their firſt root and original was nothing; and ſo does ſpeak in a way of reflexion upon what once they were: Even as when he threatned Adam to turn him to duſt, Out of duſt thou cameſt, ſays he; in a way of debaſing of him, minds him of his deſcent and original. And in like Phraſe of Speech Job utters their deſtruction, abeunt in nihilum, they go away, or vaniſh to nothing; that is, is, pereunt, they periſh. The like in Iſaiah 41. 11. and 34. 12 and 40. 23. He bringeth the Judges to nothing. And further, as if the Creatures had by inſtinct a common ſenſe of their Nothingneſs, if God do but chaſtiſe them, preſently we cry out to God, Bring me not to Nothing; ſo affraid are they of becomming Nothing: Yea, and in extremities of diſtreſs, are apt to wiſh they were nothing, nor had ever been. And in this Language the Prophet Jeremiah utters his fears, Jer. 10.24. Correct me not in thine Anger, leſt thou turn me to nothing: If we are but touch't, we apprehend that we are in danger of becoming Nothing. All miſeries are ſmaller vacillations or reelings of the Creature towards their firſt Nothing; we are like thoſe ſlight ſmall green flies that creep upon leaves in Summer; we Men cannot touch them ſo gently but they dye. The whole Creation is built upon a Quagmire of Nothing; and is continually ready to ſink into it, and to be ſwallowed up by it; which maketh the whole, or any part of it, to quake, and quiver, when God is Angry; as Jeremiah there did. The Foundation of the Creatures changeability to ſin (when as at firſt made near to Holy) is by our Divines put upon this, That we being made out of Nothing, are apt to verge, and ſink into Nothing, and ſo fall towards it in ſinning: And truly ſin is a great leap, or fall rather, and tottering towards it; and we may view our own Nothingneſs moſt by it: And did not God, in the juſt act of our reeling towards ſinning, put a ſtop, and uphold our beings, we ſhould fall to Nothing: But, then he ſhould want an object, or a Subject to puniſh for ſin, or to be ſenſible of ſin. Chap. 3.

Humble your ſelves therefore in the apprehenſion of this; and look, as in point of Sanctification, although God giveth ſo great a meaſure of it to his Chiſdren, and maketh them very holy; yet in the point of juſtifying them, he would have them for ever to look upon themſelves as ungodly, becauſe once they were ſuch; as Rom. 4. 5. And Paul, whilſt he did never ſo much, ſaith, yet I am nothing. Thus here; though he hath given us a being and Exiſtence, yet becauſe we once were Nothing, and that was the ſtate (if a ſtate) he found us in, he would ever have us account our ſelves as Nothing; though now by his Grace, having All Things, as the Apoſtle ſays.

3. This made Being of ours, when it is made and termed Being (as it is in Acts 17. 28. In him we live, and move, and have our Being:) Yet that Being is not only derived purely from him, and his efficiency, but farther it is but equivocally, and falſely called Being; as the Apoſtle ſpeaks of the knowledge the Gnoſticks boaſted of, Science, falſely ſo called. It hath but the Name of Being; but in reality is but the ſhadow of Being: Even as the ſhadow, or picture of a Man is falſely and equivocally termed a Man: All of a Picture is but a ſhadow of the Man.

4. God and Chriſt only have the Name of Subſtance; as Prov. 8. 21. Being both Name and Thing is proper only unto God; who is ὁ ὤν, as the Septuagint ſtill renders the Name Jehovah: or as Plato from thence, τὸ ὄν, in truth is ſaid of God alone: For which here the Pſalmiſt, Pſal. 83. 18. That Men may know that thou, whoſe Name alone is Jehovah, art the moſt high over all the Earth. And what other is the Scripture Language of Man, and the greateſt of Men? All of Man, and about Man, are therein compared to a ſhadow; his actions, and courſes, a ſhadow, Pſal. 39. 9. Surely every Man walketh in a vain ſhew, (or Image, as in the Hebrew;) Leads an imaginary life, rather than life it ſelf; ſo Ainſworth: And as his ways, ſo is himſelf; and that in his beſt and moſt flouriſhing Eſtate: Thus in the 5. Verſe of that Pſalm, Verily, every Man (both in his Perſon, his Being, the Circumſtances of his life) take him at the beſt, every way, he, and his beſt Eſtate, is altogether vanity; all Vanity: Which Vanity is all one in account with Nothing, or no Being: As in the ſame Verſe, My worldly time is as nothing before thee: [My ſubſtance] ſo the Septuagint renders it: [My Body] as the Caldee: As Nothing, not only as compared with God, but afore God, and in his judgment and valuation of him: And that he ſays it of his time in this World, that his days are nothing, it imports that his Exiſtence, and himſelf are ſuch: For to ſay, a mans time in this World is ſuch, or ſuch, connotates his Exiſtence and Being in the World: And to ſay a ſhadow, is all one as to ſay, it is but a Being in ſhew, and not in reality: And that we find abundantly ſaid Job 14. 2. and Chap. 8. 9. and Pſal. 122. 11. and 144. 5. and make the beſt you can of it, a ſhadow is but a Middle between Non-entity, and true Being. The Platoniſts ſaid, God only in truth [is,] and all things elſe [ſeem but to be] which anſwers unto David's, expreſſion, in a ſhew: And truly God himſelf ſpeaks of all the whole Creation at no other rate: And his valuation and judgment is a righteous judgment, Iſai. 40. 15. Behold, the Nations are as a drop of a Bucket, and are counted (Namely by God) as the ſmall Duſt of the Ballance: He firſt, in the ballance wherein he weighs them, leſſens them, and compares them to things that are of no valew or regard with Men; things neither here nor there, as we ſay. The drop of a Bucket, when it falls from the Bucket upon the Earth, the matter thereof is ſo ſwallowed up into the Earth and the Duſt of it, as it is not ſo much as ſeen any more, but vaniſheth away as it were to nothing: The ſmall duſt of the Ballance hath no ſway at all on the Beam, to ſtir it one way or other; it makes it neither lighter, nor heavier: And if they be ſevered from the Bucket, and the Ballance, they are not miſſed; they make no Vacuum, no emptineſs in either.

Solum Deum revera eſſe, cætera vero videri. Marſilius Ficinus, Epiſt. 8. Dr. Twiſs in his oppoſitions to Dr. Jackſon on the Attributes, who diſcourſeth this equivocal being of Creatures at large, objects this, That yet Picture is a true Picture, although not the Man; and ſo the Creatures, thought but ſhadows, and the beſt of them the image of God, yet ſtill withal that they are vere intia, Truly Beings: But I reply: If God only be ſaid to be Being it ſelf, and to have both Being, Name, and Thing, proper to him alone, as the Scriptures ſpeak; then by the ſame reaſon, That the Picture of a Man is not the man, allowing it yet to be a true Picture; ſo the Creatures are not true Being, but barely the ſhadow of it: And it is not enough to ſay they are not God; but if to be God be only to have being, then they are but the ſhadows of Being.

But yet you will ſay, that however theſe ſpeak ſome entity or being, though but ſmall, and though of no moment or conſequence, yet of entity they partake ſomthing. He goeth on Verſ. 17. caſting them yet lower; All Nations before him are as nothing, &c. And yet ſtill you will ſay, that Particle [As] Nothing, is but a diminitive; that though in eſteem and regard they are as nothing, yet ſtill in ſome ſmaller kind of reality they are ſomthing; though compared with a greater, they are as Nothing. But I anſwer, That that kind of Speech ſpeaks what a thing is in deed, and in truth: As in that Speech, John 14. The glory [as] of the only begotten Son of God; the import of that [as] is not a diminution, as if it were not in reality, what is ſaid of it, the excelling glory of the Son of God in truth; but that it was truly and indeed ſuch a glory as was proper to him, and proportionable to him that was the Son of God. And that he might here yet ſpeak the reality of their Nothingneſs more plainly, he adds, they are counted to him leſs than nothing] Pluſquam nihil, as the Hebrews hath it: Concerning which, if it be again ſaid, That they were but nothing at the worſt, but why leſs than Nothing? The account to me is this, that now when he made them, and had been at the expence and power to make them and uphold them, yet they had for any thing he acquires by them, been as good have been Nothing ſtill; and ſo are leſs then Nothing, by reaſon of the coſt he hath been at, and expectation (as ſpeaking after the manner of men) he might look from them, they were not worth his producing out of Nothing; yea, it had been better they had been nothing ſtill. Another account is, That this being a comparative of what the Creatures are unto the great God, there is, now that they are made, a leſs diſtance and diſproportion between the Creatures and nothing, than is between God and the whole Creation. For if you meaſure the diſtance between the Creatures, now they are made, and Nothing, if God ſhould return them unto it, it were but a finite diſtance privatively conſidered; for their annihilation would be but privatio finiti, the depriving them of a finite good and Being; but the diſtance between Gods Being, and theirs, is infinite, yea, and in excellency and tranſcendency, more diſtant than was betwixt Nothing, and the Creatures before they were made, Though Philoſophers would aſcribe an infinite diſtance negatively conſidered, yet no ſuch as that wherein God is above us; and ſo they are leſs every way to God, than nothing is to themſelves: And therefore to conclude this, if there could have been ſuppoſed a greater diſtance any way imaginable, whereby to have expreſſed the diſtance of God and the Creature, which ſhould have caſt them down lower than this of being leſs than nothing, God would have expreſt it thereby: But take them barely as Creatures, and you cannot ſpeak lower of them. Oh the infinite Height and depth of God, which Zophar ſpeaks of, Job. 11. 8. to whom the Creatures are leſs than Nothing. Chap. 3.

Our Divines therefore reckon not God in point of Arithmetick, together with us; they caſt not God and us, into the ſame Numbering. They do not ſay of him, that he is Unus, or One; though he be the firſt, and great One, and ſo go on to Number the reſt of things: No, they ſuffer not Creatures to bear or ſuſtain the repute and account of Number after him, or when he is ſpoken of. They ſay of him, that he is Unicus, the only One, that ſtands apart by himſelf out of all Arithmetick; (as his tranſcendent being comes not under our Logick:) which is in effect the ſame that God by the Prophet Iſaiah ſpeaks. Our acuter Commentators on thoſe paſſages in Chapters the 3d, 4th, 5th (wherein God ſets himſelf out alone the true God, I am Jehovah, and there is none elſe; there is no God beſides me: I am the firſt, and the laſt: And the like to theſe, which you find up and down in thoſe (Chapters) do obſerve, that though his diſpute, or rather an over-diſputing diſcovery of his Creatures, be pitcht for the confuſion of the Idol Gods of Heathens, that yet his arguings do riſe higher than ſimply againſt thoſe Idols, their being Gods: But involves in the confutation thereof, that as Creatures, they had no Being, much leſs as Gods. Thus Chap. 43. 10. compared with Verſ. 13, Before the day was, I am he; and therefore accordingly ſtill mentions his Name Jehovah, his Name that aſſures wholly the Name of Being to him; and as of them, ſpeaks up and down of his being the Creator, and Former of them, as meerly out of Nothing; and will you take them, and make Gods of them? Thus his Argument lies: And when in Chapt. 45. 5. (as in the concluſion of that Diſcourſe) he ſpeaks thus, Verſ. 5, 6, 7. I am the Lord, and there is none elſe; there is no God beſides me: I girded thee though thou haſt not known me; That they may know from the riſing of the Sun, and from the Weſt, that there is none beſides me: I am the Lord, and there is none elſe: I form the light, and Create darkneſs; I make peace, and Create evil: I the Lord do all theſe things: He manifeſtly points the dint of his Speech in relation to them as Creatures; and not as Gods only ſet up by Men. And he was the Creator of all things, who only had therefore being in himſelf; and ſo did, or made all thoſe things: As his ſaying is, Verſ. 7. And that therefore there was not only no God beſides him, but that their Gods (as Creatures) had no being but he alone, whoſe Name was being, or Jehovah. As to ſuch a ſenſe as this, I underſtand the order of thoſe words in Verſ. 5. (taking in all theſe things that ſtand round about it) I am Jehovah, and none elſe; there is no God beſides me: That the forepart of that Speech is applied to the Point of Being and Exiſtence: I am Jehovah, that is, Being it ſelf only, and none elſe. For then over and above beſides, he adds, There is no God beſides me; that is, no Creature [Is] no God to be ſure beſides him. So as their ſwelling words uſed of the Creatures to be ſtiled [All things] beſides him, doth in reality, and effect, come but juſt to the ſame account as if you would ſet down a multitude of Cyphers apart by themſelves, and then ſay of the account of them, there is a Million, or many Thouſands of them; which is a vaſt Number in ſound of words, and reacheth a long way in Figures; but yet ſtill they are but a Million of Cyphers; and what comes that to? Even to juſt Nothing; becauſe there is not ſo much as one real Number of their rank or kind, to ſet afore them. All and every Creature being Nullius Numeri, as we ſay, bearing no account; all of them make not ſo much as an Unite, an One in truth; but they are empty Shadows, appearances of Being: All, and every one of them.

See Gataker in the Engliſh Annot. on the words.

To apply all this to humble you as Creatures: Look as this falſe and fictitious Name of Idols their being Gods, is but an impoſed, and equivocal title; whereas an Idol is really Nothing: 1 Cor. 8. 4, 5. We know that an Idol is nothing in the World, and that there is none other God but one: For though there be that are called Gods, whether in Heaven or in Earth, (as there be Gods many, and Lords many:) It is no ſuch thing: So in like manner we may ſay of the Creatures, There are Creatures many, that have the title of being, the Name; yea, are ſtiled All things, in that following 16th Verſe; yet in reality, and truth, they are Nothing; as, and afore God; and humble your ſelves therefore for your Idolatry, and too high valuation of your ſelves; All is as nothing: This Parallel of our ſelves with Idols, in this reſpect to humble us, is not mine, but the Prophet Iſaiah's, Chap. 41. ult. Behold, you are as nothing, and your works are nothing: He ſpeaks there of their Idols. They had made Gods for themſelves, and his intent and meaning is (thereby to humble them) as if he had ſaid; Lo! here the Idols you make your Gods, and give a Being to; ſuch as ſuch, are really nothing, though fictitiouſly, in your imaginations made your Gods: Even ſo your very ſelves, (though you aſſume, and arrogate the Name of Being and Greatneſs to your ſelves) your ſelves are nothing, if you be compared with the Great God, whoſe Glory you corrupt, and turn into a lye in your ſetting thoſe Creatures like your ſelves up for Gods: And his Speech is ſimilar unto that of the Pſalmiſt, They that made them, are like unto them; even ſo Iſaiah here: They are Nothing, and you are Nothing.

OF THE

CREATURES,

AND THE

CONDITION

OF THEIR

State by Creation.

BOOK II.

Of the first Estate of Men and Angels by their Creation. What were the Laws and Rights of Creation; and what was equitably due between the Creator and his Creature. Of the state of the first Man Adam in Innocence, and what were his Circumstances in that his Primitive Condition.

CHAP. I.

What was the Law of Creation on God's part: It was but what became and was worthy of the great Creator to do all for his Creatures that such a Religion required. This consisted in two things: First, To endow them with the Image of Holiness to qualifie them to attain their designed End, which was to know, love, and enjoy him. Secondly, To continue his goodness and favour to them, as long as they continued in their Duty and Obedience. The Condition of both Angels and Men, by the Law of their Creation, common and equal, for substance.

MY Design in this Discourse is, in the end, To magnifie the Supercreation Grace of GOD in Election, and the Glory of Christ as our Head, and a Saviour, which was to be revealed upon our faln Condition, though ordain- ed afore all worlds. And I judged it greatly conducible to this end, to begin next to ſet out the right and true meaſure of our ſtate and condition, by virtue of our firſt Creation, as we came forth out of God's hands firſt, with the dues and priviledges belonging to it; and not of ours only, but of the Angels by their firſt Creation. By the view and compare of which, we ſhall be capacitated and enabled to deſtroy an infinite weight of that Supercreation Grace added by Election, that was ordained us, as it were, over the head of meer Natural or Creation Goodneſs: And we ſhall find, that it is not only, That we are ſinful and faln that affords matter and occaſion to exalt Supernatural Grace, but even our firſt original and beſt eſtate that preceded it.

This firſt Eſtate I would term, upon many accounts, the Eſtate of pure Nature by Creation Law; and as rightly as our Divines do call the Covenant we were by Creation brought into, Fœdus Naturæ, the Covenant of Nature, which is founded upon an equitable entercourſe ſet up betwixt God the Creator, and his intelligent unfaln Creatures, by virtue of the Law of his creating them, and as by their Creation they came forth of his hands. God dealing with the Creature ſingly and ſimply, upon the terms thereof, and the Creature being bound to deal with God according to that Bond and Obligation which God's having created him in his Image, with ſufficient power to ſtand, and having raiſed him up thereunto out of pure nothing, lays upon him.

And in the Subſtance of it, the Law was one and the ſame in common to us Men, and the Angels, in and by their Creation.

Now, that eſtate of the Angels, the Apoſtle Jude calls their FIRST, or rather ORIGINAL Eſtate, which they were endowed with from their very beginning, and was by Original Juſtice, their due, or their natural eſtate, that is, which they had from, by, or with their Creation, and by the Law thereof: which Eſtate being alike common to the good Angels, as well as the bad, before they left it, as the Apoſtle Jude ſays, is one part of the diſtinction between the Eſtate which the Angels, which are ſtill good and ſtanding, have by Election, as in Timothy, and this other part, of the original eſtate of Goodneſs, which in common they had by Creation.

And according to the true intent and import of the ſame diſtinction, I may ſtile this Goodneſs by Creation mans original Eſtate, and ours, and Adam's firſt Natural eſtate, in that Holineſs and Righteouſneſs, as we did come forth of God's hands. And if Adam had ſtood, and his Children had been begotten holy of him, (which is ſuppoſable by the Law of Creation they might have been) it might have been ſaid of them, That they had been holy and righteous by Nature, as truly as the Apoſtle doth the contrary, ſpeaking of men now faln, That they are Children of wrath by nature: yea, this latter is founded upon the former. Now, what eſtate we his Children ſhould have had (in that ſuppoſal) by Generation, the ſame, and no other, Adam he had by Creation. And as of us, it would have been ſaid, That we had that Holineſs by our Creation, although we had received it by natural Generation from him; yet it would have been the ſame, every way, and no other, (as to the ſtate it ſelf) which we his Children ſhould have had; only the way of Production ſhould have differed, that his was by Creation, ours by birth: Yea, and it was given him by Creation, to convey it to us by birth; and in that reſpect it might, and ſhould have been termed their primitive, firſt, original, natural Condition in him, and his Children to be begotten by him.

The firſt Covenant of Works, under which Adam was created, is termed by Divines, Fœdus Naturæ, the Covenant of Nature, that is, of Man's Condition, which from and by his Creation, was natural to him; yet I would rather call it, The Creation Law, Jus Creationis; or of what was equitable between God, conſidered meerly as a Creator, on one part; and his intelligent Creatures that were endued with underſtanding and will, on the other, ſimply conſidered as ſuch Creatures, whether Angels or Men. The meaſure of which Law, in general, lay in an equitable tranſaction between God and them, a congruity, dueneſs, meetneſs, on either part.

On

On God's part, I would call it a dueneſs, remembring how Paul prohibits the word recompence as any way challengeable by any, or all the Creatures, Rom. 11. 35. Who hath firſt given to him, and it ſhall be recompenced unto him again? and he ſays it to exclude all recompence. So that this dueneſs imports only what it became God to do, and was worthy of him, in ſuch or ſuch a caſe; as he uſeth the word, Hebr. 2. 10. For it became him, &c. ſo as the meaning is in this only reſpect, That if God would pleaſe to create two ſuch ranks of Creatures, Angels and Man, it became him to do to and for them, what was worthy of ſuch a Relation, of a bountiful Creator, to each in their kind, not yet exceeding what that Relation of a Creator, conſidered ſimply as ſuch, required: So as if he did exceed it, it was but what was an Overplus, as his aſſiſting them, in cauſing them to ſtand ſo long as they did; otherwiſe God himſelf condeſcended to make an Equity the Rule of his Will in that Covenant of Works, condeſcending to mitigate the abſolute rigidity of it, and to moderate it unto the Jews, (who clamour'd him in Ezekiel) yielding from his Curſed is every one that obeys not in every thing. Upon this he Anſwers the Clamours of the Jews, Ezek. 18. 17, 29. Are not my ways equal, ſaith he: When he offered, that if one, who had been never ſo great a ſinner, would turn from his evil ways, and the like, he would receive him, and abundantly pardon: As on the contrary, If having been ſo righteous before, he begins to turn away from it, he muſt loſe the benefit of all his former Obedience. This was fair for God to offer, and his ways therein equal. Yet God knew that this was unpracticable by them; but to convince them, he tried them by that offer, as Chriſt did the young man in the Goſpel, when he put him upon keeping the Commandments, and there left him. Chap. 1.

And ſuch like Equity may be conſidered in Gods firſt founding the Covenant of Creation: 1. In what he would beſtow in and by the Act of Creation it ſelf, in them. He gave all that was due, or convenient and meet for the Natures of ſuch Creatures, to attain their End of Happineſs in a proportioned Communion with himſelf. And although it was free for him, whether to have created them, or not created them; yet if he reſolved ſo to create ſuch, his Will regulated it ſelf by what was meet for their Natures, as ſuch, to receive from him, and for him as a Creator to give.

In every work of God's, he obſerveth a dueneſs or becomingneſs according to the kind of it: So in the work of Redemption in its kind, in which he was yet at a far greater freedom, than in this of the firſt Creation. And in this ſenſe the Apoſtle is bold to uſe the Phraſe of what becomes God in ſuch, or ſuch a Sphere to do: Thus, (Hebr. 2. 10.) it became him, for whom are all things, and by whom are all things, in bringing many Sons unto glory, to make the Captain of their Salvation perfect through Sufferings. Now, in the work of Creation in its kind, as in other works in their kind, God regulates himſelf by the meaſure of a dueneſs and becomingneſs between him and the Creature. And although there could be no Obligation, ſimply conſidered, in him that works all according to the Counſel of his Will, freely; yet his Will regulated it ſelf by what that ſame Counſel judged moſt becoming him to do, as that which his Counſel judged ſo to be: And ſo in this work of Creation, God would beſtow ſuch Faculties and Powers, as the Creature it ſelf could any way judge requiſite to his performing the work of a Creature of an Intelligent Nature. Thus, in caſe God reſolved to do ſuch or ſuch a thing, he would do it ſuitably to the matter of it, and what the Nature of the thing required; and worthy and like himſelf, and the Relation he takes upon him, by doing ſuch or ſuch a work. The truth is, He obſerves it as his Rule in all things, as that Text forementioned inſinuates; and of all other Works, let no man be offended to ſay, God ſet himſelf an equitable Rule or Law in this his firſt and bottom work of Creation, wherein yet he was moſt free to have begun it, or not begun it. Thus in General.

For

Book II. For the Particular Requiſites on God's part, and but ſo far as is now enough to my preſent Scope; I ſhall mention but two.

Firſt, That if God would create intelligent Natures out of nothing, it became him to endow them with his own Image of Holineſs, &c. whereby they might be able to know, to love, and to enjoy a Communion with him, and Happineſs from himſelf, as their chiefeſt Good. Which, as it was God's bountiful gift to beſtow: So the very Nature of ſuch a Creature required it as convenient, meet, and ſuitable to its Nature, and without which, it had been imperfect, yea, miſerable: For otherwiſe, thoſe vaſt Faculties of Underſtanding and Will, had been left empty, and like an hungry Stomack (of a Gyant, ſuppoſe) continually craveing, when it hath only crumbs of Food, and drops of weak Water. Nor could they otherwiſe have attained their main End, or arrived at their convenient Happineſs, which the very Natures of them were conſtituted and fitted for, which can be filled with Nothing, but a Communion with God: And all Creatures, and Creature Comforts, if alone vouchſafed without an Intelligent Communion with God himſelf, had been but as a Drop to a Ciſtern. That whereas God had provided for every Senſitive, or other Faculty in Man himſelf, and other Creatures, a meet Object ſuited in Nature to them; and for Mans bodily perſon, all comfort, a meet help, &c. as the Woman is termed; He had left Mens Souls, and in them thoſe noble Powers of Underſtanding and Will, deprived of their chief Object; they had been ſhut out from the Communication of the Life of God, in which their happineſs lay: Which bleſſedneſs alſo muſt ariſe from a Natural Suitableneſs concreated in thoſe Faculties, and with them, whereby they might be enabled to know, love, and delight in God. And in ſuch a Convenient Meetneſs to enjoy God, muſt this holineſs conſiſt; as alſo in an inward Principle, and Divine diſpoſition in every Faculty ſuited to, and agreeing with every Law God had, as a Creator Commanded; Naturally carrying, and wholly enclining them to fulfill it, which was the Law of God written in their Hearts, in the full perfection of it, and as the due perfection of them; and thereby it did become their Natural perfection by this Creation Law. And ſurely, if the things of the Law, are ſaid [by Nature] to be written in Mans Heart now faln, this is but a ſhadow of that full and perfect, exact Copy of the whole and Holy Law which was then Mans Nature much more. Theſe things therefore were to intelligent Natures a Creation due; and in that reſpect, Natural to them, or which the Nature of them required; and it became God as a Creator to give, them when he would Create them.

2. And Secondly, on God's part, as a Creator, it was requiſite to continue his favour and goodneſs to them, and that happy Eſtate he had ſet them in, whilſt he did continue their being, whether of Adam in Paradiſe, or the Angels in that Paradiſe above, the place of their Creation, which they ſhould enjoy, if they continued to keep their firſt Eſtate of Holineſs, &c. This was alſo a meet and equitable due, for God, as a faithful Creator, to give, and was correſpondent to this their begun happy Condition, and was all the promiſe that I know of, made to ſuch obedience.

That whereas God, in thr view of his own heights of Holineſs and Soveraignty might, after ſome time and experiment, have ſaid; I ſee at beſt you are but unprofitable Servants, and ſo not have regarded their low Creature-Services, as any way coming up to the immenſe deſires and aims of his great Holineſs, yet he would continue his love and favour at the ſame height which he proſecuted them withal at their firſt Creation, and ſo they ſhould live in keeping his Commandments.

And this alone was of it ſelf a great Promiſe, and an abundant reward, though they had never been advanced to an higher Glory or Priviledge. And this was all the Promiſe we read of, If thou do theſe things, thou ſhalt live, namely, in doing of them: And this was their life, and yet ſuitably, but Creation dues, and an Equity by Creation Law. For if Providence be a continual Creation, then a Providential Law from God, and the continuation of our firſt Pa-

Parents, and ſo of us, in that firſt Creation life and happy Eſtate, whilſt they continued obedient, was but an extenſion of that firſt Creation goodneſs out of which God firſt put them in that Eſtate; and ſo, but a continuation of the ſame Law, and but a repeating, every moment they ſtood, that Complacency he had at firſt in them, when he made them; and it was but the like, in its proportion, unto what he continues to all his other Creatures in their ſphere, that keep his Ordinances to this day: And it is a dueneſs that in meetneſs and equitableneſs is to be diſpenſed to his that worketh and continueth therein, out of that Juſtice that is in God, as a Creator, to his unſinning Creature, continuing holy. Chap. 1.

This Condition of Angels by the law of their Creation, and of Man, for ſubſtance, is common to them both: However Men and Angels might and do differ in degrees of Excellencies, in reſpect of their meer Creation Holineſs even as they differ in their ſtrength (The Excelling wherein is given to the Angels) as alſo in their habitation proper to each, as Jude 6. the one Created on Earth, the other in ſome of the Heavens; yet it is a difference but of rank or degree, ſuch as between Nobles and Commons, in an higher and lower Houſe. God made Man a little lower than the Angels; That is in reſpect of degrees ſo far, as that Pſalm is to be underſtood of Adams or Mans Condition by Creation. Though it hath an higher reference unto Chriſt Jeſus, as Man; yet ſtill this degree of lowneſs in the one, and height in the other, had for the ſubſtratum of it, in either, the ſame Common Law of Creation Perfections, and the Rules thereof do take hold of both alike in their ſeveral ranks, and with their ſeveral degrees. I will not therefore now debate what differing excellencies each of theſe had proper to themſelves in their ſeveral Capacities and Spheres; or the differences of the Original Condition of both theſe, Angels and Men, from what their now preſent ſtanding in Grace, and hereafter in Glory, do afford.

This we may ſafely ſay, That the difference of their Condition was not ſo great, as that they ſhould ſee God's face in that manner, as Chriſt doth. The Angels, though created in one of the Heavens, by their Creation did not ſo enjoy God; 'Tis Chriſt's ſole honour to bring that firſt up; Who hath ſeen God at any time? No Man hath ſeen God at any time, the only begotten Son, which is in the boſom of the Father, he hath declared him. John 1.18. This Grace and Truth came only by Jeſus Chriſt, Verſ. 17.

The Law was the ſame for ſubſtance that ours. That under a Law they were made, is evident, for elſe there had not been ſin in them that fell: But 'tis expreſs, they did; 2 Pet. 2. 4. and ſin is a tranſgreſſion, of not only a Law, as Rom. 5. 13. but of the Law, as being one in Common to all Creatures, 1 John 3, 4. And every Man that hath this hope in him purifieth himſelf, even as he is pure. Whoſoever committeth ſin, tranſgreſſeth alſo the Law: For ſin is the tranſgreſſion of the Law. That the firſt Commandment Duty is the Common Law to Angels and Men, as to love God, fear God &c. This is ſo plain as none may deny it.

2. The third, Not to take God's Name in vain; the Devil is a Blaſphemer, and ſo breaks this Command.

3. If there be Superiour and Inferiour Ranks of Angels, as Michael an Archangel, Thrones, Dominions, Principalities and Powers, Col. 1. 16. Then a reverence from the Inferior Orders to all their Superiours muſt be due; and ſo the fifth Command is an Obligation upon them.

4. The Sixth Command, Thou ſhall not kill, binds the Angels as a Law. For Satan is a Murtherer from the beginning; which could not have been ſaid, if that Command had not been violated by him in ſeeking Mans deſtruction.

5. The ninth Command, Thou ſhalt not bare falſe witneſs, reaches the Angels themſelves; for the Devil, as a breaker of this Law, is A Lyar from the beginning; and Michael, in Jude 9. as obliged by this Command, Durſt not bring a railing accuſation againſt Satan.

6. The

6. The Tenth, Thou ſhalt not Luſt, has a reſpect to the Angels; elſe why does Chriſt charge Luſt on the Devil, as his ſin? John 8. 44. You are of your Father the Devil, and the Luſts of your Father you will do. What are they but Pride, Envy, Hatred, Malice, &c. And the good Angels, in Obedience to this Command have a Love to the Saints; O Daniel, greatly beloved, ſays Gabriel, to that Prophet, Dan. 10. 11. They have alſo a zeal for the Saints, and joy in their converſion, Luke 15. 7. But if they ſhould not have the ſame, Laws in all things, that we Men have, yet it muſt needs be ſaid, that they are under very many Laws, that are given to us Men.

Yet it is enough for what I intend, that their Covenant by Creation ran upon the ſame terms, that ours of works does; the tenor or terms of the Law is the ſame: So as ſuppoſe they had not altogether the ſame Laws, yet they were under the ſame fundamental Sanction of Puniſhment, and Reward. Upon one ſin, all their happyneſs was to be forfeited, as upon ours it was: Their Eſtate was changed by ſinning, as ours alſo was.

The ſame Puniſhments take hold upon them, though not the ſame bodily, as Death, unto which the Angels are not obnoxious, for they can never dye; But what death Spirits are capable of, we, and they undergo the ſame: We were both alike caſt off from God; we were expelled paradiſe; They were thrown down out of Heaven into Hell; and at the Laſt Day, the ſame Sentance ſhall be pronounced againſt both, Go you curſed into Everlaſting fire, prepared for the Devil and his Angels; Matth. 25. 41. As in a State there may be different Laws, yea, variety of Priviledges to Nobles, and others in a Kingdom, and yet the fundamental Maxims for Life, Death, and Forfeiture, be the ſame to them all.

They had alſo the ſame Mutability, that was in our Condition, and ſtood upon the ſame ground, and terms, that we did: It was their being made out of nothing, and ſo meer Creatures, as well as we, that was the cauſe of their fall: So that we are ſure, they ſtood as tickliſhly, as we; no more Aſſiſtance in their ſtate, and proportion than Adam in his. We are ſure, that God took the Forfeiture upon one act of ſin committed by the Angels that ſinned; for God ſpared not the Angels that fell, but threw them immediately to Hell, as well as he doth us Men: Nor had they ſuch an high way of knowing God, or the enjoyment of him; as it is the higheſt Heavens, that might have kept them Infallibly from ſinning, for that Chriſt only hath brought up to behold Gods face in ſuch a perfection of Righteouſneſs, as to exclude all ſin acted, or the poſſibility of it.

CHAP.

Chap. 2.

CHAP. II.

The Mutability of that first Estate. By its constitution, and their own weakness, both Angels and Men were liable to fall from it. God was not at all obliged as Creator, to preserve his Creatures in that first Condition effectually by his Grace. The Causes of their Mutability. To be Changeable is the Nature of a Creature, with difference from God, who only is Immutable. That the Creature being made out of Nothing, tends to a Deficiency.

THere needs no other, nor more certain proof, both of the foregone, and of those following Assertions, than the Event.

1. That these two sorts of Creatures, Angels and Men, might fall from their Original estate of perfect Holiness; for, de facto, of both sorts did fall; and the Angels that did not, were of the same frame, of the same brittle metal with the other of their Creation, and the dues thereof, were common to both: The Angels that sinned, (says Peter, Epist. 2. Chap. 2. verse 4.) The Angels that kept not their first state, but left their own habitation, says Jude, vers. 6. How much more might this befall Man, who dwells in houses of Clay? as it is argued in Job, from the stronger, the Angels, unto the weaker, Job 4. 18, 19. Behold, he put no trust in his Servants; and his Angels he charged with folly: How much less on them that dwell in houses of Clay, whose foundation is in the dust, which are crushed before the moth? And that, de facto, we are slain, we all, by sad and woful experience, have found.

2. The second is, That no Obligation was upon God, to keep either of them from so falling, by any Law of his having created them. This, the Event, also is a sufficient demonstration of; for if there had been such an Obligation upon him, his faithfulness is such, and love unto his Creature is such; as he would then certainly have kept them: That title of Faithfulness is annexed to his being Creator, 1 Pet. 4. 19. Wherefore, let them that suffer according to the will of God, commit the keeping of their Souls to him in well-doing, as unto a faithful Creator. The Argument then, from that he did not keep them, is invincible, That he was, as a Creator, absolutely free and disengaged from keeping them (without any breach of any due unto his Creature by the Law of his Creation) and doth sufficiently confirm all that is foregone in the former Chapter, concerning that Entercourse settled betwixt God and us, by Creation: Nor would the holy God have put that high Sarcasm, or bitter, (yet just) Retortion upon man when he had sinned, which struck at the very Spirit of his sin, Man is become like one of us, which had been the very inward pith and substance of his sinning, which compared together with the Tentation [ye shall be as Gods] shews, that that was it had taken them: God, I say, would not have upbraided them with that severe Sarcasm, if he had been engaged to preserve them from sinning, and yet was wanting to do it.

3. Nor must we lay upon God, any influence of his, into either of their falls: As God is not himself tempted with evil; so, nor tempteth he his Creature unto evil, James 1. 13, 14. Let no man say when he is tempted, I am tempted of God: for God cannot be tempted with evil, neither tempteth he any man. But every man is tempted, when he is drawn away of his own luſt, and enticed. He carried himſelf in that matter preciſely, according to the exact dues of Creation: He diſpenſed all the influence that was due thereby; and more he did not vouchſafe, meerly becauſe as a Creator, he was not obliged thereto. And God ordered it thus, that the difference between that Creation influence and aſſiſtance, and the efficacious aſſiſtance of Grace, which he gave the Angels that ſtood, and meant to give to his Elect, called Ones; might be manifeſt from that which was by Creation due only; that, what was God's, might be given to God and his Grace; and what was the Creatures, might be given the Creature: For it is certain, that had God either inhibited the Devil from tempting, or had caſt in but a grain of aſſiſtance more than by Creation was due, into man's heart and will when tempted, and prevented but a meer negligence, or not-attendency to God and his Word, (for their ſin began with theſe at firſt, and they were the primum momentum of their verging) they had not ſinned. If when the eyes of their minds were next door towards a wink, God had given but the leaſt jogg, it had kept them awake. Likewiſe, God forbore nothing, but he was not bound to give; and it was free for him to do, or not to do. And unto this, of God's not being bound thereto, as on his part, doth Arminius himſelf put it. Nor had, nor could man be aforehand with God by any thing he had, or could do: For, all muſt be only by virtue of what he had received by Creation from God: And ſo, the Apoſtle's general Proclamation made on God's behalf unto all his Creatures, reached Adam in that eſtate; Who hath firſt given to him, and it ſhall be recompenſed unto him again. The ſenſe whereof is, That God ſtands free, not upon Prerogative, but Equity, a Debtor unto Man; but at a perfect liberty, To give, or not to give, what he had not compacted for. And Chriſt ſays the ſame, on his behalf, to him that murmured, Matth. 20. 13. I do thee no wrong: Didſt not thou agree with me for a peny? And that I have paid thee.

Hoc impedimentum Deus præſtare non tenebatur. Theſ. de primo hominis peccato.

But, beſides this Argument from the Event, the Scripture ſays the ſame, with a Behold prefaced unto it, in two places: Job 15. 5. Behold, he putteth no truſt in his Saints. And, that he had put no truſt in them, is directly ſpoken in reſpect unto their Mutability, and the hazard of their failing him, in their ſerving him, if left unto themſelves. So, as we have God's judgment declared, That they were ſuch unſtable Creatures, that he had no confidence in them as ſuch: Which, if it be underſtood in the Preſent Tenſe, that, Now, ſince the fall, he putteth no truſt in his Angels that ſtood, yet ſtill it relates unto what in themſelves they are, and were by Nature, and would be, if God did not continue to uphold them. The ſame is ſaid in Chap. 4. 18. with another Behold again, Behold, he put no truſt in his Servants, and his Angels he charged with folly. Which latter is ſpoken as of the time paſt; upon an experience of the fall of ſome of them, that ſhewed the ſame changeableneſs to be incident to the reſt that ſtood; and that if God ſhould deal with them only according to that Law of their Creation, and leave them into the hands of their own Counſels, they would be as fooliſh as the reſt had been.

But, the greater Task of the two, is, to Evince what this Mutability was, and what the riſe of it was, in the Creature.

I begin with the later, The Riſe or Ground of it.

1. This changeableneſs in the Creature, is the condition of the Creature as a Creature, with difference from God. Of God, it is ſaid, James 1. 13. That God cannot be tempted with evil: And evil there, is the evil of ſin, with which the Creature is tempted, and is an oppoſite to that goodneſs, which is eſſential to God, whereof Chriſt ſpeaks, Matth. 19. 17. God only is good, and thereby differenceth God's goodneſs from the Creatures goodneſs, by declaring, That God alone is eſſentially good; and it riſeth to ſuch a Conſiſtency in his Nature, and height of tranſcendent Perfection, that it cannot admit of the leaſt impreſſion, touch, or tincture of evil to ſtain, yea, not to diſcoulour it; and therefore James expreſſeth it by this, He cannot be tempted, James 1. 13. It being a Contradiction to his Nature, as being God; as elſewhere, That he cannot lye, Titus 1. 2. and, Cannot deny himſelf; 2 Tim. 2. 13. Now, if theſe things things be ſaid of God, as he is God; then the oppoſite, (a capacity of being tempted with evil) muſt be intended thereby of the Creature, conſidered in its Creatureſhip. Chap. 2.

If any one ſay, James ſpeaks in the words afore and after, of and unto man faln, that is, tempted with his own luſt, verſ. 14. And ſo it is not an Argument to prove that the Creature, in its Original eſtate, was thus liable to Temptation with difference from God.

Anſw. 1. His ſaying, God cannot be tempted, being a ſetting forth an Attribute proper unto God; therefore, however in the occaſion of it, it may be an Exhortation unto men faln, &c. yet the Maxim extends further, and is not to be narrowed unto a Compariſon of God's Nature, in this reſpect, with corrupted Man; but in that it is made proper unto God, it muſt needs, in its oppoſition, expreſs the difference from all Creatures as Creatures.

2. It had been ſhort of the Glory which is due unto God, in this purity of his; yea, diſhonourable to have intended it, as a compariſon only between a Man faln that hath luſt in him already, that may tempt him; and the infinitely holy Nature of God, that hath no ſuch Principle in him, as thereby to ſet out the Perfection of God: For, it might be ſaid, That a Creature unfaln hath nothing in him to tempt him neither. Therefore God, his [cannot be tempted] muſt extend further, in full oppoſition to, and excluſion of, any Creature, in its beſt eſtate conſidered.

3. It may be ſaid of the ſtrongeſt meer Creature in its beſt eſtate, That it is liable to be tempted of its own Luſt, that may ariſe up in him, though he have no ſinful luſt as yet in him. The firſt ſin of our firſt Parents, was a luſt inordinate, to be as Gods; Self-love grew into a tumor, when once it heard but afar off, of ſuch a Preferment. And ſo of Satan; 'Tis ſaid, that when he ſinned, he ſinned of his own, John 8. 44. Ye are of your Father the Devil, and the luſts of your Father ye will do: he was a murderer from the beginning, and abode not in the truth, becauſe there is no truth in him. When he ſpeaketh a lye, he ſpeaketh of his own: for he is a liar, and the Father of it. Thereby alſo utterly exempting God from any the leaſt influence into his ſin.

The Socinians, who hold Man's Nature in his firſt Creation not to have been holy, but only indifferent unto good and evil, when we urge, That Man was created after God's Image, &c. They would retort this Abſurdity upon us; That then he muſt have been made immutably holy; for God's holineſs is an immutable holineſs in him; and therefore if Man had the Image of it by Creation, then he ſhould have had it immutably.

But, we eaſily anſwer, God could not communicate to us his Eſſential Holineſs, whereby he is differenced from the Creatures: That muſt be communicated only ſo far as it is communicable to a Creature. And all the Images that are made of a Man, do not import a communication of his Nature, but of his likeneſs; that is, a communication accidental, artificial, and not ſubſtantial: And ſo God begat his Son indeed, who is his ſubſtantial Image; but the Image of God in Creatures is not ſo; we had, and have but the Lineaments of his Holineſs.

A Second Ground of Mutability in the Creatures actings with difference from God, and his Unchangeableneſs in acting, is, That God is not Compounded of a Power to act differing from himſelf, i.e. his Eſſence; but himſelf is the Power wherewith he acts: He is Actus purus & ſimpliciſſimus; and therefore there is nothing can fall out or come between himſelf and his Power in acting, to weaken or hinder him in acting, nor to cauſe any failéur in his acting, and ſpecially in his activity of Holineſs, which is in Scripture termed himſelf: And therefore, whereas in one Scripture you read, he ſweareth by himſelf; in another you find, he ſweareth by his Holineſs; theſe are all one. His Holineſs alſo is that in him, whereby himſelf is his own end to himſelf: God's own Good and Happineſs is his ultimate End, and therefore he can never but act holily, for he acts by himſelf, and for himſelf; and ſo cannot fail in acting; but is holy in all his ways and works, and cannot be otherwiſe: For all in his acting, is himſelf, both his Power and his End, and all; yea, and are all

Book II. one and the ſame: But the Creature, his Power to do or act, is one thing, and himſelf is another: He acts not immediately by himſelf, but by a Power given him to act; and which is differing from himſelf, an accident in him, far differing from himſelf: Neither is himſelf his own End in acting; but God, by his Creature, is to be his End to act for, and by which he is to be moved in acting; and God, that is his End, is without him, and far above him: And therefore himſelf, with all theſe his Powers or Faculties, may faulter in acting when they come to be uſed and put forth; there may ſome deficiency come between his Power to act and his act it ſelf: as either, a Ceſſation to act, (for he is but Agens in potentia) when he ought; a falling ſhort, in not putting forth all its Power to the utmoſt; a remiſneſs, a ſlackneſs, may befall it; as in a Line ſtretched to the utmoſt, a wagling way fall out. As particularly, to inſtance; Firſt, the Creatures Underſtanding may fall into an incogitancy unawares, or a Non-advertency, or the want of Conſideration; in the twinkling of an eye it may be diverted from a ſtedfaſt act of eying God, as its trueſt good. And though God gave aſſiſtance, according to the due of Creation, whereby he had Power within himſelf to have kept attentive to God, yet take what was to be its own doing, its act thereupon, or duty; there a Ceſſation might fall out, an unattendency, a failing in its acting. Secondly, Alſo his Will, whoſe voice and office ſtill is, Who will ſhew us any good? And thereupon it is ſtedfaſtly to cleave to God; yet upon a Buz or Hear-ſay, of being put into a better Condition, even as Gods, knowing good and evil; the Will, to which it is innate to aim at its own good, (though then in ſubordination to God, it might) did, by as ſuddain deficiency and remiſs ſtation make an hault in his way and tendency towards Happineſs: As one that in the putting forth his hand, unto what is as high above him, as is poſſible for him to reach, takes hold by the way of ſomething that is lower and ſhort, through a finding ſome preſent eaſe to its motion in reaching unto what is higher; and the lower to ſuit his lower and inferiour ayms: And the Will was agog upon it; and it fell into a tumour of ſeeking its own excellency: And then the Will might, influence the underſtanding to take in the Conſideration, whether there might not be ſomething in that New propoſed way of Happineſs; and the appearance of it was ſo repreſented, as the yielding to the Temptation is plainly put upon this, That the Womans Underſtanding was deceived; So the Apoſtle in 2 Cor. 11. 3. and 1 Tim. 2. 14.

And this Defectibility may well be ſuppoſed, ſeeing it is granted by all, That there was that difference between the Condition of Saints and Angels now in Glory, and of the Angels and Adam in their Creation Eſtate; that in that of Glory, the manifeſtation of God to the Underſtanding of the Creatures, and the Communication of his Goodneſs to the Will, is ſo ſuper-abundantly full, filling them with all the fulneſs of God, that theſe Faculties and Powers are ſwallowed up into God. God his being All in All, as it chains up, and unchangeably fixeth the whole of the Soul unto him, that it cannot ceaſe or ſuſpend to cleave Immutably, to him, who is their Incommutable Happineſs, and ſo they cannot Sin. And had the Angels (who yet we cannot ſay, were in the higheſt Heaven of all) ſo enjoyed God, they could not have ſinned. But, the law and meaſure both for Angels and Men by Creation, was that God ſhould be ſo repreſented to them, as to give them a power to cleave to God as their chiefeſt Good, as they began to do: yet, in compariſon of the former, in ſo inferiour a way of manifeſtation, that as for the Underſtanding, in its own amplitude, and that variety of Objects it might meet with, and that might be preſented unto it, a room was left for a poſſibility, in its Creature activity, to caſt an unhappy glance towards the entertainment of a Conſideration of them. And, that Concurſe was ſuch with the Will, as the Will was ſtill left to a poſſibility, to ceaſe its going out from it ſelf up unto God, who was without it ſelf, and to begin to affect ſome other Excellency proper unto it ſelf: And as that which was ſuited unto that lower aim of ſelf-love, and ſelf-excellency. And the Evidence, that they were ſo left, (beſides the evidence the event gives) is, That God applied legal threatnings, Thou ſhalt dye the death, which in the life of Glory have no place nor influence; and all this might and did did proceed from this, That according to the neceſſary conſtitution of a Creator, they were but Agents in potentiâ, they were not pure Act, and ſo might ceaſe to act holily, whilſt yet they had the poſſe, the Power from God to Act holily. And by the Law of Creation, God was not obliged to give the act of Willing holily, but the Power to will; and therefore alſo he might Not-will, when yet he ought, and ſo ſinn'd. The act of Willing what was holy and good was not neceſſary in them, and therefore it might fall out, he might not will it. And the firſt Sin lay not in an act of willing ſomething elſe than God; nor in a poſitive Act of refuſing God; but a not willing, a ceaſing to will, as it had thitherto done. And yet, this was not Chance or Contingency, but accompanied with an Act of Will; to ceaſe, or forbear, to will that holy good thing it did. So as the firſt Sinning began not with a Motion of the Will; but with a defect, or ceaſing to Move, as it ought to have done: Upon which, the Underſtanding was, withal, deprived of its Spiritual light to guide the Will: In that Leaven was in the Will, (which, though but one Faculty, yet was the proper Seat of Sin) the whole lump was leavened, and that ſmall ſpeck of taint, begun in the Will, fum'd up into the Underſtanding, and darkned it; and that ſpiritual light being gone, it began to judge what the Devil propoſed to be their beſt Happineſs; and was deceived, as the Apoſtle ſays. And then the Will, having been averted from cleaving to its true and only Good, fell into a Tumour (as I ſaid) of affecting to be as Gods; and ſo Sin grew irrecoverably more and more upon them. This for a ſecond Ground of this Mutability. Chap. 2.

3. Add unto this, that farther Ground which the Fathers, (Auſtin eſpecially) have run upon, viz. That theſe Creatures, though excellent, were made out of meer Nothing; their Root was Nothing, and the Sap would be drawing down towards the Root, and withering, if not continually watered by Efficacious Grace. The Creature as a Creature, would be mouldring towards Nothing again, and would do it every moment, if by the word of God's Power it did not conſiſt. And although God hath by Charter endowed them with an Immortality (which is an Immutability, as to the ſubſtance of their being; which yet is by a meer participation; God, by Eſſence having only Immortality, 1 Tim. 6. 16.) yet ſtill he left this token of Mutability, That they might loſe their well-being, which Sin only could diſpoſſeſs them of. And Sin is but an imperect tendency, or verging or Reeling towards Nothing; only in the falling, God keeps them in ſubſtantial Being ſtill, that they might live to find and know their frailty, &c. To Sin, and to fail that way, is not indeed, ſays Auſtin, that which we call Nothing; but, ſays he, It is a tendency unto Nothing: And he gives this Reaſon, That, by how much any thing is excellent, and falls or declines, unto what is worſe; Or, by how much a thing is become worſe than God made it; by ſo much, it is become nearer unto Nothing; and ſo is in its degree, a falling towards Nothing: I would expreſs it thus, That Sin is not a falling into pure Nothing, for Entity; but a falling beſides, or Side-ways, into it: And yet, into what is worſe than Nothing, the perfect deſtruction of the Well-being of it. And, God thought meet to preſerve the Subſtance of their Being, that thoſe he Rejects, might have a Being continued, to feel the demerit of Sin; and in them he meant to Recover, ſeparating, in the end, their Sin and their Perſons, yet, that all might ſee their Original, and the Defectibility, might ſee an experiment of their firſt Nothingneſs, (which alſo they know not but by Faith) in that ſo many of both ſorts are caſt into Sin, which is, if not lower than Nothing, yet next degree unto it; and know themſelves to be but Creatures, that were Nothing; and that becauſe by the Law of God's Creation, he was not bound to have preſerved them in Being, he therefore ſuffered the Holineſs he had endowed them with, and which was Concreated with them, and yet was the Flower, the Excellency and perfection of their Being, and of more Worth, than all their Beings without it, utterly to come to Nothing.

Deficere, non eſt nihil: ſed tendet in nihilum, quando.

But yet further, the Holineſs which by Creation, both Angels and Men had, were but Adjuncts, Accidents, and Endowments, perfecting the well-being of them, and beſtowed upon them to perfect their Nature, as noble qua-

qualities and diſpoſitions uſe to do: But they were not Ingredients conſtitutive of the Natures of them, or any part or ingredient into the Eſſence of them; and yet natural to them, as perfectives of their Nature: And ſuch Creatures, or rather Concreateds with their Nature, may ceaſe and be loſt, without the ceaſing of the Subject it ſelf, that is endowed with them.

In the Controverſie we have with the Papiſts, we rightly affirm, That the Image of God in true Holineſs, was natural to man at his firſt Creation. But then, they put this Abſurdity upon our Aſſertion, That what is natural cannot be loſt; and that what was by a Supernatural act of God's, given the Angels and us, muſt be Supernatural.

We anſwer to the firſt, That there were three things in Man and Angels at the firſt, that made up theirs and our Nature: The ſubſtance of the Soul, which was, that it was a Spirit, and the ſeat or Subject of theſe other two that follow: As, 2. The Faculties of that Soul, that are eſſential to it, in this ſenſe, that they are Principia Naturæ conſtitutiva, Principles that do Conſtitute the Nature of a Man, and which, if taken away, a Man ceaſeth to be a Man; and ſuch are the Underſtanding, and Will, and Affections in the Soul; and ſo in an Angel, Underſtanding and Will. 3. There were further ſuch Ornaments and Diſpoſitions in thoſe Faculties, as were for the perfecting the Nature of the Soul, and whereby it might attain and be preſerved in Happineſs and Bleſſedneſs. The two firſt are, through God's Ordination, immutably beſtowed, both in Angels and Men; ſo as if either the Souls of Men ſhould ceaſe to be ſpiritual Subſtances, or the Angels to be Spirits; or come not to have an Underſtanding or Will, they would ceaſe to be either Angels or Men; and therefore, theſe two they retain, In omni ſtatu, in all States, both faln and unfaln Angels good and bad. But, the third, which was this of Holineſs, which perfected their Natures, they were and are liable to a Mutation in: For it was, and is, but a perfection in the Soul or Angel, which may Abeſſe vel adeſſe ſine ſubjecti interitu, be loſt and ceaſe without the ceaſing of the Subject they belonged unto, as pretious Stones or Herbs, may loſe their virtue, and yet be Stones and Herbs ſtill.

To the ſecond, we Anſwer, That though the Image of God were concreated with the Soul by a ſupernatural Operation of God's; that hinders not at all, that it ſhould be a natural Perfection to man's Nature, and natural in that very reſpect objected, That becauſe man came forth of God's hands by immediate Creation; even therefore it was meet and requiſite, yea neceſſary, that thoſe his Rational Creatures ſhould have this Image, as an endowment which was to enter into the Compoſition of their Nature: He had not elſe had that Perfection, which to the nature of their being Intelligent Creatures, was due: And, ſo though it were Supernatural in the production of it by God, as the Efficient; yet natural to the Subject that was made by God. It hinders this no more, than that becauſe the Creation of the Soul, and the Faculties of it, and the Union of it with the Body, were by a Supernatural Operation of God's, that therefore he was not naturally a Man.

But, this laſt Demonſtration proceeds upon this, That if theſe Creatures themſelves, are in the Subſtance of them as Creatures, mutable, and apt to be changed, and would ſink into their Nothing, if God upheld them not by the word of his Power: (And this mutability or aptneſs to periſh, at leaſt is affirmed of them, with difference from Chriſt, as is God, Hebr. 1.10,11,12. And, thou Lord, in the beginning haſt laid the foundation of the Earth, and the Heavens are the works of thine hands. They ſhall periſh, but thou remaineſt: and they all ſhall wax old as doth a garment. And as a veſture ſhalt thou fold them up, and they ſhall be changed; but thou art the ſame, and thy years ſhall not fail.) Then much more are theſe accidental Perfections mutable, and apt to be changed, further than as God ſhall put a ſtability into them.

CHAP.

Chap. 3.

CHAP. III.

Of the first state men run through, viz. that of Innocency. A brief Draught of all those several States or Conditions, through which God leadeth the Elect of Mankind. Together with a comparison of those States together.

OUR most holy, wise, and gracious God had in his everlasting Purposes (as by the Event appears) fore-ordained several Estates and Dispensations (whereof some are inferiour and subordinate one unto the other; and whereof one is utterly contrary and perfectly opposite to that Happiness he intended) which he would lead his Elect of Men through, as so many several degrees they take, yea and oppositions and hazards they are to pass through, e're the last and most Royal Crown of Glory be set upon their heads: And this he chose to do, to the end to magnifie and set forth the glory of his own Grace at last, as also to carry and lead us still on with wonder, from one unto the other: And to prepare us to entertain that consummate Happiness at last with unalterable Astonishment and Adoration. God hath not dealt thus with the Elect Angels, who have had no changes; but us, the Sons of men, he shifteth from Vessel to Vessel, and shifteth us first from one condition, then another, till he hath brought us to that utmost refinement, which may render us in the highest manner meet and capable of himself immediately. To this end he at first created us in a pure natural condition in Adam, and he the first of Mankind; to let us see our Imum or bottom, what by the Law of Creation it was, that was our due; and how remote we were by that due, from that Glory he supernaturally in Christ, the second Adam, had intended; that since Grace freely had designed us an higher, the disproportion might appear, That so what was the gift of Grace might rise up to its full glory. Then he lets us fall into sin and wrath, which utterly spoiled and defaced that first native Beauty we had by Creation, and plunged us into a contrary depth of misery. But then after that again, he gives forth the Gospel, which discovers Christ, as a Redeemer from sin and wrath, who withal brings a Life and Immortality to light, which by Faith apprehended by us, puts us into the state of Grace, and a participation of Christ; such as is suitable to the Relation of the Gospel in this Life, far excelling Adam's state.

But then last of all; and after all this God hath a Reserve, a surpassing weight of Glory to be revealed in us; and that also admits of its degrees, of which anon.

And these I thought best in this place to give the brief entire view of, not only for the pleasantness of the prospect, when in brief set together, but because it will serve as the cleerest Introduction or general Preface unto all the Treatises that are to follow, which have for their particular and set Subjects these several Estates and Conditions: This discourse being to handle the State of Adam in his purest naturals, with a Comparison between him and Christ, and his State, and our State of Grace under the Gospel. In other Discourses which are to follow, I shall, 1. Treat of Mans sinful and Corrupt Estate and the misery thereof, which serves further by way of Contraries, to magnifie the Glory of God's Grace, and his Christ, as revealed in the Gospel: Then, 2ly, the State of Salvation by Christ, which the Elect are brought and raised up into, by the Grace and work of all three Persons, which is rendred to us the more illustrious, both by the immediately preceeding misery which we

Book II. are delivered from, and then by its ſurpaſſingly excelling, that firſt and beſt Eſtate. Then 3ly, I ſhall diſcourſe of the laſt, and beſt Condition of the Elect, which is the State of Glory.

That which at preſent I am to do, is only;

1. To give an Account of Gods Diſpenſations herein,

2. Shortly to enumerate the particular States, and compare them in their comely Gradations or Subordinations of each to other.

For the firſt, the Account hereof conſiſts in two things.

1. That it is and hath been the manner of God, in other works of his, to Proceed by like ſteps and degrees. To proceed from leſs perfect to more perfect; and to put great diſtances and diſproportions, yea from Contraries.

2. The Reaſons of it.

The firſt contains two things in it.

1. That it hath been his manner in other works, which will help us to underſtand his proceeding in theſe. Thus in making this Viſible World; he firſt began with a rude Lump, that had no form, Gen. 1. 1. neither eſſential nor accidental; which was actually Nothing, potentially All things; therefore call'd Earth and Waters; but in truth a Darkneſs and deep Confuſion without form. Then he divides that Lump into four Lofts and Rooms, and puts in forms thereto to perfect that Maſs, and ſo makes the four Elements: then he finiſheth and fits up thoſe ſeveral Lofts and Chambers with inhabitants, garniſheth the fiery Heavens with Stars; fills the Waters with Fiſhes, the Air with Birds, the Earth with Beaſts. And of theſe, thoſe that had a more perfect Kind of Life, were ſtill Created in order, after the other more imperfect; and ſtill the latter containing in them the perfections of the former: And then laſt of all, Man, the End, the Exiſtence, the Lord of all, that hath the Excellency of Angels, Sun, Moon, and Stars in him, as Eccleſ. 12. 2.

And whereas God had another Man to come, The Lord from Heaven, who is God and Man, and for him to make another World, a new Heaven and a new Earth, which he intended more than this; yet his Ordination in his Decrees was to make this firſt World more imperfect, as the Preludium and Preparative to this new World of Chriſt's: Which Ordination and Method of his, the Apoſtle hath expreſly ſet before us, as heedfully to be noticed by us, 1 Cor. 15. 46. where ſpeaking of both theſe men, Adam's, and their Worlds, That was not firſt which was ſpiritual; that is, That man Chriſt, and that Eſtate of ſpiritual Perfection he brings in, was not to be firſt, but laſt: But firſt that which was natural, and afterwards that which is ſpiritual. God laid that Eſtate of Adam but as the firſt rude draught, the ground work to be filled up. God proceeded ab imperfectiori ad perfectius, by degrees from natural to ſpiritual. And in the framing and rearing up this new ſecond World, he obſerves the ſame Method.

1. In the very Propheſie and fore-ſignifying of it aforehand, God proceeded πολυμερῶς, by ſeveral parcels, and caſt the Revelation of him into ſeveral ſhapes and repreſentations: πολυτροπῶς, Hebr. 1. 1. proceeding from more imperfect to what is perfect, as a Preludium thereunto.

1. He makes a Covenant with the Jews, in outward appearance little better than a Covenant of Works (whereof it bears the name;) Then brings in that of Grace, eſtabliſhed upon better Principles and Promiſes. The firſt at beſt, as the beſt of the Jews underſtood it, but imperfect to the end, as Hebr. 9. ult. That they without us ſhould not be made perfect.

And that firſt Covenant, how doth he deliver it with all poſſible ſtate and majeſty? brings down Heaven to Earth, and makes an Heaven upon a duſty Mountain in Sinai? How gloriouſly ſpeaks he in Thunder? By Angels how terribly? Makes Moſes, a Mediator, approach to him with his face ſhining, how brightly? Erects a Miniſtry, how richly cloathed? A Tabernacle, after that a Temple, how magnificent? A Worſhip therein, how coſtly? And intends all this but as an imperfect ſhew. For he finds fault with this Covenant, Miniſtry, Worſhip, and all, Hebr. 8. Diſannuls it for the weakneſs and improfitableneſs of it, Hebr. 7. 9. and then brings in a better Covenant, a more excellent cellent Miniſtry, Hebr. 8. 6. A greater and more perfect Tabernacle, Hebr. 9. 11. And even in that Carnal way he proceeded by degrees: Firſt there was but Altars, then a Tabernacle, then a Temple: And then again in that worldly Temple, How was there firſt that which was imperfect? and then comes that which was holy and more perfect. Three Courts there were. The outward Court for the People, Rev. 11. 1. leſs glorious: The ſecond for the Prieſts, wherein was the Candleſtick, and the Table, and the Shew-bread: And after the ſecond Vail a third, The Holieſt of all, Hebr. 9. 2, 3, 4, &c. which had the golden Cenſor, the Ark overlaid with gold, wherein was the golden Pot that had Manna, and the Cherubims of Glory: And this was eminently called, The Glory, the Type of Heaven. And then, when God came indeed to erect the new World under the Goſpel, Hebr. 2. 4, 5. How ſtill doth he proceed from the more imperfect to what is perfect, e're he hath brought us to the height of all Perfection? Into how many Heavens, one after the other, will he bring us? Chap. 3.

1. He makes a new Creation in his Peoples hearts, a new work there: ſo 2 Cor. 5. 17. Old things are paſt away, all things are become new in a Believer's heart; and this out of a Darkneſs, a Chaos, 2 Cor. 4. 6.

And 2ly, Then he brings that new Creature into a new World of the Ordinances and Things revealed and fitted to this new Creator, which are deſervedly call'd, The Kingdom of Heaven: Whereby a man is ſaid to have a being lift up to Heaven, &c. as Capernaum: And all the glory of that Reveſation made on Sinai, is called but Earth to this, which is truly a Heaven in compariſon of it, Hebr. 12. 25, 26. yet this Heaven he will ſhake as he did that Earth, and remove this Heaven as he did that Earth; ſo Hebr. 12. 26, 27. and bring his Elect into a new Heaven. New in compariſon to this now, Rev. 21. When as once again all is to become new, verſ. 4, 5. And then after that new Heaven and new Earth, where Righteouſneſs dwells; the Epiſtles of Paul and Peter tell us, that he will bring us into an Heaven of Heavens, ſo call'd, not in relation only to natural Heavens, but ſpiritual Heavens foregoing it, which ſhall be the End, the Perfection of all. And ſo Rom. 6. 22. is call'd τέλος, [from τελέω, perficio] The End, the Perfection; even as Chriſt is called, The End of the Law, Rom. 10. 4. And as the Law made nothing perfect but Chriſt, ſo even all theſe foregoing Heavens are (though in themſelves, ſome of them comparatively to others foregoing, perfect, yet) compared to this laſt and utmoſt, but imperfect, which is the End of all.

The ſecond is, That in all theſe gradual Repreſentations of his, he ſo orders it, that the latter ſhall ſtill exceed the former, and ſo exceed, as the former ſhall hold no compariſon therewith; and therefore, the more of them we can find out, the better. Thus how did the World, ordered, garniſhed, and adorned, exceed the Chaos, which was Darkneſs and Confuſion? The ſecond days work exceeded the firſt; the third the work of the ſecond? And as much did the little World, Man, the Epitome of all the great World, excel all, ſo as Heathens ſtood aſtoniſhed at it. But infinitely more doth Chriſt, the ſecond Adam, exceed the firſt, 1 Cor. 15. 45, 46, 47. &c. and his World, this of Adams; and likewiſe the Miniſtration of the ſecond Covenant, the Goſpel, that of the firſt, the Law. That, 2 Cor. 3. 10. It had no glory in compariſon of this which excelleth. And then the new Heavens, and the new Earth to come, will ſo exceed this Heaven, even this Kingdom of Heaven we now, or the Saints enjoy, That the former ſhall not be remembred, Iſa. 65. 17. And as it was prophecied that the Ark and Service of the Temple, Jer. 3. 16. ſhould be ſo exceeded by the Goſpel, that it ſhould be remembred no more; ſo will the new Heavens exceed theſe, that all here ſhall be remembred no more, nor come into mind. An expreſſion, ſhewing how much the former ſhould be excelled by the latter; even ſo much, that as it uſeth to fall out in things and objects eminently excelling, they ſo ſwallow up the mind, that all other things are not thought on, but forgotten, as if they had never been. As the glory of the Sun puts out the glory of the Moon, ſo ſhall this exceed that former, that it ſhall not come to mind.

Book II.

Now to add a true Reaſon why God is pleaſed thus in his Works to proceed in general:

1. To ſhew the Perfection of his Efficiency and Workmanſhip. It argues a weakneſs in an efficient to do worſe, when it hath done better; but Perfection, ſtill ſo to exceed, and put down the former.

2. It ſhews his various and manifold Wiſdom, πολυποικιλος σοφια, or his much or mighty varying Wiſdom, as Chryſoſtome expounds that Phraſe, Eph. 3. 11. His Wiſdom is in it ſelf one, but we could not ſee it in it ſelf at once. Therefore he ſhews it by ſeveral Repreſentations of it and himſelf, in ſeveral effects; and that ſhews Wiſdom alſo not ſimply various, but much, mightily differing and excelling, to ſhew the vaſtneſs of his Wiſdom, who could caſt himſelf into ſo many forms, and frame ſo many ſeveral Patterns of Worlds and Conditions, not only infinitely differing from, but as much excelling each other.

And thirdly, This is a way and courſe he knew would take the Creature moſt, for unto its Capacity hath God herein applied himſelf. Now we find, that our Spirits are taken and led on with much more pleaſure, and brought into a greater wonderment and admiration of a thing tranſcendently excellent, when things of leſs worth, yet to our apprehenſions (whilſt we ſee no better) moſt excellent, are preſented firſt. So we have heard, in entertainment of great Ones, their cunning Suitors have led them into ſtately Rooms, where ſumptuous Banquets have been prepared, and from thence carried them into other far more exceeding, to ſet off the latter ſo much the more, and make it great indeed: So it is in Maſques and Shews, in which there are ſeveral Preſentments involved one beyond another. And thus doth and will God entertain his Children. And what can be more to draw the Creatures into wonderment, than firſt to preſent them with ſuch a Work, ſo perfect in their Apprehenſions, as they know not where any thing ſhould be added to it, to make it more perfect, or taken away, as Solomon ſpeaks of God's Works, Eccleſ. 3. 14. (though haply in a further ſenſe alſo;) And yet then to bring them unto another frame and building differing, infinitely exceeding the other: What is there will wrap up in more aſtoniſhments? Now, never did the Art of Man preſent ſuch a proſpective piece, which as you know, carries the eye through ſeveral Rooms, one beyond another, as is this which God hath made, and the World reveals unto us.

As for the ſecond Head propounded, the Scheme of theſe ſeveral Eſtates, and the Subordination of them.

1. The Scheme of them.

1. There is the Eſtate of Pure Nature, wherein Adam was created, and in him we, which he and we ſhould have enjoyed on Earth, which had an Happineſs in its kind moſt perfect and compleat.

The ſecond, is the Eſtate of Grace we are brought into here by the ſecond Adam under the Goſpel, and the Priviledges enjoyed by Faith and Hope, which if it were made up compleat, (though but within its own Sphere, without addition of glory) would afford an higher and ſuper-excelling happineſs, than that of Adam.

The third is, The Eſtate of Glory hereafter, in which there might haply be found out in Scripture three degrees; whereof two are but ſteps to the higheſt Throne we ſhall be ſet in.

1. That of the Souls of Men ſeparate, till joyned to the Body, during which time, though made perfect in Grace, and with addition of Glory, yet not with that degree, which at the Reſurrection Soul and Body ſhall receive.

2. That Eſtate of the Soul and Body, when firſt joyn'd in Chriſt's viſible Kingdom, and the day of Judgment, which tranſcends that of the Souls alone.

3. That of the Soul and Body, when Chriſt ſhall have given up his Kingdom to his Father, when God ſhall be all in all.

All

All which may further be caſt into this Series: That whereas God, known and enjoyed, is the ſupream happineſs of Man in all Conditions, God hath ordained ſeveral ways, differing not only in degrees, but kind of Knowing and enjoying of him. All which the Apoſtle reduceth to a Dichotomy, 1 Cor. 13. 12. Either, 1. In a Glaſs, or in a Riddle, darkly, now in this World: Or, 2. Face to face, in that to come. The one, we may call ſpecularis cognitio; the other, Intuitiva; The one mediate and meerly, in alio, in another thing; that other immediate, in ſe, as in himſelf, Face to face. And anſwerable to each of theſe Knowledges of him, is there an enjoyment of him by the Will, goes along therewith, to delight and reſt ſatisfied in him: For the Underſtanding and the Will are commenſurated and proportioned each to other, according to that known Rule, In quantum cognoſcimus, in tantum amamus; in quantum amamus in tantum gaudemus: So much, or ſo far as we know God aright, we love him; ſo far as we love him, we rejoice in and are made happy by him. Chap. 3.

This ſpecular or mediate Knowledge of God in this World, is either, 1. Such as that, which Adam had, ſeeing and enjoying him in the Creatures, which was his Glaſs, as it was ſaid of old, Speculum Creaturæ; or enjoying him in and by the Covenant of Works, the Glaſs of the law, accompanied with Peace of Conſcience following the doing his Will; or at the beſt, but ſeeing and enjoying him in Viſions and Apparitions, as the Father of old did. Or elſe, 2. It is that knowledge which we have of him by Revelation in the Glaſs of the Goſpel, this Covenant of Grace, in which the Glory of God ſhines forth in the face of Jeſus Chriſt, as in a Glaſs, as 2 Cor. 3. ult. and Chap. 4. 6. compared. Which is accompanied often with, Peace which paſſeth Underſtanding, Joy unſpeakable, and glorious, as 1 Pet. 1. and but only as in this Glaſs. And if we compare either this Knowledge of God in Chriſt, preſented in this Glaſs, with that of Adam, his will be found to be but as in a riddle, darker and obſcurer far, for the kind and way of knowing him, though for degrees, in its own kind; it was more compleat. And in like manner, the leaſt drop of Joy of the Holy Ghoſt, the droppings of Heaven, which he puts into the heart, will be found more than all Adams full Springs of Peace, which aroſe but out of his own Conſcience, which was but as a Spring on Earth, in compariſon of this other. And both theſe ways of knowing and enjoying God, which a Believer in part here hath, I take it to be the Apoſtle aims at, Verſ. 8. calling the one, namely that by Relation in the Goſpel, Prophecying, which is the means of revealing God in Chriſt by the Scriptures, which are the Glaſs and Ordinance that preſent God in Chriſt moſt lively to us: The other Knowledg, namely, that obtained by the Creatures, as ſome have differenced theſe two.

But then there is a Knowledge, which is Face to face, as being more immediate after this Life; whereof I take it, there are two degrees alſo, whereof the one ſhall exceed the other. The firſt, is the ſeeing and enjoying Chriſt the Lord perſonally in glory, Face to face, and ſo the Godhead in him. So as ſtill the chiefeſt and eminenteſt way of knowing and enjoying the Godhead, ſhould be in Chriſt only, which I take is the chiefeſt way both for the Souls ſeparate, both before and at the Reſurrection, till the day of Judgment be over, when we ſhall ſee him as he is, and be made like him; which infinitely tranſcends our ſeeing God in Chriſt here; when Chriſt himſelf is made known but imperfectly in a Glaſs, in Ordinances of Grace, and is truly a ſeeing Face to face, namely of the Lord Chriſt, being compared with our way of ſeeing him here abſent by Faith, and not by ſight, as 2 Cor. 5, 6, 7, 8. Yet ſo as there is a ſecond and further degree of ſeeing God in himſelf, Face to face, far more exceeding, that is, for us to ſee him Face to face, as Chriſt himſelf now doth; when he ſhall have given his Kingdom up, by which only, as by him adminiſtred, God is more eminently to be known, till the day of Judgment is over: Then ſhall God become All in all immediately himſelf; which muſt needs exceed all elſe, as God himſelf exceeds all theſe ways of revealing him.

BOOK II. Thus hath God ordained to bring us by ſteps and degrees to that Participation of himſelf which Creatures are capable of: And in bringing us into his immediate Preſence and Conjunction, to entertain us firſt with lower, though all moſt glorious Repreſentations of himſelf; even as Kings are wont to do, in admitting Embaſſadors into their Preſence; ſo God admits us, 1. By Creatures and Viſible Apparitions; 2. In his Son revealed abſent in a Glaſs; Then 3ly, by his Sons own Perſonal Entertainment of us; Who 4ly, ſhall deliver us up to God, to enjoy God, as himſelf doth.

And as I have given a brief delineation thus of the Particulars; ſo I will make the like briet Compariſon of them each with other.

1. If we compare the firſt Branch of that laſt Diviſion given with the latter, how doth the latter way exceed it? For to ſee God, and enjoy him, but in Creatures, as Adam did, and in the Ordinances and Revelations of the Goſpel, is as in a Glaſs, and makes it at beſt but as an Accidental Happineſs, as comparatively Divines calls it; That only, of ſeeing God and Chriſt, Face to face, as in himſelf, eſſentially, is the trueſt happineſs. The one, is but the ſhadow; the other, the Subſtance in which true Happineſs conſiſts.

But 2ly, more particularly the diſtance between each of theſe four degrees is ſuch, that, 1. All the knowledge which Adam had of God in the Creatures, the Law and Apparitions, was but as ſeeing one in his footſteps and ſhadow, and in types and reſemblances, as all theſe were Seculum Speculi, as was ſaid of old. As in like manner were theſe Revelations under the Law; which were but the ſhadow, Hebr. 10.1. and not the Image. 2. That Knowledge by Revelation in the Glaſs of the Goſpel, in ſeeing Chriſt therein, which is ſaid to be the Knowledge of God in the Face of Jeſus Chriſt, 2 Cor. 3. ult. and Chap. 4. 6. compared, as yet but as ſeeing the Image of one that is abſent in a Glaſs, and ſo but the Repreſentation of him in his Son, who is his Image, and that but as preſented in a Glaſs abſent, which though nearer than the other, yet how remote from the real Communication of himſelf!

3. That after this Life ended, till after the Day of Judgment, will be but the enjoying God more eminently in his Son, who is not abſent any more, but Perſonally preſent in his Glory, That they may ſee my Glory, John 17. 24. Which adds infinitely to both the former, and is the ſeeing and enjoying the Subſtance of that Image of God, the Image only of which we here enjoy: It is to view face to face the brightneſs of God's Glory ſhining in Chriſt, of which but the glimpſe or reflection we here could ſee.

But then 4ly, To behold that Glory as in it ſelf, and as this his Son, that before repreſented it to us himſelf, ſees it; and for God himſelf to be his own Preſenter of himſelf, will infinitely yet more tranſcend.

And thus each of theſe are to what ſucceed them, but as perfectibilia ad perfectivum; as ground-works and foundations laid for the other ſtill to perfect them, and ſwallow them up: That ſtill, as that which is more perfect, ſucceeds that which was before (and in compariſon thereunto, was but imperfect) is done away. And as the Knowledge of God in the Creatures is ſwallowed up, and vaniſheth, as it were, in the Preſence of God in Chriſt preſented in the Goſpel, and ſo indeed would Adam's certainly have done, if Chriſt had been propounded to him. And ſo doth all Old Teſtament knowledge of God vaniſh before this ſame, as the Shadow, as Coloſſ. 2. 17. or as the morning Star, as 2 Pet. 1. 19. when the Sun appears: So will, much more, this of Chriſt now be ſwallowed up, and vaniſh afore the enjoyment of God in Chriſt, in his Glory and his Kingdom. And ſo the Apoſtle tells us, That Knowledge and Prophecy ſhall ceaſe and fail; and this that is but in part, ſhall be done away, 1 Cor. 13. And ſo in like manner, the ſame Apoſtle tells us, 1 Cor. 15. That the Kingdom, or Eminency of Chriſt himſelf, ſhall in compariſon ceaſe, and be given up to the Preſence of his Father, When God ſhall be all in all. 1 Cor. 15. 24, 25, 26, 27, 28. Then cometh the end, when he ſhall have delive- red up the Kingdom to God, even the Father, when he ſhall have put down all Rule, and all Authority, and Power. For he muſt reign, till he hath put all Enemies under his feet: The laſt Enemy that ſhall be deſtroyed is Death. For he hath put all things under his feet: but when he ſaith, all things are put under him, it is manifeſt that he is excepted, which did put all things under him. And when all things ſhall be ſubdued unto him, then ſhall the Son alſo himſelf be ſubject unto him that put all things under him, that God may be all in all. Chap. 4.

CHAP. IV.

Containing a ſhort View of the Happineſs of Adam's Condition.

ADAM's beſt Eſtate was but a Type and Shadow of that which Chriſt was to bring in, and according to the Law and proportion of that Type, an excelling difference muſt needs be in the latter above the former.

Let us but conſider the height and true elevation of his ſtate, ſimply and plainly, what it was in it ſelf, without conſidering it as a Shadow or Type of the ſtate of Grace by Chriſt, and it will appear, how ſhort, and low, and mean his Condition was, in compariſon of what even the ſtate of Grace, now under the Goſpel, brings us into, and makes us the Subjects of.

Many things are written concerning the Image of God in Adam, both internal in Holineſs and Righteouſneſs, and in Knowledge, &c. as alſo external, in dominion over the works of God's hands. My ſcope is only ſo to ſpeak of theſe things, as may ſerve to the Illuſtration of Chriſt, and our eſtate of Grace and Glory by him.

The bleſſed Condition that Adam was created in, and eſtated into in Paradiſe, is, in the general apprehenſions of all men, made the Object of their Envy, and conceived to have been ſuch, as their hearts know not how to deſire a happier: And ordinarily we can ſtill ſcarce think of it as loſt, but with a ſecret kind of regret, that it did ſo unhappily fall out, that Adam, and we in him, ſhould fall from it; and, like great mens Heirs, be diſinherited for their Father's Treaſon, we uſe to ſay within our ſelves, O, what men ſhould we have been, if Adam had not ſinned!

To give therefore a ſmall taſt of this Happineſs of Adam:

No ſooner did he open his eyes, but he ſaw himſelf moſt happy. He had a World about him new made, and in its freſhneſs and beſt hue, and furniſht with all ſorts of Creatures, and all of them ſuited to his Body, (the Epitome of them all) and to his Senſes, as well inward as outward, ſo to eſtate him in the fulneſs of all Contentment. And he was made the Center of all the goodneſs that was in thoſe Creatures, unto whom each of them, as unto their Lord, was fitted to pay a Tribute of comfort: So ſuited was this little and great World together. There was not a deſire could ariſe in him, but ſomething or other he might find, to ſatisfie it; nor was there a Creature, in the Univerſe, towards which he might not find ſomething in himſelf to be well pleaſed in it. God having placed the World in Man's heart, as Man in the World. And for this firſt Man, God ſeated him in a Garden planted by himſelf, in the richeſt and moſt pleaſant Soil in the World, Eden, near Babylon, as the Court and Royal Seat of the King of this great World. A Garden, of all Nature's pleaſures, the moſt delightful, (and therefore affected ſo

by

by Solomon, Eccles. 2. 5.) planted by God himself, the best Gardiner for skill that ever was, (and therefore often call'd in Ezekiel, The Garden of God) and so, furnisht with all the choicest Rarities and Glories of the whole Earth brought thither together (which in all other places were but thinly sprinkled): seated in a Soil fertile and pleasant beyond expression, and therefore called Paradise, κατ' ἐξοχὴν, as being the Garden of Gardens. And the greatest Monarch of Assyria is compared but to one of the Trees of this Garden, as other Princes that envied him are compared to other Trees, Ezek. 3. 6, 7, 8. And then God gave him a Soul, able to search into, and so, to know the Natures of all the Creatures, (for he gave Names to them all) which (as Plato said of him who first did this) argued him to be Sapientissimus; and much more able than Solomon was he to discern of all things, and so, to see God clearly in each of them; whom then looking into his heart, he found by the Covenant of Works (as before he had tasted his favour in all the Creatures) to be his God: From whence issued an immixed peace and joy, such as fully satisfied his heart in a fellowship with him, as thus known to be his chiefest Good, joyned with a Promise of having this God to be for ever his, whilst he should thus continue to obey him. The Promise to him was, That he should live by doing: by which was meant, not only not to dye, but to live to a life made up of nothing but of comforts and contentments. His heart did live, as the Phrase is, Psal. 69. 32. And besides this, he seeing and tasting Gods love and goodness in and by all the Creatures, he was made capable of a superadded Fellowship with God, which at times he was pleased to vouchsafe him by Revelations, in Visions and Apparitions, wherein God talked with him, (as he did with the Patriarchs after him) as appeareth in his Story, Gen. 2d and 3d Chapters: By which he was refreshed and cheered, and also instructed further, than simply by God enjoyed in, and by the Creatures. And surely we have now taken the height of that his happiness.

Now this Condition of his, infinitely surpassed the best state that since the Fall ever was, or can be supposed to be on Earth. Since Sin subjected both the Creature to vanity, and Us to vexation of Spirit; there never was the like enjoyed by any Son of Man. Yea, take but the contentment he took in the Creatures, and his Pleasures must needs as much exceed these which now men have, as the Pleasures of a man, sound and in perfect health, do exceed those of a desparately sick man, who wants all relish; as we now are said to be, Eccles. 5. 17. by reason of Lusts within us, (as Solomon compares it). But besides, the Creatures now are but a Husk, as they were to the Prodigal (who was the Type of Sinners) Luke 15. whereas then, God was as the Kernel of them, and with his favour tasted in them, fill'd them with a transcendent sweetness. Neither was there then, any cross accident added to this Emptiness: No stings of Conscience to cause any sadness in the midst of mirth; no contrary Passions to allay the Pleasures then enjoyed; but all in Man was subjected unto Reason, and that unto God. He enjoyed a perfect peace and security, and a Condition so happy, that God delighted himself therein when accomplished, and kept a day of Rest in memory thereof: which Estate of his the fain Angels did envy and malign. And Man himself could not but think this World, and his Condition in it good enough; nor knew he how any thing could be beyond it.

Now, notwithstanding all this that hath, or may be said of it, this is the Position which I shall endeavour to assert and establish:

THAT ADAMS best KNOWLEDGE and ENJOYMENT was inferiour, and of a lower rank, than is that KNOWLEDGE and FELLOWSHIP with God, which WE IN CHRIST, through FAITH, do here enjoy, in that Estate of Grace which the Gospel putteth us into.

Than which, (if well establisht) nothing will more tend to magnifie the Grace of God in Christ; and will abundantly serve to heighten our apprehensions about Heavens Glory, when we shall consider how infinitely transcendent that happiness must needs be, which God in the End doth beyond all this, advance us unto.

Now

Now to preſent miſtakes, and to clear my meaning, that I be not miſ-underſtood in caſting Adams Condition thus low, I Premiſe theſe two Cautions. Chap. 3.

1. My meaning is not, as if his Condition did not then afford him a more ſenſible, conſtant felicity, and a more actual quiet eaſe and contentment, than a Believers in any conſtant way doth, now under the Eſtate of Grace: Which falls out ſo to them, becauſe their Happineſs is diſadvantaged by two things (whatever elſe there may be) by which his was not. As,

1. From the anoyance of outward Afflictions from Men and the Creatures, and the Chaſtiſements from God for Sin: In which reſpect, our Condition now is rendred more miſerable than other Mens, and much more than Adam's, who had a fulneſs of contentment in God, and all the Creatures, and a perfect freedom from all miſeries whatever.

2. In that, even that fellowſhip a Believer hath with God and Chriſt, (which ſhould counterpoize theſe outward miſeries,) is for the degrees of it, ſo imperfect, and allayed with the contrary admixture of ignorance, unbelief, guilt, and diſtreſs, and ſo often interrupted by theſe, that it cannot be ſuppoſed alwaies to bring in that full and conſtant happineſs, and the enjoyment of contentment, that Adam's Fellowſhip with God did; which was ſincere, without any ſuch admixture, or privative imperfection, and was ordained to riſe to a full perfection in its own Sphere, and was ever conſtant and uninterrupted, whilſt he Sinned not: God not having ordained the State of Grace to give us that quietneſs, and ſecurity, and contentment, in a conſtant way here, hath left it on purpoſe thus imperfect, that ſo we might rather breath after that bliſs to come, whereof this is to be but the taſt and earneſt.

Yet ſo, as, (2.) If the way and manner of Adam's knowing and enjoying God (though in its kind compleat) be compared with the way and manner of our knowing and enjoying God, thus imperfect; this of ours is unſpeakably more divine, heavenly, glorious, and ſurpaſſing; and his more low, and Earthly.

So that now, would we make a ſuppoſition (as for this purpoſe in hand we may) That a Believers knowledge and enjoyment of God, were but compleated and filled up, though but within its own Sphere, without the addition of Glory and the Beatifical Viſion of God; (ſo it be, without this mixture of Sin and Miſeries, which are the Puniſhment of Sin;) and it would render us infinitely more happy, and more repleat with glorious contentment, than ever entred into Adam's heart; and would make this Eſtate of Grace below, a Heaven, in compariſon of his Paradiſe.

CHAP. V.

The Image of God in Adam, how it was Natural, how Explained, and how Faith is Supernatural. That Knowledge of God Natural, which is due and fit for a Reaſonable Creature to have, and which he acquires by the exerciſe of his Rational Faculties. That Knowledge Supernatural which goes beyond what Man, by the right of his Creation was to have. Adam's Knowledge of God was in a Natural way, though it ſanctified him, and was joyned with Holineſs.

NOW to ſtate the true difference, and give the true diſproportion between theſe two Eſtates, I muſt explain that known Diſtinction (ſo much uſed of all ſides, both School-men and our own Divines) of Natural Righteouſneſs and Supernatural Grace; or the Knowing and Enjoying God in a way Natural to Man, and tending to a Natural Happineſs in God, and the knowledge of, and fellowſhip with God in a way Supernatural or above Nature, which tends to a Supernatural Happineſs to be had in him.

Now when it is ſaid, That there is a Natural way of knowing God; the meaning is not, of that Natural knowledge in Corrupt Nature, which Heathens have of God: But it hath reference to the pure Nature of Man in Adam uncorrupted, whereof that natural light left even in corrupt Nature, is but the Shadow. Which ſhews, that there was ſuch a kind of knowledge of God in Adam, in an holy and perfect way: which Knowledge of his the Schoolmen call Adam's Theologia Naturalis, his Natural Divinity and Knowledge.

And (oppoſitely) a Supernatural knowing God, is not ſo called in reſpect of corrupt Nature, as being Supernatural to it; but in reſpect to pure Nature, as being above even the Natural way thereof.

Now the moſt radical and exact difference between theſe two, that I can ſearch out, lies in theſe two things.

1. That way of knowing God in pure Nature, is, ſo far called Natural, as it may be ſuppoſed a Natural Due, meet and requiſite to be in Man, by the Law of Nature, if God would at all make ſuch a Creature, endued with Reaſon and Underſtanding: For if God meant to make two ſuch Faculties, as are our Wills and Underſtandings, in their Nature and Capacities ſo unlimited, the Law of Nature required, that God himſelf ſhould become the Object of them, and ſo to give Man a Power to know and delight in him; for otherwiſe it had been to make thoſe Faculties in that vaſtneſs, in vain, and without their due end, ſeeing they could not reſt, or be ſatisfied with all the particular truth and goodneſs in the Creatures, (as the Senſes can,) they being vaſter and more general Faculties: And therefore in a way that was due to the Nature of Man: If God would make him reaſonable, God was to be both known and enjoyed by Man; ſo, as to ſatisfie both his Underſtanding and Will, and thereby to make him happy. And a Happineſs in God, ſo farr proportioned thus to the Nature of Man, is called Natural Happineſs.

And ſo (oppoſitely) that which was vouchſafed to Man, over and above this Natural Due, and ſupra exigentiam Creaturæ, more than it was ſimply meet for God to give him, upon, and with his Creating him Reaſonable, That (I ſay) is Supernatural, and is therefore called Grace: As being a free Gift, over and above that which was neceſſarily due to ſuch a Creature. Chap. 5.

Now for the preſent, to clear this in General, by an Inſtance; for God to have for ever confirmed Man, whom he thus made, in that goodneſs, and to have held him ſo to himſelf, that he ſhould not Sin or fall, this had been a Supernatural Grace; becauſe it is more than is due to any Creature, as Reaſonable: For as it is a Creature, it is defectible, and (and may fail,) and it is Natural to the Creature of it ſelf ſo to be; God alone being without ſhadow of turning: And therefore; though it was Mans due (if God would make him Reaſonable) for God himſelf to become his Happineſs; Yet to keep him from failing, was above the Due that the Creature, as a Creature, could challenge: Yea rather; it might become God to leave the Creature, to ſhew it ſelf to be but a Creature, that would Fall.

The ſecond Difference is, that That Knowledge and Enjoyment of God was Natural, which was ſuited, fitted, and proportioned to the Natural way of Man in his knowledge of things. So as, that light that enabled him to know God, was ſuited and made apt to cloſe with the Natural way and his Underſtanding, only it did withall ſanctifie it.

But that knowledge (oppoſitely) is Supernatural, which is by a light above the way of Nature, and the way of Mans Underſtanding things, as the Light of our Faith is.

Now then, to bring down this Diſtinction unto the thing in hand: I conceive that the ordinary way of Adam's knowing and enjoying God lay, (if not wholly, yet) for the moſt part, within the Sphere and compaſs of a Natural way; that is, ſo far as was ſimply due to a Creature reaſonable, and was ſuch as was alſo ſuited to the Natural way of Man's Underſtanding and Knowledge, though withal, ſanctifying of him. And accordingly, the Happineſs thence ariſing, was (comparatively) but a Natural kind of Happineſs; ſo much as was due to the ſatisfying of Man's Underſtanding and Will in God, in their Natural Deſires and Appetites, ſo far as might become their Object in ſuch a Natural way.

For the clearing of which,

1. You know that the Image of God, which conſiſted in Knowledge and Holineſs, wherein Man was at firſt created, is by our Divines (in oppoſition to the Romaniſts) argued to have been Natural to him, than in that ſtate conſidered: Natural; not that it ſimply flowed from the Principles of Nature, (it being from God, who adorned Man's Nature with it); but Natural, in this reſpect, that it was a requiſite and due, even in the order of Nature, that Man ſhould be created with it: And ſo, as you could not ſuppoſe him created by God reaſonable, but he muſt withal know God as his chiefeſt Good, and love God above all, and in that knowledge and love of him be happy. And this was the Law of Nature in his Creation; unto which, if he had not been framed, he had not had that Natural goodneſs in his Kind, which other Creatures had in their Kind. And ſuch was the Image of God wherein he was created.

This Point I will not now diſpute, but may well take for granted, it being Fundamental to all the Proteſtant Opinions about Original Sin, &c. wherein we differ from the Papiſts.

And 2ly, If thus the Image of God was Natural to Adam, then was it alſo ſuch as was ſuited to that way of Man's Knowledge and Deſires, running along therewith in the ſame Chanel and way that Man's Nature was to take, in knowing of other things: For otherwiſe, ſo far as it had been carried above its own way, it had been Supernatural.

Now then, let us conſider what is the Natural way of Man's knowing things, and ſo, of his knowing God. The way and progreſs of Man's Knowledge Naturally lieth thus:

In having at firſt a glimmering Light, and common, yet obſcure Principles and Glimpſes of the Notions of things ſown in the Mind by Nature; which then by obſervation and laying things together, and ſo gathering one thing from another, the Mind improveth and enlargeth, till it arise to a particular, clear, distinct, and perfect Knowledge of those things which it seeks to know. This is the Natural way of Man's Understanding in both Estates, both of Innocent, and Corrupt Nature; and that, in all things that are known by him in either of these Estates wherein common Principles (as that the Whole is greater than its Parts, &c.) κοιναι ἐννοιαι (as the Grecians call them) hints, glimpses, (as I call them) (many of which are even in the Minds of Children, and as it were connate with them) these (I say) are as the Seed sown, and Reason and Observation are as the Tillage and Watering of them; and a full Knowledge arising from both, is as the Crop or Harvest that springs from both, and is reaped by us.

Now when God stampt his Image upon the Understanding of Man, that thereby he might know God himself, and so enjoy him; he so framed it, as that it might suit with this Natural way of Man's proceeding in his Knowledge, in other things: So as the Mind of Man might proceed its own way in the Knowledge of God himself, and walk therein after the Rule of Nature. And unto that end God, in the instant of his Creation, did sow in his Mind holy and sanctifying Notions and Principles, both concerning his own Nature, what a God he was, and also concerning his Will; (even as he did the like common Notions of the Knowledge of other things). Which Principles were by rectified Reason to be improved, enlarged, and confirmed, made clear and illustrious, out of his Observations from the Creatures and the Works of Providence, as also from the Covenant of Works, till it arise to a full, clear, and distinct Knowledge of God, whom, as thus known, he should have enjoyed and delighted in; even as now we see Man's Mind hath the Principles of other Knowledge in it, which Observation and Reason do improve. And thus, as he was to till the Garden of Eden, so was he to till and manure his own Mind.

Two things it then concerned Man to know of God:

1. The Nature and Attributes of God; what a God he was; how Wise, Powerful, Eternal, &c.

2. The Will and Mind of God towards Man; both what God would have him do, and what God was, and would be to him, (even his God) if he did his Will.

And of both these he had the Knowledge through Natural infused Principles, which sanctified his whole Man then, as the Knowledge of Christ by Faith doth our whole Man now.

1. He had inbred, obscure Notions of the Attributes of God; which yet were not so full and distinct, but that from the Creatures and Works of God, he was to enlarge and confirm his Knowledge of them; and out of all laid together, to make up a perfect Knowledge of God, and of all his Attributes: For the invisible things of him are clearly seen from the Creation of the World, Rom. 1. 20. And if thus to be seen by Heathens (as the Apostle there argues) then much more by Adam, for whom they were ordained. Those holy Principles or Glimpses of the Knowledge of God in him, were like Letters written with the juice of Lemmons, or the like, which when they are held to the Fire, do become legible and apparent: So these, whom he came once to view the Creatures, presented God clearly to him. The Heavens declare the Glory of God, &c. (says the Psalmist, Psal. 19. 1.) Præsentemque refert quælibet herba Deum, (says the Poet). Adam's Reason was able, through the light of those Principles sown, to take God up as the Cause, from these Effects, and so to attain a perfect Knowledge of him: (perfect, that is, in its kind, and in that sense compleat).

2. He

2. He had in like manner the Principles of God's whole Mind and Will ſown in his heart; even the Seeds of all that Moral Law which we find in the Scriptures, Adam had then ſown in him in the utmoſt Spirituality thereof; the Notions of it grew up Naturally in his heart. So as, upon all Occaſions, when he was to practiſe any part of it, he might come fully to know what he was to do; and it needed not to be revealed, or he to receive it by Faith. But the whole Law was to him even A Law of Nature written in his heart, Naturally known to him by common Dictates inbred in him. And thus in like manner was that Promiſe known to him, That by DOING he ſhould live, together with that Threatning, that by Tranſgreſſion of the Law, or any part of it, he ſhould Dye the death: Theſe were known to him by Principles written in his heart, though further confirmed to him by two Sacraments, The Tree of Life, and of the Knowledge of good and evil, even as his other Notions of God were helpt and enlarged by the Works of God: Yet ſo, as the Knowledge of this Covenant, and of the Promiſe and Threatning annexed to it was Natural, though it were ſtrengthned and enlarged by thoſe Two Sacraments. Chap. 5.

And as an Evidence to us, that this was the Natural Primitive way of Mans knowing God in the Eſtate of Innocency, God hath put into Corrupt Nature a ſhadow hereof, and an imperfect Counterfeit of it in all Mankind, to remain as a Witneſs what an one his Image in Man at firſt was, and how ſtamped on him. He hath (I ſay) left ſome Inſtances, Prints, and Footſteps of either kind of Knowledge (above-mentioned) ſtill in us; both concerning the Nature of God, and concerning his Will, (as we find them, the one, in the firſt to the Romans, and the other in the ſecond.)

1. There are ſtill in us ſome rude Notions of a God; which the Apoſtle ſhews the Heathens to have had, (Rom. 1.) which he calls τὸ γνωστὸν τοῦ Θεοῦ, Verſe 19. That which might be known of God; that is, whereby they might have ſeen (as ſome of them did) the inviſible things (or Attributes) of God, Verſe 20.

And, 2ly, there are ſtill like Notions and engrafted Principles concerning ſome parts of the Will and Law of God, written in our Hearts: So Rom. 2. 15. They have the work of the Law written in their hearts: And ſo, are a Law to themſelves, (as is in the foregoing Verſe:) And have alſo ſome glimmering of the Threatning, and ſo (by conſequence) of the Promiſe, if they walk according to it: For Verſe ult. of Chap. 1. They are ſaid to know the Judgment of God, (thus by inſtinct) that they who commit ſuch things are worthy of Death; and (by the Rule of Contraries) that they who obey the Law, are worthy of Life: And therefore their thoughts do as well excuſe, in hope of Life, as accuſe, in reſpect of Condemnation; (as you have it Verſe 15.)

Now theſe common Principles engrafted, ſome Divines call the Reliques of that former Image; thinking them to be the ſame for ſubſtance, with thoſe more perfect ones which were in Adam; as the Sparks of bigger Fire; or as the Ruins of an Houſe razed and diſordered, which for the Matter are the ſame that at firſt.

But I ſhall ſhew elſewhere, that theſe are rather wholly renewed, and again put into us by Chriſt, who lightneth (with this light, more or leſs,) every Man that comes into the World; as it is in John 1. 9. and ſo that they do in reality differ from thoſe in Adam, of which we have ſpoken. For thoſe Principles of the Knowledge of God, and of his Law, written in Adam's heart, and likewiſe the improvement of them by Reaſon, &c. were all holy in themſelves and Spiritual, and made his heart holy, and Sanctified him. For the moſt Spiritual part of the Law, was no otherwiſe known to him, than by being thus written in his heart by Natural Principles, (as the reſt alſo was,) and not by Faith, as in us it is: And ſo were as Natural then to him, as Moral Principles are now in Heathens. And thus to love God above all, to believe on him, &c. was to Adam but the Dictate of pure Nature, by a way of Common Principles, which met with anſwerable holy Diſpoſitions which accompanied theſe Dictates in this Will and Affections: All which together made up true Holineſs and Righteouſneſs in a Natural way. And in like manner, thoſe Notions which he had of God, and of his Attributes, by Nature, and that acquired Knowledge which was to riſe out of them by obſervation of Gods Works, were all holy and ſanctifying. Why, elſe are the Gentiles blamed for that, knowing God in a Natural way, even from his Works, they glorified not God as God, (Rom. 1.) and for that, they knowing the Law, walked not according to it; but becauſe the knowledge of both theſe which Adam once had, and they in him, and which he ſhould have acquired, enabled him thus to love God above all, and to glorifie God as God? And on purpoſe did God put this imperfect Natural Knowledge into corrupt Nature, to ſhew us what was the way of knowing and glorifying God, One in Nature, Pure and Innocent. And this is the firſt Demonſtration of it.

BOOK II.

A ſecond Demonſtration, that the way of Adam's Knowledge was thus Natural, and by the light of common infuſed Principles, and by Obſervation of Gods Works to be emproved, may be taken from the uſe and end of the Sabbath, which God himſelf ſanctified, and upon it reſted, to contemplate his Works of Creation; and this, to be as an Example unto Adam, how his mind upon this Day was to be taken up, even in the Contemplation of the Works of God. And that that was the Principle Duty of the Sabbath, under the Covenant of Works, appears, by Pſal. 92.

And therefore, thirdly, the beſt of Adam's Condition (for of his Condition when firſt Created, the Apoſtle, 1 Cor. 15. 45. quotes that Speech in Geneſis [The firſt Man Adam was made a living Soul]) is called Animal, and Natural, in the 46th Verſe of the aforeſaid 15th, to the Corinthians; but that State unto which Chriſt brings us, is there called Spiritual, or ſupernatural. Both the Condition of our Souls here, and of our Bodies and Souls hereafter, is Spiritual, and Supernatural. And ſuch is, Chriſt whole Image; whereas Adam's was but Natural.

Chap. 6.

CHAP. VI.

That the Covenant of Works, the Juſtification of Adam by that Covenant, and the Reward of his Obedience, were all Natural. And that by Covenant he ſhould not have gone to Heaven.

AS the way of his Knowing God, and the Image of God in him, were thus Natural, and no higher than was due unto Nature, and ſuited unto Man as Man; ſo were all things elſe which any way concerned him; they were of the ſame Elevation alſo, and reached no higher than the Sphere of Nature (in the Senſe explained, namely) they were ſuch as were due unto Man's Nature, or, were founded upon the Law of Nature.

For Inſtance;

1. The Covenant he ſtood under, was but Fœdus Naturæ, the Covenant of Nature; and ſuch as for the Conditions of it, was due unto ſuch a Creature, and ſuch as it became the Creator to make with him, if he at all made him. And therefore the Foundation of that Covenant was but the Title of Creation, and the Primitive Integrity in which God firſt made Man; and there was nothing at all Supernatural in it.

2. The Righteouſneſs whereby he was Juſtified, was no other than that Natural Righteouſneſs in which he was created, and which was conſerved and preſerved by continuing to act holily, and by doing good according to the Principles of Holineſs at firſt implanted in him. And ſo it was but ſuch a Juſtification as was a Natural due to the Creature ſo obeying, that God ſhould pronounce him juſt upon it: For it was but God's giving him ſuch an approbation, that he both was, and did continue Good in his kind; as he pronounced of all the other Creatures in their kind, Gen. 2. ult. when God ſaw, that they were all good. Then likewiſe he viewed Adam, and pronounced him Good alſo in Holineſs and Righteouſneſs, which was the proper Goodneſs of his Creation. So that this approbation of him was but Natural, and according to a Rule of Nature common to other Creatures, and ſo a Due. Which may be the meaning of that place, in Rom. 4. 4. where the Apoſtle ſpeaking of the difference between the Juſtification under the Covenant of Works, and that under Grace; he ſays the one is κατὰ τὸ ὀφείλημα, of Debt, the other κατὰ χάριν, meerly of free Grace. It is evident that he intends to affirm, That by the firſt Covenant of Works, the Reward was in a juſt ſenſe due (of Debt) unto the Creature, and that, from God: whereas this New Covenant is of Grace. Now how is that other ſaid to be of Debt? Not that God can owe any thing, or be obliged unto his Creature for any thing received from it: Nor is it to be underſtood, as if the Holineſs that Adam had, was not from God's gift, as well as ours under the new Covenant is: But becauſe, in a way of Natural Juſtice, or rather comlineſs and dueneſs, ſuch as is by the Law of Creation to be between a juſt Creator and an holy Creature, there is an approbation due unto him from God whilſt that Creature obeys him, and that, as a Debitum Naturale, a Debt of Nature, and not a Debt of Retribution in a Mercenary way: Who hath given unto him, and it ſhall be recompenſed again? Rom. 11. 35. (as the Apoſtle ſpeaks).

3. An-

BOOK II.

3. Answerably, the Reward, the promised Life and Happiness that he should have had, for doing and obeying, was but the continuance of the same happy Life which he enjoyed in Paradise, together with Gods favour towards him. Which continuance in Happiness was Natural to him; even as our Divines say that Mortality was; namely in this Sense, That it was a Natural Due unto him, whilst he should keep from Sin, for God to preserve him in that State wherein at first he stood; and this Preservation of him in that State, and in the favour of God, was the Life promised, when God said, Do this, and thou shalt [Live;] and not the translating him, in the end, unto that Spiritual Life in Heaven, which the Angels have, and which the Saints shall have. And for this my Reasons are.

1. Because Christ in 1 Cor. 15. 47, 48. is called the Heavenly Man, and the Lord from Heaven; and that, in opposition to Adam, when at the best, whom the Apostle calls but an Earthly Man. And this difference in their Condition he there evidently mentions to shew, that Christ was the first and only Authour of that Heavenly Life which the Saints in Heaven do enjoy, and he himself coming from Heaven, he carries us thither. But on the contrary, Adam, as he was of Earth, so he was but an Earthly Man; (so Verse 47.) and his Happiness should have reacht no higher. The place forecited expressly sets the Bounds between what the one Adam should, and the other doth convey unto his Posterity. Yea, and the Apostle doth put our carrying to Heaven (as he there argues it) not so much upon the merit of Christ's Death, as upon his being the Lord from Heaven;] because Heaven was his Natural Due, and he descended from his Right, when he came down upon Earth: And so, because he was thus from Heaven, therefore he is now gone thither himself, as unto his Natural Place, and advanceth us up thither also: Whereas Adam was but a Man from the Earth; and therefore could never have come to Heaven. And that Place, John 3. 13. doth further back this Argument; No Man hath ascended up to Heaven, but he that came down from Heaven, even the Son of Man who is in Heaven. Christ there speaks of his revealing the Mysteries of Heaven; which no Man ever could do, because no Man had ascended up to Heaven, but himself, who came down from Heaven, and now is in Heaven; and this, as Son of Man. Now he is said to be in Heaven, through the communication of Properties and Priviledges of the Son of God; and to come down from Heaven, because his Due was to have been Incarnate there. And he expressly says, that [No Man] ascends up thither, except he who came down from thence, (and others by vertue of him.) And so that Text evidently holds forth this as the Reason why none went up thither, because none came down from thence. Which Reason makes against Adam, as well as against any Son of his now in Corrupt Estate: For he came not from Heaven; that was not his Natural Place; but he was of the Earth, and therefore but Earthly, 1 Cor. 15. 48. And if no Man but he, who come down from Heaven, was able to know the Misteries of Heaven (for that is the Ascension there meant;) then much less to enjoy the Glory of Heaven. And therefore, Our going to Heaven is put upon his Ascension, as the fruit of it, John 14. 2, 3. [I go to prepare a Place for you] though it were prepared from the Foundation of the World; God having made Heaven perfect the first Day, and reserved it for his Elect in Christ.

2. That Paradise that Adam enjoyed, was but the Type of the Paradise above, and his Sabbath a Type of Heaven, as himself was of Christ. And therefore he was not to have entred into the Heavenly Paradise, except by this Second Adam Christ, whose Paradise alone it was. So that, take away the Second Adam that was to come, and there had been no Second Paradise for Adam, to come into, which that Paradise of his was the Type of. Thus Luke 23. 43. Christ foundeth the Thief's going to Paradise, upon his own going thither; This day (says he) shalt thou be with me in Paradise [With me,] that is, in my right. Even as also we are said to sit together with him in Heavenly Places, Ephes. 2, [with him] namely, ly, as Our Head. And the aforesaid Thief answerably speaking of Heaven, says; Remember me when thou comest into [thy Kingdom;] and Christ in his Answer unto him, owns it as his; only he calls it Paradise; For this is Christs Paradise, as the other was Adam's. And therefore when Christ was first inaugurated into his Office, and his Father himself from Heaven first Preached him unto Men, saying, This is my Son, hear him; then did the Heavens first open, and not till then, for Men by hearing and obeying him, to come thither. Chap. 6.

3. I observe, that the Moral Law (which was the Law of Nature) makes mention of no such Promise, as of Going to Heaven: It speaks no such Language; but only, Do this, and thou shalt [Live;] that is, Live as thou doest, in Gods favour; but yet still as on Earth enjoyed. And that is the reason why so little mention is made of Heaven in the Old Testament; and but only when the Gospel is promulgated, in that Old Testament; never when the pure Law of Nature is taught. And therefore Christ in the 16th Psal. ult. Verses, speaks of Heaven as being the purchase of his Death, and as bestowed only by his Righteousness, not that of the Law, Psal. 16. 10, 11. For thou wilt not leave my Soul in Hell; neither wilt thou suffer thine holy One to see corruption. Thou wilt shew me the path of Life, in thy presence is fulness of joy, at thy right right hand there are pleasures for evermore. And therefore, Luke 18. 18. when a certain Ruler asked our Saviour, What he should do to inherit Eternal Life? says Christ, thou knowest the Commandments, &c. and his replying, All these have I kept; yet (says Christ) thou lackest one thing; Sell all that thou hast, and follow me, and thou shalt have Treasure in Heaven. Concerning which Place, observe,

1. That it may be, here is a distinction intimated, between Treasure in Heaven, and Eternal Life: And that right to Treasure in Heaven comes by following Christ; but a Life Eternal, that is, a Living for ever in Gods favour, is promised to keeping the Commandments: And this Life is here spoken of as a thing differing from Heaven.

2. If the Ruler did here, in his Question intend Heaven, in that Phrase [Eternal Life:] yet it may be observed out of Matthew, 19. 17. that Christ diminisheth it yet more in his Answer there, if thou wilt enter into [Life] (says he,) keep the Commandments; that is, into a State of Life; Christ in that Speech dealing with him upon his own Principles, who thought by the Commandments to Live. Yet he says not, Thou shalt enter into Eternal Life (if by that Phrase Heaven should be meant) but into Life: For do this, and thou shalt [Live:] was the Tenour of the Covenant of Works. And the commandment is ordained for [Life,] saith the Apostle, Rom. 7. 10.

3. Or else if the Ruler in his Question should by [Eternal Life] mean Heaven: Christ Answers him, Though thou hast kept all the Commandments, yet thou art to sell all, and follow me, or else thou canst not have Treasure in Heaven.

Reason 4. This accords with the like Law of Nature towards all the Creatures besides; who by observing their Laws, obtain not a higher Station than they were Created in; only thereby they keep their own. The Moon by all the constancy of her motion, attains not to the glory of the Sun. Nor should Man by the Moral Law (which was to him but the Law of Nature) have attained the Condition of the Angels, had he fully complyed with it; as neither should the Angels have attained a higher Condition than their own, though they had been exact Ministers of Gods will according to the Law of their Creation. The Fall of whom is expressed by their not keeping their first Estate, but leaving their own Habitation, Jude. 6. and for affecting an higher Estate, they lost all.

Yea

BOOK II.

Yea 5ly, I think that Adam's Covenant, and the Obedience unto it, was not able to do ſo much as confirm him, and ſecure him in that Condition he was created in; ſo far was it from being able to have tranſplanted him into Heaven. For,

1. I know no Promiſe for it, that after ſuch a time, and ſo long Obedience performed, he ſhould ſtand perpetually. And without ſuch a Promiſe, we have no warrant ſo to think, or judge of it.

And 2ly, Surely, a Creature being defectible, the Covenant of Nature with that Creature (which proceedeth according to its due) and the Obedience of that Creature could never have procured indefectibility; for that muſt be of Grace: And he was more than a Creature that did that for Elect Angels and Men, even Chriſt God-man.

And if Men will ſay, That the Elect Men in Chriſt (and ſo Adam among the reſt) ſhould in the end have been tranſlated to Heaven by Chriſt, although Man had never faln; I ſhall not gainſay it: But then, it is by anothers Right and Covenant, and would have required a Supernatural Grace firſt wrought in them, to have owned and taken Chriſt for their Head.

And if it be Objected, That Hell, which the Devils are in, was the Reward of the Diſobedience of that Covenant of Works; and therefore oppoſitely, the Heavens, where the Angels are, ſhould be the Reward of the Obedience of the ſame Covenant,

The Anſwer is ready, (even That which we give the Papiſts in the like caſe, in the point of Merit; who argued, that becauſe Sin deſerves Hell, Grace therefore ſhould merit Heaven) That there is not a like proportion between the ſin of the Creature, which is an undue Act againſt the great God, and the grace of the Creature, which is a due Act from the Creature unto God; and ſo, that Grace deſerveth not well, like as Sin doth ill. The [wages] of ſin is death; but the [gift] of God is eternal Life, through Jeſus Chriſt our Lord, Rom. 6. ult.

And if it be askt, What Reward ſhould Adam then have had, if he had ſtood? I Anſwer; Much every way. As namely, That bleſſed Life in Paradiſe, which God planted for him; Communion with God in a Natural way, through the Creatures, and by the Light of the Law of Nature; frequent Apparitions of God, and Communications with him, (of which I am yet to ſpeak); and alſo Immortality in that his ſtate of Bleſſedneſs; which Immortality aroſe not out of the inward Conſtitution of his Body, which ſtill was dependent on God's preſervation and protection. And further, In his Conſcience he ſhould have had a Perſwaſion of God's favour, through Obedience, which was his Life. His heart ſhould have lived in the ſenſe of Gods Love; ſo as, indeed, much fruit he ſhould have had in Holineſs, but ſtill, not the end, everlaſting Life, namely, Heaven; which is not ex debito, is not due to Nature under the Covenant of Works. Heaven is the gift of God through Jeſus Chriſt, Rom. 6. ult. and is the ſole fruit of Election. And therefore the voice at the great Day will be, Come ye bleſſed of my Father.

But it may haply be Objected, That the Beatifical Viſion being the higheſt perfection of Bliſs, and the Underſtanding of Man being of capacity for it; the Mind therefore would have deſired it, and not have been ſatisfied without it; and wanting ſuch a ſatisfaction, it had conſequently been not fully bleſſed.

I Anſwer, 1. That 'tis true, that Adam was capable of that Bliſs, (for ſo are Sinners); but yet, by a way above his Sphere; his Body and Soul muſt firſt have been changed: For his fleſh and blood could not have born the glory of it; and therefore in that ſtate he was in, he could not have deſired it, as being a Condition that would deſtroy him; even as for the ſame Reaſon the Eye hath no deſire to look upon the Sun, it being excellens ſenſibile, ſuch a tranſcendent Object, that it does deſtruere ſenſum, it deſtroys the ſight.

2. If

2. If in that ſtate he ſtood, he was not ordained to it, though it was a higher perfection, and ſo, deſirable; yet it had been an unlawful and an inordinate deſire in him, if ever he had put it forth: Even as that ambition of his was, to be as God: And as that of the Angels that fell, was, when they affected and aſpired to a higher ſtation than God had ſet them in. Had Adam deſired this kind of Happineſs, he had gone out of his Rank, and ſate quite beſide the Cuſhion. And what Angel, or Saint in Heaven dares deſire the Hypoſtatical Union (the moſt tranſcendent of all Perfections), even to be joyned to the Godhead, as the Manhood of Chriſt was? And yet they are capable of it (ſay ſome). Thoſe things which we know by God's Ordinance to impoſſible, we are not to affect; nor do we deſire them, when we conceive they are ſuch. Who among the crowd of common People, has any vehement deſire to be a King, when he looks upon himſelf, as one ſo inferiour to, and far off from ſuch a ſtate? Chap. 6.

3. Neither had he been miſerable, or his Bleſſedneſs at all leſſened by the want of it. He had not been in ſtatu violento, had he not had it; but in Naturali, in his Natural Condition, wherein he had all things ſuited to his Natural Deſire. He had reſted as a Stone in its Center, which deſires not to go upward. His ſtate had been perfect; and though not ſo abſolutely perfect as theirs in Heaven, yet in its own Sphere it had been ſuch. His Happineſs had been ſuitable to his Condition on Earth, as ours ſhall be to the Heavenly Condition of our Souls and Bodies in Heaven. He had been perfect, Perfectione competenti, though not abſoluta; with a Perfection ſuitable and fit for him, though not with a Perfection tranſcendent and abſolute. And as a higher degree of Glory leſſens not the Bleſſedneſs of any Saint inferiour, in Heaven it ſelf (for He is full): So, nor would, nor ought this higher Order of Bleſſedneſs have at all diminiſhed that competent Happineſs which he enjoyed; for it was full unto him, whilſt in that Earthly ſtate. So that, (to conclude) as Adam's Covenant was Fœdus Naturæ; ſo his Happineſs ſhould have been a perfect contentment in God, enjoyed per modum naturæ; not in God himſelf immediately: Neither ſhould he have taſted this Heavenly Contentment by Faith (which is a prelibation of Heaven, and of its Beatifical Viſion); but only in effects. The Creatures ſhould have revealed God unto him, and been as Teſtimonies of his Favour; which he ſhould have apprehended as juſtifying and approving him in a Covenant of Works; which apprehenſion would have wrought peace of Conſcience, joy, and ſecurity therein, through well-doing, ſo far as the perſwaſion of God's love, which Conſcience and his own Spirit begat in him, (which was his Comforter) could work. And this Love apprehended was but hypothetical, and in a way of common Providence, namely, whilſt he ſhould continue in his good behaviour. The Creator and Author of Nature in that relation loving him, as being made righteous by him; he had not an aſſurance of a peculiar, unchangeable, and everlaſting love, without Ifs and Ands; he had not the taſte and earneſt of Heaven by Faith Supernatural; which is that Heavenly Gift that gives a Taſte of what it is to enjoy God in himſelf, which Adam did not: Neither had he the Teſtimony of the Spirit working in him joy unſpeakable and glorious, in the hope of Heaven.

CHAP. VII.

Whether Adam knew God by the ~~Light of~~ Faith and Supernatural Revelation, ſuperadded to the Light of Reaſon. His Faith was Natural, both in its Motives and Grounds, being an Aſſent to God's Teſtimony as true, whoſe veracity he knew by the Light of Nature. Nor did his Faith diſcover to him things that were above his then preſent Natural State. This proved by ſeveral Arguments. Our way of Knowing God by Faith is Supernatural, and in what reſpect it is ſo.

ALL that I have hitherto ſpoken of, as appertaining unto Adam's Condition, we have ſeen to have been but Natural, according to thoſe limits which at firſt I did ſet; namely, no other than what was due to the Nature of Man, and what was ſuitable alſo unto that his Nature.

There remains only one thing, which may ſeem to have been Supernatural in him in both theſe reſpects: And whereby he is judged to have been elevated to the ſame way of knowing God, that we under the ſtate of Grace are; and that is, a Principle of Faith, which Principle is wholly Supernatural; both,

1. In that the Objects or Things apprehended by it, are ſuch as are made known by Revelation from God; and therefore over and above the Due of Nature.

And 2ly, In that the Light by which Faith is enabled to apprehend things, is above the Light of Nature, or of common Principles or Reaſon, it being infuſed. And ſo Divines account it, and do therefore call it Supernatural. Now it may alſo ſeem as evident, that beſides that inbred Light of Nature and of ſanctified Reaſon in Adam to know God by; he had another window and inlet of Knowledge, even Revelation from, and Communication with God. For we read of God's ſpeaking to him, and revealing his Will unto him by word of mouth; both at his giving him dominion over all the Creatures, Gen. 1.28. and alſo at his giving him thoſe Precepts about the Tree of Knowledge and of Life, (which alſo were Sacraments to him of his Condition). Thus alſo he knew the Law of the Sabbath; and likewiſe, when his Wife was made, he knew it either by inſpiration or revelation from God, that ſhe was made by God, of his Bone and Fleſh. And he believing the Word and Threatning of God; that was the matter in which he was tempted, and in which he failed. So that, beſides that forementioned Light of Nature, he had alſo (as may ſeem by all this) a Revelation, and that of Faith.

I confeſs, it is like to appear an hard and bold Aſſertion, to deny, That Adam had a Supernatural Knowledge of God by Revelation, or by the ſame Light and Principle of Faith by which we take God in, under the Goſpel. Yet I find ſome Divines to have affirmed it, and I ſhall adventure it unto the Diſquiſition in the fear of God, and with ſubmiſſion to cogent Reaſon to the contrary. And,

First,

Chap. 7.

First, I would propound it to be conſidered, That all this concerning his Faith, and the Things revealed to him, were ſtill but within the compaſs of Nature. And thoſe limits which at firſt I ſet to bound the Natural Knowledge of God with; ſo as it was neither above the due to Nature, nor the way and Sphere of it.

For, firſt, In the Nature of Man there is ſuch an Act, to believe and to truſt one that is faithful, as well as there is to think, and to be. We find it in Corrupt Nature; a diſpoſition of believing another man; ſo as to believe is not ſimply and wholly a Supernatural Act.

And ſecondly, That Man in his firſt Creation ſhould have a Principle in him to converſe with that God, whom he knew to be God out of Natural Light, and to have made Heaven and Earth; whenſoever that God ſhould ſpeak and Communicate any thing to him, that might expreſs his Will to him, ſo far as might concern his preſent Condition; was alſo natural in this ſenſe, That it was a due to the Nature of Man. For Man being a ſociable Creature, in that he was Reaſonable, made in the Image of God which was natural, it was meet he ſhould be able to converſe with that great God by mutual Speech, as well as with his Wife, or any other Intelligent Nature: Speech is the ground of Fellowſhip. And therefore both Prayer, which is Speech to God, and to hear God ſpeaking to us, are made Natural duties by our Divines, as well as to love him.

And thirdly, When God did thus ſpeak; That Man ſhould believe, and receive the Teſtimony of God as true, whatever it was that was revealed, was not above the Due of Nature, nor the way of Nature. Not above the Due of Nature, for elſe God had ſpoke in vain: Nor above the Light of Nature, to aſſent to it, for the Ground of Faith's aſſent is reſolved into the Light of this, That God is true. For he knew out of the ſame principles and dictates of Nature, That God was true, faithful, and juſt in his word, as well as he knew he was powerful in his Works: For it was part of the Law written in his heart, in which the Image of God conſiſted. He ſhould not lye, but ſpeak truth; Therefore that God much more ſhould be True. Truth was part of Gods Image in him: Therefore Epheſ. 4. 24. Truth being made a part of Gods Image, it follows; Verſ. 25. Wherefore put away lying: Therefore in God much more Truth is eſſential to his Nature. He might take that Attribute up out of his own heart by a Natural Light, as well as Gods Holineſs, out of the righteous Image of it in himſelf; ſo as he needed not that to be laid in his heart by Faith. Therefore now to believe God when he ſpeaks to him, and to receive his Teſtimony, was but from the power of an inbred light: Yea, and although, ſuppoſe the thing revealed ſhould have been above the Light of Nature, yet the Divine Authority upon which his belief was to receive it, was acknowledged by no other Light than Nature, and the Dictate of it, That God muſt needs be true in what he ſpeaks. And yet this is the greateſt thing in Faith, the receiving Gods Teſtimony, John 3. 53. He that hath received his Teſtimony, hath ſet to his ſeal, that God is true.

And then fourthly, Whereas the Queſtion might ſtill be, By what Light he ſhould know it was God that ſpake, when God did ſpeak? I take it, In the way God uſed then to ſpeak; it was but the Natural Light of Sanctified Reaſon, which might diſcern that alſo. It was with ſome ſuch Evidence, as he might know it was God in the Voice given, as truly as he knew 'twas God by his Works: Such were the viſible Apparitions and viſions made. For otherwiſe it had been eaſier for Satan to have counterfeited Gods Voice and appearance, and have ſooner deceived Eve thereby, as the old Prophet deceived the other with a falſe Command, than in that way he took. And it is more evident by this, That after his fall, when all holy light was extinguiſht, yet he knew and diſcerned the Voice of God in the Garden, and was afraid, therefore much more afore. And it was a due to Nature, That if God did ſpeak, he ſhould ſo ſpeak, as might evidence unto Nature, it was he that ſpake. Which was eaſie for God to do ſome way or other; For Balaam diſcerned the Difference, and wondred at it, when at firſt he thought to have converſt with his Devils.

And then fifthly, The Objects propounded to him to believe, were of themselves no way Supernatural; They were nothing more of Gods Nature or Attributes, but about some Precepts of his Will, or Priviledges granted to Adam; only such things as first concerned his Condition, and were within his own Sphere, of that World he was made in, and so suitable to his apprehension to take in, though confirmed to him by divine Authority. And therefore secondly, such as he might have some hint of by the light of Nature; besides the Revelation they were realized to him by Instinct or Sanctified Reason, though revealed and confirmed by Divine Testimony. Such were the Precepts about the two Trees, which were two Sacraments. The things which they confirmed were the promises of Life, and the Mutability of his Condition: Both which, as I shewed, the Light of Nature taught him, and made real to him: As also was that acknowledgment and Law promulged concerning his Wife, That being flesh of his flesh and bone of his bone, a Man should cleave to his Wife: Natural Light gave in the Equity of such a Conjugal Affection.

So as put all these five Considerations together, the Conclusion is, That all the Faith which Adam had, may well be resolved into Natural Light, as the first Principle and Foundation of it; although further revealing and confirming what else the Light of Nature could not, or would not so easily have known; and though we suppose the things had been such as were out of the reach of Natural Light; yet still the bottom of his assent to Divine Authority, had been but such a Natural Light aforesaid, and the Principle of Nature sown in his heart, which made him capable so to converse with God, and believe his Word, as to Understand God out of his Works: But it is otherwise in our Faith. And so far I conceive it is that wicked Men are blamed now for not believing the word of the Law and Gospel, so far, as such Natural Light as was in Adam would have enabled them thereunto: Seeing the Law given was confirmed at first by such Works and Voices, as evidently would have argued to that first Natural Light, that it was God that spake it; and they, if they had that Light remaining, would have owned in their hearts. And the Gospel also delivered by Christ, was confirmed by Signs and Wonders, Heb. 2, 3, 4. How shall we escape, if we neglect so great Salvation, which at the first began to be spoken by the Lord, and was confirmed unto us by them that heard him, God also bearing them witness, both with signs and wonders, and with divers miracles, and gifts of the Holy Ghost, according to his own will? And the whole word written derived to us, and then delivered, hath such peculiar Characters of Divine Authority engraven upon it, so as, even to Natural Light (if we had it pure as Adam had) would evidence it self to be of God; and so bind all Men to believe it. And therefore, Men are both justly commanded to believe it, and justly blamed for not believing it.

I am now to affix some Reasons and Demonstrations, that have prevailed with me to think that the way of Adam's Faith (call it so if you please) was in the sense declared but Natural, and ours comparatively Supernatural.

For the first, That his was but Natural.

1. Seeing all other things belonging to him were Natural: His Covenant, the Covenant of Works, was but Fœdus Naturæ, founded upon the Title of what, as a Reasonable Creature, was due to his Nature, his Justification answerable, his Reward also, and all things else appertaining to him; and that the whole Image of God is affirmed so generally by our Divines to have been Natural; it were strange if the Principle of Faith in him, which then was not of general use, neither should alone be Supernatural; that the Image of God in him should consist of one part so heterogeneal to the other, of an higher rank than its Fellows. Yea, and seeing it is manifest that the main Foundation of that his Faith might be, and indeed was but that Natural Light, That God was true, which was inbred in him as fully, as That God was holy, as I shewed: It is strange, if his Faith should be made Supernatural by some other other ſmall Addition only, when the Foundation was but Natural Light. Chap. 7.

Reaſon 2. For him to have had ſuch a Supernatural Principle of Faith as we have, was in him Superfluous, and to no end. The end that I find any Divines either Popiſh or others fix upon, for which they aſcribe a Superadded Supernatural Grace, is, in relation to his Tranſlation to Heaven, for which that Supernatural Grace ſhould fit him, and prepare him. Popiſh Divines, who contend for a Natural way of knowing God, and a Natural Righteouſneſs in Adam, yet with a ſuperadded Supernatural one alſo, they make the uſe of that Supernatural Addition for him to merit Heaven by; and make this the difference between Natural Righteouſneſs and Supernatural Grace and Faith; That Supernatural was given him to merit Heaven by. But I find them not ſo diſtinctly explaining any different Acts of Natural or Supernatural Grace in themſelves. Some of ours, though not in relation to meriting Heaven, yet aſcribe it to him to fit him to know God, ſo as to long after Heaven (as Faith doth) which they make the reward of his Obedience: And I confeſs, if the Promiſe given him had been that of Heaven, and the Viſion of God, as there, then it had been neceſſary for him to have ſuch a Supernatural Faith as we: But ſeeing it hath been proved, and I think ſufficiently that his Covenant would not have brought him thither, neither that it was intended in that his Promiſe of Life: Therefore I know no uſe at all of ſuch a Supernatural Principle, as an Optick Glaſs, added to Supernatural Light, to help it to ſee further into another World, when he was in his Condition, and deſires to be confined to this. For Faith Supernatural is given to prepare for Heaven, and to ſupply ſight or viſion, till we come thither, to ſupport us whilſt abſent from the Lord; 2 Cor. 5. 5, 6, 7. Now he that hath wrought us for Heaven is God, who hath given us the earneſt of his Spirit alſo. Therefore we are always confident, knowing that whilſt we are at home in the body, we are abſent from the Lord: For we walk by faith, not by ſight. The meaning is, God here by his Spirit works us and prepares us for Heaven, and that by giving us light of Faith, which in this our abſence ſupplies the room of ſight; and ſo he gives us a confidence of our coming thither: And ſo it is to be an Evidence of things abſent and not ſeen; and to give a preſent ſubſiſtence of things but in hopes further to be enjoyed: So Hebr. 11. 1. Now Faith is the ſubſtance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not ſeen. Now Adam not being ordained to ſight, and always to be at home in his Body; and ſo at no time to be abſent from his Body, to be preſent with the Lord, (as we are to be, 2 Cor. 5. 8.) We are confident, I ſay, and willing rather to be abſent from the Body, and to be preſent with the Lord: for his Body and Earthly Tabernacle was his natural only Home. Neither was God abſent to him, nor preſented as abſent, as in relation to a further way to be enjoyed, not yet attained: And therefore to what end he ſhould have Faith, that Faith which thus prepares for Heaven, whoſe Eſſence and Definition lies in giving an Evidence of things not ſeen, or enjoyed, but hoped for, I know not.

Yea thirdly, It would not only have been of no uſe, but have made him miſerable. For the uſe and end of this Supernatural Faith, being to give us a taſte of that way of knowing God in himſelf, as in Heaven, and ſo to ſtir up groans and deſires after ſight and viſion of him, as 2 Cor. 5. 4. For we that are in this Tabernacle do groan, being burdened, not for that we would be unclothed, but clothed upon, that mortality might be ſwallowed up of life. We do groan, &c. and a confidence of it, as Verſ. 6, 7. Therefore we are always confident, knowing that whilſt we are at home in the Body, we are abſent from the Lord. (For we walk by faith, not by ſight). So that it is ſuch a Faith as gives a taſte of what it is to enjoy God by ſight, and ſo ſtirs up groans and longings after it. And ſo it is a following after to comprehend, as Phil. 3. 12. a looking for, and haſtning to, as in 1 Pet. 3. 12. Now if Adam had had ſuch a Principle and Light thus to know God, and ſhould have had deſires thus to know him, and not have gone to Heaven, and ſo there, by a full Viſion to have had this groaning ſatisfied, the Addition of ſuch a way of knowing God, not satisfied and filled up, as by Faith it could never have been, this had been to have stir'd up desires in vain, and to have made his Condition, not in its own Sphere, perfect and compleat; yea, miserable in this, that he should have wanted that Confidence which our Faith stirs up in us, together with our longings, which stills our desires: Yea, it had left him despairing of ever doing so.

And therefore, fourthly, Our way of Faith must needs be Supernatural, and altioris ordinis, to his, and so our knowing God above his; because it is thus a Prelibation or taste of that Vision which is ordained to us in Heaven. Faith is an imperfect prelibation of that Knowledge of God we shall have hereafter, and the inchoation of it: So as by Faith, we come at least to know what an happiness it is to know God in his Essence, as in Heaven, and so to long after it. And therefore, according as we have more Faith, so there comes to be greater degrees of Glory in Heaven given, even in a like proportion as mens Faith was more stirring up earnest groanings, happiness being expletio appetituum, the satisfying our desires. And therefore Faith doth, in an imperfect obscure way, know God in himself; for it helps us to see and taste the happiness of knowing God so as he is, and so stirs up desires accordingly. Now that Knowledge of God in Heaven is acknowledged by all to be so transcendently Supernatural, that it is no way, in any respect, natural to any Creature, but only to Jesus Christ; as I shall shew hereafter. And therefore our Faith, that is the Inchoation of it, and is a beholding the Glory of the Lord Christ, 2 Cor. 3. ult. and eternal life begun, must needs be ejusdem ordinis, of the same Rank, and so doth differ from natural Faith and Knowledge of God in this, That the one is a seeing him in his Works and Effects, only from an inbred Light of his Attributes; the other is a seeing God, though obscurely, as in himself; though as presented in another, yet with a taste imperfect of what it is to see God in himself, which stirs up the heart to long after it. Which puts the truest difference between knowing God naturally and supernaturally, and between Adam's way and ours.

And therefore, as an Evidence of this our way, God hath ordained a Temporary Faith in men enlightned, as the counterfeit of our way, as he doth and did that Natural Knowledge in Heathens, and the Vision of old to the Forefathers, as the Representation of what Adam's way of knowing God was. And therefore these Temporaries are said to be enlightned, and to partake of the heavenly Gift of Faith, and the Holy Ghost, and to taste of the powers of the World to come, Hebr. 6. 4, 5. as a counterfeit of that enlightning and Spirit of Wisdom and Revelation through the Holy Ghost, whereby Believers know the hope of their Calling, 1 Eph. 17. 18. which work, even in them, is not Supernatural only to corrupt Nature, but to pure Nature, though not sanctifying, as Adam's was; yet working an assent to, and taste of the things of that World, such as Adam should never have had: Into which World Adam should never have come, and therefore he no ways tasted it. And therefore it is call'd the heavenly Gift, and wrought by the Holy Ghost, in a way above Nature.

To conclude: Thus learned Cameron, though he gives but a touch in a word, yet his Judgment falls this way, when differencing the Faith in Adam, and in us, he says, Fides in fœdere Naturæ est à Deo, ut loquuntur in Scholis, per modum naturæ: At fides quæ requiritur in fœdere gratiæ, à Deo est, sed per modum gratiæ supernaturalis. Thes. 14. de fœdere.

Now, as to the opposite Branch, That our Faith, and God's Revelation to us, is Supernatural, this will appear in three or four respects.

1. In respect of the Objects revealed to our Faith, which his Mind should never have arrived at.

2. In regard to the Light by which our Minds are acted and elevated, compared with that inbred Light by which he knew things, that Candle which the Lord set up in his heart, and was inbred in him,

3. In

3. In reſpect of the way or manner of knowledge, or aſſent raiſed up thereby. Chap. 7.

1. For the Objects revealed to us: They are ſuch as were utterly above the due and right of pure Nature in Adam. This compariſon you have made (take in the whole Context from firſt to laſt) 1 Cor. 2. 7, 9, 10, and 11. Verſes, where ſetting forth, and commending the excellency of the things revealed in the Goſpel; 1. He calls it, The Wiſdom of God, to ſhew how it excels human Wiſdom, which he had called The Wiſdom of Men, Verſ. 4. and of the World, Verſ. 6. this by the way of excellency, the Wiſdom of God; and ſo excelleth Mans Wiſdom, as God doth Man. Neither is it termed God's Wiſdom in a general ſenſe, ſuch the Law is, and the Natural Knowledge of God given to the Heathen, Chap. 1. 21. Where alſo he had ſhewed the inefficacy of it; but this in a tranſcendent manner, ſo tranſcendent, as God appropriates it to himſelf. It is a Wiſdom, proper and peculiar to God, which he arrogateth and taketh the Glory of, as having been hid and concealed in his own breaſt, not in any Creatures: And therefore is above the reach of the Wiſdom of any Creature, Man, or Angel, and ſo meerly Divine, and of God, and no way Natural to any Creature, as due to be revealed unto it. And therefore, Epheſ. 3. 9. it is the miſtery of his Will made known according to his good pleaſure, freely, and of meer Grace, no way as connatural to the Underſtanding of any Creature; Man or Angel. And in this ſenſe, 1 Cor. 2. 11. they are called, The things of God; even as the proper peculiar thoughts in a mans heart, which are ſecret to himſelf alone are the things of a Man. For ſo he doth compare them in that 11th Verſe, For what Man knoweth the things of a Man, ſave the Spirit of a Man which is in him? Even ſo the things of God knoweth no Man, but the Spirit of God. They are all God's Notions, proper to him, the Light of which were not to become inbred in any Creatures heart; for then it might have been called their Wiſdom, as the things naturally known by Men or Angels, is, and may be called. And therefore, though he mentions only the corrupt Wiſdom of Man, in oppoſition to it, yet in that, upon occaſion thereof, he particularly attributes it to God, he calls it his in oppoſition to all Wiſdom attainable by the ſtrength of Nature in Men or Angels, faln or not: It is meerly Divine.

Further alſo, 2ly. He calls it a Myſtery, which implies a thing ſo hidden, as cannot be known but by Revelation, Matth. 11. 25. At that time Jeſus anſwered, and ſaid, I thank thee, O Father, Lord of Heaven and Earth, becauſe thou haſt hid theſe things from the wiſe and prudent, and haſt revealed them unto babes. As none can know the things of a Man, but the Spirit of a Man; ſo nor theſe deep things of God, none but his Spirit; 1 Cor. 2. 11. For what Man knoweth the things of a Man, ſave the Spirit of Man which is in him? Even ſo the things of God knoweth no Man, but the Spirit of God. He argues from the leſſer to the greater; that if a Man's peculiar thoughts cannot be known by another, then ſurely not Gods private Cabinet Counſel thoughts, as theſe were. The heart of a Man is a deep Well, but a Man of Underſtanding will draw it out: But God's heart is ſo infinitely deep, as no Underſtanding could, by any inbred Light proper to it, have ſounded it: So deep, that the phraſe of Searching the deep things of God, is uſed of the Spirit himſelf, Verſ. 10. But God hath revealed them unto us by his Spirit: For the Spirit ſearcheth all things, yea, the deep things of God. This is to ſhew theſe depths, ſpeaking after the manner of Men.

3. He ſays 'tis a wiſdom hid, Epheſ. 3. 10. To the intent that now unto the Principalities and Powers in heavenly places, might be known by the Church the manifold wiſdom of God: to ſhew it was no way attainable by the light even of Angels, he ſays, From the beginning of the world it was hid in God: And then from the Angels, who knew it but by the Church. And then the Apoſtle proves all this, 1 Cor. 2. 9. for that Proof there brought out of Iſaiah, may refer, as Interpreters refer, to the ſeventh Verſe, as well as to the eighth and ninth; and indeed to both: As it is written, eye hath not ſeen, nor ear heard, neither have entred into heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for thoſe that love him. If it refers to exclude the Knowledge of the Wiſe of the World, yet it is an Argument fetch't à majori, not a bare Oppoſition only: For they are ſo far from having entred into the hearts of corrupt men, that not into innocent man; for him the words will reach. For, firſt, If we conſult the Prophet Iſaiah, Chap. 64. 4. whence the words are quoted, you ſhall find, he ſays, From the beginning of the world, ear hath not heard, &c. inſtead of which, the Apoſtle puts in, Nor hath entred into the heart of man; that is, not of innocent man; no man, from the beginning of the World when man was made. Secondly, The Apoſtle, in the Phraſes he enumerates, excludes all the light, and power, and means of the knowledge of innocent man by Nature, by reckoning up all the means of Knowledge. For his Knowledge came in, either from the inbred Light of Nature in him, as was ſaid, and ſo aſcended out of his own heart, as the Phraſe is here, which notes out the natural way of man's Knowledge from inbred Principles: Or elſe, was improved either by Obſervation of the Creatures by the Eye, or by Communication with God to the Ear. Now none of theſe ways ſhould the things of the Goſpel have been known and received by him; but it is meerly Supernatural, and ſo is ſaid not to aſcend, but to deſcend from the Father of Lights by Revelation: So James 1. 5, 17. If any of you lack wiſdom, let him ask of God, that giveth to all men liberally, and upbraideth not: and it ſhall be given him. Every good gift, and every perfect gift is from above, and cometh down from the Father of Lights, with whom is no variableneſs, neither ſhadow of turning. He ſpeaks of this Wiſdom, and ſo it is above the way of Nature alſo. Thirdly, He excludes not the Knowledge of man only, but of Angels alſo, though he names Man only: For in Iſaiah you have it, Iſai, 64. 4. None beſides thee have ſeen, O God, what he hath prepared for him that waits for him. The Prophet ſpeaks unto Chriſt, whom he calls God, as a Perſon diſtinct from the Father, that prepared theſe things; Therefore he changeth the Perſon, beſides thee, what he? no Man or Creature but he that was God as well as Man, and ſo was in God's boſome, could naturally have known theſe things. Therefore he ſays, No man beſides thee, O God, whom therefore he calls God and Man, whom, Verſe the firſt, he had called upon to come down, and be incarnate, and deliver this Goſpel, as once the Law, when the Mountains melted, Verſ. 1, 2, 3. Oh that thou wouldeſt rent the Heavens, that thou wouldeſt come down, that the Mountains might flow down at thy preſence, As when the melting fire burneth, the fire cauſeth the waters to boil, to make thy Name known to thine Adverſaries, that the Nations may tremble at thy preſence. When thou didſt terrible things, which we looked not for, thou cameſt down; the Mountains flowed down at thy preſence. And he threw the Enemies out of Canaan, the Type of Spiritual Enemies to be deſtroyed by Chriſt, and by the Revelation of the Goſpel: So that thoſe Truths are Supernatural every way to the Knowledge of any Creature but to Chriſt, as the Viſion of God alſo is. And therefore, the Apoſtle concludes there is no knowing them but by a Revelation of the Spirit, 1 Cor, 2. 10. But God hath revealed them to us by his Spirit; over and above the Light of natural Faith and natural Principles.

But of this Head I have treated more largely, in ſhewing the glory and riches of the Myſtery of the Goſpel. To which I refer the Reader.

The ſecond thing, wherein our State excels Adams, is; That heavenly Light wherewith our minds are acted and Elevated to thoſe Supernatural Objects; ſo far as the Light we are aſſiſted with excels, ſo far muſt be the Knowledge. It is light which makes all things manifeſt, as Epheſ. 5. 13. The foundation of all Adam's Knowledge of God was an inbred Light, or Candle ſet up by the Lord in the Chambers of the Belly, as Solomon ſpeaks of the relicks of it, Prov. 20. 27. which though Holy, was but Natural. But that Light whereby we ſee the things of the Goſpel, is termed glorious, and ſo wholly Supernatural. When Chriſt converted Paul, Acts 22. Chriſt ſurrounded his Body with a light which dazled, yea blinded his eyes with the Glory of it, Verſ. 11. I could not ſee for the glory of that Light, ſays he; which was but an outward ſign, to ſhew the glory of that Light by which Chriſt did

ſhine into his mind now at his Converſion: Even as 2 Cor. 4. 6. For God who commanded the light to ſhine out of darkneſs, hath ſhined in our hearts, to give the light of the knowledge of the Glory of God, in the face of Jeſus Chriſt. The Light of the Glory of God in the face of Chriſt, is a further glory than what ſhined in the Creation, and therefore requires a further Light to ſee it. As is the Object, ſuch is the Light we ſee it with. An Object that is Light it ſelf, held forth in its glory, cannot be ſeen, but by a Light anſwerably glorious; for the Light it is ſeen by, is but the ſplendor of it, as the Beams are of Sun, which is ſeen in its ſelf only by its own Beams and Light. And ſo is God in Chriſt: Which therefore, 1 Pet. 2. 9. is called a marvelous Light, yea, his marvelous Light: Marvelous or wonderful, becauſe Superexcelling, Supernatural; for that is wonderful that is ſuch, which Nature cannot comprehend, and is above the Courſe of Nature, θαύμαστον φῶς, and it is alſo called his Light, that is, Chriſt. Not only which he gives, as Epheſ. 5. 14. Ariſe, and Chriſt ſhall give thee Light; Nor his only, that is, of him, as the Object of it; But his as the ſame which reſides in him, and was in his heart, by which he ſaw things here when below: For 1 Cor. 2. ult. We have the mind of Chriſt, having the ſame Spirit with Chriſt, only he above meaſure. 'Tis called his Light, as his inheritance, Epheſ. 1. 17. And Adam's Light, though Lighted at this Sun, yet but as the efficient Cauſe of it, as John 1. 4. It was but the Light of Men, as they are human, and proceeded, modo humano, and ſo lower. His was not the ſame with Chriſt's; but this Light of the Goſpel, the Light of the Spirit that is in Chriſt, whoſe Spirit, ſo working, he had not: And ſo it was lower, as that Light of the Moon is to the Sun, or as the Light of Glory will be to this of Grace: Not as an Optick Glaſs only, which ſtrengthens not the Sight only, but brings down the Object lower; but ſuch as was added to Stephen's eyes, being full of the Holy Ghoſt, when he ſaw Chriſt in Heaven; there was added a Further Light and Ability, than the inbred Light of ſight, or of the Sun, to ſee Chriſt by in Heaven; Acts 7. 55, 56. As alſo to Paul in his Converſion; Such is this Light of Faith to the mind, to ſee heavenly Objects by, ſuperadded to natural Light, and that of Reaſon: So as if you could ſuppoſe Adam now alive, as in Innocency; for him to ſee theſe things, there muſt be an Elevation of his Light by the acceſs of another Light Supernatural of the Spirit, as there was to Stephen's Eye. And therefore, our believing is attributed to the Spirit, as was ſaid, and is call'd, The Spirit of Wiſdom and Revelation, and The Spirit of Faith, 2 Cor. 4. 13. And 1 John 2. 20, 27. the Unction that teacheth all things; not only clearing the ſight, but teaching it. Neither need it be ſtrange, that there ſhould be ſeveral ranks of Light from God to ſee himſelf by: That as in Heaven we ſee Light in God's Light, Pſal. 36. 9. and ſo a further Light than any here: So here we ſee Chriſt and God by the Spirits Light and Repreſentation, though of a lower kind than that whereby we ſhall ſee him in Heaven, and not by Natural Light, as it would preſent God to us, or take God up from the Creatures. And the more immediate the Light is from God, the more Supernatural, the higher is it, and we the more paſſive in it. The light of Glory will be God's light immediately; he both is the Object and Efficient, All in All; and ſo we ſhall be ſwallowed up with it, as when the Sun is ſeen by its own light. This of the Spirit in us is efficiently his, and therein we are more paſſive than active, though the Subject of it, and that of Adam's inbred light had leſs of God's light in it, he not being enlightned by his Spirit of Revelation, but left to that inbred light to judge and give an aſſent to the things objected afore him. Chap. 7.

Add to theſe that place, Epheſ. 1. 17. where he prays, That the God of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, the Father of Glory, may give unto you the Spirit of Wiſdom and Revelation, in or for the knowledge of him. Every Word and Circumſtance makes to demonſtrate what I entend.

Book II.

1. His Scope is to reckon up in this Chapter the Bleſſings heavenly, which we are bleſt with in Chriſt the ſecond Adam, peculiar to the Elect: So Epheſ. 1. 3. they are all Bleſſings heavenly which we are bleſt with in Chriſt the ſecond Adam. The Bleſſings we were bleſt with in the firſt Adam were but earthy, and ſerved but for a Life on Earth; as the Oppoſition, 1 Cor. 15. 47, 48. evidently ſhews: The firſt man is of the earth, earthy: The ſecond man is the Lord from Heaven. As is the earthy, ſuch are they that are earthy, and as is the heavenly, ſuch are they alſo that are heavenly. Now after Election, Adoption, Redemption, he mentions the Wiſdom and the Prudence which is in Chriſt, the ſecond Adam, as one of thoſe heavenly and ſpiritual Bleſſings peculiar to the Elect, God hath abounded to us in, when he made known the Goſpel, the Myſtery of his Will, that is, the ſecrets of his Will, which he purpoſed in himſelf, Epheſ. 1. 8, 9. And then here in his Prayer, he ſhews the Heavenly ſupernatural riſe and cauſe of it, even all the three Perſons. The Vouchſafer of it is God the Father, 1. Not as the Author of Nature, but as the God of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt: For it is a Bleſſing in Chriſt peculiar to his, and therefore call'd, The Faith of God's Elect, Titus 1. None ever had it but the Elect, and therefore Adam had it not; ſeeing men not elected had all he had once in him. And therefore, though he was Elect, yet he had not what he had then as Elect, but as the common root of all, both Elect and others.

And 2ly, He makes the Father the Fountain of it, as he is the Father of Glory. He praying for this peculiar Wiſdom, mentions ſuch Attributes (as the manner of the Apoſtles in their Prayers is) as have a more proper relation of Efficiency to the things prayed for. Elſewhere, when James bids them ſeek Wiſdom, he directs them to God as the Father of Lights; and here, as the Father of Glory. For this Wiſdom is ſo far from being the ſame in our primitive Nature, that 'tis glory, a glorious Gift, and therefore Supernatural, not to corrupt, but pure Nature, and is of that rank comparatively to Nature, as Glory in Heaven is of, it being the beginning of Glory: And therefore is call'd Eternal Life, to know God even as a Believer doth, John 17. 3. And this is life eternal, that they might know thee the only true God, and Jeſus Chriſt whom thou haſt ſent. It raiſeth the mind up to take in a taſte or hint, a glimpſe, a prelibation of Glory, as it follows in the next Verſe 18. of Eph. 1. The eyes of your Underſtanding being enlightned, that ye may know what is the hope of his Calling, and what the riches of the Glory of his Inheritance in the Saints: and ſo to deſire and breathe after it. Now Adam's was not ſuch.

3. It is from the Holy Ghoſt, the Spirit of Chriſt, given to us, and ſo working above the power of Nature: And in that reſpect he is call'd here, The Spirit of Wiſdom and Revelation; as alſo elſewhere, The Spirit of Faith, 2 Cor. 4. 13. The way of Natural Faith I conceive to have been, That the object being provided with Evidence ſuitable to convince and perſwade the Light of Nature of the Truth of it ſelf, through an ordinary Concurrence of the Holy Ghoſt to a natural free Agent: It was left to the ſpirit of man to give its aſſent; ſo as then it was of, and for that ſpirit in man rather: But now it is attributed more to the Spirit of Chriſt in us, who both works Wiſdom, the Principle capable of it, and revealeth and draws out an Acknowledgment by an over powring Light, For, I take it, that the Faith of God's Elect is not reſolved into Principles inbred and begotten, as I ſaid Adam was, but into a prevailing work of the Spirit working Wiſdom, and a Teſtimony of the Spirit giving light, and ſealing up what he would have us believe. A prevailing Teſtimony of the Spirit is the ground of all our Faith, of what kind ſoever it be: Not only when a perſwaſion is begotten of a man's Intereſt in Chriſt, which is becauſe the Spirit witneſſeth with his Spirit, which yet alone carries the name of the teſtimony of the Spirit; but when a man's Spirit prevailingly aſſents to any ſpiritual Truth, it is from the like over-powring Teſtimony of the Spirit, ſealing up that Truth with a light beyond the light pure Nature had, which was left to it ſelf to give conſent out of its own light, which was ſuited to the Object: But here a Divine light is ſuperadded, that caſts the Ballance, lance, and this in believing there is a God, or that Christ is the Son of God, as well as in believing the Interest of a Christian in him. This I find 1 John 5. 5, 6. speaking of believing not only a man's self to be the Son of God, but this truth, That Christ is the Son of God, verse 5. He says, That the Spirit bears witness to it: And verse 10. He that believes hath the Witness in himself. Now his Scope there is to speak of the Witness, not only to a man's Interest in Christ, of which verse 12. but also of Christ's being ordained the Fountain of Life, vers. 10, 11. He that believeth on the Son of God, hath the witness in himself: he that believeth not God, hath made him a liar, because he believeth not the record that God gave of his Son. And this is the record, That God hath given to us eternal life, and this life is his Son. Chap. 7.

It is necessary, upon occasion of this Discourse, to add a Caution in this place; which is, That all this is not so to be understood, as if the light of Supernatural Faith in us destroys that of Reason and Nature, yea, it subordinates it to it self, and restoreth it again, and rectifies it, and then makes use of it; even as the light of Reason doth subordinate and make use of Sense. God possesseth and cloatheth the natural Powers of the Mind, with an higher light than ever inbred in us, through the Revelation of the Spirit, and converts them all, as its Engines, to get a further knowledge by. We see it by this, That the word written (unto which the light of Faith is suited as Colours to the eye) though it reveals things, beyond reason and light natural, as are the Principles of the Gospel, yet it reveals them in such a way, as Reason enlightned by Faith may see the greatest harmony and correspondency in them, and receive as much satisfaction as ever in that other natural Knowledge. And the Principles being taken for granted once by Faith, there is use of Reason to see the dependence of all things revealed one with another, and the collecting one thing from another; so as God hath writ the Scriptures as to men endowed with reason, yea, and applyed it to the way of Human Arts and Sciences: Yet still so, as the light of Faith is a light beyond that of Reason; which appears,

1. In that the first Principles of the Gospel, as the Apostle calls them, Heb. 6. 1. laid in the Mind, are wholly above Reason, and made evident by this Supernatural Light wholly: They are wholly new; and Reason is uncapable of them. So that there is much the same difference between the Principles inbred, and these by Faith revealed in the Gospel; that is, between the Principles of Sciences. Some Sciences take their Principles out of Nature, being such as are known by Nature, as Philosophy doth; and so did Adam's Divinity and Knowledge of God, the Principles of it were inbred: But others take their Principles from other Sciences, as Musick, having use of Numbers, borrows its skill in them from Arithmetick: So Faith doth fetch its Principles about Christ, &c. from Heaven, the bosome of God, the Spirit laying in the deep things of God's Counsel, as Principles wholly new, and wholly above Nature. And these it sees no other way, than by a Supernatural Light and Revelation of the Spirit; at first it is so, though reason may confirm them. Therein Faith and Reason differ, that Nihil est in intellectu, quod non prius in sensu; but here many things are in Faith, which were never in Reason.

And 2ly, It appears in this, That though Faith useth Reason to discuss the Truth of Deductions from those Principles, and to gather Conclusions from these Principles laid: As for example; the Word hath Motives which Faith makes use of in a way of Reason too, and it argues things in a rational way. It argues the Cause from the Effect, Gods Love from Signs. In interpreting the Scriptures, we use Reason to gather from the Connexion and Dependence, the meaning of the Holy Ghost: Yet still, even in these Arguings and Deductions, there accompanies a Light that Faith strikes in with, a Light beyond the force in the Reason: It seals up the Truth, collected by Reason, beyond the Power of Reason: It superadds a Light which casts the Ballance. It not only reveals the Principles we reason from, by an higher Light than Natural, but it confirms the Reasonings and Conclusions from thence by a Light more than Natural, of bare Reason; as the phrase in Job is, He sealeth Instruction, Job 33. 16. If we be moved to any Duty by a practical Reason or Motive, the Spiritual makes it effectually beyond what the Moral or Rational force that is in it, can set it on. If we be Comforted from any signs, the Spirit gives a Light of Revelation to cast the Ballance, and witnesseth with our Spirits, as Rom. 8. 16. beyond the power of the sign. If we read the Scriptures, and to get the meaning of them, observe the Connexion of one thing with an other by Reason; yet there comes often a Light of the Spirit, beyond the hight of Reason; which by that Observation of the Connexion, seals up this to be the Holy Ghost's meaning: So as the Holy Ghost is to Faith still his own Interpreter. For else the Scripture were of private Interpretation; which it is not, 2 Pet. 1. 20. For such is Ratio humana to the Spirit. Yet as the Holy Ghost, in writing the Scriptures, writ them in a Rational way, because unto Men Reasonable; so in giving us Light to Understand them, he useth Reason, but joyns a Light beyond it. Some believe, says Christ to Thomas, that have not seen: And though God used Sense to confirm his Faith; yet his Faith was a Light beyond the Light of Sense or Reason from thence.

And 2ly, That this Light of Faith is above that of Reason rectified, appears in this, That it depends not on the natural way of Man's Understanding necessarily, but often proceeds above it. We see those that have low Understandings, little Reason in them, and are ignorant of the Notional Connexion of one Truth with another; cannot dispute for it, yet see further into things heavenly; see more in them than the greatest Doctors. What is the Reason? A Supernatural Light of Faith, a higher Light abounds in them. And being a Light above the way of Nature and Reason, reveals things to them beyond the power of Reason.

Yea, we may all see it in our selves, at several times, That the same Reasons, Motives, and Signs, considered by us at one time, perswade us not, as at another time they do, by reason of a superadded Light of Revelation that casts the Ballance: So that as the Light of Vision in Heaven is argued to be Supernatural, because it depends not on the Light of Nature, or power or strength of Reason, but takeing the lowest, meanest Idiot, raiseth and elevateth his mind above one of a larger Understanding naturally to see God more in Heaven; because the Light there, is above the Light of Nature, and proceeds without it; it raiseth not the Mind, according to the proportion of its Understanding, but according to the measure of its Light received, which is so glorious, as it wraps up the meanest Understanding to the highest Intention. Yea, Natural Understanding contributes no advancement unto it, but only an Obediential Faculty; so the Light of Faith also doth in a proportion: And that argues it supernatural. Strength of Natural Principles, and of Reason, may help forward that Knowledge, which is of its own Sphere notional and rational; And in a Believer, it may help to advance Knowledge of Spiritual things in a Rational way; but it contributes nothing to the Light of Revelation by the Spirit, who works, how much, and when he pleaseth. But in Adam's Children, their Light and knowledge of God, being natural, would have been proportioned to the strength of inbred Light and Reason, so as stronger Souls would have had more, and weaker less; for it ran in a natural way, but not so here.

The third Particular propounded, was this, wherein our Knowledge of God, &c. excels that of Adam's, and so is supernatural to it, is the manner or way of knowledge: This third flows from the former.

The Light of Faith is more intuitive, and so more comprehensive: But the way of Adam's Knowledge was discoursive, by way of gathering one thing from another, which is more imperfect, and further about, and more at second hand. The perfection of the Angels Knowledge of things, is expressed above that of Man's, in this, That theirs is Intuitive; they use not Reason to gather one thing from another; So much Intuitive (say some) as they see at once the Effect and the Cause together, therefore called Intelligentiæ. The one is as knowing of a Man by his Works and hear-say of him, whereby the mind gathers what an one he is by way of Discourse: So did Adam what God was by his Works, and Visions, and Revelations made: But this is the Beholding the Glory of the Lord, John 6. 40. Seeing the Son and believing on him: And 1 Cor. 13. 12. though it be but darkly, and in a Glaſs, yet it is ſaid we ſee as in a Glaſs. So 1 John 3. 6. The like Phraſe is uſed; He that ſinneth, hath not ſeen him, neither known him: That is, not known him with this Knowledge of ſight. And thus Faith is a Knowledge of God, as he is in himſelf, though in the face of Chriſt, and the Glaſs of the Goſpel: But Adam's was but in his works by Collection. They gathered Hercules by his footſteps: So Adam collected Gods power, &c. from the works of Creation: But this is the preſenting God himſelf, though as in a Glaſs, in the Goſpel: So it is not knowing God, ex alio, by Collection from an other thing, but knowing God himſelf in alio, in an other thing, wherein by his own Light he preſents himſelf as a Man doth in a Glaſs. Chap. 7.

The Difference may be expreſſed by way of Similitude, by the ſeveral ways of Aſſurance of Gods love. Look, what difference there is between that way, when we know Gods love to us but by ſigns only, this is knowing and gathering his love, ex alio, by effect; Collecting it from another thing, and ſo is but diſcourſive; as when the Cauſe is known by the Effects, though the Spirit ſecretly joyns a teſtimony in the Concluſion, and that other which comes from an immediate Light of the Spirits ſealing up that Light, and the taſte of it, and revealing Gods heart and mind in itſelf towards us; This is ſo tranſcendent, as it works joy unſpeakable and Glorious; it is intuitive: Not ſo the other: Such difference is there between Adam's knowing God and ours. Or to ſet out the difference by another Inſtance. When Job, at laſt in the winding up of Gods dealings with him, had a more diſtinct intuitive repreſentation of God to his Faith, comparing it with many of his former Apprehenſions wrought, Job 42. 5. he compares them to ſecond hand Knowledge, a Hear-ſay, by the hearing of the Ear: But now, ſays he, mine eyes have ſeen him. How diſtinct and differing is ſight to hear-ſay? And it may be, that hear-ſay Knowledge Job meant, was, That knowing God by the Works of Creation and Providence, and by Viſions, &c. He may compare that way of Knowledge, which was familiar in thoſe times, even to Believers; God training them up, though they had a Principle of Faith beyond it, in the Elements of the World before the Law, to ſtudy him in his Works and ordinary Viſions; which is called comparatively but the hearing with the Ear; both becauſe the manner of the Godly then, was to talk together of God out of his Works, and communicate ſuch Obſervations. And, as I find ſome Interpreters obſerve on Chapter 36. 24. where Elihu going about to inſtruct Job with a ſenſe of the greatneſs of God's Majeſty, he calls upon him to look into his Works which men have Sung: So Sanctius renders it. He minds him of the common Songs men made of the Works of God; or elſe becauſe the Heavens, and Day and Night, are ſaid to have a voice, and utter ſpeech, Pſal. 19. 1. 2. as Man an Ear to hear their ſound, to declare the Glory of God: To whoſe voice Job had lent his Mind to ſtudy God out.

Add unto this, that Phraſe uſed in that 36th Chapt. 25. verſ. when Elihu calls upon Job to ſee God's greatneſs in his Works, which Sanctius makes the beginning of that Song which Elihu minds Job of, that holy men did ſing. Every man may ſee what is the Work of God. Man beholds afar off; ſo 'tis in the Original: that is, God afar off in his Works. It is a remote, and but an obſcure Knowledge, and yet how great doth it argue him? So it ſollows, Behold, God is great and we know not; or, but little of him thus by his Works. And therefore, Rom. 1. 19, 20. that Knowledge gotten by the Works of God, Paul calls τὸ γνῶστον τοῦ Θεοῦ, ſomething that may be known of God; rather than the Knowledge of him in himſelf, as indeed it is not. And though the Godly then had Faith as well as we now; yet the Covenant of Works and Nature being more predominately the Diſpenſation under the Law of Nature, they were in that very firſt Infancy of the World very much kept to that School, at leaſt in that form.

As

Book II.

As the Concluſion of this Diſcourſe; becauſe I would not maintain a Diſpute againſt a multitude of Divines, who are of another mind in their Writings: If we will grant and ſuppoſe, That there was ſuch a Light of Faith vouchſafed Adam, as was Superiour unto the Law of Nature ſpecified; (whereby he knew God in his Works, and ſuch Revelations as externally carried their own Evidence with them) even unto natural Faith, and to have been as Supernatural as ours: Yet ſtill the Aſſertion I aim at, will hold true, That a Believers knowing of God, and enjoying of him, doth infinitely tranſcend that of his in many reſpects:

For, 1. If we conſider the Uſes of his Faith then to him, and of ours to us now, there is a vaſt Difference, for even the Apoſtle lived not always by Faith, as a Chriſtian, Gal. 2. 20. The life I now lead is by Faith, &c. And Hebr. 10. 38. the Juſt are ſaid to do ſo. And it is ſpoken of a Chriſtian, in oppoſition to a legal Life, as appears by the Coherence, verſe 19. of that Gal. 2. I am dead to the Law, &c. So not all, or the moſt of Adam's knowledge or enjoyment of God came in that way: But the ordinary way he liv'd, knew, and enjoyed God by, was by that ſanctified Light of Nature, joyn'd with Obſervation out of his Works: And therefore, although he might have another Principle of Faith, for particular Occaſions extraordinary, to know God's mind by, whenever God would now and then Communicate himſelf to him; as alſo in caſe of Temptation when any part of God's Will was queſtioned, or reaſoned againſt, as it was by Satan to Eve, then there was uſe of Faith above Reaſon to ſtick to the Word; but ſtill he walkt by Nature's Light, not that of Faith: Whereas the Apoſtle ſays of us, That we walk by faith, not ſight, 2 Cor. 5. 7. Faith was then (what ever it was, whether Natural or Supernatural) but a private Grace, which at times he had uſe of, as he had of the reſt: But now to us, it is a general Grace. All Knowledge is let in by it; every Truth is ſealed up by it; 'tis advanced to the Supream Office, to be the general Inſtructor; whereas the Light of Nature and ſanctified Reaſon was then the predominant Principle: For Reaſon is predominant in man's Nature, as he is a Man, as Faith is in a Chriſtian. The Juſt now lives by Faith; not ſo Adam then. Again, Faith is now the Bond of the Covenant between God and us; becauſe it is a receiving Grace, Rom. 4. 13, 14, 16. But Love and Obedience from Man was then the Bond of his Covenant, becauſe the Covenant was founded upon what Man returned to God, and continued upon his doing homage. In a word, Faith was then (ſuppoſing him to have had the ſame Principle with us) but as ſenſe and joy in the Holy Ghoſt is now to Believers: Tis true, ſuch a Communion, a Believer hath with God at times, when God will appear to him in an extraordinary manner; but he ordinarily lives by Faith, without ſuch ſenſe. So Adam; whereas he lived in the Works of God, ſtudying God in them, converſing with God in them, his Task being, by Obſervation, to till the Seeds of Light ſown in his Mind, as well as to till the Earth, ordinarily thus knowing and enjoying God but by the Light of Nature, and accordingly obeying and loving of him, God did now and then make an Apparition to utter ſome word to his Faith. Now therefore, if the Compariſon be made between his Eſtate and ours (if it be granted he had like Faith with us) it muſt withal be granted, that the difference is as great, as between a Man that once a week makes a meal of more than ordinary Fare, and a King that fares deliciouſly every day: For we ordinarily do, or might (if the fault were not our own) live by the Faith of the Son of God, in the Revelations of the Word, as our proper Element: He ordinarily, but in the Works of God, and his own Works. What was extraordinary in him, is ordinary with us; his Exceedings, our Commons. Which if it were compleat, and ſin and unbelief fully ſubdued, how happy muſt it make us above him? Look what difference there may be conceived now in the Eſtate of Grace, in reſpect of happy Communion with God, between the preſent Comfort of a Believer, liever, that alwaies lives in joy unspeakable and glorious, and another that wants it, and lives meerly by Faith: Such, if not more, will be found to be between Adam, who lived ordinarily by the Light of Nature; and but sometimes had a Revelation by Faith, and us, who live all our lives by Faith, and Communicate with God wholly by the Ligh thereof. Chap. 7.

2. Consider that yet in respect of the Objects of his Knowledge and ours, whereby God was known to him and to us, we infinitely transcend him and his way, if our Faith were made compleat. For first the things revealed to him and to his Faith were but some matters of precepts and duty, which being for the most part Positivi Juris, arbitrary, and so were not so clearly written in his heart, as that of the Sabbath, and about the Tree of life (which was a Sacrament, and so must be instituted, and else he had not a second Command) so it was to be known Revelation necessarily: Neither could more have been revealed than was necessary and what could be known no other way. But still all the knowledge he was to have of God himself, and what a God he was, &c. which is the knowledge wherein happiness lies, this was still left to be obtained in that natural way forementioned. We read not of any descriptions God made of himself to Adam, as to us and Moses. For what might be known more clearly by natural Light out of the works, or written in his heart, God revealed not to Faith. But we know all these Attributes by Revelation unto Faith; and so in a clearer, distincter, and indeed a more immediate manner we take in by Faith that Description which God makes of himself: And hear what himself says, of himself; and this by the Light of Faith: Whereas he had the knowledge of these Attributes no such way, but from the Light of Nature, to be emproved out of the works of God; as God had manifested himself therein. Again secondly, consider that all that he knew whatsoever by such a Natural Light, or by Faith either, whether of the Nature of God, or the Love of God in his heart, we know it all by Faith; And so to have the knowledge of all, he had in an higher way than he, and so more evident and Clear: Whereas he had the knowledge of Faith but about some few particulars. And the reason why we know all by Faith which he any way knew, is, because those things of God and the law which he knew by inbred Light, that Light being now extinct in us, it is necessary to be revealed by Revelation, and so to be let in by Faith. First he by natural inbred Light knew that there was a God, but we by Faith believe That God is, Heb. 11. 6. and a Rewarder of them that seek him. And so all that Theologia naturalis; that natural Divinity to pick God out of his works, and to see how the works of Creation and providence shew God forth and argue him and his Attritributes the Rules hereof, we have now revealed and written. The Book of Job, and the Psalms, teach us how to fetch God out of the Creation, and to praise him: So as God reads to us his own Logick, and a Lecture on his own Works: Whereas, Adam was left to study the bare Text, but by natural Light: Yea, and this Lecture is read to Faith, a higher Principles, more capable than Nature is; God teaching us by Faith how to interpret his Works. So as out of the word, If we had Faith, enough might we learn more of God, even in his Works, reading the Text with that God's own Comment, than Adam ever could have done by his plodding and poring on them, and using his Reason and Natural Light.

2. By Natural Light, he knew out of the Creatures, that God made the World, Rom. 1. 20. But we know it by the Light of Faith and Revelation from God, how it was, &c. Hebr. 11. 3. By Faith we Understand the Worlds were made by the Word of God. He (for ought we read) knew but of a new World made, that which he saw; and whether he should ever have heard of Heaven, or Angels, is a question: But we Understand the Worlds were made the Heaven of Heavens, and this Visible World.

And

BOOK II. And then, laſt of all, Add unto all, that we have over and above what he had, a New Edition of God, and all his Attributes, and all his Mind bound up in one Volume in Chriſt, and the Revelation of the Goſpel, the Myſtery of his Will: The leaſt tittle whereof Adam ſhould never have known. Faith brings us into an other World, and the things of it, infinitely tranſcending Adam's; and revealing more of God in the leaſt Creature of it, than is in all his Volumn, and is as much vaſter than his, as Heaven is above Earth; as much exceeds it, as the ſecond Adam, Chriſt, doth him, who was the Epitome of his World, as Chriſt is of ours. We have the Addition of new Objects, and thoſe glorious, heavenly, wholly ſupernaturall. In Chriſt a new Indies is diſcovered, a new Treaſure broken up, which Adam ſhould never have heard of.

Chap. 8.

CHAP. VIII.

How Adam, and his ſtate, according to the Law of his firſt Creation, was intended by God as a Type of one, who was to be a ſecond Adam, Jeſus Chriſt, and the Founder of a Supernatural Condition. Some things premiſ'd of the Nature, and various diviſion of a Type. Wherein Adam was a Type of Chriſt: As he was in his ſtate of Innocency a publick Perſon and the Head of Mankind, and ſo derived to his Poſterity the Imputation of his Diſobedience; ſo he was a Type of Chriſt, as preordained before the World was, and without conſideration of the Fall, to be the Root, and Head of the Elect, and to convey to them the Supernatural benefits of Grace.

Rom. V. 14.

Who is the Type of him that was ot come.

WHen I firſt conſidered this, and other Scriptures in the New Teſtament, which make the Firſt Adam, and the whole Story of him, both before, and after, in his ſinning or falling, to be the Type and lively Shadow of Chriſt the Second Adam; likewiſe obſerving that the Apoſtle Paul ſtands admiring at the Greatneſs of this Myſtery, or Miſtical Type, that Chriſt the ſecond Adam, ſhould ſo wonderfully be Shadowed forth therein: As, Epheſ. 5. 32. he cries out, This is a great Myſtery: Which he ſpeaks, applying and fitting ſome paſſages about Adam and Eve unto Chriſt and his Church; it made me more to conſider an Interpretation of a Paſſage in Heb. 10. 7. out of Pſal 40. 7. which I before had not only not regarded, but wholly rejected, as being too like a Poſtil Gloſs. The Paſſage is, That When Chriſt came into the World, to take our Nature on him, he alledgeth the reaſon of it to be, the fulfilling of a Scripture written in the beginning of Gods book, [ἐν κεφαλίδι βιβλίου] ſo out of the Original the words may be (and are by many Interpreters) tranſlated, though our Tranſlation reads them only thus, [In the Volume of thy Book it is written of me] It is true indeed, that in that 4th Pſalm, where they are quoted, the Words in the Hebrew may ſignifie no more than that in Gods Book (the manner of writing which was anciently in Rols of Parchment, folded up in a Volume) Chriſt was every where written and ſpoken of. Yet the word [κεφαλὶς] (which out of the Septuagints Tranſlation the Apoſtle took) ſignifying (as all know) the beginning of a Book, and we finding ſuch an Emphaſis ſet by the Apoſtle in the 5th Chapter of the Epheſians, upon the Hiſtory of Adam in the beginning of Geneſis, as containing the Myſtery, yea the great Myſtery about Chriſt; it did ſomewhat induce, though not ſo fully perſwade me to think, that the Holy Ghoſt in thoſe words might have ſome glance at the Story of Adam in the firſt of the firſt Book of Moſes;

Book II. And withal the rather, becauſe ſo, the words ſo underſtood, do intimate a higher and farther inducement to Chriſt to aſſume our Nature; the Scope of the Speech, Heb. 10. being to render the reaſon why he ſo willingly took Mans Nature: Not only becauſe God liked not Sacrifice and burnt Offering, which came in but upon occaſion of Sin and after the Fall, and could not take ſins away: But further that he was Prophecied of, and his Aſſuming a Body prophetically, fore-ſignified, as in the 40th Pſalm, ſo even by Adams Story before the Fall, recorded in the very beginning of Geneſis, which many other Scriptures do expreſly applie it unto. As in his firſt Formation, and the Condition of his Perſon, 1 Cor. 15. 45, &c. And ſo it is written, The firſt Man Adam was made a living Soul, the laſt Adam was made a quickning Spirit. So in his marriage with Eve, Epheſ. 5. 32. This is a great myſtery; but I ſpeak concerning Chriſt and the Church. And then in his Soveraignty over all, Pſal. 8. 6. Thou madeſt him to have dominion over the works of thy hands: Thou haſt put all things under his feet. And Heb. 2. 8. Thou haſt put all things in ſubjection under his feet. For in that he put all in ſubjection under him, he left nothing that is not put under him. But now we ſee not yet all things put under him. So likewiſe in the communication of his ſin he typified out the Communication of Chriſts Obedience, as Rom. 5.

I ſhall chooſe to begin with this laſt Place of Rom. 5. as laying the general Foundation for all the reſt. The words there, do (as you ſee) plainly affirm, that Adam was a Type of Chriſt to come; Verſ. 14. and the occaſion of uttering them was the comparing of Adam and Chriſt together (which the Apoſtle in this Chapt. doth at large) as they were both of them Publick Perſons; the one conveying ſin, the other Righteouſneſs, to all their Poſterity. And as the ground-work of that his Comparing of them, he brings in this Maxim, That Adam was a Type of Chriſt to come: That is, Chriſt being as ſurely to come after him, as Adam was then come already. Therefore God appointed Adam, as to be a Publick Perſon to convey to his Poſterity what he ſhould do, or be, ſo further alſo, to be a Type of an other Adam, who was to come after him, namely Jeſus Chriſt: And ſaid to be to come; not becauſe that proved to be the Event of it, that Chriſt did do ſo; but becauſe it was foreſeen, aimed at, and appointed by God, even by the Hiſtory of Adam. And hereupon it is the Apoſtle ſets the one againſt the other, as the Type and Anti-type, exactly comparing them in what he had propounded to compare them in. And although in that Place it be but one Particular wherein he doth compare them, namely in Adams conveying ſin, wherein he typified out Chriſt to come, who ſhould convey Righteouſneſs; yet this Axiom he brings as the warrant for it: For this Collation is more General and ſo extendeth to all Particulars elſe of Adams Story: As wherein he was alſo a Type, as well as in this. For it is uſual with the Apoſtles (as it is with all other Diſcourſers) in arguing, to bring General Axioms for the proof of ſome one Particular. Thus for the comfort of the Saints in Afflictions, Rom. 8. 25, 28. &c. he brings in a General Axiom, which reacheth to all things elſe, namely That All things work together for their good, Verſ. 28. And another, Verſ. 29. We are predeſtinated to be conformed to the Image of his Son; which conformation reacheth to all things both of Grace and Glory: But he there alledgeth it only in point of Afflictions, and for a Conformity to his Sufferings; which is but one Particular. And ſo here, when he calls Adam a Type of him who was to come, he applies it indeed but to one Particular in this Place: But it is a General Maxim, extendible to many things more, wherein Chriſt was typified out by Adam; as by other Scriptures doth appear.

But before I explain any of thoſe Scriptures, I will firſt ſhew what is meant by [Type] as here it is taken.

A Type of a thing to come, is a Prophetical reſemblance wherein ſomething more imperfect going before, is intended by God to ſignifie ſome other thing more noble and perfect to follow after. In the proper ſignification of the word, it ſignifies a Print, Stamp, or Impreſſion, bearing the reſemblance of that which made it. As the Letters wherewith Men Print, are called τύποι, Typis mandetur, ſays the Priviledge) becauſe they leave the Print of themſelves upon upon Paper, and the Letters Printed bear the reſemblance of thoſe Stamps which made them: So that, Chap. 8.

1. It notes out a Reſemblance between two things; which ſometimes in Scripture are called Allegories: So Galat. 4. 24. the Story of Hagar and Sarah is made the Allegory of the two Covenants: That is, a continued Similitude. So likewiſe they are called παραβολαὶ, Heb. 9. 9. that is, compariſons made of things like, ſuch as Chriſt uſed, and ὑποδείγματα, Suboſtenſiones, obſcure, underhand reſemblances, (Heb. 8. 5.) and Shadows; and Hebr. 7. 4. Melchiſdech is ſaid to be made like to Chriſt, as being his Type.

Secondly, When the thing typified is to come, then it notes out a Prophetical reſemblance intended by God; and ſo it differs from a meer likeneſs, or Alluſion, or Pattern or Example. There are many Stories in the Scripture, which fell out exceeding like to many Paſſages about Chriſt. As the inſtance of Job in his Sufferings, which in as many Particulars reſembles Chriſt's Sufferings, as any other whatever in Holy Writ; as in his being emptied of All; and from being One who thought it no robbery to be equal with the Princes of the Earth, in Riches and Honours, becoming Poor (even ſo poor, that it grew into a Proverb, and is currant to this day) and ſtript naked of all, being abhorred of his Acquaintance, mockt by thoſe who had been his Vaſſals, and forſaken of his Friends, (as Chriſt of his Diſciples) God himſelf hiding his Face from him, and holding him for his Enemy, Job 13. 24. as he did hide his Face from Chriſt, when he hung naked on the Croſs, and cried out, My God, my God, why haſt thou forſaken me. And yet for all this, that Job was herein a Type of Chriſt to come, we have no warrant to affirm, though ſome have done it: So likewiſe may many other Stories more hold the like reſemblance: But Types they are not, unleſs they be Prophetically intended by God, ſo to ſignifie. Thus Hebr. 9. 8. the Apoſtle ſpeaking of a Type in the Old, ſays, [The Holy Ghoſt thereby ſignifying, &c.] and therefore, Hebr. 8. 5. he ſays, they did ſerve as Examples, but, as inſtituted by God, for he alledgeth God's words to Moſes on the Mount; See (ſays he) that you make all according to the pattern in the Mount. Wherefore no more of the Hiſtories, or whatever Inſtitutions elſe in the Old Teſtament than we find applyed by the Holy Ghoſt, either in the Prophets, by way of Prophecy of what ſhould be under the New Teſtament (they ſpeaking of the worſhip, &c. of the New Teſtament under the Language of the Old Types) or which elſe in the New Teſtament it ſelf are ſo applyed by the Holy Ghoſt, may we dare to make uſe of, or call Types. And the Reaſon is, becauſe for things Hiſtorical to ſignifie, is ex inſtituto, they do it naturally; therefore we muſt have a word of inſtitution or warrant from God, that ſo intended them; or otherwiſe we can found no matter of certainty upon them, neither will they be ſanctified in the opening of them, to work upon the heart, as being human ſignifications only, and as unlawful, as they are. Alluſions, I grant, we may make of them, for illuſtration ſake: As Amos 6. 6. the Holy Ghoſt laying forth their ſin, expreſſeth it under the Similitude of Joſeph's Story, and of the chief Butler of Pharaoh [They drink Wine in Bowls, but are not grieved for the Affliction of Joſeph] yet none will ſay, it was intended as a Type of this Carriage of theirs; but he aptly expreſſeth it by that. And ſo Iſai. 1. 10. he calls the Princes of Iſrael, Rulers of Sodom. In like manner, Things in Nature we may make Similitudes of, by reaſon of a fitneſs in them to reſemble: and ſo God intended them to help us (whoſe Underſtandings are tyed to our Senſes here) in our apprehenſions of Spiritual things; for which reaſon our Saviour Chriſt abounded in ſuch Similitudes and Parables. As in that Sermon to Nicodemus, where he expreſſed the work of Grace, by a New Birth, and the working of God's Spirit therein, by the Blowing of the wind, John 3. 8. which Nicodemus not yet underſtanding, ſays Chriſt, If I have told you earthly things, and you believe not, &c. that is, have endeavoured by Similitudes drawn from earthly things, to make you underſtand heavenly. So that as they ſay, God hath made no kind of thing on the Earth, but it hath its like in the Sea; ſo there is ſcarce any thing heavenly, but he appointed ſomething in Nature to reſemble it; which notwithſtanding is no Type (although it be a reſemblance) of it, becauſe not Prophetically intended by God to fore-ſignifie them as to come: Which Types do ſerve not only to help us to conceive aright of the things to come, but alſo are Predictions that they will come to paſs, and ſo may help our Faith as well as our Underſtanding: So that, a word from God to explain theſe was needful, but thoſe other are left to Man's wit to fit and apply them.

Thirdly, In the Deſcription of a Type, I add [to ſignifie] which differenceth theſe Types from bare and meer Examples, which do only forewarn, or call to an Imitation: And therefore, though they be of things paſſed, yet are they not in this Senſe, of things to come: although becauſe they are Patterns, the word be uſed of them, as Phil. 3. 17. you have the word [τύπον] put for an Example: and ſo all God's dealings with the Iſraelites are called τύποι, Examples, or Types, as the Margent hath it: But how? not as fore-ſignifying, ſo much as fore-warning; and therefore it follows, They were written for our admonition. But ſo, Adam could not be a Type of Chriſt, for him to imitate, or to be fore-warned by, but to fore-ſignifie. Many things indeed in the ſtory of the Old Teſtament were Types fore-ſignifying, as well as fore-warning; as their not entring into Canaan, and God's ſwearing in his wrath, is made a Type of not entring into Heaven, in Hebr. 3. 11. and Chap. 4. 3. and ſo I deny not, but that thoſe Paſſages they recorded, might Typifie out the Hypocriſie of many profeſſing the Goſpel (which ſeems alſo to be the Apoſtle's ſcope) yet Principally they are to forewarn. And if ſo, yet it follows not that All things then fell out, as Types fore-ſignifying: For he ſays not ſimply [πάντα ταῦτα] but [πάντα τοῦτα] all theſe things] that is, thoſe Particulars mentioned in the former Verſes: ſo as, none but ſuch things as God hath in ſome word or other declared to be Signs and Types, are to be ſo judged, though otherwiſe never ſo like in view.

Fourthly, I put in, That the Things that are thus made Types of things to come, are things more imperfect; and the things typified by them more glorious and perfect. Thus Coloſſ. 2. 17. the Types of the Law are called but The ſhadows of good things to come; and Chriſt ſignifyed by them, the Body; that is, He is as the Body of the Sun, and They but as the Shadow which the Sun makes: So the dwelling of God in the Temple was a Type, yet but as the Preſence of a Man in his ſhadow: But oppoſitely it is ſaid, In Chriſt dwells the fulneſs of the Godhead bodily; Coloſſ. 2. 9. So Hebr. 9. 24. Thoſe things that are Typical, are but Figures of the things typified: And no other were all thoſe brave men, who were made Types of Chriſt.

Fifthly, I inſerted, That in a way of Reſemblance the Things ſignified do anſwer fitly unto them that ſignifie, as the Impreſs does to the Stamp that made it. Therefore, 1 Peter 3. 21. Baptiſm is called ἀντίτυπον, that is, a like Figure.

Now ſometimes they reſemble, either

1. In a likeneſs or ſimilitude: So Adam was like Chriſt; Epheſ. 5. 32. This is a great myſtery: but I ſpeak concerning Chriſt and the Church.

2. In a way of Antitheſis or Oppoſition: So Rom. 5. 18. Therefore as by the offence of one, Judgment came upon all men to condemnation: even ſo by the righteouſneſs of one, the free gift came upon all men unto juſtification of life. Adam conveyed Sin, and Chriſt conveyed Grace. Or,

3. In a way of Eminency or Tranſcendency: So Chriſt excels Adam; 1 Cor. 15. 45, 46. And ſo it is written: The firſt man Adam was made a living Soul, the laſt Adam was made a quickning Spirit. Howbeit that was not firſt which is ſpiritual: but that which is natural, and afterward that which is ſpiritual. Yet they ſome way anſwer, and are correſpondent, as Type and Antitype, which is enough.

Now

Chap. 8.

Cameron in Myrothec. cap. 5. ad Epheſ.

Now having thus explained what a Type is, I proceed to ſhew, how Adam and his whole Story was intended by God as a more imperfect Type going before, to ſignifie and ſet forth Chriſt as to come. Now I find ſome, who do indeed acknowledge a Similitude between the firſt and ſecond Adam, and that Adam may in that reſpect be called a Type of Chriſt; but yet only Naturalis Typus, and ſo to ſignifie him but as a natural thing or ſtory, may be brought to repreſent and illuſtrate another like unto it; by way of Parallel, but not ex inſtituto, as ſo intended by God in a way of Inſtitution, as the Types of the Old Law were, which did ſerve to the Example and Shadow of Chriſt, Hebr. 8. 5. and were on purpoſe framed to that end: But ſo (ſays he) Adam was not intended by God; for that would inſinuate that God intended Chriſt ſhould be Incarnate, before the Fall, and ordained Adam but as his fore-runner. Now therefore the Point which I intend to manifeſt, and firſt to prove in the general only, is, That Adam and his Story are not only things which hold a likeneſs with things about Chriſt, and out of which Similitude may be drawn for Illuſtration; but which were intended by God to fore-ſignifie Chriſt to come, and to aſſume an Human Nature: And this not only in reſpect unto the Fall, but for other reſpects alſo. Wherefore Adam was ordained to be Chriſt's Type, as to come, and that not ſimply upon the Fall, but before, in his firſt Creation and eſtate of Innocency. And though it be true indeed, that he had not come thus in the form of a Servant into this world, but upon a Suppoſition of the Fall, nor had his Human Nature been the Seed of the Woman, nor he born of the Virgin Mary elſe: Which Promiſe of Chriſt was therefore, in reſpect of ſuch a way of coming into the World, given after the Fall only. And though in the execution of things, Chriſt firſt took frail fleſh, and came in the form of a Servant, and God ſo decreed it as he had done the Fall; yet in his primary Intention, his chief and primary Decree, his eye and firſt aim was at his Sons having ſuch a ſtate and condition in his Human Nature, as he hath now in Heaven glorified. This was firſt in God's Intention, though laſt in Execution. And of this ſtate and condition of Chriſt's Human Nature glorified as to come, was Adam before his Fall the Type, as in the Sequel will appear.

Now for the Proof of this, namely That Adam and all his Story before the Fall, was a Type of Chriſt in the Senſe before given; not only by way of Illuſtration, (as any other Similitude or thing like may be brought to illuſtrate another) but by way of Ordination, as ſo intended by God, to fore-Typifie, and Shadow out Chriſt as to come.

Firſt, Let us ſee what theſe words; Rom. 5. 14. (who is the Type of him that was to come) will afford: out of which this ſeems to be made plain.

1. In that Adam is called, not only a Type; which (as formerly hath been explained) imports more than a bare Similitude: But alſo a Type [of him that was to come] he ſays not, of him that was come; this argues him to be a Prophetical Type, and that Chriſt was intended as the Anti-type fore-ſignified thereby: And ſo Adam not to be only as a Similitude that would ſerve to illuſtrate Chriſt then when he is come. The like Phraſe we have, uſed of the Ceremonial Types, whoſe inſtitution (all grant) was more for to Typifie Chriſt to come, than to ſerve for a Preſent uſe in Worſhip (though ſo they alſo did;) Now of them it is ſaid, Colloſſ. 2. 7. They were a ſhadow, or, Type [of things to come;] ſo likewiſe, Heb. 10. 1. and Heb. 8. 5. where they are ſaid λατρεύειν, to ſerve in Worſhip to this end, for a double uſe they then had: 1. To make up a Worſhip to God in thoſe Times: 2. As Types to fore-ſignifie things to come. Therefore Heb. 9. 9. they are called a Figure for the preſent time (then when in uſe, as parts of worſhip,) to figure out things to come; And that was their Primary uſe. Now the like, ſay I, of Adam and his Story, and the World made for him in Innocency; That although it was a glorious inſtance, and manifeſtation of many of Gods Attributes, as of his Holineſs, in making him after Gods Image, ſo of his Power, and Juſtice, and Wiſdom, more than all God's other Viſible Works (all which, God made for him) and this it was ſimply in it ſelf conſidered, although God ſhould never have intended any thing further thereby, but have reſted in it; Yet I ſay further, That beſides this, it was intended as much, yea more, to be a Type, and a Figure of Chriſt and his World which was to come (as the Phraſe is, Heb. 2. 15.) and of Chriſt here, Rom. 5. 14. that he was to come, and in compariſon thereof, Adam was but as a Shadow to the Body of this Sun.

And in the ſecond Place, for the confirmation of that latter part of this Aſſertion, (or rather the Appendix unto it) that Chriſt was appointed a Root to his Elect, before, or rather, without reſpect had unto the Fall: I argue out of this Place thus, and ask wherein it was, that Adam was a Type of Chriſt to come? Why (as it is plain by the Context) in his conveying Diſobedience; So Verſ. 12, 13, 14. In him all Men ſinned; and ſo ſin and Death came upon all: He ſhews how in a way of Antitheſis or oppoſition (yet bearing a likeneſs and reſemblance) he Typified out Chriſt in his Obedience, (So Verſ. 17, 18, 19.) which comes upon all his Elect by the like imputation; and They are made Righteous by that One Mans Obedience, as Sinners by that One Mans Diſobedience. Now if we examin the Ground why all ſinned in him, and why his Diſobedience made all ſinners; it was in that he was a Publick Perſon, repreſenting all Mankind, as Chriſt alſo was. And ſo the main Ground of the Apoſtles comparing them lies in this, That both of them, as Publick Perſons, were Two Roots and Principles, and ſo Adam the Type of him, who was alſo (ſays he) to come and be a Common Head and Root, as Adam was. Now I ask when did Adam become a Common Perſon firſt; what, not untill the moment of his ſinning? Surely yes; he was ſuch before, even in the State of Innocency: For he had not in Juſtice been a Publick Perſon in ſinning, if he had not firſt been ſuch in ſtanding; He had not been ſuch for evil, if he had not firſt been ſuch for good. And ſo he was therefore a publick Perſon in ſinning, becauſe formerly in Innocency he had been ſo conſidered by God: So as, in God's firſt Decree to Create him, he muſt needs have ordained him withal to be a common Perſon: And therefore at the inſtant before, or at the time when God made Adam, he ſays (Gen. 1. 26.) Let us make Man (it is in the Hebrew [Adam] according to our Image. In which words [Adam] or [Man] in the ſingular Number, is put for all Mankind; even as in that Promiſe, Galat. 3. 16. it was obſerved by the Apoſtle, that he had ſaid, not unto [Seeds] as many, apart, of themſelves, but to [Seed] as to One, a publick Perſon, for all the reſt; which Seed was Chriſt, as including all the Elect in him. Now ſo he ſays (in that place of Geneſis) not [Men] as ſpeaking of them ſeverally, in their own Perſons; but [Man] or rather [Adam] that One, firſt Man, as the Root of All; in whom, as in a publick perſon, All were created. And therefore, that ſo he might be underſtood in that Speech, he adds (in the next words following) the Plural Number, ſaying, [And let them ſubdue, &c.] as ſpeaking of All his Poſterity conſidered in him. Thus therefore God looks at him in his Decree of Creation. Now from this Rom. 5. it is evident, that when he became to be a publick Perſon, then he began alſo to be a Type; for he was a Type, as he was a publick Perſon, and a Root of Mankind; that is the ground of it, and lies not in his ſinning only: For he had not been a Type in ſinning, if he had not firſt been a Publick Perſon, in reſpect of good and holy Actions, to have conveyed the benefit of them, as well as of his ſin, to covey the evil of it: And ſo before this his Fall, he was a Type of Chriſt to come, as a Root to his Elect, to convey ſome benefit to them, namely, the Glory in Heaven, and this, before the conſideration of Adam's Fall, as will afterwards appear out of another Scripture.

CHAP.

Chap. 9.

CHAP. IX.

The Explication of the words of the Text: In what Particulars they make a Comparison of Christ the Type, and Adam the Anti-type. In their Persons, as Adam had in him a Principal of Natural Life, so Christ has of Spiritual. As publick Persons, and Heads of Mankind, as Adam conveys his Natural Life, so Christ his Spiritual. 'Tis proved out of the same Text, That Adam before his Fall, was thus intended as a Propbetick Type of Christ to come, as the Head of the Elect, who as a publick Person, should advance them to the like glorious Condition as himself had in Heaven. The Glory of this Accomplishment was appointed for him, without consideration of the Fall. That Interposing, he came and suffered, and dyed, to remove the Obstacles that the Fall had laid in the way of the Execution of the Work first designed.

I COR. XV. 44. to 50.

—There is a Natural Body, and there is a Spiritual Body. And so it is written: The first Man Adam was made a living Soul; the last Adam was made a quickning Spirit. Howbeit, that was not first which is Spiritual; but that which is Natural, and afterward that which is Spiritual. The first Man is of the Earth, earthy; the second Man is the Lord from Heaven. As is the earthy, such are they that are earthy; and as is the heavenly, such are they that are heavenly. And as we have born the Image of the earthy, we shall also bear the Image of the heavenly.

THOSE words out of Rom. 5. I took but for a general Ground-work, because they so expresly call Adam a Type of Christ to come. And though that Scripture delivers this general Maxim, which in many Particulars doth hold, yet it instanceth in nothing but the imputation of his Disobedience, which is indeed in order the last Particular, wherein Adam did sustain a publick Person, and wherein he was a Type of Christ, conveying the benefit of his most perfect Obedience: after which, he ceased to be a publick Person in all other Acts of his, & so that Particular is to be insisted on last in this Discourse. But other Scriptures do instance in many other Particulars before his Fall (at which time (as I shewed) he was a publick Person, as well as in his Fall) and do make him to have been the Type of Christ therein also, as pre-ordained by God to come; which will more fully confirm that Assertion already laid down.

Book II. I will take the Scriptures as they lye in order: And firſt, this in 1 Cor. 15. 44, 45, &c. becauſe indeed it makes Adam a Type of Chriſt from the firſt of his Creation, which is the higheſt that we can go. And as in that fifth of the Romans, the Scope is to ſhew, that Adam was a Type of Chriſt, as he was a publick Perſon, in reſpect of his Actions, to convey the Merit, or Demerit of them; as in like manner Chriſt by his Actions conveys Righteouſneſs and Life: So here, the Apoſtles Scope is to ſhew, that Adam was alſo his Type, in reſpect of that condition and ſtate of Life, and qualifications of his own Perſon, given him as a publick Perſon; and of what, at his firſt Creation before his Fall (even in his Formation) he received, to convey the like to us; which is the thing I out of this place ſhall chiefly urge.

The Reſemblance between theſe two, in that fifth of the Romans, is (in reſpect of the things conveyed) a Similitude of Contraries, or Oppoſites:

By the One came { Sin, Death. } By the other { Righteouſneſs, Life. } with this Diſſimilitude for the meaſure of what is conveyed; That Chriſt exceeds in his; he conveys abundance of Righteouſneſs, and a better Life; whereof Sin and Death were the Privation.

But the Reſemblance between theſe two, in this of the Corinthians, is carried on by a comparing the Condition of the One with the other, (which is the thing conveyed) in a way of Eminency and Diſparity; which yet anſwer each to other, as Type and Anti-type. The One was made a living Soul, and the Other a quickning Spirit: between which for Excellency, there is as much diſparity, as between Heaven and Earth; and yet an anſwering of each other in that Diſparity, as Type and Anti-type uſe to do:

Living Soul } anſwering to { Quickeng Spirit. } Verſe 45.

Natural Earthly } anſwering to { Spiritual, Verſe 46. Heavenly, Verſe 48.

yet ſo, as for the Ground of conveying both, they agree alike, as in the former, That they were ordained two Roots, correſpondent each to other.

Now in handling this Scripture, I ſhall obſerve this Method:

1. I will ſhew the Coherence, Scope, and Connexion of theſe words, and open thoſe Phraſes in them which moſt conduce to the underſtanding of them.

Secondly, When they are explained, I will raiſe Arguments from them, to confirm that Aſſertion already laid down, namely, That Adam was before his Fall, a Prophetick Type of Chriſt to come.

And thirdly, I will open thoſe Particulars (which this Scripture holds forth) wherein he was ordained Chriſt's Type as then.

The Apoſtles Scope in that Chapter, is, (as all know) to prove the Reſurrection, which he had by many Arguments done, unto Verſ. 35. the main of which was drawn from the Reſurrection of Chriſt, in whom all his Elect muſt live, as in Adam all dyed, Verſ. 21, 22.

But then, if the Queſtion be made, With what Body, or in what State and Condition of Life they ſhall riſe, and afterwards live in? (which Queſtion he puts Verſe 35.) He anſwers, Verſe 38. (as in the 36th and 37th he had done to a former Query) That for Matter and Subſtance, it is the ſame Body that they had before, [their own Body, Verſe 38.] but for Qualifications and adornments, and ſo for the Condition of their Perſons, and their State of Life then, theſe ſhall differ from what they are now, as much as a Clod of Earth, a Body Terreſtrial, differs from a Star in Heaven, a Body Celeſtial. It is the the Apoſtles own Illuſtration, Verſe 40. and ſo he goes on to difference them, unto Verſe 44. where he adds another difference between them, calling the one a Natural-Body, the other a Spiritual Body; which, though differing in terms, is notwithſtanding the ſame with the former, Chap. 9.

But becauſe theſe Similitudes, though they illuſtrate this difference of Bodies, yet prove nothing; therefore from the 44th Verſe, he proceeds to prove, that God had ordained two ſuch differing Conditions of Life, and of Bodies, for the Sons of Men: The oneCommon to all Men, the other more glorious, peculiar to his Elect; which he Poſitively lays down, and expreſſeth in this Theſis or Propoſition: There is a natural Body, and there is a Spiritual Body: that is, there are to be two ſuch Conditions for ſome of Mankind; God hath ordained both theſe ſtates for Men:or as ſome Copies have it,and as the Vulgar Tranſlation reads thoſe words,If there be a natural Body,then there is a ſpiritual Body;(ſo making the one the conſequence of the other:)[εἰ ἔστι σῶμα ψυχικὸν, ἔστι καὶ σῶμα πνευματικὸν] which Aſſertion he proves, verſ. 45,46. and then forms up the Concluſion, verſe 49. that as certainly as we ſee the one, we ſhall in like manner ſee the other. This Theſis, he proves from the differing Condition of the firſt and ſecond Adam; the former being a Type of the latter, and both of them ordained to convey their likeneſs to Mankind. The Subſtance and Condition of Adam's Nature (the beſt of it) was but a reaſonable Soul, becoming a Principle of Life to a Body created out of the Earth, and ordained to live in the Earth, which is meant by living Soul: But Chriſt's Perſon is the Godhead in the Perſon of the Son, or Spirit quickning an Human Nature, ordained to live in Heaven,whereof he was Lord by Inheritance, verſe 47. and his Argument lies in three Things thus; If the Soul can advance an earthly Body to ſuch an excellent ſtate of Life as Adam on Earth enjoyed; then what a glorious Spiritual Condition ſhall the Godhead, united to an Human Nature, raiſe that Nature up unto! And by conſequent, his Elect alſo ſhall be raiſed to the like; for as Adam conveyed his Image (verſ. 48, 49.) to his Poſterity, ſo ſhall Chriſt transform his Elect to the Image of that Condition, which his Human Nature is raiſed up unto: which, if that of Adam's was but earthy, this muſt needs be heavenly; if that were animal, this muſt be ſpiritual. This is in brief, the Sum of his Diſcourſe; which I ſhall make good by a larger opening, both of the principal Phraſes, and of his Argumentation: For the ground upon which the Apoſtle builds the proof of both parts of his Aſſertion, are the words ſpoken by Moſes of Adam, when he was firſt made; And ſo it is written (ſays he) the firſt Man Adam was made a living Soul; the laſt Adam was made a quickning Spirit. You ſee that for his proof, he boldly hath recourſe to the words ſpoken of Adam's ſtate of Life, and condition of Body at his firſt formation. Now e're that I can ſhew whereupon the Ground of the Apoſtles Argument from thence derived, is founded; I muſt explain what is meant by [living Soul] and [quickning Spirit]. [Soul] (as was ſaid) is oppoſed to [Spirit] and [living] to [quickning].

Vide Flaccium in Var. Lect.

1. By [Soul] is primarily meant that more noble part of Man, by a Synechdoche (ſuch as is familiar both with Jews and Grecians); thereby is alſo meant, the whole Man, conſiſting both of Soul and Body. The Grecians uſe the word [Body] for the whole; A Body haſt thou fitted me, Hebr. 10. 5. that is, an Human Nature, conſiſting of Body and Soul. The Jews put the Soul for the whole; So many Souls came out of Jacob's Loins, Exod. 1. So as, the whole Perſon of Adam, the whole Nature, Subſtance of Man, he conſiſted of, is expreſſed by [Soul] putting that which was the moſt excellent part, to expreſs the whole Man. So that, his Scope is firſt to compare the Subſtance of which Adam's Perſon conſiſted, with that of Chriſt's: Adam but a Soul giving Life to a Body; but Chriſt, a Spirit or God, quickning an Human Nature. He mentions the difference of them, quoad ſubſtantiam, becauſe it was the foundation of the difference in their Conditions.

And ſo, 2ly, [living] Soul doth connotate and import alſo that Animal ſtate of Life which Adam's Soul enjoyed in his Body, far ſhort of that which the Spirit in Chriſt raiſeth the Human Nature to, yea, or ſuch a Condition as pure Spirits, the Angels do enjoy. That reaſonable Soul inſpired into Adam be-

Book II. ing confined, and clogged with a Body taken out of Earth, depending in its Operations upon the Organs in it, and lived in it an earthly Life, depending on Meat, Drink, Sleep, &c. in its own proper works of Reaſoning depending on Fancy, and joyned with a poſſibility of dying, though not then reduceable to Act, till after the Fall, the Curſe ſaid [Morieris]. And that living Soul is thus here to be taken, appears by that which he in the other Verſes expreſſeth it by, calling it [ψυχικὸν] an Animal Body, ſuch as Beaſts have, and [χοϊκὸν] earthly, verſ. 47, 48. that is, a ſtate and condition of his Soul in a Body ſuitable to this Earth, and aſſimulated to the things of the Earth, to take in help and comfort from them, and in working to depend on them. Now for the oppoſite Phraſe of [quickning Spirit].

1. By Spirit, he means the Divine Nature or Godhead in Chriſt, which being ordained to aſſume an Human Nature, and therein to become a ſecond Adam, he was made a quickning Spirit, namely, to that Human Nature, by raiſing up that Human Nature to a God-like Glory and Soveraignty, and exalting it to the form of God, to have Life in himſelf independently, as God hath; yea, even a fountain of Life within himſelf; and ſo, as to have the very Body of that Human Nature ſpiritualiſed, and advanced to a Glory higher than the Heavens, or Angels, who are Spirits.

Now that the Divine Nature of the ſecond Perſon, or Son of God, as he is God, is called Spirit, we have many Scriptures beſides, which give in their Teſtimony: Thus Hebr. 9. 14. it is ſaid, He offered up himſelf, (that is, his Human Nature, as the Sacrifice) by the eternal Spirit, (that is, his Godhead, as the Prieſt). So 1 Peter 3. 18. it is ſaid, He was put to death in the Fleſh, (that is, in the Human Nature) but quickned by the Spirit; or his Divine Nature, being thereby raiſed up, and exalted to that high and glorious ſpiritual Life, which that Fleſh of his, now in Heaven, enjoys. Thus alſo John 6. 63. It is the Spirit that quickneth: that is, the Godhead of Chriſt; it is that which hath that tranſcendent Power of giving Life and Glory; the Fleſh (or Human Nature of it ſelf) profiteth nothing, were it not quickned and raiſed by the Spirit, to which it is united. And ſo anſwerably, by [quickning] is meant, the communicating all that glorious Life and Power (in the utmoſt extent of it) which from the union of that Human Nature with the Spirit, or Divine Nature, muſt needs flow to it; even the dwelling of the fulneſs of the Godhead therein bodily, and communicating God-like Properties and Excellencies, and Glory, and a Life ſuitable to ſuch an Union; and ſo as to have a Fountain of Life within himſelf, and of himſelf, and Power over all Fleſh; and to live a Life above what earthly Souls do; yea, above what is enjoyed by Angels, the life of a Lord from Heaven, (as verſe 47.) and ſo an heavenly life, unto which his Body was not only to be raiſed, but he to be the Lord of that life, having life and quickning in himſelf, not depending upon any thing elſe, as the life of Men on Earth does, and as the life of the firſt Adam was dependent on Creatures for nouriſhment, &c. and the acting and operation of his Soul, and motion of his Body, depending on Bodily Spirits, maintained and ſupplyed by other Creatures. But Chriſt's Godhead ſupplies Life, Motion, Quickning, Vigour, Power, and all unto his Human Nature immediately from it ſelf. And ſo the Compariſon runs thus: If Adam's Soul cauſed his Body, made of Earth, and remaining ſuch, to live, and put ſuch a Glory upon it (above what is in Beaſts) that the Image of God ſhined in it; then what a Life, what a Glory, muſt the whole Human Nature, both Body and Soul, of Chriſt, be raiſed up unto, whenas the Godhead, or Spirit, ſhall be (in a manner) unto both the Body and Soul, That which Adam's Soul was to his Body, the Quickner, and immediate Principle of Life, Motion, and Glory unto both? and dwelling therein, break forth in its fulnſs, and ſo cauſe ſuch an Image of the Godhead to ſhine forth therein, as in a tranſcendent Proportion ſhall excel that in Adam, as much as the Godhead excels Adam's Soul, which was the Supream immediate Principle of Life in him. Thus Chriſt and Adam are compared together in their own Perſons, ſingly and alone conſidered: And in this Senſe given, the One was but a living Soul, the Other is a quickning Spirit.

But

But, 3ly, There is a further Meaning or Look which theſe Phraſes do caſt, and that is, as they are conſidered as two Roots or Principles of the like Life they themſelves have, which they communicate to thoſe that are of them: Chap. 9.

Thus, 1. Adam is called a living Soul, not ſimply in reſpect to that Life which his Soul gave his own Body, and which his own particular Perſon enjoyed from the Union of both: But further, as he was to be a Conveyer of the like Life to his Poſterity. And ſo, the Phraſe here, of his being a living Soul, is ſuch another as we uſe in Philoſophy, whenas we ſpeak of the General Principle of Nature, calling it Natura Naturans: So Adam, being to be a Root of Life to Mankind, he is called (as it were, Anima animans) a living Soul; to ſhew, that Adam had Power, through God's Ordinance, to convey that Life and Soully Eſtate which himſelf had received: (Living being taken actively, or cauſally, unto others) as ſhewing what he was to be the Root of to others, as well as ſubjectively; as noting out that Life which was in himſelf.

And anſwerably in the ſecond Place, the word [quickning] which is attributed to Chriſt, may be underſtood, not only in reſpect of that glorious Life which the God-head quickneth, or raiſeth the Human Nature unto (as yet in the Places quoted, 1 Peter. 3. 18. and John 6. 63. it is Principally taken, and ſo alſo here) but further, it is ſpoken of him, as he is to be the Means, or Principle of Life unto us, to quicken, raiſe or advance our Earthly Bodies, which we received from Adam, unto a Spiritual and Heavenly Condition: And further to import what he will make our Souls to be in a conformity unto himſelf: To be even quickning Spirits to our Bodies, ſo as that our Souls motion and Acting ſhall not depend on our Bodies, nor they on other Creatures, as Adam did, but the Soul it ſelf through his quickning of it ſhall quicken, and move, and act the Body, of itſelf immediately, without the help of Bodily Spirits; and ſo (in a Reſemblance) be unto it, as the Spirit or God-head in Chriſt is unto his Human Nature, even a quickning Spirit: And ſo [quickning] is here cauſally taken for what Chriſt is to others; and this the rather, becauſe he ſpeaks in this Chapter of raiſing our Bodies, when Dead, unto a Spiritual Condition; which the word [quickning] likewiſe imports, namely a giving Life to dead Men: And ſo ſhews Chriſt's further Power than Adam's; who could only convey Life to his Poſterity, who were not before, but could not quicken or raiſe dead Men, as Chriſt can.

But although this be one extent of the ſignification of the word [quickning] yet it is not to be confined to this only, as noting out only and meerly a raiſing up of dead Men: For Chriſt is alſo a quickning Spirit to thoſe who ſhall be Changed at the Latter day, who ſhall not Dye. So that it ultimately imports rather an advancing Mens Bodies and Souls to a more tranſcendent Spiritual Life, than ſuch as depends on Creatures in an Earthly way, as Adam's Life (he being but a living Soul) did, and making us to have ſuch a Life as the Angels have, [ὅτι Ἄγγελοι] our Souls in our Bodies living the like Life independent on Bodily Spirits, or Creatures, as they do, being made wholly a Principle of Life and Motion of themſelves to themſelves, and the Body alſo; when our Bodies ſhall not need to eat and drink, to maintain Life and Motion, but ſhall be quickned by the Soul, and Chriſt our Life, immediately; our Bodies then ſhall not be Earthly, (as the Phraſe is, Verſe 47.) ſuited to Earthly Contentments and Comforts: The Belly (or the ſuitableneſs in reſpect of receiving comfort, and need of meat) being deſtroyed, as well as Meat it ſelf: And the Body then, being ſuited with new Habits, and fitneſſes to receive that comfort from Chriſt, which once it did from theſe outward and Earthly Things: The Body being ordained for the Lord, and the Lord for the Body, even as he had ſaid, the Belly was for Meat and Meat for the Belly, in this World. This you have, 1 Cor. 6. 13, 14, 15. diligently compared. The Body then ſhall be turned Spiritual, as here, verſe 46 and Heavenly, as verſ. 47, 48. and ſo, fitted to Chriſt, and that Heavenly World, as afore to this Earthly World; Himſelf then becoming a Quickner to us.

And the word here uſed both of Chriſt and Adam, [was made] the one a living Soul, the other a quickning Spirit, will very well ſerve both theſe ſenſes given: So Firſt, when it is ſaid of Adam, he was [made] a living Soul, it properly and fitly imports, what he was Perſonally in himſelf, and how that in his Firſt Creation he was made a living Soul. And ſo, when it is ſaid of Chriſt, he was [made] a quickning Spirit, the meaning is the ſame with that in John 1. 18. where it is ſaid, The word was [made] Fleſh: So here, he who was God before (and ſo not made) is yet ſaid to be made quickning Spirit: For, for the God-head to become a Quickner of an Human Nature, was a New Work done in the Earth, and a Work of Power; he was made that which he was not before.

Or ſecondly, It will fit the other Senſe alſo, namely to ſignifie what both were appointed to be, namely to others. For the word [made] to be] is often taken for [appointed] to be] as Heb. 3. 2. Moſes was Faithful to him who appointed him; in the Greek it is, [who made him] as reſerving to that Publique Office into which God had put him: So 1 Sam. 12.6. God made Aaron and Moſes: (ſo it is in the Hebrew) that is, advanced them to that Publique Office. Many ſuch Inſtances might be given. So that the Words quoted out of that Place in Geneſis, do imply, that God appointed that firſt Man Adam to be a Publick Perſon, a common Root to convey to his Poſterity, that Condition of Souls and Perſons which he had received. And that this is meant in thoſe words of Geneſis, the manner of Speech does further argue: For it is not ſimply ſaid, that he became a living Soul, but thus in the Original, both Hebrew there, and Greek here, it is to be rendred, He became, or was made] for] a living Soul, [ἐγένετο εἰς ψυχὴν ζῶσαν] that is, cauſually ſo to others: As 2 Chron. 18. 21. I will be [for] a lying Spirit; that is, unto all Ahab's Prophets, making them to lye, and ſo deceive him. It implies not only what that Spirit was in himſelf, but what he became to them. So here, he became [into] or [for] a living Soul; that is, unto all other Men, in propagating that Life to them which he had received. And though it be true, that he was in himſelf a living Soul (as alſo in that other Place that the Devil was a lying Spirit in himſelf) is true, (for he is ſo in himſelf, as well as to others; and therefore whereas in the Chronicles it is ſaid, I will be for a lying Spirit, in the Book of the Kings it is only ſaid, I will be a lying Spirit) yet that alſo was ſpoken in reſpect of what he was to be unto others. And hence, becauſe the Apoſtle knew, that the Holy Ghoſt's purpoſe in that Speech in Geneſis, was to ſignifie that he was ſo to Us, and conſtituted a Publique Perſon herein: Therefore, by way of Comment, he is bold to add to the Text, that which more fully explains the Words quoted, ſaying, And ſo it is written, The Firſt Man Adam, &c. Thoſe words [The Firſt Man] are not in Geneſis: But he knowing it was the Holy Ghoſt Scope, adds them: And that that Phraſe here imports him to have been a Publique Perſon, I ſhall ſhew anon. Now the ſame meaning of the word [was made] will ſuit with what was ſaid of Chriſt alſo, He was made; that is, appointed to be a quickning Spirit, (in the Senſe afore given) to his Elect, which is ſpoken, as if then, when Adam was appointed as a Publique Perſon, to be a living Soul to his Poſterity, Chriſt was lookt at as appointed alſo, Adam being therein but his Type; and ſo, as more imperfect, ordained to repreſent what Chriſt in a more tranſcendent and perfect manner, was made, or ordained of God to be.

The Phraſe here being thus opened, we may the better diſcern wherein the Foundation and ground of the Apoſtles Argumentation lies. The thing which he was to prove, was (as hath been ſaid) that there is an Heavenly, Spiritual Condition for Mens Bodies, far tranſcending their preſent condition in Earth, There is a Natural Body, and there is a Spiritual Body. For the Proof of which, he alleadgeth thoſe words in Geneſis; So it is written, (ſaies he) the Firſt Man Adam was made a living Soul: Which words, if you take them Literally only, and as meant of Adam alone, do prove no more but the firſt Part of that Aſſertion; namely, that there was to be an Animal Body, ſuch as Adam had, which was to be communicated to all Mankind from him, he being being to propagate all in his Image: And that part these Cavillers against the Resurrection, made no question of; for to prove this, common Experience had been enough: But thence to argue that other Part that follows, That the last Man should be a quickning Spirit, and so raise up the Bodies of his Members to a Spiritual Condition, can no other waies be done but by making Gods intent in that Place of Genesis to have been, to make that first Adam a Type therein of Christ a Second Adam; and this is truly intended (in a Type) as the first Adam himself was, of whom only the words Literally do run? Yea, and further, Adam therein to be but such a Type as this other that was to succeed should excell; and he accordingly therefore should raise his Members to a higher and more glorious Condition; such as Spirit in him raised him unto, even above Soul, or that Estate which the Soul in Adams Earthly Body enjoyed. And upon this Ground the Apostles Argument will fully hold, to prove the one, as well as the other: This being supposed, that it was as much the Holy Ghost's meaning in those words of Genesis, to intend the one, as the other. And that was so evidently thus, that the Apostle hath a recourse to those words as a sufficient proof of what he said: Which is founded upon this, that Types may be alledged for proof (when we are sure of the Holy Ghost's intendment in them, as Paul (who had the Spirit, and wrote infallibly) here was) as well as any other Scriptures. It hath passed for a received Maxim among some Divines, that the Mystical Sense of Scripture cannot be alledged to prove Matters of Faith; and that therefore all such Mystical Significations serve only for Illustration: Symbolica Theologia nihil probat. And this Axiom is of use against the boldness of them, who turn all the Letter into Mystical meanings, not from any warrant from Scripture, but out of their own Fancies, where they found things that had any mutual resemblance. But when we know, and are assured, that the Holy Ghost hath made a thing a Type, and know his meaning therein, we may as boldly, warrantably, and efficaciously alledge it as any Literal Text whatsoever. For so that which is said of the Paschal Lamb, Exod. 12. that the bones were not to be broken; this being the Type, it is said, John 19. They brake not his Leggs, that the Scripture might be fulfilled, &c. So the Apostle alledgeth a Type, 1 Tim. 5. 17. 18. where urging the duty of honouring those who labour in the word, he says, [For it is written, thou shalt not muzzle the Ox that treadeth out the Corn.]

Chap. 9.

Vide Tena: in Hebr. Prælud. 4. 92. Num.

To return therefore to the matter in hand; observe we farther, That the Apostle not only hath recourse to these words in Genesis for his proof, but is bold to add to the Text, (and to the Literal Sense there, to annex the Mystical meaning, as if it were therein as much intended as the Literal) saying, The last Adam was made a quickning Spirit: (which words are not in the Text in Genesis.) For he knowing this to be the Holy Ghost's aim in those words concerning Adam, supplied it (as if it were in the Text, and a part of what was written) so to make-up the Sense and meaning full and compleat.

2. And so I come to the second Head propounded, which from what hath been last said, riseth naturally up unto us, as the General Doctrine of this Scripture, namely, that former Assertion, That Adam was intended by God before his Fall, as a Prophetick Type of Christ to come, who as a Head or publick Person, should advance his Elect to the like glorious Condition as himself had in Heaven. Which Assertion, though it hath been the Natural Consequent of what hath been already said; yet it is further establisht unto us, by these Considerations out of the Text added unto the former; I shall make out the Proofs of the whole, by proving each Particular by peace-meal and apart; and all out of the words of the Text.

As, 1. That Adam was Christ's Type, is further evident to have been the Apostle's meaning, in that he calls Christ Adam, [the last Adam] of which there is no other Reason but this, that he calls him by the Name of his Type; it being usual in Scripture, to call the Thing typified by the Name of the Type.

So

Book II. So Christ is elsewhere called the High Priest, &c. his Body the Temple, and his Blood the Propitiation.

2. He makes Adam to have been Christ's Type, as he was ordained a publick Person or Head of Mankind; and therefore he here calls Adam, The first Man Adam. Now in what respect or relation was he the first Man? Not simply, as being first in order, (as the Scripture means, when it says, the first day of the Week) but as a common Root, who had received what he was, that he might convey it to all other Men: Which appears by the Opposition, in that he calls Christ the last Adam, in the following words, and the second Man in verse 47. And therefore, in relation unto Adam's typifying out of Christ, he calls him the first Man. Now if it had been spoken in respect of order, Cain was the second Man, and God knows who shall be the last. But this is so spoken of these two, as if God had made, and look't at two Men only, for ever to be in the World, because he look't at them as including All, and as two Roots of All, who had all Men at their Girdles, as being both of them publick Persons, set to convey what they were, and received unto their several Posterities.

3. He is made Christ's Type in respect of his conveying the like Condition of Soul and Body, as himself had, to those that came of him; in that Christ should in like manner convey the same glorious Qualifications which the Soul and Body received. Therefore, Verse 48. it is said, As is the earthy Adam, such are those of him; and as is the heavenly Adam, such are his Elect, even ordained to be heavenly, like him. These import likeness in the Qualifications of their Persons. And again, Verse 49. it is said, As we have born the Image of the earthy, so we shall bear the Image of the heavenly. So that, in respect of the Condition and Glory of his Person, he was a Type of Christ, as well as in his Actions.

And in the fourth place, He was herein a Prophetick Type of Christ; not only a Natural Similitude that may serve to illustrate, but as further intended by God to fore-signifie such another second Adam (yet more perfect) as certainly decreed by God for to come, as that himself then was made a living Soul. For the manifestation of this, (besides that which follows in the Fifth Head, which makes for this also) there are these two Things, evidencing it to us out of the words of the Text.

1. That the Apostle hath recourse to Adam, and his Condition, as a Proof and Argument to make good this Assertion; That the Elect were to be advanced in their Bodies unto a Spiritual Condition in Heaven, by Christ a second Adam, as a quickning Spirit, because it was written of the first Adam, That he was made a living Soul. Now if Adam had been but a Natural Type, by way of Similitude only, this had then been no Argument; for such Similitudes do illustrate, but prove nothing. It remains therefore, that he must necessarily be a Prophetick Type, intended by God to fore-signifie Christ to come.

Add to this, Secondly, The words of the 49th Verse, which are the Conclusion of his Argument, wherewith he winds up this part of his Discourse; affirming out of his former Allegations, That as we have born the Image of the Earthy, so we shall bare the Image of the Heavenly Adam: That is, as certainly the one as the other. He brings in this as an Inference that must certainly, and necessarily follow: That as we have born Adam's Image, we shall also bear Christ's. He mentions it as a support for our Faith, to make use of, as a certain Prediction, that this other will, and must come to pass: Whereas, had Adam, and his Condition, been only a Natural Type, or Similitude, as unto which Christ might be compared, and appear to hold Parallel; it could, nor ought not to have been thus far urged. It might indeed have been brought to help our Understandings, by way of illustration to evince how Christ might convey his like glorious State, even as Adam had done his; but it could not have been thus alledged to help our Faith in it, by way of demonstration and certain Proof, had he not been a Prophetick Type. And further, to confirm this, Let us but compare the words of the 48th Verse, and those in the 49th together, and we shall discern a very different use and improvement provement made by the Apoſtle, In the 48th Verſe, he ſays, (ſpeaking of Adam's Sons) As is the Earthy, ſuch are they that are Earthy; and as is the Heavenly, ſuch are they alſo that are Heavenly. See how in theſe words he makes uſe of Adam's Type and Condition but barely, as by way of Illuſtration and Parallel; (for Prophetick Types ſerve alſo to illuſtrate, as well as Natural:) But not content with this, he further adds, that As we have born the Image of the Earthy, we ſhall alſo bare the Image of the Heavenly. In which words he ſpeaks a further thing, than in the former, by way of Inference, aſſuring our Faith from our having born Adam's Image, that we ſhall one day moſt certainly bear Chriſt's alſo in Glory; he makes uſe of Adam's Type, as an Argument to confirm it; and therefore it was more than a Natural Type, even a Prophetick Type alſo. Chap. 9.

In the fifth and laſt Place, I add to all this, That Adam, was thus appointed and intended by God as a Prophetick Type of Chriſt to come, and this, before his Fall; he then fore-ſignifying Chriſt to come, as here he is parallel'd with him, even to be a quickning Spirit to this Elect, as certainly as himſelf was then made a living Soul:

For, 1. When was it, or wherein, that (according to what the Apoſtle here alledgeth of Adam) he was Chriſt's Type? (If you obſerve it) not in reſpect of conveying his ſinful Image, when faln, namely, the Qualifications he had by Sinning, as the Corruption and Mortality of his Body, and Sinful Image on his Soul; for though all that is ſaid here hold true of theſe, and may by implication be inferred from hence, yet theſe are not the things here ſpoken of by the Apoſtle, but he is here brought in as the Type of Chriſt, in reſpect of conveying that Image and State of Life which he received at his Creating, before his Fall, as being then a Type of Chriſt to come, as a Lord from Heaven. For unto what he was, when he was at his beſt, even at the firſt formation of his Body, and the breathing his Soul into it, thoſe words here alledged have reference; Adam was [made] a living Soul; as appears, Geneſ. 2. 7. wherein notwithſtanding he is here alledged as the Type of Chriſt. And indeed, therefore it was, that he conveyed that corrupt Image acquired by his Fall, becauſe he was ordained as a Common Perſon before the Fall, to convey the Image in which he was Created. And therefore it muſt needs be, that he was a Type of Chriſt to come, as well before his Fall, as after; even as well, as that he was a publick Perſon before his Fall, as well as after.

Secondly, It appears alſo, that he calls Adam his Type, as in his very firſt Creation he was, the firſt Man: and this, not only (as was ſaid) in relation to all other Men (his Sons) who were to ſucceed him, and in reſpect of Order in their ſucceeding; but chiefly, in reſpect to this ſecond Man Chriſt, as Verſe 47. he calls him: and alſo the laſt Adam, Verſe 45. in relation to this firſt Man, and firſt Adam, as he is called. So that the Oppoſition ſhews, That thoſe Titles given Adam, do bear relation unto Chriſt. Now as the Apoſtle argues (Hebr. 8. 13.) out of the word [New] Covenant, an Old Covenant to have been, which is now to be aboliſhed, [In that he ſays a New, he hath made the firſt Old] So in that he calls Adam (even as the firſt, when he ſtood up out of the Earth, and became a Man) the firſt Man, and that, (as the Apoſtle explains himſelf) in relation to Chriſt, as the ſecond Man, it argues Chriſt to have been then, and as ſoon intended. For [firſt] and [ſecond] are Relatives, and Relata ſunt ſimul Natura; and ſo muſt be in God's Decrees. And that, which further ſtrengthens this, is, That Phraſe [was made] which in the time paſt he attributes alike to both, he ſays, So it is written, (referring to Adam's Creation) the firſt Adam [was] made a living Soul, the laſt Adam [was] made a quickning Spirit: ſpeaking of both, with reference to the ſame time paſt; even when Adam was made, or appointed, then was Chriſt alſo appointed: So that, he was as ancient in God's purpoſe, as the other; and both, without any Conſideration had to the Fall.

Yea,

Book II.

Yea, Thirdly, Chriſt was firſt, and more principally intended of the two; for Adam being but as the Type, and ſo, the more imperfect every way; Chriſt, the ſecond Adam, muſt needs be, not only at the ſame time with him, intended, but primarily, and in the firſt place; for ſo it is in all Types elſe: Their Anti-type is that for which they are ordained, and they are but Figures for the preſent, as you have it, Hebr. 9.6. and ſo are but ſubordinate to their Anti-type, as firſt and chiefly intended: And therefore, they are ſaid but to ſerve unto the pattern, &c. Hebr. 8. 5. even as the Houſe is more in the mind of the Workman, and intended before the Platform or Draught of it on Parchment, which only ſerves towards the Building of it. And therefore the Type is ſtill rather ſaid to be made like the thing Typified, than the thing Typified to be made like unto its Type: So Heb. 7. 3. Melchiſedech being to be a Type of Chriſt, was ſaid to be made like unto the Son of God: God framed him, and his Condition, to reſemble Chriſt, and not Chriſt to reſemble Melchiſedech: which holds in all other Types alſo, and therefore ſo in this; wherein God did intend Adam, and his Earthly and Souly Condition (as the more imperfect,) to fore-run Chriſt, and that Spiritual and Heavenly Condition by him. And therefore alſo Chriſt is called, the Laſt Adam, not in reſpect of Order; but, to ſhew he was the perfection of the other; as [Laſt] ſometimes ſignifies, in whom all is bounded and determined: So Matth. 21. 37. Laſt of all he ſent his Son, as the utmoſt remedy and compleateſt. This always holds in other of Gods works, which are ſubordinate to each other, that the Laſt notes out Perfection: So here, [the Firſt] notes out imperfection, [the Laſt] the Sum, Complement, and Perfection of all; as [τέλος] ſignifies the [End] and [τέλειος] [Perfect] And that this is the Apoſtles meaning here, is evident by the Connexion of Verſe 46. with what went before, in verſ. 44. and 45. For having affirmed, verſe 44. that it was Gods Purpoſe to make two Ranks of Men and Conditions of them, Animal, and Heavenly, (or Spiritual) [there is (that is, there is ordained to be) a Natural Body, and a Spiritual Body] and then having proved it to be Gods meaning, in that when he made the Firſt Adam a living Soul, he then in him, as the Type alſo, made or ordained (as we ſaid) Chriſt a quickning Spirit, verſe 45. (thereby ſhewing, that in Gods Decree the one was as ancient as the other:) Then in verſe 46, he adds, by way of Explanation (or Correction) Howbeit that was not firſt which is Spiritual, (that is, not firſt in execution, or in order of Time, becauſe that was to be moſt perfect) but that which was Natural, (that was ordained to come into the world firſt) and afterward that which is ſpiritual, as the Perfection of the other; Gods manner of proceeding in his Works being to begin ab imperfectioribus, with what is imperfect, and ſo to go on ad perfectiora, to what is more perfect: He ordered that Adam ſhould come firſt, with his Natural, or Animal Body, to uſher in Chriſt afterwards, with his Spiritual Body. And that ſtate which Adam brought in, being the firſt Draught (as that of a Coal in a Picture) that ſtate which Chriſt brings in, is as the laſt Hand put to it, filling up the Peece with the brighteſt Colours of Perfection. And as Nature is a Ground-work to Grace, ſo was the Animal Subſtance to that which was Spiritual, even to be cloathed with it, and ſwallowed up by it; yet ſo, as the firſt Draught ſerved withal, as a Shadow, to tell that the other more perfect was to come, and primarily intended. And therefore, in the 49th Verſe, he brings in this as the cloſure of this his Proof, that, As (certainly as) we have born the Image of the earthy, ſo (certainly) ſhall we bear the Image of the heavenly.

I ſhall wind up all with a Conſideration or two, which put together, will fitly ſerve, both as the General Concluſion of this whole Diſcourſe, and particularly alſo further to confirm this laſt Branch in hand.

You have ſeen how Adam was a Type of Chriſt, both in his Falling (as hath been ſhewn out of Rom. 5. 14.) and before his Fall, in his firſt Creation (as here in this Place) And Adam, in both ſtates, did as a publick Perſon, repreſent Chriſt: Now obſerve but how Chriſt his Anti-type doth in a correſpondency, and anſwering to both theſe, run through two eſtates alſo, ſuitable to theſe two of Adam: And in each of theſe Eſtates, Chriſt, as a publick Perſon, ſon, repreſenting us, doth two diſtinct things for us: 1. He, in our Nature, takes on him the form of a Servant, to Redeem us from that Condemnation and Miſery which Adam's Fall had brought upon us: Which having finiſht, Then, 2ly, He aſſumes and puts upon his Human Nature that glorious Condition which was his due by Inheritance in the firſt moment that he ſhould be made a Man: and by virtue of this Condition due to him by Inheritance, he will beſtow upon us, who are in him, the like Glory which was ordained himſelf. Now then, that work of Redemption performed by him under the form of a Servant, (whereby he frees and delivers us from that guilt and condemnation into which we, through Adam's Fall, were plunged) and his reſtoring us to a ſtate of Juſtification of Life, through his perfect Obedience, this was typified out by Adam's Diſobedience imputed to us for Condemnation, (as you have it, Rom. 5.) And herein was Adam, in the evil he brought upon us, made Chriſt's oppoſite Type, freeing us from all that evil, even to his ſubduing the Power of Death, the laſt Enemy of all, which Chriſt did at his Reſurrection. Chap. 9.

But then, in that other work, his beſtowing upon us that Spiritual and Heavenly condition of Life, in a conformity to his own Perſonal Glory, after this work of Deliverance perfectly performed at the Reſurrection, (and which we receive, after all that Evil which Adam brought upon us, is removed out of the way, in this, Chriſt had for his Type Adam's Eſtate and Condition before his Fall, when at his Creation he was made a living Soul, and Lord of the Earth, to convey the ſame Priviledge and Perfection he was created in, unto his Poſterity: And This this Place hath held forth unto us.

And ſet but theſe things in their due order and correſpondency, and how fitly do they ſuit and anſwer each to other! That ſo far as Adam had ſpoiled us by his Fall, ſo far he ſhould be the Type of Chriſt's reſtoring us again: And then, that his Primitive, Original Eſtate which he had before his Fall, ſhould be the Type of that glorious Eſtate which we ſhall have through Chriſt, after that Redemption of our Bodies in the Reſurrection compleated, as being indeed their ancient and firſt intended Inheritance decreed unto them in Chriſt, as their Head, before the conſideration of the Fall, but which Adam's ſin falling out between, had kept them from, and hitherto had letted, which (this ſin of his being now by Chriſt firſt removed out of the way) they are then ſtated in; how fitly and ſuitably commenſurated and proportioned each to other are theſe two!

And to this purpoſe, you may further obſerve in this Place, (which is a ſecond Conſideration) that the Apoſtle doth here found that Heavenly Eſtate of ours to come, meerly upon that Glory due to Chriſt, as the Lord from Heaven, and this upon the ſole and ſingle conſideration of the Perſonal Union of that Human Nature with the Godhead, and therein ordained a common Perſon to us, and noted out that other Phraſe, his being made a quickning Spirit; and that to us his Elect, that we may be made in a conformity unto him, he being ordained to that Union, and to that Glory, as a publick Perſon, whenever he ſhould firſt aſſume it, and be made Man; even as Adam, in his very firſt Formation and Creation, was made a publick Perſon. And in theſe very reſpects it is, that Adam is here made his Type, even before his Fall, in his firſt Creation, as hath been declared. All which, to me, do more than hint, if not clearly evince, (taking in all the former Conſiderations with it) that this Spiritual and Heavenly Eſtate which Chriſt now hath in Heaven, and that Perſonal Union whereby he was made a quickning Spirit, was ordained and intended to Chriſt firſt, appointed as a publick Head; and ſo to the Elect in him, before the conſideration of the Fall, and that, ſimply, and abſolutely unto them, as conſidered in maſſa pura; and ſo, that Adam's Fall, and Sin, and Death, and then thereupon Chriſt's Death and work of Redemption to remove theſe, came in in the order of God's Decrees, and were appointed but as Means to improve Chriſt, and to commend and ſet forth his love the more unto us, and alſo to render that Condition to which we were primitively in Chriſt ordained, the more illuſtrious and glorious by this Deliverance. And ſo, all Chriſt's work, until this ſpiritualizing of our Bodies, was but the taking out of the way (as the Apoſtles Phraſe is, Coloſſ. 2. 14.) that which letted, and was caſt in as an impediment of this their firſt intended Glory; which ſo breaks out from under this great Eclipſe with the more brightneſs and luſtre.

That I may more diſtinctly explain this laſt Conſideration, you may obſerve that in this part of the Chapter, wherein the Apoſtle ſets himſelf to prove, what manner of Bodies are ordained for us after the Reſurrection, he maketh the riſe of that their ſtate to be, not ſo much the Death, or Reſurrection of Chriſt, of which he makes no mention at all in this part of his Diſcourſe, wherein he comes to ſpeak thereof; but he alledgeth, as the higheſt and primary foundation hereof, this Ground, even the Perſonal excellency and glory due unto Chriſt's Human Nature, above that which was due to the firſt Adam before his Fall; which he brings as the ſole Ground of this our intended Glory, as being firſt due unto Chriſt, meerly upon the Conſideration of his Union with the Godhead, of which Glory of Chriſt in Heaven, he brings in Adam's Eſtate of Innocency in Paradiſe as the fitteſt Type; which is expreſſed unto us under that Phraſe (as it hath been opened) [He was made (or appointed to be) a quickning Spirit] that is, the Godhead was appointed to become the Life and Quickner of an Human Nature, (even as Adam was made a living Soul: that is, to conſiſt of a Soul giving Life to an Earthly Body) by virtue of which, he inſtantly did become the Lord from Heaven, (Verſe 47.) that is, the Lord of Heaven; to whom by Inheritance, as to a Lord, Heaven and all the Glory of it was due, and ſo, he became an heavenly Man, as the Expreſſion alſo is. And then he being withal, in and together with the ordaining him to this Union with the Godhead, ordained to be a Head unto us; hence it is that our Bodies are to be made Spiritual and Heavenly, like unto his. And this is the moſt ancient, primitive Title in God's Decree, that we have unto Glory; and therefore is in this place only and alone alledged. And although it be true, that the very Reſurrection of our Bodies, conſidered ſimply, as it is the ſubduing that laſt Enemy, Death (as the Apoſtle ſpeaks, verſe 26.) is the fruit of Chriſt's Reſurrection, as the Cauſe of it; (and therefore, in that former part of the Chapter, the Apoſtle argueth it from thence) yet ſtill, that at the Reſurrection, our Souls and Bodies ſhould be raiſed up to ſo glorious and ſpiritual a Life, and that we ſhould riſe with ſuch a kind of Body as we had not before, in Adam (which is made a diſtinct Query by the Apoſtle, from the 35th verſe) this (I ſay) is founded by the Apoſtle here, only upon that Heavenly Condition which Chriſt was ordained unto, and which was his due meerly upon his very aſſuming an Human Nature; of which, we his Members were, together with him, ordained to bear the Image. And thus to ſhew, that he, and we in him, were ordained unto this Eſtate before, or rather without the conſideration of the Fall: Therefore it is Adam's ſtate of Innocency in his firſt Formation, is made the Type of Chriſt's Perſonal Union, and ſo, of that Glory to which, both he as a publick Perſon, and we, as his Members, are ordained.

Uſe 1. So then, that which is the Corolary from all, is this, that the Plot, or Order of Gods Decrees concerning Chriſt and us, was thus laid in Gods breſt; That though unto Chriſt, and us in him, this Glory was ſimply intended (for God looks unto the end of his works at firſt, and ſo, firſt to what he meant, ultimately to raiſe Chriſt and us up unto, even that Glory which we ſhall have in Heaven) yet God withal decreeing, in the way to this Glory, the Fall of all Mankind, and ſo, of the Elect to Fall in Adam, as well as others; therefore Chriſt in the way to the execution or accompliſhment of this Original Decree, was ordained, for their ſakes, and in a reſpect to them, not to take on him firſt that glorious Condition, upon his firſt Union with our Nature (which yet was his due) but is ſaid to condeſcend to come down from Heaven, even as Son of Man, (John 6. 38. and 62. compared) and to take on him frail Fleſh and the form of a Servant, in ſtead hereof; and that, to this end, that he might firſt Redeem Us, his Members, from under that miſery which the Fall had brought upon us; and all this to this end, that by this means this glorious Condition, both of his and ours, might be made the more illuſtrious.

illuſtrious. But then, after he ſhould have taken out of the way that which hindred his Members elected in him, from the Glory originally deſigned to them, and ſo ſhould thus firſt have made up what Adam had ſpoiled, then ſhould he himſelf firſt caſt off that Vail or Condition of frail Fleſh, and endow the Human Nature with that Spiritual State of Body, which was by a right of Inheritance inſeparably, and immediately annexed to the Perſonal Union with the Godhead: And then, by virtue of this, when he raiſeth up his Members, he will beſtow on them the like Spiritual Eſtate, which was alſo ordained them by an Inheritance (in being Members of him) as well as by the Purchaſe of his Death: And ſo we come to have a double Title unto this Glory; one by Inheritance, through our Election in Chriſt, which is this Original, Primitive Title, and before the conſideration of any other in Gods intention; and another by the Purchaſe of that Death of Chriſt, which beſides the reſtoring us out of that Eſtate into which Adam's ſin had plunged Us, does by an overflow of merit purchaſe alſo this Life unto us: Therefore, Epheſ. 1. 14. this Glory is called, Our Inheritance, as well as a Purchaſed Poſſeſſion. And when Chriſt hath thus raiſed Us to this Glory, then, and not till then, are we reſtored to what at our firſt Creation we were ordained to: And then, and not till then, did God (as it were) account Chriſt to have been begotten [This day have I begotten thee;] It is ſpoken of him in reſpect of his Human Nature, and that, when Spiritualized at his Reſurrection; and 'tis ſpoken by God, as if then firſt Chriſt were become that which he had primitively ordained him to be; As if, not untill that time; and ſo, God reckons him (as it were) then anew Begotten; becauſe, not till then, did Chriſt's Condition anſwer, and become like to what, when he was firſt, as Man conceived in Gods Womb of Election by his Decree, he was appointed to be. And thus in like manner doth God reckon Us, to be ſuch as he at firſt choſe us to be, when he choſe us to be Men, and primitively intended to make us in the end, (and for which indeed he ordained to Create us) not untill we be raiſed to the like Spiritual glorified Condition unto which, in, and together with Chriſt, we together were ordained to be. And ſo, all that befell Us in ſinning, through Adam's Fall, and all that thereupon befell Chriſt in aſſuring frail Fleſh, is to be lookt at as to have been but in tranſitu, in the way (as Pſal. 110. hath it) to this intended Glory; and to have been decreed (as alſo the Elects ſeveral Conditions in this World are) as ſubordinate Means appointed by God to make this his Primitive and firſt-intended Decree the more Glorious, and (as it were) to add a deep Shadow to it, ſo to ſet off the luſtre of it. Chap. 9.

Uſe 2. Admire we at that which the Angels ſtand aguſt at, namely the manifold wiſdom of God in his manifeſtations of himſelf, as you have it, Epheſ. 3. 10. That being one of God's ends of revealing this Myſtery of Chriſt, that the Angels might ſee the manifold Wiſdom of God [πολυποίκιλος] many ways various, by reaſon of thoſe ſeveral ways God hath gone about to diſcover himſelf and his Son by. The Story of the World, and of the Creation of it, what a glorious Contrivement was it, taken ſimply alone in it ſelf; and how wonderfully did theſe viſible things ſhew forth the inviſible things of God, his Wiſdom, power, &c. and how Proud were the wiſeſt of the Heathen, of their Contemplations and Knowledge of its Story, whiles they ſearched out the harmony, and the ſecrets of this viſible Frame! The Angels, who were made the Firſt Day, as moſt conceive, with the Heavens, or the third day, as Piſcator, whilſt they ſtood by as Spectators to behold how God, by degrees, finiſhed this Fabrick, and out of the Chaos drew the Elements, the firſt Lines and ruder Draught of all things viſible; and then ſaw him proceed to garniſh, embelliſh, and adorn thoſe void ſpaces; the Firmament with Sun, Moon, and leſſer Stars; the Air with Fowl; the Earth with Beaſts, Herbs, &c. and the Water with Fiſhes; and laſt of all, brought forth Man, the Lord of all, and made him little lower than themſelves, being Crowned with glory and honour, and (as it were) the Epitome of all; how did this Chorus, or Quire, ſhout out in joy and admiration at the end of every Act, and new Days work! Or to uſe the Metaphor which God uſeth in Job 38. 4, 5, 6. where he ſpeaks in the Language of an Architect, to expreſs how he reared this glorious Frame: When He laid the Foundation of the Earth and took Measure of all the Proportions, of every Creature which he made in it, then (verſ. 7.) the Morning Stars ſang together, and all the Sons of God ſhouted for joy; that is, the Angels, who are called Stars, becauſe they are the Creatures appointed to live in the Third Heaven, their Element, as Fiſhes in the Sea, and Fowl in the Air: And but Stars, for there was a Sun to riſe would make them hide their Faces, and pull in their Beams, even Chriſt; before whoſe Glory (for tis his Glory ſpoken of, Iſai. 6. as appears by John 10. 12.) They cover their Faces, as the Stars, like Tapers are put out before the Sun. And they are called the Morning Stars, becauſe they were up early, being Created in the Morning of the Firſt Day. He that is early up is in Latin called Matutinus, and ſo in Hebrew. They both at the Foundation, and at the finiſhing of this Building (eſpecially when they ſaw Man brought in, the owner of all) ſhouted for joy, admiring at Gods handy-works, and Wiſdom manifeſted in them: God herein alluding to the cuſtom of Men, who when they lay the Foundation of a work, and eſpecially, at the finiſhing of ſome Great Building, have all their Friends with acclamations and ſhoutings about them; as at the firſt Stone of the Temple laid, Ezra. 3. 10. and Zach. 4. 10. the Laſt Stone was brought forth with joy and ſhouting, crying Grace, Grace, to it. Juſt ſo was it here. And as a Skilful and curious Artiſt will ſtand looking upon the exquiſite workmanſhip of ſome one part (ſuppoſe upon an Eye or Hand in a Picture) many hours together, with much delight; ſo did the Angels greedily view every part of this World, admiring and praiſing God's artifice in it: (Which likewiſe God himſelf did, as delighting to ſee how good all was that he had made) and whilſt they were doing ſo, they might behold God (as if he had been diſpleaſed at the courſneſs of this his work which he had Drawn) ſuffer all to be daſhed by one unwary ſtroke of the pencil; ſuffering his Image in Man to be razed, and this whole Frame Subjected to vanity, confuſion and diſorder: Which made them wonder, in that they ſurely thought that this was all the works of wonder that ever God meant to make; eſpecially, when they ſaw him at firſt, reſt from all his works, and ſit down, as delighted in them, and to appoint a Day for the Memorial of them: They could not chuſe but wonder, to ſee that God ſhould throw ſo coſtly a Piece away; being ſuch a World as they could never imagine, how a better could ever be framed: And how Great a God muſt they needs think him to be, that regarded not the loſs and ſpoiling of ſuch a World! But alas! God had a further Plot, and Platform of another Adam, and another World, in his Head, whereof all this (though ſo perfect) was but the Type, and Shadow; and of all which they knew not one tittle, nor had the leaſt inckling; Therefore, Epheſ. 3. 9. it is called a Myſtery hid in God: God had not ſpoken one word of it to them (as not of his Temple to David) In compariſon of which, this World was but a Stage to Act a Part upon a while, and Man (the Lord of it) but as a King in a Play, a meer Type and reſemblance of another King, the King of Glory; who when he ſhould be brought into the World, theſe Angels muſt all down upon their knees and worſhip: Themſelves are but the Stars, as Job calls them, and David too, in Pſal. 8. 3. where he ſpeaks (as was ſaid) of Chriſts World, and the Creatures thereof, the Angels, who become Subjects of it, are but the Stars, and the Church the Moon; but there is no Sun mentioned, for Chriſt himſelf is the Sun, and the Light thereof; before whom theſe Stars were to loſe their Light, with which at beſt they do but twinkle. And when Chriſt and his World ſhall appear, then this Moon ſhall be confounded, and this Sun aſhamed, when he ſhall raign in mount Sion, and before his Ancients gloriouſly: Iſai. 24. ult. And how muſt this needs ſhew forth the manifold Wiſdom of God; that he hath plots beyond plots, though he begins with a ruder ſhew at firſt; as in the making of the World, in which the Wiſdom that lies in it taken ſimply by it ſelf, how glorious is it! It is called the Wiſdom of God, 1 Cor. 1. 21. And if that even the Heathen ſtudied, and admired this, when without relation to God, when his Wiſdom in it was not diſcover-

ed

ed and discerned by them; How much more of Wisdom saw the Angels in it, who saw him that was the First Mover and Creator of all therein! But there is yet a further Mystery in the Story of it, even a Great Mystery therein couched. The Moral of all being Christ the Wisdom of God, whom to illustrate, all the Creatures are not sufficient to be Similitudes, nor Man the Glory and Epitome of them, fit to be his Type. Here is Wisdom hid in Wisdom, a Mystery in a Mystery, a World in a World. And all this World and Adam the inhabiter of it, are but as the swadling-Clouts of him, who was once a Babe and lay in a Manger. Chap. 9.

CHAP. X.

A more particular Compariſon between Adam and Jeſus Chriſt in their Perſons: The Formation of Adam's Body by God's immediate Hand, typifies the Aſſumption of the Human Nature by the Son of God, whoſe Body was formed immediately by the Holy Ghoſt. The Union of Soul and Body in Adam, typifies the Hypoſtatical Union. In what there is an Agreement in the Compariſon between them; wherein a Diſparity. What was the ſtate of Adam's Body: It comprized the Perfections of all Creatures: It was ſuited to take in all the Pleaſures and Comforts which they could afford: It had a Natural beauty in it: It was guarded from Injuries, and was Immortal; yet in its Original 'twas but Earth. It depended on the Creatures for its Subſiſtence, and was ſubject to many Alterations. To what a higher degree of Glory, the Divine Nature of Chriſt, united to the Human, rais'd the Body of Chriſt, as he is One with God, and the Lord from Heaven. It was neceſſary that the Glory of his Human Nature ſhould excel all Creatures, even the Angels themſelves. The glory of his Body was illuſtrated by his Tranſfiguration on the Mount; and yet that fell ſhort of the Glory it has now in Heaven.

HAving thus in the General demonſtrated Adam to have been Chriſt's Type, I come now to lay the Particulars together wherein this Typicalneſs conſiſted. For the fitting of which, each to other, (as alſo concerning all other Types) I will promiſe this Rule, which I take to be ſafe and warrantable, That although, for what are Types, and what are not, as alſo for the General Scope intended in them, we muſt find a ſpecial warrant by the Holy Ghoſt's own interpreting and applying of them, (as hath been ſaid) yet ſo, as when once that Scope is found, we may for the Particulars wherein the Types agree with the things typified, take liberty (as in all other Similitudes) to enlarge them, and extend them as far, and to as many Particulars, as the likeneſs will hold in, (whilſt that we keep to the Analogy of that their General Scope) although we have not an expreſs word for each particular part wherein there ſeems to be a reſemblance. For which Rule there is both this Reaſon and Inſtance.

The

The Reaſon is, becauſe when God uſeth a Similitude to any purpoſe, all parts of that Similitude, wherein to ſpiritual Reaſon it is evident they are alike, as well in what is not ſo expreſly applyed by the Holy Ghoſt already, as in what it is, they all are ſanctified to reſemble it, and are ſo intended; ſeeing that the Similitude doth as readily and fully ariſe at the firſt bluſh, in the one, as in the other. Chap. 10.

The Inſtance I would give, is in the Interpretation of Parables, in which this Rule holds good. Now, Hebr. 9. 9. the Types of the Old Law are called Parables [ἥτις παραβολὴ] which was a Parable] rendred by our Tranſlatiod [which was a Figure] Now concerning the Interpretation of Parables, you uſually have the General Scope annexed by Chriſt in them all, but no more; he leaving us (according to the Analogy of Faith, and of that Scope given us as a Pole-ſtar to ſteer our Courſe by therein) to apply the ſeveral Particulars our ſelves, according to that reſemblance that unto Spiritual Reaſon doth appear. This Rule therefore will I obſerve herein, and keep to it as ſacred, Not to make any thing a Type, which the Holy Ghoſt hath not deſigned out for one: But in opening the Similitude between ſuch as he hath deſigned, and the things ſignified, to take liberty for the fitting of Particulars, without once ſailing out of the ſight of the General Scope given, or applying the Similitude of any Particular to ſignifie any thing concerning Chriſt, which otherwiſe I have not authentick warrant for, in the expreſs Letter of the Word.

This Rule thus premiſed, I deſcend to the Particulars. Now the Compariſon lies in two things:

1. In reſpect of their own Perſons.

2. As they both are ordained publick Perſons, to convey the Likeneſs or Image of their Condition unto their Poſterity.

I. Their Perſons are compared: And that,

1. In the Subſtance whereof each conſiſted: Adam was a living Soul; that is, a reaſonable Soul giving life to a Body made of Earth, and to live on Earth; not a Soul ſimply, but a living Soul. And that Attribute of Living is given to Soul, as it communicated Life to that Body into which it was inſpired, Gen. 2. 7. And ſo, Chriſt was a Spirit (or God) quickning an Human Nature joyned unto it. And that that was the Nature aſſumed for the Godhead to quicken, and give life unto, the Apoſtle declares, verſe 47. calling him a Man.

2. In the infinitely differing Conditions of their Perſons, or ſtate of Life which that Human Nature, by virtue of that Union, muſt needs enjoy, tranſcending that which a Soul could convey to a body of Earth. This ſecond compariſon, namely, of their Condition, is couched in theſe words [Living, Qickning] as that other, of the Subſtance of their Perſons, in thoſe words [Soul, Spirit].

Now the firſt Particular of this Reſemblance lies (as I take it) in comparing the Formation of Adam's Body, and the Union of his Soul with it, with the Formation of Chriſt's Human Nature, and the Hypoſtatical Union of it with the Divine; which is the Foundation of all, that Chriſt, as a publick Perſon, did for us.

For, firſt, This being the firſt Formation of Adam, by which he became a Man, muſt needs typifie out the firſt Formation and Aſſumption of our Nature by Chriſt, by which he became a Man.

And, ſecondly, The thing compared is the one's becoming a living Soul, and the others being a quickning Spirit; which notes out a Compariſon of their Natures or Subſtances. Adam was made Soul, when into his Body the Rational Soul was inſpired; which being united to it, uſed it as an Inſtrument to perform the Functions of that Life which it led on Earth. But Chriſt became a quickning Spirit, when his Godhead aſſumed the Human Nature to work and dwell in it, and to glorifie it. And the Apoſtle calls the whole Perſon of Adam now made, by that which was moſt excellent in it, the Soul; Mens cujuſque quiſque eſt: And ſo, the Perſon of Chriſt made Man, is, by that which which is moſt excellent in that Perſon, Spirit, or the Godhead, which is the Foundation of all that which Chriſt is made unto us.

Thirdly, That his Scope is, by Adam's Formation to ſignifie the Aſſumption of the Human Nature by the Godhead, appears by verſe 47. where he calls the firſt Adam but meer Man [the firſt Man, &c.] but he calls Chriſt (as the ſecond Man, ſo) the Lord (namely God) alſo, as being become God and Man. Therefore we may warrantably conclude, That to be the firſt thing typified by Adam's Creation: Let us now ſee how they agree.

The firſt making of Adam a Man, is deſcribed in Two things:

1. The forming of his Body.

2. The breathing in, and uniting the Soul unto it; which together united, do make up one Perſon. Now the forming of Adam's Body doth clearly typifie out the Formation of Chriſt's Human Nature aſſumed: which whole Nature is accordingly called his Body; for ſo, comparatively to the Godhead, it may be called. Thus, Hebr. 10. 5. a Body haſt thou fitted me (that is, an Human Nature) ſays Chriſt there, of his coming into the World. And the Agreement lies in two things:

1. Adam's Body and Chriſt's do agree in this, That Adam's Body was immediately formed by God himſelf, without Man's help, he being the firſt Man. It was God who faſhioned his Body, whereas it is vis plaſtica, the formative Faculty that doth it in ours, begotten of him. And ſo Chriſt's Body aſſumed, is alſo ſaid (Hebr. 9. 11.) to be a Tabernacle not made with hands; not by the help of any Creature, not by Generation, as ours is, but immediately by God.

And, 3dly, As God formed the Body of Adam, even as a Potter doth mould or faſhion his Clay, (as the word denotes) and as God did this immediately, even ſo the Holy Ghoſt did Chriſt's Body. That word in Hebr. 10. 5. which we tranſlate [fitted me] ſignifies alſo to articulate, or form joynt by joynt; [καταρτίσω] And the Hebrew words in Pſalm 40. (from whence this is taken) which we tranſlate [My ear haſt thou bored through] as having alluſion unto the Servants under the Old Law. Genebrard ſays that the Ear is by a Synechdoche put for the whole Body; and that which we Tranſlate [perfodiſti] is rather [fodicaſti] to faſhion with the hand, as a Potter doth; and ſo the Apoſtle renders it, [a Body haſt thou formed (or fitted) me. The Holy Ghoſt therein ſupplyed that which the Plaſtick Faculty doth in our Conception (conſiſting partly in the Seed of the Man, and partly in the Nature of the Womb;) and this, that ſo Chriſt might be born without ſin.

Therefore, 4thly, As Adam was without Father and Mother, ſo was Chriſt alſo; who Hebr. 3. 4. is therein made like unto Melchiſedech; but he is much more like to Adam, who herein was a more perfect Type of Chriſt than Melchiſedech was: For Melchiſedech's having no Father nor Mother, was not that he had none indeed, but that in Scripture None were recorded; as appears by verſe 6. But Adam really had no Man to his Father, nor Woman to his Mother: He was not born from the Conjunction of Man and Woman, which Melchiſedech was.

Fifthly, As Adam was in a peculiar manner (in reſpect of his Formation) the Son of God, and that, in ſuch a reſpect as other men are not; (for Luke 3. whereas others are in that Genealogie ſaid to be the Sons of ſuch and ſuch Men (as Enoch the Son of Seth, and Seth of Abraham) Adam is ſaid to be the Son of God, verſe ult. becauſe he was his Son by immediate Creation, which they were not; who yet in another reſpect, namely, as they were Elect, were Adopted Sons of God). This typified that Chriſt, even as having aſſumed an Human Nature, was in a tranſcendent manner God's Son; even as he was Man he was God's Natural, (not Adopted) Son: For elſe there had been two Relations of Sonſhip in that Perſon; the Perſon being the Subject of that Relation, not the Nature. So Luke 1. 35. becauſe the Holy Ghoſt ſhall come upon thee, therefore that holy thing which ſhall be born of thee, ſhall be called the Son of God: that is, ſo the Son, as no man elſe: The only begotten Son of God, John 3. 16.

II. In

Chap. 10.

II. In the Second Place, The Uniting of the Soul and Body together (which was done at that breathing of Life into him) ſo as, they both made one Man, and the firſt Adam ſo became a living Soul; this of all things, doth the moſt lively ſet forth the Hypoſtatical Union of the Divine and Human Nature. And ſo I find all Divines acknowledge, that the neareſt Inſtance that can in Nature be found, of this Myſtery, is therein held forth. And therefore, 1 Pet. 3. 18. the Human Nature of Chriſt is called Fleſh, and the Divine Nature, Spirit; which, in the very nameing of it, ſeems to bear an alluſion to the Soul or Spirit in Man, conjoyned with his Body and Fleſh. And it ſeems a fair Interpretation which is given by ſome, of that Place [——— The fulneſs of the Godhead dwells bodily;] that is, by a more near and firm Union, than a Mans Soul doth in his Body; as ſpeaking by way of Similitude to illuſtrate this. And ſo I find the School-men labouring much, to ſhew how nearly this Inſtance reſembles it: As Thom. Aqu. Lib. 4. cont. Gent. cap. 41. And Athanaſius in his very Creed, taketh up this Similitude of all others, to expreſs it. But I did not think to have found ſuch a Ground in the Word, to have made this the Type of it, as this Place holds forth.

For, 1. Conſidering the diſtance that is between the Reaſonable Soul (a Spirit immortal, more glorious than the Sun, but a ſtep inferiour to the Angels, bearing Gods Image in its Subſtance and Faculties, and capable of Holineſs) and a piece of Earth, that that ſhould dwell in, and inform this; the conjoyning of two ſuch Extreams beſt reſembled the Union of the Divine Nature with the Human, God with Man. The Angels, they are Spirits without Bodies; and the Souls of Beaſts are but Earthly, like the Bodies which they inform, and indeed, the Spirits of Elements only.

Secondly, The nearneſs of their Union does yet further help to reſemble it: For this Soul dwels not in Bodies, as a Man in a Houſe, or as Angels did in Bodies aſſumed, to move them, &c. but is conjoyned to them as a Form, that together with the Body, makes up a Perſon; whereas the Souls of Beaſts, though they make a Nature, yet not a Perſon. And as the Rational Souls Union, ſo this Union of God and Man makes one Chriſt, one Perſon.

Thirdly, The ſuper-eminent manner of Subſiſting, that this Soul hath in the Body, is the higheſt reſemblance of that of the Godhead in an Human Nature. Other Souls have their Being from the Matter; they are extracted out of its Paſſive Power, as Spirits of Wine are, out of Wine: But this is Gods Breath, and is from without: And in the Body it is Semi-Perſona, it is not that only quo ſubſiſtit, but quod: Other Forms are but Principles of the whole, this is more; it can of it ſelf Subſiſt; only whilſt it is in the Body, it Subſiſts after another manner, namely in a Body: Therefore, Mens Souls are ſaid to give an account for what was done in the Body: And it can Subſiſt, when ſevered from the Body, which the Souls of Beaſts cannot, Eccleſ. 12. 7. It moreover bears the Name of the whole: Therefore Chriſt arguing the Immortality of the Soul, ſaith, that Abraham is alive; thatis, the Soul of Abraham; for God is the God of the Living, &c. Thus the Second Perſon is a Perſon of himſelf, who Subſiſted before a Body was aſſumed;] Before Abraham was I am;] and when this Perſon Subſiſts in the Human Nature, it is the ſame Subſiſtence that before, only he takes a Body up unto himſelf to partake of his Subſiſtence.

Fourthly, As the Body is but the Souls Inſtrument (its Members are called Weapons or Tools he acts by, (Rom. 6. 13.) Neither yield ye your Members as inſtruments of unrighteouſneſs unto ſin: But yield your ſelves unto God, as thoſe that are alive from the dead, and your Members as inſtruments of righteouſneſs unto God. And the Sheath thereof (Dan. 7. 15.) I Daniel was grieved in my Spirit in the midſt of my Body, and the viſions of my head troubled me. And its Houſe of Clay, Job 4. 19. How much leſs on them that dwell in houſes of Clay, whoſe Foundation is in the duſt, which are cruſhed before the moth. Such is this aſſumed Body unto the Godhead, which many Interpret that place of, The Fleſh profiteth nothing, but the Spirit quickneth, John 6. 63. And the thing is a truth, though there is another meaning given of the words.

Fifthly, As theſe two remain diſtinct, the Souls one thing, and the Body an other; ſo do the two Natures in Chriſt.

Sixthly, As the Soul hath Faculties and Actions diſtinct from thoſe of the Body. the Body hath its Appetite, which we call the Senſitive: The Soul a diſtinct Appetite, which we call Rational, the will. So the Divine Nature in Chriſt hath Powers, and Operations diſtinct and ſevered from thoſe of his Human. The will of the Human Nature, is diſtinct from the Divine.

But yet this Compariſon is not without a World of Difference in theſe Two: For, Firſt, The Godhead and the Human Nature are not as Two Parts of that Perſon, as the Soul and Body are of a Man: For though the Soul be of it ſelf a Subſiſtence, yet it is ordained to be a Part of the Man, and hath not its full and Natural perfection and intended State, without Union with the Body. And although in reſpect of Holineſs, The Spirits of juſt Men departed, are ſaid to be perfect, Heb. 12. 23. Yet in reſpect of Gods Ordination to a conjunction with the Body, they are not for happineſs ſo perfect, as when again united to the Body: But the Son of God was as perfect afore his aſſuring Mans Nature, as after, and nothing of Perfection is added unto him thereby: And if we could now ſuppoſe a Separation, he ſhould loſe none of his Perfection thereby, being of himſelf God Bleſſed (and ſo perfect in himſelf) for ever.

Secondly, Man is a third Thing different from his Soul and Body, though made up of Both: But tis not ſo here; the Perſon of Chriſt is God, and the Perſon of Chriſt is Man.

Thirdly, The Soul, though it can Subſiſt without the Body, yet did not alone Subſiſt before it was joyned to the Body: But the Divinity of Chriſt was from all Eternity, and was then as Perfect without this Human Nature aſſumed, as now it is: He is the Perſon, and the Human Nature but an Adjunct of it, and perfected by it.

Fourthly, This Hypoſtatical Union is more intimate, than that of the Soul and Body: For we cannot ſay of Man, that he is the Soul, or the Body: But the Son of God aſſuming our Nature, may properly and truly be called both God, and Man.

Fifthly, The Soul and Body may be, and are ſevered, but ſo cannot Chriſt's Divine and Human Nature be: No, nor were they in Death; but when Chriſt was in the Grave, that Union held.

Thus you have ſeen a Compariſon made between the Perſon of Adam, ſingly conſidered in his being made up of Soul and Body united, to make one Perſon, and the Perſon of Chriſt ſingly conſidered as God, and Man, in one perſon alſo.

I come now to the ſecond Head, which is the Conveyance of an Image by each of theſe Perſons to the poſterity of each of them, and the different manner of conveying it.

And as to that Point, the Text in 1 Cor. 15. 45, 46. ſhews the eminently tranſcendent difference held by God between theſe two. 1. That Adam conveys his Image as a living Soul, and by virtue of that Conveyance, we are meerly made living Souls our ſelves, ſuch as Adam was: We have barely that Animal Life conveyed. Thus all thoſe that came of Adam were to be in Likeneſs to him, Living Souls: But Chriſt Conveys his Image and Heavenly Life and State, as a quickning Spirit, viz. the ſame Life which Chriſt himſelf hath. So that there is a different manner of theſe two Conveyances of Life. The one, that of Adam, is by Natural Generation, to make us Men, like himſelf: But Chriſt's conveyance is by immediate quickning and cauſation of his new Life. And therein there is this difference between Adam's Conveyance to his members, and Chriſts to us: That Chriſt, the Lord from Heaven, is alone that quickning Spirit, and we are not to become quickning Spirits to others. We are quickned, not quickners; we are not made Living

Souls

Souls our ſelves to others, as in Adam his Sons were; God bleſſed them to multiply, Gen. 1. 28. But the holieſt men that ever were, could never convey the new Birth and Life to any: Abraham could not to Iſhmael; for it goes not by the will of Man, John 1. 13. Which were born not of blood, nor of the will of the fleſh, nor of the will of man, but of God. And this is to be underſtood not only of Chriſt's quickning at the Reſurrection (though that only be here ſpoken of) but that of our firſt birth, is called a quickning us together with Chriſt, as the ſole Author of it, Epheſ. 2. 5. Even when we were dead in ſins, hath quickned us together with Chriſt, (by Grace ye are ſaved). And in that reſpect for, and by the ſame reaſon, that Chriſt is a quickning Spirit at the Reſurrection of our Bodies (which was there the particular Subject of the Apoſtles Diſcourſe in 1 Cor. 15. 45, 46.) is Chriſt the quickning Spirit at our firſt Converſion, and it is anſwerably termed a Reſurrection, Coloſ. 2. 12. Buried with him in Baptiſm, wherein alſo you are riſen with him through the faith of the operation of God, who hath raiſed him from the dead. And this is a work of no leſs Power than the other of raiſing our Bodies at laſt. And Chriſt is expreſly termed that Spirit which quickens us, and changeth us into his Image, 2 Cor. 3. 17, 18, verſes compared: Now the Lord is that Spirit, and where the Spirit of the Lord is, there is liberty. But we all, with open face, beholding as in a Glaſs the Glory of the Lord, are changed into the ſame Image, from Glory to Glory, even as by the Spirit of the Lord. It is ſpoken of Chriſt, The Lord is that Spirit, verſe 17. The difference is in this, (as the very words here do ſhew) that it is Chriſt's Prerogative to have Life in himſelf, as the Father hath, and we are to live by him: And as the Perſonal Union in Chriſt, and this his Prerogative are inſeparable, it cannot be communicated unto others. Chap. 10.

Only this is to be underſtood, that the ſame Image in that 1 Cor. 3. 18. is as to a Likeneſs in Qualities, and a Similitude of what is in Chriſt, according to the ſphere and proportion of that Union which is our Lot to have in ſubordination under him, and which, in a next degree unto him, is to be conveyed to us, both as to our Souls and Bodies.

Chriſt's and Adam's Communication in this reſpect are as vaſtly different, as the Communication of Light from a Candle to another, and the derivation of Light from the Sun to the Moon and Stars. The Communication of Light from one Candle or Torch to another, ſets the Torch or Candle lighted, in as full a condition of Light, and to propagate Light to other Torches, as itſelf hath: And ſo it is that we are made living Souls from him, who was a living Soul, as fully as himſelf, both for our ſelves, and others our Children. But Chriſt, he communicates Light and Life to us, as the Sun doth to the Moon and Stars: He makes them light and bright, with that Light which is in himſelf; but he makes them not to be Suns, as himſelf is. There is but one Sun ſtill, the Fountain of Light, and the quickner of all things.

I might enlarge, to ſhew that Likeneſs we ſhall have with Chriſt in Glory, both in all ſorts of qualifications of Soul, as well as Body. But I ſhall, by way of Inference, from the leſſer argue to the greater, and ſo purſue only the glory our Bodies ſhall then have from the glorious Body of Chriſt. And it is the proper Argument of this 1 Cor. 15. to ſhew the vaſtly differing ſtate of Adam's Body, as enlivened by a reaſonable Soul, and that of the Glory of Chriſt's Body, as then in Heaven, unto which ours are in heavenly qualifications and endowments to be conformed at the Reſurrection. Our Bodies are the vile part of us, as Paul terms them, Phil. 3. 21. which yet Chriſt will confirm to his moſt glorious Body: And he ſpeaks this, to the end, that from the inſtance of this Body, we may infer, from that honour which the vileſt part hath, what glorious, and heavenly, ſpiritualized Souls we ſhall have, and that by Chriſt, when we are glorified together with him in Heaven.

In handling of this, I am to perform Three things. To ſhew,

1. What was the ſtate of Adam's Body when he was made a living Soul, that is, had a reaſonable Soul that dwelt in his Body.

2. How glorious the Body, the Human Nature of Chriſt was, being quickned by the Godhead, the glory of Adam's Body, and his Soul dwelling in it, being a Type of the Glory of the Godhead dwelling in the Human Nature.

3. That our Bodies, they were made and intended by God to be conformed unto Chriſt's Body and Human Nature, in that his Glory heavenly.

For the firſt, Will you take Adam's Body, as it had a reaſonable Soul joyned to it, and in the dignity it was thereby raiſed unto, at the firſt Creation: The Body of Adam taken thus, with the reaſonable Soul dwelling in it, abſtracting and cutting off the Image of God which yet dwelt in it, for that is a fourth thing to be handled; It had,

1. All the World in it, ſubjective, and it had all the World in it, objective; that is, there is no excellency that is in the World, which he had not in him, inherent: Nor is there any excellency or comfort in the World, but he had ſomething in him to take it in ſuited to it, and to take comfort from it.

He had, firſt, all excellencies in him ſubjectively: There is no Perfection in any Creature, but it is in Man, that's certain. In his Soul he partakes with the Angels. In his Body, and the Actions of it, and the perfections of it, he is the Epitome, the Sum of all the World; he is called therefore a little World. The Poets did feign, and they ſaid well in it, only the ſtory they tell is a Fiction, When Man was made, ſay they, then did God take a piece out of every Creature, and make Man out of it. The thing hath a truth in it; not that God indeed did take out of every Creature a piece, but he framed up man in an anſwerable excellency to what is in any of the Creatures. Preach the Goſpel (ſaith Chriſt) unto every Creature, Mark 16. 15. that is, to Men; for Man is every Creature.

Then ſecondly, the Body of Adam, as it had this reaſonable Soul dwelling in it, it was fitted and ſuited to take in comfort from all things in the World: It was capable of all the comforts in this World; and of them above, ſome taſte of them: His Soul could look up to Heaven, to God; his Body, his Senſes, were ſuited to the Creatures. This is a certain truth, there is no Creature, but go take the Original Inſtitution of it, and it did ſome way ſerve for the comfort of man: And look as the eye is fitted to Colours, ſo there is ſomething in Man, in his Body, ſuited to every Creature, in the Original Conſtitution of them. There is no Creature, but there is ſomething in Man to anſwer it, and to take comfort from it, or an uſe in ſome way of it for Man's help. And there is nothing in Man, but there is ſome Creature made to anſwer to it. In a word, there is nothing that is in this Life, that we behold with our eyes, or hear with our ears; nothing in this World but was ſome way ſuited to ſomething in the Nature of Man to make uſe of, to have benefit by. And was not this a great Glory and Dignity that was given to Adam's Soul, living in ſuch a poor Tabernacle of Duſt and Aſhes, that it ſhould have a whole World made for it, ſuited to it? And thus glorious a Creature was Man in his firſt Creation.

2. Go take the Beauty that God ſtamped upon man. The Beauty which we have now ariſeth as from our Garments, from our Cloathing: But the Beauty that Adam's Body had then, it was innate; therefore it is ſaid, they knew not that they were naked, Gen. 2. 25. Chriſt ſaith that the Lilies are cloathed better than Solomon was in all his Royalty, Matth. 6. 28, 29. What is the reaſon of it? becauſe Solomon, in all his Royalty, he was beholden to the Silkworm, beholden to his Clothes, beholden to the Earth, or Rivers, wherein the Veins of Gold do run, for the golden Crown he wore upon his head, and for the precious Stones that were in that Crown; but the Lilies wear their own glory about them, it is innate in them: So now there was a beauty in Adam and Eve innate, inherent in them, which was their glory and their excellency, and they had that then, which all the Kings of the Earth, in all their Royalty, and all the beauties of the World put in one, have not now.

3. This

3. This Body which Adam's Soul did dwell in, was made free from all hurt from all the Creatures without him. You uſe to ſay of ſome mens Bodies, that they are ſhot-free; why, Adam was ſhot-free, as I may ſay, from all hurt from the Creatures: There was not a Gnat to ſting him, or a Flea, (I inſtance in theſe lower Creatures to exemplifie how free he was from all evil;) therefore though he lived in a hot Country (for Paradiſe was ſeated near Babylon, a very hot Climate) yet he could ſleep quietly, though naked, he was expoſed neither to Sun or Weather, to have received any hurt from thence, for he was naked, and he had as great a comfort in his Life that way, and a freedom from all injury, infinitely more than we have now. He had no ſickneſs, nor no diſeaſes, nor no ſuffering of any kind. Chap. 10.

4. His Body had Immortality, it ſhould never have died; for in Rom. 5. 15. it is ſaid, that Death entred by ſin; and therefore, if he had not ſinned, he ſhould not have died. Theſe were the Perfections of Adams Body, as it was firſt Created; he had a World made for him; he had a World in him. He was free from all evil, free from pain. He was Immortal; that Soul of his, dwelling in that Body, ſhould never have been parted. And he had that native original Beauty, which putteth down all the Additions of any kind whereby Man now acquireth a Beauty to himſelf. Theſe, I ſay, were the Priviledges of that Body, which by the reaſonable Soul of Adam, having the Image of God, it was raiſed up to, by the Union of that Soul to that Body, and he ſhould have conveyed this to all his Poſterity as a publick Perſon.

Yea, but now let me tell you alſo, how ſhort it fell of that Spiritual Body which Jeſus Chriſt, the ſecond Adam bringeth with him, whereof this Body of Adam's was but a Type, and ſo you ſhall ſee what will loſe it notwithſtanding it was thus perfect.

1. For the original of this Body; It was but an Animal Body, it was but Earth, and all the Senſes in the Body, and whatever was in the Body and the Soul, as it was joyned to this Body, and working by the Body, and in the Body, was but Earth. It had actions as a Soul, which it works without the help of the Body outward, toward God; but the actions which it wrought in the Body, they were all but earthy; ſuited to earthy things: The firſt Man is of the Earth, earthy; and is no better. The Apoſtle in this 1 Cor. 15. 46, 47. &c. you ſee, ſpeaks of Adam at his beſt; if you take his corporeal State, as the reaſonable Soul did work, and did dwell in his Body, he ſpeaks meerly you ſee of it, and as he calleth the Law the beggarly Rudiments of the World, in compariſon of the Goſpel, ſo ſaith he this State of Adam's Body, though it had this Soul in it, it was but earthy, and it was ſuited to take comfort from Earthly things, if you take the Animal and Bodily State of it. In Phil. 3. 21. We tranſlate it Our vile Bodies; but the truth is, in the Original it is our humble Bodies, our mean Bodies, that depend upon, and are beholding unto eating and drinking, and the actions that follow thereupon, which humble them, and Lower them. Luke 1. 48. He had regard to the lowlineſs of his Handmaid; it is the ſame word we tranſlate vile Bodies, the lowlineſs of our Bodies, or our mean Bodies, whoſe Life and Subſiſtence depends upon ſuch mean Actions as we do, and poor Creatures without us: And Adam did ſo too. His Body was an earthly Body, that had ſuch earthly actions as theſe are.

2. His Body, though it was not expoſed to hurt or injuries, yet it was in a dependence upon Creatures, it depended upon meat, and drink, and ſleep, and upon all ſuch things to uphold it ſelf.

3. Though it was not Subject to dying, yet it was Subject to many alterations. If Adam had begotten a Child, it would have been been little when it had been born, it muſt have grown in augmentation. He was Subject to expenſe of Spirits, to wearineſs, and therefore refreſhed himſelf by ſleep and by meats: So as though he had not a decay in the whole by death; yet he had a decay in the parts which was ſupplied and renewed again; even as we now have not the ſame Bodies we had, when we were firſt born; for our Spirits waſt, and our Blood waſts, and new comes in the room; It is the ſame Body indeed, be-

cauſe

Book II. cauſe it hath the ſame Soul, yet notwithſtanding there is a waſting, ſo there was in his. A Man eateth more in a year than his own Bulk over and over again: Why? becauſe he waſteth, and ſpendeth: There is a partial alteration ſtill; and ſo it was in Adam.

4. It is true he was Immortal, as it is in Rom. 8. 10, 11. The Body is dead becauſe of ſin; that is, the reaſon why the Body ſhall die, is, becauſe of ſin: Had not Man ſinned, he ſhould not have died; therefore Adam having no ſin, he was Immortal. And it is clear he ſpeaks of Natural Bodies in that place; I will give you two reaſons for it, becauſe it is controverted: He ſaith the Body is dead for ſin, or becauſe of ſin; if he had ſpoken of the Body of ſin, he would not have uſed that Phraſe, It is dead becauſe of ſin, for it ſelf was dead in ſin; therefore he meaneth a Natural Body, for the death cometh only by ſin: And that he ſpeaks of the Natural Body, is clear alſo; for in verſ. 11. he ſaith, That God ſhall quicken, when he ſhall raiſe up our mortal Bodies; he ſpeaks therefore of the mortal Body. Now, my Brethren, the temper of the Elements in us are unequal; as we have warring in our Luſts, (as James ſaith, James 4. 1.) in our Souls, ſo there is a warring in the Elements in our Bodies: There are contrary factions in every Mans Body: There is Fire againſt Water, and Water againſt Fire; (for we are made up of the Elements) and a Kingdom divided within it ſelf cannot ſtand; and that is the reaſon why all men dye. Whereas in Adam's Body, in Innocency, the Elements were ſo poiſ- that he ſhould never have died, God did ſo temper them, ſo poiſe them. We do find this in Experience in Monuments that have been digged up in thoſe places where the Romans have died, that there have been Urns digged up, in which they have made a perpetual Lamp in a double Glaſs, a continued Flame that was fed with Oyl, that hath laſted even to this day: Such a perpetual Lamp was the radical moiſture in Adam, and if Man was able to make a perpetual Flame, God was able to make it much more; and ſo he did in Adam's Body. Yet though his Body was thus immortal, it was not immortal by virtue of its own Principles, his immortality was not natural to him; for he had the four Elements in him, the one fighting againſt the other; and had it not been for a Promiſe that God would poiſe them, it would in the end have wrought Old Age and Death. His Immortality was natural indeed, as a natural due to ſuch a Creature Created in Gods Image, while he ſtood in that State; but it was not natural, as ariſing from the Principles of Nature, and from the natural conſtitution that was in his Body, but the contrary rather. It was Gods Promiſe, Do this and thou ſhalt live, and his Protection over him that made him Immortal. Our Divines uſe to ſay this, That Adam had a poſſe non mori, that he could not have died, but he had not a non poſſe mori; that is, he had not ſuch a Principle, as that no way he could die; for he might die and he might live, as he might ſin, and he might not ſin, he had but a conditional Immortality; he was not indeed moriturus, but he was Mortale; he ſhould not have died for the act, but take the power, and he might have died. There was a poſſibility of Adam's being kil'd, if he had faln off from on high, as well as any of us; only the Promiſe was, That God would keep him by his Providence; and therein lay his Immortality; and he had the Tree of Life to eat of, for to repair nature, and ſo to live for ever. It is not natural to the Body of Man to live for ever, for the contrary Elements would bring a Man to ruin; Nor was it in the Power of the Soul to keep the Body; it was not like Salt to keep the Body from Corruption or Putrifaction; but, as I ſaid afore, it was the promiſe that God did it, that if he did thus and thus he would protect him and keep him, he ſhould live: And that it was by virtue of the Promiſe of God, that he was thus Immortal, is clear by this, that the Sacrament of the Tree of Life did ſeal up this Promiſe: He might eat of that Tree of Life, and it was a Sacrament to him that he lived by promiſe of God, that ſaid, Do this and thou ſhalt live. So as now if you ask whether Immortality was natural to Adam? I anſwer, it was natural in this reſpect, it was a due to that Condition according to the Covenant of Works; it was a ſuitable Promiſe, and a due Promiſe to Man in that Condition: But it was not natural in that reſpect, as ariſing out of the Principles of his own Nature; for neither could the Body have kept it ſelf Immortal, nor could the Soul have kept that Body Immortal; The temperature of his Body would never of it ſelf, and its own mixture, been ſo equally poiſed, but it would have been ruinated; only he was under Gods Protection, he was under Gods Promiſe, he was under the Covenant of the Tree of Life, and ſo he ſhould have been Immortal. And to me, this is clearly hinted in thoſe words, Thou art duſt, ſaith he; that is, in that thou art not faln to duſt again it doth not ariſe from the Conſtitution of thy Original, for thou art but a Duſt-heap, and thou wilt eaſily mould, and fall to nothing, it is eaſy for duſt to return to duſt; but it is my Protection that hath kept thee from falling to duſt; and therefore the Lord ſaith, Thou art duſt, and to duſt thou ſhalt return; I will now withdraw this Promiſe of Protection from thee, and then to duſt thou ſhalt return. Which evidently implyeth, That he was not Immortal from the Union of Soul and Body, or from the Conſtitution of his own Body, but that the Covenant of Works, to which the Promiſe was made, that was everlaſtingly to keep him, ſo he was Immortal. Chap. 10.

Here is the State of Adams Body, and ſo I have diſpatched the firſt thing that I was to do, namely to ſhew you what was the State of Adam's Body in his firſt Creation, when he was made a living Soul.

I am, Secondly, to ſhew you unto what a glorious State and condition the Union of the Godhead muſt needs raiſe up the Body of Chriſt when he had performed the work of Redemption (for that is the Apoſtles Scope here) that as the Soul of Adam did advance a poor piece of Clay to ſo high and great a dignity,) as the Body of a Man is advanced by the Soul joyned to it, and did ſo ennoble it that it hath all things under it, hath all this World made for it, and ſuited to it, and it ſelf was the Compendium and Epitome of the World, (as you have heard) and what a great deal of difference there is between the Body of a Man, having a reaſonable Soul joyned to it, and dwelling in it, and the Body of a Beaſt, you all know; Anſwerably, and in a proportion infinitely greater (for the firſt Adam was but a Type and an imperfect Shadow of the ſecond Adam) if that the Godhead ſhall become to a Human Nature that which the Soul was unto Adam's Body, will be the height, and dignity, unto which the Godhead will raiſe that Human Nature. If, ſaith the Apoſtle, the firſt Adam was a living Soul; that is, If that reaſonable Soul which Adam had created for him, and put into his Body, upon which God ſtamped his Image, did ſo enliven a Body of Earth, raiſe it to ſuch a glorious Condition; all which was but a Type and an imperfect Shadow of ſomething more Perfect to come; Then, ſaith he, the ſecond Adam muſt be a quickning Spirit; and by Spirit, he meaneth the Godhead of the Son of God, which did quicken or communicate a glory ſuitable (it muſt needs do ſo) unto the Human Nature it aſſumed; To what a glorious Life then muſt that Human Nature be ordained unto, which the Godhead becometh, as it were, the Soul, and is a quickning Spirit?

Now to ſhew you what that State of Body is that Jeſus Chriſt is to have, and hath in Heaven, and is due unto him by virtue of the Union of the Human Nature with the Godhead, I ſhall only give you what Arguments the Text affordeth. And there are three things in the Text, from which it may be argued, which indeed do all three come unto one, yet there is by way of Argument ſomething diſtinct in them all.

Firſt, The Apoſtle argues it from the inhabitation of the Godhead in the Body and Human Nature of Chriſt, that it is united to a Spirit, to the Godhead, that ſhall quicken it and raiſe it up to a proportion ſuitable to it ſelf. And his Argument, as I have ſaid, lies thus: If that a poor reaſonable Soul, created by God, having the Image of God upon it, raiſed up Adam's Body to ſuch a State; what ſhall the Spirit, the Godhead raiſe up the Body of Chriſt unto? For you muſt keep a proportion between the one and the other: The Union between the Human Nature of Chriſt, and his Godhead, is nearer and ſtricter than the Union of the Body and Soul, and doth therefore require in a proportion, that that Human Nature, the very Body of Chriſt, ſhould be advanced ced to a State ſuitable. Adam, ſaith he, was a living Soul; but Chriſt is a quickning Spirit.

I ſhall give you a wild Similitude, but indeed I do not know what Similitude elſe to uſe, and I do it meerly for illuſtrations ſake. Suppoſe the Sun had a Cryſtal Caſe round about it, and there were a poor mean Candle in a Lanthorn, what a world of difference would there be between the glory of the Sun ſhining through this Cryſtal Caſe, and the Light that the Candle doth deſuſe through that poor Lanthorn? juſt thus, even in this proportion, and infinitely greater muſt the difference be between what Adam's Soul raiſed the Lanthorn of his Body unto, when it dwelt in it, and ſhined in it, and through it; and that advancement that the Godhead, the fulneſs of the Godhead, dwelling bodily or perſonally in the Human Nature of Chriſt, raiſed up his Body unto.

God hath made here a world, and God hath ſtamped a great deal of his glory upon it; but if we could ſuppoſe that which Plato and other Philoſophers ſuppoſed, that God was the Soul of this world, what a world of glory muſt this world needs have beyond what it now hath! Even as much as the dead Carkaſs of a Man hath, when the Soul comes into it, from what it had when it was a dead Carkaſs. Why, but my Brethren, God hath made a little world, and that is the Human Nature of Chriſt, and he himſelf hath become the very Soul of it; and there is not only the manifeſtation of the things of God, as there is in the world, but there is God manifeſted in that Human Nature.

I ſhall exemplifie it unto you further, thus: There is a glorious Redemption to come of the Sons of God: And in Rom. 8. 19, 20. the Apoſtle tells us, that The whole Creation groaneth and travelleth in pain, to be delivered from the bondage of Corruption, into the glorious liberty of the Children of God: For the earneſt expectation of the Creature waiteth for the manifeſtation of the Sons of God. For the Creature was made ſubject to vanity, not willingly, but by reaſon of him who hath ſubjected the ſame in hope. Now mark, ſee how he reaſoneth; when the Saints ſhall be in their ruff and glory, for their ſakes, and to grace their coming into the world at latter Day of Judgment, this world ſhall be new hung, and all the glory that is now, it will vaniſh and be nothing in compariſon of that glory, the glorious liberty of the Sons of God, ſhall make the World partakers of, and that God ſhall do for their ſakes. Shall the world be thus made glorious by the coming of the People of God into it, when they are in their glory at latter Day; How much more glorious muſt the Human Nature of Chriſt be made, when the Godhead ſhall put forth a full glory in it, whenas that Human Nature ſhall be made partakers of the glorious liberty of the Godhead, and of the Son of God?

Chriſt himſelf ſaith, That thoſe that live in Kings Courts are cloathed in coſtly rayment. My Brethren, our Lord and Saviour Jeſus Chriſt, he was to be God's Fellow, Zech. 13. 7. If he be God's Fellow, and to come ſo near him, nearer than all the Angels, and to converſe continually with God in the greateſt nearneſs that can be (for he is united to the Godhead) he muſt have coſtly rayment, for his Body is but rayment, and it ſhall be made a glorious Body; for he is to be God's Fellow, therefore he ſhall wear, and doth wear, a glorious Body in Heaven. That's the firſt Argument.

Secondly, The Apoſtle telleth us, That he is the Lord, 1 Cor. 15. verſe 47. And therefore this Human Nature is to be advanced above all the Angels, and to be worſhipped by all the Angels; Let all the Angels of God worſhip him, Hebr. 1. 6. Therefore his Body is to be raiſed up to a condition above Angels. You may judge what is due to the Body of Chriſt by this; Go take his Body when it lay in the Grave, his Soul was then out of it; yet notwithſtanding then, when it was in the Grave, the Son of God was perſonally united to that Body, or otherwiſe Chriſt had not been ſaid to be buried (as he is ſaid to be in the Creed) when that Body was in the Grave, the Angels came into the Grave to worſhip him; it was his due that they ſhould do ſo. Mary likewiſe when he was in the Grave, (at leaſt as ſhe thought) ſhe called him Lord; Where have they laid my Lord, ſaith ſhe? ſhe meaneth his Body. Now therefore, this Human Nature of his, Body and Soul united thus together, is made higher than the Heavens, ſaith the Seventh to the Hebrews, verſe 26. It is ſaid of us, That we ſhall be like the Angels; he is above the Angels; his Body is not turned into a Spirit, but is made Spiritual. And this muſt needs be becauſe he is The Lord, his Human Nature, Body and Soul, is Lord above Angels; therefore muſt have a condition raiſed up to a greater glory than theirs is. And then, Chap. 10.
